

Gal 4 E E d

Medulla Historiæ Anglicanæ.

THE Ancient and Present STATE OF ENGLAND.
BEING A Compendious History
OF ALL ITS MONARCHS, FROM THE Time of JULIUS CÆSAR.

Written by Dr. HOWELL. K

And continued by an Impartial Hand.

The ELEVENTH EDITION illustrated with SCULPTURES.

L O N D O N :

Printed for W. INNYS, J. and P. KNAPTON, S. BIRT, D. BROWN, T. LONGMAN, C. HITCH, J. HODGES,
S. AUSTIN, J. and J. RIVINGTON, J. WARD, and
M. COOPER. 1750.

10

J. J. Banks

THE AUTHOR'S PREFACE.

It is as natural for Man to desire Knowledge, as bodily Sustenance; the one being the Food of the Mind, as the other is of the Body: And the Appetites of both being homogeneous to the Principles from which they proceed; their Tendency to their several Objects is as eager, as the Faculty which produces it, is active; so that though both flow from the Fountains of one and the same Nature; yet the one resting in a material Repletion, must be acknowledged more limited, than the other, which admits of no Bounds or Satiety.

But though Knowledge be Man's natural Desire, and the similar Nourishment of his better Part, the reasonable Soul; yet it is not alike sought after by all, nor in the same Degrees and Kind.

Some, whose Constitution has disposed them to a Habit of lazy Sensuality, and others whom continual Disappointments have baffled into a Neutrality and Indifferency, as to Action, think it sufficient for Man to know, either how to live with Pleasure and Epicurean Ease, or to die with affected Haughtiness and Stoical Apathy; neither of the

The P R E F A C E.

Two regarding those Knowledges which delight Curiosity, or are useful to the Society of Mankind.

Others again, who are altogether refined into Spirit and Contemplation, think their Time ill spent, unless they can be so able to anatomize Nature, as to give the Causes of Things, which either never did exist but in Appearance, or if they do, are far more profitably understood by their Effects, than Principles; And these two Extremes are the preternatural Vices of Appetite; the one being the Stupidity and Defect, and the other the Green-Sickness or Bulimia of the Desire.

They therefore, whom Age, Learning, and Experience have licentiated to be Physicians of the Mind, have taken some Latitude in prescribing Diets, according to the various Constitutions of reasonable Men; allowing those, whom a natural Disposition inclines to the light Food of Contemplation, such Studies as may nourish their Curiosity with the airy Ideas of Philosophy and speculative Mathematicks, and the nicer Learning of the Schools; judging that the most proper Nourishment for sedentary Humours and volatile Fancies, who covet no more, but to know for themselves, and to be guided by others: But to Men of a robust and sociable Habit of Mind, who are desirous both to know and to do Good to themselves, and by their Quality and Condition are fitted for a higher Station in the World, when Providence pleases to call them to it, they have always directed their Studies to a more active and useful Learning; such as practical Mathematicks and History, the one for improving the Works and Inventions, and the other the Conduct and Actions of Men in Society, judging Idleness, the Lethargy of the Mind, no ways to be fed, but to be cured by Discipline and Animadversion.

Now though Mathematicks, which tend to Operation, be of very great Use in an industrious and flourishing State or Age, both for the Glory and Profit of a People; yet seeing they require a peculiar Talent of Mind to succeed in that Study, they cannot, nor ought they to be recommended to universal Practice, beyond that Mediocrity which renders Gentlemen fit, as in that, so in other Parts of Arts and Sciences, to converse with rational Company (it being impossible impossible for one Man to be Master of all human Knowledges) leaving the more laborious Prosecution thereof to those whose Genius or Vocation invites them to that Assiduity.

The P R E F A C E.

But of History it may be said, that

Omne tulit punctum, nam miscuit utile dulci.

It is so genuine and familiar to Men of all Estates, Ages, Qualities, Sects, and Conditions; so agreeable to the Inclination, and suitable to the Humour of All: So delightful in the Perusing, and profitable in the Retention, affording Content to the Aged, Pleasure to the Young, and Experience to both; Comfort to the Disconsolate, Refreshment to the Weary, and Ease to discomposed Minds; solacing the tedious Hours of pensive Watching, or otherwise charming anxious Thoughts into a sweet and gentle Repose; being never out of Season, whilst Men have Life, and the World a Being; that amongst the many Elogies it hath received from the learned Pieces of ancient and modern Writers, it may be justly accounted rather the Recreation than the Application of a studious Man.

It is indeed that Telescope by which we see into distant Ages, and take up the Actions of our Forefathers, with as much Evidence as the News of the last Gazette; it is the Mirror that represents the various Transactions of Times past, and shews us the Dress of Antiquity, according to which we may rectify or adjust our present Fashions; it is the Pandects of gentle and easy Institutions and Laws, which ought to oblige us as much, if not more strictly to a Conformity, than the preceptive Sanctions of Princes; seeing the Authority of the one does but inculcate our Duty, and the other gives us innumerable Instances of the several Rewards of Virtue, and Punishments of Vice: It is, in a Word, the last Will and Testament of our deceased Progenitors; which, though it does not expressly leave every one of us a particular Legacy, yet it shews us how we may be possessed of their Inheritance;

The P R E F A C E.

and according as we follow their Example, live in Reputation or Ignominy.

Infomuch that the ruder Ages of the World, who were unacquainted with Letters, and consequently ignorant of refined Sciences, thought History, next to their Religion, the only useful and proper Study of Mankind ; and judging the Forming of the Manners, and regulating the Actions of Man, to be the chief Duty and Care of Societies, they thought Documents, Precepts, and Laws, too weak a Means to work so great Effect, without they were confirmed and strengthened by the Examples of their Predecessors ; to which prone Nature, even amongst the most Barbarous, does willingly render an implicate Veneration : And therefore seeing their Libraries were their Memories, and Words their Characters, so Songs and rude Rhimes were the only Books whereby their Bards and Druids instructed their Children in the Histories of former Ages, making the famous Actions of their Ancestors so much the more the Pattern of their Conduct and Manners, as it was the Subject of their Innocent Melody and Mirth ; And this Custom is at this Day in Practice amongst the uncultivated Heathens of Africa and America.

But when the kind Heavens were pleased to gratify the Industry of Man with the Invention of Letters ; no Subject seemed to the Ancients so worthy of the Prerogative of being transmitted to Posterity, as that of History ; and indeed, the most ancient that can be found of their Writings is of that Kind. Whether it was that they knew no Immortality but that of Fame ; or found no better Way to provide with Security for their Offspring, in whom they were to live to Posterity, than by handing down to them the Methods and honest Courses, by which some attained to Honour, Wealth, and Command, whilst others, by the contrary Ways, lived and died in Obscurity, Poverty, and Contempt.

And the Desire of perpetuating the Memory is such a glimmering Glance of the primitive, but offuscated Light of Nature, that some think it a convincing Argument to prove the Immortality of the Soul ; it being a vain Thing for

The P R E F A C E.

for any, but especially a reasonable Being to desire that, to which it hath no natural Capacity : And the rather, that the greater and more elevated Souls of all Ages have aspired as much to the perpetuating of their Fame, as they have to the purchasing of the same ; witness in ancient Time the great Alexander, who envied no Man but Achilles, for the Happiness he had in having Homer for his Historiographer ; and since him Julius Caesar, who notwithstanding he was tired out with the Fatigues of a continued and difficult War, yet as he thought no Man able to do what he had done, so he judged none worthy to perpetuate his Memory, and to write as he fought, but himself.

But what Satisfaction soever dying Men may have in the Prospect of a lasting Name, it is certain, the Living reap great Benefit from the Register of their Actions ; for would a Prince have Measures to govern, a Subject how to obey, a Statesman how to give Counsel, a Judge and Magistrate how to execute Justice, a Husband and Father how to command and cherish, a Wife and Child how to love, honour, and obey ; and all Conditions of Men how to perform mutual good Offices in every kind of Society ; History, and especially the truest and most ancient of All, the Holy Scriptures, is that Repository from whence they may draw the truest Maxims for all Duties, exemplified with the good or bad Successes of those who have followed or transgressed the same. And thus much in short of History in general.

But as all Histories are not of the same Nature, so neither are they of the same Usefulness and Advantage ; Not to mention the ancient Poets, which are good in their Way ; some are fictional Romances, which beside the Satisfaction they give the Author's inventing Head, are of very little, if of any Use, unless it be to teach young Gallants to strut it in the Phrase of Heroes, and Ladies to repartee like a Play-Book : And the Moralities, which we are told are couched therein, are too frequently applied in Serenades, Love-Letters, and Assignations.

Others are real Histories, or at least intended to be such, and are either ancient or modern, universal or particular ;
of

The P R E F A C E.

of Kingdoms, or of private Families, foreign or domestick ; And are all very profitable, according to the several Qualities and Capacities of the Readers ; which is a Point that needs no particular Discussion in this Place.

In the writing of Histories, some Authors affect an Exactness of recounting Matters with the minutest Circumstances that attend them, and of omitting nothing that can have any Place in the Book ; which, unless it be some conspicuous and famous Transaction, looks liker the Depositions of a Witness in a Trial, or the Breviate of a Lawyer at the Bar, than the Annals or Chronicles of a Nation ; for it is enough for Posterity to know the memorable Actions of a great King, or the Achievements in a famous Battle, with such Circumstances as render them most considerable in themselves, and significant to the Reader ; though they be not told what Kind of Beard the King wore on his Wedding-Day, or to whom the Ground belonged where the Battle was fought.

Many likewise puzzle both themselves and their Readers, with a too nice Enquiry into the first Original of Nations, and especially by what new Flight of Colonies, or Transmigration of People, Islands, and Countries, discontinued from the Continent, became first inhabited ; and in this Search, so soon as they transgress the Bounds of authentick Records and Monuments of Antiquity, the rest is no more History, but the Conjectures and Probabilities of the Authors. It is true, that since we are taught by our Religion, That all Mankind descended from Adam, and consequently as they increased in Number by new Generations, so they successively enlarged their Habitations into remoter Regions, until the habitable World was possessed ; it would be very curious for Men to know from what Branch of the Stock they are descended ; and not with the Ancients, who understood nothing of the Creation, believe those Peoples, whose Original was unknown, to be Indigenæ, that is, started out of the Country they inhabited. But that being impossible to be attained to, since the Memory of Man cannot, and Letters were not invented to preserve the Knowledge of the various Changes and Mutations of elder Times ; we should satisfy ourselves (knowing that we are Men) with what

The P R E F A C E.

what we find in received Records concerning the Beginnings, Progress, and Changes of Kingdoms and States, without troubling ourselves with our ancient Relations, who were not one Drop of Blood a-kin to William the Conqueror.

“ The Design therefore of this little Manual of History is not to amuse the Readers with the strange Romances of the first Peopling of this Island, nor to give a List of the Kings who reigned here, probably enough, even before Aeneas, or his Son Ascanius; nor yet to burthen their Memory with all the lesser Occurrences, that are fully and at large related in many ample Volumes of this Kind; but only to serve as a Remembrancer to those who have already studied the History of England, that in a short View they may refresh and rub up their Memories as to smaller Circumstances, by the General Heads, and more remarkable Passages, which they shall here find faithfully digested in a succinct Method, both as to Time and Place; and for others, whose Humour or Leisure will not permit them to turn over larger Volumes, this small Pocket-Book, if carefully and often perused, may acquaint them with as much as is necessary perhaps for them to know of the State of this Kingdom, in Relation to Times past, for satisfying their own Curiosity, and rendering them able to entertain others, who want the same Advantages of Knowledge.

“ This Compendium then presents the Reader with what has been most remarkable in the several Changes of Government that have happened in this Kingdom since the first Invading of the Island by Julius Caesar; tracing down the Succession and Lives of the several Emperors, from that Time till it was forsaken (because it could not be kept) by the Romans: With the several Races of the British, Saxon, Danish, and Norman Kings, till the Accession of his present Majesty to the Throne. It gives likewise an Account of all the Archbishops of Canterbury, since it was erected into a Metropolitan See: And, in a Word, enough to let us see, how by the Blessing of GOD, the Prudence of Governors, and the Unanimity and

“ Loyalty

The P R E F A C E.

“ Loyalty of the People, this Kingdom, though sometimes “ over-clouded by home-bred Dissensions, yet has conti“ nued, for many Ages, to be the Envy and Terror of its “ Neighbours; abounding in all the worldly Enjoyments “ that were fit to be expected from a bountiful God, or to “ be desired by a virtuous People. To conclude, we may “ expect still the Continuance of the same Blessings, un“ less our Sins and Wantonness bring upon us the same “ or worse Judgments than our Forefathers ever felt; and “ instead of a delightful and fruitful Soil, turn our Land
“ into a barren Wilderness; and give us Cause to say with “ the Poet,

Infelix lolium & steriles dominantur avenæ.

THE BOOKSELLER
TO THE READER.

 HIS Excellent Treatise was at first sent to the Press in the Year 1678, by an unknown Hand, with Intimation only, that it was written by a Clergyman in the Country, being the Minutes he took in his Course of his studying the English History.

The Judgment and Fidelity with which it was compiled, supplied the Want of its Author's Name; and the Publick were so well pleased with it, that many Thousand Copies were soon sold off without the Knowledge of the Author.

At

The Bookseller to the Reader.

At length Mr. Anthony Wood, in his Athenæ Oxonienses, speaking of Dr. Howell, Author of the General History, so well known for its Excellency, declares this Treatise to be his.

And Dr. Nicholson, in his English Historical Library, says of it, That, "although it be only a very " concise Epitome of our History, it is done with that " great Judgment, that it deserves a Place among the " Best of our Writers on this Subject.

The Continuation will, we hope, be allow'd to be answerable to the rest; at least, the same Care is taken with respect to Fidelity. Nothing material to the Knowledge of Publick Affairs is omitted; and the Work is thereby render'd compleat.

The Sculptures added in this Edition, very much adorn and illustrate the History. And the Genealogical Table of the Royal Family shews, in the plainest Manner, the Succession of the Crown from William I. to this Time.

A T A B L E
O F T H E
K I N G S.

THE most memorable KINGS of the Britains in the Time of the Romans Page 5.

Emperors of ROME commanding in BRITAIN, viz.

Caius Julius Cæsar	Page 6	Antonius Gordianus	ibid.
Octavianus Augustus Cæsar	ibid.	Julius Philippus Arabs	ibid.
Claudius Tiberius Nero	ibid.	Trajanus Decius	ibid.
Caius Caligula	ibid.	Trebonius Gallus	14
Claudius Drusus	7	Julius Æmilianus	ibid.
Domitius Nero	ibid.	Licinius Valerianus	ibid.
Sergius Sulpitius Galba	ibid.	Licinius Galienus	ibid.
Salvius Otho	ibid.	Aurelius Flavius Claudius	ibid.
Aulus Vitellius	8	Aurelius Quintilius	15
Flavius Vespasian	ibid.	Valerius Aurelianus	ibid.
Titus Vespasian	ibid.	Claudius Tacitus	ibid.
Flavius Domitian	ibid.	Annius Florianus	ibid.
Cocceius Nerva	9	Valerius Probus	ibid.
Ulpian Trajan	ibid.	Aurelius Carus	16
Ælius Hadrianus	ibid.	Dioclesianus	ibid.
Antoninus Pius	ibid.	Constantius Chlorus, and Galerius	ibid.
Marcus Aurelius Antoninus	ibid.	Maximinus	ibid.
Aurelius Commodus	10	Constantine the Great	17
Publius Helvius Pertinax	ibid.	Constantinus, Constans, and Con-
Didius Julianus	ibid.	stantius	18
Septimius Severus	ibid.	Julian the Apostate	ibid.
Bassianus Caracalla, and Septimius		Flavius Jovinianus	19
Geta	11	Flavius Valentinianus	ibid.
Opilius Macrinus	ibid.	Flavius Gratianus	20
Bassianus Ant. Heliogabalus	ibid.	Flavius Theodosius Magnus	ibid.
Aurelius Alexander Severus	12	Honorius	21
Caius Julius Verus Maximinus	ibid.	Theodosius and Valentinian	22
Pupienus Maximus, and Clodius Bal-		SAXONS.
binus	13	The Saxon Heptarchy	23

BRITISH

A T A B L E, &c.

BRITISH Princes who contended with the SAXONS.		Edgar	40
Vortigern	24	Edward the Martyr	42
Vortimer	ibid.	Ethelred	43
Aurelius Ambrosius	ibid.	Edmund Ironside	ibid.
Uter Pendragon	25	DANES.
Arthur	ibid.	Canute	45
Constantine	ibid.	Harold	46
Aurelius Conan	ibid.	Hardicanute	ibid.
Vortimerus	ibid.	SAXONS.
Malgo Conan	ibid.	Edward the Confessor	47
Careticus	ibid.	Harold	48
Cadwin	26	NORMANS.
Cadwallo	ibid.	William the Conqueror	51
Cadwallador	ibid.	William Rufus	54
The most powerful Kings of the SAXON Heptarchy.		Henry I.	57
Hengist	26	Stephen	59
Ella	27	Henry II.	62
Cherdick	ibid.	Richard I.	67
Kenrick	ibid.	John	71
Chelwin or Cheulin	ibid.	Henry III.	78
Ethelbert	ibid.	Edward I.	85
Redwald	29	Edward II.	90
Edwin	ibid.	Edward III.	94
Oswald	ibid.	Richard II.	102
Osway	30	Line of LANCASTER.
Vulfhere	ibid.	Henry IV.	107
Ethelred	ibid.	Henry V.	110
Kenred	ibid.	Henry VI.	118
Chelred	ibid.	Line of YORK.
Ethelbald	31	Edward IV.	126
Offa	ibid.	Edward V.	132
Egfrid	32	Richard III.	136
Kenwolph	ibid.	Families of LANCASTER and YORK United.
SAXON Monarchs.		Henry VII.	141
Egbert	32	Henry VIII.	148
Ethelwolph	33	Edward VI.	160
Ethelbald or Ethelwald	ibid.	Mary	166
Ethelbert	ibid.	Elizabeth	171
Ethelred	ibid.	James I.	181
Ælfred, or Alfred	34	Charles I.	189
Edward the Elder	37	Charles II.	220
Ethelstan	38	James II.	299
Edmond	39	William and Mary	352
Edred	ibid.	Anne	431
Edwy	40	George I.	539
		George II.	597

40 42 43
ibid.

45 46
ibid.

47 48

51 54 57 59
62 67 71 78 85 90 94 102

107
110
118

126 132 136
and 141 148

160 166
171
181 189 220 299 352 431
539 597

dulla

(15) HENRY VI. deposed.

Edward Slain by the House of York.

on
At
wit
Le Poi
the tain from We Ma fe a Zo
mer
Sc
but Co
frui

J. J. Banks 1756

Medulla Historiæ Anglicanæ.

BRITAIN.

THIS most flourishing Island Britain is bounded on the South with Normandy and France, on the East with Germany and France, upon the West with Ireland and the Atlantick Ocean, and on the North with the Deucalidonian Seas: The Length thereof, from the Lizard-Point Southward in Cornwall, to the Straithy-head in Scotland, containeth 624 Miles; the Breadth, from Land's-End in Cornwall in the West, unto the Island Thanet in the East, containeth 340 Miles. It is seated under the 9th and 13th Climates of the Northern Temperate Zone; insomuch, that in the Summer Solstice, in the Northern Part of Scotland, there is no Night at all, but only an obscure Twilight. A Country it is for Air mild, for Soil fruitful, and for Length of Days pleasant and delightful. In Winter the Absence of the Sun is relieved with the Warmth of its invironing Seas; and in the Summer the Heat is moderated by frequent Showers and Sea Winds.

O happy Britain! (said the old Panegyrist) and more blisful than all other Regions! Nature hath enriched thee with all Commodities of Heaven and Earth, wherein there is neither extream Cold in Winter, nor scorching Heat in Summer; wherein there is such abundant Plenty of Corn, as may suffice both for Bread and Wine; wherein are Woods without Wild Beasts, and Fields without noisome Serpents: But infinite Numbers of Milch-cattle, and Sheep weigh'd down with Fleeces; and that which is most comfortable, long Days and lightsome Nights. And, as our English Lucan sings,

*The fairest Land that frem her thrusts the rest,
As if she car'd not for the World beside;
A World within herself with Wonders blest.*

* Glamorgan.

This Queen of Islands was at first called Albion, either from Albion Mareoticus, who seated himself herein, or ab albis rupibus, from the white Rocks appearing towards the Coast of France; or from Olbian signifying rich or happy, in regard of its Fertility, Temperature, and Riches. Next it was called Britain, either from the two British Words Pryd and Cain, which signify Beauty and White; or from the Greek Word Περλαρινία, signifying Metal, with which it aboundeth; or from the British Word Bryth, that is, painted, stained, coloured, (the Inhabitants of old using to dye their Bodies with Woad) to which the Greeks added Tania, (that is, a Region) thence called Britons Land, or Britainy. At last, the Southern and best Part of it (from the Anglo Saxons then inhabiting it) was called Angle-Land, now England; which said Part of Britain is bounded on the East with the German, on the West with the Irish Sea, on the South with the British Ocean, on the North with the River Tweed, and a Line drawn from it to the Solway Westward. The longest Day in the Northern Part of England is seventeen Hours and near thirty Minutes; and the shortest Day, in the most Southern Part thereof, almost eight Hours long. England's Dimensions in Length, from Berwick to the Land's End, is 386 Miles; in Breadth, from Sandwich to the Land's End, 279; in Compass (by Reason of many Bays and Promontories) about 1300 Miles.

England, in the Romans Time, was divided into Britannia prima, containing the South Part of England; Britannia secunda, containing the Western Part, now called Wales; and Maxima Caesariensis, containing the Northern Parts beyond Trent. The first of these, in the Britons Time, belonged to the Archbishoprick of London, the second to the Archbishoprick of * Caerleon, and the third to the Archbishoprick of York.

The Britains, or first Inhabitants of this Island, were derived from the Gauls, as both their Speech, Laws, Customs, and Buildings manifest. The Story of Brute, with his Trojans, conquering this Island in A. M. 2887, or whenever else, seems to be only a Fable of Geofrey of Monmouth's framing. Amongst the ancient Britains, none, save the better and more civil Sort, did wear any Cloathing. They painted their bare Bodies with sundry Pictures, representing all Manner of living Creatures, Flowers, and the heavenly Bodies, conceiting that this made them appear the more terrible to their Enemies. About their Waists and Necks they wore Chains of Iron, supposing them to be a goodly Ornament. The Hair of their Heads they wore long, which was naturally curl'd; all other Parts they shaved, save the Upper Lip. Of all the Province, the Kentish were the most civilized Persons, by reason of their Converse with other Nations in Trafficking and Merchandizing. Their Buildings were many, and like to those of the old Gauls (French) poor rude Cottages, yet did they give the Name of Towns to certain cumbersome Woods, which they fortified with Rampiers and Ditches, whither they made their Retreat and Resort, to eschew the Invasions of their Enemies. The Romans first taught them to build their Houses of Stone.

Their

Their Wives were many, Ten or Twelve a-piece, which they held common among Parents and Brethren; yet was the Issue reputed his only who first married the Mother when she was a Maid. The Children they brought up in common amongst them. Their Diet was spare and mean, being Barks and Roots of Trees, and Milk; also a Kind of Food they had no bigger than a Bean, after the eating of which, for a considerable Time, they did neither hunger nor thirst. They eat likewise Venison and Fruits. Their usual Drink was made of Barley.

Their Religion was Paganish Superstition. They had many Idol Gods, and used Man's Flesh in their Sacrifices. They had Priests and Instructors, the Chief of which were Druides, who were the Sacrificers, Discussers, and Interpreters of religious Matters; they decided also as temporal Judges almost all Controversies in the Civil State, and such as refused to stand to their Judgment, they put under their Interdiction, which was accounted the most grievous Punishment. These Druides were privileged from the Wars, and all other Burthens, Taxes, and Payments. Over all the rest of them, there was one Primate. The main Thing they laboured to persuade Men, was, that the Soul is immortal. They taught only by Word of Mouth.

The Merchandizing of the ancient Britains consisted chiefly in Ivory Boxes, Sheers, Onches, Bits, and Bridles, Wreaths and Chains, with other Conceits made of Glass and Amber. And as their Merchandize was mean, so was their Shipping also; the Keels and Ribs whereof were of light Wood covered over with Leather.

Their Coin was either of Brass, or else of Iron Rings fixed at a certain Weight, which they used for their Money; but as Times grew more civil, and Traffick more frequent, they stamped both Gold and Silver.

Their Armour were Shields and short Spears, in the lower End of which Spears was fastened a round Bell of Brass, which at the Beginning of a Fight they shook with a great Courage, conceiting that such a rattling Noise did dismay the Enemy. In the Beginning of a Battle they fought in Chariots, but when they had wound themselves in amongst their Enemies, they fought on Foot, upon Occasion retiring to their Chariots, which in the mean Space that they fought on Foot, were drawn all together. They were so expert in managing their Chariot Horses, that running them forcibly down a steep Hill, they could stop and turn them in the Mid-way.

Julius Cæsar found the Island of Britain, not in a monarchical Estate under one King, but divided into several Provinces or petty Kingdoms. The Names of which Provinces were,

1. Cantii, the Inhabitants of Kent.
2. Regni, Suffex and Surry.
3. Durotriges, Dorsetshire.
4. Danmonii, Devon and Cornwall.
5. Belgæ, Somerset, Wiltshire and Hampshire.
6. Attrebatii, Berkshire.
7. Dobuni, Oxford and Gloucestershire.

8. Catieuchlani, Warwick, Buck and Bedford.

9. Trinobantes, Hertford, Essex and Middlesex.

10. Icenii, Suffolk, Norfolk and Cambridge.

11. Coritani, Northampton, Lincoln, Leicester, Rutland, Derby, and Nottingham.

12. Carnavii, Stafford, Worcester, Cheshire, and Shropshire.

13. Brigantes, Parisi, Lancashire, York, Richmond, Durham, Westmoreland, and Cumberland.

14. Ordovices, Flint, Denbigh, Merioneth, Carnarvon, and Montgomery.

15. Silures, Hereford, Radnor, Brecknock, Monmouth, and Glamorgan.

16. Pembroke, Cardigan, and Caermarthen, called Dimetæ.

17. Ottadini, Northumberland, Tiwiotdale, Tweddale, Merch, and Lothian.

18. Selgovii, Liddesdale, Eufedale, Esfdale, Annandale, and Niddisdale.

19. Novantes, Kile, Carick, Galloway, and Cunningham.

20. Fife, Renfrew, Cluydsdale, Lennox, Striveling, Menteth, called Damnii.

21. Caledonii, Gadini, Perth, Strathern, Albany, Argyle, and Lorn.

22. Expedii, Cantire.

23. Vicemagi, Murray.

24. Venricones, Merina, Angus, Mar.

25. Tezali, Buqubane.

26. Cateæ, Creones, Cerontes, Rosse, Sutherland.

27. Carnonacæ, Carini, Cornabii, Strathnaver.

28. Simertæ, Logi, Caithness.

The most memorable KINGS of the BRITAINS, in the Times of the ROMANS.

Comius, King of the Attrebatii, Cassibelan, King of the Trinobantes, who as the most worthy of British Kings, was chosen by general Consent to withstand the Roman Invasion, which he did with very great Prowess, twice repulsing their Legions from the British Shore. His chief City was Verulam, near where St. Albans now standeth.

Cingetorix, Caruil, Taximagul, and Segonax, Kings reigning together in Kent.

Mandubrace, a Prince of the Trinobantes, who after that he was beaten out of his Country by Cassibelan, fled into Cæsar into Gallia, and was a great Incendiary against his native Land, persuading Cæsar to make a second Expedition into Britain.

Cunobeline, Grandson of King Lud, the chief City for whose Residence was Camalodunum, now called Malden in Essex, which was the principal Seat of the Kingdom.

Adminius, Catracratus, and Togodumus, Sons of Cunobeline, the last whereof made gallant Resistance against the Romans.

Cogidunus, who received in pure Gift, at the Hands of the Romans, certain Cities, over which he peaceably reigned King.

Caractacus, a most renowned Prince of the Silures, who in nine Years Resistance waded thro' many Adventures against the Romans, but at last was betray'd and carried to Rome, where being led in Triumph, he was for the Braveness of his Spirit released of his Bonds, and accepted into Claudius Cæsar's Favour.

Venutius, a famous King of the Brigantes.

Voadicea, or Boadicea, Queen to Prasutagus, after her Husband's Death receiving Incivilities from the Romans, oppos'd herself against them, and in one Battle slew eighty thousand of them. Those two strong Cities, Verolamium and Camalodunum, she took and sacked. Petillius, Lieutenant of the ninth Legion, she discomfited: Catus, the Procurator, she forced to fly beyond the Seas. All feared the heroick Prowess of this Princess, but at length she was vanquished in Battle; when rather than live subject to her Foes, she poisoned herself.

Arviragus stoutly withstood Claudius.

Gulgacus, a rightly valiant Prince of the Caledonians in the Time of Domitian.

These were the Oppugners of Roman Power for above an hundred Years; nor were the Britains then subdued without themselves; for their own Divisions made Way for the Romans to become their Masters, and to possess their Country.

About the Year of the World's Creation 3913, and before the Birth of Christ Fifty four Years, the fortunate Romans, under the Conduct of Julius Cæsar, first took Footing in Britain about Deal; and so welcome was the News of Cæsar's Landing in Britain to the Roman Senate, that they decreed unto his Honour a general Thanksgiving for twenty Days, which was the first so great Honour ever granted; the former greatest Victories having had but Five, or at most but Ten Days assigned them.

Emperors of ROME commanding in BRITAIN.

A. M. 3925. Caius Julius Cæsar was General of the Roman Forces in Gallia, when he invaded this Island of Britain; in short time after

A. D.
17-39.

after which he assum'd the Title and Authority of Perpetual Dictator. He was very successful in War, and of a most undaunted Spirit upon all Occasions. In Fifty several Battles by him fought, he always prevailed, one only excepted. Four times he was created Consul, and Five times entered Rome in Triumph. Once entering into a Boat in tempestuous Weather, and the Waterman afraid to put forth from Shore, he thus animated him, Proceed courageously against the Storms, for thou carriest Cæsar, and Cæsar's Fortunes. And when he was forewarn'd of the Conspiracy made against him in the Senate House, and dissuaded from going thither at that Time, he answered, That he had rather die than admit Fear into his Breast. So resolutely going to the Place, he was by Brutus, Cassius, and other Conspirators, murder'd in the Senate-House, receiving in his Body Twenty three Wounds. He was bald-headed, therefore to cover it, he always wore the Triumphant Laurel Garland. Some report, that the Baths by the City of Bath were first found out by him; others say, by an ancient British King called Bladus. For twenty Years after Cæsar's coming into Britain, the Britains retained their own Kings and Laws, having no Roman Prefects over them.

A. M. Octavian Augustus Cæsar 3980. was Julius Cæsar's Sister's Son, and his adopted and declared Heir. In the Forty second Year of his Reign, the Prince of Peace Jesus Christ was born, when was universal Peace. This wise Emperor's Motto was Festina lente. And he used to say, That is speedily, or soon enough done, that is well enough done; and that to get some small Profit with great Danger, is like those that fishing with a Golden Hook, hazard more than the Fish is worth. He died in the Embraces of his Wife Livia, of whom he took this Farewell; Livia, nostra conjugii memor vive, & vale.

A. D. Claudius Tiberius Nero 17. was ordained by Augustus for his Successor. Such an impatient Letcher he was, that he caused naked Women and Maidens to bring in, and attend him at Supper. Such a notorious Drunkard, that he caused the People, instead of Claudius Tiberius Nero, to call him Caldus Tiberius Mero, a Wine-bibber. In his Time the World's Saviour was crucified, about Five Years after which Time the Gospel was planted in Britain, as saith old Gildas. This Emperor, as is conjectured, was smothered to Death by Caligula.

A. D. Caius Caligula, Nephew 39. to Tiberius, was at some Times exceeding prodigal, at other Times sordidly covetous, always cruel, proud, and libidinous: He would force rich Men to make their Wills, and therein to declare him their Heir; which when they had done, he would presently cause them to be poisoned, scoffing at them, and saying, That when Men had once made their Wills, it was fit they should die. His own Mother he defamed to be incestuously begot; his Grandmother he poisoned; his Brother Tiberius he murdered; his Three natural Sisters incestuously polluted. He made himself a God, commanding that Men should worship him as such, and ordained his great Horse for his Priest; but as Decius saith, Truly, a fit Priest for such a God, and a fit God for such a Priest. Howbeit, tho' he would be

God, yet when the true God sent his Thunder, he would cover his Eyes with his Hat, and hide himself under the Table. He was so exceeding hairy of Body, that during his Regality, it was next to High-Treason, but to name a Goat. He often lamented, that some rare and unusual Disaster happened not in his Time, whereby his Reign might be made memorable to Posterity. He wished that all the People had but one Neck, that so he might have the Glory of giving the bravest Blow that ever was struck; but himself was murdered, receiving thirty Wounds of the Conspirators.

A. D. 43. Claudius Drusus, the Grandson of Livia, Augustus's Wife, was by the Preto-rian Band chosen Emperor, contrary to the Mind of the Senate, who had determined to reduce the City to her ancient Liberty, without Admission of any Cæsar. He came into Britain, where, for his Clemency, the Britains erected a Temple and Altar in his Name, giving him Divine Honour. His first Wife Messalina, besides all her private Lecheries, went often to the common Stews, to satiate her Lust; but she for her Impudence being put to Death, Claudius married Julia Agrippina, who, to make Way for her Son Nero to the Empire, procured the Disinheriting of Britannicus, the Emperor's Son, and by Poison tempered in a Mushroom, she ended Claudius's Days.

A. D. 56. Domitius Nero was elected Emperor by the Soldiers. His own Father he poisoned, upon his Mother he first committed Incest, then Murder; he deflowered the Vestals, slew his Brother Germanicus, and Sister Antonia, his Wives Poppea and Octavia, his Aunt Domitia, his Son-in-law Rufinus, and his famous Tutor Seneca, with many of the Roman Nobility, and raised the first Persecution against the Christians. He set the City of Rome on fire, charging the Innocent Christians with the Fact, and tormenting them for it. He caused St. Peter and St. Paul to be put to Death, the first by crucifying, the other by beheading. But this Tyrant was grown so hated, that the Senate adjudged him shamefully to be whipped to Death; which he hearing of, run himself upon his own Sword. In the first five Years of his Reign he was very compassionate; insomuch as being requested to sign a Writ for Execution of a Malefactor, he said, Would to God I had never learnt to Write. In the Year of our Redemption, 67, Joseph of Arimathea was sent by Philip the Apostle, to plant the Gospel in Britain, who laid the Foundation of the Christian Faith, at a Place then called Avalon, afterward Inis-awitren, now Glastenbury, where he died, and was buried. In Nero the Progeny of the Cæsars ended.

A. D. 70. Sergius Sulpitius Galba was elected Emperor by the Soldiers and Senate, who, when he had reigned only seven Months, was, by the Procurement of Otho, slain by a Troop of Horsemen.

A. D. 71. Salvius Otho being chosen Emperor, Vitellius a Roman General marched against him, and at Brixellium won the Day; and to save the Shedding of Roman Blood, Otho refused to engage any farther with him, though much importuned by his Soldiers to reinforce the Battle; but he thus answered them, 'To hazard your Virtues and Valours for one Man's Estate, I hold it dangerous; and 71-83.

‘needless it is, that my Life should be prized at so dear a Rate. These Civil Wars Vitellius begun, which, for my Part, I purpose not to continue. And hereby let Posterity esteem of Otho, that others have kept the Empire longer, but that never any left it more valiantly. You for your Parts would have died for my Sake ; but I, to save your Lives, do die voluntarily and unvanquished : I blame not the Gods, nor envy I Vitellius’s rising Glory ; sufficient to me it is, that my House has touched the highest Strain of Honour, and myself to be left upon Record the Sovereign Monarch of the World.’ And thereupon, with a solemn Farewell to the whole Army, he went into his Tent, and with his Dagger gave himself his Death’s Wound.

A. D. 71. Aulus Vitellius was so gluttonous and prodigal, that Two Thousand Dishes of Fish, and Seven Thousand of Fowls, were served to his Table at one Supper. In those few Months he reigned, he wasted Seven Millions thirty one thousand two hundred and fifty Pounds Sterling ; but was ignominiously slain after the Manner of a common Malefactor, when he had reigned only eight Months and five Days.

A. D. 71. Flavius Vespasian was chosen Emperor by the Mesian Legions : He was a great Enemy and a Scourge to the Jews, but a great Favourer of Learning ; valiant, just, and wise, yet it may be, too covetous ; for he imposed a Tax upon every Family, according to the Quantity of Urine that was made in it ; which his Son Titus blaming him for, as dishonourable to so great an Emperor, he bad

Titus smell to the Gold brought for Tribute-Money, asking him what ill Savour he found in it ? adding, That the Smell of Gain is sweet out of any Thing. He died of a Flux.

A. D. 81. Titus Vespasian won the City of Jerusalem. For his Humanity and native Goodness, he was styled, The Darling and Delight of Mankind. So tender he was of satisfying his People, that his usual Saying was, No Man ought to go sad from his Presence. So inclined to gratify the Poor, that one Day being passed from him without any notable Good done for them, in Sorrow he said, Perdidimus Diem, we have quite lost a Day. He was a great Enemy to Promoters and Extorters of Penal Laws, whom he caused to be whipped and banished Rome. He would not receive any Accusation against those that spoke Evil of him, saying, So long as I do nothing that deserves Reproach, I value not Lies. But his Brother Domitian, aspiring after the Empire, procured this good Emperor to be poisoned.

A. D. 83. Flavius Domitian, instead of applying himself to manly Exercises, busied himself in a private Gallery, with catching of Flies, and pricking them through with a Bodkin. He caused his Statue to be made of Gold, and commanded that himself should be called God. Upon small Surmises he murdered the Senators and Nobles. Many new Tortures he invented. Confiscations and Banishments were Favours from him. He raised the Second Persecution against the Christians, banish’d St. John into the Isle of Patmos ; but himself was murdered, and his dead Carcass disgracefully abused, his Scutcheons and Images defaced by Order of the Senate.

A. D.

A. D. 8. Coecilius Narva recalled the banished Christians, permitting them to enjoy the free Profession of their most holy Faith. Now St. John returned from Patmos to Ephesus. This Emperor died in a cholerick Passion conceived against a Senator.

A. D. 100. Ulpian Trajan, when he invested any Pretor, in giving him the Sword, he would command him to use it against his own Person, if he violated the Law. He raised the Third Persecution. The Jews rebelling he put to Death in such infinite Numbers, that it was accounted the greatest Slaughter that ever was made. He died of a Flux.

A. D. 119. Aelius Hadrianus is said to have been of so excellent a Memory, that he never forgot any thing which he either heard or read. The Britains rebelling, he came over and reduced them into Obedience; whereupon there was this Addition upon his Coin, The Restorer of Britain. And to defend the Romans from the Incursions of the wild Northern Britains, he caused a Wall of Stakes, Turf, and Earth, to be made from the River Eden near Carlisle, unto the River Tine near Newcastle, 80 Miles in Length. Some write, that he only repair'd this Wall, and that Agricola, Nero's General, first made it. He rased Jerusalem even to the Ground, built another City near where that stood, calling it Ælia; banished the Jews from thence; and upon the Gate of the new City, looking towards Jerusalem, he caused the Picture of a Swine to be set, because that Beast is an Abomination to the Jews. He prohibited the Persecution of the Christians, and was minded to have built a Temple to Christ, but was dissuaded from it. He died of a Dropsy.

A. D. 140. Antoninus Pius published an Edict in Favour of the Christians, ordaining, That if any after that Time should be found guilty of molesting them without just Occasion, that then the Christian accused should be acquitted, and his Accuser should suffer that Punishment he endeavoured to procure upon the Christian. He often said, That he had rather save One Subject's Life, than kill a Thousand Enemies. So bountiful he was, that thereby he consumed his own private Estate; which his Empress repining at, he said, That when he undertook to be Emperor, he then laid aside the Interest and Proprieties of a private Person. In farther Praise of him, it is said, That in his Youth he did nothing rashly, nor in his Age negligently. He died of a Fever, aged Seventy.

A. D. 162. Marcus Aurelius Antoninus Philosophus chose to himself for his Associate in the Empire Lucius Verus, who raised the Fourth Persecution, when those two famous Christians, Polycarpus Bishop of Smyrna, and Justin Martyr, suffered Martyrdom, the like to which did many other Christians. But after nine Years bloody Persecution, the Tyrant Lucius was cut off by an Apoplexy. Marcus Aurelius in his Wars against the Quadi, Germans, what with the Pestilence raging in his Army, and what by want of Water, was sorely distressed; but by the Prayers of his Christian Soldiers, such a plentiful Shower of Rain fell, that therewith, after five Days extreamest Drought and Thirst, the whole Army was refreshed, and his Enemies, on the contrary, by Thunder and Lightning, were utterly dispersed and overthrown; whereupon this Emperor both mitigated the Persecution, and named that

181-195. that Legion of the Christians, Κιραυνόςκοι, the Lightning Legion.
 His Son Commodus procured the Physicians to destroy him.

A. D. 181. Aurelius Commodus would sometimes shew himself like Hercules in a Lion's Skin, sometimes was wantonly clad in the Habit of an Amazon. He kept three hundred Concubines, and amongst the rest his beloved Martia, whose painted Picture he wore on the Outside of his Garment; but through some Displeasure, having designed to put her and some other Persons to Death, they conspired against him, and with Poison, Stabs, and Strangling, murdered him. The News of whose Death was most grateful both to the Senate and People, who stiled him, Hostis humani generis, the Enemy of Mankind. About the Beginning of this Emperor's Reign was the Christian Faith in Britain
 first professed by publick Authority, under King Lucius the first Christian King in the World; at which Time Eleutherius, then Bishop of Rome, sent Paganus and Damianus to him,
 upon whose Preaching the Heathenish Flamens and Arch-Flamens (twenty-eight in Number) were converted to so many Bishops Sees, whereof London, York, and Caerleon upon Uske in Wales, were made the Metropolitans of the Province. The first Archbishop of London was The- *an*us.

Theanus,
 A. B. of London.

A. D. 194. Publius Helvius Pertinax, a petty Tradesman's Son, was, in his old Age, called to the Government of the Empire
 by the Senate; but the Pretorian Cohorts (whose licentious Lives he restrained) shed his innocent Blood, when he had reigned little more than a Month.

A. D. 194. Didius Julianus, a Lawyer by Profession, when the Empire was now exposed to Sale by the Pretorian Soldiers, (being the Emperor's Life-Guard, the Number Ten Thousand) obtained the Diadem with larger Promises than ever he performed. But Severus warring against him, and the Soldiers remaining unsatisfied of the covenanted Premium, and withal hoping to purchase Favour with Severus, they slew their Chapman
Didius in his Palace, within a few Days after that he had assumed the Government.

A. D. 195. Septimius Severus was by the Syrian Army elected Emperor; and he, as soon as he came near to Rome, gave strict Command that the Pretorian Cohorts should attend him disarmed; which being done, he vehemently checked them for their Treason against Pertinax, depriving them both of the Name Honour, and Arms of Soldiers, and banished them an hundred Miles from Rome; which Act of his was highly grateful to the Roman Ci-zens. This Emperor came over into Britain, where he fought many Battles, but ever with more Difficulties to the Romans than Britain.
Clodius Albinus, the Roman Lieutenant in Britain, made Opposition against him, but he subdued him.
Hadrian's Wall he repaired. The Caledonians rebelling, he commanded to be destroyed without Exception. But Severus remaining in York (which Place afterward grew to be one of the chiefest for Account among the Brigantes, as common the Stations of the Roman Colonies were the Seed-plots of all our Cities and chief Towns) growing age-and sick, he died, April 4. A. D.
 212. This Emperor having long been sick of the Gout, and one the Nobles telling him, that he would how he could rule so vast an Empire, being so lame and unweil-ly; he answered, that he rul'd the Empire with his Brain, and not with his Feet. He raised the fifth persecution against the Christians.

A. D. B Assianus Caracalla, and
212. his Brother Septimius Geta, were declared Emperors by old Severus their Father, and both surnamed Antoninus; a Name then very gracious in the Esteem of the Romans. These Emperors, together with the Empress Mother Julia, transported the Funeral Ashes of the old Emperor in a Golden Urn to Rome, where they solemnly consecrated him a God; the Ceremony was after this sort performed: His Image being lively pourtray'd, in manner of a sick Man, was laid upon an Ivory Bedsted, richly furnished, in the Porch of his Palace. The Princes and Senators sat all on the left Side thereof in black Array, the Ladies on the Right, cloathed in white, the Physicians diligently visiting him. When seven Days were ended, as if then just dead, the prime Nobles carried him in his Ivory Bed to the Forum, where all the Patrician Youth, and noble Virgins, compassed him with most doleful Hymns and Ditties. From thence his Image was removed to Mars's Field, where a four-square Frame of Timber was erected of a very great Height and Compass, the Stories still mounting to the Top with undry Ascents, richly beautified with Gold, purple Ornaments, and Images of great Art and Price.
On the second of which Ascents was placed the Emperor's Bed and Statue, with infinite Store of most sweet Odours; the young Nobles riding about him in a Kind of Dance; others who represented great Princes in their Coaches; and 212-220.

then his Successor first set Fire on the Frame, and after him all the Elvanus, People did the like on all Sides, till A. B. of the whole began to be in a Flame; London.
which done, an Eagle (secretly inclosed within) was let fly out of the Top, the People following its Flight with Shouts and Prayers, supposing that therewith Severus was mounted into Heaven. But in short time after this, Caracalla, to gain the sole Sovereignty, slew his Brother Geta
in his Mother Julia's Arms, pretending that the innocent Youth had sought his Death. And because Pa- pinianus, the famous Civilian, would not excuse the Murther in his Pleas at the Bar, he caused him to be slain, with many of the Nobility who favoured Geta. Julia his Brother Geta's own Mother, and his Mother-in-law, he took to Wife, 'tis reported, on this Occasion: Julia in his Presence, either casually or purposely let fall her Veil, thereby discovering her naked Breasts and Beauty, which he beholding, instantly said, Were it not unlawful,
I should not be unwilling; to which she reply'd, That all Things were lawful to him who made Laws for others, but was himself subject to none; whereupon he married her;
but a violent Death prevented him from enjoying her long; and she hearing of his being murdered, poisoned herself.

A. D. O pilius Macrinus, from ob-219. scure Parentage, by Election of the Soldiers, obtained the Imperial Crown, but enjoy'd it but a short Time, for young Heliogaba- lus warring against him, overcame him, and put him to Death, with Diadumanus his Son.

A. D. B Assianus Ant. Heliogabalus, 220. the natural Son of Ca- racalla,

224-237. racalla, was incredibly luxurious. His Garments, tho' exceeding costly, he would not put on twice. His Shoes were set with Pearls, his Seats strewed with Musk and Amber, his Bed covered with Gold and Purple, and adorned with most costly Jewels, his Vessels (even of the basest Use) all Gold, his Lamps burnt with the Balms of Arabia and India, his Ways strew'd with the Powder of Gold and Silver, his Diet so profuse, that at every Supper in his Court was usually spent 1000 Pounds Sterling. At a Feast of the chief Roman Citizens in his Court, he caused all the Rooms to be strewed with Saffron, saying, That such Cattle deserved such Litter. Near the Sea he would eat no Fish, and in the Inland no Flesh; He had whole Meals made of the Tongues of singing Birds and Peacocks, or of the Brains of most costly Creatures. At one Supper he was served with 600 Ostriches. He built a Stew in his Court, wherein himself, in the Attire of an Harlot, would make Orations to his Whores, terming them his Fellow-Soldiers, and giving them Instructions how they should practice with the greatest Variety their filthy Lusts. In Rome he built a Charter-House for Women to meet in, where they might determine of their Attires. He brought his Mother Semiramira into the Senate, giving her a Voice with the Senators: But Conscience accusing him, and fearing the Rage of the People for his Crimes, he prepared silken Halters, golden Knives, and built a stately Tower exceeding high, adorned with Gold and Gems, thinking when Occasion should be, by some of these Means to destroy himself, having these Words oft in his Mouth. That howsoever he died, yet his Death should be precious in the Sight of all Men. But he was mistaken; for the Pre-torian Band dragged him and his Mother with Acclamations through Rome, saying, That the Bitch and her Whelps must go together; then slew them, and threw them into Tyber. And the Senate approving what was done, decreed that his Name should be blotted out of all Monuments in Rome, and never any Antonianus should again rule the Empire.

A. D. Aurelius Alexander 224. *A*rus was a great Lover of the Liberal Arts, and a great Favourer of the Christians, from whom he took to himself Examples of Life, and commended their Precepts to others. This his Kindness to the Christians is thought to have been procured by his Mother Mamea, whom Origen instructed, and whom St. Hierom styles a most holy Woman. He was a great Observer of Justice, and therefore caused Turinus, a Courtier, who had taken Money of divers Persons, with Promise to procure the Emperor's Favour in their Suits, to be put to Death by Smoke, one in the mean while proclaiming, That he had sold Smoke, therefore with Smoke should die. His Roman Soldiers grown far out of Order by the ill Government of his Predecessors, he sought by severe Courses to reduce; but they being backed by Maximinus, whom he had raised, murdered him.

A. D. Caius Julius Verus 237. *C*iminus, a Thracian by Birth, spent his Youth in keeping of Cattle, and was of a gigantick Stature, being eight Foot and a half high by Geometrical Measure. On his Thumb he wore as a Ring the Bracelet which his Wife used to wear on her Arm. And according to his Limbs, so was his Diet, for he daily devoured Forty Pounds Weight of Flesh, and thereunto did drink six Gallons of Wine. For his admirable Height he was admitted by Severus into the Rank of a common Soldier, and shortly after to be one of his Guard, and at last the Soldiers elected him Emperor. But a Tyrant he proved, as well to the Roman State in general, as the Christian in particular, against whom he raised the sixth Persecution. His Conditions were so hateful, that the Senate advanced one Gordianus to sway the Empire; but he proving unfortunate in his Attempts against him, strangled himself. And Maximinus, as he was drawing his Forces towards Rome, to revenge himself on the Senate, at the Siege against Aquileia, was slain in his Pavilion by his discontented Soldiers. The Citizens Wives in the Time of the Siege cut off the Hair of their Heads to make Bow-strings therewith.

A. D. Pupienus Maximus*, and 239. Clodius Balbinus, were by the Peers and Princes constituted Emperors; the People extolling the Senate for their prudent Choice of so wise Men, contrary to the rash Practice of such who choose their Governors to fit their own Fancies. But the Pretorian Soldiers taking this as a Reflection upon them, and chiefly because German Strangers were brought in to be of the Guard, as if themselves were not to be trusted; turned their Spleens against these Emperors, they assaulted them in their Chambers, despoiled them of their Imperial Robes, haled them through the City like two Thieves, and lastly slew them, leaving their Bodies to despightful Ignominy, A. D. 241. In which Year was so great an Eclipse of the Sun, that the Noon-day thereby became as dark as the Midnight.

A. D. Antonius Gordianus* was 241. by the Senate and Pre-torian Band elected Emperor when 239-253. he was not yet full sixteen Years of Age. He caused the Temple of Janus at Rome, which had long stood shut, to be opened; a sure Token that Wars were at Hand; which with good Success he prosecuted against the Persians, Goths, Sarmates, and Germans. He was most noble and lovely conditioned, exceeding studious, and addicted unto Learning, having in his Library no less than 62,000 Books. But by his Prefect Philip he was depos'd, Philip also usurping the Imperial Government, under whom for a Time this deposed Youth held an ordinary Captain's Place; but the Usurper judging himself not secure while Gordianus lived, commanded him to be slain.

A. D. Julius Philippus Arabs* hath 246. the Honour, according to some, of being the first Emperor baptized into the Christian Faith, together with his Wife Sovera, and his Son Philip. Himself and his Son were slain by the Soldiers. Of his Son it was reported, that he was of so admirable a Composedness, that in all his Life he was never seen to laugh.

A. D. Trajanus Decius* swayed 253. the Empire like a worthy Prince, saving his persecuting the Saints of God; for he it was that raised the seventh Persecution against the Christians. Under him suffered Fabianus and Cornelius, Bishops of Rome; St. Lawrence, and many other good Christians he put to great Tortures; amongst the rest, Origen he caused to be scourged at an Iron Stake, and then locked his Feet in the Stocks four Paces asunder. But after that he had seen his two Sons, Decias and Hostilianus, slain before his Face, himself was swal-

254-271. swallowed up in a Whirl-pool, never having other Honour of Burial.

Obianus,
A. B. of London.

A.D. 254. TRebonianus Gallus (whom Decius had appointed Governor of Myfia, and to keep the Passages from the invading Goths) through the Desire of Rule, plotted with the Goths against the Roman Army, to the Ruin of his Sovereign Lord; but thereby he attained the Empire he had lusted after. The Christians he banished. At which Time so violent a Pestilence commenced, that no Province in the World was exempt from it. He made a dishonourable Peace with the Goths, who notwithstanding continued their Furies against the Romans, which his General Æmilianus Maurus revenged with a wonderful Slaughter; whereby Æmilian grew so famous, and Gallus so contemptible, that the Soldiers proclaimed Æmilian Emperor, who slew Gallus and his Son both in Fight.

A.D. 255. Julius Æmilianus, an African by Birth, of base Parentage, was elected Emperor only by the Myfian Army, which Election the Italian Bands opposed in favour of their own Leader Valerianus, whom they sought to promote to the Empire, the Senate also inclining thereto. Therefore the Myfian Soldiers, when they understood this, tumultuously murdered Æmilianus, when he had reigned about 4 Months.

A.D. 255. Licinius Valerianus, in the Beginning of his Reign, was very gracious and mild towards the Christians; but afterwards (stirred up by an Egyptian Sorcerer) he began the eighth Persecution with great Cruelty. Many were the Martyrs which with horrible Tortures he caused to be put to Death; but the just revenging Hand of God cut him off by Sapor, the Savage King of Persia, who in Battle took him Prisoner, and made his aged Back his Footstool whilst he mounted his Horse, for the Space of seven Years, and then caused him to be flayed alive, and salted.

A.D. 268. Licinius Galienus, in whose Time the Sun was clouded as under Sack-cloth, not being seen for many Days together; also great and fearful Earthquakes happened, which overthrew Cities and other Edifices, shaking the Ground so terribly, that vast Caves and hideous gaping Bowels of the Earth were thereby laid open, and great Streams of Salt Water flowed out from them; the Earth roared, and seemed to thunder, when there was no Voice heard in the Air above. The Sea over-swelled her Banks, and brake into many Continents, drowning Countries, Cities, and People; and so violent a Pestilence raged, that in Rome, no less than Five thousand Persons died thereof in a Day. Which sad Calamities somewhat moving the Emperor to Remorse, he stayed the Persecutions of the Christians, sending out his Edicts in Favour of them. The Roman Soldiers now in divers Places of the Empire set up no fewer than thirty titular Emperors at once. But Galienus, after that he had suffered the Empire to be rent in Pieces, and usurped by many barbarous Nations, was murdered at Milan by three of his principal Captains.

A.D. 271. Aurelius Flavius Claudius was elected by the Soldiers before the Walls of Milan, and with much Joy was confirmed Emperor by the Senate in Rome. He slew and took Prisoners of the Goths (who had invaded Italy) in one Battle, Three hundred thousand fighting Men ; Two thousand of their Ships also, laden with warlike Ammunition, he took ; but died of a Fever before he had reigned full two Years. His Statue of Gold the Senate caused to be set up in the Capitol, and his Target of the same Metal, to be hung up in the Senate-house.

A. D. Aurelius Quintilius, Brother to Claudius, was proclaimed Emperor by the Soldiers of his Army, and was confirmed by the Senate ; but the Soldiers that had followed Claudius, thinking themselves worthy of the first Voice in the Election, proclaimed Aurelius for Emperor ; and Quintilius, knowing that he could not stand against him, chose rather, by cutting his Veins, to bleed himself to Death, after he had reigned only seventy Days, than to hazard the Chance of War, or to return to his private State.

A. D. Valerius Aurelianus subdued the Sarmatians and Sarmates, and with great Valour forced the Germans out of Italy. The warlike Queen Zenobia he vanquished, and brought her in Triumph to Rome. But what blemishes the Lustre of this Prince is, That he raised the Ninth Persecution against the Christians. He was slain by his Servants.

A. D. Claudius Tacitus, after 279. eight Months Interregnum, with much Importunity took upon him the Government of the Empire ; for all seemed now to decline this Greatness, they saw it so hazardous. But this Prince reigning about six Months yielded to Death's impartial Stroke : Whether that was natural, or violent, is left uncertain.

A. D. Annius Florianus, Brother 272-280. to Tacitus, took upon him the Name and Authority Imperial ; but hearing the News of Probus's Election, he bled himself to Death, after he had for a very few Days pleased himself with only the Shadow of Sovereignty.

A. D. Valerius Probus was elected 280. by the Eastern Army, and had his Election confirm'd by the Senate, with these Additions to his Title of Augustus, namely, The Father of his Country and highest Bishop. His first Service, after he was Emperor, was in Gallia against the Germans, who had made themselves Lords thereof, where, in one Battle, continuing two Days, he slew 40,000 of them, and recovered out of their Hands seven Cities. He quieted the Provinces of Muscovia, Russia, and Polonia, and likewise Greece, Syria, Arabia, Palestina, and Judea. Whence passing into Persia, he had honourable Conditions of Narses their mighty King : Whereupon issued so universal a Peace, that no Wars were heard of in all the Provinces of the Empire. But this Calm lasted but a short Time ; for the Egyptians, and likewise Bonosus and Proclus rebel against him ; all whom he subdued. Other Defections and Rebellions there were in the Eastern Part, which he prepared vigorously to correct ; resolving, as he said, to bring Matters to that Pass, that the State should want no more Soldiers ; which Saying of his, with also his Curbing the dissolute Manners of the Soldiers, did so disgust them, that some of his Army conspired against him, and treacherously murdered him. After which they yet erected him an honourable Sepulchre, whereon was engraven this Epitaph ;

Here

Palladius
A. B. of London.

286-308. Here lies the Emperor Probus, justly for his Goodness called Probus: Of all the barbarous Nations and Tyrants a Conqueror.

A. D. 286. Aurelius Carus was chosen by the Soldiers, and confirmed by the Senate. The Murderers of his Predecessor Probus he severely punished. Carinus, his eldest Son, he made Governor of Britain, and the Western Parts, and himself, with his younger Son Numerianus, prepared for the East against the Persians; but in his Journey thither-ward, as he lay sick in his Bed, a Thunderbolt slew him, with many others then with him in his Tent. The Terror whereof so disanimated the whole Army, that they desisted from the intended Design against Persia; and Numerianus took his Father's Death so heavily, that with continual Weeping his Eyes were so weakened, that he could not bear the Light. From which Disasters, Arrius Aper, in Hopes of procuring the Empire to himself, took Occasion to work the Death of Numerianus.

A. D. 288. Dioclesianus, who at the first was a common Soldier, slew Arrius Aper; which done, he was elected Emperor, and confirmed by the Senate. Valerius Maximianus, for his good Service in vanquishing the Gauls, who troubled the Peace of the Empire, he made his Consort in the Government. These Emperors raised the Tenth Persecution, which continued for the Term of Ten Years, so fierce, that within the Space of one Month, Seventeen Thousand Christians were put to Death, besides infinite Numbers of others cruelly handled, though suffered to escape with their Lives. And as in other Parts of the Empire, so in Britain, the Churches of the Christians were demolished, and their Bibles burned, and their Bodies afflicted. St. Alban, of the City Verolanium, was beheaded at Holmburst, now called St. Albans. His Instructor Amphibolus was brought to the same Place and whipped at a Stake, whereat his Entrails were tied, so winding his Entrails out of his Body, was at last stoned to Death. Sundry others were put to Death in other Places; and in Litchfield so many, that the Place became another Golgotha; for which Cause that City doth bear, for their Seal of Arms, a Field charged with many Martyrs. But the chief Cause of these Miseries befalling the Christians, was from the Christians themselves: 'For (saith Eusebius) after that our Conversation, thro' too much Liberty and Licentiousness, was degenerated, and holy Discipline corrupted; whilst every one of us did envy, bite, and back-bite each other, waging intestine Wars, and piercing one another with opprobrious Words; whilst nothing but Hypocrisy was in the Face, Deceit in the Heart, and Guile on the Tongue, whereby Mischief was at the full Height, then began the heavy Hand of God to visit us, &c. Howbeit, when God had done using these his Rods of Correction, he cast them into the Fire. These two Tyrants having renounced the Empire, and being again become private Men, Dioclesian poisoned himself, and Maximian hanged himself.

A. D. 308. Constantius Chlorus, and Galerius Maximinus (to whom the two former Emperors had voluntarily resigned up their Sovereignties) divided the Empire into two Parts, East and West; Galerius had the Government of the Eastern Division on, and Constantius of the Western. Constantius was wise, valiant, noble, and of a publick Spirit, wholly reigning to enrich his Subjects. He would commonly say, That it was more profitable for the State, that the whole Wealth of the Land should be dispersed into the Commons Hands, than to lie locked up in the Prince's Coffers. He was so averse to Superfluity, that upon extraordinary Occasions he was forced to borrow Plate of his Friends to furnish his Table and Cupboards. But his most excellling Virtue was his countenancing and protecting the late persecuted Christians, making his Court their Sanctuary. And to winnow the Chaff from the Wheat, he us'd Jehu's Policy, commanding all his Officers to offer Sacrifice to the Idol Gods, pretending to disapprove all such as refused; but on the contrary, those that complied, he rewarded with this Reflection, That he who was disloyal to his God, will never be faithful to his Prince. Whilst he served here in Britain, under Aurelian, he married Helena, the Daughter of Gallus or Calius, a British Prince, who was the Worker of his conversion, and on whom he begat Constantine the Great in Britain. Whilst he swayed the Empire, being here in Britain, and lately returned from his Expedition against the Picts, which were Northern Britains, who continued to paint themselves after the Southern Parts were brought to more Civility, he fell sick at York, his Imperial Seat. At which Time his Son Constantine came thither to him; the Sight of whom so rejoiced him, that setting himself upright in his Bed, he spake as followeth; It now sufficeth, and Death is not feared, seeing I shall leave my unaccomplished Actions to be performed by thee, my Son, in whose Person I doubt not that my Memorial shall be retained as in a Monument of succeeding Fame; What I had intended, but by this my fatal Period leave undone, see thou do it, that is, govern thy Empire with Justice, protect the Innocent, A. B. of London, and wipe away all Tears from the Eyes of the Christians; for therein, above all other Things, I have accounted myself happy: To thee therefore I leave my Diadem, and their Defence, taking my Faults with me to the Grave, there to be buried in everlasting Oblivion; and leaving my Virtues (if ever I had any) to live and revive in thee. So ended his Speech, his Life also ended.

Helena, his Empress, first walled the City of London, so called from Lbun or Lough and Dinas, a City of Trees or Ships.

A. D. 310. Constantine the Great, at his first Entrance upon the Empire, pursued the Relicks of the War, which his Father Constantius had begun against the Caledonians and other Picts. Then he undertook to tame the Tyrant Maxentius: but being doubtful what God he should call upon for Aid in this his Enterprize (for as yet he was not fully settled in the Christian Faith, nor baptized) in his Meditation happening to cast up his Eyes Eastward, he beheld in the Heavens the Sign of a Cross, or the Form of the first Greek Character of the Name of Christ, presented to his Sight, wherein were Stars (as Letters) so placed, that this Sentence in Greek might be read, In hoc vince. This miraculous Sign, promising Victory, was so comfortable to Constantine, that with great Courage he advanced towards his Enemy, bearing before him and his Army, in place of the Imperial Standard, the Form of this Vision embroidered with Gold and precious Stones. Maxentius had framed a deceitful Bridge over Tyber, near unto Pons Milvius, with Intent thereby to intrap Constantine; but 337-361. but the Armies joining Battle. Maxentius was put to Flight, when thro' forgetful Haste, he took over the same Bridge, which suddenly falling under him, he with many more were drowned, and Constantine remained Victor. And to the End that he might with the more Facility restrain the turbulent Persians, he removed his Imperial Seat from Rome into the East, building at Byzantium a most magnificent City, naming it * Utor, New Rome, and, in Imitation of the old one, he circulated seven Hills. A. B. of London. Herein was built the Palace of that publick Library, wherein were contained 20000 of the choicest written Books, and in the Midst thereof were the Guts of a Dragon, in length 120 Feet, on which was admirably written in Letters of Gold the Iliads of Homer. But this new City quickly lost its Name of New Rome; for Love to the Founder made it take Name from him, that is, Constantinople. To this City Constantine drew his Legions out of Germany, Gallia, and Britainy, which much weakened this Part of the Empire, and made Way for the Picts to infest the more civil Parts of this Island. He called the Council of Nice, where himself sate President.

He died May 22, 337, whose Body was interr'd at Constantinople, in the Church of the Apostles which himself had founded.

This Christian Emperor would often kiss the Hollow of old Paphnutius's Eyes, which he had lost in the former Times of Persecution, for the Sake of Christ. He used such Reverence and Attention to the Word of God preached, that many times he would stand up all Sermon-time, and when some told him that it was to his Disparagement, he answered, That it was in the Service of the great God, who is no Respector of Persons. He was not baptized till A. D. 318.

A. D. 337. Constantinus, Constant, and Constantius, were the three Sons of Constantine the Great, amongst whom he divided the Empire. But Constantine the eldest, whose Part was Britain, France, Spain, and Part of Germany, thinking himself wronged in the Division, sought to enlarge his own Dominions upon the Frontiers of his Brother Constant, but was encountered and slain, when he had held his Territories the Term of three Years. * Then Constant seized his Dominions, adding them to his own; but he, living luxuriously, was slain by one of his Captains, and then Constantius became sole Emperor. In whose Time Gratianus, the Father of Valentinian the Emperor, was General of the Army in Britain, a Man so strong of Limb, that no five Men could pluck a Rope out of his Hand by all their Force, whence he was surnamed Funarius, the Roper. Constantius died of a Fever, declaring Julian his Heir.

A. D. 361. Julian the Apostate was the Brother's Son of Constantine the Great. He was excellently learned, and in his younger Years so in Love with the Christian Religion (at least in Shew) that he took upon him the Office of a Deacon, reading in publick to the People the sacred Scriptures; but by the Rhetorick of Libanius was seduced to Heathenism, and by Degrees became a deadly Enemy to the Church of Christ. His Temperance was to Admiration, both as to his Apparel, Lodging, and Diet. He would often say, that it was the Safety of his Life that he never had any War with his Belly. And doubtless he was a grand worldly Politician; for sometimes he would side with the Catholicks against the Arians, which were very numerous; yet still encouraging a Distance betwixt them that so they might not hurt him, being united. To the Jews he would make large Promises, when he foresaw they might stand him in any Stead. Whilst Constantius lived, he dissembled his Religion; but as soon as dead, he set open the Temples of the Pagan Gods, repaired their Altars, and defaced the Monuments of the Christians. The Brazen Figure of Christ erected at Cæsaræa Philippi, he caused to be broken down, instead thereof placing his own Figure, that it might be worshipped, but it was suddenly destroyed by Lightning.

The Christians he forbad the publick Schools and Study of the Arts and Tongues, jesting away the Reason of this Injustice with Scoffs, as he did the rest, saying, 'That since Plato, Aristotle, and Isocrates, ador'd Mercury, and the other Gods, he held it absurd that the Christians should learn from their Books, whose Religion they condemned and loathed.' When he at any time seized upon the Goods of the Christians (which he oftentimes did upon slight Pretences) he would say, he did it that they might enter Heaven with the less Difficulty. When he had disabled the Christians of all Command, civil or martial, he said, he did it because their Gospel had taken from them potesstatem gladii, the Power of the Sword. If any poor Christian desired the Redress of any Grievance, he would answer, That it was the Duty of their Profession to bear Injuries. But Julian entring Persia with an Army ten Miles in Length, put the Persians to flight; whom pursuing, as he lifted up his Hand in Sign of Victory, he was in the very Instant struck with a Javelin into the lower Lappet of his Liver. From whose Hand this Javelin came is uncertain; some say it was from the Hand of a flying Persian, others say from the Hand of one of his own Soldiers. Calistus one of his own Guard, that wrote this Battle in Herodewin, roick Verse, affirmeth that some A. B. of wicked Fiend or Devil run him through with that Javelin. But be it by whomsoever, when the Apostate had plucked the Javelin out, he cast it into the Air, uttering this blasphemous Speech, At length thou hast overcome me, O Galilean. For so in Contempt he used to call Christ.

A. D. 363. Flavius Jovianus, a Christian, was chosen Emperor by the Army; and because of the Distress his Host was in for Want of Provisions, he made Peace with the Persians for thirty Years, and so left their Country. In his Time blazing Stars were seen at Noon-day. And the Statue of Maximianus Cæsar let fall the Globe out of its Hand, no Force moving it. Also horrible Sounds and Noises were heard in the Consistory. These were taken for ominous Signs of those troublous Accidents, which besel the Army in their Way homeward from Persia. Jovian died suddenly of the Obstruction and stopping of the Lungs.

A. D. 364. Flavius Valentinianus, a Christian, being elected Emperor, he made Valens, his Brother, his Partner with him in the Empire. In Britain Valentinian sent Theodosius his Lieutenant, who recovered this Province out of the Hands of their Enemies, the Picts, Saxons, and Scots, that had miserably infested it, re-edified the Cities, repairing the Garrisons, and Castles, and fortifying the Frontiers, naming Britain, Valentia, in Honour of Valentinian the Emperor. Strange and dreadful were the Signs that in the third Year of this Emperor happened, as Earthquakes, Inundations, and the like; amongst which St. Hierom reports, that there rained Wool from Heaven so perfectly good, that no better grew upon the Sheep. This Christian Emperor was so displeased with his Brother Valens an Arian, for persecuting the orthodox Christians, that he denied to afford him Help against the Goths when they invaded his Dominions in the East, saying, 'That is was an 'impious Thing to strengthen the 'Hands of a Man, who had spent 'his Days in warring against God 'and his Church'. He died of an Apoplexy; or, as some write, of the Plague. And Valens flying from the Goths, was in a House near Adrianople burnt to Ashes.

392.

Flavius Gratianus, the Son of Valentinian, succeeded his Father, to whom was joined for Comfort in the Empire his Brother Valentinian, a Child about four Years of Age. Whose Advancement (though done without his Allowance) he envied not, but regarded his Brother exceedingly, and brought him up with all Tenderness, forgetting the Wrong offered to himself and his Mother Severa, for Valentinian's Mother's sake, whose Name was Justina, a Damsel surpassing all other Women so far, that the Empress herself fell in Love with her, and could not forbear extolling her Beauty beyond Compare, in the hearing of the Emperor her Husband; who, provoked hereby, took her also to Wife, by whom he had this young Valentinian, and three Daughters, albeit that his Wife Severa was yet living. In Britain, Clemens Maximus, descended from Constantine the Great, had so won the Affections of the Britains, thro' his good Service done against the Picts and Scots, (which last were those People inhabiting the Highlands of Scotland, and came first out of Ireland, planting themselves on the North Side of Cluyd) that they accepted him for their Sovereign, and his Soldiers by Constraint forced him to assume the Imperial Style, and Purple Robe. And now Maximus hastens into Gallia with the chiefest Flower and Strength of the British Forces, against whom Gratian advanced; but after five Days skirmishing, being forsaken of his Soldiers, he was forced to fly. After which, he sent Ambrose, Bishop of Milan, to sue for Peace with Maximus, unto which Maximus seemed to incline; withal causing Letters to be sent, and Reports given out to soft-spirited Gratian, that his Empress was upon her Journey to visit him; which the innocent Emperor credited, and accordingly set forward with Joy to meet her; but when he opened the Litter, therein hoping to embrace her, he was by Captain Andrigathius and his Russians (sent in it on purpose treacherously murdered near unto Lyons. But Theodosius overtaking the Usurper Maximus, vanquished his Forces, and slew him and his Son Victor. Howbeit young Valentinian was not in Safety, for by the Treason of Captain Arbogastes, and Eugenius, a Grammarian, he was strangled to Death in his Bed.

A. D. 392. Flavius Theodosius Magnus to revenge the Death of the Emperor Valentinian, and also to oppose the Proceedings of the Traitor Eugenius, who had usurped a Part of the Empire, marched with his Forces towards the Confines of Italy, where, at the Foot of the Alps, he found the Passages stopt, and his Enemies Powers far surmounting his, and likewise having so beleaguered him about, that no Victuals could be brought into his Camp. The good Emperor therefore, in the Theodred,

A. B. of London.

Distress, applied himself with Sighing and Tears unto the Lord of Hosts; who, to vindicate Theodosius's righteous Cause, sent such a violent Tempest and raging Wind upon the Faces of his Enemies, that when both Armies were engaged in Fight, his Adversaries own Darts were driven back upon themselves; whereby he obtained a most glorious Victory. In this Battle the Usurper Eugenius was taken, who, whilst he was craving Pardon at the Emperor's Feet, had his Head struck off by the Soldiers; and Arbogastes escaping by Flight, two Days after ran himself upon his own Sword.

Theodosius, thus delivered, repaired to Milan, where he shortly after expired unto Death, constituting his Son Honorius Emperor of the West, and Arcadius of the East. His Humility and Piety was such, that St. Ambrose Bishop of Milan, having forbid his Entrance into the Church to communicate with other Christians in their Devotions (because he had rashly punished the Inhabitants of Theffalonica for an Offence committed by them) he accordingly submitted to this Censure, acknowledging his Offence; and for a future Prevention of the like Rashness, by the Advice of St. Ambrose, he enacted, That thirty Days should pass between the Sentence of Death and Execution of the Malefactor. He was wont to say, That he accounted it a greater Honour to be a Member of the Church of Christ, than to be Head of the Roman Empire.

A. D. 395. Honorius*, because of his being committed to the Government of Stilicho. But this Wretch, aspiring after absolute Sovereignty, first sowed Sedition among the Lieutenants of the Provinces, then with Disgrace cashier'd those Goths that had served with good Proof of their Fidelity above twenty Years since their Entertainment by Theodosius. These Goths therefore, to revenge their Wrongs, chose for their Leader a valiant Goth, named Alaricus, who shortly proved the Scourge of Rome. With him joined the Vandals, Alans, and Suevians; all which, with great Fury, began to war in Austria and Hungary, increasing their Powers with such Multitudes, that the World was amazed, and stood in Fear. For unto those resorted Two hundred thousand Goths more, under the Conduct of Radagastius their King, who with united Force overran Thracia, Hungary, Austria, Sclavonia, and Dalmatia, spoiling all in such Manner, that Devils, and not Men, seem'd to have passed that Way. The Roman Empire thus declining, and the Armies in Britain fearing the Fury of the Goths, to secure themselves the best Way they could, elected an Emperor at home, one Marcus their Lieutenant; but he not fitting their Humours, they in a short Time murther'd him. In whose Stead they enthroned one Gratian a Britain, whom within 4 Months they also murther'd. At the Death of him, they elected, for the Name Sake, one Constantine, a common Soldier, and he passing beyond the Seas, was very prosperous for a while. His Imperial Seat he placed at Arles, sent Letters exculatory unto Honorius, pretending that the Soldiers compelled him to do what he did; which so pleased the Emperor, that he sent him a Purple Robe. But one Maximinus rising against him, he was taken Prisoner, sent to Rome, and there beheaded. From that Time Britain renew'd her Obedience to Honorius; and Viclorinus, Lieutenant here, oft-times repressed the Incurfions of the Scots and Picts. Howbeit, Rome

423. was sore afflicted and sacked by the Goths and Vandals. The Emperor Arcadius died in Peace at Constantinople, and his Brother Honorius at Rome.

* Resti-tutus,
A. B. of London.

A. D. 423. T Headofius, the Son of Arcadius, was now Emperor, when the Roman Greatness was almost quite fallen. His Kinsman Valentinian he chose for his Associate, making him Emperor of the West. At this Time the Britains were sorely distressed by the continual Disturbers of their Peace, the Scots and Picts; therefore they sent their Ambassadors to Rome, with their Garments rent, and Dust upon their Heads, bewailing their most miserable Estate, and craving the Emperor's Aid; who sent a Regiment of Soldiers into Britain under Gallio: Which Captain did some present Kindness for them; but in short Time was called over with his Legion into Gallia, to secure the Country about Paris. At his Departure, he advised the Britains to stand upon their own Guard, and for the Future to provide for their own Safety, and not to depend upon any Succours from the Romans, who had their Hands full of Troubles near Home.

Thus about 500 Years after the Romans had sway'd in Britain, they took their final Farewell of it, burying Part of their Treasures here in the Earth. But during their Stay in this Island, they had much dispeopled of its Natives, having levied as many Companies, Cohorts, and Ensigns of stout Britains from hence for the Service of Armenia, Egypt, Illyricum, their Frontier Countries as from any other of their Provinces whatsoever. Some of these British Soldiers, after they were wearied out in the Wars, had Armorica in France assigned them (by Constantine the Great) for their good Service in the Wars; from whom, that Country of Armorica was called Little Britain. * Hither in the Time of Gratian the Emperor, was Ursula the Daughter of Dinoth, Regent of Cornwal, sent, with Eleven thousand Virgins, in order to have been married with their Countrymen; but all of them perish'd e'er they arrived, some being drowned in the Sea by a Tempest, the Remainder put to the Sword, by the barbarous Huns and Picts, because they refused to yield their Chastities to their filthy Lusts.

The Romans made four famous Highways in England, namely, Ikenild-street or way, the Foss, Ermon-street, and Watling-street.

About A.D. 400, Pelagius, a British, brought up in the Monastery of Bangor, did much disturb the Peace of the Church by his heretical Opinions.

S A X O N S.

THE Southern or more civilized Britains being now grown very low, and exceedingly weakened (what with the Romans exporting their valiant Countrymen to serve in Foreign Countries, what with their own Civil Dissensions, the Romans forsaking them, and the Calamities of Scarcity and Famine) their veterane Foes the Scots, Picts, and Irish, hereupon take their Opportunity so miserably to infest and trouble them, that being no longer able to defend and secure themselves, they supplicate Aid out of Germany, from the Angles, Jutes, and Saxons, then

here in Stay in dispo-g levie rts, and hence Egypt countries provinces British wearied orica in Constantine service in Country the Bri of Gra ula the gent of thousand en mar-n; but arrived, ea by a
to the uns and yield Lufts. famous ly, the Ermona Britery of Peace
l Opi-

then inhabiting Jutland, Holstein, and the Sea-coasts along to the River Elbe. Of these to the Number of nine Thousand, under the Command of the two Brethren, Hengist and Horja, entered Britain at Ebbsfleet in the Island of Thanet, about 450 Years after the Birth of Christ. There they were received with great Joy, and saluted with Songs after the accustomed Manner of the Britains, who appointed them that Island for their Habitation. And not long after, Hengist obtained of Vortigern King of the Britains, the Property of so much Ground as he could inclose with a Bull's-hide, which cutting into Thongs, he there built the Castle called from thence Thong Castle: To which Place he invited Vortigern, who there fell in Love with Rowena, the Daughter or Niece of Hengist; upon which Match Hengist began to grow bold, and to think of making this Island his Inheritance. In order to which, he sent for fresh Forces to come over to him; which being arrived, they fought and made Occasions of Quarrels with the Natives, driving the Inhabitants before them from their wonted Possessions, every several Captain accounting that Part of the Country his own, where he could overmatch the Britains, commanding in it as absolute King: By which Means the Land became burthened with seven of them at the first, at one and the same Time. But although the Land was divided into seven several Kingdoms, and each of them bearing a Sovereign Command within its own Limits; yet one of them ever seemed to be supreme over the rest.

The SAXON Heptarchy.

THE Kingdom of Kent consisting of that County only which Vortigern had given to Hengist in Favour of Rowena, was the first Dominion of the Saxons seven-headed Kingdom, and began in or near the Year of our Lord 455, continuing 372 Years. In it there ruled seventeen Kings successively; the first of which was Hengist; and the first Christian King thereof was Ethelbert, surnamed Pren.

The South Saxons Kingdom containing the Counties of Sussex and Surrey, commenced in A. D. 488, continuing 113 Years; Ella being the first King, and Ethelwolph the first Christian King thereof.

The West Saxon Kingdom, containing the Counties of Cornwall, Devon, Dorset, Somerset, Wilts, Berks, and Hampshire, began A. D. 519, continuing 300 Years; Cherdick being the first King, and Hin- gils the first Christian King thereof.

The East Saxon Kingdom, containing the Counties of Essex, Middlesex, and Part of Hertfordshire, began in A. D. 527, continuing 281 Years; Erchenwin being the first King thereof, and Shebert the first Christian King.

The Kingdom of Northumberland, containing the Counties of York, Durham, Lancaster, Westmoreland, Cumberland, and Northumberland, began in A. D. 527, continuing 379 Years; Ella and Ida the first Kings thereof, and Edwin the first Christian King.

The Kingdom of Mercia, containing the Counties of Oxford, Gloucester, Worcester, Salop, Cheshire, Stafford, Warwick, Buckingham, Bedford, Huntingdon, Part of Hertfordshire, Northampton, Rutland, Lincoln, Leicester, Derby, and Nottingham, tingham, began in A. D. 582, continuing 202 Years, Cerde being the first King, and Peada first Christian King thereof.

The Kingdom of the East Angles, containing the Counties of Norfolk, Suffolk, and Cambridge, began in A. D. 775. continuing 353 Years, Uffa being the first King, and Redwald the first Christian King thereof. Its last King was Edmond, whom the Danes, for his constant Profession of the Christian Faith, most barbarously slew at a Village then called Heglesdune, where, when the Danes were departed, his Head and Body were buried, and the Town, upon Occasion thereof, called St. Edmonds-bury. After the Death of this Edmond, the Kingdom of the East-Angles was possessed by the Danes, till such Time that Edward, surnamed the Elder, expelled them, and joined it a Province to the West Saxons: But the Britains, during the Time of the Heptarchy, continued in the Defence of their own rightful Inheritance, with great Disdain and valorous Resistance, as much as in them lay, opposing the Saxon Yoke.

The BRITISH Princes, who contended with the SAXONS to maintain their Country's Rights, were these chiefly; First,

Vortigern, at that time King, by the Election of the Britains, when the Saxons were first invited into the Land. This Vortigern reigning first 16 Years, and then deposed for his Favours to the Saxons, was retained in Durance all the Reign of Vortimer his Son, after whose Death he was re-established; but oppressed by the Saxons, and pursued by Aurelius, he fled into Wales, where in a Castle, which he built by Melius's Directions in the Mountains, he, with his Daughter, whom he had taken to Wife, were burnt to Ashes.

Vortimer, for his Father's Abuse of Government, was constituted King of the Britains. He gave unto the Saxons four famous Overthrows, almost to their utter Expulsion. After his last Victory over them, he caused his Monument to be erected at the Entrance into Thanet, whither he had driven the Saxons, even in that same Place of the Overthrow; which Monument was called Lapis titulo, now the Stoner, wherein he commanded his Body to be buried, to the farther Terror of the Saxons; that in beholding this his Trophy, their Hearts might be daunted at the Remembrance of their great Overthrow. But Rowena procured his Death by Poison. He restored the Christian Religion, then sorely decayed, and rebuilt the Churches destroyed by the Pagan Danes.

Aurelius Ambrosius, descended of that Constantine, who was elected here, only in Hope of his lucky Name. He was very successful against the Saxons; but, as some say, was poisoned by the Procurement of Pascentius, the youngest Son of Vortigern. Others report, that he was slain in the Field by the Saxons, and that the Britains erected that famous Monument called Stone-henge, anciently Gloria Gigantum, over the Place where he was slain and buried; though, according to the Saying of some, Aurelius Ambrosius caused the Monument of Stone-henge to be erected in Memorial of the Massacre of 300 of the Nobility Nobility of the Britains by the Saxons, who were there buried. He built Ambresbury in Wilts.

A. D. Uter Pendragon, the Brother of Ambrosius, was in all his Wars against the Saxons most victorious and fortunate. He was surnamed Pendragon, either because at his Birth there appeared a fiery Comet somewhat resembling a Dragon's Head, or because of his Serpentine Wisdom, or from his Royal Banner, wherein was portrayed a Dragon with a Golden Head. When he had reigned eighteen Years, he died of Poison put into a Well, whereof he usually drank.

A. D. Arthur, the Son of Pendragon, begotten upon the Lady Igren, Dutches of Cornwall, was crowned King of Britain at 15 Years of Age, about A. D. 516. Twelve Battles he fought against the Saxons with great Manhood and Victory, the last of which was fought at Bath, or Bathen-hill, where the Britains gave the Saxons a very great Overthrow. But Mordred, a Prince of the Picts, whose Mother was Pendragon's Sister, affecting the Crown, upon the Pretence of Arthur's reputed Bastardy, made many Attempts against him; and lastly, at Cambalu, now Camelford in Cornwall, encountering King Arthur, gave him his Death's Wound, and was himself slain by Arthur in that Place. From which Place this renowned King was carried to Glastenbury, where he died of his Wounds in A. D. 542, whose Body was there buried, and after 600 Years was digged up by the Command of Henry the second. His Bones of great Bigness, and Skull, wherein were perceived ten Wounds, were found in the Trunk of a Tree; over him was a huge broad Stone, in which a leaden Cross was fastened, and therein this Inscription, Hic jacet, &c. Here lies King Arthur, buried in the Isle of Avalonia. By him lay his Queen Guenawor, whose Tresses of Hair finely platted, of a golden Colour, seemed perfect and entire, till but being touched they mouldered to Dust. These Relicks were re-buried in the great Church.

A. D. Constantine, the Son of Cador, Duke of Cornwall, and Cousin to King Arthur by Marriage, and his adopted Heir, was slain by Conanus, when he had been King three Years, and was buried at Stone-henge.

A. D. Aurelius Conanus, King 545. Arthur's Nephew, detained his Uncle in perpetual Imprisonment, and slew his two Cousins, because they had more Right to the Crown than himself.

A. D. Vortiporus in many Battles 578. vanquished the Saxons, and valiantly defended his Subjects; but was otherwise very wicked.

A. D. Malgo Conanus, in Arms 581. and Dominions, was stronger and greater than any other British Potentate, saith Gildas.

A. D. Careticus sowed Civil 586. Wars amongst his Subjects the Britains, which occasioned them to forsake him, and to leave him to the Mercy of the Saxons, who pursuing after him, he fled into Cirencester for Safety; but by the Advice of his Pursuers, certain Sparrows being taken, and Fire fastened to their Feet, were let fly into the City, who lighting among Straw, set it on Fire, whence the City was burnt to the Ground; but 586.

Careticus

685.

Catericus escaped, and fled for Safety unto the Mountains of Wales, where he died.

A. D. 635. CAdwan maintained himself and his Subjects in great Honour and Peace. His first Affairs against the Saxons were to revenge the Deaths of his Britains, and harmless Monks of Bangor, slain by wild Ethrelfred, the mighty King of Northumberland.

The Monastery of Bangor, in North Wales, was situated in the fruitful Valley now called the English Major, containing within it the Quantity of a Mile and a half of Ground. This Monastery, as saith Bernard Clari-valentius, was the Mother of all others in the World. Whose Monks distributed themselves into seven Portions, every one numbering 300 Souls, and all of them living by the Labour of their own Hands. Many of these Monks assembled at

* Chester.

*Caer-Legion, to assist their Brethren the Britains with their Prayers against Ethelfred, surnamed the Wild, King of Northumberland, who with his Pagan Soldiers set upon the Britains, discomfited their Host, and put to the Sword Twelve hundred of these Christian Monks.

† Gulielmus and Faustinus, A. B. of London.

A. D. 635. CAdwallo, or Cadwallin, the Son of Cadwin, warred most valiantly against the Saxons, slew the Christian King Edwin of Northumberland, with his Son Osfride, in a great and bloody Battle at Hethfield. He died in Peace, as the British Writers say, and was buried in St. Martin's Church in London; his Image great and terrible triumphantly riding on Horseback, being artificially cast in Brass, the Britains placed upon Ludgate to the farther Fear and Terror of the Saxons.

A. D. 685. CAdwallador, the Son of Cadwallo, with great Valour fought against the Saxons, but his Nobles dissenting and warring among themselves, did much endamage his very hopeful Undertakings; and by the all-disposing hand of Providence so great a Dearth befel, that Herbs and Roots were the Commons chiefest Sustainance. Mortality and Pestilence likewise raging so forely and suddenly, the People in their eating, drinking, walking, and speaking, were surprized by Death, and in such Numbers, that the living were scarce sufficient to bury the dead: Which Calamities lasted no less than eleven Years, whereby the Land became desolate; insomuch that the King and many of the British Peers, were forced to seek and eat their Bread in foreign Parts. But the destroying Angel, by God's Appointment, having sheathed his devouring Sword, Cadwallador was minded to have returned into his native Country, with some Aids which he had procured from his Cousin Alan, King of Little Britain, † but was forbid by an Angel, as he thought, and commanded to go to Rome, and there take upon him the Habit of Religion; which accordingly he did, and died in Rome, where, in St. Peter's Church, he was buried, being the last King of the Britains Blood, about A. D. 689.

The most powerful Kings of the SAXON Heptarchy, were

A. D. 445. HEngist, who about the 5th Year after his Arrival in Britain, began his Kingdom in Kent. He (as also the Saxon Kings beside) doth derive his Original from Prince Woden, and Horfa, by Wechta the eldest of their seven Sons, being the fifth in due from them. His Brother Horfa was slain in Battle by the Britains. According to some, himself died in Peace; others say, that he was slain when he had reigned thirty-four Years.

A. D. 79. Ella, the first King of the South-Saxons, in the twenty Third Year of Hengist's Reign, brought a fresh Supply of Normans to the Relief of his Country-men; who, landing at Shoreham in Sussex, vanquished the Britains in those Parts, after which he assumed the Name of King of that Province.

A. D. 85. Cherdick, the first King of the West Saxons, arrived in the Western Parts of this Island, in the Seventh Year of Ella's Reign; where in his first Battle with the Britains he slew a mighty King of theirs, named Natoncord, or Naxar.  This Battle was fought in Wiltshire, near unto a Brook of water, which from Cherdick began to be called Cherdickford, where now a Town of the same Name standeth; but by Contraction called Cherford.

Kenrick, the second King of the West-Saxons, enlarged his Possessions upon the Territories of the Britains, giving them two great Overthrows, the one at Scarbury in Wiltshire, the other at Banbury in Oxfordshire.

A. D. 80. Chelwin, or Cheuline, the Son of Kenrick, and second King of the West-Saxons, overcame the Britains in many Fights; he set himself to enlarge his own Territories upon his Country-mens; entering Kent, in a set Battle he defeated the King's Forces. He surprized the Cities of Gloucester, Bath, and Cirencester; slew three of the British Kings, named Coinmagil, Candidan, and Farimnagil: But grown proud, thro' his many Victories, he tyrannized over his own Subjects, which moved them to take Part with the Britains against him; and at Wodensheath, now Wandsditch in Wiltshire, they vanquished and put him to Flight, forcing him into Banishment, in which he died.

A. D. 562. Ethelbert, the fifth King of Kent, was married to Berta, the Daughter of Chilperick, King of France, on these Conditions, That the Lady should enjoy the Profession of her Christian Faith, and the Conversation of Luidhard, her learned Bishop. About this Time it chanced that Gregory the Great, then Arch-deacon of Rome, saw certain Youths of this Island of Britain, brought to Rome to be sold, concerning whom he enquired, first, of what Nation they were;  Vodigels, Gregory replied, And not without Cause are they so named, their rus. A. B. Resemblance is so Angelical; and of Lond. fit it is that they be made Inheritors with the Angels in Heaven. But of what Province are they in Britain, said he? And being answered, of Deira now great Pity it is, said he, but that these People should be taken from Deira, the Wrath of God. And being told that their King's Name was Ella, he by way of Allusion said, That Allelujah to the Praise of God should shortly be said in that Prince's Dominions: To which End, when he had attained to be Bishop of Rome, he sent Augustine, a Monk, with Augustine forty others, his Assistants, which the Monk, landed in Thanet about An. Dom. A. B. of 596, finding at their coming seven Canter-Bishopsbury.

Bishops in the British Churches. These Roman Christians, sent by Gregory, were by King Ethelbert freely permitted to preach the Gospel, and in his chief City of Canterbury he allowed them fit Places of Residence, and to Augustine resigned his own Palace. In this City Austin laid the Foundation of that great Church dedicated to the Name and Service of Christ. And also at his Cost built a most fair Monastery, wherein eight Kings of Kent, and ten Archbishops, were afterwards interred. But between the Britain Christians and Austin there was a great Difference about the due Time for celebrating the Feast of Easter. Easter was kept in Britain after the Manner of the Eastern Church, on the fourteenth Day of the Full Moon, whatsoever Day of the Week it happened on, and not on Sunday, as we at this Day observe it; which made

Augustine in great Displeasure against them, and they to dislike him for his Pride. The British Bishops were consecrated by their own Archbishops, and they by their own Suffragans, making no Profession of Subjection to any other Church. And when Augustine the Monk required of the British Bishops to profess Subjection to the See of Rome, Dionothus, Abbot of Bangor, made appear by divers Arguments, that they owed him none; nor did they follow the Rites of Rome. But King Ethelbert, being by Augustine converted to the Christian Faith, was the Instrument of converting Sebert, King of the East-Saxons, whom he assisted in the Building of St. Paul's, where had stood the Temple of Diana, as also the Church of St. Peter's at Westminster, then called Thorney, where the Temple of Apollo stood; and himself built the Cathedral Church at Rocheſter, dedicating it to St. Andrew. He brought the Laws of his Country to their own Mother-Tongue, and was very forward in advancing the Christian Religion. He died in or near A. D. 616, and was buried at Canterbury. Augustine, the first Archbishop of Canterbury, died during the Reign of Ethelbert, and was buried in the Northern Porch of the new Church in Canterbury, dedicated to St. Peter and Paul, and Gregentius ſucceeded him in that ſhoprick.

D. R Edwald, third King of East-Angles, was baptized in Kent, but returning into his own Country, thro' the Perſuaſions of his Queen, he returned to Superſtitious, and in one and the ſame Temple erected an Altar for the Service of Chriſt, and another for his Idols.

D. E Dawin the Great, and 2d King of Northumberland, subdued all the Coaſts of Britanny, whereſoever any Provinces were inhabited either by Britains or Saxons; which thing no King of the Engliſh before him had done. And he ſubdued the Mervian Iſles, or Hebrides, to his own Dominions. He was converted to the Chriſtian Faith by Paulinus, and baptized at York in Peter's Church, then built of Wood, which he rebuilt of Stone, making it the Cathedral Church; and Paulinus Archbishop of that See. He ſuppreſſed Idolatry, eſtabliſhed the Goſpel in the Northern Parts, which daily ſpread into other Provinces, and with ſuch Wit of Peace, that throughout his Dominions, a weak Woman with a new born Babe might have paſ-ſed without Danger or Damage over all the Iſland, from Sea to Sea. And for the Conveniency of way faring Men, he incloſed clear Springs by the Way-fides, where he placed great Baſons of Braſs, both to waſh and bathe in. But Penda the Mercian King, and Cadwallo the Britain, confederated againſt him, and in Fight ſlew him and his Son Osfryd. His Body was buried at Streamſhall, now called Whitby.

A. D. 633. O Swald, the 5th King of Deira, the 9th of Bernicia, and 3d of Northumberland, having received the Chriſtian Faith in Scotland, during his Banishment there; at his Return took ſuch Care for the Salvation of his Subjects, that he ſent into Scotland for Aidan, a Chriſtian Biſhop, to inſtruct his Northumbrians in the Goſpel of Truth. And becauſe the Biſhop could not ſpeak their Language, the King himſelf would interpret his Sermons to the People. Which godly Undertaking of the good King and Biſhop was ſo ſucceſſful, that, as it is reported, in ſeven Days ſpace, Fifteen thouſand received Baptiſm. At this time the whole Iſland flouriſhed with Peace and Plenty, and acknowledged their Subjection to Oswald. But Penda King of Mercia envying his flouriſhing Eſtate, ſlew him in Battle, at a Place called Maſerfield in Shropſhire, and then tore his Body in Piece-meal. Whereupon the ſaid Place of his Death is called to this Day Oswald's Tree, or Oſweſtry. His diſmembred Limbs were buried in the Monastery of Bradrey in Lincolnſhire, afterwards removed to Glouceſter, and buried in the North-side of the upper End of the Choir, in the Cathedral Church.

King Oswald being at Dinner on Eaſter-Day, one brought him word, that there was a great Company of poor

690. poor People in the Streets, which asked Alms of him ; whereupon he commanded the Meat prepared for his own Table to be carried to them, and brake a Silver Platter to Pieces, and sent it amongst them.

Honorius and Deus De-dit, A. B. of Canter-
bury.
 In the Year of Christ 636, Hono- rius, Archbishop of Canterbury, first divided England into Parishes. Nor- thumberland was sometimes parted into two Kingdoms, namely, Deira, and Bernicia.

A. D. 643. O Sway, the 4th King of Northumberland, slew Penda in Fight, with the Discomfiture of all his Mercian Power ; and in the same Battle slew Ethelbert, King of the East-Angles, who sided with Penda ; after which Victory he subdued the Mercians, and made the Northern Part also wholly subject unto him. He founded the Cathedral Church in Litchfield for a Bishop's See, died in A. D. 670, and was buried in St. Peter's Church in Streatshall.

A. D. 668. V Ulfhere, the 6th King of the Mercians, slew his two Sons Vulfald and Rufin, because they usually resorted to Reverend Chad for the Profit of their Souls, and had received at his Hands the Sacrament of Baptism. Their mar-tyr'd Bodies Queen Erminbild their Mother caused to be buried in a Sepulchre of Stone, and thereupon a fair Church to be erected, which, by reason of the many Stones brought thither for the Foundation, was ever after called Stones ; and is now a fair Market Town in Staffordshire.
 But Vulfhere repenting his most inhumane Murther, and becoming a Christian, converted his Heathen Temples into Churches and Monasteries, and finished Medisbam, now Peterborough (his Brother Puda's Foundation) enriching it largely

Theodorus and Bertual-dus, A. B. of Canter-
bury.

with Lands and Possessions. He died A. D. 674, and was buried at Peterborough.

E Theldred, because of his Nephew Kenrid's Minority, and Disposition to a private Life, was accepted of the Mercians for their King.
 His Entrance was with War against the Kentish King Lothair, whose Country he miserably destroyed sparing neither religious nor secular Place. But at length disquieted in Mind, because of his Cruelties to expiate his Crimes, he first built a goodly Monastery at Beadney in Lincolnshire, then resign'd the Crown to Kenrid, became there a Monk himself, living there a regular Life
 the Term of twelve Years, and died Abbot of the Place, A. D. 716.
 In the 4th Year of his Reign, a fearful blazing Star discovered it self and for three Months together continued rising in the Morning, and giving forth a blazing Pile, very high, and of a glittering Flame.

K Enred, the 8th King of Mercia, reigned in Peace the Term of four Years ; but affecting a private retired Life,
 he appointed Chelred his Cousin to rule in his Stead, and accompanied with Offa, King of the East Saxons, and Edwin, Bishop of Winchester, he went unto Rome, where himself and Offa became Monks, and there died.

A. D. 690. C Helred, the 9th King of the Mercians, was al-along, during his seven Years Reign, engaged in Wars against Inar, King of the West Saxons. Which Inar being in Pilgrimage at Rome,
A. D. 722, gave a Tribute to Rome called Peter-Pence, being a Penny for every House. At first it was the King's

ing's Alms; it was also called mescot. Inas built a College at ells, and a stately Abby at Glasten- ry, where formerly the old Cell of Joseph of Arimathea had been. He also built a Castle at Taunton. King Chelred died A. D. 716, and was buried in the Cathedral Church at Litchfield.

Ethelbald, the 10th King of the Mercians, spent the most Part of his Reign in Peace, and too much thereof in Luxury; for the which he was reproved by Boniface (an English Man) Bishop of Mentz: whose Epistle redargutory had this Influence upon the King, that in Sign of Repentance, he privileged the Church from all Tributes to himself, and founded the Abby of Worland. About which Time it was appointed by Archbishop Cuthbert and his Clergy, in a Convocation held in his Province (the King being present at the same Council with his Princes and Dukes) that the sacred Scriptures should be read in their Monasteries, and the Lord's Prayer and Creed taught in the English Tongue, A. D. 733. In January the suffered so great an Eclipse, that the Earth seemed to be overshadowed as with Sackcloth. A. D. 756, in December, the Moon being in her Full, appeared dark and bloody, for a Star so there be none lower than the Moon, seemed to follow her, and deprive her of Light, till it had passed before her. But great Ethelbert fighting against Cuthred, the Saxon, was traiterously slain in the Procurement of one of his Captains, near Tamworth, and buried at Repton in Derbyshire.

A. D. Offa, the 11th King of the Mercians, as is said, 758. was born both lame, deaf, and blind, continuing so unto his Man's Estate. He was of such a stout and daring Spirit, that he thought nothing impossible for him to attain unto. The first that felt his Fury were the Kentish Men, whose King Alrick he slew in Fight with his own Hands. From South to North he then marched, and beyond Humber made havock of all that opposed him. Whence returning in Triumph, he vanquish'd Kenwolph and his West Saxons, with whom Mar-madun, King of the Britains, sided. He caused a great Ditch to be made between his and the Britains Borders, that is, from Basingwark in Flintshire, and North-Wales, not far from the Mouth of Dee, running along the Mountains into the South, ending near Bristol at the Fall of Wye. The Tract whereof in many Places is yet seen, being called Clawdh Offa, or Offa's Ditch. The Danes that had invaded England, he forced back to their Ships, with the Loss of all their Booty, and many of their Lives. Then making his Son Egfrid Partner with him in the Kingdom, he went to Rome, where he made his Kingdom subject to a Tribute, called Peter Pence, and gave rich Gifts to Pope Hadrian for canonizing Alban a Saint; in Honour of whom, at his Return, he built a magnificent Monastery over-against Verolanium. Also in Testimony of his Repentance for the Blood he had shed in the Wars, he gave the tenth part of his Goods unto the Churchmen and Poor. At Bath he built a Monastery, and in Warwickshire a Church, where the adjoining Town from it and him beareth the Name Offchurch. He died at Offey in A. D. 794, and was buried without the Town of Bedford, in

819. in a Chapel standing upon the Bank of Owze, which long since was swallowed up by the same River.

In A. D. 755, was Sigebert, King of the West Saxons, slain by a Swineherd; and A. D. 760, Kenwolph King of the West Saxons, made Wells an Episcopal See.

A. D. 794. EGfryd*, the Son of Offa, restored to the Church her ancient Privileges, which his Father had deprived her of. He died in the first Year of his Reign, and was buried in the Abby Church of St. Albans.

A. D. 795. Kenwolph*, the 13th King of the Mercians, was at Home a Precedent of Peace, Religion, and Justice, and Abroad of Temperance, Humility, and Courtesy. In War, stout and victorious; in Peace, studious of enthralling his Subjects. He vanquished the Kentish Men, and carried away their King Prisoner, detaining him captive, and giving his Kingdom to Cuthred. He built a fair Church at Winchcombe in Gloucestershire, where, upon the Dedication thereof, he led Pren, his captive King of Kent, up to the High Altar, and there, without either his Entreat or any Ransom, set him at full Liberty. He died A. D. 819, and was buried at Winchcombe; where was buried also Kenelm his Son, murdered by his Sister Quendreda. Now lived that greatly learned Englishman, and of most Fame in that Age, Alcuine, School-Master of Charles the Great. This learned Man wrote against Image worship.

SAXON MONARCHS.

A. D. 819. EGbert*, the 18th King of the West Saxons, first warred against the Cornish and Welsh, a Remnant of the old Britains, which for fourteen Years held side against the King; which so enraged him, that he made it present Death for any Britain to pass over Offa's Ditch into England. Their great Caerlegion, now Westchester, he took from them; and at London he cast down the Image of their Prince Cadwallo. He subdued Kent, East-Saxons, and East-Angles, also the Mercians, and indeed all upon the North and South of Humber yielded him Obedience. He was crowned at Winchester absolute Monarch of the whole Island A. D. 819, and caused the Name of this Island to be called England. Three several times the Danes landed in England in his Reign, which he expelled. He died in A. D. 840, and was buried at Winchester. His Bones were since taken up, and with others, bestowed in Chests, upon the Wall on each Side of the Choir of the Cathedral, with the Verses inscribed.

Hic Rex Egbertus pausat cum Rege Kenulpho, Nobis egregia munera uterque tulit.

His Issue were Ethelwolph and Ethelstan, and one Daughter, named Egðith, commonly called St. Edith, who was Governess of a Monastery of Ladies at Pollesworth in Warwickshire.

865.

D. Ethelwolp was in his Youth committed unto the Care of Helmeſtan, Biſhop of Wincheſter, and by him unto learning Swithun the Monk. He took a Liking unto the quiet and ſolitary Life, (enjoy'd only by religious Men, all other Eſtates being moleſted to withſtand the intruding Danes) ſo he took upon him the Monkish Law and Profeſſion, and was made a Monk; and ſhortly after, upon the Death of Helmeſtan, he was elected, and not conſecrated alſo Biſhop of Wincheſter. But the Death of his Father immediately following, by the Intreaty of the Nobles, and Conſent of the Clergy, he was made King, and abſolved of his Vows by Gregory the ivth. His Biſhoprick he beſtow'd on Swithun. This King, of great Devotion, paſſed to Rome, where he rebuilt the School built by King Offa, (lately fired) bearing the Name of Thomas the Holy, confirming the Grant of Peter-Pence, and for his kind Entertainment in the Pope's Court, he covenanted to pay 100 Marks to St. Peter's Church, another to St. Paul's Light, and a third to his Holineſs. In his Return through France, he married fair Judith, the Daughter of Charles the ſecond, then Emperor, in Honour of whom he ever placed her in his Engliſh Court in a Chair of State, with other majeſtical Complements of a Queen, contrary to the Law of the West Saxons, formerly made for Ethelberga's Offence, who by Accident had poiſoned her own Husband with the Poiſon ſhe had prepared for one of his Minions. Which Reſpect of his to his Queen ſo diſpleaſed his Nobles, that they roſe in Arms againſt him; but by Mediation of Friends, the Difference was compoſed on theſe Terms, viz. that the Land ſhould be divided between himſelf and his Son Ethelbald, to whom the better Part was allotted. He died at Stanbridge in A. D. 857, and was firſt buried where he deceaſed, but afterwards his Body was removed to the Cathedral of Wincheſter. He had Iſſue Ethelbald, Ethelbert, Ethelred, Elfred, and one Daughter named Ethelſwith. It is ſaid of this King, That by the Advice of his Nobles he gave for ever, to God and the Church, both the Tithe of all Goods, and the Tenth Part of all the Lands of England, free of all ſecular Service, Taxations, or Impoſitions whatſoever.

A. D. Ethelbald, or Ethelwald, 837. married Judith his Mother-in-Law. Some ſay that he married his own Mother, who was King Ethelwolp's Concubine. But when he had reigned about two Years and a half, he died in A. D. 860. His Body was firſt buried at Sherborn in Dorſetſhire, (where at that Time was the Cathedral Church and Episcopalian See) but afterwards was removed to Salisbury.

A. D. Ethelbert was diſquieted by 860. the Danes all the Time of his Reign. Firſt, they ſpoiled all before them to Wincheſter, alſo ſacking and ſpoiling that City; howbeit in their Return, the Berkſhire Men, under the Command of Oſryck Earl of Hampton, met with them, recovered the Prey, and ſlew many of them. The ſame Year alſo the Danes with the Normans entred Thanet; but theſe the Kentiſh Men repulſed, and made a great Slaughter of them. Ethelbert died in A. D. 866, and was buried at Sherbourn.

A. D. Ethelred was now King 865. of England, when there arrived on the Engliſh Coaſt an huge Army of Danes, under the Command

Lambert
and Ethe-lard. A. B. of Canter-
bury.

876. mand of those strong and cruel Captains, Inguar and Hubba, who burnt down the City of York, and therein consumed with Fire all those that had fled thither for Security : Who entred Mercia, won the City of Nottingham, and therein wintered : Who with Fire and Sword laid all waste where they came, and spared neither Sex nor Age, Religious or Secular. Therefore to avoid their Barbarities, the Nuns of Coldingham deformed themselves, by cutting off their upper Lips and Noses. King Ethelred, in one Year's Time, fought no less than nine set Battles with these Danes ; and at that Battle fought at Essendon, not far from Reading, he obtained a great Victory over them. But in a Fight at Basing the King receiv'd his mortal Wound, whereof he died at Wittington in A. D. 872. He was buried at Winbourn in Dorsetshire, with this Inscription :

In hoc loco quiescit corpus Sancti Ethelredi Regis West-Saxonum, Martyris. A. D. 872, 23 die April. per manus duorum paganorum occubuit.

His Issue were Elfred and Oswald, and one Daughter named Thyre.

A. D. 872. Elfred, or Alfred, the Fourth Son of King Ethelwolp, was, in his young Years and Father's Life-time, anointed King at Rome by Pope Leo ; but after his Brother Ethelred's Death was crowned at Winchester, and is by some stiled the first absolute Monarch over the Engliss. Within a Month's time after his Coronation he was forced into the Field against the Danes, whom he fought at Wilton, where he was worsted. Then the Danes constrained the West Saxons to enter into League with them, at that Time advanced to London, where they wintered ; compelled the Mercians to compound with the banishing Burthred their King, placing another in his Stead of their own chusing. Their King Hall gained Northumberland, which bestowed amongst his Followers. In A. D. 876, Rollo, a Nobleman of Denmark, came over with a great Army of fresh Forces, making miserable Spoil where he came ; Alfred forced him out of the Land. Howbeit the Danes, who had already seated themselves in England, brought the King many times to the Extremities, that he was forced to hide himself out of Sight, and with such small Companies as he had, to live by Fishing, Fowling, and Hunting, having no more of his great Monarchy left him but Wilt, Somerset and Hampshire, nor them neither free from the Incursions of the Danes. The solitary Place of his chief Residency was an Island in Somersetshire, commonly called delingssey, where in poor Disguise he was entertained in a Cowherd's Cottage. This Cowherd, who succoured King Alfred, was named Dunwulfus, whom the King set to Learning, and made Bishop of Winchester. Yet in these Distresses he would sometimes disguise himself in the Habit of a common Minstrel, repairing to the Dan Camp, and by his excellent Skill in Musick and Songs would gain an Opportunity of observing as to what their Designments were, as to their Security, which he wisely improved. For seeing his Time, he gathered what small Forces he could, and the sudden surprized his Enemies in their Camp, making great Slaughter of them, to the great Terror of others of them in other Parts of the Nation, who accounted the King dead long before. Shortly after this, the Devonshire Men joined Battle with King Hubba, who

Lambert
and Athelard, A. B. of Canter-
bury.

they flew with a great Number of Danes, near unto a Castle then called Kinwith. The Body of Hubba was there buried in the Field, and therefore called Hubblestone. In that Fight the English took the Danes such esteemed Banner, called Reagan, wherein a Raven portrayed as wrought in Needle-work by the three Sisters of Hubba. And now the English Fortune seemed so advanced, that the Danes sent to the King for Peace, which was conceded unto, and Gormon, or Gurrun, their King, was baptized; Alfred being his Godfather, and giving him the Name of Athelstone, and withal bestowing on him, in free Gift, Gormonchester, or Godmonchester, near Huntingdon, with the adjoining Territories. Thirty of the chiefest Danish Nobility were likewise baptized, upon whom King Alfred bestowed many rich Gifts. And that the Limits of the English might be free from Danish Incursions, thus the Confines of King Alfred's Kingdom were laid out. His Dominions were to stretch from the River Thamesis, and from thence to the Water of Lea, even unto the Head of the same Water, and forth straight unto Bedford; and, lastly, going along by the River Wuse, to end at Watling-street. But notwithstanding this Agreement, the Danes were still unquiet, with whom one Hastings, a Nobleman of Norway, joined, bringing a considerable Force to their Assistance. And in the Year of Grace 901, his excellent King died much bewailed of his Subjects, whose Body was first buried at Winchester, next removed into the Church of the new Monastery; and lastly, his Body, Monument, Church, and Monastery, were all removed without the North Gate of the City, since called Hide. He was born at Wanading, now Wantage in Berks, where anciently was a Manor-House of the Kings of England. 886.

London, that had been destroyed and burnt by the Danes about A. D. 839, King Alfred repaired and made habitable again in A. D. 886. At Edelingsay he built a Monastery; at Winchester another; at Shaftsburs a Nunnery, where he made his Daughter Ethelgeda Abbess. The Day and Night, consisting of 24 Hours, did this virtuous Prince design equally (when State-Business would permit such an Order) to three special Uses; and them he observed by the burning of a Taper set in his Oratory. Eight Hours he spent in Contemplation, Reading, and Prayers; other eight Hours for his Repose and Health; and the other eight in the Affairs of State. His Kingdom he likewise divided into Shires, Hundreds, and Tithings, for the better Administration of Justice, and suppressing of Thieves; whereby he effected so great Security to his Subjects, that honest Men might travel without Injury; and that Bracelets of Gold being hanged in the Highways, none durst be so bold as to take them away. He ordered all his Subjects possessing two Hides of Land, to bring up their Sons in Learning till Fifteen Years of Age at least; saying, That he reputed a Man free-born, and yet illiterate, no better than a Beast, a brainless Body, and a very Sot. Nor would he admit any into Office in his Court, unless learned. His Census or Tribute he divided into six Parts; the first Part of which he gave to the Poor; the second to the Foundation of Churches; the third to Scholars at Oxford; the fourth to the Lights of the Church; the fifth to his Military Men;

Men; the sixth to Labourers and Artificers. The best Laws for his Subjects Good, he render'd into Englisch. The Holy Gospel he render'd into the Saxon Tongue, and therein the Lord's Prayer, after this Manner:

Fæder ure thu the eart on Heafenum, si thin nama gehalgod, to be cume thin Rice, Gewurthe thin willa on eorþan swa swa on heafenum, urne ce dæghwanlicæn blaf syle us to dag; and forgyf us ure gyltas swa swa we forgywath urum gyltendum; and ne gelædde thu us on cosenung, ac alyse us of ysele. [Si it swa.]

He was a great Protector of the Clergy, Widows, and Orphans, devout in the Service of God. 'Tis also said of him, that he laid the Foundation of the University of Oxford, and of that College, call'd

University College. Others say, that Oxford was built by one Mempricius, a British King, and from him was at first named Caer Mempric; et crevit ibi posteris diebus nobile studium generale, ab inclita Universitate de Greeklade derivatum.

Baliol College was founded by John Baliol, King of Scots, in A. D. 1263.

Merton Coll. founded by Walter de Merton, Lord Chancellor, and Bishop of Rochester, 1274.

Exeter Coll. by Walter Stapleton, Bishop of Exeter, and Lord Treasurer, 1316.

Oriel Coll. founded by King Edward the Second, or by his Almoner Adam Brown.

Queen's Coll. by Robert Eglesfield, Chaplain to Queen Philippe, Wife of Edward the Third, 1340.

New Coll. by William of Wickham, Bishop of Winchester, 1379.

Lincoln Coll. first founded by Richard Fleming, Bishop of Lincoln, 1420, but finished by Thomas Rotherham, Bishop of the same See.

All Souls, founded by Henry Chicheley, Archbishop of Canterbury, 1437.

Magdalene Coll. by William Wainfleet, Bishop of Winchester, 1459.

Brazen Nose Coll. by William Smith, Bishop of Lincoln, 1513, but finished by Richard Sutton.

Corpus Christi Coll. by Richard Fox, Lord Privy-Seal, and Bishop of Winchester, 1516.

Christ-Church, begun by Cardinal Woolsey, 1546, and by King Henry the Eighth ordained the Cathedral Church of the See of Oxford.

Trinity Coll. first founded by Thomas Hatfield, Bishop of Durham, by the Name of Durham Coll. 1518, but after its Suppression, Sir Thomas Pope restored it, and dedicated it to the Holy Trinity, 1556.

St. John's Coll. founded by Henry Chicheley, Archbishop of Canterbury, by the Name of Bernard's College, 1437, but after its Suppression by Henry the Eighth, Sir Thomas White, Merchant-Taylor of London, rebuilt it to the Honour of St. John Baptist, 1557.

Jesus Coll. by Dr. Hugh Price, 1562.

Wadham Coll. founded by Nicholas Wadham, of Somersetshire, and Dorothy his Wife, 1613.

Some report, that Cambridge was built by Cantaber, a Spaniard, 350 Years before the Birth of Christ, and that he founded the University there, and brought thither from Athens certain Philosophers, among whom were Anaximander and Anaxagoras. Another Author thus writeth, Oxonii gymnasium instituit Alfredus (Alfred) hortante Neoto sanctissimo, unde à tempore quo Cantabrigia sub Sigeberto, Rege Orientalium, & Oxonia sub Alarico condita sunt, semper fuere Viri in Anglia doctissimi, à quibus Lutetia Parisiorum, Papie in Italia originem

*exerunt. Cantabrigiae gymnasium cessit Oxonio annis 265, nam Sige-bert A. D. 630. Cantabrigiam erex-it, & Alured Oxoniam A. D. 895.
But as some contend, Cambridge began not to be an University till such Time that Hugh Balsbam, Bishop of Ely, founded the College of Peter-House, in A. D.
1256.*

*Clare-Hall, founded by Elizabeth de Burgo, Countess of Clare, Widow of John de Burgo, Earl of Ulster, in
A. D. 1347.*

*Pembroke-Hall, founded by Mary de St. Paul, Widow of Adomarius de Valentia, Earl of Pembroke, 1347.
First named Aula de Valence Maria.*

Corpus Christi, commonly called Bennet-College, was founded by the Aldermen and Brethren of Corpus Christi Guild, and the Brethren of our Lady Guild in Cambridge, 1531.

Trinity-Hall was of old Time an Hostel or House of Study, wherein Students lived at their own Charge; but Dr. William Bateman founded it a College, 1353.

Gonvil, and Caius Coll. first founded by Edmond de Gonvil, Rector of Torrington and Bushworth in Norfolk, 1353, and was repaired by John Caius Doctor of Physick, 1557.

King's Coll. by King Henry the VIth, 1341.

Queen's Coll. by Margaret Ande-rassenfis, Wife to King Henry the VIth, 1441, but finished by Elizabeth, Wife to King Edward the IVth, 1465.

Katharine-Hall, founded by Robert Woodlark, Provost of King's College, 1475.

Jesus College, from a desolate Nunnery, was converted into a College by John Alcock, Bishop of Ely, 1497.

Christ's College, founded by Margaret Countess of Derby (the Mother of King Henry the VIIth) in *the Place where the College of 901.

God's House stood, 1505.*

*St. John's College was erected Plamunupon the Ruins of an ancient Hof-pital of Regular Canons, by the of Cant.
said Margaret Countess of Derby, 1508.*

Magdalene College, first an Hall, wherein Monks of divers Monasteries studied; but in the Year 1542, Thomas Audley, Lord Chancellor of England, founded there a new College in Honour of St. Mary Magdalene.

Trinity Callege, founded by King Henry the VIIIth, in A. D. 1546.

Emmanuel College, founded by Sir Walter Mildmay, 1584.

*Sidney-Suffex College was founded by Frances Countess of Suffex, the Daughter of Sir William Sidney,
A. D. 1596.*

A. D. E *Dward, surnamed the El- Atholme, 901. der, the eldest Son of Al- A. B. of fred, was crowned at Kingston upon Cant.
Thames. At Wodnesfield, near Wolfrune-Hampton, he obtained a great Victory over the Danes; for two of their Kings were slain, many of their Nobles, and an innumerable Company of their Commons, which caused him both to be feared and loved. His Sister Elfreda had very hard Travail of her first Child, therefore ever after she forbore the Nuptial Embraces, alledging it to be an over-foolish Pleasure which brought with it so great Pains. And lusting herself under Mars, she, in Person, assisted her Brother against the Danes, performing many manly Feats. Kind Edward died at Far-ringdon, and was buried in the new Monastery of Winchester, in A. D.
924. His Issue were Athelstan, El-fred, Elfwald, Edwin, Edmund, El-red, and nine Daughters. He built a Castle at Stafford, A. D. 914. He likewise built a Castle at Huntingdon,*

924.

don, A. D. 917, which Henry the II. afterward demolished, as some say. He also built Hereford out of the Ruins of old Aviconium: Manchester in Lancashire, anciently Mancunium, having been destroyed in the British Wars, this King caused to be built again, because the Inhabitants had behaved themselves manfully against the Danes.

King Edward the Elder built a new Town over-against Nottingham, and made a Bridge over the River betwixt the two Towns.

*A. D. 924. Ethelstan was crowned at Kingston, by Athelme, Archbishop of Canterbury. This Prince, by the evil Suggestions of his Cup-bearer, became suspicious of some Treason to be wrought against him by his Brother Edwin, therefore caused him to be put in a small Vessel without Tackle and Oars, and so to be exposed to the Mercy of the Waters; whence, the young Prince, overcame with Grief, cast himself headlong into the Sea; whose Ghost the King sought to pacify by a seven Years voluntary Penance, and building the two Monasteries of Middleton and Michelness. He also took Revenge on his Cup-bearer by this Occasion: On a Festival-day, as his Cup-bearer was serving, one of his Feet happened to slip; but he recovered himself with the other, and thereupon pleasantly said, You see how one Brother helpeth another. Then the King, with Grief, call'd to mind the Death of his innocent Brother, and forthwith commanded Execution to be done upon his Cup-bearer, the Procurer thereof. King Ethelstan, or Ulfelanus, Adelstane, overcame in Fight Godfrey the Danish King of Northumberland, Constantine King of Scots, and Howell, or Ludwal King of Wales, constraining them to submit unto* his Pleasure; which done, he presently restored them to their former Estates, saying, That it was more Honour to make a King than to be a King. He enlarged his Dominions beyond any of his Predecessors, and was in the greatest Reputation with all foreign Princes, who sought his Friendship both by Alliance and rare Presents. Hugh King of France, (besides some inestimable Jewels) sent him the Sword of Constantine the Great; in the Hilt whereof, all covered with Gold, was one of the Nails, as 'twas said, which fastened Christ to the Cross. He sent likewise a Part of the Cross, whereon he suffered, and a Piece of the Crown of Thorns, and also the Banner of St. Maurice. And from Otto the Emperor, who had married his Sister, was sent a Vessel of precious Stones, artificially made, wherein were Landskips with Vines, Corn, and Men, all seeming so naturally to move, as if they had been really the Things themselves. And the King of Norway sent him a famous and rich Ship. Some of these Relicks he gave unto Swithin's Abby in Winchester, and the rest to the Monastery in Malmsbury. He beautified the City of Exeter, founded St. Germans in Cornwall, St. Petrocus at Bodmin, the Priory of Pilton, and enriched every famous Abby in the Land, either with new Buildings, Jewels, Books, or Revenues, as also he did certain Cities with the Mintage of his Money. Whereof in London were eight Houses, at Winchester six, Lewis two, Hastings two, Hampton two, Warham two, Chichester one, Rochester three, two for the King, and one for the Bishops; Canterbury seven, four for the King, two for the Archbishop, and one for the Abbot. He caused the Holy Bible to be translated into the Saxon Tongue. He died at Gloucester, Ulfelanus, or Wol-stane, A.B.

of Cant.

cester, called by the Britains Caer Glou, i. e. Fair City, in A. D. 940, and was buried at Malsbury in Wils, first built by Malmutius, a King of the Britains. About this King Athelstan's Time (if ever) lived the famous Guy Earl of Warwick. Now flourished that learned Abbot named Elfrick, who in an Epistle to Wolstane, then Archbishop of Canterbury, thus writeth, '— The Lord which hallowed Housel (the Sacramental Bread and Wine) before his Suffering, and saith, that the Bread was his own Body, and the Wine was truly his Blood, he halloweth daily by the Hands of the Priests, Bread to his Body, and Wine to his Blood in ghostly Mystery, as we read in Books; and yet that lively Bread is not bodily so notwithstanding, nor the self same Body that Christ suffered in. Nor that holy Wine is the Saviour's Blood, which was shed for us in bodily Thing, but in ghostly Understanding. Both be truly that Bread his Body, and that Wine also his Blood, as was the Heavenly Bread which we call Manna, that fed forty Years God's People. And the clear Water, which did then run from the Stone in the Wilderness, was truly his Blood, as Paul wrote in one of his Epistles. All our Fathers eat in the Wilderness the same ghostly Meat, and drank the same ghostly Drink. They drank of that ghostly Stone, and that Stone was Christ. The Apostle hath said, as you have now heard, That they did all eat the same ghostly Meat, and they all did drink the same ghostly Drink. And he saith, not bodily, but ghostly. And Christ was not yet born, nor his Blood shed, when that the People of Israel eat that Meat, and drank of that Stone.

' And the Stone was not bodily Christ, though he so said. It was the same Mystery in the old Law, and they did ghostly signify that ghostly Housel of our Saviour's Body, which we consecrate now.' And in other Epistles of the said Elfrick, we read it thus enjoined to Priests: 'The Priests shall say unto the People on Sundays and Holidays, the Sense of the Gospel in English, and so also touching the Lord's Prayer and the Creed, so oft as he may to Mens Contrition, that they may know their Belief, and keep sure their Christianity.'

A. D. Edmund, the fifth Son of 940. King Edward, was crowned at Kingston. He obtained many signal Victories over the Danes in divers Parts of the Land, recovering out of their Hands several Counties and Cities; but at his Manor of Pucklekerks, in the County of Gloucester, whilst he was interposing himself between his Sewer and another to part a Fray, he was, with a Thrust through the Body, wounded to Death, in A. D. 946, and was buried at Glastenbury. His Issue was Edwy and Edgar.

A. D. Edred was the sixth Son of 946. of King Edward, and succeeded his Brothers in the Nonage of his Sons. Wolstane, Archbishop of Canterbury, for some Misdemeanours, he committed to Custody; but afterwards, in Reverence to his Office, discharged him. So devout he was in the Religion of those Times, that he suffered his Royal Body to be chastised at the Will and Direction of Dunstan, Abbot of Glastenbury, unto whose keeping he also committed the greatest Part of his Treasures and richest Jewels. A. B. of The stately Abbey of Mich at Abing-Cant. ton, built by King Inas, but destroyed

956. ed by the Danes he repaired, and most richly endowed it, confirming the Charters with Seals of Gold. St. Germain he ordained a Bishop's See, which there continued, till by Canutus it was annexed to the Bishoprick of Kyrton in Devon, both which Sees were by Edward the Confessor translated to Exeter. He died in the Year of Grace 955, and was interred in the old Minster or Monastery of Winchester. His Issue were Alfrid and Bertrid.

A. D. EDwy, the eldest Son of 955. K. Edmund was crowned at Kingston, and on the Day of his Coronation, as some Monks say, he, in Sight of his Nobles, as they sat in Council, abused the Body of a great Lady his near Kinswoman, and not long after slew her Husband, that he might the more freely enjoy his incestuous Pleasure. A great Enemy he was to the Monks Order, expelling them from some of their Monasteries, and placing married Priests in their Vacancies. Dunstan the Saint he expelled the Realm, either for his bold Reprehensions of him, or for detaining the Treasure his Uncle had committed to his Keeping, or both; but the People having the Monks single Life in high Veneration, and conceiving Dunstan to be a very holy Man, they turned their Affections from him, and swore their Fealty to Edgar; for very Grief whereof he pined away and died, A. D. 959, and was buried in the Church of the new Abby at Winchester.

A. D. EDgar, surnamed the 959. Peaceable, was crowned at Kingston, by Otho, Archbishop of Canterbury. To rid the Land of Wolves,

Wolves, which then were very very, instead of the Tribute imposed on the Prince of Wales by Athelstan, he appointed Ludwall
 Prince of Wales, to pay yearly 300 Pounds. His Navy Royal, consisting of 3,600 Ships, he employ'd in clearing the Coasts from Pirates and Foreign Enemies, wherein himself would sail every Summer. And in the Winter he would circuit the Country, taking an Account of the Administration of his Laws, and the Manner of his great Men, especially his Judges, whom he would punish severely, if he found them to have been guilty of Bribery or Partiality, inasmuch that there was never less Robbery, Deceit, or Oppression, than in the Reign of this King. His State was so flourishing in Peace and Prosperity, that it caused divers Kings to bind themselves in League with him. Wars he had none in all his Reign, save one towards the latter End thereof by the Welch, whom he quickly subdued; but that which darkened his Reign, was his Lasciviousness. For he deflowered a certain Nun called Wulfild, on whom he begat St.
Ethelred; after her, another named E- lfrida, on whom he begat his Son Edward. And after this, happening near a Western Duke's Daughter extolled for her Beauty, he came to her Father's House, commanding her to his Bed. But her Mother, for fear of her Honour, instead of her daughter, brought her Servant Maid in the Dark to the King, who well enough pleased him that Night; tho' in the Morning, when he understood the Deceit, he check-ed the Lady, yet entertained this woman for his Concubine, keeping her Bed alone, till he married his lawful Wife Elfrida, Earl Ord- olph's Daughter: The Fame of whose excelling Beauty coming to his Ear, he employed Earl Ethel- wold, his Favourite, to go to visit her; and if he found her Beauty suiting, then to court and secure her for the King. But Ethelwold liked her so well, when he saw her, that he courted her for himself, and, at his Return to Court, pretended to the King, that her Beauty was far short of what it was famed to be;

 therefore besought the King, in respect she was a great Heiress, that he would solicit her Father to bestow her upon him to Wife; which the credulous King did: But the Duke had not been long married with fair Elfrida, e'er a fresh Commendation of her Beauty founded in the King's Ears: Whereupon he resolved to make his own Eyes the Witnesses; which accordingly he did; and upon Sight of her Beauty became so enamour'd of her,
 that taking Ethelwold at the Advantage, as they were hunting together, he ran him through with his Javelin, then took Elfrida to be his Wife, who was very willing to embrace the Honour.

Edgar, at the Instigation of Elfrida and Dunstan, now Archbishop of Can- terbury, displaced the married Priests, A. B. of and possessed their Vacancies with Monks of single Life. To repress Drunkenness, which the Danes had brought in, he ordained a Size, by certain Pins in the Pot, with a Penalty to any that presumed to drink deeper than the Mark. He died A. D. 975, and was buried in the Abbey of Glasten-
bury.

His Issue were Edward, Edmund, and Ethelred.

Ordolph, the Son of Ordgare Earl of Devonshire, in A. D. 961. built a famous Abby at Tavistoke in De-
von. Ethelwold, Bishop of Win- chester, about A. D. 963, and in the Reign of King Edgar, in a great Fa-

975.

Famine, sold away all the sacred Vessels of the Church for to relieve the Poor, saying, That there was no Reason that the senseless Temples of God should abound in Riches, and lively Temples of the Holy Ghost to want them.

A. D. Edward*, surnamed the 975. Martyr, was much opposed by his Mother-in-Law Queen Elfreda, and many of the Nobles, as being illegitimate; but by the Procurement of Dunstan, and the Clergy, he was admitted to be King, and was crowned at Kingston in A. D. 975. The Beginning of whose Reign was attended with a miserable Barrenness of the Ground, and Murrain amongst Cattle. A dreadful Comet also appeared. These many Men thought to be Signs and Judgments sent from Heaven, for the Sins committed against the married Clergy, who were expelled from their ancient Possessions. In Favour of whom the Duke of Mercia destroyed the Monasteries in his Province, cast out the Monks, restoring to the Priests and their Wives their ancient Revenues. On the contrary, Duke Edelwin in East-Saxia grievously opposed the married Priests. To put an End therefore to these Troubles, and to prevent the Dangers that might ensue, the Case was referred to be heard in Council at Winchester, where the Business was debated so long, till the Monks were in Hazard of losing the Day. Whereupon it was persuaded to be referred to the Rood, placed where the Council sate; which Oracle (after devout Prayers made unto it) thus spake, God forbid it should be so, God forbid it should be so; you judged well once; and to change that again is not good. Upon which Words the married Priests went down the Wind. But they disclosing to the People that this was but a Trick of the Monks, in placing a Man behind the Wall, who through a Trunk uttered these Words in the Mouth of the Rood: it was there instantly desired, that the Case might be once more scanned, which was granted; and at Clevis in Wiltshire, the Prelates, Peers, and Commons assembled, where being sat in Consultation, the Chamber Floor, being over-pressed with the Weight of People, broke and fell down, hurt many, and killed others; only St. Dunstan, by a Miracle, remained without any Hurt. The Post whereon his Chair stood standing still firm. This is the Story. And now the secular married Priests were left to take Care without any Cure. But King Edward, as he hunted near Corf Castle, where Elfreda and her Son Ethelred resided, either on Purpose, or by Chance, parted from his Company, and came to the Castle to visit his Brother-in-Law; where, as he sat on Horseback at the Gate, discoursing with Elfreda and Ethelred; and whilst he was drinking a Cup of Wine, a Knife was struck into his Back, by a Servant whom Elfreda had appointed thereunto. Whereupon the King setting Spurs to his Horse, rode away; but fainting thro' the Loss of much Blood, he fell from his Horse, and with one Foot in the Stirrup, was dragged up and down the Woods and Grounds, till in the End his Body was left dead at Corf's Gate, and was first buried at Warham, afterwards removed to the Minster of Shaftsbury. Elfreda, his Mother-in-Law, sore repenting of the Fact, to expiate her Guilt, and pacify his crying Blood, (as she thought) founded the Monasteries of Almshouse and Worwell, in the last whereof he died and was buried*.

Ethelgar and El-frick, A.
Bps. of Cant.

* Siricius and Elphegus,
A. Bps. of
Cant.

Ethelred, for his Slowness, surnamed The Unready, crowned at Kingston. Upon Coronation a Cloud was seen over all England, one Half like Fire, the other Half like Ice: in the third Year of his Reign, Danes arrived in sundry Places of the Land, and did much Spoil. About the same Time a great Fire of London was consumed by him. He payed Tribute 40,000 l. yearly (called Dane-gilt) to the Danes. His Reign was much troubled with Danish Invasions in divers Parts of the Land. And so low was the English brought at that time by the intruding Danes, that they were forced to Till and Sow the Ground, while the Danes sat idle in their Houses, and eat that which they toiled for; also abusing their Daughters and Wives, and having them at their Command; the English were in very Fear, calling them Lord Danes. Hence we call a lazy Lubber a Lurdane. In this the English possessed Estate, the King, at last, sent forth a secret Commission into every City within his Dominions, that upon the Thirteenth Day of November they should massacre all the Danes which were amongst them. This Command of the King was put in Execution with some Rigour, in A. D. 1002. To revenge this great Destruction of the Danes, Swain King of Denmark prepared a very great Navy, and arrived in the West of England, and shortly after Canutus brought 200 Sail of Ships well furnished to his Assistance. And in A. D. 1016 King Ethelred died, and was buried at St. Paul's.

His Issue were Ethelstan, Egbert, Edmond, Edred, Edwy, Edgar, Edmund, Elfred, and four Daughters.

In the Year of our Lord 991, Ipswich in Suffolk sacked by the Danes. And in 1004, Thetford in Norfolk, anciently called Sitomagus, was sacked by the Danes; for the Recovery whereof Bishop Arfast removed his Episcopal See from Elmham thither. Norwich was fired by the Danes; its Castle was afterward re-edified by Hugh Bigod, Earl of Norfolk.

A. D. 1016. Edmond surnamed Iron-side, the eldest Son that Ethelred had living at his Death, was crowned at Kingston by Liwin-Livingus, Archbishop of Canterbury, A. A. B. of A. D. 1016; at which time the Danes were so powerful in England, that Canute was accepted King at Southampton by many of the Clergy and Laity, who swore Fealty to him. But the City of London stood most firm for Edmond, and bravely withstood Canute besieging it, till such time that King Edmond came and relieved them. At Penham, near Gillingham, King Edmond engaged with the Danes, where he put many of them to the Sword, and the rest to Flight. And not long after, his and the Danish Host met nigh to Shoreston in Worcestershire, where the Battle was for the first Day fought with equal Success; but on the next Day, when the English were in Forwardness and Probability of the Victory, the Traitor Edrick on purpose disanimated them, by cutting off the Head of a dead Soldier, putting it on his Sword's Point, then crying to the English Host, Fly, ye Wretches, fly, and get you away, for your King is slain; behold, here is his Head; seek therefore now to save your own Lives. By which Means the Fight ended on even Hands. And the next Night following Canute stole away towards London, whom Ironside followed, first raising the Siege that Canutus had laid against London, and then then marching after him to Brentwood, where he gave the Danes a great Overthrow. Then near unto Oteford in Kent, the two Armies met again, and fought in a furious Manner, till at last the Day fell to the English, who slew Four thousand five hundred Men, with the Loss of but six hundred, and put the rest to Flight, whom the King had pursued to their utter Confusion, had not his Brother-in-Law Edrick played the Traitor again, dissuading him from the Chase of them, under the Pretence of Danger of Ambushments, and the English Soldiers Over-weariedness. Whereupon Canute had the Opportunity of passing over into Essex, where his scattered Forces rallied, and fresh Supplies came in to them. After whom Edmond advanced, and at Ashdon by Saffron-Walden, the Armies joined Battle, when a bloody Slaughter ensued, with the Hopes of Victory on the English Side, which the ever-traiterous Edrick perceiving, he withdrew his Strength to the Danes, the Enemy thereby regaining the Day. Of King Edmond's Nobles were slain, Duke Alfred, Duke Goodwin, Du. Ethelward, Duke Ethelwin, Earl Urchel, with Cadnoth, Bishop of Lincoln, and Wolsey, Abbot of Ramsay, and others of the Clergy, that were come thither to pray for good Success to the English. The Memorial of this Battle is still retained by certain small Hills there remaining, where the Dead were buried. From hence King Edmond march'd to Gloucester with a very small Army, which he there increased. After him Canute followed, and at Dearhurst near Severn, both Hosts met, and were ready to join Battle; when by the Motion of a certain Captain, Edmond and Canute undertook by single Combat to end the Difference. So entring into a small Island called Alney, and joining to Gloucester, there they valiantly fought, till Canute having received a dangerous Wound, and finding Edmond to over-match him in Strength, he thus spake to the English King: 'What Necessity should move us, most valiant Prince, for the obtaining of a Title, should thus endanger our Lives? Better it were to lay Malice and Weapons aside, and to condescend to a loving Agreement. Let us therefore become sworn Brothers, and divide the Kingdom between us, and in such a League of Amity that each of us may use the other as his own; so shall this Land peaceably governed, and we jointly assist each other's Necessity.'

1016.

Which Words ended, they both casting down their Swords, embraced as Friends, with the great Joy and Shouting of both Armies. And according to Canute's Proposal, the Kingdom was divided between them, Edmond having that Part that lay coasting upon France, Canute the rest. But the Traitor Duke Edrick with Design to work himself further into Canute's Favour, procured Edmond to be thrust into the Tower, as he was easing Nature. Thence cutting off his Head, he presented Canute therewith, saying, All hail to thy sole Monarch of England, behold here the Head of thy partner, which for thy Sake I have adventured to cut off. To which Canute, like a worthy King, replied, That in regard of that Service the Bringer's own Head should be advanced above all the Peers of his Kingdom; a while after performing this his Promise, by cutting off Edrick's Head to be cut off and placed on the highest Gate of London. But some say, that Edmond died a natural Death at London, when he had reigned Months, whose Body was buried at Glastenbury.

 His If^r were, Edward, surnamed the Out-law (because he lived out of England during the Reign of the Danes) and Edmond.

D A N E S.

C Anute, the Dane, after the Death of Edmond, ed upon the other half Part of Kingdom, the English Nobles ing him for their rightful King, swearing Allegiance to him. was crowned at London by Li-us Elstane, Archbishop of Can-ry, A. D. 1017.

And to establish the Crown more to himself, he banished Edwin Son of King Ethelred) who for melancholy and regardless Beha-
 -ur, was called the King of Churls. also sent away Edward and Ed-
 -d, the Sons of Edmond Ironside.
 -t he espoused Emma, the Wi-
 - of King Ethelred, and Sister to
 - Duke of Normandy, on this
 -dition, That the Issue of her
 -y by him should inherit the -lish Crown.

Then calling a Parliament of his
 -rs to Oxford, he there established
 -e Laws following, viz. That all
 -ent Ceremonies, tending to the -ease of Reverence and Devoti-
 -in the Service of God, should
 -sed as Need required. That the
 -d's Day should be kept Holy.
 -t a Clergyman killing a Lay-
 -, or for any other notorious -ne, should be deprived both of -Order and Dignity. That a
 -ried Woman, convict of Adulte-
 -should have her Nose and Ears
 -off: And a Widow marrying
 -in the Space of Twelve Months
 -her Husband's Decease, should
 -her Jointure. And amongst
 -y other good Laws he made in -Time of his Princely Government (saith my Author) he hath also this; 'We admonish diligently all ' Christian Men, that they do al' ways love God with an inward

 ' Heart, and be diligently obedient
 ' to Divine Teachers, and do sub-' tilly search God's Learning and ' Laws, often and daily to the Pro' fit of themselves. And we warn
 ' that all Christian Men do learn to ' know, at the leastwise, the right
 ' Belief, and aright to understand,
 ' and learn the Pater-noster, and the ' Creed. For that with the one, e' very Christian Man shall pray un-
 ' to God, and with the other shew
 ' forth right Belief.' He went on Pilgrimage to Rome, where he com-plained against the excessive Actions
 -and vast Sums of Money extorted by
 -the Pope from the English Archbi-
 -shops, at such times as they receiv-ed their Palls from thence. Which -the Pope engaged to redress for the -future. The Greatness and Glory
 -of this King was such, that some
 -Court Parasites sought to persuade -him, that he possessed a more than
 -human Power: but he, to demon-strate the contrary, (being then at Southampton, caused a Chair to be -set on the Shore, when the Sea be-gan to flow, then sat himself in it,
 -and in the Presence of many Atten-dants, thus spake to the swelling
 -Waves: Thou Sea art Part of my Dominion, don't therefore, on Pain of Punishment, presume so much as to wet the Robes of thy Lord. But the -unruly Sea swelling on farther and
 -farther, first wet his Skirts, then
 -Thighs, so that the King suddenly started

Egenoth.
 A. B. of
 Cant.

1040. started up, and retiring, said, Let the Inhabitants of the World know, that the Power of Kings is but weak and vain; and that none is worthy the Name of King, save He that keepeth Heaven, Earth, and Sea in Obedience to his own Will. After which Time he would never wear his Crown, but therewith crowned the Picture of Christ on the Cross at Winchester, which became a Prize to the Church-men. He died in A. D. 1035, and was buried at Winchester. His Issue were, Swein, Harold, Hardicanute, and two Daughters.

In Essex he built the Church of Ashdon, where he had the Victory over King Edmond. In Norfolk he founded the Abby of St. Benet's, and in Suffolk the Monastery of St. Edmond, which Saint he much dreaded. To the Church at Winchester, besides other rich Jewels, he gave a Cross worth as much as the Revenue of England amounted to in one Year. And unto Coventry, Elnothus, A. B. of Cant. they say, he gave the Arm of St. Augustine, which at Pavia cost him an Hundred Talents of Silver, and one of Gold.

A. D. H Arnold, for his exceeding 1035. King *Swift*ness surnamed Harefoot, the base Son of King Canute, in the Absence of Hardicanute, his Father's Son by Queen Emma, was admitted King by the Nobility, and crowned at Oxford by Elnothus, Archbishop of Canterbury. Which done, for the better securing of his Crown to himself, he sought Means to gain Edward and Alfred (the two surviving Sons of King Ethelred) into his Hands. In order whereunto, he sent to them into Normandy a Letter feigned in their Mother Emma's Name, inviting them over into England for the Recovery of their Right. But when Prince Alfred was accordingly arrived, Earl Goodwin, who pretended great Kindness unto him, betrayed him and his small Party brought over with him into Harold's Hands, who at Guildford committed them to the Slaughter, only reserving every Tenth Man, either for Service or Sale. Alfred he sent Prisoner into the Isle of Ely, where his being put out, he in short time died through Grief and Pain. Queen Emma's Goods Harold confiscated, banished her out of the Realm, and oppressed the English People with great Payments. He died at Oxford A. D. 1040, and was buried at Westminster.

A. D. H ardicanute, upon 1040. Death of Harold, invited by the States of the Land, as English as Danes, invited over to Denmark, to take upon him the Government of the Kingdom, which he accordingly did, and was crowned at London by Elnothus, Archbishop of Canterbury. The dead body of his half Brother King Harold he caused to be taken up, and be thrown into the River Thames, which being found by a Fisherman, he buried it in the Churchyard of St. Clement-Danes; so called, because it was the great Burial-place of the Danes.

Hardicanute, for the maintenance of his Fleet, imposed heavy Tributes on the English, insomuch that many of the Collectors thereof, named Thurstone and Feader, were slain by the Citizens of Worcester, for which Fact their City was burnt, and the Bishop Alfred expelled the See, that with Money he had purchased his Peace. Earl Goodwin presented to this King a Ship, whose Sides were of Gold, with eighty Soldiers in her, all uniformly and richly armed: On their Heads they all tide, signifying a Time of Scorn and Contempt, which fell upon the Danes by his Death. He was buried at Winchester, A. D. 1042.

Burgenets, and on their Bodies triple gilt Habergeon; Swords on gilt Hilts girded to their waists, a Battle-Ax (after the Manner of the Danes) on their left Shoulder, a Target with gilt Bosses born on their left Hand, a Dart in the right Hand, and their Arms bound about with two Bracelets of Gold of six Ounces Weight. But as Hardicute was revelling and carousing at Lambeth, in a solemn Assembly and Banquet, he suddenly fell down dead. The Day of whose Death, instead of Laments, was annually celebrated amongst the common People, with open Pastimes in the Streets. Which time (being the 8th of June) is called Hœtide, or Hux-

About four Years before the Danes first coming into England (which was near the Year of our Lord 789) Showers of Blood fell from Heaven, and bloody Crosses were therewith marked upon Mens Garments. 'Tis said also, that after the Danes had seated themselves in England, whilst the English were drinking, they would stab them, or cut their Throats; to prevent which, when the Englishman drank, he requested the next Sitter-by to be his Surety or Pledge: Hence our Custom of pledging one another, 'tis said.

SAXONS.

E Edward the Confessor, the Son of King Ethelred and Queen Emma, was born at Islip, and after his Father's Death, was for his Safety sent unto the Duke of Normandy, his Mother's Brother; but upon the Death of Hardicanute, the English Nobility, disdaining all Danish Objection, invited Edward to return into England, and to execute the kingly Office. He was crowned at Winchester by Edsine, Archbishop of Canterbury, A. D. 1042. He remitted that heavy Tribute of Forty thousand Pounds yearly, which had been paid for Forty Years Continuance out of the Lands of all, the Clergy excepted; because (say our ancient Laws) the People reposed more Confidence in the Prayers of the Holy Church, than in the Power of Armies. Then from the divers Laws of the Mercians, West-Saxons, Danes, and Nor- thumbrians, he selected the best, and made them one Body certain, and written in Latin. His Reign was more spent in Peace, and Works of Piety, than in Wars and Blood: Only some slight Troubles happened from the Danes, Irish, and Welch, and also from Earl Goodwin and his Sons, who being very powerful and proud, caused some Molestations in the State. But the Sins of the People, which were then great, procured other Judgments instead of War: For in the Month of January, there fell a great Snow, which covered the Ground to the Midst of March, whereby Cattle and Fowls in Abundance perished. And in the next Year following, a strange and terrible Earthquake happened, and withal such Lightnings, as burnt up the Corn growing in the Fields, whereby an excessive Dearth ensued.

The King, by the Instigation of the Archbishop of Canterbury, and Goodwin, Earl of Kent, dealt rigorously 1066. rously with his own Mother, depriving her of all her Jewels, and Robert, other Substance, and committing A. B. of her to safe Custody in the Abby of Cant. Worwell. And moreover, put her to undergo that over-hard Law, Ordalium, which was to pass over nine Plowshare Irons, red glowing hot, barefoot and blindfold. By which Trial she is said to have acquitted herself; insomuch that she having passed them over before she knew it, cried, and said, O good Lord, when shall I come to the Place of my Purgation? The King, her Son, hereupon received her into Favour again; and she, in Memory of her Deliverance from this fiery Trial, gave nine Manors (according to the Number of Plowshares) to the Minster of Winchester, (wherein she had that Trial) and adorned the same with many rich Ornaments. And the King repenting of the Wrong he had done her, bestowed on the same Place the Isle of Portland. The Causes objected against Queen Emma, and for which she suffered the Loss of her Goods, were her Marriage with Canute, the capital Enemy of England, and her neglecting to succour Edward and his Brother in their Exile. The Matter objected against her, for which she underwent the Ordalium, was Incontinency of Body with Alwin Bishop of Winchester.

Of this King it is storied, that as he lay in his Bed, in an Afternoon, with the Curtains drawn about him, a certain pilfering Courtier came into his Chamber, where finding the King's Casket open, (which Hugoline his Chamberlain had forgot to shut) he took out as much Coin as he could conveniently carry, and went away; he did the like a second Time; came again the third Time; when the King spake to him, and bad him speedily be packing whilst he was well, adding, that if Hugoline should come and take him the he should not only lose all he gotten, but also stretch an Hals. And when Hugoline came, and finding the Money, was greatly troubled, the King wished him not be grieved; For (saith he) the that hath it, hath more Need of it than we have. When this devout King lying on his Death-Bed, perceived those about him to weep and lament, he said unto them, If ye love me, ye would not weep, but rejoice because I go to my Father, with whom I shall receive the Joys promised the Faithful, not through my Merit, but by the free Mercy of my Saviour, who sheweth Mercy on whom he pleaseth. He died A. D. 1066. and with great Laments was buried at Westminster. He is said to be the first King that cured the Disease, commonly called the King's Evil. This King, of a little Monastery dedicated to St. Peter at Westminster, made a most beautiful large Church, and founded St. Margaret's Church standing by; and this he did for the Discharge of his vowed Pilgrimage to Jerusalem. He founded also the College of St. Mary Otery in Devon, and removed the Bishop's See from Cridington to Exeter.

He married Edith, the Daughter of Earl Goodwin; which Earl was Bred and eat it, in Witness that he was not guilty of the Death of Prince Alfred; but as soon as he had received the Bread, he was choaked at the Table before the King at Windsor.

A. D. 1066. Harold, the Son of Godwin, notwithstanding that Edgar Etheling, the Grandson of Ironside, was the next rightful Heir, yet gained the English Crown to himself; which he 1066.

in his own Head, without all Ceremony and solemn Celebration, he either greatly approving or approving his Presumption, save for the Omission of the Manner and Form of Coronation. Now Harold, to gain and receive the Love of all, lightened the Burdens of Custom and Tribute which his Predecessors had laid upon the People; was liberal to the Clergymen, repaired their Monasteries, new built that at Waltham in Essex: He created young Edgar King of Oxford, and held him in special Favour. And to all Men was affable and kind, whence he fastened the Hearts of his Subjects unto himself. But this quiet Estate was quickly disturbed by the Norman Duke, who first by his Embassy, claiming Right to the Kingdom of England by the Promise of King Edward, and his giving the same with the Consent of the State, and by Harold's Oath given to the Duke, keeping the Kingdom on his behalf; and then (upon Harold's breaking the Embassy) he made Preparation for gaining of England by Force. But ere Duke William and his Normans arrived on the English Shore, Harfager, King of Denmark, invaded the Land (with Godwin, the cruel Earl of Norfolk, Harold's Brother, joined against whom Harold marched, at a Bridge called Stamford, where he was to pass over) one day he made good, for a Time, the Fight against his whole Host, and his Ax slew forty of his Men, himself at last being slain with a blow. When the English had gained the Bridge, and were reduced to their Ranks, Harold most valiantly set upon the Danes in their Camp, vanquished them, and slew Harfager and Godwin, with many other Persons of Note, and gained an exceeding rich Booty, both of Gold and Silver; then seized on their great Navy.

And now William the Norman, being well furnished with a vast Fleet of Ships well mann'd, Store of Money drawn from his People, the Pope's Benediction, who had sent him a consecrated Banner, an Agnus Dei, and one of the Hairs of St. Peter, with a Curse to all that should oppose him: Thus prepared, the Duke arrived at Pevensey in Sussex, Sept. 28, where when he came to Land, his Foot chanced to slip, and he fell into the Mud, and all mired his Hands; which Accident was presently construed for a lucky Prefage: For now, (said a Captain) O Duke, thou hast taken Possession and holdest of that Land in thine Hand, whereof shortly thou shalt become King. But the Duke thus landed, he set Fire on his Fleet, thereby to cut off all Occasion or Hope from his Men of returning. And from Pevensey he marched to Hastings, divulging, as he went, the Cause of his coming, which was, for the obtaining of his Kingdom; it being, as he said, his by Donation from Edward; giving withal a severe Charge to his Soldiers not to wrong any of their Persons, who in a short Time after were to become his Subjects. To Harold he sent his Messenger, demanding the Kingdom, and Harold's Subjection. But Harold returned him this Answer by the same Messenger, That unless he forthwith departed the Land, he would make him sensible of the Strokes of his just Displeasure. And with a brave and undaunted Mind, the valiant Harold advanced his Forces into Sussex, pitching his Camp within Seven Miles of his Enemy. When the Armies were come near together,

E

and

1666. and ready to engage, the Norman Duke to save the Effusion of Christian Blood, as he said, sent a Monk as a Mediator for Peace, with Offers to Harold of these Conditions; either wholly to resign the Kingdom to him, or in Sight of the Armies to try the Quarrel with him in single Combat, or to stand to the Arbitrament of the Pope. To whom Harold answered, That it should the next Day be tried with more Swords than one. The next Day was the Fourteenth of October, which Harold ever accounted Fortunate, because his Birth-Day, and with Hopeful Assurance, desired greatly the Approach of the same. His Soldiers likewise, too confident of Victory, spent the Night in Revelings. The Morning being come, they both marshalled their Battles. The Kentish Men Harold placed with their heavy Axes, or Halberts, in the Van (for by ancient Custom they had the Front belonging to them.) Then the Battles joined, both Parts bravely fighting; but the Norman perceiving, that by true Valour he could not vanquish the English, betook himself to a Stratagem, commanded his Men to retreat; yet withal to keep in good Order; which the English seeing, supposed that they had fled, and thereupon pursued their Enemy so rashly, that they put themselves into Disorder. Which Opportunity William took hold of, so that facing about, and charging them fiercely, when disranked, he made a great Slaughter of the English. Yet would not any of the remaining English fly the Field, but manfully fought it out, till such time that Harold, wounded into the Brains with an Arrow,

Stigand,
A. B. of
Cant.

through the Left Eye, fell dead. With Harold died his Brethren Gyrth and Leofwine, with many of the English Nobility. And the Soldiers were slain Sixty Seven Thousand, Nine Hundred Seven and Four; some say an Hundred Thousand. The Conqueror lost Three Horses slain under him, and lost not a Drop of Blood by his Enemy. He won his Battle with the Loss only of 6013 Men. It was fought in Sussex, Seven Miles from Hastings, upon Saturday the 14th of October, A. D. 1066. The English, after this Loss, had designed to have made Edgar Atheling King, and to have took the Field against the Conqueror; but the Bishops of Yorkshire and Cheshire, Edwin and Morcar the Queen's Brothers, plotting secretly to get the Crown themselves, hindered the Design. The Body of King Harold, stripped of his Ornaments, and by a base Soldier mangled and hacked, the Leg (for which the Conqueror cashiered him for ever) after much Search, was found among the dead Bodies, and by the English Nobles conveyed to Waltham in Essex, where it was solemnly and royally interred.

A little before the Fight, a dreadful Comet appeared.

Tostig, Earl of Northumberland, out of Spight to his Brother Harold, killed all Harold's Servants; and cut them Piece-meal, salted some of their Limbs, and cast the rest in Vessels of Meat and Wine, fulfilling his Brother's Word, that he had furnished him with powdered Men against his Return.

This he did at Harold's House when he was absent.

Kentish-men meeting William of Normandy p. 51.

K. Will.^m Rufus Shot by an Arrow in Hunting. p. 56.

A. D.
1066

Moth
ter) v drear cende of an was ber he to falt taken Grea O'hol crow
Year
the fwea himf fend etab nce whic his r the b Land Dov
the
and from ing.
and hear
the can then with mer
and from Bran
ing

N O R M A N S.

WILLIAM the Conqueror.

A. D. 1066. William the Conqueror was the base Son of Robert Duke of Normandy. His Mother Arlotte (a Skinner's Daughter) when she was great with him, dreamed that her Bowels were extended and dilated all over Normandy and Britain. And as soon as he was born, being laid on the Chamber Floor, with both his Hands he took up Rushes, and held them fast therein; which Things were taken for Presages of his future Greatness. He began his Reign October 14th, A. D. 1066, and was crowned December 25, in the same Year, by Aldred Archbishop of York, the English Bishops and Barons swearing Allegiance to him; and himself taking a solemn Oath to defend the Rights of the Church, to establish good Laws, and to see Justice uprightly administered. After which, he applied himself to secure his new obtained Kingdom; and the better to assure the South of the Land, he took his Way towards Dever, that so he might command the Seas from Enemies Arrivage, and over-awe the Kentish, a most strong and populous Province. But Stigand, Archbishop of Canterbury, and Eglesine, Abbot of St. Augustines, hearing of his coming, assembled the Commons of Kent to oppose him, who about Swancomb kept themselves secret in the Woods, waiting the coming of the Conqueror. All jointly agreeing (because no Way lay open save only a front) to carry in their Hands great Branches of Trees, wherewith they might keep themselves both from Discovery, and, if need were, impede the Passage of the Normans. Which said Device took so strong Effect, that it daunted King William even with the Sight; who being, as he thought, free from the Enemy, was now on the sudden beset on all Sides with Woods; some of which he saw to move, and the rest for ought he knew, were of the like Nature. At length, to put him out of all Doubt, the Kentish Men inclosing his Army about, displayed their Banners, cast down their Boughs, and with Bows bent were prepared for Battle. At which Sight the Conqueror stood amazed. To whom Stigand and Eglesine presented themselves, and in Behalf of the Kentish Men, thus spake; 'Most Noble Duke, behold here the Commons of Kent are come forth to meet and receive you as their Sovereign, requiring your Peace, their own free Condition of Estate, and ancient Laws. If these Things be denied, they are here presently to abide the Verdict of Battle, being fully resolved rather to die, than part with their Laws, or to live servile in Bondage'. The Conqueror, in this Strait, more wisely than willingly, granted their Demands. Some of the English this Norman King banished, and most Part of every Man's Estate he seized into his own Hands, bestowing the Lands of the Natives amongst his Followers. He deprived Monasteries, Bishopricks, Cities and Corporations of their ancient Liberties and Privileges, putting them to redeem them frank, at his own Rate. And for Default A. B. of

 E 2. of Cant.

1066.

of lacking the Weight of a Groat in the Payment of 700 Marks by the Monks of Ely, for the restoring to their Abby their ancient Possessions, they were constrained to pay 1000 Marks more. The Clergy he charged with Maintenance for his Wars, bereaved the Religious Houses of their Treasures, Chalice, and rich Shrines; abrogated, for the most Part, the ancient Laws of the Land, ordaining new in their Stead, not so equal or easy to be kept; also causing them to be writ in the Norman Tongue. He ordained the four Law Terms, whereas before the Causes of the Kingdom were determined in every Shire, or by the late Law of King Edward, in their Gemote or Conventicle, held Monthly in every Hundred. He commanded every English Householder to put out both Fire and Candle at Eight a-Clock at Night. At which Hour in all Cities, Towns, and Villages, he caused a Bell to be rung by the Normans, then called Couvre-feu, that is, Cover-fire, to prevent nightly Meetings. He laid great Subsidies upon the Land. And that the same might account to his greater Benefit, he caused an exact Survey to be taken of the whole Kingdom, and of every particular Part and Commodity thereof, causing all the People of England to be numbered, their Names taken, and what every one might dispend by the Year; their Substance, Money and Bondsmen recorded: How many Yokes of Oxen and Plow-Lands were in the Realm, and what Services they owed him. Which done, he exacted Six Shillings to be paid him for every Hide of Land. The Book thus made of every several Survey, by the English was called Dooms-Day-Book. He permitted no Englishman to bear any Office of Trust and Credit. He dispeopled 36 Parish-

Towns, laying the Churches and Towns flat with the Earth, making thereof a Forest for Pleasure, now called New-Forest. To strengthen himself against Revolts and Rebellions, he fortified such Places as he thought most convenient for his Purpose, and built the Tower of London, the Castles of York, Lincoln, Nottingham, and Hastings. He was the first that brought the Jews to inhabit England. His Son Robert rebelled against him in Normandy and in Fight dismounted him; he then knowing his Voice, desired his Pardon, and remounted him. Odo, Bishop of Bayeux, and Earl of Kent, his Brother by the Mother, for secretly siding with the King of France, he committed to Prison, not as Bishop, but as Earl, and seized his Estate. Some of whose Gold ground into Powder, was found hidden in the Bottom of Rivers. The Conqueror going to War against the King of France, in Normandy fell sick; when keeping his Bed beyond his wont, and the French King hearing that the Disease was in his Belly, scoffingly said of him, Our Countryman William is laid now in Child-Birth. O what a Number of Candles must be offered at his going to Church! Surely I think an Hundred Thousand will suffice. Which King William hearing of, said, Well, I trust our Countryman of France shall be at no such going to Church (swearing by the Resurrection and Brightness of God) I will find him a Thousand Candles and light them myself. And accordingly not long after, he entered France with a great Army, spoiling all where he came, and setting the City Mentz on Fire: But he came so near the Flames, that with the Heat of his Harness he got a Sickness, which (increased with a Labour of his Horse, that burst the inward of his Belly) cost him his Life.

died at Roan in Normandy, A. 1087. And forsaken of all his Partiers, his Body was left unburied, till that one Harluinus, a poor Country Knight, at his own Charge conveyed it to Caen: Where when he should have been buried, a certain Man, in God's Name, forbade Interment in that Place; which, he, was his and his Ancestors Right, taken from them violently by the said Duke. Whereupon they were forced to compound with him, and they interred the Corpse.

His Wife Maud was the Daughter of Baldwin, the fifth Earl of Flanders. His Issue, Robert, surnamed Curtoise, or Short-Boots; William, surnamed Miser, who died 1128; Richard, who after his Father had attained the Crown of England, came to a violent and sudden Death, as he was Hunting in Wolve Forest, a Stag goring out his Trails. William Rufus; Henry, slain at Selby in Yorkshire, 1070. Cicely, a veiled Nun; Constance, married to Allain, Earl of Britain; Adeline, married to Stephen, Earl of Normandy, by whom she had Stephen, King of Mortain and Bolaine, King of England; Gundred, married to William of Warreine, a Nobleman of Normandy, who was the first Earl of Surry; Ela, who in her Childhood was contracted in Marriage to Harold, afterwards King of England; Margaret, who in her Childhood was given in Marriage to the Renowned Alphonso, King of Allicia in Spain. His base Son, surnamed William Peverel, was Earl of Nottingham.

By his last Will and Testament he commanded all his Treasure to be distributed to Churches, God's Ministers, and the Poor, limiting to each their several Portion. To the Church and Monks of St. Stephen's at Caen in Normandy he gave divers Manors in England, and great Store of Land; yea, and his Crown and Regal Ornaments, which his Son Henry redeemed. To his Son Robert he had before given the Dukedom of Normandy. England he left undisposed, only wished his Son William might succeed him in it. And to Henry he gave Five Thousand Pounds, presaging that all his Dominions should become Henry's in the End.

He did oft-times exhort his Children to the Study of Learning, with this Saying, That an unlearned Prince is but a Crowned Ass. He built a Religious House, called Battel Abbey, in the same Place where King Harold was slain, dedicating it to the Holy Trinity and St. Martin, that there the Monks might pray for the Souls of Harold and the rest that were slain in that Place; endowing it with many great Privileges; and particularly these two, that if any Murtherer or other Felon, for fear of Death fled thither, he should be freed from all Punishment: And that it should be lawful for the Abbot of that Place to deliver any Thief or Robber from the Gallows, if he should chance to pass where any such Execution was in Hand. At Selby in Yorkshire, he founded the Abby of St. Germans, at Excester the Priory of St. Nicholas, and at Caen in Normandy, the Monastery of St. Stephens; and to the Church and College of St. Martins le Grand in London, he gave both large Privileges and much Land. In his Time it was decreed at Rome, that the See of York should be stiled Primus Angliæ, and the See of Canterbury, Primus totius Angliæ. The setting Seals to Bonds and Writings was now first used in England, there being before only Witnesses to them. Stigand, Archbishop of Canterbury, was de-

1087. deposed by the Conqueror, and died in Prison. The Abbot of St. Albans told this King, that the Reason why he gained England in one Battle, which the Danes could not do in many, was, because the Maintenance of Martial Men, with a Part of the Land's Revenues, was converted to maintain Religious Men, and to Religious Uses. In the Time of this King's Reign befel a most fearful Earthquake, strange burning Fevers very mortal, Murders, causing a great Dearth among Cattle, extraordinary Rains, Waters floods incredible, which so softened the Hills to the Foundations, that some of them fell, and overwhelmed the Villages near them. Most of the principal Cities were endamaged by Fire. So great a Fire happened in London, that it consumed Houses and Churches all the Way from the West Gate to the East Gate: And 'tis said, that Tame and Domestic Fowls became Wild, flying to the Woods.

WILLIAM RUFUS.

A. D. 1087. William, surnamed Rufus, notwithstanding that Robert Courtoise, his eldest Brother was living, yet by the Mediation and Assistance of Landfrank, Archbishop of Canterbury, and Wolfstane, he gained the Voices of the Council, and was crowned A. D. 1087. But Odo, Bishop of Bayeux (to take the Revenge for his Sufferings under the Conqueror) instigated Duke Robert to repair into England, and recover his Right, which he promised should soon be effected. Now Robert, that Money, the Sinews of War, might not be wanting for the carrying on of this Design, mortgaged the Province of Constantine to his Brother Henry; and with him many of the English sided. William, on the other Hand, by fairly promising to abolish the over-hard Laws made by his Father, and to take off the Taxes and Imposts, drew the People generally to stand in his Defence; by whose Aids he regained divers strong Holds that the Nobles had seized for Duke Robert. He also besieged Rochester, wherein Odo was; from which Siege he sent forth his Proclamation throughout the Land, commanding all Men to repair thereto; and that whosoever would not, should be reputed a Niding: A Word so disgraceful and hateful to the English (signifying a Coward or base hearted Fellow) that made Multitudes hasten with all Speed to that Service. Whereupon the Castle was yielded, and Odo banished, and his Goods confiscated. But whilst these Things were acting, Robert, Duke of Normandy, landed at Southampton, and very shortly returned again into his own Territories, upon his Brother William's Promise to pay him Three Thousand Marks yearly, and to resign the Kingdom to him or his Heirs, at his Death. About this Time Landfrank, Archbishop of Canterbury, died, and the King kept that See vacant above Four Years. So did he by many other Ecclesiastical Promotions, and set to Sale the Rights of the Church, preferring those therein that would give the most, and yet his Exchequer became never the richer. He was wont to say That Christ's Bread is sweet, dainty, and most delicate for Kings: Howbeit, to his Praise, let this be remembered numbered of him, that when two monks were at Drop - Bezantine, (then current Gold) before him for an Abbey, he spied a third Monk of their Company standing in a Corner, to whom King William said, And what wilt thou give to be Abbot? Not one Farthing, answered he, for I renounced the World and Riches, that I might serve God more sincerely. Then said the King, Thou art worthy to be made Abbot, and the Abbey thou shalt have. His Brother Robert's Territories in Normandy he invaded, taking divers strong Holds and Castles, inforcing Robert to make a Peace with him. After which these two Brothers united their Forces against their Brother Henry: But he fearing Afterwards, had strongly fortified the Castle of Mount St. Michael in Normandy, wherein they besieged him; in which Time of Siege, King William's Life was in great Hazard, for some of the Besieged sallying forth, William, more boldly than wisely, rode against them, and a Knight encountering him, slew his Horse under him, and had slain him too, had he not made himself known by his Voice. Whereupon the armed Men with great Reverence took him up, and brought him another Horse; when the King not staying for the stirrup, sprang into the Saddle, and with an angry Countenance, demanded who it was that overthrew him; and the Knight as boldly answered, and shew'd himself who he was. By Luke's Face, quoth the King, thou shalt be my Knight, and enrolled in my Check, with a Fee reverable to thy Worth. Prince Henry, in the Time of this Age, being sorely distressed for Water, sent to his Brother Robert, shewing him to be of the better Temper) desiring him that he might have that permitted him which God had made common. Duke Robert 1087. commanded him to be supplied; whereat King William was wroth. To whom Robert said, And dost thou esteem more of Water, which is every where to be got, than of a Brother, having no more but him and me? In short Time after, these three Brethren were reconciled, and in short Time after that the two elder again disagreed. The Peace of England was also disturbed by Malcolm King of Scots; but by the Ambushment of Mowbray, Earl of Northumberland, he was slain with his Son Edward. Then Mowbray, grown proud, turns Rebel, but was taken and committed to Windsor.

Duke Robert preparing for the Holy Wars, mortgaged his Dukedom to his Brother William for the Sum of Six Thousand Six Hundred Sixty-six Pounds of Silver; for the making up of which Sum, King William made the Religious Houses to ransack their Coffers. Normandy was therefore now the King's Concern to keep as his own; wherefore, a while after, hearing, as he sat at Meat, that Main, a City in Normandy, was straitly besieged, and his Subjects sorely distressed, he swore his wonted Oath, By St. Luke's Face, that he would not turn his Back till he was with them. And thereupon commanded the Wall of the House to be broke down, that he might go forth the next Way to Sea, leaving Order for his Nobles straitway to follow him: But the Winds being contrary, and Seas raging, his Pilot humbly desired him to stay a while, till the Winds and Seas were appeased. To whom the King said, Hast thou ever heard that a King hath been drowned? Therefore hoist up the Sails, I charge thee, and be gone. Which accordingly being done, the King making such Haste, relieved the City before it was expected.

1096. Then settling his Affairs in that Country, he returned into England; where, as he was Hunting in New-Forest, Sir Walter Tyrrell, a French Knight, shooting at a Stag, the Arrow glanced against a Tree, and struck the King into the Breast, with which he immediately died, Aug. 1. A. D. 1100. His Body laid in a Collier's Cart, was drawn with one poor Jade, through a very dirty Way, till the Cart broke, where for a while the Corpse was left in the Dirt; but afterwards was conveyed to Winchester, and there buried in the Cathedral Church. The Bones since have been taken up, and laid in a Coffin with the Bones of Canutus. At Westminster he laid new Foundations of a most stately Palace, and finished that stately Building, called the Great Hall, which he found Fault with, because no bigger, accounting it scarce worthy the Name of a Bed-chamber, in respect of that which he intended to build. He new-built the City Carlisle, which 200 Years before had been spoiled by the Danes, built the Church of St. Saviour's in Southwark, and founded an Hospital in York to the Honour of St. Peter.

In his Reign the Bishop's See was translated from Selfey to Chichester, anciently called Cissancester.

In this King's Reign happened a most dreadful Earthquake, and vehement Lightning, leaving an intolerable Stink behind it. An exceeding Tempest of Wind, that in London drove down Sixty Houses, blew off the Roof of Bow Church, with the Beams, Six of which in their Fall were driven Twenty three Foot deep into the Ground (the Streets of the City lying then unpav'd.) A blazing Star appeared, and other Stars seemed to shoot Darts one against another. The Sea broke over its Banks, drowning abundance of People; and in Kent overwhelmed the Lands that sometime were Earl Goodwin's, which now are called Goodwin's Sands, very dangerous for Navigators. A Well of Blood for Fifteen Days rose out of the Ground at Finchamstead, near Abingdon. Pestilence and Scarcity.

Robert of Gloucester hath a pretty Passage of King William, in these Lines.

*As his Chamberlain him brought, as he rose on a Day,
A Morrow for to wear a Pair of Hose of Say,
He asked what they costned, Three Shillings he seid,
Fie a diple, quoth the King, who say so vile a Deed,
King to wear so vile a Cloth, but it costned more;
Buy a Pair for a Mark, or thou shalt ha cory fore.
A worse Pair enough the other with him brought,
And seyð they costned a Mark, and uneath he them bought.
Aye bel-amy, quoth the King, these were well bought,
In this manner serve me, or ne serve me not.*

A. D. 1096, and in the Reign of William Rufus, by reason of the Pestilence then raging, and the Oppressions under which the English groaned, the Tillage of the Earth was neglected, whereby ensued great Scarcity the Year following throughout all England.]

HENRY BEAUCLERK.

A.D. 1100. Henry for his Learning stiled Beauclerk, (whilst his Brother Robert was bled in the Holy War (promising many good Things, was with the general liking of the People crowned at Westminster in A. D. 1100. Whose first Business was the Re-forming of his own Court and Household, for a Pattern to his Subjects. Next, he restored to the English the Use of Fire and Lights at their own Liberty, freed the Church from Reservation of its Possessions upon Vacancies; made the Heirs of the Nobility free to possess their Fathers Lands without Redemption from him, engaging the Nobles to do the like by their Tenants. Allowing the Gentry to marry their Daughters and Kinswomen without his Licence, so it were not to his Enemy: Ordained that the Widow should enjoy her Jointure, and be at Liberty to marry according to her own liking: That the Mother and next Kindred should be Guardians to fatherless Children: That Coiners of false Money should be punished with the Loss of Hand and Genitals. He also appointed a Measure to the Length of his Arm, to be a Standard of Commerce amongst his People. He forgave all Debts to the Crown before his Time. And that which did the most content his Subjects, was, that he revived the Laws of Edward the Confessor: After which, he recalled Anselm, Archbishop of Canterbury, who had been forc'd out of the Realm by Rufus, because he opposed him for keeping Church Livings in his Hands. And Henry, to settle himself the more deeply in the Affections of the English, married

Maud, Daughter to the King of Anselm, Scots by Margaret Sister to Edgar A. B. of Atheling. But Duke Robert being returned with greatest Honour from the Holy Land, claimed the Kingdom of England as his rightful Inheritance; landed an Army at Portsmouth, many of the English flocking to him. At length the Difference between these two Brethren were reconciled on these Terms; That Henry should enjoy the Crown during his Life, paying to Robert in way of Fealty, Three Thousand Marks by the Year. But this Sunshine of Peace was shortly after withdrawn by the Rebellion of Robert Beliasme, Earl of Shrewsbury, who in short time, being vanquished, fled into Normandy for Shelter. Archbishop Anselm is also said to have disturbed the Peace, by standing too stiffly for the pretended Rights of the Church of Rome against the King's real Rights and Prerogative, peremptorily depriving what Prelates he pleased of their Promotions, and refusing to consecrate certain Bishops that the King had advanced. Moreover, the King and his Brother Robert continued not long in Amity, e'er Henry invading Normandy, takes his Brother in Fight, whom he sent Prisoner to Cardiff Castle in Wales, where he had the Liberty to walk in the King's Meadows, Forests, and Parks; but endeavouring to make his Escape, he was committed to a stricter Durance, and also deprived of the Sight of both his Eyes; and in few Years after died, and was buried at Gloucester, his Brother Henry not long surviving him.

Some Troubles arose from the Welsh; but that People the King restrained, 1100. Radulphus, A. B. of Cant. strained, chiefly by placing those Flemings among them, whose Lands the Seas had devoured some Years before, and to whom King Rufus had granted, that they should seat themselves in Cumberland. The poor married Priests Anselm sadly perplexed. And the King imposed heavy Taxes on the People, and reserved vacant Church Promotions to his own Use, under Pretence of keeping them for the most deserving. But how unworthily he disposed some of them, may be guessed by that pretty Reproof which Raymond his Chaplain gave him. Who, on Rogation Sunday, celebrating Service in the King's Chapel, being to read that Lesson out of St. James v. 17. It rained not on the Earth by the Space of Three Years and Six Months; he purposely read, It rained not one, one, one Years, and Five, one Months. Which causing Laughter or Admiration in all that heard him, the King rebuked him for it, demanding the Reason why he read so. Marry, quoth he, I see you bestow your Preferments on such as can read so. Wherewith the King touched, preferred him; and for the Future was more cautious whom he raised to Preferments in the Church. The Estates both Spiritual and Temporal he caused to assemble at Salisbury; then reforming many Abuses, and laying here the first Foundation of our High Court of Parliament. About this Time Lewis King of France invaded Normandy, whither King Henry passed, and vanquished him. But as his Son Prince William was returning after him out of Normandy, he was cast away, and with him 160 Persons of prime Note and Esteem, none of their Bodies being found. The Mariners had too much Wine bestowed on them at their putting to Sea.

Maud, or Matilda, the Empress

after the Death of the Emperor her Husband, King Henry her Father sent for over into England, where calling a Parliament, he caused Stephen his Sister's Son, with his Nobles to swear Fealty to her, as to his lawful and now only Heir. This is commonly esteemed, but without just Reason, as the first Parliament. And therefore some date the Origin of that Court from hence. But the King sailing again into Normandy, he there, after his Pleasure of Hunting, made a great Repast of Lampreys; upon the Eating of which, he fell exceeding sick, and after Seven Days Sickness died, A. D. 1135, at the Town of St. Denys. His Bowels and Brains and Eyes were buried at Roan. The Physician that took out the Brains was poisoned with the Stench. His Body sliced, powdered with Salt, and wrapped in a Bull's Hide, was conveyed to Reading, and there buried in the Abbey which himself had founded. His Wives were, first Maud, the Daughter of Malcolm the Third, surnamed Canmoir, or Great-head, King of Scotland; his Second Wife was Adelicia, the Daughter of Godfrey the first Duke of Lorraine. Besides his lawful Issue William and Maud, he is said to have had fourteen Illegitimate, some say more. He built a magnificent Palace at Woodstock in Oxfordshire. In a great Dearth in the Countries of Anjou and Main, he fed every Day with sufficient Sustenance Ten Thousand Persons, from the Beginning of April, till such Time as new Corn was in. He erected and endowed the Sees of Carlisle and Ely, and the Abbies of Hide, Reading, Cirencester, and the Priory of Dunstable. His Queen Maud was so devout, that she would go to Church barefoot, and constantly exercise herself in Works of Charity, inasmuch that when her Brother, Prince David came out of Scotland to visit her, he found her in her Privy-Chamber washing, wiping, and kissing poor Peoples Feet; which he disliking, said, Verily if the King your Husband knew this, you should never kiss his Lips. To which she replied, That the Feet of the King of Heaven are to be preferred before the Lips of an Earthly King. 'Tis reported, that when the King was preparing for his last Passage into Normandy, there happened a fearful Earthquake, and that out of the Chinks of the Earth arose burning Flames, which could not be quenched.

In the Year 1111, at Dunmow in Essex, the Lady Inga founded a Priory for black Nuns, which afterwards became an House of Monks. Which Monks, 'tis said, did allow a Gammon of Bacon to such married Couples as repented not of their Bargain within a Year and a Day after Marriage, nor made any Nuptial Transgression in Word or Deed. This they were to make a solemn Oath of. In or near the Year 1115, and October the 10th, did the River of Thames so fail of Water, that, between the Tower of London and the Bridge, People not only passed over on Horseback, but also great Numbers, both of Men and Children, did wade over on Foot.

S T E P H E N.

A. D. 1135. Stephen Earl of Blois, Son to Adelicia, Daughter of the Conqueror, was admitted King by the Workings of his Brother Henry Bishop of Winchester, and Roger Bishop of Sarum; but chiefly through the Means of Hugh Bigot, who took his Oath that King Henry had, on his Death-bed (upon some Distaste taken against his Daughter) disinherited her, and appointed Stephen to succeed him. He was crowned at Westminster on St. Stephen's Day, in A. D. 1135, by William Corbell, Archbishop of Canterbury, the Prelates swearing to obey him as their King, so long as he should preserve the Churches Rights; and the Lay-Barons in like Manner swore Allegiance to him so long as he would keep his Covenants to them, and preserve their Rights. His Right he owned to be by Election. The Charter containing his Peoples Franchises, Liberties, and Immunities, which he bound himself to maintain, he sealed at Oxford. Which was, That all Liberties, Customs, and Possessions granted to the Churches, should be firm and in Force: That Persons and Causes Ecclesiastical should appertain only to Ecclesiastical Jurisdiction: That the Vacancies of Churches and Churchmens Goods should be at the sole Disposal of the Clergy: That all bad Usages in the Land, touching Forests, Exactions, &c. should be extirpated; and that the ancient Laws should be restored. Many Castles he either caused or suffered to be erected in the Land, which he intended for his own Security against Maud; but they proved greatly to his own Detriment. His Entrance was very peaceable; but by little and little civil Discords increased to the miserable Spoil of the Realm, besides the Troubles arising from Outparts. Baldwin de Redners first began to break the Peace, but him the King soon quieted. Then the Welchmen, who

William Corbell, A. B. of Cant.

1235. who gave a great Defeat to the English. Then David King of Scots (set on by some disaffected to Stephen) but in a short time Peace was concluded with him. Then the Welch again make Inroads into the Land, carrying away great Spoils. Next David King of Scots enters Northumberland, in the Quarrel of the Empress, where his rude Soldiers dealt most barbarously with many of the Inhabitants, ripping up the Wombs of Women with Child, and tossing their Infants upon the Points of their Spears, slaying the Priests at the Altar, and after an inhuman Manner dismembring the slain Bodies. After this the Peers of the Land conspire against the King, taking themselves to strong Holds; a great Cause whereof was, because the King shewed extraordinary Favour to William de Ypre and his Flemings, following their Counsels, and chiefly relying upon them. When David King of Scots, taking Opportunities from these inbred Troubles, again entred Northumberland with a great Army, against whom the Northern Lords marched at the Command of Thurstan, Archbishop of York, the King's Lieutenant, who himself being then sick, appointed Ralph Bishop of Durham for his General. Which Bishop of Durham, in the Close of his Invective Oration to his Army against the Scots, before the Battle, absolved from Punishment of Sin all such of his Side that should die in the Fight, whereby the English were made to fight the more desperately; so that in a short time they vanquished the Scots, driving the King of Scots and his Son out of the Field. King Stephen went on also very prosperously against his Barons, winning many Castles from them. Which done, he proceeded against the Scots, with whom in short time a Peace was concluded. But that Stephen might be kept employed, the Empress Maud landed near to Arundel with but 140 Men, whom Stephen hastened to meet; but she colouring her Designs with the Pretences of Amity and Peace, he over credulous, caused her to be honourably conveyed to Bristol, where she remained Two Months, and then went to Wallingford; her base Brother, Earl Robert, in the mean time gathering Aids for her. Wallingford King Stephen besieged, and his Brother the Bishop of Winchester, invited certain of the Nobles to his Palace, where he kept them as Prisoners, till he had gained them to resign their Castles to the King. Worcester, Earl Robert subdued and spoiled. Nottingham, Ralph Paine burned in favour of the Empress. And she, for her better Security, took into Lincoln, whither Stephen following her, gained the City, the Empress making an Escape. Shortly after which, Robert Earl of Gloucester, and Ranulph Earl of Chester encountered the King near to Lincoln where with equal Success the Fight was maintained a long time, till at length the King's Horsemen (without Suspicion of Treason) gave back and fled, and shortly after his Foot began to faint and fly, leaving this valiant King, almost alone, who with his Battle-Ax drove back the whole Troops assailing him, maintaining the Quarrel against his Foot with an undaunted Courage, till his Battle-Ax broke; and after that his Sword flew in Pieces. When now weaponless he was struck down, taken and carried to the Empress at Gloucester, from whence he was sent to Bristol. The Empress for a while ruling all; London, after much Persuasion received her, with Royal Procession; but in short time grew discontented; be-

she refused to remit some o-
 -hard Laws made by her Father, to restore those of King Ed-
 -ard. Many Nobles also repined, conceiving themselves too much
 -ghted by her. The Bishop of -nchester, who a while before had
 -ursed all that withstood her, now
 -olves them, under Pretence that
 -e Barons had kept Faith with
 -er, she not with them. The dis-contented Londoners he solicited
 -his Brother Stephen's Behalf.
 -ivers Castles he stored with Mu-
 -ition and Men. In the mean time,
 -atilda came to Winchester, where -ending for the Bishop (being then
 -e Pope's Legate) though he doubt-ed some Danger, yet not daring to -end a flat Denial, returned this
 -quivocal Answer, Ego parabo me,
 -I will make ready, as though he
 -ad meant to follow the Messenger,
 -whereas he addressed himself to -work her Downfal. For sending
 -for his Brother's Queen, Prince
 -Eustace, the Londoners, and William
 -Tore, he made strong his Party for
 -the King. Himself and Friends
 -aiding in the City, and the Em-
 -presses keeping in the Castle, not da-ring to adventure forth for about the -pace of Seven Weeks. When the -shop, to deceive Matilda, com-manded Peace to be proclaimed, and
 -the City Gates to be set open. But -the Empress and her Friends, now
 -aving the Castle to go to some o-ther Place, were pursued by the Bi-shop's Forces, in which Pursuit ma-ny of her Party were wounded and -slain, Earl Robert taken, and others
 -fled into the Nunnery of War-
 -ham, were burned, together with -the Place. And Winchester City the -shop caused to be fired, for the -citizens Affection to the Empress.
 -The Empress, who had escaped to
 -the Castle of the Devizes, and
 -was in Hazard to be surprized,

caused her self to be put into a 1154.
 Coffin, as though dead, bound fast with Cords, and so as if it had been her dead Corpse, she was carried in a Horse-Litter to Gloucester.
 King Stephen and Earl Robert being exchanged one for another, the King now pursues Matilda, and in Oxford besieged her, won the Sub-urbs thereof, and brought her to that Streight, that for her Escape in a great Frost and Snow, she was forced (in order to the deceiv--ing of the Centinels Eyes) to cloath her self with Linnen Garments, and so on Foot to run through Ice and Snow, Ditches and Valleys, till she came to Abingdon, where taking Horse, she got the same Night to Wallingford Castle. After which, ma-ny Bickerings happened betwixt the -two Parties, with variable Successes to and fro. Sometimes in one Part of the Nation Matilda's Side pre-vailed, in another Part Stephen's, to the great Ruin of the whole Realm.
 However, Stephen, to assure the Suc-cession to his Son Eustace, called a Council at London, commanding
 Theobald Archbishop of Canterbury to consecrate his Son King. Which he refusing to do (and that by the Pope's special Mandate) was forced to fly into Normandy, the King seizing upon all his Possessions.
 But Eustace shortly after dying,
 King Stephen inclined to Peace,
 and was content to adopt Henry Fitz Empress for his Son and Suc-cessor. To whom the Nobles at Oxford did Homage as the undoubt-
 -ed Heir; and the Prince yielded Stephen the Honour of a Father.
 But King Stephen being afflic-
 -ted with the Iliac Passion, toge-ther with his old Disease the He-morrhoids, gave up the Ghost at Dover, A. D. 1154, and was bu-ried at Feverham in Kent: Though his Body afterward, for the Sake of
 the

1154. the Lead, wherein it was wrapped was cast into the River. Maud the Wife of King Stephen, was the Daughter of Eustace Earl of Bulloigne, the Brother of Godfrey and Baldwin, Kings of Jerusalem. He had Issue Baldwin, Eustace, William, Maud, Mary, and two Natural Sons; the younger, named Gervas, being made Abbot of Westminster. His Son Eustace in a Rage set Fire on the Corn Fields belonging to the Abby of Bury, because the Monks denied to help him to a Sum of Money; but afterwards sitting down to Dinner, at the first Mouth of Bread he put into his Mouth, he fell into a Fit of Madnefs, and that Fit died. King Stephen erected the Abbies of Cogshall in Essex of Farnest in Lancashire, the Nurseries at Carew in Higham, an Hospital at York, and a Monastery at Feverham. About the Beginning of his Reign, a Fire beginning at London-stone, consumed Eastward to Aldgate, and Westward to St. Paul

HENRY II.

A. D. 1154. HENRY Plantagenet, the Son of Maud the Empress (who was the Daughter of King Henry I. by Maud his first Wife, who was the Daughter of Malcolm, King of Scotland, by St. Margaret, Daughter to Edward. Son of Edmond Ironside) and Earl Geofrey of Anjou, was crowned at Westminster by Theobald Archbishop of Canterbury. And Henry, to settle the Realm in quiet, demolished certain Castles, and fortified others. Some Earls unduly created he reduced into a private Condition, purged the Realm of foreign Soldiers, chiefly of the Flemings; chose himself a Council out of the most eminent Persons Spiritual and Temporal, and restrained the Insolencies of some great Personages, which made some of them discontented, especially that arrogant Lord Hugh de Mortimer, who raised a Rebellion. Against whom the King went in Person, where, in the Siege of Bridgenorth he had been shot with an Arrow, had not Hubert de St. Claro interposed, and took the Arrow into his own Bosom. The King having quieted the Rebels, he hastened into France, and there did Homage to King Lewis for his French Provinces Normandy, Aquitain, Anjou, Maine, and Lorraine, which partly were his Patrimony, and partly the Inheritance of his Queen Eleanor; settled an Accord between himself and Brother Geofrey; and at his Return into England entred into Arms with Malcolm King of Scots, returning to him the Earldom of Huntingdon. Then he advanced against the Welch, with whom fighting, his Person was in great Danger, his Standard Royal cowardly abandoned; for the which Henry de Essex, Standard Bearer, was afterward accused by Robert de Monsford, who in single Combat, within Lists, vanquished him at Reading, where the said Essex was shorn a Monk. But the King at length overcame the Welch, and returned with Triumphant into England; after which, himself and his Queen Eleanor were crowned at Worcester, where they both, at the Offertory, laid their Crowns upon the High Altar, vowing never to wear them after. This now was the third time in which at three several Places, Westminster, Lincoln, and Worcester, he had been crowned.

Then the King cross'd the Seas to his Dukedom of Normandy, where he made Seisure of some Cities into his Hands, after his Brother Godfrey's Death, and settled the Affairs, then returned. After which, and about the Year 1163, began the famous Controversy betwixt the King and his Favourite Becket, whom in the Beginning of his Reign he had advanced to be Lord Chancellor, and upon the Death of Theobald, to be Archbishop of Canterbury; which Archbishop-rick Becket, at the Council of Tours, secretly delivered up to the Pope, and received it again from his Hands. But the Cause of the Dissention betwixt the King and this Bishop, was the Remissness and Neglect of Becket's curbing the Disorders of the Church-men, which then were grown to a dangerous height, Complaint having been made to the King of above a hundred Murders committed by the Clergy in his Reign. Which Enormities, besides many others of other Kinds,
 not being punished by Church Censure, the King exceedingly displeased, brought him under the Civil Law, ordering that Justice should be administred to all alike without partiality, as well Clergy as Laity, appointing Ministers of Justice thro'
 all Parts of the Land to that Purpose, against which Becket opposed himself, peremptorily defending the pretended Rights of the Clergy, and the See of Canterbury; yea, so far that he challenged from the King
 the Custody of Rochester Castle, and other Forts which the King for securing his State had resumed into his own Hands. Hereup-on the King assembling his Bishops at Westminster, it was there agreed, that none should appeal to the See of Rome in any Case, without the King's Leave. That no Archbishop or

Bishop, upon the Pope's Summons, 1154. should go out of the Realm without the King's Licence. That no Bishop Thomas should excommunicate any holding Becket, of the King in Chief, or put any of A. B. of his Officers under Interdict, without Cant.
 the King's Licence. That Clerks cri-minous should be tried before Secular Judges. Unto which Articles the King peremptorily urged Becket to yield, without any Reservation of saving in all Things his Order and Right of the Church. But Becket utterly refused, sending Complaints thereupon to the Pope, who very desirous to keep the King's Favour, required the Bishop to yield unto the King without any Salvo's or Exceptions. So Becket, though with much Reluctancy, at length did swear in Verbo Sacerdotali & de plano, That he would observe the Laws which the King intituled Avitæ, of his Grandfather, the like to which did all other Bishops and Nobility. But notwithstanding, Becket refused to set his Seal to the Instrument wherein these Customs were comprehended, alledging that he did promise it only to do the King some Honour in Word, but not with Intent to confirm the said Articles. Whereupon the King sent to Pope Alexander III.
 thinking by this Means to have subjected the Prelate. But he passing it by, the King undertook the Case himself, and by his Peers and Bishops had all Becket's moveable Goods condemned to his Mercy;
 they all judging him guilty of Perjury. The Bishops did, by the Mouth of the Bishop of Chichester, disclaim thenceforward all Obedience to him as their Archbishop.
 And there next Day whilst they were consulting concerning him, he caused to be sung before him at the Altar; The Princes sit and speak against me, and the Ungodly persecute me, &c. and forthwith taking

1154. taking his Silver Crozier in his Hand, he entred therewith in Richard, to the King's Presence. But the a Monk, King enraged at his Boldness, commanded his Peers to sit in Judgment on him, and they adjudged him as a Traytor and perjured Person, to be apprehended and cast into Prison. To prevent which Becket fled into Flanders, the Pope now openly siding with him, and also Lewis the French King. But Henry, to let the Servant of Servants know that he was Supreme in his own Kingdom, and that he liked not his taking Part with a Subject against his Sovereign Lord, commanded the Sheriffs to attack such as did appeal to the Court of Rome, with the Relations of all such of the English Clergy as were with Becket, and to put them under Sureties: Also to seize their Revenues, Goods, and Chattels. The King likewise seized all the Archbishop's Goods and Profits, banished his Kindred, prohibited his being publickly prayed for as Archbishop: Commanded his Justices to apprehend and secure all such as should bring any Interdict into England, till the King's Pleasure was further known. On the other Hand, Becket in France, by special Authority from the Pope, excommunicated the Bishop of London, and proceeded so far with others, that there was scarce found in the King's Chapel such as might perform the wonted Service. Hereupon the King sends again to the Pope, to send him Legates which might absolve his excommunicated Subjects, and settle a Peace. But the Pope's Legates, whom he sent, did not effect a Reconciliation, by reason of Becket's Perverseness. Some conjecture, that in Contempt of Becket (whose Office it was, as Archbishop of Canterbury, to crown the King) King Henry caused his eldest Son Henry to be crowned King of England by Roger, Archbishop of York: At whose Coronation Feast, the Father King himself carrying up the first Dish of Meat, the Archbishop pleasantly said to the young King, Rejoice, my fair Son, for there is no Prince in the World that hath such a Servitor attending at his Table as you have. To whom the proud young King answered, Why wonder you at that? My Father knows that he does nothing unbecoming him, for as much as he is Royal born on one Side, both Our Self are Royal born both by Father and Mother. Not long after this, by Mediation of some Friends a Reconciliation between the King and Becket was effected; and Becket was permitted to have the full Use of his Metropolitan See, and all the Profits thereof, with the Arrearages Which he had not long repossessed e'er he published the Pope's Letters by which Roger Archbishop of York and Hugh Bishop of Durham, were suspended from their Episcopal Function for crowning the young King in Prejudice of the See of Canterbury. And the Bishops of London, Sarum, and Exeter, cut off from the Church by Censure, for assisting therein; whom Becket would not absolve at the young King's Request, but under Conditions: Which the old King, then in Normandy hearing of, let fall some Words, intimating his high Displeasure against the Archbishop, and Desire to be rid of him. Whereupon Hugh Nevil, William Tracie, Hugh Britt, and Richard Fitz Urse, Knights and Courtiers, hasted into England, and murdered the Archbishop in the Cathedral Church of Canterbury, where he stood in the Evening Service before the Altar. Which done, the Parricides fled, and Thomas was reputed for a most glorious Saint.

Henry. II. Serving a Dish to his Son's Table. p. 64

Rich. I. fighting the Sarazens in the Holy Land. p. 68

Marty yond have

But comin he w to tak from would ment
Pope
Fact.
bation
from Trage quest being the C the In caused Churo to his to En into M his A (lent Purga Bucket absolv that h
the F for h casion do the form dition at his tain
the D he sh freely Custo dice
he sh
Poss
tabu

Martyr; and strange Miracles beyond my Creed) are reported to have been done by this dead Roman Saint and his Blood. Amongst other Epitaphs (made at his Death, this is one :

1154.

Quis moritur ? Præsul. Cur ? Pro grege. Qualiter ? Ense.
Quando ? Natali. Quis Locus ? Ara Dei.

But the News of this vile Act coming to the Ears of the old King, he was exceedingly troubled ; and to take off the Imputation of Guilt from himself, he protested that he would submit himself to the Judgment of such Cardinal Legates as the Pope should send to enquire of the Fact. And to calm his own Perturbations, and avert Mens Thoughts from the Considerations of that Tragedy, he undertook the Conquest of Ireland, which he effected, being helped forward therein by the Civil Dissentions then amongst the Irish petty Kings ; where having caused a Reformation of the Irish Church, and settled Affairs therein, to his Conveniency, he returned into England, and from thence posted into Normandy ; where attended for his Arrival two Cardinal Legates (sent at his own Request for his Purgation, concerning Thomas a Becket's Death) by whom he was absolved ; having first given Oath, that he was no Way consenting to the Fact, and declared his Sorrow for having in his Anger given Occasion by rash Words for others to do the Deed, and engaged to perform enjoin'd Penances. The Conditions of his Absolution were, That at his own Charge he should maintain 200 Soldiers a whole Year for the Defence of the Holy Land. That he should suffer Appeals to be made freely. That he should revoke all Customs introduced to the Prejudice of the Church's Liberty. That he should restore and make up the Possessions of the Church of Canterbury. That he should freely receive all such as were in Banishment for Becket's Cause ; and besides these, the Legates enjoined him some other secretly, which came not to our Knowledge (said the Author of Becket's Life.) And now this Cloud thus blown over, another succeeds in its Place, for his unnatural Son young King Henry (by the Instigation of his Mother Queen Eleanor) conspired against him, having for his Confederates the Kings of France and Scotland, his two Brothers Richard and Jeoffry, with many of the English Nobles. Against whom the Father, with a bleeding Heart for his Son's Ungratefulness, prepared himself, and was very successful in Little Britain, where himself was in Person ; also in England by his faithful Subjects. For Humphrey de Bohun, High Constable of the Realm, with other Nobles, vanquished Robert Earl of Leicester, and took him Prisoner, which moved Lewis of France to seek a Truce of him for six Months ; whereunto King Henry yielded ; then shipp'd for England, landing at the Port of Hampton. From whence he took his Journey towards Canterbury ; and being come within about three Miles thereof, he went barefooted, the hard Stones so cutting his tender Feet, that the Ground was stained with his Blood. And after he came to Canterbury, and was entred into the Chapter-house of the Monks, he most humbly prostrated himself on the Ground, begged Pardon, and by the Instance of his own Petition, was by all the Brethren corrected with Rods. The 1183. Number of Lashes which he received on his bare Flesh, amounted to Fourscore. Likely this Penance was that which the Legate enjoyed secretly. About this Time William King of Scots, that had lately entred England, was taken Prisoner, and young King Henry was with Storms driven back into France, and his Fleet scatter'd; shortly after which, Peace was concluded betwixt his Father and him. But yet again he fought his Father's Ruin, though before he could effect it, he was prevented by the King of Terrors, Death, A. D. 1183. The following Year Heraclius, Patriarch of Jerusalem, arrived in England, soliciting the King to undertake the Holy War in his own Person, which, by the Advice of his Lords, he refused, yet yielded to aid the Cause with Money, and gave them Leave to go, that were disposed thereto. His Son John (whom he exceedingly loved, and commonly in Jest called Sans Terre, without Land) he made Lord of Ireland, assuring unto him also Lands and Rents in England and Normandy; Richard and Jeffry his Sons rebelling again against him. The younger of which, in a Turnament at Paris, was trod to Death under the Horses Feet, but the Elder lived to the farther Grief of his Father. For joining himself with Philip of France, he forced his Father out of the City of Mentz, (the City where he was born, and loved above all others) which made King Henry to utter these Words against him, That since his Son Richard had taken from him that Day, the Thing which he most loved in the World, he would requite him; for after that Day, he would deprive him of that Thing which in him should best please a Child, namely, his Heart. And afterwards finding his Son John first in the Catalogue of the Conspirators against him in that Action, he bitterly cursed the Hour of his Birth, laying God's Curse and his upon his Sons, which he would never recal by any Persuasions. But coming to Clareton, he there fell desperately sick, and feeling Death approach, caused himself to be born into the Church before the Altar, where, after humble Confession and Sorrow for his Sins, he yielded up his Soul, A. D. 1189, and was buried at Font Evrard.

His Wife Eleanor was the sole Heir of William the Fifth of that Name, Duke of Aquitain. She was first married to Lewis King of France, and after his Death to this King Henry. She died 1204.

His Issue was William, who died 1156, Henry, Richard, Jeffry, Philip, who died very young; John, Maud, married to Henry surnamed the Lion, Duke of Saxony. Eleanor, married to Alphonso, surnamed the Good King of Castile. Joan, first married to William King of Sicily, and afterwards to Raimond the fourth Earl of Thoulouse.

His base Issue William, surnamed Longspur, and Geoffry Archbishop of York. These two by fair Rosamund and Morgan by another Woman. Rosamund, his beloved Concubine, was the Daughter of the Lord Cilford, whom, to keep safe from the Envy of Queen Eleanor, he placed in a Labyrinth which he built for her at Woodstock, with such Windings and Turnings, that none could come at her Retiring Room save the King or whom he instructed. Howbeit the jealous Eye of Queen Eleanor found her out by a Clew of Silk which Rosamund let fall as she sat to take the Air. For she suddenly fleeing to escape being seen, the End of the Silk fastened to her Foot, and the Clew still unwinding, which the Queen

RICHARD I.

67

Queen followed till she had found she ended her Days, whose Body 1189.
the lovely Rosamund, whom she so was buried at Godstow, with this dealt with, (giving her Poison) that Epitaph upon her Tomb;

*Hic jacet in tumba Rosa mundi, non Rosa munda,
Non redolet, sed olet, quæ redolere solet.*

King Henry divided England into Circuits, appointing that Two of his Judges should, twice in the Year, in each Circuit, administer Justice.

In the Year 1164, he called an Assembly of the States at Clarendon in Wilt, where (amongst other Matters) it was decreed, That all the Clergy should, bona fide, swear Allegiance to the King, and should appeal but unto the Archbishop, or from him finally to the King, without particular License.

In the Beginning of his Reign, one Nicholas Brekespear, an English Man, was elected Pope by the Name of Adrian the IVth, who, in the Fifth Year of his Popedom, was choaked with a Fly. He sent the Lord's Prayer (in this Manner) from Rome, to be taught the English People.

*Ure Fadyr in Heaven rich, Thy Name be hailed over-lich. Thou bring us thy michel bless, Als hit in Heaven y doe. Evar in yearth been it also. That holy Bread that lasteth ay, Thou send it ous this ilke Day.
Forgive us all that we have don,*

As we forgive uch other mon. Ne let ous fall into no founding, Ac shield ous from the foul thing.

In the Isle of Wight it rained Blood, the Shower continuing for the Space of two Hours together. A great Earthquake in Ely, Norfolk, and Suffolk, which made the Bells to ring in the Steeples. At St. O- syths in Essex was seen a Dragon of marvellous Bigness, which, by moving, burned Houses. Another great Earthquake, which overthrew many Buildings, and, amongst the rest, rent in Pieces Lincoln Cathedral. At Creford in Suffolk, a certain hairy Creature perfectly resembling Man in all Parts and Proportions, was taken out of the Sea by a Fisher in a Net, who after he had been kept a while, secretly slip'd away into the Sea again.

A. D. 1174, By the King's Command was the City of Leicester set on Fire, the Walls and Castle razed, and the Inhabitants expelled for their Disobedience towards the King.

RICHARD I.

A. D. 1189. Richard, from his exceeding Valour, surnamed Cœur de Lion, was crowned at Westminster, by Baldwin Archbishop of Canterbury. At which Time, a great Number of the Jews were in tumultuous Sort slaughtered by the common People, for which many of them suffer'd Death. Baldwin, The Coronation Rites performed, A. B. of Richard with all Speed prepares for his Voyage into the Holy Land, appointing William Longchamp, Bishop of Ely, his Chief Justice and Lord Chancellor, joining with him Hugh Bishop of Durham, for the Parts F 2 be-

1169. beyond Humber, associating to those Bishops divers Temporal Lords for the Defence and Preservation of Justice. And with the King of Scots he concluded firm Friendship. Which done, with a Royal Navy he put out to Sea, and by the Way to the Holy Land seized on the Island Cyprus, where he solemnly took to Wife his beloved Lady Berengaria. The Island he committed to the keeping of his own Deputies, permitting the Islanders to enjoy all such Laws and Liberties, as they held in the Time of Emmanuel the Emperor. Farther in his Way he conquered a mighty Argosey, called a Dromond, wherein were aboard a Thousand Five hundred Saracens (disguised under French Flags) furnished, besides all other Provisions, with Fireworks, Barrels or Cages of venomous Serpents, for the Use of the Saracens at Ptolemais, since called Acon. Of the Saracens he kill'd and drowned 1300, and then sailed safely to Acon; before which lay these Christian Nations, the Genoese and Florentines, Flemings, Almains, Danes, Dutch, Pisans, Friezlanders, Lombards, and the English, under Hubert Bishop of Sarum. Besides the Knights Templars, collected out of all Nations, and also the Aids of the Asians. The King of France also came to the Siege; where, whilst the Christians lay, Sultan Saladin cut off the Heads of 1500 Christian Captives; in Revenge whereof, King Richard, in Sight of Saladin's Host, cut off above 2500 of the Heads of Turkish Slaves. The Siege before Acon was so well plied, (notwithstanding sundry Dissensions betwixt King Richard and Philip King of France, the two Competitors of Glory in this Siege) that the City of Acon was surrendered upon Articles. Which done, the French King envying the English

King's noble Exploits (though contrary to the French Mens Will) returned into France, having first given Oath to the King of England, that he would well and faithfully keep the Lands and Subjects of King Richard, and neither do Damage to them himself, nor suffer others to do it till Richard's Return. Howbeit, while Richard was busied in the Holy War, the King of France, after his Return home, devised how to trouble and endamage his Dominions, but was hindred by his own Nobles. In England the Peers and People were much discontented at the incredible Insolencies and intolerable Tyrannies of the Chancellor, which tho' King Richard heard of yet kept he himself employed in the War, wherein he performed many Heroick Acts. Within Sight of Jerusalem he encountred Saladin, flew a great Number of his Soldiers, took 3000 Camels, 4000 Horses and Mules, took his Carriage richly laden from Babylon, rescued Joppa, repulsing Saladin from thence. He also essayed to regain Jerusalem, but being in that Enterprize abandoned by the Duke of Burgundy, he was persuaded to accept Saladin's Offer for a Three Year's Truce. Which having concluded, and settled his Affairs in the East, he set sail homeward; where in his Passage his Ships were scatter'd by Tempest, and driven hither and thither, but he happily gaining the Shore hoped, in Disguise as a Merchant, to have free journeying thro' Germany. But he being by the Way overfraught in his Expences, became suspected for another kind of Man than a Merchant; and near to Vienna was discovered, and imprisoned by the Archduke of Austria, under Pretence that he was guilty of the Death of the Marquis Conrade at Tyre. Then the Person of this famous

King being thought too great a Booty for the Duke, was gained into the Emperor's Hands, whose Usage towards him was very cruel, and the Ransom required from him most unreasonable, being 100,000 Marks Sterl. to himself, and 50,000 more to himself and the Duke, besides other Conditions. All which being yielded to, and Engagement given for the Performance, after Fifteen Months Imprisonment, he was set at Liberty, to the great Joy of many Princes in those Parts, and the unspeakable Joy of his own Subjects in general, tho' not of his Brother John, who with the King of France ('tis said) were some Instruments for the procuring of his unhandsome Usage. But Cœur de Lion (escaping the Way-layings of the Emperor, who sent to retake him after his Release) safely landed at Sandwich, whither Hubert Archbishop of Canterbury, that had been with him in the Holy Land, came with a joyful Heart to meet him, whom when the King saw, he dismounted, bowed his Knees, then fell upon the Earth. In like Sort the Bishop lay upon the Ground over-against him, till at last both of them rising up, ran into each others Arms, comforting themselves with mutual Embraces, and weeping for Joy. His Brother John, who had been false to him, upon his Submission he freely forgave, calmly saying unto him, Would that thy Fault may be forgotten of me, as that thyself may keep in Memory what thou hast done. And after this the King restored his forfeited Possessions to his Brother John, who from that Time became faithful to him, and did him very noble Services, especially against the French, with whom Richard then warred. In which Wars, this John, Earl of Morton, and Markadey Captain of the Routs, 1189.

had made an Incurfion up to Beauvais, where the Bishop (being also a Peer of the Royal Blood) valiantly fighting, was taken in the Skirmish, A. B. of armed at all Points, on whose Behalf the Pope wrote somewhat earnestly to King Richard, to set his very dear Son (for so he called the Bishop) at Liberty. The King, in a kind of pleasant Earnestness caused the Habergeon and Cuirasses of the Bishop to be presented the Pope, with this Question, See whether this be thy Son's Coat, or not? Whereupon the Pope replied, That he was neither his Son, nor the Son of the Church, and therefore should be ransomed at the King's Pleasure, because he was rather to be judged a Servitor of Mars, than a Soldier of Christ. In this War with the French, the King, amongst other Victories, obtained one of Fame; taking an Hundred Knights and Servitors on Horseback, and Footmen without Number, thirty Men of Arms, also 200 great Horse, whereof 140 had Barbs and Caparisons armed with Iron. The King in his own Person did most nobly, for with one Spear he threw to the Earth Matthew de Mummerancy, Alan de Rusci, and Fulk de Giferval, and took them. So have we vanquished the King of France at Gysors, howbeit we have not done it, but God and our Right by us, said the King in his Letter to the Bishop of Durham. But the fatal Accident is at Hand, which put an End to this renowned Warrior; for the Viscount of Limoges having found a great Hoard of Silver and Gold, sent a great Part thereof to King Richard, as chief Lord; with which the King being not contented, came with some Forces to the Castle of Chaluz, belonging to the Viscount, where he supposed the Riches were; the Garrison of which Place offered to yield the same to him, 1199. and all therein, if only their Lives and Limbs might be saved; but the King would accept of no Conditions, bidding them to defend themselves as they could, for he would enter by the Sword, and hang them all. Whereupon an Arbalaster standing upon the Wall, and seeing his Time, charged his Steel-bow with a Square Arrow, making first his Prayer to God, that he would direct that Shot, and deliver the Innocency of the Besieged from Oppression; then discharging it, as the King was taking a View of the Castle, mortally wounded him in the left Shoulder, the Anguish and Peril whereof was extremely increased by the Unskilfulness of the Chirurgeon: The Castle by continual Assaults was taken, and by the King's Command none left alive, save this too skilful Archer, who neither denied, nor excused the Fact; but alledged the Necessity of the Case, and the Justice of God in it, for that the King, he said, had slain his Father, and two Brothers, with his own Hands. Yet did the magnanimous King, forgive this Bertram de Guidon the Fact, gave him an hundred Shillings, and set him at Liberty. But Captain Marcadey after the King was dead, took him, flea'd him alive, and then hang'd him. When Cœur de Lion perceived the certain Approach of Death, with Contrition, Confession, and Participation of the Sacrament, he prepar'd himself for another Life, and died of his Wounds, April 6, A. D. 1199. And according to his Command, his Bowels were buried at Charron, amongst the Rebellious Poitevins, as those who had only deserved his worst Parts; his Heart at Roan, as the City which, for her constant Loyalty, had merited the same; and his Corpse was intombed at Font Everard, at the Feet of his Father, to whom he had sometime been disobedient.

He was contracted to Alice, the Daughter of Lewis VII. King of France. He married Berengaria, the Daughter of Sanchez VI. King of Navarre.

His natural Issue were Philip and Isabel.

This Prince is said to have been of such Prowess, that he was more feared and redoubted amongst the Saracens, than ever was any Christian Prince; insomuch that when their little Children at any Time began to cry, the Mothers, to make them hold their Peace, would say to them, King Richard cometh, and will have you.

In the first Year of his Reign, (as some write) he appointed Henry Fitz Alwin to be Mayor of London, that Honourable City having been formerly govern'd by Portgraves, or Portreves. He caused Money to be coined (held in great Request for its Purity) by the Easterlings, a People of Germany, afterward current Money, and called Sterling, from the Easterlings. When this King was in France, one Fulk, a Priest, told him, that he kept three Daughters, which, if he did not dismiss, they would procure him God's Wrath. Why, Hypocrite, says the King, all the World knows that I never had a Child. Yes, said Fulk, you have Three, and their Names are, Pride, Covetousness, and Lechery. Is it so? said the King; you shall see me presently dispose of them. The Knights Templars shall have Pride, the White Monks Covetousness, and the Clergy Lechery; and there have you my three Daughters bestowed amongst you. Now lived Robin Hood, an out-lawed Noble, and Little John, who with an hundred stout Fellows more, molested all Passengers by the Way, yet only robbed and made Prey of the Rich, selling good Pennyworths when they had done.

JOHN

JOHN.

A. D. 1199. JOHN (tho' that Arthur his Brother Jeoffry's Son was living, yet) by the Assistance of his Mother Eleanor and other noble Friends, was by the great Council of the Realm, admitted King. To whom they then swore only a conditional Fealty, viz. To keep Faith and Peace to him, if he would render to every Man their Rights. He was crowned at Westminster by Hubert Archbishop of Canterbury. His Reign throughout was attended with great Troubles: For first, the King of France took upon him to establish young Arthur in the Kingdom, tho' after a while, for his own Advantage, he deliver'd the Prince into his Uncle's Hands. Then the King of Scots procured some Disturbances; but an Accord was shortly made, the two Kings of England and Scotland swearing faithful Love to each other upon the Crosier of Archbishop Hubert. Presently after which, these two Kings, with the King of South-Wales, expressed their great Humility, by helping to carry the Corps of Hugh Bishop of Lincoln, on their Shoulders, to the Place of Interment. Then the Clergy disturbed the Peace, oppugning the King's Royal Title to a Benefice, locking the Church Doors against his Presence, scorning his Princely Letters, fencing the Church with armed Men against his Officers, assailing his Sheriff, moving the Pope to excommunicate all their Opposers; yea, caused the King himself to be accused to the Pope for a Tyrant. The whole Cistercian Order denied the Payments of a Subsidy granted the King. The Canons of Lincoln refused to accept of him for their Bishop, whom the King had appointed in the Place of him deceased. Hubert, Archbishop, called a General Council in his Province without the King's Permission, and then disdained the King's Prohibition thereof. The Lay-Peers they came in also to act a Part, and at a Time when the King stood in need of their Help against the Poitevins and French, refused to attend the King in his Wars against them. Howbeit, King John put forth to Sea, arrived in Normandy, and in Battle overthrew his Nephew Arthur, and by Valour recovered all the Province that had revolted; Prince Arthur, and all the Peers of Poitou, above 200 French Knights, and others of Command, he took Prisoners. Not long after which, young Arthur died, not without Suspicion of Violence; which gave a fresh Occasion to some of the disaffected Peers to bandy against the King, whom the King of France now cited as his Homager for the Dukedom of Normandy, to appear at a set Day to be tried by his Peers upon Point of Murther and Treason. And King John not appearing at the appointed Time, was by the King and Peers of France disinherited and condemned, and according to the Sentence they proceeded against him; and what by the King's Remissness, the Treachery of his People, and Power of his Enemies, he lost a great Part of the strongest Towns and Castles in the French Territories. But the delinquent Peers and Barons King John put to their Fines; and for the carrying on of the Wars against France, had a Subsidy granted him, which moved 1199. the People to think hardly of him.

The King of France, who had been too successful of late against the English, sent a braving Champion over into England, to justify by Duel his Proceedings in King John's French Dominions ; with whom John Curcy, Earl of Ulster, undertook to combat. This Curcy was a Man of Gigantick Limbs and Strength, and of some Conditions not despicable, had they not been savaged with too much Rudeness : Which appear'd not only by his wild Speeches touching the King's Misusage of his Nephew Arthur ; but even then, when the King demanded of him whether he would combat in his Quarrel ; he answer'd, No, not in thy Quarrel, nor for thy Sake ; yet for the Kingdom's Right I will fight to the Death. But this the French Champion never put him to ; for hearing of the Earl's excessive Feeding, and Strength answerable thereto, the Monfieur sneak'd away into Spain, as ashamed to shew his Face again in France. Of Earl Curcy 'tis farther said, that when the two Kings of France and England met together upon a Truce in France, King Philip having heard of Curcy, and that he was in the English Camp, requested of King John that he might see some Experiment of his so much feared and famed Strength. Whereupon an Helmet of excellent Proof, full farced with Mail, was set upon a wooden Block ; when the Earl first lowring round about him, with a dreadful Aspect, lift up his trusty Skeyn, and cleft so deep quite through the steely Resistance, into the knotty Wood, that none there present, save himself, could draw it out again ; which he did with Ease. Then being by the King asked, why he frowned so angrily before he struck ; he answered, That he purposed, if he had failed of his Blow, to have killed them all, both King and the other Spectators. But for all this famous Champion, K. Philip by degrees gained all in Normandy, even Rouen itself. Main, Turin, and Poitou, revolted from K. John, and Angiers was betray'd : All these Losses happened through the Default of some of the English Peers and Prelates. For when the King was in Readiness to take Shipping for Normandy, Hubert the Archbishop forbade him proceeding in the Voyage ; the Peers also again refused to attend him ; Wherefore the King put many of his Earls, Barons, and Knights, yea, and Clergymen also, to a grievous pecuniary Redemption ; and Hubert's Wealth and Possessions (who died the same Year) the King seized on. This Hubert was suspected of too familiar practising with the King of France. Upon the Death of this Archbishop Hubert, the Monks of Canterbury made Choice of Reginald their Sub-Prior, in his Stead ; and the King, after them, of John Grey, Bishop of Norwich, a Man of great Wisdom. But the Pope neglecting both these, recommended Stephen de Langton to the Monks of Canterbury, and Bishops of that Province, to be presently chosen for their Primate. Which the Monks unwilling, and deferring to do, alledging that no Canonical Election could be made at Rome, where was no Consent neither of King nor Convent, the Pope with Choler replied, That he had Plenitude of Power over the Church of Canterbury ; and moreover, that no Consent of Princes used to be expected in Elections where the Pope was. He therefore commanded them, under Pain of his high Curse, to accept him for their Primate : Which all accordingly did, (though not without Murmuring) save one Elias de Brantford. And to work the King into a Compliance hereto, the Pope sent sent him four Gold Rings with four precious Stones, an Emerald, Sapphire, Ruby, and Topaz ; signifying in his Letter sent with them, that the Ring's Roundness must remember him of Eternity, the quadrate Number must mind him of Constancy, and the four Cardinal Virtues, Prudence, Justice, Temperance, and Fortitude. The Gold's Price, of Wisdom ; the Emerald's Greenness of Faith ; the Sapphire's Brightness of Hope ; the Ruby's Redness of Charity ; and the Topaz's Clearness of Sanctity of Life. But King John, for all these fond Toys and fine Words, when he observ'd the Pope's Arbitrariness ; the Dishonour arising to himself, in being frustrated of his Choice ; the prejudice of his Crown, in having a Bishop thrust upon him without Sovereign Consent ; the Hazard to the State in having a French Favourite over the English ; with also the Monks Disloyalty in yielding to the Pope's Election : He first of all prohibited the Monks as Traytors, and after that writ Letters to the Pope, wherein he alledged the Wrongs done to himself, and made his Exceptions against Langton, vowing immutably to stand for his own Election, and to die in Defence of the Liberties of his Crown : Likewise finding the Pope of his great Promises he received from England, meeting withal, that if he were crossed in this, he would then stop all from crossing the Seas to Rome. To which Letters of the King the Pope answered very comminatorily, and shortly after, viz. in A. D. 1208, because the King would be King of his own Dominions, this Servus servorum interdicted the whole Kingdom, under which it lay for the Term of six Years and fourteen weeks without God's Service, or Sacraments, or Christian Burial.

The Lay People were tumbled like Dogs into every Ditch. Howbeit the King to be even with the Pope, proscrib'd the disloyal Clergy, their Revenues he confiscated, their Bishopricks, Abbies, and Priories, he put into Lay-mens Hands, and every where they suffered Wrong, without ordinary Protection of Justice. But some of the eminent Clergy detested the Pope's savage Proceedings, as Philip, Bishop of Durham, and his Successor, and the Bishops of Winchester and Norwich ; they animated the King to condemn the Papal Curse, and the Cistercian Abbots (neglecting the Interdict) continued the Divine Service, till the Pope suspended them for their Contempt. Moreover, the Pope to revenge himself of the King, anathematized him by Name, which caused many to desert his Service ; for which he punish'd them by Fine. Yet at length, the better to secure himself and State, the King was very desirous to come to an Atone-ment, and assured under his Seal, that Archbishop Langton, with the Bishops and Monks, and others, should be restored both to his Favour and their Possessions ; that Holy Church should have all its Franchises, as in Edward the Confessor's Time ; but because he would not make full Satisfaction to the Clergy for all Confiscations, and other Emoluments received of them, the Pope's Nuncio refused a Peace with him. And the Pope was so mad, that he absolved all Kings and People, Poor and Rich, having Dependence on him, from all Fealty and Subjection to him ; whereupon Malecontents set themselves to work Mischief. The Welch fall off from the King ; whereupon at Nottingham he hangs up their Hostages, 28 in Number. His Nobles many of them held themselves discharged of their 1199.

Al-

Allegiance, so rebel, inviting the French King to their Assistance, and promising to settle the English Crown on his Head; Stephen Langton, and other Bishops, implore the Pope's Help to support the Church of England, being at the Point of Ruin. His officious Holiness thereupon decrees, that King John must be deposed, and that he would appoint one more worthy in his Stead. To effectuate which, the Pope sent his Letters to Philip King of France, requiring him to undertake the Affair of dethroning the King of England, and for his Reward he should have Pardon of all his Sins, besides the enjoying of the English Crown to him and his Heirs for ever. Also transmitting his Letters general to all Potentates, Soldiers, Men of War of all Nations, to sign themselves with the Sign of the Cross, and to follow Philip in this Design, assuring all that their Assistance herein, whether in Person or Purse, should be no less meritorious, than if they visited our Saviour's Sepulchre. The King of France accepts the Offer, and makes great Preparation for the invading of England; and King John raises a Land Army, and prepares a Royal Navy to withstand him. But e'er the French made their Attempts, Pandulph, the Pope's Messenger, arrives in England, and so wrought upon the King, what by representing the Danger he was in, and what by flattering Promises, that King John (not insensible of his desperate Estate) sware in all Things to submit to the Judgment of the Church. And shortly after, at the Knights Templars House in Dover, he surrendered his Crown into the Hands of Pandulph, for the Use of the Pope, laying at his Feet his Scepter, Robe, Sword, and Ring, and subscribed to a Charter, where- by he resigned his Kingdom to the Pope; professing he did it neither through Fear or Force, but of his own free Will, as having no other Way to satisfy God and the Church for his Offence: And that from that Time forward he would hold his Crown of the Pope, paying Pension annually of a Thousand Marks for the Kingdoms of England and Ireland. Pandulph now having gotten what he came for, hasted for France, there to dissuade Philip from proceeding against King John, as being become an obedient and reconciled Son of the Church. But Philip, who was not of his Holy Father's Mind, not caring for King John's Repentance, but his Crown in great Choler professed, that since the Pope himself had so far thrust him on, his Legate's Suggestions, no, nor his Threats of Excommunication, should withdraw him from his Intentions. In which Resolution, calling his Peers into Consultation, they all approved his Design, save Ferdinand, Earl of Flanders, who alledged, that it was an unreasonable Thing to think of invading another Man's Right; enforcing this his Judgment with good Arguments, that thereby many of the Peers were induced to change their Opinion. Which incensed King Philip, that he drew his Forces against Flanders, commanding his mighty prepared Fleet to set forward thitherward. Of the which King John having speedy Intelligence, set forth his Navy, and happily surprized the French Fleet at the Port of Damme (where most of the Soldiers were on Land spoiling the Earl's Country) taking Three hundred Vessels laden with Provisions, Arms, and other costly Freight, and burning and sinking above 100. And now the King, thinking to take the Advantage of this Victory, made ready a great Army

John Surrendring his Crown to the Pope's Nuncio. p. 74

Eleanor sucking Poyson out of her Husband's Wound. p. 85.

Army f ditary but wh
the Ba rendanc Excom ancient Henry I Langton
mising them.
his Ap Pope swer to Legate who w roberat Kingde
the Kin shop of against
of the
be an c World
it was could n ment b such T ould such 7 Liveli
The Po conceiv the A authen Interdi Marks that b Years
King reduce his Po old Cu his gr his Bar renewi binding at the ary,
King

Army for the Recovery of his hereditary Provinces lost to the French; but when all else was ready, then the Barons denied him their Attendance, till he was assailed of his Excommunication; and that their ancient Liberties, granted them by Henry I. were restored: Stephen Langton animating herein, and promising his faithful Assistance to them. Hereupon the King makes his Appeal to Rome, presenting the Pope with rich Presents; in Answer to which, the Pope sent his Legate, the Bishop of Tusculum, who wrought with the King to corroborate the Conveyance of his Kingdoms to the Pope; unto which the King yielded. But the Archbishop of Canterbury opposed himself against him, with whom the Peers of the Land joined, avowing it to be an execrable Thing to the whole World. And in a full Parliament it was enacted, That since the King could not without Consent of Parliament bring his Realm and People to such Thralldom; therefore if the Pope should in the future attempt any such Thing again, with Life and Livelihood he should be withstood. The Pope hearing of this, not only conceived exceeding Hatred against the Archbishop; but sent also his authentick Letters for repealing the Interdict, upon Restitution of 1300 Marks more to the Prelates, and that but by equal Portions of five Years Payment. And now the King passed into Poitou, which he reduced; thence into Britain, where his Poictouvins, according to their old Custom proved false to him, to his great Detriment. The while his Barons they play Rex at home, renewing their Confederacies, and binding themselves with an Oath, at the High Altar at St. Edmond's-bury, That they would pursue the King with Arms, till he should consent to the Charter of Liberties, granted by Henry I. So that the King was forced to return into England; where, when come, they challenged this Charter as a Part of his Oath made at his Absolution, and shortly after they met together at Stamford with a very numerous Army. Their General was Robert Fitz Walter, whom they stiled the Marshal of God's Army and Holy Church. London invited them to enter the City by Night; where, when entred, by their threatening Letters, they not only drew most of the Nobles from the King, but had also almost lock'd him out of his Royal Seat, insomuch that he was necessitated by gentle Messages to procure of his Factious Barons a Place and Day of Meeting, which was Running Mead, betwixt Windsor and Stains (since called Council-Mead) whither they came with armed Multitudes out of all the Kingdom, numberless. Where the King perceiving their so great Strength, and his own small Party, he granted them the utmost of their Desires, not only for Liberties specified in Magna Charta, and Charta Forestæ, but also for a Kind of Rule in the Government, by 25 selected Peers, to whose Command all the other Barons were also bound by Oath to be obedient. But the King could not long relish this; therefore privately sends to his trustiest Friends to fortify and victual their Castles, and himself secretly retires into the Isle of Wight. From whence he dispatched Messengers, both to the Pope and his foreign Friends, to crave the Censure of the One, and Succours of the Other, against such outrageous Rebels. In both which his Agents were so sedulous, and Friends compassionate, that at Rome by definitive Sentence the Barons Charters were made void, the King and 1199.

and Barons accursed, if either of them observ'd the Composition made at Council Mead. And from Flanders, Gascoign, Brabant, and other Parts, such competent Aids came in as encouraged the King, after three Months Secresy, to shew himself in the Face of his Enemies. His Host divided into two Parts; with the one, conducted by himself Northward, he every where subdued his Rebels, as likewise did the Earl of Salisbury Southward. Stephen Langton the Pope suspended for abetting the Barons; and his Brother Simon Langton, Archbishop Elect to York, had his Election made void, the Pope constituting in his Place Walter Gray, whose Pall cost him no less than 1000 Pounds. (The Archiepiscopal Pall is a Pontifical Vestment made of Lambs-Wool, as it comes from the Sheep's Back, without any other artificial Colour, and spun by a peculiar Order of Nuns, cast into St. Peter's Tomb, and adorned with little black Crosses, having two Labels hanging down before and behind; which the Archbishops, when going to the Altar, put upon their Necks, above their own Pontifical Ornaments.) The disloyal Barons were all excommunicated by Name, and all their Lands, together with the City of London, interdicted. But the lofty Barons held those Censures in so high Contempt, that they decreed neither themselves nor Citizens of London should observe them, nor the Prelates denounce them. And to revive their dying Cause, they resolve on a Project for betraying the Crown of England unto Lewis the Dauphin of France, sending their Letters of Allegiance, confirmed with all the Barons Seals, to implore King Philip's Favour for sending his Son; and to his Son, for the Acceptance of the English Crown. To prevent a Correspondency herein, the Pope sends his Apostolical Commands to Philip of France, that he should stay his Son from entring upon St. Peter's Patrimony, with a Curse also on all such as should assist the excommunicated Barons. To which Philip replied, That England was not the Patrimony of St. Peter's; no King saith he, having of himself Power to alienate his Kingdom, King John especially, who never being lawful King, had no Power to dispose thereof; and that it was an Error and pernicious Example in the Pope, and an itching Lust after a new Kind of Domination. His Peers swore, That they would spend their Blood, rather than suffer that a King should of himself, or with a few Flatterers, pass over his Crown and enthrall its Nobles, especially to the Pope, who should follow St. Peter's Steps to win Souls, and not to meddle with Wars, and Murthers of Men's Bodies. And Prince Lewis declared, That he would choose rather to be excommunicated by the Pope, than to falsify his Promise to the English Barons. So without more ado, he speedily set forth for England, with his Fleet of 600 Ships, and 80 Boats, which coming to Shoar in Kent, the Barons joined Forces with him. King John, whose Army consisted most of stipendiary Foreigners, thought it best for a Time to forbear Battle with Lewis, and not to commit his whole Fortunes to the Hazard of their sudden Defection; therefore drew towards Winchester. Lewis marching forward towards London, taking all the strong Holds in his Way (excepting Dover Castle kept by the valiant and faithful Hubert de Burgo) London received Lewis, the Citizens swearing Truth to him; so did the Barons at Winchester; Lewis swearing to them That he would restore all Men their Right, and recover to the Crown whatsoever had been lost by King John. All or most Places where the French Prince came, submitted to him. At Ostiam Castle indeed, wherein were but 13 English Men, Lewis and his whole Army was not only braved 15 Days, but also falling forth upon them, every one took an Enemy, retreating the Castle at last upon honourable Terms. King John in other Parts of the Realm, with a very considerable Host, ruined the Barons Castles and Possessions. But setting forth from Lynn in Norfolk, where for their faithful Services, he bestowed large Franchises, and his own Sword, and a gilt Bowl, with a full Resolution to give Lewis Battle; as he was passing the Washes with his Army towards Lincolnshire, all his Carriages, Treasures, and Provisions, were irrecoverably lost, himself and Army hardly escaping. And now by this Time the Barons were struck with some Remorse to see their native Country, by their Procurement, so miserably wasted and afflicted; and what grieved them the most, was, that their faithful Services to Lewis were but slightly regarded by him at present, and were like to be ill repayed in the future; for Viscount de Melun, a Noble Frenchman, had on his Death-bed privately discovered to them, how that Lewis had sworn, That if over England's Crown was settled on his Head, he would condemn to perpetual Exile all the disloyal Barons, as Traytors to their Sovereign, and extirpate all their kindred. Forty of the Barons therefore presently addressed their Letters of submissive Suit to the King, but he was dead before the Messenger came. Some say he died of a Flux, some say of a Surfeit; but the most report, that he died of poison; for King John coming, say they, from the Washes to Swinhead-Abby, and there taking Notice, as he sat at Meat, of their too prodigal Provision, he swore, That if he lived but half a Year longer, he would make one Halfpenny Loaf as dear as Twelve. To prevent which, a Monk presented him with an envenom'd Cup, tasting thereof himself; so becoming the wicked Instrument of his own and Sovereign's Death, October 9, 1216. He was buried at Worcester.

He was first married to Alice, the Daughter to Humbert II. Earl of Maurien, now Savoy; next to Isabel, or Avis, Daughter of William Earl of Gloucester, Son of Earl Robert, the Natural Son of King Henry I. then next to Isabel the Daughter of Almer, Earl of Angoulesme, by whom he had Issue Henry, Richard; Joan, married to Alexander II. King of Scots; Eleanor, married to William Marshal, the younger Earl of Pembroke, and after his Death, married to Simon Monford, Earl of Leicester; Isabel, married to the Emperor Frederick II.

Base Issue, Jeffrey Fitz-Roy, Richard, and Jane. He appointed those excellent Forms of Civil Government in the Cities and Incorporate Towns of England, endowing them also with their greatest Franchises. He settled the Rates and Measures for Wine, Bread, Cloth, and such like Necessaries of Commerce. He planted English Laws and Officers in Ireland. Now lived one Simon Thurvey, who for his Pride in Learning, especially for his Blasphemies against Moses and Christ, became so utterly ignorant, that he could hardly read one Letter in the Book.

In or near the Year 1176, London-Bridge was begun to be built of Stone, by Peter of Colechurch, Priest; and was finished in A. D. 1209. Shortly after which, a great Fire 1216. Fire happened upon the Bridge, sons were destroyed by Means thereof.

HENRY III.

Richard Magnus,
A. B. of
Cant.

A. D. 1216. Henry III. at about Ten Years of Age, was crowned King, the 9th Day after his Father King John's Decease, the Earl of Pembroke being, by common Consent of Peers and Prelates, constituted Guardian of him during his Non-age. This Noble Earl set out against Lewis, and at Lincoln utterly deated his Army; which Discomfiture was called Lewis Fair, from the great Spoil that the Earl's Soldiers took from the Lewisians, and City of Lincoln. Here the chiefest of the malignant Barons were taken, with about 400 Knights, besides Esquires, and of other Sorts innumerable. A great Number also of such as escaped out of the Fight, were knocked on the Head by the Country People. Likewise about the same Time a fresh Supply of Men and Money coming from France, were scattered, sunk, and taken by the English Fleet, the English in the Engagement using unflaked Lime, which they threw into the Faces of the Monsieurs, blinding their Sight therewith. Then to give no Rest to Lewis's declining Fortunes, the Earl of Pembroke closely besieged London with Lewis in it, where he brought the Matter to Capitulation. The Heads whereof were, That Lewis and the Barons should submit to the Judgment of the Church, whose Censure they had long contemned. That Lewis should depart the Land, and never return with Design to do Harm. That he should endeavour with his Father, that all such Things that belong to the English Crown might be restored and that when Lewis himself should be King, he should peaceably part with them. That Lewis should immediately render to King Henry all Holds and Places taken in the War; for the Performance of all which Lewis took his Oath. On the other Part, the King, Legate Wallo, and the Barons swore, That the King should restore to the Barons and others, all their Rights and Inheritances, with their Liberties, formerly demanded of King John. That none of the Lords should suffer Damage and Reproach for taking Part on either Side. That Prisoners should be released. This done, Wallo absolved Lewis and his Adherents, and Lewis took his Leave of England. Yet was not England quiet long, for William Earl of Aumael, Foulk de Brent, and Robert de Viepont, with others, committed divers furious Riots, the Church and State being grown into such Disorder, that every Man desired to attempt in either, what his own Audaciousness should suggest. The Welch they made some Stir. And one Fitz Armulph, a Citizen of London, attempted to set up Lewis again; for the which himself and two others were hanged, and many more had their Hands or Feet cut off. The Barons they were high for a Confirmation of their Liberties. And Lewis of France, upon the Death of his Father, seized Roches and the whole Country of Poitou (which belonged to the King of England) into his Hands; under Pretence, that King Henry, an Heir rger for Aquitain, was not present at his Coronation, nor yet excused his Absence by Ambassadors. Whereupon Henry summons a Parliament for Aid to recover his Losses, which being granted, he sent over his Forces, which discomfited the French. But the King necessitated for more Monies for carrying on of his Design in Gascony, wrung from the Londoners Five Thousand Mark above their Fifteenths; alledging, that they had his Prejudice given Lewis the same Sum. The Clergy also were compelled under Pain of Papal Censure, to pay the Fifteenth, not only of their Temporals, but also Ecclesiastical Goods: And by Advice of Hubert de Burgo, Chief Justice, the King revoked the Charters of Liberties, which for above two Years had been practised through the Realm, pretending his Non-age when granted. Which caused in all a great Heart-burning against Hubert. Howbeit, the King was well furnished with Money and Men, which he caused to be transported into Britain; and on the same Day in which he set Sail from England, himself in Person did visit the Poor and Feeble, dealing large Alms to them, and not refusing to kiss the Sick and Leprous. But before that the King had Opportunity to effect any thing in those parts considerable, the Irish rebelled, constraining him to return, to reduce them into Order. Which when he had done, he advanced against the Welch, whom he also repressed, tho' not without considerable Loss. About this time Hubert de Burgo, Earl of Kent, was accused by the Bishop of Winchester, and others, for the committing of many great Crimes: As, that he did detain the Duke of Austria from marrying his Daughter with the King, who sought it: That he said, that the King was a squint-ey'd Fool, a kind of Leper, deceitful, perjur'd, more faint-hearted than a Woman: That he had hindered the King from entring upon foreign Lands belonging to him, whereby the King's Peers and People consumed their Treasures vainly: That he had enticed the King of Scots Daughter, and traiterously defiled the Noble young Lady, whom he married in hope to be King of Scotland in her Right, if she survived her Brother: That he had stolen out of the Jewel-House a precious Stone of such wonderful Virtue, as to make him that had it invincible in Battle, and had bestowed that Stone upon Lewellin, Prince of Wales, the King's Enemy, &c. But the Earl doubting that he should not have a fair Tryal, retired himself into Essex, whither he was prosecuted by armed Men, and in a Chapel at Bruntwood was apprehended; out of which the rude Soldiers haled him, and sent for a Smith to make Shackles for him; which when the Smith understood that they were for him, fetching a deep Sigh, he said, Do with me what you please, and God have Mercy on my Soul; but as sure as the Lord lives, I will never make Iron Shackles for him, but will rather die the worst Death that is. For is not this the most Loyal and Courageous Hubert, who so often hath preserved England from being destroyed by Strangers, and restored England to England? Let God be judge between him and you, for using him so unjustly and inhumanly, requiting his most excellent Deserts with the worst Recompence that can be. Notwithstanding all this, Sir Godfrey de Crancomb, who commanded the Party, bound the Earl, and convey'd him to the Tower of London, where he had not

1216. not long been, e'er the Bishop of London procured his Liberty, tho' shortly after he was again imprisoned. In his Place the King elected for his Counsellor and Confident, Peter de Rupibus, Bishop of Winchester, who displaced the English Officers; and in their Rooms placed Poictouvins and Britons, stuffing the King's Castles with them, intrusting, as it were, the Treasures, Strength, and Realm itself in their Hands, to the great Discontent of the English Peers, who now confederated against the Strangers, and refused, upon the King's Summons, to appear in Parliament; sending this bold Message to their Sovereign, That if out of Hand he removed not the Bishop of Winchester, and Strangers out of his Court, they all of them, by the common Consent of the Kingdom, would drive him and his wicked Counsellors out of it, and would consult about creating of a new King. Whereupon the King, animated by Winchester, commanded the Earl Marshal, with all others whom he suspected, to appear at Gloucester, where the King was with an Army: Which they refusing to do, the King burnt their Manors, and gave away their Inheritances to Poictouvins. The Earl Marshal contracts strict Amity with Lewellin Prince of Wales, and made great Spoil on the Possessions of the King's reputed Seducers. Shrewsbury he sack'd and burnt. Gilbert, Lord Basset, the Earl's great Confederatè, set Fire on Aikmundbury, not far from Huntingdon. But the Earl Marshal having crossed the Seas into Ireland, there to recover his Lands, taken from him by the Fraud of the Bishop of Winchester, was there wounded to Death; for whose Loss the King, to the Wonder of all that saw it, broke forth into Tears, affirming, That he left no Peer about him in the Kingdom. And now the Bishop of Winchester, hated of the People, was commanded by the King not to meddle any further in State Matters. And against Peter Rivallis, Lord Treasurer, the King was so enraged that he swore he would pluck out his Eyes, were it not for Reverence of Holy Orders. And by the Workings of the Bishops, an Accord was effected betwixt the King and his Peers, and the Poictouvins were commanded to depart the Realm. Howbeit, the Land was not yeased of its Oppressors and Oppressions; for the Pope sent over into England Three Hundred Romans, requiring to have the first Benefices that should become vacant, to be bestowed on them; requiring also great Sums of Money of the Clergy for Maintenance of the Pope's War against the Emperor: Which the Clergy at first opposed, yet were forced to yield unto it at last. The Pope himself had a Mind to have come hither in his own Person, but the King's Council liked not thereof, alledging, that the Romans Rapines and Simonies had enough stained England's Purity, tho' the Pope himself came not personally to spoil and prey upon the Wealth of the Church.

About the Year 1240. Richard Earl of Cornwall, the King's Brother, with the Earls of Pembroke, Chester, Lincoln, Salisbury, and many other honourable Persons, departed for the Holy Land, and in A. D. 1242, the King passed the Seas to recover Poictou, but effected not any thing remarkable, though he expended great Store of Treasure. Upon his Return into England, he was therefore compelled to be burdensome to his Subjects for recruiting of his exhausted Treasure.

as well by the Levy of Escuage, as of Loan and otherwise. The Jews, in especial Manner, were made sensible of his Wants. Too much of their Money, thus raised, 'tis said, he expended in Entertainments and Shows; tho' afterwards the King reflecting on his former Profuseness, in Gifts and Entertainments, he shortened the Allowances of his Household and Entertainments, without any Regard to Majesty. And to spare his own Charges the more, he invited himself now to this Man's House, now to that; but no where contenting himself with his Welcome, unless himself and his Queen, Son Edward, yea, and chief Favourites, were presented with costly Gifts. 'Tis said, that he was sometimes reduced to that Penury, that he was forced to live upon the Alms of the Church. This King designed, at least pretended, to go for the Holy Land, when the Parliament granted him large Aids upon this Condition, That at this Time, once for all, he should submit himself to govern by Law, and confirm the Charter of Liberties, or Magna Charta: Against the Breakers whereof a most solemn Curse was pronounced. The King swearing to keep all Liberties, upon Pain of that execratory Sentence, 'As he was a Man, a Christian, a Knight, and a King, anointed and crowned.' Yet, notwithstanding his Oath and the Curse, the King, two or three Years after, caused the Tenth of all England and Ireland to be collected for his own Use and the Pope's, the Pope having given the Kingdom of Sicily to his Son Edmund; but the English Subjects were first to win it for him; which the Nobles peremptorily denied the attempting, there being Occasion enough for Money and Men at Home, the Welsh having risen in Rebellion: 1257. Against whom Prince Edward was sent, who, tho' he wanted not Courage, yet in one Battle lost 2000 of Abing-English Men, and was beaten out of the Field. A. B. of Cant.

In A. D. 1257, was Richard Earl of Cornwall, the King's Brother, elected King of the Romans, and was crowned at Aquisgrane, having paid a large Sum of Money for the Honour. At this Time the Earl was reputed to possess so much ready Coin, as would every Day, for ten Years, afford him an hundred Marks upon the main Stock, besides his Rents and Revenues in Germany, and the English Dominions.

And now the King relapsed into his own Profuseness, and favouring of the Poictouvins, and other Foreigners; the Nobles hereupon came exquisitely armed to the Parliament, holden at Oxford, with a Resolution to force the King and his Aliens to their Proposals; which were, That the King should unfeignedly keep the Charter of Liberties: That such an one should be in Place of Justiciary, who would judge all impartially: That the Foreigners should be expelled the Realm: And that Twenty-four Persons should there be chosen, to have the sole Administration of King and State, and yearly appointing of all great Officers; reserving to the King the Ceremonies of Honour; binding themselves by Oath to see these Things performed, and the King and Prince swearing to observe the Ordination of these disloyal Barons, who had, by an Edict given out, high Menacings against all that should resist. The Poictouvins were so terrified by these violent Proceedings, that they fled into France. The giddy People joined with the Barons, as the Assertors of their Liberties; the Londoners

1257. doner's bound themselves under their publick Seal, to assist them in the common Cause: Richard, King of the Romans, the Barons would not suffer to come into England, but in a private Manner, with a very small Train; and being landed, they exacted an Oath of him; and upon Pain of forfeiting all his Lands in England, bound him to join with them in reforming the State, which they factiously had assumed to do, having appointed four Knights Commissioners in every Shire, to enquire of all Oppressions, and to certify the same to them. And the better to strengthen their Cause, Simon Montford, Earl of Leicester, Head of the Factionists, with others, passed into France, there to transact with the King thereof, as to an indissoluble League. About which Time, King Henry, for want of Money, or good Council, or both, was induced, upon no very good Terms, for ever to renounce to the King of France all his Right to Normandy, Anjou, Tourain, Main, and Poitou. But the Fire which had been long in blowing, did now break out into a Flame; the King and his Barons taking Arms against each other. Simon de Montford executes his greatest Revenge on the Queen's Friends, who were Aliens; not sparing the King's, who were Free-born Englishmen. Yet at length a mutual Weariness inclines Henry and his Barons to Peace; and the King is willing that the Statutes of Oxford should be in Force; but the Queen was unwilling; which being known to the Londoners, it put the baser Sort into so lewd a Rage, that she being to shoot the Bridge from the Tower towards Windsor, where Prince Edward was ingarrisoned, they with Dirt and Stones, and villainous Words, forced her back to the Tower. Howbeit at London, in a Parliament there held, Matters were pieced up, though shortly after all was rent again, both Sides making fresh Preparations for War. King Henry drew towards Oxford, where the Rendezvous of his Friends and Forces were appointed; from which University he dismissed all the Students, being above Fifteen Thousand, of those only whose Names were entred into the Matriculation Book. Whereupon many of them went to the Barons to Northampton, whither Henry came, and breaking in at the Town-Walls, encountred his Enemies, amongst whom these Students of Oxford had a Banner by themselves, advanced right against the King, and did more annoy him in the Fight, than the rest of the Barons Forces: Which the King (who at length prevailed) vowed sharply to revenge; but was dissuaded by his Counsellors, who told him, that those Students were the Sons and Kindred of the great Men of the Land, whom if he punished, even the Nobles, that now stood for him, would take Arms against him.

The King, encouraged by this Success, advanced his Royal Standard towards Nottingham, burning and wasting the Barons Lands wheresoever he came. The Barons sent Letters to him, protesting their loyal Observance to his Person, but all Hostility to their Enemies who were about him. To which the King returned them a full Defiance, as to Traytors, professing that he took the Wrong of his Friends as his own, and their Enemies as his. At length the two Armies met and engaged in Fight, wherein Prince Edward bravely behaved himself, putting the Londoners to Flight, pursuing them four Miles; but in the mean while, his Father having having his Horse slain under him, yielded himself Prisoner; the King of the Romans, and other great Peers were taken, and the whole Hope of the Day lost on the King's Side. On the next Day Peace was concluded for the present, on Condition, that Prince Edward, and Henry the King of the Romans Son, should also render themselves into the Barons Hands. And now by this Advantage the seditious Lords gained all the chief Castles of the Kingdom into their Power, Montford carrying his Sovereign as his Prisoner about the Country, (yet with all outward Respect and Honour) the rather to procure a more quiet Surrender of Garrisons. So fortunate may Treason and Rebellion for a Time be, tho' in the End it commonly speeds as it deserves. To tame these Rebels, the Pope sends his Cardinal Legate to excommunicate them; but they trusting to the Temporal Sword, made light of the Spiritual. Howbeit to the King's great Advantage, there happened so irreconcilable a Difference betwixt the two great Earls of Leicester and Gloucester, that the latter forsook the Barons Cause, and joined himself with Roger de Mortimer, and his Associates, to whom, not long after, Earl Warren, and William de Valence, Earl of Pembroke, with other Peers, joined themselves, and Prince Edward escaping, came in Safety to them; the Counties of Hereford, Worcester, Salop, and Chester coming to their Assistance. When the Prince, having a considerable strength, marched against Montford, on hearing of the Prince's Advance, encamped at Evesham, where Prince Edward inclosed him, compelling him either to fight, or yield. The first of which he elected, both Armies joining Battle before the Town of Evesham, where the Earl's Host was, with much Slaughter, especially of the Welsh, utterly in the End distressed and discomfited. Simon de Montford being slain in the Fight, had his Head, Hands, and Feet chop'd off. The King, who had been brought a Prisoner into the Field, by his Friends Valour and good Hap was restored to his Liberty: And he, presently after this cruel Battle, call'd a Parliament at Winchester, by whose Approbation he seized into his Hands the Charters of London, and other disloyal Towns, disinherited such as were on the Earl's Side, and distributed their Estates amongst his well-deserving Subjects. The Legate Cardinal Ottobon excommunicated the Bishops of London, Winchester, Worcester, and Chichester, for their adhering unto the Earl. And now all things being calm in England, Prince Edward, with many of the Nobles, took the Cross upon them for the Holy Land. And the King, to secure the Nation's Peace, held a Parliament at Marlborough, where the Statutes of Marlborough were enacted. But King Henry having been at Norwich, to punish the Citizens Outrage in burning the Priory Church, he in his Return, fell grievously sick at the Abby of St. Edmund in Suffolk, and there died in A. D. 1272, and was buried at Westminster. His Wife was Eleanor, the Daughter of Raymond Earl of Provence. His Issue was Edward, Edmund surnamed Crouchback, Richard, who died young; as also John, William, and Henry. Margaret, married to Alexander III. King of Scotland; Beatrice, married to John the First, Duke of Bretain; Katharine, who died young. This King laid the first Stone of the new Work of the Abby Church of Westminster. He founded the House of Converts, where such as forsook 1272. the Jewish Religion had Provisions for Maintenance. He also erected and endowed a famous Hospital at Oxford, both for the Entertainment of Foreigners and Pilgrims, and for Relief of such as were diseased. He was so disposed to performing Acts of Charity, that he made Leo-line Prince of Wales, (Montford's Confederate) when he has threatened hardly, if he would not live in Peace, to answer thus: I more fear the Alms-Deeds of the King, than all the Men of War which he hath, and the Clergy to boot. King Henry, because Thomas de la Linde killed a white Hart at Blackmore Forest, which he much fancied, set a perpetual Fine upon the Land, which at this Day is called White Hart Silver.

In the 17th Year of his Reign, four Mock Suns were seen from Morning to Evening; after which followed so great a Dearth, that People were forced to eat Horse-Flesh and Barks of Trees; and in London twenty Thousand were famished. In this Famine, which was about A. D. 1235, certain poor People of Aboldestia (so called then) in Cambridgeshire, whilst Corn was green, pluck'd the Ears in the common Fields to sustain their Lives; whereupon the Owners call upon and compel the Priest to curse them all; but one amongst them, more human than the rest, adjured the Priest, in the Name of God, to exempt his Corn from the Sentence, saying, It pleased him well that the Poor for their Necessity had took of his Corn; and so commended that which they had left to God, who miraculously preserved it, when as all the other Corn (amongst which his grew) was utterly destroyed by terrible Lightning, Wind, Hail and Rain, whilst the Priest was about to denounce the Curse. A. D. 1241, certain Jews of Norwich were hang'd for the Circumcising a Christian Child, and their House called the Thor destroyed. A Scholar of Oxford, who attempted to kill the King in his Chamber at Woodstock, was pulled in Pieces by wild Horses. Now arose in England a monstrous Impostor, who pretended himself to be Christ, procuring himself to be wounded in the Hands, Feet, and Side, thinking thereby the more easily to delude the People; his Punishment was immuring between two Walls, together with an old Hag, pretending herself to be the Virgin Mary, there to pine to Death.

In this King's Reign flourished in England, the irrefragable Doctor Alexander de Hales, who was School-Master to the Angelick Doctor Thomas Aquinas. Now also lived Robert Grosbead, Bishop of Lincoln, called Romanorum Malleus, who wrote boldly against the Pope, reproving his arrogant (to call them no worse) Practices.

At Sorbiodinum, or Salisbury, Richard Poor, then Bishop of Salisbury, built that stately Church, which hath in it as many Windows as are Days in the Year; as many Marble Pillars as Hours; as many Doors as Months.

Magna Charta, containing the Sum of all the written Laws of England, was ordained in the Ninth Year of Henry III. The Walls and Bulwarks raised about the Tower of London were thrown down by an Earthquake. Eighteen Jews were executed for crucifying a Child at Lincoln. And in London were slain of Jews to the Number of 700, their Wares spoiled, and their Synagogues defaced, because a Jew would have forced one Christian Man to have paid more than Two-pence the Week for the Use of Twenty Shillings.

Christ called polar kill the od/jack d Hor a mod retend ocuring Hands hereby ne Peo muring r with f to be ine to hed in Doctr school or The d Re n, cal wrote roving worke

, Re
aram, h hath Days
e Pl ors as g the Eng

Nim ls and wer of py- as were ild at e thin 700 Syn would an to ce the Shil

E D

The Welch-men Submitting to an Engl. Prince Born among them

Crosses erected in Honour of Q Eleanor where her Hearse rested

EDWARD I.

D. Edward, surnamed Long- shanks, at his Father Henry's Death, was employed in the Holy Wars, wherein so excellently behaved himself, that he gained the Repute of a most valiant Soldier. At Acon an Assassin wounded him with a poisoned knife; which Wound his Queen Eleanor daily licked with her tongue, till therewith the Poison was extracted, and the Wound healed; herself receiving no Harm thereby. When the News of his Father's Death came to his Ears, he grieved much more than for the Death of his Son, who died little before, saying to the King of Sicily, who wondered thereat, That the Loss of Sons is of little light, because they are multiplied every Day; but the Death of Parents is irremediable, because they can never be had again. At his Arrival in England, he was most joyfully welcomed, and with his dearest E- leanor was crowned at Westminster by Robert Kilwarby, Archbishop of Canterbury. When for the more royal Celebration of the Coronation Feast of so martial a Prince, there were Five hundred great Horses let loose, every one to take them for his own, who could. The first matter of Remark done by King Edward, after his Coronation, was the subduing of Wales, whose Prince Llewellyn, the last Prince of Britains
Good, had refused to do him Homage; but being slain, his Head, crowned with Ivy, was set upon the Tower of London. In his Stead the King created his own Son Ed- ward (whom he caused to be born at Caernarvon) Prince of Wales. To whom the Welsh patiently submitted,

as being a Prince born in their Nation; and the ancient Race of their Princes being extinguished, they acknowledg'd the Sovereignty of Eng- land, and did Homage to this Prince.
 Thus Wales being settled in Quiet,
 the King repaired into France, where he sat in Person with the French King in his Parliament at Pa- ris as a Peer of that Realm, in respect of such Lands as he held in those Parts; and being returned into Eng- land, he addressed himself to purge his State from the Oppressions under which it groaned. Fifteen Thousand of the extorting Jews he banished out of the Land, confiscating their Goods. His corrupt Justiciars he displaced, and fined, and constrained all his Justices to swear, that from that Time, they would take no Fee, Pension or Gift of any Man, except only a Breakfast, or like Present.
 He also appointed, that Justices Itinerant should go their several Circuits at such certain Times of the Year. And now the Crown of Scot- land, by the Death of Alexander the Third, being destitute of any apparent Heir, by the Umpirage of King Edward, it was settled on the Head of John Baliol, who did Homage to Edward (against the Minds of the Scots) for the whole Kingdom of Scotland. But shortly after, Baliol, to regain the Affections of his People, combined with the French against the English: Wherefore the King advanced against the Scots with a puissant Army, drove the Scots out of the North Parts of England, where they had done much Mischief, took Berwick Town and Castle, had Dunbar yielded to him, and after a cruel Fight, obtained a Victory of 1272. great Importance; took the Castle of Roxbrow, had Edinburgh rendred to him, so brought Baliol to sue for John Peckham, Mercy; which was granted on Condition that the Scots should submit to him as their Sovereign. And accordingly the Nobles of Scotland, at a Parliament holden at Berwick, did swear to be true Subjects to Edward for ever after; and hereof a solemn Instrument was there sealed by them. John the late King was sent to the Tower of London, and the Custody of Scotland was com-

John Peckham,
A. B. of
Cant.

mitted to John de Warren, Earl of Surry and Sussex. Out of Edinburgh Edward took the Crown, Scepter, and Cloth of State, burnt their Records, abrogated their Laws, altered the Form of their Divine Service, transplanted their learned Men unto Oxford. The Marble Chair in the Abby of Schone, wherein the Kings of Scotland were wont to be crowned, he sent unto Westminster. This is the Chair upon which was engraven the famous propheticall Distich:

Ni fallat fatum, Scoti quocunque locatum Invenient lapidem, regnare tenentur ibidem.

That the Scots should reign where-soever that Chair should be; verified in King James. But King Edward drawn beyond the Seas, by occasion of Wars in Gascoign, and for Aid of Friends in Flanders, one William Wallis, Captain of the discontented Scots, put Earl Warren to Flight in Scotland, and all the English Forces that were with him, taking them at an Advantage as they were passing over a narrow Bridge near Striveling, where the Slaughter of the English was not small. Hugh de Cressingham, Treasurer of Scotland for King Edward was there slain; whose dead Body the Scots did flea, dividing his Skin amongst them. But King Edward being returned into England, he summon'd a Parliament to York, giving the Scots a Day to appear at it; which they not doing, nor acknowledging that they ought so to do, he entred Scotland with a mighty Army, where when he was near the Enemy, as he was putting his Foot into the Stirrup, his Horse being affrighted with the sudden Shout of the Scotch Army, threw him down, and striking with his Heels, broke two of the King's Ribs, who nevertheless proceeded to Battle. Capt. Wallis encouraged his Men with this short Speech; I have brought you to the King, hop gif ye kun. In this Battle, fought at a Place called Faw Kirk, the English slew of the Scots 70,000. After which Victory, King Edward took sundry Places in Scotland, then returned into England, where in a Parliament holden at London and Stamford, he confirmed Magna Charta, and Charta de Foresta, and yielded that there should be no Subsidy or Taxation levied upon the People, without Consent of the Prelates, Peers, and People. And for the more ample Satisfaction of some then discontented, he left out this Clause in the End of his Grants, Salvo jure Coronæ nostræ, Saving the Right of our Crown. Upon the Pope's Request he set John late King of Scotland at Liberty, who departed into France. And then the King made it his whole Affair to finish the Annexation of Scotland to the Crown of England; to which End, he passed with a dreadful Army into Scotland, where the Scots not being able to withstand him by Force of Arms, procured inhibitory Letters from the Pope; but these the King set et Light by, swearing per sanguinem Dei, that he would not desert. And when the Scots threatened, that if he would not desert his Hostility, the Pope would take the Matter upon him; the King, with a disdainful Smile, answered, Have ye done Homage to me as to the chief Lord of the Kingdom of Scotland; and do you now suppose that I can be terrify'd with threatening Lies, as if (like one that had no Power to compel) I would let the Right which I have, to go out of my Hand? Let me hear no more of this; for if I do, I swear by the Lord, I will consume all Scotland from Sea to Sea. To which the Scots replied, That in Defence of Justice and their Country's Rights, they would shed their Blood. However, that the King might not seem altogether to neglect the Court of Rome, he sent the Earl of Lincoln thither in Justification of his Proceedings; and at the Instance of the Pope, he granted Truce to the Scots from All-Saints to Whitsuntide. But the Pope not long satisfied with this, directly opposed the King in his martial Proceedings against that Nation; wherefore the King, in a Parliament holden at London, by the Consent of the whole Representative Body of the Realm, returned a Winchelicopious Defence of his whole Proceedings, with Protestations, first, of Cant. That he did not exhibit any Thing as in Form of Judgment, or Tryal of his Cause, but for Satisfaction of his holy Fatherhood's Conscience, and not otherwise. And because the Pope required that the King should stand to his Decision for Matter of Claim, the Earls and Peers (to whom the King wholly referred it) with one Mind directly signified, That their King was not to answer in Judgment for any Rights of the Crown of England, before any Tribunal under Heaven, and that he should not (by sending Deputies and Attornies to such an End) make the said Truth doubtful, because it manifestly tended to the Disinheritance of the said Crown; which, with the Help of God, they would resolutely, and with all their Power, maintain against all Men. To which they all (being 100 Peers) subscribed their Names. Dated at Lincoln, 1301.

The Names of the worthy Patriots who withstood Papal Usurpation.

JOHN, Earl of Warren; Thomas Earl of Lancaster; Ralph de Monthermer, Earl of Gloucester and Hereford; Humphrey de Bohun, Earl of Hertford and Essex; Roger Bigod, Earl of Norfolk; Guy, Earl of Warwick; Richard, Earl of Arundel; Adam de Valence, Lord of Montherney; Henry de Lancaster, Lord of Monmouth; John de Hastings, Lord of Bergevenny; Henry de Percy, Lord of Topcliffe; Edmund de Mortymer, Lord of Wigmore; Robert Fitz Walter, Lord of Wadham; John de St. John, Lord of Hannake; Hugh de Vere, Lord of Swanestampe; William de Breuse, Lord of Gower; Robert de Monthault, Lord of Howarden; Robert de Tateshall, Lord of Wakeham; Reinold de Grey, Lord of Ruthin; Henry de Grey, Lord of Codnore; Hugh Bardolph, Lord of Wormgay; Robert de Clifford, Chatelain of Appleby; Peter de Mallowe, Lord of Mulgreen; Philip, Lord of Kime; Robert Fitz Roger, Lord of Claverings; John de

1272. Mobam, Lord of Dunestur; Elmeriche de St. Edmund, Lord of Widebay; William de Ferrers, Lord of Grobby; Alane de Zouch, Lord of Ashby; Theobald de Verdon, Lord of Webberly; Thomas de Furnival, Lord of Schefield; Thomas de Multon, Lord of Egremont; William Latimer, Lord of Torby; Thomas, Lord Berkley; Foulk Fitz Warren, Lord of Metingham; John, Lord Segrave; Edmund de Eincourt, Lord of Thurgerton; Peter Corbet, Lord Caus; William de Contelow, Lord of Ravensthorpe; John de Beauchamp, Lord of Hache; Roger de Mortimer, Lord of Pentethlin; John Fitz Reinold, Lord of Blenleveny; Ralph de Nevil, Lord of Raby; Brian Fitz Alane, Lord of Bedale; William Marshal, Lord of Hengham; Walter, Lord Huntercome; William Martin, Lord of Cameis; Henop de Thies, Lord of Chilton; Roger le Ware, Lord of Isfield; John de Rivers, Lord of Angre; John de Lancaster, Lord of Grisdale; Robert Fitz Pain, Lord of Lannier; Henry Tregoze, Lord of Caringes; Robert Hipard, Lord of Lumford; Walter, Lord Falconbridge; John Strange, Lord of Cnokin; Robert Strange, Lord of Elsemere; Thomas de Cbances, Lord of Norton; Walter de Beauchampe, Lord of Alcester; Richard Talbot, Lord of Eccleswell; John Butetourt, Lord of Mendesham; John Engaim, Lord of Colam; Hugh de Pointz, Lord of Camualet; Adam, Lord of Wells; Simon, Lord Montacute; John, Lord Sulle; John de Melles, Lord of Candebury; Edmond, Baron Stafford; John Lovel, Lord of Hackings; Edmond de Hastings, Lord of Elchunbonokes; Ralph Fitz Williams, Lord of Grinthorpe; Robert de Scales, Lord of Neufells; William Tuchet, Lord of Lewenbales; John Abadan, Lord of Doverstone; John de Haverings, Lord of Grafton; Robert la Ward, Lord of White-

Galter
Reynold,
A. B. of
Cant.

Hall; Nicholas de Segrave, Lord of Stowe; Walter de Tey, Lord of Stonegrave; John de Lisse, Lord of Wodton; Eustace, Lord Hacche; Gilbert Pecche, Lord of Corby; William Pannell, Lord of Trachington; Roger de Albo Monasterio, Fulk de Strange, Lord of Corsham; Henry de Pinkney, Lord of Wedon; John de Hoddeston, Lord of Aners; John de Huntingfield, Lord of Brandenham; Hugh Fitz Henry, Lord of Ravenstworth; John Daleton, Lord of Spole; Nicholas de Carru, Lord of Mulesford; Thomas, Lord de la Roche; Walter de Mouncie, Lord of Thornton; John, Lord of Kingston; Robert Hastings, the Father, Lord of Chelessey; Ralph Lord Grendon; William, Lord Leibourne; John de Greystock, Lord of Morpeth; Matthew Fitz John, Lord Stokenham; Nicholas de Nevil, Lord of Wherlton; and John de Pinal, Lord of Steli.

POPE Boniface VIII. perceiving these high Resolutions, and having enough to do with the King of France, left the Scots to look to themselves as well as they could; over whom King Edward had appointed the valiant Lord Segrave Custos; but notwithstanding his Valour, the Scots discomfited him, and took him Prisoner, whom Sir Robert de Neville rescued, as also the Rest of the Prisoners, without the Loss of one Man of his own. When the Report of this Success of the Scots came to Edward's Ears, he went in Person with a great Army, piercing therewith thro' all Scotland, from Roxborough to Caithness, being about three hundred Miles, not an Enemy appearing with Power to obstruct him, but all either submitting or betaking themselves, with their Captain Wallis, to the Woods and Mountains. King Edward, after he had settled Affairs in that Nation to the best Conveniency, returned to London, whither not long after, Captain Wallis, a Knight's Son, having been betray'd, was brought Prisoner, and at Westminster, for Treason, and other Crimes tried, found guilty, and adjudged to Death; which Sentence was executed on him, and his Quarters set up in divers Parts of Scotland. After this Man's Death, generous Bruce (who attained the Crown of Scotland) headed his Countrymen the Scots, and was put to Flight by Armory de Valence, and forced into the utmost Isles of Scotland, where for a while he lived in great Distress, till seeing his Time, he appeared again in an hostile Manner in Scotland, doing many Things above the Opinion of his Means. This induced martial King Edward to advance towards Scotland, but in his March he fell sick at Carlisle, where (amongst other Things given in Charge) he commanded his Son Edward that he should be industrious in carryiug on his Design against the Scots, and that he should carry his Skeleton along with him thro' the Scottish Nation: For, said the King, Whilst thou hast my Bones with thee, none shall be able to overcome thee. He likewise commanded the Prince, on Pain of his Curse, not without common Consent, to kill Pierce Gaveston, who for abusing the Prince's tender Years with wicked Vanities, by common Decree was banished. He charged the Prince too, That he should send his Heart into the Holy Land, accompanied with 140 Knights, and their Retinues, for whose Support he had provided thirty two Thousand Pounds of Silver. Lastly, he charged him, that upon Pain of eternal Damnation, the said Monies should not be expended upon any other Uses. This heroick King died of a Dysentery at Burgh upon Sands, 1272.

A. D. 1307, and was buried at Westminster. His first Wife Eleanor, John was the Daughter of Ferdinand the Stratford, Third King of Castille; his second A. B. of Wife was Margaret the Daughter Cant. of Philip the Hardy, King of France.
His Issue by Queen Eleanor were John, Henry, Alphonso, who all died young, Edward, who succeeded him; Eleanor married to Henry III. Earl of Barie; Joan married to Gilbert Clare, Earl of Gloucester and Hereford; Margaret married to John the second Duke of Brabant: Berenger and Alice, then Mary, who at Ten Years of Age was veiled a Nun in the Monastery of Ambresbury in Wilts, at the earnest Desire of her Grandmother Queen
Eleanor, who was there at that Time of the same Profession; then Elizabeth, who was first married to John the first Earl of Holland and Zealand, then to Humphrey Bohun, Earl of Hereford and Essex; then Beatrice and Blanch. By Queen Margaret he had Issue, Thomas, created Earl of Norfolk, and Earl Marshal of England; Edward, created Earl of Kent, and Eleanor, who died young.

When the King took his long and dangerous Voyage into the Holy Land, his Queen Eleanor would by no Means be persuaded to stay behind him, but would needs accompany him, saying, Nothing must part them whom God hath joined, and the Way to Heaven is as near in the Holy Land (if not nearer) as in England or Spain. In Remembrance of his first Wife, Queen Eleanor, who died at Herdeby in Lincolnshire, he erected Crosses between that and Westminster, in all Places where her Hearse rested; namely, at Lincoln, Grantbam, Stamford, Geddington, Northampton, Stony-Stratford, Dunstable, St. Albans, Waltham, Westminster, called Charing-

1307. ring-Cross, and adorned with her Arms of Castile, Leon, and the County of Ponthou, which by her Right was annexed to the Crown of England. 'Tis said, that he built Hull in Yorkshire, which was afterwards beautify'd with fair Buildings by Michael de la Pole, Earl of Susfolk. In the Eighth Year of his Reign, he sent out his Writ Quo Warranto, to examine by what Title Men held their Lands, which brought him in much Money, till John Earl of Warren being called to shew his Title, drew out an old rusty Sword, and said, he held his Land by that, and by that would hold it till his Death. In a Synod holden at Reading, it was ordain'd, That no Ecclesiastical Person should have more than one Benefice, to which belonged the Cure of Souls. There were executed at London 207 Jews at one Time, for defacing the King's Coin. A. D. 1288, was the Summer so excessive hot, that many Men died with the Extremity thereof, and yet Wheat was sold at London for three Shillings four Pence the Quarter.

Now flourished Roger Bacon, a Franciscan Frier, an excellent Philosopher and Mathematician.

EDWARD II.

A. D. 1307. Edward, called Caernarvon, after that he had provided for the Affairs of Scotland, and had Homage done him by many of the Scottish Lords at Dumfries, he next took unjust Revenge on Walter Langton, Bishop of Chester, by imprisoning him, and seizing all his Temporal Goods and Credits; because that in his Father King Edward's Life-time, the Bishop had gravely reprov'd him for his Misdemeanors, and had complain'd of Pierce Gaveston, whereon ensued young Edward's Imprisonment, and Gaveston's Banishment. Then he sail'd into France, where, at Boleine with wonderful Magnificence he was married to young Isabel, Daughter of Philip the Fair; and at his Return for England, brought back with him his beloved Minion Pierce Gaveston, who was a Gentleman Stranger brought up with him. Which Gaveston the King suffered now to lord it over the Chief Nobles, to fill the Court with Buffoons and Parasites, and the like pernicious Instruments, to waste the Wealth of the Kingdom in Revellings and riotous Courses, to transport Riches into foreign Parts, bestowing upon him his own Jewels, and Ancestors Treasures, and even the Crown it self of his victorious Father. Not sticking to profess, that if it lay in his Power, he should succeed him in the Kingdom, being wholly ruled by him. Therefore to repress Gaveston's Exorbitances, the Lords in Parliament procur'd (though with no Goodwill of the King) that Gaveston Earl of Cornwall should be perpetually banished, they gratifying the King with a Subsidy of the 20th Part of the Subjects Goods. Howbeit shortly after, the King, contrary to his Oath made unto the Parliament, called Earl Gaveston Home out of Ireland, himself meeting him at Flint-Castle, and then bestowing on him to Wife, Joan of Acres, Countess of Gloucester, his Sister's Daugh-resolving for this lewd Man's sake to put Crown, Life, and all in Hazard. And now the insolent Earl strives to outgo himself in his former Courses, consuming the King's Treasures and Means, so that there was not sufficient left for the Necessities of the Court; and drawing the King into such Debaucheries, that the Queen conceived herself injured thereby, as well as the Nobles. Whereupon Garveston is a third Time forc'd out of the Realm; into which he again returned the following Christmas, when the King welcomed him as an Angel from Heaven, and forthwith advanc'd him to be principal Secretary; but the Lords, as well Ecclesiastical as Temporal, resolv'd by Force of Arms utterly to extirpate him, chusing for their Leader in this Design, Thomas Earl of Lancaster. And at Batlington, this infamous Earl Garveston was surprized by Guy, Earl of Warwick, who convey'd him to Warwick-Castle, and in a Place call'd Blacklow (afterwards Garvesthead) caused his Head to be cut off, as a Subverter of the Laws, and an open Traytor to the Kingdom. Which Act caus'd a lasting Hatred in the King to his Nobles, though for the present the King's Displeasure was allayed by the Mediation of the Prelates, and especially of Gilbert Earl of Gloucester, who stood Neutral. But whilst the English King indulged only his Pleasure, undaunted Rouce (now the received King of Scotland) industriously prosecuted his Design, for setting his Country at Liberty from the English, driving them out of most Places of his Realm, and making great Spoil in Northumberland: Which awakening John Of-King Edward, he marched with a very great Army against him, tho' of Cant. 1307.

many of the Nobles refused to attend him in this Service, because he delayed to ratify their desired Liberties, and Provisions for better Government, so often consented unto by himself. At Bannocksbourne the English and Scots Armies came in Sight of each other, when the Enemy left nothing undone that might be for their Advantage, digging before their Battalions certain Trenches, wherein they stuck sharp Stakes, covering them with Hurdles, which miserably afflicted the English Cavalry, falling into them at unawares, thereby procuring to the Scots the greatest Victory that ever they had over the English. In this Fight King Edward did gallantly behave himself, nor would he fly, till by the Importunity of Friends he was thereunto forced, for his Preservation. Now was slain the Earl of Gloucester, the Lord Clifford, with other Lords, and about 700 Knights, Esquires, and Men of Armories; Humphrey de Bohun was taken Prisoner, and a great Booty the Scots gained; for the English in this Expedition had adorned themselves as for a Triumph, with all Sorts of Riches, Gold, Silver, and the like, in a kind of wanton Manner, corresponding to the Prince they followed. In those Times the Scots made such like scoffing Rhimes as this on the English:

*Long Beards Heartless, painted Hoods Witless.
Gray Coats Graceless, makes England Thrifless.*

This Conquest encouraged the Scots to make Inroads into the English Northern Countries, where they made great Spoil, some of the disloyal Englishmen joining with them. The King nevertheless could not for-

1323. forget his Gaveston, whose Body with great Pomp he caused to be transferred from Oxford to Kings-Langley in Hertfordshire, himself in Person honouring the Obsequies. Then in Pierce Gaveston's Place, the King advanced into his Favour the two Spencers, Father and Son, whose intolerable Insolencies and Oppressions seemed to exceed those of Gaveston's; against whom the Barons did swell with such Impatience, that not content with the Waste of their Lands, by Threats of Civil War, they procured their Banishment. The Queen, who hitherto had been a Mediatrix betwixt the King and his Lords, having received the Denial of one Night's Lodging at the Castle of Leeds in Kent, which belonged to one of the Barons, whom she perceived to take too much upon them, now turned her Spleen against them, incensing the King her Husband against them so highly, that King Edward resolved to die in the Quarrel, or to bring the factious Lords into a more becoming Carriage towards him. The Judgment given against the Spencers he procured to be reversed. Some of the delinquent Lords render'd themselves to the King; others of them were apprehended, amongst whom were the two Roger Mortimers, Father and Son, who were committed to the Tower. Howbeit the Earl of Lancaster in the North resolved, with what Force he could procure, to fight for his Security; against whom the King marched, and at Burrow-Bridge encountred him; where Humphrey de Bohun was slain with a Spear from under the Bridge; and the Earl of Lancaster, with other principal Men, Barons and Knights, to the Number of above Ninety, were taken by Andrew de Herkly, Captain of Carlisle, afterwards created Earl of that Place. The Earl of Lancaster, a few Days after, was beheaded at Pontefract, the Barons and Knights were drawn, hang'd, and quarter'd. The Lord Badlesmere, who refused to let the Queen lodge at Leeds, was executed at Canterbury. Never did English Earth at one Time drink so much Blood of her Nobles, as at this Time in so vile a Manner shed, one Earl and fourteen Lords suffering Death, most of them by the Halter. But that this Tragedy of the Lords was exploited by others, and not by the King's free Inclinations, appears; for that when some of the Courtiers and Favourites pleaded for the Life of one of a mean Family, condemned for being engaged in the Rebellion, the King fiercely answered, A Plague upon you for cursed Whisperers, malicious Backbiters, wicked Counsellors; intreat you so for the Life of a most notorious Knave, who would not speak one Word for the Life of my most dear Kinsman, that most noble Knight Earl Thomas? By the Soul of God, this Fellow shall die the Death he hath deserved.

In A. D. 1323, King Edward marched with a mighty Host into Scotland, from whence for Want of Victuals he was forced in a short Time after to return, without the Honour of any Atchievement, the Scots also following him at the Heels, and so suddenly assailing him, that he was forced to leave his Treasure and Furniture for Pillage to them. But by Reason of the Interdict which the Pope had put the Scots under in Favour of the English, a Truce was made betwixt the two Nations for Thirteen Years; which being confirmed, Edward took his Progress through the Counties of York and Lancaster, and Marches of Wales, from whence the late Seditions had their Nourishments; there punish-few into

The
to was did k to as a shed, offer
y the dy of thers, clina-some ouries of a being
King
pon you Backintreat otorious ak me st dear bt Earl od, this be hath

Edward ost into Want of a short out the ent, the e Heels, im, that Treasure
o them.
et which ts under a Truce Nations ch being his Proof York
of Wales, tions had e punishing

K. Edward II. Surrend.^r of Crown to his Son.

Victory over the French at Cressy.

J. G. G. G. G.

many severely. Amongst the he caused Andrew de Herkley to be degraded, hang'd, drawn and quartered, for traiterously taking Part with the Scots. Whilst these Things were acting, young Roger Mortimer, being corrupted his Keepers or poison'd them with a sleepy Drink, escaped out of the Tower, getting into France. The Spencers, Father and Son, one created Earl of Gloucester, the other of Gloucester, hav'd themselves exceeding lordships, even to the Queen herself, whose Maintenance they abridged, to advance their own Wealth. Many Nobles that had been engaged in the Barons Quarrel, they put to excessive Rates for purchasing the King's Favour again, that utterly impoverished them. Adam, Bishop of Hereford, and Henry, Bishop of Lincoln, for the same Cause were deprived of all their Temporalities. But the Queen and discontented Nobles resolve to clear themselves of the Spencers; to which End the Queen procured Aids out of Hainault and Germany, and uniting them with the Barons Forces, marched against the King, who found but few Friends, because of the mortal Hatred that the People generally did bear to the Spencers. The Queen, lying with her Army at Oxford, caused the whole University to be called together; when in the Presence of the Queen, Prince, Roger Mortimer, and other Nobles, the Bishop of Hereford preach'd unto them from that Text, 2 Kings 19. My Head, my Head aketh: delivering to them the Reasons of the Queen's coming with her Army; concluding that an aking and aking Head of a Kingdom was to be taken off, and not to be tampered with by any other Physick. The Londoners stood high for the Queen and Barons, cutting-off the Bishop of Exeter's Head, whom the King had left Guardian of London. The Tower they gained into their Possession, proclaimed John of Eltham Custos of the City and whole Land, and set at Liberty all Prisoners. The Queen did the like throughout all the Realm; by her Order also all banished Men were revoked, whereby no small Increase was brought to the Barons Forces. From Oxford the Queen marched to Bristol, which she besieged and took, and therein Hugh Spencer the Elder, whom she caused, without any Form of Trial, to be cut up alive and quartered, having been first, at the Clamours of the common People, drawn and hanged in his proper Armories. The unfortunate King being now forsaken of almost all his English Subjects, after much wandering, intrusted himself with the Welch (who still loved him) lying hid in the Abby of Neath, till at length, after much Search, he was found out, and with him young de Spencer, Robert Baldock, Chancellor, and Simon de Reading, were taken. King Edward was conveyed to Kenelworth Castle, the Lords to Hereford, where the Queen lay with her Host. Spencer, and Simon de Reading were condemned to Death by William Trussel, and were both ignominiously hanged. The distressed King being now shut up in Prison, and without Hopes of any Redemption, after he had been much solicited, at last yielded to resign the Crown to his Son Edward; which being granted by the King, the Lords forthwith proceed to the short Ceremony of his Resignation, chiefly consisting in the Surrender of his Crown and Ensigns of Majesty, to the Use of his Son Prince Edward; Sir William Trussel thereupon, in the Behalf of the whole Realm, renounced all Homage and Al-

1327. Allegiance to the Lord Edward of Caernarvon, late King, in these Words; 'I William Trussel, in the Name of all Men of the Land of England, and of all the Parliament Procurator, resign to thee Edward, the Homage that was made to thee sometime, and from this Time forward I defy thee, and deprive thee of all Power-Royal; and I shall never be tenant on thee after this Time, A. D. 1327.

His Wife was Isabel, Daughter to Philip the Fair, King of France, and Sister to Lewis Huton, Philip the Young, and Charles the Fair, all Kings of France. His Issue was Edward of Windsor, so surnamed, because born at Windsor; John of Eltham, born at Eltham in Kent; Joan, married to David Bruce, Prince of Scotland; Eleanor, married to Reynold, Earl of Gilder.

In the Fourth Year of this King's Reign, a Baker, named John of Stratford, for making Bread lesser than the Assize, was with a Fool's Hood, and Loaves of Bread about his Neck, drawn on a Hurdle thro' the Streets of London.

So terrible a Famine was in Eng- land, that upon St. Laurence Eve there was scarce Bread to be got for Sustainment of the King's Household, so great a Mortality likewise accompanying this Dearth, that the Living were scarce sufficient to bury the Dead. In the Time of Scarcity, the King set forth an Order, That Wheat should be sold in the Market at Eleven Shillings the Quarter; a fat Ox stalled or Corn-fed, at Twenty four Shillings; a fat Hog of two Years old, at Three Shillings Four Pence; a fat Hen for a Penny; and Twenty four Eggs for a Penny: But Victuals thereby became so scarce in the Markets, that this Order was revoked, and the People left to sell as they could.

Merton College in Oxford brought forth in this King's, and his Son Edward's Reign, those four Lights of Learning, namely, John Duns, call'd Scotus the Subtile, who in a Fit of the Apoplexy, 'tis said, was buried alive; Bradwarden the Profound; Ocham the Invincible, and Burke the Perspicuous. And, as some say, Baconthorpe the Resolute, was of the same College.

Now was the Knights Templars Order universally extinguished.

E D W A R D III.

A. D. 1327. Edward the Third was crowned King upon Candlemas-Day, being the Eighth Day after that his Father had made a Resignation of the Crown to him. And now because fundry great Persons, with the whole Order of Friars Preachers, took Pity on the old King's Captivity; Mortimer therefore hastened to dispatch him out of the Way; in order to which he procured an Express from the young King (then about 16 Years of Age) to remove him from Kenilworth Castle, delivering him into the Hands of those ignominious Knights Thomas de Garney Senior, and John Maitrevert, who conveying him from Kenilworth to Barkly Castle, there murdered ered him, by running a burning up into his Body, as he was able to disburthen Nature, September 22, 1327. His Body was buried at Gloucester. To animate the Body Regicides to the Commitment of this horrid Fact, 'tis said, an ambiguous Phrase was invented by Adam de Torleton, Bishop of Heroford, and sent to them by Mortimer, Edwardum occidere nolite timere bo-nam est. Gourney or Corney and his villainous Companions, when they would needs shave the King on his Way to Barkly, lest he should be known and rescued, enforced him to sit down on a Molehill; and the Rascal Barber, insulting, told him, that cold Water out of the next Ditch should serve for his Trimming at that Time: To whom the sorrowful King answered, Whether you will or no, there shall be warm Water, and therewith shed Tears plentifully. But young King Edward at his Father's Death was upon the borders of Scotland, where having surrounded the Scots in the Woods of Biddale and Stanhope, by the Treach-ery of Mortimer they escaped, and returned inglorious, after an huge waste of Treasure, and great Peril of his own Person. For had not his loyal Chaplain slept in and received the mortal Weapon in his own Body, the King's Life had been lost. Shortly after this, Peace was concluded with the Scots, on dishonourable Terms to the English, by the Procurement of the other-Queen, and her Minion Mortimer. Joan, the King's Sister, was married to David Bruce; the Scots in Derision calling her Joan the Peace. King Edward at the Treaty of Peace sealed Charters to the Scottish Nation, the Contents whereof were contrived by his Mother, Roger Mortimer, and Sir James Douglas, without the Privy of the English Peers. He also delivered 1327.

 to them that famous Evidence called the Ragman-Roll, and like-Thomas wife quitted them of all his Claim Bradwarto the Government of Scotland, din, A. B. withal rendring back certain Jew. of Cant.
 els taken by the English from the Scots, amongst which was one of special Note, called the Black Cross of Scotland. In the same Year, being in the Year of our Lord 1327, died Charles the Fair, King of France, by whose Death the Crown of that Kingdom devolved to Edward King of England, in Right of his Mother Queen Isabel, who was Daughter to Philip the Fair, and Sister to Lewis Hutin, Philip the Long, and Charles the Fair, all Kings of France successively; and all three dying without Issue, the whole Right now seemed to be in Isabel, the only Child of the said Philip that had any Issue. But the French pretending a Fundamental Law, or Entail, called the Salique Law, by which no Woman was inheritable to France, sought to debar King Edward his Right, receiving to the Crown Philip of Valois, whose Father was younger Brother to Philip the Fair, advancing the Brother's Son, before the Daughter's Son, not following the Propinquity or Descent of Blood, but Meliority of the Sex. Against the Stream of the Queen, and her Lord Mortimer's absolute Sway, some great Persons now stood, among whom was the King's Uncle Edmund Earl of Kent, whose Death the Queen and Mortimer shortly procured. Nor was Morti-mer's Fall now far off, for the King beginning to perceive his own Peril in the other's Potency, upon good Advice therefore surprized Morti-mer with the Queen-Mother in Nottingham Castle, and by a Parliament held at Nottingham, Queen Isabel's Dowry

1330. Dowry was taken from her, and only a Pension of a Thousand Pounds per Annum allowed her. Mortimer Simon Islip, A. B. was condemned in open Parliament at Westminster, for causing the young King to make a dishonourable Peace with the Scots, from whom he received Bribes; for procuring the Death of St. Edward of Caernarvon the late King: For over Familiarity with Isabel the Queen-Mother: For spoiling and robbing the King and Commons of their Treasure: He was ignominiously drawn to Tyburn, then called the Elmes, where he was executed on the common Gallows, there hanging two Days and Nights, 1330. With him there died, for Expiation of the late King's Death, Sir Simon de Bedford, and John Deverell, Esq.: About this Time befel great Disturbances and Divisions in Scotland, occasioned by young Bruce and Baliol, both pretending Right to that Crown; which Opportunity King Edward took hold of, conceiving himself not obliged to stand to that Contract made in his Minority by the Predominancy of his Mother and Mortimer, the Scots also detaining his Town and Castle of Berwick from him. Wherefore he raised an Army, and with Edward Baliol marched to Berwick; which having besieged, David Bruce sent a puissant Host to the Relief thereof, and at Halyden-Hill the English and Scots Armies joined Battle, where the Scots were vanquished with a lamentable Slaughter of them. There died Archibald Douglas, Earl of Angus, and Governour of Scotland; the Earls of Southerland, Carrick and Ross; the three Sons of the Lord Walter Stewart, and at least Fourteen Thousand others, with the Loss only of one Knight and ten other Englishmen. Hereupon Berwick was surrendered to King Edward, and Baliol was accepted to be King of Scotland, and had Faith and Allegiance sworn unto him by the Scottish Nobles. Which done, Baliol repaired to King Edward, then at Newcastle upon Tyne, where he submitted to Edward III. as his Father John Baliol had done to Edward I. After which the King of England assisted Edward Baliol as his Homager, going himself in Person divers Times for suppressing the Brucean Party, which he kept under, till such Time that he was engaged against the French for the obtaining of that Kingdom, and the Recovery of sundry Towns and Places in Gascony, injuriously withheld from him by the French King. To remedy which Wrongs, the King of England had address'd his Ambassadors, but in vain; therefore that the World might take Notice of his just Proceedings, he, in a large Letter directed to the College of Cardinals, justifies his Design upon France to be equal and honest: First, because himself of any Male living was the nearest in Blood to the late K. Charles his Uncle. Secondly, because the French had refused to put the Cause to Civil Trial. Thirdly, for that the Process of the Twelve Peers, in giving the Crown from him when he was under Age, was by all Laws void and frustrate. Fourthly, for that Philip of Valois had invaded Aquitain, which belonged to the Crown of England, and detained such Places as he had wrongfully gained therein. Fifthly, For that the said Philip had aided the Scots in their rising against him. Edward having done this, he next makes a Confederation with the High and Low Dutch, and other Foreigners, then prepared a brave Army, his English Subjects contributing liberally for the carrying on of the War. And to make his Con-

the fuller, he made bold with the Lombards, and the moveable Goods of such Priories in England, were Cells to Monasteries in France. Thus provided of Men and Monies, K. Edward sailed with his Forces to Antwerp, and by the Impunity of the Flemings, he first assumed the Titles and Armories of the Realm of France, quartering the Flower de Lis with the Lions. And entering France, he burnt and spoiled the North Part thereof up as far as Turwin; then returning to Antwerp, he there kept his Christmas with his Queen Philippe; from whence about Candlemas he set Sail for England; where, in a Parliament holden at Westminster, he obtained liberal Aids for the Support of his designed Conquest. In lieu of which he granted a general large Pardon of trespasses; and other Dues to him and confirmed Magna Charta, and Carta de Foresta, with some others. Then upon June 23, he shipped from Harwich to Sluys in Flanders, near which Place the French lay in wait with a Navy of 400 Ships, with intent to intercept him; but Edward having the Advantage of Wind and Sun, furiously set upon the French Ships, putting the Monseurs so hard it, that a great Number of them chose to cast themselves into the Sea, rather than to become Prisoners. Thirty Thousand of them are confessed to have been slain and drowned, and more than half of their Ships were either sunk or taken. The Loss was so very great on the French Side, that lest the News thereof might too much afflict the King of France, his Jester disclosed it to him, by oftentimes repeating this saying in his Hearing; Cowardly Englishmen, Dastardly Englishmen, Heart-hearted Englishmen. Why? said the King at length: Because, said the Jester, they durst not leap out of their Ships into the Sea as our brave Frenchmen did. From which Saying the King took a Hint of the Overthrow. After which famous Sea Victory obtained by the English, puissant King Edward, with his Host consisting of near an hundred thousand Men, set down before Tournay; from whence he sent to the French King, whom he saluted only by the Name of Philip of Valois, challenging him to fight with him Hand to Hand in single Combat; or, if that pleased not, then each to bring an Hundred Men into the Field, and try the Event with so small a Hazard; or otherwise, within ten Days to join full Battle with all their Forces near Tournay. To which Philip made no direct Answer, alledging that the Letters were not sent to him the King of France, but barely to Philip of Valois. Nevertheless he brought his Army in Sight of the English Host, but by the Mediation of Queen Phillippe's Mother and two Cardinals, a Truce was concluded between the two Kings till Midsummer next following. The main Reason inducing King Edward to yield hereunto; was the Want of Supplies of Money, thro' the Fault of his Officers in England, whom he severely punished at his Return. And now to weaken great Edward's Strength, the Pope put Flanders under Interdict, as having disloyally left their own Earl and chief Lord Philip, King of France. And Lewis the Emperor breaking League with the King of England, took Part with France; which when King Edward understood, he angrily said, I will fight with them both. And not long after, he was upon the Sea with a very great Fleet, none knowing whither he would steer his Courie; but in Normandy he landed; where he took the populous and rich City of Caen, and 1346. and with his dreadful Host, burning and spoiling round about, marched up almost as far as the Walls of Paris; where with his Army, in an Enemy's Country between two Rivers Seine and Soame, (the Bridges being broke down by the French) Edward designed at low Water to have passed over a Ford between Abbeville and the Sea, whom to intercept, the French King had sent thither before him Godner du Foy with 1000 Horse, and 6000 Foot.

Simon
Langham,
A. B. of
Cant.

Howbeit undaunted Edward entered himself into the Ford, crying He that loves me, let him follow me, as one resolved to pass over, or there to die; the first of which he did; for his Soldiers following him, won the Passage, putting du Foy to Flight. And now King Edward being come near to Cressie in Ponthieu, lying between the Rivers of Soame and Anthy, he there most vigilantly provided for his Defence against King Philip, who was advancing towards him with an Hundred Thousand Men and upward. When the two Armies were within Sight of each other, the King of England, after he had called upon God, disposed his Host into three Battles. To his Son Edward the Black Prince, he gave Order of the Van; the second Battle the Earls of Northampton and Arundel commanded; the third himself. And as if he meant to barricado his Army from flying, he caused his Carriages to be placed in the Rear thereof, and Trees to be plashed and felled, to stop up the Way behind his Host; commanding withal, that all should forsake their Horses, and leave them amongst the Carriages. On the Enemies Part, the King of Bohemia and Earl of Alençon had Charge of the Van-Guard, King Philip had the main Battle, and the Earl of Savoy commanded the Rear. The Sign of Battle being given by K. Philip, a bloody Fight ensued, wherein the Black Prince was very hard beset; therefore his Father was sent for to his Rescue, who upon the Hillock of a Windmill stood to behold the Fight, being in Readiness to enter thereunto when just Occasion should invite him; but at that time he refused to go, returning the Messengers with this Answer, 'Let them send no more to me for any Adventure that may befall, while my Son is alive; but let him either vanquish or die, because the Honour of this brave Day shall be his, if God suffer him to survive.' Which he did, and beat the French out of the Field. Whereupon King Edward with his untouched Battle advanced towards his victorious Son, and affectionately embracing and kissing him, said, Fair Son, God send you Perseverance to such prosperous Beginnings; you have nobly acquitted yourself, and are well worthy to have the Governance of a Kingdom intrusted unto you for your Valour. In the Field were found the dead Bodies of eleven Great Princes; and of Barons, Knights, and Men of Arms, above Fifteen hundred. There were slain the King of Bohemia, King of Majorca, Earl of Alençon, Duke of Lorraine, Duke of Bourbon, Earl of Flanders, Earl of Savoy, the Dauphin of Viennois, Earl of Sancerre and Harcourt, Earls of Aumarch, Newers, &c. Six Earls of Almain, besides others of great Account, with the Grand Prior of France, and Archbishop of Paris. Of the Commons then fell about 30000. Of the English Side not one Man of Note or Honour were slain.

A. D. 1346, from the Forest of Cressie, King Edward marched to Calais, and besieged it. In the Time of which Siege, the Governor thereof for the sparing of Food thrust forth of the Town above Fifteen hundred of the poor and impotent People, whom this Christian King Edward turned not back, but suffer'd them freely to pass through his Camp, relieving them gratis with fresh Victuals, and giving two Pence a piece Sterling to each of them. But whilst the King was busied abroad in France, the Scots (in Favour of the French) invaded England, advancing as far as Durham, where the English encountering them, overcame them, and took David their King Prisoner at Nevil's Cross by Durham. There lay dead in the Field the Earl of Murray and Strathern, the Constable, Marshal, the Chamberlain, and Chancellor of Scotland, with many other Nobles. Prisoners taken, besides the King, were the Earls of Douglas, Fife, Southerland, Wigton, and Monteith. In this Battle, on the English Side, were many Spiritual Persons, who for the Defence of their Country, made use of carnal Weapons. And as King Edward's Friends were successful in England, so were they also in Foreign Parts; for in Bretaign, Sir Thomas Dagworth overthrew the Lord Charles Blois, though he had much the Odds of him as to Number of Men. In Gascoign and those Parts, Henry Earl of Derby and Lancaster worsted the Duke of Normandy, and took sundry Places of great Importance; amongst the rest, that considerable Town of Brigerac, where he permitted every Soldier to seize any House, and convert all therein to his own Profit. Whereupon it happened, that a certain Soldier called Reth, having broke into a House where the Moneyers had for Safety stowed the Money of that Country in great long Sacks, he acquainted the Earl therewith, supposing that the Earl intended not so great a Treasure for a private Share;

but the Earl told him, That accordingly as he had at first proclaimed, let the Treasure be worth what it would, yet was it all his own. And Wittlesey, now after almost a Year's Siege, A. B. of Calais was delivered to King Edward's Mercy. In Little Britain the King's Warden thereof, Sir Walter de Bendley, vanquished the Marshal of France in Fight, slew 13 Lords, 140 Knights, 1000 Esquires, and took Prisoners 9 Lords, besides many Knights and Esquires. At length, after much Spoil made upon the French, a Peace was concluded on betwixt the two Kings, though it continued not long e'er the French broke the Agreement. In Revenge wherof, Edward presently entred France with an Army, and spoiled it where he came; and after his Return into England again, when he heard that John the new King of France had given to Charles the Dauphin the Dutchy of Aquitain, King Edward bestowed the same upon the Black Prince, commanding him to defend that Right with the Sword. The Prince thereupon, furnished with a gallant Army, set sail towards France, where he took many Towns and Prisoners, advanced into the Bosom of France up to the very Gates of Burges in Berry; from whence, wheeling about to return to his chief City Bordeaux, John King of France encountered him with a great Army, having the Odds of six to one; notwithstanding which, the victorious Prince of Wales discomfited the French, took Prisoners King John and Philip his youngest Son, the Archbishop of Sens, and many great Lords, and about two Thousand Knights, Esquires, and Gentlemen bearing Armories. And slew in Fight above fifty-two Lords, and seventeen Hundred Knights, Esquires, and Gentlemen, with Sir Reginald Camian, who that Day bore

1376.

the Orflamb or French Ensign; and of the common Soldiers about six Thousand. To James Lord Audley, who in this Fight received many Wounds, the Prince gave 500 Marks Lands in Fee Simple, which said Land the Lord Audley bestowed on his four Esquires that had continued with him in all the Brunt and Fury of Danger. King Edward the Father, whilst his Son was thus prosperously busied in France, proceeded in hostile Sort against the Scots, and brought King Baliol at Roxborough to make a Surrender of his Crown to him. Prince Edward, after his late Victory, marched with Joy and Triumph to Bordeaux; where having refreshed his wearied Soldiers, he took his leave of France, though not of the King thereof; for him he brought with himself a Captive to London, whither the Prince was welcomed with exquisite Honours by Henry Picard, then Lord-Mayor. Which said Picard afterwards, at one Time, feasted at his own Charge the Kings of England, France, Scotland, and Cyprus. King Edward ordered that eight Days should be spent in giving God the Glory for the Victory; and not long after, with a Fleet of one thousand one hundred Sail, he passed over from Sandwich to a fresh Invasion; and being come before the Walls of Paris, he honoured four hundred Esquires and Gentlemen with Knighthood. Ample Conditions were offered by the French unto the King of England, to which he would not at present listen; yet at length was persuaded to an Accord on these Conditions: That himself and Son Edward should for ever release unto King John and his Heirs the Right and Claim which they had unto the Crown of France, Duchy of Normandy, &c. That King John and his Son should for them and their Heirs release unto King Edward and his Heirs the whole Country of Aquitain, Santoign, &c. also the Country of Ponthieu, &c. the proper Inheritance of Queen Isabel, King Edward's Mother. That King John should pay for his Ransom the Sum of Thirty Hundred Thousand Scutes of Gold, every two of which should be Six Shillings Eight Pence Sterling; with some other Conditions. All which were ratified with Hands, Seals, and Oaths at Calais, though by the Falshood of the French King this Amity continued not many Years; for King John by underhand Dealings sought to alienate the Hearts of King Edward's Foreign Subjects from him, and the County of Ponthieu he surprized before King Edward heard thereof. Wherefore the King sent over John Duke of Lancaster, and Humphrey de Bohun Earl of Hertford, to invade France, who pierced up as far as Roan; and after them the King sent that renowned Captain Sir Robert Knolls, who went on very prosperously, till by the Instigation of Sir John Mersworth, and some others, (who thought themselves better than Sir Robert) a Division was made in the Army, whereby the English Fortunes were hindered; for the which Mersworth paid the Loss of his Head. About the same Time also some great Officers of the King's, as John Duke of Lancaster, the Lord Latimer, and Sir John Stirrie, were complained of for Fraudulency to the State, and at the Request of the Parliament, called The Good, were displaced. But that which caused the greatest Grief to Englishmen, was the Loss of their martial Prince Edward, who left this Life upon Trinity Sunday, 1376. about his Age 46, and was buried at Canterbury. Nor did his martial Father

long

long survive him, for in A. D. 1377, he died at Shene in Surry, and was buried at Westminster. His Wife was Philippe the Daughter of William Earl of Hainault and Holland; her Mother was Sister to Philip of Valois, King of France. His Issue were Edward the Black Prince, so called for his dreadful valorous Acts; William of Hatfield, Lionel, Duke of Clarence; John of Gaunt, Duke of Lancaster; Edward Earl of Cambridge, and Duke of York; William of Windsor; Thomas of Woodstock, Duke of Gloucester; the Earldoms also of Essex and Northampton, and the Constableship of England, came to him by Right of his Wife Eleanor, the sole Heir of Humphrey de Bohun, Earl of Essex, &c. Isabel was married to Ingelram of Guisnes, Earl of Soisson and Archduke of Austria; Joan was espoused by Proxy, with Alphonso the Eleventh King of Castile and Leon, but died before the Espousals were solemnized; Blanch died young; Mary was married to John Montford, Duke of Britain; Margaret was married to John de Hastings, Earl of Pembroke. He built Queenborough in Kent, in Honour of Queen Phillippe his Wife. He erected a Building at Windsor-Castle, whose Circumference was six hundred Foot, where Knights and Men of War were to have their Entertainment of Diet at his Charge, and begun a magnificent Church dedicated to the Virgin Mary; which King Henry the Eighth, and Sir Reginald Bray, finished. He is also said to be the Founder of the most noble Order of the Garter; so intituled, perhaps, from the Garter he took up of the Countess of Salisbury's, which slipped off in a Dance, or perhaps for that in a Battle, wherein he was victorious, Garter was the Word or Signal. But some will have this King to be only the Reviver of this Order, and Richard the First to be the Institutor of it. King Edward confirmed Magna Charta about twelve Times. He restrained the Pope from conferring English Benefices on Strangers. He invited Clothworkers to repair hither out of Foreign Parts, to whom he granted sundry Privileges. The Staple of Wool, which had been in Flanders, he revoked, establishing the same in Westminster, Canterbury, Chichester, Bristol, Lincoln, and Hull.

The famous Custom of the Kings of England Washing, Feeding, and Clothing of as many poor People upon Maundy-Thursday, as they are Years old, is referred to the Celebration which this King made of his Fifth Year. His Concubine Alice Pierce was so insolent, that she would go into the Courts of Justice, where sitting by the Judges and Doctors, she would proudly persuade or dissuade for her most Advantage; therefore was complained of in Parliament, and removed from the Person of the King. At a Parliament held the Thirty-Seventh of his Reign, Gold and Silver, Silks, and rich Furs, were forbidden to be worn by any but eminent Persons; also the Labourer and Husbandman was limited to the Eating of such certain Meats. An Act was likewise made, that no common Whore should wear any Hood, except striped with divers Colours, nor Furs, but Garments with the wrong Side outward. At Stamford in Lincolnshire an University was instituted, but of short Continuance.

The first Duke of Cornwall was Edward the Black Prince, whom his Father created in great Estate Duke thereof, by a Wreath on his Head, a Ring on his Finger, and a Silver Verge. And the same Title 1377. of Duke of Cornwall ('tis said) is reputed unto the King's eldest Son the very Day of his Nativity, having Right to the Royalties in the Stanneries, Wrecks at Sea, Customs, &c.

A Blazing-Star appeared, which continued thirty Days. Southampton was burnt by the French, A. D. 1348. It rained from Midsummer till Christmas. A Plague all over Christendom, some say the World; and so raging in England, that scarce the tenth Person of all Sorts was left alive. In London it was such, that in one Year's Space there were buried in the Cistercian or Charter-House Church-Yard above Fifty Thousand. It began in the Year 1348, and continued till the Year 1357, and was seconded with Murrain of Cattle, and Dearth of all Things.

Now flourished in the University of Oxford, that famous Doctor John Wickliffe, whose Followers in those Popish Times were called Lollards, from Lolium, signifying Tares or hurtful Weeds amongst Corn. He taught against Mass, Transubstantiation, Adoration of the Host, of Saints, Images, and Reliques, with the rest of the Roman Trumpery; whose honest Opinions were embraced by many learned Men in the English Nation, and by sundry Persons of great Honour and Quality, as the Duke of Lancaster, and Sir John Oldcastle, Lord Cobham, &c.

RICHARD II.

A. D. 1377. Richard, the Son of Edward the Black Prince, was crowned King in the Eleventh Year of his Age; but e'er the Crown was settled on his Head, the French braved it on the English Coasts, and the Scots set Fire on the Tower of Roxborough; and through Want of Care in such who had the Charge of State Matters in the young King's Behalf, Things were declined to a shameful Change, and the glorious Atchievements of the two late Edwards fell under an Eclipse. The North Parts of England were grievously afflicted with the Stroke of Pestilence, and their Misery augmented by the Inroads and Outrages of the Scots, who had now by Surprise gained Berwick, which upon the ninth Day after the Earl of Northumberland regained by Force.

A. D. 1379, a Parliament was held at London, wherein, for Supply of the King's Wants, it was agreed, That the Commons or poorer Sort should be spared, and the Burthen be wholly laid upon the abler Sort. And in the next Year following a Parliament was held at Northampton, wherein every one of each Sex, above such an Age, was charged to pay 12 d. per Poll; which, with the Hatred born to John Duke of Lancaster, was the Cause of a great Insurrection of the Commons and Bondmen, chiefly of Kent, Essex, Surry, Suffolk, Norfolk, and Cambridgehire. The principal Heads of the said giddy Multitude, were Wat Tyler and Jack Straw. The Rebels of Kent embattel'd themselves upon Black Heath by Greenwich, from whence they marched to London; where the common Sort generally in Mur.

of all inverfi-Doctor

wers in led Lal-g Tares
orn. He bitantia-loft, of es, with mpery;
embrain the dry Per-Quality, and Sir
, &c.

nt was Supply agreed, er Sort Burthen
er Sort. wing a rthamp-ch Sex, ged to
, with uke of a great ns and Essex,
Cam-eads of re Wate Re-mselves nawich, o Lon-rt generally

Wat Tyler Stabb'd by the Lord Mayor P. 107

K. Richard II. Surrend.^r y^e Crown to y^e D. of Lancel P. 108

generally siding with them, they became Masters of Misrule. The Priory of St. John's without Smithfield they kept burning for about Seven Days. Savoy Palace, belonging to the Duke, with all the Riches therein, they consumed by Fire, in a kind of holy Outrage; for they threw one of their Fellows into the Flames, because he had thrust a Piece of stolen Plate into his Bosom. They burnt all the Archbishop's Goods at Lambeth, and defaced all the Writings, Rolls, Records, and Monuments of the Chancery, as having a special Hatred to the Lawyers. Simon Tibald, Archbishop of Canterbury, and Chancellor of England, a worthy Prelate, Sir Robert Hales, Lord Prior of St. John's, and Treasurer of England, they haled out of the Tower, where the King was in Person, and beheaded them on Tower Hill, with great Shoutings and Rejoycings. The Number of these rebellious Reformers under the Leading of Jack Straw, and the Idol of Clowns Wat Tyler, were about an Hundred Thousand; and at a Sermon made to them by John Ball, there were near twice as many. Their proud Petitions the King granted them, Necessity compelling him thereto; after which, a great Multitude of them repaired to their several Homes. The remaining Rout the King, by his Proclamation, invited to meet him in Smithfield, where he would satisfy their Desires in all Respects to the full. But when they were met in the Place appointed, Wat Tyler, there in the Presence of the King, offering to kill Sir John Newton, (for not giving him some undue Respect) William Walworth, Lord-Mayor, thereupon set upon the Arch-Traytor with a drawn Weapon, and slew him; which when the Rebels perceived, they prepared to take extreme Revenge; but the King instantly spurring forth his Horse, bad them follow him, and William he would be their Captain. And Court-whilst they thronged after him in-neey, A. B. to the Fields, brave Walworth (the of Cant. while) hasted into the City, raised a Thousand Citizens in Armour, and brought them, with Wat Tyler's Head born before him upon a Spear, to the King; which the rude Multitude seeing, some of them fled, and others, on their Knees, begged Mercy of the King. Worthy Walworth the King knighted, and bestowed on him an hundred Pounds Lands by the Year in Fee-Simple; and, as some write, the Dagger was now added to the City Arms, in Remembrance of the great good Service done by the Lord-Mayor. Jack Straw, at the Time of his Execution, confessed, That these Rebels had designed to murder the King and Chiefs of the Realm, and to have set up Petty Kings of their own choosing in every Shire. The Number of Rebels executed in all Places was about fifteen Hundred. These were called the Hurling-times. And now the Nation being settled in Quiet, King Richard married the Lady Anne, Daughter unto the Emperor Charles the Fourth. John Duke of Lancaster was sent into France, where he concluded a Truce with that Nation for six Months. But these Sun-shine Days lasted not long; for besides the Annoyances done to England by the Scots at several Times, and the French threatening an Invasion, the worst Mischief fell at Home through the Means of discontented and ambitious Spirits, who kindled a Civil War. The Laity took Offence against the Clergy; because the Archbishop had in Parliament refused to yield to an unjust Proportion of the Tax granted the King, to be laid upon the Clergy. And so far were the Commons and some Lay-Peers offended therewith, that they petitioned the King to take away the Temporalities from Ecclesiastical Persons; which he denied, saying, That he would maintain the English Church in the Quality of the same State, or better, in which himself had known it to be when he came to the Crown. The displacing of Sir Richard Scrope, Chancellor, was displeasing to most Men. The Reason of his displacing was, because he refused to pay such large Gifts under the Great Seal, as the King in his youthful Humour had granted to some Courtiers. Also the King's Over-freeness to the Queen's Countrymen the Bohemians, discontented many. The ancient Nobles envied that Robert de Vere, Earl of Oxford, was created Marquis of Dublin, and Duke of Ireland; and Michael de la Pool, a Merchant's Son, Earl of Suffolk; and that the King had been in too great Favour. These were held for great Grievances; nor would the Parliament grant the King any Aids against his Foreign Foes, unless these Lords were removed and degraded. This the King could not well digest, but consulted the Learned in the Law, concerning certain Articles of Treason, within the Compass of which he might take the popular Lords. And at Nottingham Robert Trisilian, Chief Justiciar, Robert Belknap, Chief Justice of the Common-Pleas, John Holt, Roger Filthrop, and William Burgh, Justiciars; John Lockton, the King's Serjeant at Law; all subscribed to certain Articles of Treason made against the Lords, which afterwards cost them dear, Judge Belknap foresaw the Danger, therefore unwillingly consented, saying, There wants but an Hurdle, Horse, and Halter, to carry me where I might suffer the Death deserved. For if I had not done this (quoth he) I should have died for it; and because I have done it, I deserve Death for betraying the Lords.

1377.

And now the King and Lords prepare themselves for the Field; the Lords march up to London with an Army of about Forty Thousand Men; against whose coming, the King, not being able to match their Power, shuts himself up in the Tower, where the Factious Lords, Gloucester, Derby, Arundel, Warwick, and Marshal, send him Word, That if he come not quickly to Westminster according to Appointment, they would choose them another King, who both would and should obey the Council of the Peers. Hereupon the King, though with no Goodwill, attends their Lordships Pleasure at Westminster, where he yielded to remove from about his Person Alexander Neville, Archbishop of York, the Bishops of Durham and Chichester, the Lords Zouch and Beaumont, with divers others; and amongst them certain Ladies. Others of his Friends were made Prisoners. And at the Parliament, which was shortly after, the Judges were arrested as they sat in Judgment, and most of them sent to the Tower. Trisilian that had fled, being apprehended, and brought to the Parliament in the Forenoon, had Sentence to be drawn to Tyburn in the Afternoon, and there to have his Throat cut, which was done accordingly. Divers other Knights were also sacrificed to their Revenge. The Duke of Ireland and others had their Estates confiscated to the King's Use by Act of Parliament. This while the Scots invaded the North of England under the Conduct of Sir William Douglas, whom whom Henry Hot-spur fighting with Hand to Hand, slew; but the Earl of Dunbar coming with an excessive Number of Scots, took Hot-spur and his Brother Prisoners.

A. D. 1396, Peace was concluded with the French, the Scots and Spaniards, being included therein. And in September 1397, a Parliament called The Great (for the extraordinary Number of Peers, and their Retinues which came thereunto) was held at London, wherein the Sanctuary of former Laws, and all particular Charters of Pardons were taken away from Thomas Duke of Gloucester, Earl of Arundel, and others, for their treasonable Practices, and all the Justiciars who stood for the King were cleared from Dishonour, and such Articles as they had subscrib'd were publickly ratified, and the Offenders against them pronounced Traytors. Richard Earl of Arundel was beheaded on Tower-Hill, where at his Death he utterly denied that he was a Traytor in Word or Deed. The Earl of Warwick confessing himself a Traytor in open Court, was only banished to the Isle of Man.

The Duke of Gloucester (whom as the Peoples Darling, it seemed not safe to bring to a publick Trial) was secretly smothered with Pillows and Feather-beds at Calais. The King at this Parliament created himself Prince of Chester, and to his Escutcheon Royal added the Armoies of Edward the Confessor; his Cousin Henry Earl of Derby he made Duke of Hereford, and advanced the Titles of many other Nobles. Not long after which Henry Duke of Hereford accused Thomas Mowbray Duke of Norfolk, for speaking certain Words to the King's Dishonour, which Mowbray constantly denying, should have come to a Combat within Lifts, but the King ended the Controversy otherwise, by banishing Norfolk for ever, and Hereford first for ten Years, then for six only. Thomas In the Year following the Duke Arundel, of Lancaster died, when the King A. B. of unjustly seized upon the Goods of Cant. that mighty Prince his Uncle, and determined to banish for ever his Son the Duke of Hereford, now Duke of Lancaster by his Father's Death. But whilst King Richard was in Ireland to qualify a Disturbance there, Henry Duke of Lancaster and Hereford lands in England with what Forces he had, pretending nothing but the Recovery of his Inheritance. To him there repaired Henry Piercy, the Earl of Northumberland, his Son Hot-spur and Earl of Westmorland, with many others: Multitudes offering their Service to him, as pitying his Calamity, and exasperated against the King, because to furnish his Irish Voyage he had extorted Monies on all Hands, and had taken up Carriages, Victuals, and other Necessaries, without any Recompence. The Duke of Lancaster, with an Army of about 60,000, marched to Bristol, besieged the Castle, and took it, and therein two Knights of the King's Council, Busby and Green, whose Heads were cut off at the Request of the Rabble.

The Duke of York, whom King Richard had left behind him to govern England, could gain but small Assistance against Lancaster, nor could the King at his Return into England find many Friends, therefore he betook himself to a Parly with his Enemies; the Sum of his Demands being, That if himself and Eight more whom he should name might have honourable Allowance, with the Assurance of a private quiet Life, he would resign the Crown. This was promised him; whereupon he put himself into the Duke of Lancaster's 1399. *W*ester's Hands, who conducted him out of the West to London, where he was lodged in the Tower. And now a Parliament was summoned in the King's Name to be held at Westminster, in which Parliament King Richard was charged with the Breach of his Coronation Oath in Thirty two Articles: His abuse of the publick Treasure, Waste of the Crown Lands, Loss of Honour abroad; and that at home he was guilty of Falshood, Injustice, Treason against the Rights of the Crown, and what not, that Ambition and Envy could invent against him. The Result whereof was, he resign'd his Crown to the Duke of Lancaster; which Resignation the whole Body of the Parliament did particularly accept, saving Tho. Merks, Bishop of Carlisle, A. D. 1399, Sept. 29. His first Wife was Anne, Daughter to the Emperor Charles IV. His second Wife Isabel, was Daughter to Charles VI. King of France.

In the very Beginning of this King's Reign, one John Philpot, a private Citizen of London, at his own Charge, manned out a Fleet to Sea, for the guarding of both Land and Sea from the Enemy; and was so successful, that within a short Space, he took fifteen Ships of the Spaniards fraught with rich Merchandize.

By a Tempest were cast away at Sea, Four Knights, and above a Thousand Englishmen, in their Passage to Bretaigne in France.

In the Year 1392, the Londoners were so unkind to the King, that they refused to supply him with the Loan but of a Thousand Pounds; and because a certain Lombard offered to lend the same, they abused and almost killed him, for which the King took away their Charter.

The Year of Christ 1394, was famous or notable for the Deaths of many great Ladies, and amongst the rest, of Queen Anne the King's first Wife, whom, it is said, he loved to a kind of Madness. When she died at Shene, in Surry, he both cursed the Place, and also out of Madness overthrew the whole House. In the same Year that the King was deposed, the Bay or Laurel-Trees withered all over England, and afterwards re-flourished; and on the first of January near Bedford Town, the River where it was deepest, did on the sudden stand still, and so divided it self, that the Bottom remained dry for about three Miles. Now flourished Sir John Hawkwood, whose Chivalry had made him renowned through the Christian World. Sir Jeoffry Chaucer, Poet-Laureat, now also lived.

Queen Anne, Wife to King Richard II. first taught English Women to ride on Side-Saddles, when as before that time they rid astride. She also brought in High-head Attire piked with Horns, and long-trained Gowns for Women.

Line of LANCASTER.

HENRY IV.

A.D. 1399. HENRY of Bullenbrooke, the Son of John of Gaunt, Duke of Lancaster, the third Son of King Edward III. was crowned at Westminster, by Thomas Arundel, Archbishop of Canterbury. His Cousin, the late King Richard, seemed so much concerned for the Loss of his Crown, that when it was told him of Bullenbrooke's being accepted by Parliament for King in his stead, he only used these Words, I look not after such Things, but my Hope is, that after all this, my Cousin will be my good Lord and Friend. But now Henry seated in Richard's Throne, used all the best Means to gain the Hearts of the People that sided with him, and to weaken the opposite Party, and withal, sent Ambassadors to Foreign Princes, to justify his unjust Proceedings. But the King of France and People of Aquitain would not allow of his Pretences, and the Citizens of Bourdeaux openly said, that since the World began, there was never a more cruel, unreasonable, nor wicked Fact done: That the good Prince was betrayed by faithless Men, and that all Law was violated. In England were many that inclined and contrived to set King Richard again upon his rightful Throne (though to seek a Captive King's Deliverance doth commonly hasten his Death.) The principal Conspirators were John Holland, Earl of Huntingdon, Thomas Holland, Earl of Kent, the Dukes of Surrey, Excester, and Aumarl, John Montacute, Earl of Salisbury, Thomas

Spencer, Earl of Gloucester, and the Bishop of Carlisle. Their Plot was to kill Henry Bullenbrooke, and his Son Henry; but before the Time of the intended Execution was come, the whole Conjuraton was discovered. Many Attempts the Conspirators made to effect the Re-establishing of Richard, and amongst the rest, they procured one Maudlen, King Richard's Chaplain, to personate his Lord; but this with all the rest of their Projects failed. The Towns-men of Cirencester assail'd and took some of the discontented Lords, and then cut off their Heads, because some of their Followers set Fire to Cirencester, thinking that whilst the Towns-men were busied in quenching the Fire, they might set their Lords at Liberty. The Commons in Essex took the Earl of Huntingdon, and cut off his Head, in Revenge of the Duke of Gloucester's Death, which he had a Hand in. The Lord Spencer the Commons beheaded at Bristol. Some others of them were put to Death at Oxford, some at London, where also John Maudlen the Counterfeit Richard (a goodly Personage) and one William Ferby, were hang'd and quartered. The Bishop of Carlisle was, by the King's Clemency, saved after his Condemnation. King Richard did not long survive his Friends, but at Pontefract Castle was put out of the way by Hunger, Cold, and great Torments, tho' the Scots have untruly writ, that he escaped out of Prison, and led a solitary and virtuous Life in Scotland, and there died, and was buried at the Blackfriars

1399. fryers in Stirling. After Richard's Murder at Pontefract, King Henry caused his dead Body to be brought up to London, where in St. Paul's, with his Face uncovered, he lay for a Time exposed to the View of all Men; then was his Body transported to Langley in Hertfordshire, where it lay buried till Henry V. in the First Year of his Reign, caused the Royal Remains of his Body to be translated to Westminster. That beautiful Picture of a King, sitting crowned in a Chair of State, at the upper End of the Choir in Westminster-Alley, is said to be of him. And now King Henry, to divert the Thoughts of the People from his Predecessor's Tragedy, prepared a puissant Army, and marched with it into Scotland, where he only did some Hurt, by wasting the Country, and then returned. Shortly after which, he advanced against Owen Glendour, that had raised a Rebellion in Wales; but Glendour against the King's coming had withdrawn himself with his surest Friends into the Fastnesses of Snowden; wherefore the King only made some Spoil in the Country, and returned. Many were the Plots that were still made against the King, but the Contrivers were discovered and put to Death, among whom were many Monks. And now Glendour having taken the Lord Mortimer Prisoner, with no small Slaughter of the Herefordshire Men; the King marched again into Wales, where while he stayed he was in great Danger to have perished by sudden Storms and Rains, the like whereof his People had never seen or felt. The common Fame went that Glendour was a Conjuror, and had raised those hideous Tempests by hellish Arts. In the North, King Henry's Forces were more fortunate against the Scots; for at Halidon Hill,

Henry Hot-spur, Lord Piercy, obtained a great Victory, taking Prisoners the Earls of Douglas, Fife, Angus, Murray, and Orkney, the Lords Montgomery, Erskin, and Grave, with about 80 Knights, besides Esquires and Gentlemen. And besides what Scots were slain in Battle, there were about Five Hundred of those which fled from the Fight drowned in the River Tweed. But that Henry might have little Joy of his ill-gotten Greatness, the Pierces raise a dangerous Rebellion, where indeed they pretend a Care for the Commonwealth's Reformation, though they really intended the Advancement of their own private Interests; for it was agreed among the Conspirators, that the Kingdom should be shared betwixt Mortimer, Earl of March, Henry Piercy, Earl of Northumberland, and Owen Glendour. South-England to Mortimer, North-England to Piercy, and Wales beyond Severn to Glendour, and Archebald Earl of Douglas was allowed as a Sharer to be freed from Ransom, and to have Berwick for his own. Thus agreed, they fortified Shrewsbury, whither the King advanced with his Army, where a terrible Battle was fought, and therein Hot-spur was slain, and his Host vanquished. The Earls of Douglas, Worcester, Sir Richard Vernon, and Baron Kendleton, with divers others were taken, tho' not without great Danger of the King's Life, and the Death of many Persons of Quality on his Side. Henry Hot-spur's Body was drawn out of the Grave, beheaded and quartered, and the Parts sent to be set up in divers Places of the Kingdom. Thomas Piercy, Earl of Worcester, with Vernon and Kendleton, were beheaded. The Earl of Northumberland, who was taken by the Way as he was bringing Forces out of the North to join with those at Shrewsbury, had his Life pardoned. The Year following a Parliament holden at Coventry, called the Learning Parliament, either the Unlearnedness of the Persons, or for their Malice to Learn-Men. For in order to supply the King's Wants, a Bill was exhibited against the Temporalities of Clergy, but by the Courage of the Archbishop of Canterbury, and the King's Care of the Church, his Motion was fruitless.

A. D. 1405, another Conspiracy was made against King Henry, the chief in which Conspiracy were Thomas Mowbray, Earl Marshal, and Richard le Scrope, Archbishop of York, who being taken, were both beheaded. But the Pope excommunicated all such that had a Hand in putting the Archbishop to Death. Another fresh Report of King Richard's being alive was again spread abroad, when the Earl of Northumberland and Lord Bardolph sought to raise an Army in the North, but were encountered by the Sheriff of Yorkshire, who after a sharp Conflict slew the Earl in the Field, and mortally wounded the Lord Bardolph. The Earl's Head was cut off, and after it had been ignominiously carried through London, was fixed on the Bridge.

A. D. 1413, the King fell sick, and as some report, in this his last Sickness he caused his Crown to be set on a Pillow at his Bed's Head, when suddenly the Pangs of his Apoplexy seized on him so violently, that all supposed him to be dead. At which Instant Prince Henry coming in, took away the Crown; but his Father recovering out of his Fit, quickly missing it, and understanding who had taken away, caused his Son to be called unto him, of whom he demanded, what he meant by be-reaving him of that whereunto he had yet no Right? The Prince boldly replied, Long may you live, Sovereign Father, to wear it yourself; but all Men deeming that you were gone to inherit another Crown, this being my Right, I took it as my own, but now do acknowledge it for none of mine, and therewith set the Crown where he found it. O Son, quoth the Father, with what Right I got it, God only knoweth, who forgive me the Sin. But however it was got, said the Son, I mean to keep it, and defend it (when it shall be mine) with my Sword, as you by the Sword have obtained it. The King died at London, and was buried at Canterbury. His first Wife was Mary the Daughter of Humphry de Bohun, Earl of Essex, Hereford, and Northampton, Constable of England. His second was Joan, Daughter to Charles I. King of Navarre. By Mary his first Wife he had Issue Henry, Thomas Duke of Clarence, John Duke of Bedford, sometime Regent of France, Duke also of Anjou and Alanson, &c. Humphrey Duke of Gloucester, and Protector of the Kingdom of England, &c. Blanch, married to Lewis Barbatus, Palatine of the Rhine, Prince Elector; Phillippe, married to John King of Denmark.

A great Plague befel throughout England, chiefly in London, where within a short Space it destroyed Thirty Thousand. In the Ninth Year of his Reign, a Snow continued December, January, February, and March. The Winter was so very sharp and long, that almost all small Birds perished through Hunger. A little before the Rebellion of the Piercys, was a strange Apparition between Bedford and Bickleswade, where sundry Monsters of divers Colours in the Shapes of arm-

ed

1412. ed Men, were often seen to issue out of the Woods in the Morning, which to such as stood far off, seemed to encounter one another in most terrible Manner, but when they drew near, nothing was to be found. The Devil, 'tis said, appeared in the Habit of a Minorite, at Dunbury Church in Essex, to the incredible Astonishment of the Parishioners; for at the same Time there was such a Tempest and

Thunder, with great Fire-balls and Lightning, that the Vault of the Church brake, and half the Chancel was carried away.

In the same Year 1405, at the Siege against Berwick, was the first Time, 'tis said, that a Gun was used in England.

Because the Number of Lollards so called, increased, an Act was made for the punishing of them by burning.

HENRY V.

A. D. 1412. Henry of Monmouth whilst he was Prince, did many Things very incongruous to the Greatness of his Birth, for he and his wild Companions would way-lay and rob his Father's and his own Receivers. And when one of his Servants was arraigned at the King's Bench Bar for Felony, this Prince hearing thereof, posted thither, commanding his Fetters to be struck off, and he set at Liberty; and when the Judge, William Gascoigne, Lord Chief Justice of the King's Bench, opposed him herein, commanding him upon his Allegiance to cease from such Riot, and keep the King's Peace, he in a Rage ascended the Bench, and gave the Judge a Blow on the Face, who sat still undaunted, and boldly thus spake unto the Prince; 'Sir, I pray

' remember your self, this Seat
' which I here possess is not mine
' but your Father's, to whom and
' to his Laws you owe double Obedience. If his Highness and ' his Laws be thus violated by you,
' who should shew your self obedient to both, who will obey you
' when you are a Sovereign, or minister Execution to the Laws that ' you shall make? Wherefore for ' this Default, in your Father's ' Name, I commit you Prisoner to

' the King's Bench, until his Majesty's Pleasure be farther known.' With which Words, the Prince abashed stood mute, laid by his Weapons, and with Obeisance done, went to the Prison.

Whilst the King his Father was crazy, and kept his Chamber, he through the Prince's wild Extravagancies, and set on by some Court Whispers, began both to withdraw his Affections, and to fear some Violence against his own Person from the Prince; which when young Henry understood, in a strange Disguise he repaired to his Father's Court, accompanied with many Persons of Honour, his Garment was a Gown of Blue Satten wrought full of Eye-let-Holes, and at every Eye-let the Needle left hanging with the Silk it was worked with. About his Arm he wore a Dog's Collar set full of S's of Gold, the Tirets thereof being most fine Gold. Being come to the Court he charges his Followers to advance no farther than the Fire in the Hall, whilst himself passed on his Father's Presence, before whose Feet he fell, confessing his youthful Faults, and justifying his Loyalty to his Person; declaring himself to be so far from any disloyal Attempt, that if he knew any Person of whom his Father stood in any Danger or Fear, his Hand according to Duty, should be the best to free the King of Suspicion; yea, saith he, I will most gladly suffer Death to ease your perplexed Heart; and to that End I have this Day prepared my self both by Confession, and receiving the Blessed Sacrament: Wherefore I humbly beseech your Grace to free your Suspicion from all Fears conceived against me with this Dagger; the stab whereof I will willingly receive at your Hands, and will clearly forgive my Death. At which the King melting into Tears, cast down the naked Dagger, (which the Prince had put into his Hand) and raising his prostrate Son, embraced and kissed him, confessing that his Ears had been over-credulous against him, which he promised they should never be for the future.

But notwithstanding this Prince's youthful Exploits, yet when he had obtained the Crown, to begin a good Government, he began at Home, banishing from his Court those unruly Youths that had been his Companions, commanding them either to change their Manners, or never to approach within Ten Miles of his Person, and chose worthy Men for his Council of State, advancing his Clergy with Power and Dignity. So highly careful was he for the Execution of Justice, that himself would every Day after Dinner, for the Space of an Hour, receive petitions of the oppressed, and with great Equity would redress their Wrongs. And so nearly did the Death of King Richard touch his Heart, that he sent to Rome to be absolved from that Guilt of his Father's Act. In the first Year of his Henry Reign, at a Parliament holden at Chicheleicester, was a Bill exhibited, where- in Complaint was made, That the Temporal Lands given to the Religious Houses, and Spiritual Persons for Devotion Sake, were either superfluous, or disorderly spent, whose Revenues, if better employed, would serve for the Defence of the Land, and Honour of the King; for the Maintenance of 15 Earls, 1500 Knights, 6200 Esquires, and 100 Alms-Houses for the Relief of diseased and impotent People, and unto the King's Coffers Twenty-Thousand Pounds per Annum. By the Authority of this Parliament 110 Priories alien were suppressed, and their Possessions given to the King and his Successors for ever. But to divert those in Authority from such like Proceedings, Projects were put into the King's Head for Recovery of France, his rightful Possession: Henry Chicheley, Archbishop of Canterbury, suggested that King Henry, as the true Heir unto his Great Grandfather Edward the Third, was the true Heir to the Crown of France.

As for the Salique Law, alledged against the English Claim, he affirmed, that the Text touched only those Parts of Germany, which lay betwixt the Rivers Elbe and Sala, conquered by Charles the Great, who placing the French there to inhabit, because of the dishonest Lives of those German Women, made this Law, In terram Salicam mulieres ne succedant, which the Gloss did falsely expound for the whole Kingdom of France, whose Practice notwithstanding he shewed to be contrary by many Experiences, both in King Pepin descended of Blithud, Daughter to Clothair the first,

1414. first, and by Hugh Capet, as Heir to the Lady Lingard, Daughter to Charlemain; so King Lewis, called the Saint: And beside, that this Exclusion is contrary to the Word of God, which alloweth Women to succeed in their Father's Inheritance; Numb. xxvii.

King Henry now sends a Summons, and Demand in the first Place of his Dutchies of Normandy, Aquitain, Guyon, and Anjou; to which the Dauphin of France in Derision, sent him for a Present a Tun of Paris Tennis-Balls; but the King returned for Answer, That he should shortly send him London Balls, which should shake Paris Walls. Whilst the English were making Provision against the French, Sir Robert Humfreville gave the Scots a considerable Defeat, which the French understanding, with also the great Preparations that Henry of England was making against them, they sent over Ambassadors, who at Winchester made offer of Money and some Territories; also the Princess Katharine to be given in Marriage to King Henry, so that he would conclude a Peace; but it was answered, That without the Delivery of the other Dominions belonging to the King's Progenitors, no Pacification was to be made. And when the Ambassadors had had their Answer given them, the King sent Antilop his Pursuivant at Arms unto Charles King of France with Letters of Defiance; next he made Queen Joan, his Mother-in-Law, Regent of the Realm, then drew his Forces to Southampton, commanding his Followers there to attend him on such a Day.

The King of France, on the other Part, makes all the Preparations he could to defend himself, and to offend the King of England. To Grey, a Privy-Counsellor; Scroop, Lord Treasurer; and the Earl of Cambridge, Son of Edmund, Duke of York; he sent, 'tis said, a Million of Gold to betray King Henry into his Hands, or else to murder him; but their Treason being discovered, they received the just Reward of Traytors.

On the 7th of August, 1414, the King of England with 1500 Sail took to the Seas, attended with Thirty Thousand Soldiers, besides Gunners, Engineers, Artificers, and Labourers, a great Number. And the 15th Day of the same Month he cast Anchor in the Mouth of the Seyne, about three Miles from Harfleur; where landing his Men, he fell devoutly on his Knees, desiring God's Assistance to the gaining of his Right. Then made Proclamation, That on Pain of Death, Churches, Church-men, Women, and Children, should be spared from Violence. And after due Encouragement to his Followers, he made Harfleur the first Essay of his Fortunes in France, it being a Port conveniently secured upon the Mouth of the River Seyne, and a safe Entrance into his intended Couquest, as well for the landing of Men, as to hinder the Passage unto Roan and Paris, both which received Traffick by the same River.

This Town of Harfleur was surrendered to King Henry, September 22, into which when he first entered, he passed along the Streets bare-footed, until he came to the Church of St. Martin, where with great Devotion he gave most humble Thanks unto Almighty God, for that his first achieved Enterprize. When the King had continued at Harfleur about fourteen Days, he marched 2000 Horse, and 13,000 Foot through Caux and Eu, towards Calais; in which March the French used all their En-endeavours to endamage him; for sides many Skirmishes, they broke down the Bridges where he was to pass, plashed the Woods, intrenched the Ways, stuck Stakes in the Fords, and in Places of Advantage and Store of Soldiers to impede his Passage, conveyed all Victuals out of the Countries through which he should go; and at Blanchetague, where he had purposed to have passed over the River Soame, there the French had fortified against him;

 for which Cause he marched by Worms, with Intent to have passed the River at Port le Remy; but finding that also guarded, he kept along the River to Hargest; the French Army marching on the other Side. Therefore he still marched on by the River Side, till he came to Bathen Court, where he got over his feeble and wearied Army, proceeding on his March till he came to Azin, or Agincourt, which was on Oct. 14, where the French, in a Field of Advantage purposely chosen, had pitched their Banner royal, with an infinite Host, exceeding the English six Times in Number, some say ten Times. King Henry now seeing himself so far engaged, and many of his Men sick of the Flux, 'tis said, he offered the Surrender of Harfleur, and what he had won, and to make Satisfaction for the Harm done in France, so as he might have Liberty freely to depart from Calais: To which the Constable and Marshal of France were willing; but the young Princes and Nobles refused all Conditions of Peace. And assuring themselves of Victory, they beforehand disposed of the English Prisoners, prepared a Chariot for the captive King, divided the Prey, commanded the Bells to be rung,
 the adjacent Cities and Towns, and Thanks to be given to God that had delivered the Enemy into such a Place of Advantage; sent to King Henry to know what Ransom he would give; sent for King Charles and the Dauphin to come in their Persons to Battle; that so they might have the Honour of the Victory. And so bold were the French upon their Numbers and great Strength, that they spent the Night before the Battle in Feasts, Triumphs, and Sports; but the English more wisely in preparing themselves for the Fight. When Morning was come, the French took the Field; pressing who should be foremost to this easy (as they thought) Conquest. Against whom (their greatest Strength consisting in Horse) King Henry commanded Two Hundred strong Bowmen to lodge in a low Meadow, where a deep Ditch full of Water might help to secure them from the Horse, and the Bushes cover them from Sight; having Stakes also prepared,

 and shod with Iron at both Ends,
 which they were appointed to stick slope-wise in the Ground, and to remove them upon Occasion to guard them from the Horse. This done, King Henry ranged his Host, disposing it into three Battles, placing his Bowmen on both Sides the Main, where the King rode himself richly accoutred, before whom the Royal Standard was born, and many other Banners in warlike Order. Both Sides being in Readiness, they a while stood facing one another. But the King of England resolving to break his Way through his Enemies to Calais, or else to die, with a chearful Countenance, and Words full of Courage, he animated his Followers to put forth their utmost Powers, that After-Ages might know what the Lance, the Ax, the Sword, and the Bow could do in the Hands of the Valiant;
 I and

1414. and that whosoever desired Riches, Honours, and Rewards, here they were to be had. Which Words ended, his Army fell prostrate on the Ground, and committed themselves to God, every Man taking into his Mouth a Piece of Earth, in Remembrance of his own Mortality, or in lieu of the Sacrament: And then rising up, the King, with chearful Countenance, commanded his Standard to advance forward, saying, Because our injurious Enemies do attempt to shut up our Way, let us set upon them in the most Glorious Trinity, and in the best Hour of the whole Year. Sir Thomas Erpingham, an old experienced Soldier, with a Warder in his Hand, led the Way; who, when he saw Time, threw his Warder up into the Air, whereat the whole Army gave a great Shout. The French kept still their own Ground, which the undaunted English perceiving, they advanced towards them, giving another Shout; when immediately the Archers laid in the Meadows, darkened the Air with a Shower of Arrows, and the English Army fell on with admirable Courage, the most of them also for Nimbleness being but half cloathed, without Hat, and bare-leg'd; so behaving themselves, that the French Van-Guard was instantly distressed, and disordered into such a confused Press, that they were not able to use their Weapons at any Advantage. Their Wings, which essayed to charge upon the English, were broken, and forced back for Safety to their main Battle, where they bred both Fear and Confusion. And those French Troops which pursued the Archers (who gave back as if forced to fly) came on with their Horses on the Spur, upon the Jaws of Destruction; for falling by Multitudes on those goring Stakes (left by the Archers on purpose) they were miserably overthrown and panned to Death; the English still on all Hands hotly pursuing their Advantages. Against whom the Duke of Brabant advanced (hoping by his Example to encourage others) furiously breaking into the English Army, wherein manfully fighting he was slain. With the like Resolution Duke Alanzon pressed into the English Battalion where King Henry fought, and there had slain Humphrey Duke of Gloucester, had not the King come in to his Rescue, between whom and Alanzon was a hard Contest, Alanzon giving the King a slight Wound, and the King at length striking him down to the Ground, whom the Soldiers, in the Heat of Fight, then slew, contrary to the King's Command. The French Rear-Guard seeing the Disaster of their Van and main Battle, to save themselves ran away, leaving the English no more Work to do. The Number of Prisoners taken by the English here was very great. But King Henry perceiving fresh Troops of the King of Sicily to appear in the Field, and the same strong enough, without any new rallied Forces, to encounter with his wearied Soldiers; to the End therefore that he might not have at once Prisoners to guard, and an Enemy to fight, contrary to his generous Nature, he commanded that every Man should kill his Prisoner, which was immediately done, certain principal Men excepted. Then by his Herald he commanded those Troops either forthwith to come and fight with him, else to depart the Field either of which if they delayed, he would revenge upon them without Mercy; whereupon they quitted the Field. When the Fight was over and the Field won, King Henry fell down upon his Knees, and commanded his Army to do the same saying ly oath;

holy gainst dvano en-taking man-
With Lanzen
ttalion
d there Gloucen to his Lanzen giving and the down Soldiers,
w, con-
l. The he Dif-
a Battle,
y, leav-Work to ers taken y great ng fresh icily's to the same new ralwith his nd there e at once an Enemy generous hat ever er, which tain princ
by his He se Troop and fight the Field delayed, h m without quitted th
t was over g Henry fe and com o the same layin

Victory over the French at Agincourt.

French under Virago Joan of Arck beat English

For Joach. 1547

saying that Verse in the Psalms, Not unto us, O Lord, not unto us, but unto thy Name give the Glory. And demanding what was the Name of the Place, when it was answered him, Agincourt: Then to all Poste-rities following, saith he, shall this Battle be called the Battle of Agin- court.

The Spoil here taken in Armour, Jewels, and Apparel, was very great. Of the English were slain, the Duke of York, the Earl of Suf- folk, two Knights, David Gam, Esq;
 and twenty-eight private Soldiers.
 Of the French were slain, one thousand Princes, Nobles, Knights, and Esquires, and Ten thousand common Soldiers. Prisoners of Account taken in the Field were,
Charles Duke of Orleans, John
Duke of Bourbon, the Earl of Rich- mond, Louis de Bourbon, Count de Vendosme, the Earl of Eu, Edward de Rouen, with divers others. Just before this Battle of Agincourt, when it was reported, that the French Forces were very numerous, Captain Gam resolutely said, That if there were so many, there were enough to be killed, enough to be taken Prisoners, and enough to run away.
 The next Day after this Battle, Great Henry marched towards Ca-
en; and in the next Month following spread Sails for England;
 and, on November 23, in Triumph-ful, he entred London, where he received the Gratulations of his people. The City presented him Ten Thousand Pounds in Gold, and two Golden Basons. After some time of refreshing, the King called a Parliament to London, which granted him a Subsidy, and a tenth, for carrying on of his Wars in France; which he graciously accepted, though it was too great for the defraying so vast a charge.

Therefore to make it up, the King
 pawned his Crown to his Uncle Cardinal Beauford, for a great Sum of Money, and certain Jewels to the Lord-Mayor of London for Ten Thousand Marks. Then with an Army of 25,527 Soldiers, every Fourth being an Horseman, besides a Thousand Carpenters and Labourers, upon July 28, 1417, he took to the Seas, and August the first, arrived in Normandy, to their great Terror, many of the Inhabitants for Fear flying into Bretaign.
 And as soon as on Shore, to encourage his Followers, he dubbed thirty eight Knights, then laid Siege against Conquest, the strongest City in Normandy, which he took Aug- ust the 16th. He took likewise the Castles of Aumbelliers and Lo- vers; the first of which he gave to his Brother Clarence, the second to the Earl of Salisbury, and the third to the Earl Marshal. Caen in Nor- mandy, the King took by Force, giving the Pillage thereof amongst his Soldiers. Now whilst King Henry was busied in France, the Scots wrought what Mischiefs they could against him at Home, entred Eng- land in a hostile Manner, bringing one with them whom they pretended to be King Richard II. and laid strait Siege against Roxborough and Berwick; but upon the Report of an Army of English coming against them, they broke up their Sieges, and well was he that could first set Foot in his own Country. In Ja- nuary, the strong Town and Castle of Fallors was delivered to the King; after which he divided his Army into several Parts, under the Conduct of the Dukes of Clarence and Gloucester, and Earl of Warwick, who took sundry Garrisons. The King the while besieged Roan;
 which, after about a Twelve-month
 Siege, was delivered to him up-

1418. on Terms, i. e. That the Burgesſes ſhould pay unto him Three hundred fifty fix thouſand Crowns of Gold, ſhould ſwear Faith and Loyalty to him and his Succeſſors, &c.

A. D. 1418, immediately after the Surrender of this, ſundry other Places of Note yielded themſelves, wherein King Henry placed Garriſons. And now France, trembling at the Engliſh Succeſſes and their own Loſſes, ſought a Peace from King Henry, who yielded to a perſonal Conference to be held at Melun, whither Charles the French King, his Queen Iſabel, the Princeſs Catharine, Duke of Burgundy, Count of St. Paul, with a thouſand Horſe, came firſt; King Henry, his Brothers of Clarence and Glouceſter, attended likewiſe with a thouſand Horſe, met them; wherein much Conference paſſed, but nothing was concluded; which did not well pleaſe the King of England. Wherefore ready to depart, he thus ſpoke to Burgundy, Couſin, I may not well digeſt this Refuſal, but be ye aſſur'd, that either I will have your King's Daughter, and all my Demands, or elſe I will baniſh both you and them out of France. You may ſpeak your Pleaſure, answered the Duke; but before you ſhall thruſt us out of France, you ſhall be weary of the Enterprize. The Treaty thus broke, Burgundy reconciled himſelf with the Dauphin, and Henry diſpleaſed herewith, proſecuted the War more ſharply, ſet upon Ponthois the laſt of July, and in few Hours gain'd the Town, wherein great Spoils fell to the Soldiers Shares. The News of this made King Charles to remove his Court from Paris to Troys in Champaigne, whilit Henry went forward with his intended Enterprizes, he and his Generals winning many ſtrong Holds. And to make the more Way for the Engliſh Succeſſes, the Dauphin and his Mother the Queen fell at great Variance, when the Queen, by the Procurement of Burgundy (the King being very infirm) was made Regent of France, whoſe Female Authority, and the Hatred to her own Son the Dauphin, did not a little prejudice the Crown of France. And to the great Advantage of the Engliſh, the Dauphin cauſed John Duke of Burgundy to be treacherouſly ſlain (for that the ſaid Duke had procured Lewis Duke of Orleans to be barbarouſly murdered, thinking that then he might eaſily compaſs to rule all under a weak King.) Whereupon the Queen and young Duke of Burgundy perſuaded King Charles to diſinherit the Dauphin his Son, and to give the Lady Catharine in Marriage unto the King of England; which accordingly was done, and a Peace was concluded betwixt the two Kings of England and France. The prime Articles of the Peace were theſe, That Charles and Iſabel ſhould retain the Name of King and Queen, and ſhould hold all their Dignities, Rents, and Poſſeſſions during their natural Lives. That after the Death of Charles the preſent King of France, the Crown and Realm of France ſhould, with all Rights and Appurtenances, remain unto the King of England, and his Heirs for ever. That becauſe of King Charles his Infirmneſs and Incapacity to diſpoſe the Affairs of the Realm of France, therefore during his Life the Government thereof ſhould be and abide to King Henry ſo that thenceforth he ſhould govern the Realm, and admit to his Council and Aſſiſtance, with the Council of France, ſuch of the Engliſh Nobility as he ſhould think fit, &c.

The Number of Articles were Thirty-Three, which were ſworn unto at Troys, May 30, 1420, the ſame same being proclaimed in London the 20th of June following. These Articles were concluded betwixt the two Kings in the Presence of divers of the chief Nobility both of England and France, Homage being sworn unto King Henry, and he proclaimed Regent of France. And on the third of June the Marriage of Henry and Catharine was, with all pompous Solemnity, celebrated at Troys, the Bishop of that See performing the Ceremonies. From Troys the King of England and his Queen rode to Paris, where great Entertainment was given; and the more to weaken the Dauphin's Interest, a Parliament of three Estates was assembled in Paris, where the Disinheriton of the Dauphin was confirmed. In this Parliament was also the final Accord betwixt the two Kings acknowledged by the French King, as made by his free Consent and Liking, and with Advice of the Council of France, whereupon it was likewise there ratified by the General States of that Realm, and sworn unto particularly upon the Holy Evangelists by the French Nobles and Rulers Spiritual and Secular, who also set their Seals to the Instruments thereof. Which Instruments were sent into England to be kept in the King's Exchequer at Westminster. Things now settled in France as well as that unsettled Time would permit, King Henry leaves the Duke of Clarence to be his Lieutenant there, and hastens for England with his Queen, whom he caused to be crown'd at Westminster in little Time after their Arrival in England. Then he called a Parliament in order to the raising of Monies for the continuing of the Conquest in France; but some Men minding more their private Interest than the Publick, instead of being free thereto to contribute, they petitioned the King to commiserate the Poverty of the Commons, which as they pleaded, were beggared by the Wars; wherefore, without farther pressing for any Aid, the King again pawned the Crown to his rich Uncle Cardinal Beauford, for Twenty thousand Pounds, and then returned into France with four Thousand Horse, and twenty-four Thousand Foot. And Time it was, for the Dauphin's Party was grown considerably strong by Aids sent from Scotland under the Conduct of the Earl Bucquabanan, and Archibald Douglas, who had given a Defeat to a Party of the English, therein killing the valiant Duke of Clarence, and taking Prisoners the Earls of Huntingdon and Somerset, and Thomas Beaufort. After which the Dauphinois had laid Siege to Alenxo, and straitned the City of Paris, by withholding Provisions from it; but when victorious Henry appeared, the Enemy betook them to their strong Holds, many of which he gained in short Time.

A. D. 1421, and December the 6th, whilst King Henry lay before Meaux, News was brought him, that his Queen, at the Castle of Windsor, was delivered of a Son; at which he exceedingly rejoyced, yet said, he liked not the Place of her Delivery, having before commanded that she should not be delivered there; and withal predicted, that what Henry of Monmouth should gain, Henry of Windsor should lose.

A. D. 1422, Queen Catharine passed beyond the Seas to the King in France, and there in the Louvre, King Henry and his Queen Catharine, at the Festival of Pentecost, sat in their Royal Robes, with their Imperial Crowns on their Heads, and kept their Court with great Confluence of People. But shortly after this renowned Prince fell sick 1422. of a burning Fever and Flux, whereof he died August 31, 1422. His Bowels were buried at St. Mauro de Fosses, his Body at Westminster, next beneath the Tomb of Edward the Confessor. Upon his Tomb Queen Catharine caused a Royal Picture to be laid, cover'd all over with Silver Plate Gilt, the Head whereof was wholly of massy Silver. All which, at the Abby's Suppression, was sacrilegiously broken off, and taken away. His Issue was only Henry of Windsor. 'Tis said of him, that he was a Prince godly in Heart,

 sober in Speech, sparing of Words, resolute in Deeds, provident in Counsel, prudent in Judgment, modest in Countenance, magnanimous in Action, constant in Undertaking, a great Alms-giver, devout to God-ward, a renowned Soldier, fortunate in Field, from whence he never returned without Victory. He erected the Monasteries of Bethlem and Bridget, near unto Richmond, gave princely Gifts to the Church of Westminster, and Brotherhood of St. Giles's without Cripplegate, Lon- don. He first instituted Garter Principal King at Arms, besides other Augmentations to the Order of St.
George.

A. D. 1414, Sigismund the Emperor came to England, desiring to make Peace betwixt the two Nations of France and England; but when that could not be effected,

he entred into a League with the English himself. Sir Roger Aston, Beverley, Murley, and some others, were strangled and burned for an unlawful Meeting in St. Giles's Fields.

A. D. 1417, Sir John Oldcastle,
Lord Cobham, was adjudged as a Traytor to the King and Realm, to be drawn through the Streets to St.
Giles's Fields by London, and there to be hang'd and burnt.

Three Popes were now at once mounted into St. Peter's Chair, namely Benedict, Gregory, and John;
 therefore for Prevention of Mis-chiefs to the Church by this Schism, a Council was held at Constance in Germany, whither King Henry sent nine English Prelates, one of which, to wit, Richard Clifford, Bishop of London, was the first nominated by the Council to be Pope, and he first nominated him that succeeded, which was Otho Colonna, by Name of Martin the Fifth. In the third Year of this King's Reign, and on Candlemas-Day, seven Dolphins came up the River Thames, four of which were taken.

An Act was made in the Parliament holden at Leicester, That such who maintained Wickliff's Doctrine were Hereticks and Traytors, and to be hanged and burnt. By which Law, Sir Roger Aston, with divers others, as also Lord Cobham, were put to Death.

H E N R Y VI.

A. D. 1422. HENRY of Windsor was crowned about the Eighth Month of his Age. The Guard and Custody of this Royal Infant was committed to Thomas Duke of Exeter; the Nurture and Education to his Mother

 the Queen Dowager; the Government of England to Humphrey Duke of Gloucester; and the Regency of France to John Duke of Bedford.
 The first Disadvantage that befell

the English Cause after the late King's Decease, was the Death of Charles the French King, who survived Henry but fifty three Days; for the Imbecilities of this Prince were a Strength to the English; on the other Side, the Infancy of young Henry was an Advantage to young Charles, by them of his Party now called King of France, tho' by the English he was called only King of Berry, because little else was left unto him. Howbeit, now he seeks to enlarge his Dominions, having received Aids from Italy and Scotland. And not far from the Town of Vernoil, his and the Regent's Forces join'd Battle, when the English, inured to the French Wars, having born the first Heat of the Enemy's Encounter, by Perseverance utterly broke them, and put them to Flight. The Regent himself fought most fiercely, winning unto himself a lasting Honour. On the Enemy's Part was slain the Constable and Lieutenant of France, the Earls of Wigtoun and Vantadour, with about Five thousand others. Prisoners taken, were the Duke of Alanzon himself, with about Two hundred others of special Account. After this Victory, the Regent besieged Monts in Main, and with Ordnance beat down Part of the Walls, whereupon it was yielded; this being one of the Articles at the Surrender, (which perhaps might be upon every like Occasion) that if any Person was found within the City, which had been consenting to the Murder of John Duke of Burgundy, Father to Philip Duke of Burgoigne, that they should simply be at the Regent's Mercy.

Some Time after this, and not much, Thomas Montacute, Earl of Salisbury, with a dreadful Puissance, besieged the City of Orleans, and so enforced it, that the Inhabitants were willing to articulate, and to yield themselves to the Duke of Burgundy, then being in his Company; but the Earl highly disdain- ing thereat, said in the English Proverb, I will not beat the Bush, and another shall have the Bird. Which Proverbial Speech, 'tis said, so offended the Duke, that it wholly alienated his Mind from the English; to their great Loss in all the French Wars following. And now appeared that famous French Shepherd-ess Joan of Lorrain, about 18 Years of Age, Daughter to James of Arc. This Maid, to comfort Charles of France, presented herself to him at Chinon, bidding him be of good Courage, and constantly affirming, that God had sent her to deliver the Realm of France from the English Yoke, and to restore him to the Fulness of his Fortunes. Then she armed herself like a Man, and required to have that Sword which at that Time did hang in St. Catharine's Church of Firebois in Tourain; and being warlikely array'd, she gets into Orleans, which did greatly animate the fainting French. From Orleans this Maid of God (for so the French called her) sent a Letter to de la Pole, Earl of Suffolk, in Words to this Effect: King of England, do Reason to the King of Heaven for his Blood Royal; yield up to the Virgin the Keys of all the good Cities which you have forced, &c. I am the Chief of this War, wheresoever I encounter your Men in France, I will chase them, will they, nill they, &c. The Virgin comes from Heaven to drive you out of France, be not obstinate, for you shall not hold France of the King of Heaven, tho' Son of St. Mary, but Charles shall enjoy it, the King and lawful Heir to whom God hath given it. He shall enter Paris with a good Train, &c. Understand these News of God and the Virgin; spare 1422.

1435. innocent Blood, leave Orleans at Liberty. This Letter was entertained by the English with Laughter, and John Stratford, Joan reputed of them no better than a Bedlam or Inchantress. But be she what she would, yet by her Encouragement and Conduct, the English had Orleans pluck'd out of their Hopes, and with much Loss were driven to raise the Siege. In all Adventures Joan was one, and the foremost. At one Sally she being shot through the Arm, said to her Followers, Come, this is a Favour, let us go on, they cannot escape the Hand of God. The English lost at this Siege the Earl of Salisbury, the Lord Moline, the Lord Poynings, Sir Thomas Gargrave, and of all Sorts (if you believe the Enemy) were slain in such Sallies as the martial Maid made, 8,000, our own Writers say but 6,000. After the raising of this Siege, some Towns were took by the English; but at a Village called Potay, the French coming upon them before the Archers could fortify their Battles with an Empalement of Stakes, the English, after three Hours bloody Resistance, were put to the worst: The Lords Talbot, Scales, Hungerford, and Sir Thomas Ramplstone, were taken Prisoners. Which Loss was followed with the sudden Revolt of sundry Towns. Nor was it long e'er Charles recovered Auxerre and Rheims; in the last of which, according to the Maid's Direction, he was solemnly crowned King of France. Hitherto the Virgin had been very lucky: But coming to the Rescue of Champagne, distressed by the English and Burgundians, she was taken by a Burgundian Knight, who sold her to the English, and they sent her to Roan, where she was burnt for Sorcery, Bloodshed, and unnatural Use of man-like Apparel and Habi-liments, contrary to her Sex. The Rumour of whose Death, and ignominious Cause thereof, was something incommodious to Charles's Affairs for a Time, and it was thought that the coming of young King Henry into France would be much more, who December 7, 1431, was crowned King of France in Paris by the Cardinal of Winchester. At which Time such of the French Nobility as were present, did their Homage to him. The King's Patents and Grants touching French Matters, passed under the Seal and Style of Henry King of the Frenchmen, and of England. And about this Time the English Affairs succeeded pretty fortunately in France. The Earl of Arundel and Lord Talbot carry about victorious Arms, and terrify Main, Anjou, and other Places with their Successes.

A. D. 1435, that famous Patriot and General John Duke of Bedford, died at Paris. Upon which many Towns voluntarily yielded; and Multitudes of the French forsook the English to join with Charles. And though the English Forces then in France were not altogether slothful, yet through a fatal Security, or Negligence, or both, at Home there were not speedy Sufficiencies of Resistance ministred. Richard Duke of York was created Regent of France; but before he arrived there, Paris was lost by the Treachery of the Citizens, Feb. 27, 1436. And Philip Duke of Burgundy, now in Person gives Proofs of his Dissatisfaction to the English, bringing his Forces before the Town of Calais; for the Relief of which Place, the Protector Humphrey Duke of Gloucester, passed with a great Army; but Burgundy had withdrawn his Forces before the Duke arrived. Howbeit the Duke took some Revenge on him, by wasting

Part of his Dominions; which done, he with Honour returned to his Charge in England.

In France the Earl of Warwick was very active, driving the Duke of Burgundy's Forces from Crotoy, freeing Abbeville from the Danger of a Besile; for twenty Days spoiling the Country of Picardy about Amiens and Artois. The Duke of Somerset, Lords Talbot and Wiltshir were also busied in other Places for the Security of what the English had gained. But the common Enemy, the Turk, increasing in Strength, Ambassadors were sent from all Parts to determine these bloody Differences betwixt the Nations of France and England, whereupon a Truce was made by the two Kings for eighteen Months.

A. D. 1444, was King Henry married with Margaret the Daughter of Renate, Duke of Anjou and Lorraine. In which Marriage, say some, began the mournful Tragedies of our Country; for after this Day, the Fortune of the World began to decline the King; so that he lost his Friends in England, and Revenues in France; for shortly all was ruled by the Queen and her Council, to the great Disprofit of the King and his Realm, and to the Maugre and Obloquy of the Queen herself, who had many a wrong and false Report made of her.

A. D. 1447, Good Duke Humphrey's Death was effected. He was much hated by the Queen and her Party, as the only Man who by his Prudence, as also by the Honour and Authority of his Birth and Place, seemed to impeach that Sovereign Command, which they pretended to settle in the King, but meant indeed (as the Manner is under soft Princes) to reign themselves in another's Name. Many great Lords were drawn in (at the time of a Parliament then holden at St. Edmond's-bury) to concur for his Destruction, not perceiving that thereby they pluckt up the Flood-gate, at which the Duke of York should enter. This great Duke being come to attend in this Parliament, was arrested for High Treason by John Lord Beaumont, High Constable of England, the Dukes of Buckingham, Somerset, and others; and to guard him, certain of the King's Household were appointed; but it was not long before he was found dead, whose Body was shewed to the Lords and Commons, as if he had died of a Palsy or Imposthume. His Servants. Sir Roger Chamberlaine, Richard Middleton, Thomas Herbert, Arthur Turfey, Esquires, and Richard Needham, Gent. were condemned of High Treason, and had this unexampled Punishment; they were drawn from the Tower to Tyburn, there hang'd, let down quick, stript naked, mark'd with a Knife to be quarter'd, and then a Charter of Pardon for their Lives was shewed by the Marquess of Suffolk. Thomas Wild, the Duke's Servant also, being condemned and pardoned, had for a Preamble in his Letters Patents Words importing, That he had been one among many other Traytors against the King with Duke Humphrey, who went about and practised to deliver Eleanor, late Wife to the Duke, out of Prison, for which Purpose he had gathered a great Power and Number of Men to come to the Parliament at Bury, there to have contrived the King's Destruction. Such was the End of this great Prince, who by the People of England was thought to be doubly murder'd, by Detraction and deadly Practice. He was not only a true Lover of learned Men, but himself was also learned, and a Father of his Country. And now the whole Frame

1447.
 {
 John
 Kemp,
 A. B. of
 Cant.

Frame of Government seemed to repose itself on the Queen, and such Favourites as the King by her Commendations liked.

The Affairs of France were neglected; and the Duke of York perceiving the King to be ruled, and not to rule, began secretly to allure his Friends and Nobility, and privily declared to them his Title to the Crown, as likewise he did to certain Governors of Cities and Towns. Which Attempt was so politickly and closely carried, that his Provision was ready before his Purpose was publick. The very State of things invited this fatal Conspiracy, there being now a milder King than England was worthy of, a Council out of Favour with the People, manifold Losses and Dishonours abroad, a turbulent and jealous Condition of Things at home. Of all which the Duke of York had made his best Use, cherishing the popular Discontents; and instead of seeking to redress any Evils in the State, he represented them to be worse than they were, thereby to ripen that Breach of Loyalty in the Hearts of Men, which his Ambition wrought upon. In France Matters went on very unhappily on the English Side; for the Duke of Somerset, during the Truce, suffered a Town of Bretaigne to be surprised, denying Restitution thereof, cherished his Soldiers in their Riot and Disorders. The French therefore making this their Example, surprised Town after Town, till they had gained all Normandy, and within few Years extorted the Dutchy of Gascoign out of the English Possession.

In the mean time the Duke of York raised his Esteem in England, by his appeasing of a Tumult which had happened in Ireland. And at a Parliament holden at Westminster, many Articles were exhibited by the Lower House against the Duke of Suffolk, wherein he was charged with evil Demeanor, Misprision, and Treason, and committed Prisoner to the Tower, from whence he was discharged within a few Weeks after.

About this Time Adam Molina, Bishop of Chichester, and Keeper of the Privy Seal, a wise and stout Man, stood in the Duke of York's Way to the Crown; therefore he procured him to be slain at Portsmouth by certain Ship-men. And in a Parliament holden at Leicester, the Duke of Suffolk, a principal Pillar of King Henry's Safety, was set at again by the Yorkists. They charge that for a Crime on him, (namely) the Delivery of Anjou and Maine which themselves had universally in a former Parliament assented unto and ratified. This they prosecuted so effectually, (tho' unjustly) against him, that he was condemn'd to be banished for five Years; but in his Way to Banishment he was, by some employed on Purpose, taken at Dover Road, where they struck off his Head at the side of a Cock-boat; nor was his Death much lamented of the People, because he was thought to have been a private Actor in the Death of the noble Duke of Gloucester. Now the Yorkists, having thus rid Suffolk out of the Way, think in no unfit Time to begin to put their Designs in Practice; so induce the Commons of Kent to make an Insurrection. The Captain of the Rebels was a Villain named Jack Cade, whom some by contraries call Jack Amend-all. Their Demands were That the Duke of York, now in Ireland, might be called home; and that he, with some others, whom Cade named, might be principally used in Council; That those guilty of good Duke Humphrey's Death might

Black Cade with rebellious Rout comit Disorders

p. 122

The House of York claim the Crown.

p. 123

Mr Guiche Sculp.

ight
That ight Rebel Essex
mitted
Landon
Say, T wer, I
of the Procla
don,
But C raife
Mr.
The mour his P Ireland yers from his o in tal Refor
that bedie
Henry
Duke
there and a But t gag favou was
and mitte Whic solve
King gainst of, p again face accu havin
and himse
Time
Paul Chie

might receive due Punishment : That the Grievances of the People might be redressed. These Kentish Rebels (with whom others from Essex joyned) after they had committed some Outrages in and about London, as the beheading the Lord Say, Treasurer of England, Mr. Cromer, High Sheriff, plundering many of the Citizens, &c. upon the King's Proclamation and Assurance of Pardon, returned to their own Homes. But Cade afterwards attempting to raise new Troubles, was slain by Mr. Edan, a Kentish Gentleman. The Duke of York finding the Humours of the popular Body fitted for his Purpose, came suddenly out of Ireland, and confederated with divers Noblemen to take the Crown from Henry's Head, and to set it on his own. Howbeit their Pretence in taking Arms, was only for the Reformation of the State, professing that they meant all Honour and Obedience to the King ; which King Henry and his Friends, chiefly the Duke of Somerset, could not believe, therefore an Army was prepared, and also advanc'd against the Yorkists. But before the Armies came to engage in Fight, by such that secretly favoured the Duke of York, the King was persuaded to a Reconciliation, and that Somerset should be committed Prisoner to his own House. Which done, and York having dissolved his Army, he came to the King making great Complaints against Somerset ; who hearing thereof, presented himself to the King against his Accuser, answering York Face to Face, and in plain Terms accused him of highest Treason, as having conspired to depose the King, and to take the Sovereignty upon himself. Whereupon York was for a Time put under Restraint, till in St. Paul's Church in London, before the Chief of the Nobility, he took a solemn Oath to be a true, faithful, and obedient Subject unto King Henry. 1454.

A. D. 1453, John Lord Talbot, Thomas first Earl of Shrewsbury of that Fa-Burloicer, mily, with an Army was sent to regain Gascoign. Bordeaux her self yielded to this great Soldier ; whence he went to relieve Castilion ; but charging the Enemy upon much unequal Terms, was there slain in the Field, together with his Son the Viscount Lisle.

After which Battle, when the Flames of intestine War began to flash out in England betwixt the two Families of York and Lancaster, the martial Men of England were called home out of France to maintain the Factions here : At which Time a French Captain scoffing, asked an English Man, when they would return again into France ? To whom the English Man, feelingly and upon a true Ground answered, When your Sins shall be greater and more grievous in the Sight of God than ours are now. A. D. 1453. the Queen was delivered of a Son, who was named Edward.

A. D. 1454, the Duke of York, in despite of his sacred Oath so publicly taken, raised Arms against the King, marching with his Forces towards London. Against whose coming King Henry prepared an Army, with which he advanced to St. Albans, where a sharp Battle was fought, and the Royal Party worsted. On the King's Side were slain the Duke of Somerset, Earls of Northumberland and Stafford, Lord Clifford, with sundry worthy Knights and Esquires. The King himself was shot into the Neck with an Arrow, taken Prisoner, and conveyed back to London ; where in July immediately following a Parliament was holden, the Precursor whereof was a Blazing Star, which appeared in June, extending its Beams 1458. Beams to the South. The first popular Act of this Assembly was to restore the Memory of Duke Humphrey to Honour, declaring him to have been a true Subject to the King and Realm. The next was to free the Yorkists from Treason, as to their taking up of Arms. In this Parliament the Duke of York created himself Protector of England; the Earl of Salisbury, his great Confident, was made Lord Chancellor, and the Earl of Warwick, (Salisbury's Son) Captain of Calais. They feared as yet to touch King Henry's Life, because the People did wonderfully esteem and reverence him for his Holiness. But that they (the Yorkists) might with the more Facility uncrown, and at last kill him, they by Degrees work'd out his ancient Counsellors, and placed of their own Creatures in their Rooms.

And now the French encouraged by our inward Divisions, landed at Sandwich Fifteen thousand Men, where they did some Spoil, then departed. Another Party of them burned Forway and some other Towns in Devonshire.

A. D. 1458, the Lords met at London to compose all Quarrels, bringing with them great Troops of armed Attendants, which thro' the great Vigilancy and Providence of the then Mayor of London, Godfrey Bullein (Queen Anne Bullein's Ancestor) dutifully kept the King's Peace. This Meeting of the Lords ended in a Composure, tho' it continued but a short Time before both Sides made Preparations for War; and at Blore Heath they came to Battle, which was long and bloody; but at length the worst of the Day fell to the King's Side. Howbeit not long after, the King put the Yorkists to Flight at Ludlow, which Town was spoiled to the bare Walls.

In a Parliament holden at Wentworth, the Duke of York, Earls of March, Salisbury, Warwick, Rutland, and others, were attainted of High Treason, and had their whole Estates confiscated. But on July 9, 1460, at Northampton, was the fatal Battle, where Henry's Forces were utterly broken and vanquished, through the Treachery of the Lord Grey of Rutben, who quitted his Place, and fled to the Yorkists. The Duke of Buckingham, Earl of Shrewsbury, Viscount Beaumont, Lord Egremont, valiant Sir William Lucy, with many other of the King's Friends were slain, and the King himself fell a Prey into his Enemies Hands, who carried him to London, where a Parliament began October 8. At which Parliament Richard Duke of York made his Claim to the Crown, publishing his Pedigree to them on this Sort, namely, that Lionel, third Son of King Edward III. had Issue Philippa his Daughter, who was married to Edmond Mortimer Earl of March, who had Issue Roger Earl of March, who had Issue Edmond Earl of March, Roger, Anne, and Eleanor; which said Edmond, Roger, and Eleanor, died without Issue, and Anne, the Heir of that House, was married to Richard Earl of Cambridge (the Son of Edmond Duke of York, Fifth Son to King Edward III.) which said Earl of Cambridge had Richard, now Duke of York. He also alledged, that the Descendants of John of Gaunt, Fourth Son and younger Brother to Lionel, had hitherto holden the Crown of England unjustly; for that himself, the said Richard Plantagenet, Duke of York, was the lawful Heir, being the Son of Richard Earl of Cambridge and Anne aforesaid. While this weighty Controversy, to whom the Crown of Right belonged, was under under Debate, a Crown which hung for an Ornament in the Middle of the Roof of the Room, where the Knights and Burgesses met to consult, and also the Crown, which for like Cause stood upon the highest Tower of Dover Castle, both fell suddenly down, which were vulgarly construed to be of ill Portent to King Henry. The Conclusion of the Parliament concerning the Crown was, That Henry should enjoy it during Life, and then it should remain to Richard Duke of York, and his Heirs; and King Henry's Heirs to be for ever excluded. Whereupon the Duke was proclaimed Heir apparent; but this while the Queen was gathering Forces in the North, resolving, if possible, to maintain the Possession of the Crown, and to secure it for her Son. The Duke of York therefore with an Army marcheth against her, and near unto Wakefield both Hosts join Battle, where the Queen at length gained the Victory. The Duke himself with divers Men of Account were slain in the Fight, and the Earl of Salisbury was taken Prisoner, and beheaded. And now Edward Earl of March, the Son of Richard Duke of York, takes upon him to maintain the Quarrel, and at Mortimer's Cross, near Ludlow, he set upon the Queen's Army. At which Time there appeared three Sons, which suddenly joined in one. The Battles maintained themselves with great Fury, but in the End March obtained the Victory. There were taken Sir Owen Teder or Tudor (Father to Jasper Earl of Pembroke) whom Earl Edward caused to be beheaded; taken also were Sir John Scudamor and his two Sons, and other Persons of Rank.

A. D. 1461, both Armies met and engaged in Fight at St. Albans wherein the Queen's Side won the Day, and recover'd the King, whom the Yorkists had brought along with them from London. Howbeit the Londoners stood wholly for the Earl of March (whose Presence and Carriage made him amiable among the People, especially Women) and at his Return to London from the Fight proclaimed him King of England. King Henry's Wife was Margaret, Daughter of Renate King of Jerusalem, Sicily, and Arragon, Duke of Anjou and Lorraine.

King Henry's Issue was only Edward. He was a Prince free from Pride, given much to Prayer, well read in the Scripture, charitable, so chaste and modest, that when certain young Women presented themselves before him in a Mask, with their Hair loose, and bare Breasts laid out, he immediately rose up and departed with these Words; Fie, fie for Shame, forsooth ye are to blame. He took all Injuries, whereof he received Plenty, so patiently, that he not only did not seek to revenge them, but gave God Thanks that he did send them to punish his Sins in this Life, that he might escape Punishment in the Life to come. To a Ruffin that struck him on the Face whilst he was Prisoner, he only said, Forsooth you are to blame to strike me your anointed King. Not long before his Death, being demanded why he had so long held the Crown of England unjustly, he replied, My Father was King of England, quietly enjoying the Crown all his Reign; and his Father, my Grandfire, was also King of England; and I even a Child in the Cradle, was proclaimed and crowned King without any Interruption, and so held it Forty Years well near, all the States doing Homage unto me, as to my Ancestors. Therefore I say with King David, My Lot is fallen 1461. fallen in a fair Ground, I have a goodly Heritage : My Help is from the Lord, who saveth the Upright in Heart. He founded those famous Colleges of Eaton, and King's College in Cambridge.

In A. D. 1435, the River Thames was so frozen up, that the Merchants, who came to the Thames Mouth, were carried to London by Land.

In or near the Year of our Lord 1442, was Eleanor Cobham, the good Duke Humphrey's Wife, arraigned of Sorcery and Treason, for setting on Bullenbrooke and Southwell to take away the King's Life by Necromancy. Something of the Fact, 'tis said, she either confessed, or was proved against her ; for the which she was put to solemn and publick Penance in London three several Days, then was committed to perpetual Imprisonment.

Line of YORK.

EDWARD IV.

A. D. 1460. Edward IV. was the eldest Son of Richard Duke of York, and began to reign in the 20th Year of his Age. At which Time Henry of Windsor had many Friends remaining, who by open Hostility fought to re-settle him on the English Throne. The Battle at Towton fought on Palm-Sunday, 1461, is very memorable, wherein died the Lords Beaumont, Newil, Willoughby, Wells, Scales, Grey, Dacres, Fitz-Hugh, Beckingham, Knights, Esquires, and Gentlemen a great Number, and in all on both Parts 35,091, but Henry lost the Day.

A. D. 1461, and June 28, was Edward Duke of York Earl of March crowned King at Westminster with great Solemnity ; and in November following was Henry of Windsor and his Son Edward by Parliament disinherited of their Right or Claim to the Crown. The Dukes of Excester and Somerset, and Earl of Devonshire, with 140 more, were attainted and disinherited.

Queen Margaret the mean while was gaining Aids from France, but they were discomfited by Bastard Ogle. Then with the Scots she entered Northumberland, took the Castle of Bamburgh, and passed forward to the Bishoprick of Durham, her Forces daily increasing. But these also were defeated by King Edward at Hegley Moor, where Sir Ralph Pierce dying, said, I have saved the Bird in my Breast, meaning his Oath made to King Henry, in whose Cause he lost his Life.

At Hexham also were Henry's Forces defeated, but himself with much Difficulty escaped into Scotland. Shortly after which this unfortunate Prince came into England in Disguise, but being betray'd, was apprehended at Waddington-Hall as he sat at Dinner, from whence he was conveyed to London, with his Legs bound to the Stirrups, and at London was arrested by the Earl of Warwick, and committed to the Tower.

And now King Edward thinks himself at leisure to marry, yet refuseth all Foreign Matches, where-he had many offered, and takes his Consort an inferior Subject, the Relict of his mortal Enemy, Sir John Grey, slain at the Battle of St. Albans on King Henry's Side. This Lady Elizabeth Grey becoming a Suitor unto the King for her Joining, kind King Edward became a Suitor unto her for a Night's Lodging; but she wisely answered him, when he became importunate, That as she did account herself too base to be his Wife, so she did think herself too good to be his Whore. When he would needs marry this Lady, to the great Discontent of his Council, but especially of his Mother; his Mother alledged many Reasons to the contrary, and amongst the rest, this: That only her Widowhood might be sufficient to restrain him, for that it was an high Disparagement to a King, to be dishonoured with Bigamy in his first Marriage. To which the King pleasantly answered: In that she is a Widow, and hath already Children, by God's blessed Lady, I am a Bachelor and have some too, and so each of us hath a Proof, that neither of us are like to be barren. And therefore, Madam, I pray you be content, I trust in God she shall bring you forth a young Prince, that shall please you. And as for the Bigamy, let the Bishop hardly lay in my Way when I come to take Orders; for I understand that it is forbidden to a Priest, but I never mistrust yet that it was forbidden to a Prince. On May 26, 1465, was this Lady, whom Edward had accepted to be his Queen, crowned at Westminster with all due Celebration. Her Father Sir Richard Woodville was created Lord Rivers, and made High Constable of England. Her Son Thomas Grey was created Marquis of Dorset, and her other Relations preferred. But this Marriage of the King did forely disgust the Earl of Warwick, who had courted the Duke of Savoy's Daughter for King Edward, that he turned his Affections from him to Henry, contriving all he could King Edward's Deposition. He wrought upon George Duke of Clarence the King's Brother, to favour his Designments, the Duke being the easier wrought upon, by reason he had before took Offence against his Brother about his Marriage, and preferring his Wife's Kindred. Then did Warwick by his Agents stir up a Commotion in the North, one Robert Huldren first heading a Rabble of about Fifteen thousand, and he being put to Death, Sir John Coniers undertook the leading of them, marching with them towards London, proclaiming, that King Edward was neither a just Prince to God, nor a profitable Prince to the Commonwealth. Against these Rebels the King sent an Army that engaged with them, not far from Banbury, where the Northern Men had gone off with the worst, had not John Clapham, Esquire, a Servant of Warwick's, display'd his Colours with the White Bear, and from an eminent Place cried a Warwick, a Warwick; whereat the Welchmen, fearing indeed that Warwick had been come, betook themselves to flight, leaving their General the Earl of Pembroke and his Brother in the Field, who valiantly fighting were encompassed and taken. The Earl with his Brother Sir Richard Herbert, were brought to Banbury, where with ten other Gentlemen, they lost their Heads, Coniers and Clapham being their Judges, 1469.

From hence the Northern Men, under the Conduct of Robin of Ridisdale, hastened to the King's Manor of Grafton, where the Queen's Father then lay, whom with his Son John they suddenly surprized, and at Northampton

1461. thampton, struck off their Heads. The King this while having prepared a mighty Army, marched towards Warwick's Company, and at Wolney pitched his Tents, the Enemy lying at a little Distance, in Readiness for Battle; but by Mediation of Friends a Peace was entreated. When the King resting secure, was by politick Warwick surprized in the dead of the Night, and carried Prisoner to Warwick Castle, from whence he was by Night convey'd to Middleham Castle in Yorkshire, where under Custody of the Earl's Brother, George Nevill, Archbishop of York, he was retained; but the Bishop granting him Liberty to ride a Hunting in the Forests and Parks, he fairly made his Escape. Warwick hereupon rages, but seeing no Remedy, he made use of Necessity, and gave forth that himself so caused it, having Power to make Kings, and to unmake them. Nor did he nor Clarence leave off here, but procured a Rebellion in Lincolnshire, where Sir Robert Wells, an expert Soldier, with Thirty thousand Commons, disturbed the Country, and in every Place proclaimed King Henry. At Stanford, Wells set upon the King's Forces (not staying for Warwick's coming) where he performed a most bloody Fight, till at length Sir Robert being taken, the Lincolnshire Men casting away their Coats, all run away. In regard whereof, this Battle was called the Battle of Lost-Coat-Fields. Wells with many others were put to Death, 1470. Upon this Defeat, Clarence and Warwick fled into France, thinking to take Sanctuary at Calais; but there the Lord Varwclear, whom Warwick had substituted his Deputy, denied them admittance, bidding them defiance with his great Guns; for which good Service King Edward made Varwclear himself Governour of Calais. But tho' the Lords were rejected here, yet were they with great Respect received at the French Court: King Lewis furnishing them with Aids, which effected, they set sail and landed at Dartmouth; from whence Warwick marched towards London, proclaiming Henry King, and commanding all from Sixteen to Sixty upon a great Penalty to take Arms against the Usurper Edward Duke of York.

And incredible was it to see the Confluence of them which came armed to him, who a little before applauded and approved none but King Edward. The Bastard Falconbridge in the West, and Earl of Pembroke in Wales, every where proclaiming King Henry also. And the Lord Montacute, who having mustered 6000 Men in the Name of King Edward, and brought them forward almost to Nottingham, drew them back again, alledging King Edward's Ungratefulness to his Friends. Every one cried now, a King Henry, a King Henry; a Warwick, a Warwick; and indeed all so applauded the Passage now on Foot, that King Edward was forced to fly beyond the Seas. His Queen Elizabeth stole out of the Tower, and took Sanctuary in Westminster, where she was delivered of a Son, which without all Pomp was there also baptized by the Name of Edward. Other Sanctuaries were also full of Edward's Friends; and now the Kentish Men took the Opportunity to rob, spoil, and do much harm about London, and some in London itself; and more would have done, had not the Earl of Warwick come in to their rescue; which increased his Name, that was great enough before. On October 6, the said Earl entred the Tower, wherein King Henry had been detained Prisoner almost the Space of nine Years, whom he released, and restored to him the Title of King and forthwith conveyed him thro' London to the Bishop's Palace, where a pompous Court was kept till the 13th of the same Month, on which Day Henry went crowned to St. Paul's, the Earl of Warwick bearing his Train, and Earl of Oxford the Sword, the People crying, God save King Henry. November 26, following, a certain Parliament was begun at Westminster, wherein King Edward was declared a Traytor to his Country, an Usurper of the Crown, and had all his Goods confiscated; the like Judgment passed against his Adherents. John Tipstose, Earl of Worcester, was beheaded. All the Statutes made by King Edward were revoked. The Crowns of England and France were entailed to King Henry, and his Heirs Male, and for want of such, unto George Duke of Clarence; and the Earl of Warwick was made Governor of the Land in those turbulent Times. But King Edward having received some Aids from the Duke of Burgundy, and the Promises of more in England, landed at Ravenspur in Yorkshire. At his first Arrival he seemed to lay aside his Claim to the Crown, pretending only to his Rights as a private Person; howbeit, when he had possessed himself of York, and got his Friends about him, he then marched in an hostile Manner till he came near to the City of Warwick, where his Brother Clarence brought in to his Assistance 1000 Men. And Clarence, reconciled to King Edward, sought to draw Warwick; to which end he sent messengers to him to the Town of Warwick, where he then lay; but Warwick bad the Messengers go tell the Duke from him, That he had rather be an Earl, and always like himself, than a perjured Duke; and that e'er his Oath should be falsified, the Duke's apparently was, he would lay down his Life at his Enemy's Foot, which he doubted not would be bought very dear. This stout Resolution made Edward more wary, therefore he hastens forward to obtain London, whither when he was come, the Citizens set open their Gates to him. And now peaceable Henry becomes Prisoner again to King Edward; who hearing of Warwick's Advance towards London, draws forth his Forces to meet him, taking Henry along with him; and upon Gladmore, near Barnet, on Easter-Day in the Morning, the King's and Earl's Hosts joined Battle, the best of the Day for a while being Warwick's; but at length through the Fogginess and Darkness of the Air, the Stars embroidered on the Earl of Oxford's Mens Coats, who were in the left Wing of the Battle, were mistaken for the Sun which King Edward's Men wore; in which Error Warwick's Battalion lets fly at their own Fellows, that were in great Forwardness of gaining the Victory, and they not knowing the Cause of the Error judged themselves betrayed; whereupon the Earl of Oxford with 800 Men, quitted the Field: Which great Warwick perceiving, he courageously animated his Men, and furiously rushed into the midst of his Enemies Battle, so far, that he could not be rescued; where valiantly fighting, he was slain. Marquis Montacute, making forward to relieve him, was also slain, whereby ended that bloody Day's Task. On King Edward's part died the Lord Cromwell, Lord Bourchier, Lord Barnes, Sir John Lisle. On the other Part, the Earl of Warwick, and his Brother, John Nevill, Marquis Montacute. On both sides Ten Thousand, most of which were buried upon the same Plain, where afterwards a Chapel was 1474. was built. In this same Year 1471, and within few Weeks after this, was a Battle fought at Tewksbury, betwixt King Edward and the Martial Queen Margaret, the Defeat happening to the Queen, on whose Side were slain John Lord Somerset, John Courtney Earl of Devonshire, Sir John Delves, Sir Edward Hampden, Sir Robert Whittingham, and Sir John Lewkner, with Three Hundred others. Amongst them that fled, Prince Edward, King Henry's Son, was one; him Sir Richard Crofts apprehended, and presented him to the King; whom the King a-while beheld with austere Countenance, at last demanded of him, how he durst with Banner displayed so presumptuously disturb his Realm? To which the Prince answered, That what he did was to recover his Father's Kingdoms and his most rightful Inheritance. How darest thou then, added the Prince, which art his Subject, display thy Colours against him thy Liege Lord? Which Answer so moved King Edward, that he dashed the Prince on the Mouth with his Gantlet, and Richard Duke of Gloucester, with some of the King's Servants, most shamefully murdered him at the King's Feet. His Body was buried in the Monastery of the Blackfryers at Tewksbury.

Edmund Duke of Somerset, the Prior of St. John's, with many Knights and Esquires, were taken forth of Sanctuary, and executed at Tewksbury. Queen Margaret, in this fatal Day of Battle, took into a Religious House, from whence she was taken and committed to sure and strait Keeping, in which Condition she remained till such Time as she was ransomed by her Father, Duke Renate. May 20, King Edward entred London; and in a few Days after, the crook-back'd

Duke of Gloucester stabbed harmless King Henry to the Heart. Whole murdered Body was on the Ascension Eve laid in an open Coffin, and conveyed to St. Paul's in London, where it rested uncovered one Day, and began to bleed afresh; thence it was carried to the Blackfriers Church, where it did bleed as before, then was buried at Chertsey in Surrey; but King Henry VII. translated it to his Chapel at Windsor.

A. D. 1474, was an Interview at Piquigny in France, of the two Kings of England and France, where falling into complimentary Conference, Lewis told King Edward that he would one Day invite him to Paris, there to court fair French Ladies, with whom if he committed any Sin, Lewis merrily told him that Cardinal Bourbon should be his Confessor, and to be sure his Penance should be the easier, for that Bourbon used to kiss fair Ladies himself. This was no sooner spoken, howsoever meant, but Edward was as forward of Thanks and Acceptance; which King Lewis observing, rounded Philip Comines his Bosom Servant in the Ear, telling him flatly, That he liked not Edward's Forwardness to go to Paris, there had been too many English Princes at that Court already. After King Edward's Return into England, as he was Hunting in Arrow-Park, belonging to Thomas Burdet, Esq; with the Death of much Game he slew a white Buck, which the Esquire much fancied; whereupon he wished the Horns in that Person's Belly that moved the King to kill that Buck: For which Words he was accused and condemned of Treason, his Words being wrested, that he withheld the Horns in the King's Belly, and was beheaded at Tyburn.

A. D. 1478, George Duke of Clarence

King Henry VI. stabbed by Richard Duke of Gloucester. p.130.

King Edward V. and his Brother smothered in Bed. p.136.

rence,
Broth was a mitter tion vers Peopl fully pose
the fallly Broth not c which upon tainte ty, a 14-8 penny in a was King
that
and for t O u no M A into nels, to hi faint hort
the unto bear Tim each Whi shall God
dred own Wor
the in th datic of h ciful War

rence, by the Procurement of his Brother Richard Duke of Gloucester, was accused of Treason, and committed to the Tower. His Accusation was, That he had caused divers of his Servants to inform the People that Mr. Burdet was wrongfully put to Death: That on purpose to exalt himself and Heirs to the Regal Dignity, he had most falsely published that the King his Brother was a Bastard, and therefore not capable to wear the Crown; for which, and the like Crimes charged upon him, he was in Parliament attainted of Treason, and found Guilty, and on the Eleventh of March 1478, after he had offered his Mas-penny in the Tower, was drowned in a Butt of Malmsey, whose Body was buried at Tewksbury. But the King was afterwards much grieved that he had consented to his Death; and would say when any made Suit for the Life of a condemned Person, O unfortunate Brother, for whose Life no Man would make Suit.

A. D. 1483, King Edward fell into a dangerous and deadly Sickness, when calling for his Lords into his sick Presence, and raising his faint Body on the Pillows, he exhorted and required them all, for the Love that they had ever born unto him, for the Love that our Lord beareth unto us all, that from that Time forward all Grievs forgotten, each of them would love the other. Which, said he, I verily trust you shall, if you any thing regard either God or your King, Affinity or Kindred, your own Country, or your own Safety. Shortly after which Words he departed this Life, April the 9th, and was buried at Windsor in the New Chapel, whose Foundation himself had laid. 'Tis said of him, that he was just and merciful in Peace, sharp and fierce in War, and that never any King was more familiar with his Subjects than he. In the Beginning of his Reign he used to sit in Person certain Days together in the Court of King's Bench to see Justice and Equity done. His Wife was Elizabeth, the Daughter of Rich. Woodville Earl of Rivers, by his Wife Jaquelana Dutchess of Bedford, the Daughter of Peter Earl of St. Paul. His Issue were two Sons, Edward Prince of Wales, born in the Sanctuary of Westminster, November 4, 1471, and Richard Duke of York; and seven Daughters, Elizabeth born at Westminster, February 1466, married with Henry VII. Cicely, married unto John Viscount Wells, and buried at Quarena in the Isle of Wight. Anne was married unto Thomas Howard Duke of Norfolk, Earl Marshal, and High Treasurer of England, and was buried at Framingham in Norfolk. Bridget was veiled a Nun in the Nunnery of Dartford in Kent. Mary died in the Tower of Greenwich 1482, and was buried at Windsor. Margaret died an Infant. Catharine was married to William Courtney, Earl of Devonshire and Lord of Oakhampton. His Concubines were Elizabeth Lucy and Three others, which were of Three several Humours, as himself would say: One the merriest, which was Shore's Wife; another the wittiest; and the Third the holiest; for she had wholly devoted herself to his Bed and her Beads. His bafe Issue were Arthur surnamed Plantagenet, and Elizabeth.

He ordained Penal Statutes against excessive Pride in Apparel, especially against long picked Shoes then worn, which had grown to such an Extreme, that the Pikes in their Toes were turned upwards, and with Silver Chains or Silk Laces tied to the Knee. He gave some Cotswold Sheep to Henry of Castille, and John of Aragon, 1465, which hath 1483.
K 2 been

1483. been accounted one of the greatest Prejudices that ever happened to England. One Walker, a substantial Citizen of London, was beheaded in Smithfield, for only saying to his Child, that he would make him Heir of the Crown, meaning his House, which had that Sign.

In the fallen Estate of King Henry, many of the Nobles that had taken Part with Henry, were put to fly for their Lives into Foreign Countries; and amongst the rest Henry Holland Duke of Excester and Earl of Huntingdon, Son to the Lady Elizabeth, second Daughter of John of Gaunt, and Husband to the Sister of King Edward IV. was constrained to live in Exile, in miserable Want and Penury. For, saith Philip Comines, I once saw the Duke of Excester run on foot bare-legg'd, after the Duke of Burgundy's Coach and Train, begging an Alms for God's Sake; but being known what he was, Burgundy gave him a small Pension for his Maintenance. The Art of Printing was first found out in Germany by a Knight, called John Guttenburghe, and brought into England by William Caxton, a Merchant of London, who first practised the same in the Abby of Westminster. Anno Dom. 1471.

E D W A R D V.

A. D. E Edward, the eldest Son of King Edward the Fourth, being a Child but of about Twelve Years of Age when his Father died, was committed to the Government of his Uncle Sir Anthony Woodville, a Right Honourable Person, with whom were joined other of the Queen's Friends. But Richard Duke of Gloucester was much discontented that they should have the keeping of him secure, whom he designed to destroy, that thereby the Crown might become his. This bloody Man therefore, the better to effect his wicked Purposes, did every where represent the Queen's Kindred to be Enemies to the ancient Nobility, and that they would abuse the King's Name to their undoing. With which and the like Suggestions, he wrought upon the Duke of Buckingham and the Lord Hastings that had formerly born no great Good-will to the Queen's Friends) to join with him, utterly to remove from the King's Company all his Mother's Friends, under the Name of the ancient Nobles Enemies. Then the Hypocrite Gloucester understanding that the Lords attending the King purposed to bring the King to London to his Coronation strongly guarded, he therefore procured the Queen to be brought in Mind, That it was not needful, but would be jeopardous for the King to be brought up strong: for that if the Lords of her Kindred should assemble in the King's Name much People, they should give the Lords of the contrary Faction Cause to suspect, that this was not done for the King's Safety, whom no Man impugned, but for the Destruction of the ancient Nobility; by which Means the Nation should be brought into Uphear. The Queen thus over-reached, sent such Word unto the King and his Friends about him; so that they mistrusting no Guile, brought the King forwards with a small Company, in great haste, but with no good Speed; for the

the Dukes of York and Buckingham at Stony-Stratford, as the King was on his Way to London, took him by Violence from his Friends, arrested the Lord Richard Grey, Sir Thomas Vaughan, and Sir Richard Hawt, in the King's Presence, and imprisoned Sir Anthony Woodville, Lord Rivers, in Northampton; whom in a short Time after, with the Lord Richard and Sir Thomas Vaughan, they sent Prisoners into the North. Which done, with much Honour and humble Reverence they convey the King towards London. But the Queen hearing of these Proceedings, in great Fright and Heaviness she bewailed her Child's Reign, her Friends and her own Mishap, cursing the Time that ever she dissuaded the gathering of Power about the King; got herself in all haste possible, with her young Son Richard, and Daughters, into the Sanctuary, lodging herself and Company in the Abbot's Palace at Westminster; whither the Archbishop of York went to comfort her, telling her, he hoped that the Matter was nothing so bad as she doubted it; and that he was put in good Hope, and out of Doubt, by a Message sent him from the Lord Hastings, (whose Faithfulness to the King, he said, none did nor had Cause to suspect) Ab woe worth him, quoth the Queen, he is one that laboureth to destroy me and my Blood. When the Archbishop was returned Home, in the Dawning of the Day, he might, out of his Chamber-window see all the Thames full of Boats, with the Duke of Gloucester's Servants in them, watching that none should go to Sanctuary, nor none pass unsearched. Great then was the Commotion and Murmur, as well in other Places about, as especially in the City, the People diversly divining upon this Dealing; and some Lords, Knights, and Gentlemen, either for Favour of the Queen, or fear of themselves, assembled in sundry Companies harnessed. But these Commotions and Fears were moderated by the Lord Hastings then Lord Chamberlain, who persuaded that the Duke of Gloucester was a sure Friend to the King, and that the Lord Rivers with the others were for Matters attempted against the Dukes of Gloucester and Buckingham, put under Arrest; and that the King was bringing up to his Coronation.

May 4, the King entred the City, and was lodged in the Bishop's Palace, where was held a great Council, and the Dukes of Gloucester, Buckingham, and all the Lords, were sworn to the King, and the Duke of Gloucester was chosen to be Protector of the King and his Realm. And now the Protector, to the End he might finish his Designs at once, projected to get the young Duke of York out of Sanctuary; in order to which he pretends, that the said Duke only was a fit Associate for his Brother the King, and that it was dishonourable both for the King and those about his Grace, that the King's Brother should be fain to keep Sanctuary. But because the Duke might not be taken out of Sanctuary by Violence, the Archbishop of York was therefore employed to persuade with the Queen to yield him up. This the Archbishop undertook (tho perhaps not very willingly) alledging to the Queen the Comfort that his Society would be to the King his Brother, and that it would take of the Obloquy of one Brother's being afraid of the other, which would seem to be by the Duke's being kept in Sanctuary. The Queen, desirous to keep him where he was, pleaded his Infancy, his being vexed with Sickness, inso-much that she durst put no earthly Person in Trust with his keeping but herself only: For tho' others (said she)

1483.

she) haply might do their best to him, yet there was none that knew better than herself how to order him, she having so long kept him; nor was there any more like to cherish him than his own Mother that bare him. And to this her Reply she added many biting Words against the Protector. Howbeit, in the Conclusion finding by the Archbishop's Words, that the Protector would fetch her Son out by Force, if otherwise he might not be had, she deemed it best to deliver him; which she did to the Bishop and other Lords with him; saying to them, I deliver him and his Brother into your Hands to keep, of whom I shall ask them before God and the World. And to the Child she said, Farewel, mine own sweet Son, God send you good Keeping; let me kiss you once e'er you go, for God knows when we shall kiss together again; and therewithal she kissed him, blessed him, turned her back and wept, and so went away, leaving the Child weeping as fast. Then the Lords brought him to the Protector, who took him in his Arms, and gave him a Judas Kifs.

June the 13th, many Lords assembled in the Tower, and there sat in Council, communing concerning the King's Coronation, for the which Pageants were provided; and whilst they were in Consultation, in came the Protector about Nine of the Clock, saluting them courteously; and excusing himself that he came so late, saying merrily, I have been a Sleeper To-day; then after a while departed, and about Eleven of the Clock returned thither, but with a wonderful sour and angry Countenance, knitting his Brows, frowning and fretting and biting his Lips; and after some short Time said,

What are they worthy to have, who imagine and compass my Destruction, that am so near of Blood to the King, and that am Protector of his Royal Person and Realm? The Lord Hastings answered, That they deserved to be punished as heinous Traytors, whosoever they were; and so said the other Lords. This is, quoth the Protector, yonder Sorceress my Brother's Wife, meaning the Queen, and that other Witch of her Council, Shore's Wife, with their Affinity, who by their Sorcery and Witchcraft have wasted my Body; and therewith he plucked up his Doublet Sleeve to the Elbow, on his left Arm, shewing a wearish withered Arm, and small, as it never was otherwise. Whereupon the Lords Minds much gave them, that this was but for a Quarrel.

Howbeit the Lord Chamberlain (who from the Death of King Edward had kept Jane Shore) said, Certainly, my Lord, if they have so done, they are worthy of great Punishment. What, quoth the Protector, thou servest me with Ijs and with Ands I ween; I tell thee they have so done, and that I will make good on thy Body, Traytor. And therewith he rapt on the Board with his Fist: At which Sign given, one without the Chamber cried out, Treason; whereupon many Men in Harness came rushing into the Council Chamber, where they seized on the Lord Hastings, whom the Lord Protector bad speed, and shrieve him apace, For by St. Paul, saith he, I will not go to Dinner till I see thy Head off; which accordingly was done; for he was presently brought forth to the Tower-Green, where, upon a long Log of Timber his Head was struck off. Thus ended this honourable Man, easy to be beguiled. Now the Protector, to set some Colour upon the Matter, after he had dined, sent in all haste for many substantial Men out of the City into the

the Tower, against whose coming thither, himself and Buckingham his Creature had harnessed themselves in old rusty Briganders, as though some sudden Necessity had constrained them to put on such Armour. And being come, the Protector told them, that the Lord Chamberlain Hastings, and others of his Conspiracy, had contrived suddenly to have destroyed him and the Duke of Buckingham there the same Day in Council, of the which Treason he never had Knowledge before Ten of the Clock the same Forenoon. And for farther appeasing of the Peoples Minds concerning this Lord's Death, he caused also the same Day an Herald of Arms to proclaim it thro' the City of London, that the Lord Hastings, with divers others, had conspired to murder the Lord Protector and Duke of Buckingham sitting in Council, and after to have taken upon them to rule the King and Realm at their own Pleasures. By and by after this he caused the Sheriff of London to repair unto Jane Shore's House, and to spoil her of all that she had; then procured the Bishop of London to put her to open Penance for her former Dalliance with his Brother King Edward, and 'tis said, he prohibited any from relieving her extreme Wants. Certain it is, that she lived very mean and beggarly in her old Age. She died not till the 20th Year of King Henry VIII. The Protector had also so contrived it with his Cabal, that the same Day, and about the same Hour in which the Lord Chamberlain was beheaded at the Tower, those Lords taken from the King at Stony-Stratford and Northampton should be beheaded at Pontefract. Which accordingly was done in the Presence and by the Order of Sir Richard Ratcliffe, who at their Execution would not permit them to speak or declare their Innocency. And now the Way thus prepared, Gloucester hastens for his own Coronation, instead of setting the Crown on his Nephew's Head. Edmund Sharw the Mayor of London, he wins to his Side. And the Mayor's Brother Dr. Sharw (by the Direction of the Protector and his Council) upon Sunday June 19, at Paul's Cross, declared to the People, that King Edward IV. was never lawfully married to the Queen, and therefore his Children were Bastards. Moreover, that neither King Edward himself, nor the Duke of Clarence were reckoned (by those that were of Secrecy in the Household) for the Duke of York's Children; but, saith he, as for the very noble Prince, the Lord Protector, he is the Father's own Picture, his own Countenance. At the Time of the uttering of these Words (according to the Plot laid before-hand) the Protector should have come in, to the End that those Words just meeting with his Presence, the People might have been the more affected with them; but whether by the Slowness of the Protector in coming, or the Doctor's too much Speed, the Protector came not till these Words were over: Nevertheless when the Doctor spied his Lordship coming at last, he abruptly broke off from the Matter he was upon, to repeat the former Words, This is the very noble Prince, &c. But the People were so far from crying, King Richard (as it was hoped they would) that they stood as if they had been without Sense, they were so amazed at this shameful Harangue. And the poor Parson, when he had done, got him Home, and there consumed and pined to Death in few Days after. The Theme of his Preachment was, Bastard slips shall never take deep Root. On the 1483.

Tuesday following Henry Duke of Buckingham made an Oration to the Lord Mayor, Aldermen, and Commons in the Guildhall of London, wherein he aspersed King Edward IV. as a Tyrant, his Children as Bastards; endeavoured to prove the Protector to be the only true Heir to the Crown; perswading the Citizens, that they should therefore join with the Nobility in petitioning the Protector to take the Government of the Realm upon him, according to his very right and just Title. The next Day the Mayor, Aldermen, and chief Commoners of the City resorted unto the Protector to Baynard's Castle; whither also repaired Buckingham and other Nobles, with many Knights and Gentlemen. When they were met together, Buckingham desired the Protector's Pardon, and Licence to acquaint his Grace with the Intent of their coming (as tho' he had not known it before) which, in short, was to beseech him to take the Crown and Government of the Realm upon him. At which Words the Protector began to look angrily, withal denying to yield thereto. Whereupon his Privado, Buckingham, threatened, saying, That if he would not, they would find out some other Man that should, for they were resolved that King Edward's Lineage should no longer reign over them; and then Richard was pleased to accept the Crown as his just Right; the People thereat shouting and crying, King Richard, King Richard.

RICHARD III.

A. D. 1483. Richard III. Son of Richard Duke of York, was born with all his Teeth, and Hair to his Shoulders. This his monstrous Birth foreshewing his monstrous Conditions and Proceedings. June 22. he was by the Nobility and Citizens of London elected King of England, and afterward by Act of Parliament was confirmed. On June 25, he took his Seat in the King's Bench Court, and there pronounced Pardon of all Offences committed against him. On July 4. he came to the Tower, where he created Estates, ordained the Knights of the Bath, set at Liberty the Archbishop of York, and the Lord Stanley; and July 6, was anointed and crowned at Westminster: But this Usurper well knowing, that whilst his young Nephews were living, the Crown would not stand firm on his Head; he therefore employed Sir James Tyrrel, a Man of an aspiring Spirit, to procure these Childrens Destruction; which accordingly he did: For about Midnight Miles Forest and John Dighton, Tyrrel's bloody Instruments, came into the Chamber where the young King and his Brother lay, and suddenly wrapt them up in the Bed-cloaths, keeping by Force the Feather-Bed and Pillows hard upon their Mouths, that they were therein smother'd to Death. This Villany done, Sir James caused the Murtherers to bury their Bodies at the Stair's Foot, somewhat deep in the Ground, under a great Heap of Stones; though afterward King Richard caused them to be taken up, inclosed in Lead, and to be cast into a Place called the Black-deeps, at the Thames Mouth. But the Justice of God pursued the Murtherers;

herers; for Forest rotted away Piece-neal, Tyrrel died for Treason under Henry VII. and Dighton lived and died a Vagabond beyond the Seas:
And the Usurper, after this detestable fact, never had Quiet in his Mind, never thought himself secure; but when he went Abroad, his Eye still whirled about, his Body was privi-ly fenced, and his Hand ever on his Dagger; his Sleep interrupted with startling Dreams, sometimes suddenly starting up, leaping out of his Bed,
and running about the Chamber.
Immediately also after this Murder began the Conspiracy betwixt the Duke of Buckingham and divers other Gentlemen, against the Mur-derer. The Occasion of Bucking- ham's falling of from Richard is diversly reported; some say it was because the King would not grant him the Duke of Hereford's Lands, to which he pretended himself the rightful Heir; others impute it to the Duke's High-mindedness, that he could not bear the Glory of another. Himself said the Occasion was, the Murder of the two Children: But be the Occasion what it would, yet this is most sure, that the Enmity of the Duke's to the King proved of good Consequence to the rightful Heirs to the Crown. For hereupon the Duke left the Court, retiring to his own House of Brecknock, where he had in his Custody that true Friend to King Edward's Posterity, John Morton, Bishop of Ely, who,
by his Wisdom, abused the Duke's Pride to his own Deliverance, the Duke's Destruction, and Benefit of such to whom the Crown of Right appertained. When the Duke was first become alienated from the King, and came to his own House, he solicited the Bishop, his Prisoner, to speak his Mind freely to him in Matters of State; but the Bishop refused, thus answering him, ' In ' good Faith, my Lord, I love not ' much to talk with Princes, as a

' Thing not at all out of Peril,
' although the Words be with' out Fault; forasmuch as it shall ' not be taken as the Party meant
' it, but as it pleaseth the Prince to ' construe it. And ever I think on
' Aesop's Tale, that when the Lion
' had proclaimed, that on Pain of ' Death there should be no horned
' Beast abide in the Wood; one that ' had in his Forehead a Bunch of ' Flesh fled away a great Pace.
' The Fox that saw him run so fast,
' asked him, Whither he made all
' that Haste? He answered, In Faith
' I neither wot nor care, so I were
' once hence, because of this Pro' clamation of horned Beasts. What ' Fool (quoth the Fox) thou mayest
' well enough abide, the Lion meant
' not thee, for there is no Horn on
' thy Head. No marry, quoth he,
' that wot I well enough; but what
' and if he call it an Horn, where ' am I then?' But tho' the Bishop at the first declined talking of State Matters with the Duke, yet afterwards, when by often discoursing with the Duke, and other Circumstances, he found him to be of a proud Stomach, and emulated the King's Greatness, he would speak his Mind frankly enough to him, rendring the Usurper as odious as was possible, by alledging his Unnaturalness to his own Mother, in charging her with defiling the Marriage Bed; his Unnaturalness to his own Brothers and Nephews, in saying they were Bastards; his murdering his Nephews, and other Enormities. Then to tickle the Duke's Ambition, the Bishop would commend him to be a Person of such rare Virtues, that he merited to wear the Crown himself, inviting him for God's Sake, and his Country's

1483.

1483.

try's Sake, to take the Government upon himself, or otherwise to devise some Means how the Realm might be rid of the Tyrant, and brought under some good Governour. When the Duke had pondered awhile upon this and the like Discourse of the Bishop's, he acquainted the Bishop, That his Resolutions were to advance Henry Earl of Richmond to the Crown, and that the said Earl of Richmond, Heir of the House of Lancaster, should marry the Lady Elizabeth, eldest Daughter of Edward IV. by which Marriage the Houses of York and Lancaster should be united into one. To effect all which, the Duke and Bishop first made the Mothers of Elizabeth and Henry privy to their Design, and employed divers trusty Instruments to interest the Nobility and Gentry in the Design. Then the Bishop left Brecknock in Disguise, and sailed into Flanders, where he did Earl Henry eminent Service. Many great Persons combined to dethrone the Usurper, which he having Knowledge of, sent his loving Letters to the Duke of Buckingham, whom he understood to be Head of the Complotters, requesting him most earnestly to come to Court, for he was in great Want of his wife Counsel. But the Duke mistrusting his smooth Words, excused himself that he was sickly, and not well able to travel. The King therefore sent his Command to him, and Threats withal, if he refused to give his Attendance; unto which the Duke sent this resolute Answer, That he would not come to his mortal Enemy; and immediately prepared War against him. Then Thomas Marquess of Dorset came out of Sanctuary, and also gathered a Band of Men in the North; Sir Edward Courtency, and his Brother, the Bishop of Exeter, raised another Army in Devonshire and Cornwall; and in Kent, Sir Richard Guilford, and other Gentlemen, raised a Party; all which was done in a Moment. But the Usurper marching with his Host against the Duke's Forces, which were most Welsh, they, for want of Pay, and other Provision, brake up the Camp, and left the Duke to shift for himself; which when the Confederates understood, they also dispersed themselves. The Duke of Buckingham in Disguise repaired for Security unto a Servant of his near Shrewsbury, named Humphrey Banister; but the King by Proclamation, promising great Rewards to him that should detect the Duke; that Wretch, Banister, for the Hope of Gain, betrayed his Master the Duke; who with a Guard of Men was conveyed to Salisbury, where without Arraignment or Judgment, the Duke lost his Head. Howbeit the Traytor Banister did not only lose his promised Reward, but also received just Punishment from Heaven; for his eldest Son fell mad, and so died in a Hog-Sty; his second Son became deformed and lame in his Limbs; his third Son was drowned in a small Puddle of Water; his eldest Daughter was struck with a foul Leprosy; and himself, being of extreme Age, was found guilty of Murder, but saved by his Clergy. Divers of the Earl of Richmond's Party were put to Death; and so jealous was the King now of his ill-gotten Greatness, that he stord the Sea-coasts with Armies of Men, furnished the Ports with Store of Munition, and made all Things ready to prevent Earl Henry's Arrival; caused a Parliament to be assembled at Westminster wherein the said Earl, and all such as had fled the Land in his Behalf were made Enemies to their native Country, their Goods confiscated their Lands and Possessions condemned to the King's Use. Moreover, the Usurper sent his Agents laden with Gold, and many gay Promises, to the Duke of Bretaign, offering that not, if he would either send Earl Henry into England, or commit him there into Prison; but the Duke himself lying extream sick, his Treasurer Peter Landose, corrupted with Gold, had betrayed the Earl into Richard's Hands, had not the Earl had timely Notice of it, and prevented it by a speedy Escape unto the French Court, where he received great Favours. Dr. Richard Fox, when a Student in Paris, was eminently serviceable to the Earl in that Nation. And the Duke of Bretaign, when he understood the Treachery of Landose, was highly displeased, and continued a Favourer of the Earl and his Cause. But all these things, with many more, were against King Richard, which he very well foresaw, tho' he knew not well how to remedy; yet that he might make his Title and Interest as good as he could, he devised to marry with his Niece, the Princess Elizabeth; but his Queen Anne stood in his way to this for the present, tho' not long, for she fell into the remorseless Hands of Death, but whether natural or violent, is not well known. After which Richard courts the Lady Elizabeth, his own Brother's Daughter, tho' in vain, for she abhorred the Motion. However when Henry heard of Richard's attempts, and not knowing what time, through Flattery and Persuasion from some Persons, might do upon the young Princess's Good-nature, he hastened for England, setting sail from Harfleet with about 600 Men, August 15, and arrived at Milford Haven the seventh Day following; from whence he advanced toward Shrewsbury. On his Way to which Place there met him Sir Rice ap Thomas, a Man of great Command in Wales, with a great Body of Men, to side in his Quarrel, which Earl Henry afterwards requited, by making this his first Aider Governour of Wales: From Shrewsbury the Earl marched to Newport, where Sir Gilbert Talbot met him with Two Thousand Men from the Earl of Shrewsbury. Thence he passed to Litchfield, where he was honourably received. But when the Usurper understood that the Earl daily increased in Strength, and that he was advanced so far without any Opposition, from his Court at Nottingham, he set forth his Host to meet the Earl, which he did near unto Market-Bosworth in Leicestershire. His Van-guard he disposed of in a marvellous length, to strike the more Terror into the Hearts of his Foes, the leading whereof was committed to John Duke of Norfolk. His own Battalion was furnished with the best approved Men of War. When he had ordered his Army for fight, he animated his Followers to behave themselves valiantly; alledging to them, that it was against a Company of Runagates, Thieves, Outlaws, Traytors, beggerly Bretaigns and faint-hearted French Men, that they were to fight, who would oppress and spoil them of their Lands, Wives, and Children; that these their Enemies were such Cowards, that they would fly faster from them than the silly Hart before the Hound; that the Earl of Richmond, Captain of the Rebellion, was but a Welsh Milk-sop. For their Love to him their Prince, their Zeal to their Native Country, he wished them that Day to shew their English Valour, assuring them that for his Part he would either triumph in a glorious Victory, or die in the Quarrel with immortal Fame. Now St.

1483.

St. George for us, and us for Victory, faith he : Haste therefore forward, and remember this, that I am he that with high Advancement, will prefer the valiant and hardy, and with severe Torture will punish the dastard and cowardly Run-away. The Earl of Richmond's Fore-front was commanded by the Earl of Oxford, the Right Wing by Sir Gilbert Talbot, the Left by Sir John Savage, the main Battle by the Earl himself, and his Uncle Jasper. When the Earl had ordered his small Host, consisting of about 5000 Men, he rode from Rank to Rank, and Wing to Wing, encouraging his Followers to fight ; alledging the Justice of their Quarrel, which God would bless ; assuring them, that for so good a Cause as to free the Land of a Monster, a Tyrant, a Murderer, he would that Day rather become a dead Carion upon the Ground, than a Carpet Prisoner kept alive for Reproach. Advance therefore forward, faith he, like true-hearted Englishmen, display your Banner in Defence of your Country ; get the Day, and be Conquerors, lose the Day and be Villains. God and St. George give us a happy Success. Then immediately a fierce Battle commenced, and was manfully continued on either Part. At length the King having Intelligence that Earl Henry was but slenderly accompanied with Men of Arms, he therefore with his Spear in the Rest ran violently towards the Earl ; in which Rage, at first Brunt, he bare down and overthrew the Earl's Standard, slew Sir William Brandon the Bearer thereof ; next encountred Sir John Cheiney, whom he threw to the Ground, thereby making an open Passage to the Earl himself. In which very Instant, when the Earl was like to be distressed, the Lord Stanley sent in Aids of fresh Soldiers (under the Leading of Sir William Stanley) which were raised, as he pretended, for Richard, but intended them, when he should see his Time, for Richmond's Service. These entred the Fight with such Courage, that they put the Usurper's Forces to Flight ; when the Usurper closing his Helmet, said to such that brought him a swift Horse for his Escape, This Day shall finish all Battles, or else I finish my Life : So thrusting into the Throng of his Enemies, he manfully fighting died in the Place, A. D. 1485, August 22. There died with him that Day the Duke of Norfolk, the Lord Ferrers of Chartley, Sir Richard Radcliffe, Sir Robert Brakenbury. The Number of both Parties slain in the Field were 4000. Sir William Catesby, with other Persons of Quality, were taken, and two Days after were beheaded at Leicester. Thomas Howard, Earl of Surry, the Duke of Norfolk's Son and Heir, being then also taken Prisoner, the Earl of Richmond demanded of him how he durst bear Arms in Behalf of that Tyrant Richard ? To which he answered, He was my crowned King, and if the Parliamentary Authority of England set the Crown upon a Stock, I will fight for that Stock. And as I fought then for him, I will fight for you when you are established by the said Authority. King Richard's Crown, which was taken amongst the Spoils of the Field, the Lord Stanley Earl of Derby, set upon Earl Henry's Head. The slain Body of the Usurper, all tugg'd and torn stark naked, was trussed behind Blanch St. Leiger, a Pursuivant at Arms, like a Hog or Calf, the Head and Arms hanging on one Side of the Horse, and his Legs on the other, after which Manner it was brought to Leicester, where it was buried in the

Gregy

Grey-Fryers Church. The Stone Chest wherein his Corps lay, was at length made a Drinking-trough for Horses at a common Inn. His Body, if you will credit Tradition herein, was torn out of the City, and contemptuously bestowed under Bow-Bridge.

His Wife was Anne the Daughter of Richard Nevile, Earl of Warwick and Salisbury (surnamed the Make-King) who was first married to Edward Prince of Wales, 1483, Son to King Henry VI. and after his Death to this Usurper, 1472. His Issue was Edward Earl of Salisbury, created Prince of Wales, 1483, the Crown being also intailed to him by Parliament, but died before his Father.

He founded a College at Medeleham beyond York, and a Collegiate Chantry in London, called our Lady of Barking. He endowed Queen's-College in Cambridge with 100 Marks of yearly Revenue. He disforested the great Field of Whitchwood, that King Edward his Brother had inclosed for his Game, and made some good Laws; and when divers Shires of England offered him Benevolence, he refused, saying, I had rather have your Hearts than your Money. This scoffing Rhime was divulged in Contempt of the Usurper Richard, and his three principal Creatures;

The Cat, the Rat, and Lovel the Dog,
Rule all England under the Hog.

The Cat and Rat were meant of Catesby and Ratcliffe, the Dog of Lovell, that Creature belonging to the Lord Lovell's Arms, and the Hog of King Richard, whose Cognisance it was. But William Collingbourn, Esq; who had been Sheriff of Wiltshire and Devonshire, was upon Tower Hill executed with all Extremity as Author thereof.

The Usurper borrow'd great Sums of Money of the City of London, but was cut off before the Pay-day came. It may be more of his Quality have died in the City's Debt.

Families of Lancaster and York United.

H E N R Y VII.

A. D. 1485. HENRY Earl of Richmond was Son to Margaret Countess of Richmond and Derby, Daughter to John Duke of Somerset, Son of John Earl of Somerset, Son to John of Gaunt Duke of Lancaster, fourth Son of Edward III.

October the 30th, A. D. 1485, was Henry crowned at Westminster. Then the better to secure his Estate, he shut up the Earl of Warwick, the only Son and Heir of George Duke of Clarence, in the Tower of London. Then instituted a Guard for his Person, consisting of a Number of choice Archers, with Allotment of Fees and Maintenance under a peculiar Captain, by the Name of Yeoman of the Guard, for him and his Successors. November the 7th was a Parliament assembled at Westminster, at the Sitting whereof Richard the late Usurper was attainted, and with him many of the Nobility and Gentry. Free Pardon was also given to all such (saving the Persons excepted by Name) as should presently submit themselves to the King's Mercy. Reversed also were all former Acts hurtful either to the King or his Friends, and the Crown

was

1486. was established upon the King and his Heirs for ever. Next the King assumed into his Council those two renowned Agents in advancing his Fortunes, John Morton and Richard Fox.
John Morton, A. B. of Cant.

A. D. 1486, and January the eighteenth, he married the Lady Elizabeth, eldest Daughter of King Edward IV. to the utter Abolishment of all Hostilities between the two Houses of York and Lancaster. But there wanted not some Malecontents, who essay'd to disturb these serene Days; for the Lord Lovell, one of the late Usurper's Creatures, with Sir Humphry Stafford and his Brother, assembled Forces against the King; which, but upon the News of an Army coming against them, dispersed themselves. Sir Humphry was taken out of Sanctuary, and executed at Tyburn.

When this Storm was over, the White-Rose, or York Faction raised another, procuring one Lambert Symnel to personate one of King Edward's Sons. Which Puppet Lambert they conveyed into Ireland, where the Irish adhered to him, and in Christ-Church in Dublin crowned him King of England. And into Ireland the Dutchess Dowager of Burgundy, Sister to Edward the Fourth, sent this Impostor Two Thousand Soldiers under the Conduct of Colonel Swart. These, with Irish and some English joined to them, landed in Lancashire at the Pile of Fowdray; thence they took their March towards Yorkshire, so towards Newark, every where as they came proclaiming their new King. Not far from Newark, and near to a little Village called Stoke, the King with his Army encountered them, where the Fight continued doubtful for about Three Hours, but at last the Victory fell to King Henry. On Lambert's Part were slain, the Earl of Lincoln, the Lord Lovell, Sir Thomas Broughton, Colonel Swart, and Maurice Fitz-Thomas, with Four Thousand Soldiers. On the King's side fell not any Man of Honour, but almost half his Vanguard was slain, so that the Garland was dip'd in Blood. Amongst the Prisoners that were taken, was the counterfeit King, who had been a Scholar in Oxford, and his Tutor Richard Simon, a Priest. Lambert confessed his Parents to be mean Persons, and of a mean Calling. Him the King condemned to his Kitchen or Scullery, at length promoted him to be one of his Falconers; in which State he continued till his Death. Simon Subtle, or Richard Simon, was condemned to a Dungeon and perpetual Shackles.

Stoken-Field Battle was fought A. D. 1487, June 10, being Saturday, a Day of the Week observed to have been lucky to this Prince Henry; who sent his Royal Standard to our Lady's Church of Walsingham in Norfolk, there to remain as a Monument of this his Victory, and Gratitude for it. And now the King dispatcheth his Agent into Scotland, there to settle Amity with James the Third, and to prevent the Retreat and Protection that his Enemies had found therein. Shortly after which, some discontented Persons in Yorkshire rose in Arms, under Pretence that they were oppressed in their Tax or Subsidy; but some of these Rebels were routed by the Earl of Surrey, who took their Leader John a-Chamber Prisoner, and upon the hearing of the King's Approach, the rest of them, under the Leading of Sir John Egremont, dispersed themselves. John a-Chamber, with some others of the chief Rebels were executed at York. The King's Affairs being settled in a present peaceable Estate at Home, he

was

as next engaged in a War with France; for the carrying on of which, his Subjects did largely contribute, chiefly the City of London, out of which he received for his Furniture in that Voyage almost Ten Thousand Pounds from the Commoners, and Two Hundred Pounds beside from every Alderman. And this wise King, knowing how great a Strength that rich City was to him, humoured the Citizens exceedingly. Himself did not only become one amongst them, causing himself to be entred a Brother of the Merchant-Taylors Company, but also wore the Habit at a publick Feast, and sat as Master of the Company.

A. D. 1492, October the Sixth, King Henry with his Host landed at Calais, from whence with his whole Forces he marched toward Bologne, which when he had besieged, Articles of Peace were concluded betwixt him and the King of France. For King Henry, before his going out of England, had been dealt with in the French King's Behalf to accept of Conditions, but would not enter into any Treaty with him till he was in the Field, and that with such a Puissance as was likely enough to force his own Conditions. When Henry had to his Advantage settled his Transmarine Affairs, he returned for England, where he was not to remain long Quiet; for the Dutchess of Burgundy had provided another counterfeit King, a Youth of Princely Personage, called Peter Warbeck, the Son of a converted Jew. This Creature Peter, or as some called him Perkin and Peterkin, under the Name and Title of Richard Plantagenet, second Son of King Edward the IVth, had great Honour given him by the King of France. And divers Persons of Eminency in England were so deluded, that they believed him to be the true Richard, and thereupon sought to advance him to the Crown; which cost some of them the Price of their Heads, as the Lord Fitz-Walter, Sir Simon Montford, Sir William Stanley, Lord Chamberlain, that gained the Victory for King Henry at Bosworth-field. These, with more, were put to Death for favouring of Perkin. The King also, for the farther Prevention of Dangers, caused the Coasts of England to be strongly guarded; sent a new Lord Chancellor into Ireland, Henry Denny, a Monk of Langton Abby, and Sir Edward Poynings with some Forces, whose greatest Care and Diligence was to punish such as before-time had given any Assistance to the Mock-King, and to restrain such as were likely to do so in Time to come. The Earl of Kildare falling under Suspicion, Poynings sent Prisoner into England, where the King did graciously hear and admit his Defences, and returned him with Honour and Continuation of Authority. The Irish had formerly exhibited many Articles against this Earl; the last of which was, Finally all Ireland cannot rule this Earl: Then, quoth the King, Shall this Earl rule all Ireland, constituting him Lord Deputy thereof. But Perkin having gained private Assistance from the French King, and Maximilian, to strengthen yet his Enterprize, he repairs into Scotland, unto James the IVth (having special Recommendations from the King of France, and Dutchess of Burgundy) who gave him most courteous Entertainment. The rare Impudence of the Youth, and that Connexion which his Darings had with other Princes, drew this King into an Error concerning him. When he was first brought to the Presence of the King of 1492.

of Scots, with a right Princely Gracefulness he declared to the said King, That Edward the IVth leaving two Sons, Edward and Richard, both very young, their unnatural Uncle Richard, to obtain the Crown, purposed the murther of them both; but the Instruments of his Cruelty having murthered his eldest Brother the young King, were moved with pity to spare his Life, and that thus saved by the Mercy of God, he was privately conveyed beyond the Seas (the World supposing that himself also had been murthered) and that Henry Tudor Earl of Richmond, after he had by subtile and foul Means obtained the Crown, he then wrought all means and ways to obtain the final Destruction of him the rightful Heir to the English Diadem. That his said mortal Enemy Henry hath not only falsly surmised him to be a feigned Person, giving him Nicknames, so abusing the World; but that also, to deprive him of his Right, he had offered large Sums of Money to corrupt the Princes with whom he had been retained, and had employed his Servants to murther him. That every Man of Reason might well understand that the said Henry needed not to have taken these Courses against him, had he been a feigned Person. That the Truth, his manifest Cause, had moved the King of France, and Dutcheis of Burgundy, his most dear Aunt to yield him their Assistance. That now because the Kings of Scotland were wont to support them who were spoiled and bereft of the said Kingdom of England, and for that he the said King James had given clear Signs that he was of the like noble Quality and Temper with his Ancestors, he so distressed a Prince came to put himself into his Hands, desiring his Aid to recover his Realms, promising faithfully, that when his

Kingdoms were regained, he would gratefully do him all the Pleasure that should lie in his utmost Power.

The King of Scots was so influenced with this Impostor's Words, amiable Person, princely Deportment, Recommendations of Princes, his Aids from the Irish, and assured Hope of Aid in England, that he honourably received him, as if he had been the very Richard Duke of York, and gave his Consent that this pretended Duke should marry the Lady Catharine Gordon, Daughter to the Earl of Huntley, which accordingly he did, and also prepared to invade England in his Quarrel, altho' there wanted not them who with many Arguments advised this King to repute him for no other than a Cheat.

King Henry, that he might be prepared for the Scots, called a Parliament, which granted a Tax to be gathered of Sixscore Thousand Pounds, the Levy of which Money kindled a dangerous Fire in England; for when the King's Collectors came amongst the Cornish Men to receive their Proportion of the Tax, they tumultuously assembled under the leading of one Thomas Flammock, a Lawyer, and Michael Joseph, a Blacksmith of Bodmin; which Captains led their Rout towards Kent and at Wells, James Tuchett, Lord Audley, joined with them. From Wells they proceeded to Blackheath, where the King's Forces defeated them without much Labour; Fifteen Hundred of the Rebels were taken, and the Takers had the Prisoners Goods granted them.

James Lord Audley was led from Newgate to Tower-hill, in a Coat of his own Armories, painted on a Paper revers'd and torn, where he was executed. Flammock and the Smith were quartered. Memorably strange was the Comfort that the Smith cleared himself withal, as he was drawing to his Execution, to wit, That yet he hoped that by these Means his Name and Memory should be everlasting.

The King's Care was now to order the War against Scotland, whether he sent the Earl of Surrey with an Army, to invade the Scotch Borders, as they had lately done the English. The Earl pursued the Revenge with great Vehemency; but in short time, by the King of Spain's Mediation, a Truce was concluded betwixt the two Nations. Politick King Henry, uneasy in these Scottish Wars, meditated the Means of putting a determinate End to them. He wisely foresaw that the Marriage of his eldest Daughter with that King would produce a perpetual Peace; but bringing that about so as that it might be the Scots Request was the Difficulty. It happened, that an Ambassador (Peter Hyalas by Name) came lately from Ferdinand and Isabella, King and Queen of Spain, to treat of the Marriage between Catharine their second Daughter, and Prince Arthur the King's Son. The Friendship which Ferdinand express'd, induced Henry to make Use of his Ambassador, who was a very able Man, to serve his Purpose with Scotland; and having open'd his Mind to him, he willingly undertook the Mediation of a Peace, and immediately made a Journey to Scotland, where he brought King James to such a Temper, that Fox, Bishop of Durham, a Man of Wisdom also, being sent by Henry to back it, made the Truce, as we have said. It happened not long after, that some Scottish Gentlemen being at Northampton, in the Bishoprick of Durham, came divers times out of the Town to take a View of the Castle, which the Guards observing, challenged them as Spies. This occasioned hard Words, and Words rose to Blows, wherein some of the Scotch Men were slain. The Scots that escaped made Complaint to their King, who resenting it much, and sent an angry Message to King Henry. But Bishop Fox found Means to pacify him; first by a soft Message, and afterwards at the Scottish King's Request, by a Visit which he made him on the Frontiers. There he used such soft Words and discreet Behaviour, that he gained the Scottish King's Heart, and he entred into Intimacies with him: Wherein, as his secret Desire, he demanded the King's Daughter Margaret in Marriage, to be a Pledge of firm Peace. The Bishop promised to serve him in it; and the Alliance was accordingly made in due Time to the King's Content.

But to return; one Article of the Truce with Scotland was, That Perkin should be no longer fostered in Scotland; whereupon he withdraws into Ireland, whither the Cornish Men sent to him, inviting him amongst them; promising, that at his Arrival they would venture their Lives and Fortunes for him, as hoping that under his Government they should be eased of their Taxes. Perkin accepting their Invitation, landed at Whitsand-Bay in Cornwall; after whose Arrival, some Thousands of People resorted to him.

When King Henry heard of his Landing, and making Head against him, he smiled; saying, Loe we are again provoked by this Prince of Rake Hells; but lest my People should, through Ignorance, be drawn into Destruction, let us seek to take this Perkin by the easiest Way we can. He therefore assembled his Forces, and sent out his Spies to observe the Track and Hopes of Prince 1506. Peterkin, who had now besieged the Loyal City of Excester, which Thomas Langton, A. B. of Cant. would neither yield to his fine Promises, nor his Threats and Violence, but valiantly withstood him, till they were relieved by Edward Courteney Earl of Devonshire, and other good Subjects, who forced the Rebels away from before the City. Which Rebels now understanding what great Preparations were made against them, began many of them to drop away from their new King, and Perkin himself secretly fled and took Sanctuary at Beaulieu in New-Forest; out of which Sanctuary, upon the King's Offer of Life unto him, and Oblivion of his Crimes, he gladly came forth, and put himself into the King's Hands, by whose Order he was conveyed to London; where the King, by curious and often Examination of him, came to the full Knowledge of that his Heart desired. The chief Matter of which Confession the King caused to be published in Print.

But the imaginary King Perkin endeavouring to make an Escape from such as had the Charge of him (after undergoing of some publick Shame for that Attempt) was committed to the Tower; where he by his Insinuations and Promises, had corrupted his Keepers, to set himself and the Earl of Warwick, at large, (to which Design of escaping the poor Earl is said to have consented.) Perkin for this Conspiracy had his Trial at Westminster, and was condemned; and being drawn to Tyburn, had the Sentence of Death executed upon him. At the Gallows Perkin did read his own Confession, therein owning himself to have been born in the Town of Tournay in Flanders, of such Parents whom he named; and that being come into Ireland to see the Country, he was there wrought upon to personate Richard Duke of York, &c. Thus died (if I be not deceived) a Deceiver, A. D. 1499.

The Earl of Warwick was publicly arraigned for minding to have escaped out of the Tower, and consequently to deprive King Henry of his Crown and Dignity, and to usurp the Title and Sovereign Office; all which strained Charge the Earl by false Friends ('tis said) was persuaded to confess: So lost his Head upon Tower-Hill, and was buried at Bisbam, by his Ancestors. Thus died the last Heir Male of the Blood and Surname of Plantagenet. It is said, that in the Eyes of the Castilians (who had secretly agreed with King Henry to match their Princess Catharine with Prince Arthur) there could be no Ground for Succession, whilst the Earl of Warwick lived. And the said Lady Catharine, when the Divorce was afterward prosecuted against her, by her Husband King Henry VIII. is reported to have said, That it was the Hand of God, for that to clear the Way to the Marriage, that innocent Earl Warwick was put to unworthy Death.

A. D. 1506. Edmond de la Pole Earl of Suffolk, wilfully slew a common Person in his Fury; for which King Henry caused him to be arraigned; the Fact he was persuaded to confess, and had Pardon. But the Earl, as a Prince of the Blood (his Mother being Sister to Edward the Fourth) held himself disgraced, by having been seen at the King's Bench Bar a Prisoner; therefore in Discontent fled to his Aunt, the Dutcheß of Burgundy; but within a while after he returned into England, and the Year following (his Spirit not yet being laid) fled again, after he had first com-plotted to disturb the King's Peace
Where

Whereupon King Henry applied himself to his wonted Art for Learning the Secrets of his Enemies, employing Sir Robert Curson to feign himself a Friend to Pole, thereby to get himself into his Bosom, for the finding out of his secret Designs and Correspondents. Many great Persons for Pole's Cause were committed to Prison; some were put to Death, as Sir James Tyrrel, and Sir John Wyndham, who lost their Heads on Tower Hill, and Three other Persons, who were executed in other Places. And the more to disanimate de la Pole's Complices and Favourers, King Henry had procured from Pope Alexander the Sixth, an Excommunication and Curse against Pole, Sir Robert Curson, and Five other Persons, by special Name, and generally all others that should aid the Earl against the King. Sir Robert Curson was named on purpose to make de la Pole secure of him. Neither did the King leave here; for he so prevailed with the Pope, as he decreed by Bull, That no Person should afterward have Privilege of Sanctuary, who had once taken the same, and came forth again; and that if any Sanctuary Man should afterward commit any Murder, Robbery, Sacrilege, Treason, &c. he should by Law be drawn thence to suffer due Punishment. And now Suffolk perceiving himself stripp'd of all future Hope of endamaging the King, he put himself into the Grace and Protection of Philip King of Spain, with whom he remained in Banishment, till King Philip was driven by Tempest into England; at which Time King Henry prevailed with him to deliver Pole into his Hands, upon promise that he would spare his Life. And accordingly at Philip's return Home Pole was sent into England, and then committed to the Tower. King Henry thus secured of this Hazard, bestowed his Age's Care in gathering of Money, Henry tho' by some such Ways as seemed none of the justest.

Empson and Dudley, two Lawyers, Warham, were his Instruments for the bringing in of Money to fill his Exchequer. These called the richer Sort of Subjects into Question for the Breach of old Penal Laws, long before discontinued and forgotten. The Course they took in the Execution of their Employment was for one of them to out-law Persons privately, and then to seize their Estates, forcing them to chargeable Compositions with the King, and heavy Bribes to themselves.

Another detestable Practice of theirs was to have false Jurors and Ringleaders of false Jurors, who would never give in any Verdict against their Patrons Empson and Dudley, insomuch that if any stood out in Law, these Sons of Belial squared the Destiny of their Causes: By these Means many honest and worthy Subjects were rigorously fined, imprisoned, or otherwise afflicted. But the King falling sick of a consuming Disease, by the Means of good Council, he inclined to grant to all Men general Pardons, certain only excepted; and ordained that all such Monies should be restored, as had been unjustly levied by his Officers. He died A. D. 1509, April 22.

His Wife was Elizabeth eldest Daughter of King Edward IV. who died 1503.

His Issue by her was Arthur, who died at Ludlow 1502, aged Fifteen Years, and was buried in the Cathedral Church of St. Mary's in Worcester; Henry, who succeeded him in the Throne; Henry Edmund Duke of Somerset was born 1495, and died at Bishop-Hatfield 1499. Margaret was born 1489, and at the Age of Fourteen was married to James the Fourth, King of Scotland, and after his Death unto Archibald Douglas Earl of Angus, to whom she bare Margaret, who married Matthew Stewart Earl of Lenox, and had by him Henry Lord Darnly, who married Mary Queen of Scots, by whom he had King James the Sixth.

1509.

Elizabeth died in her Childhood. Mary first married to old Lewis the Twelfth, King of France; and after his Death remarried to that famous Charles Brandon Duke of Suffolk: And Catharine, who died young.

King Henry left at his Death 1,800,000 l. in ready Money. He founded the Hospital of the Savoy, founded six Religious Houses for Franciscan Friars, built the Palace of Richmond, where he died, and that Chapel of Westminster called by his Name, where he was buried. He exceedingly honour'd that Devout King Henry the 6th, whom he labour'd to have had canoniz'd for a Saint; but Pope Julio held that Honour at too dear a Rate. His Mother-in-law, Queen to Edward the Fourth, he deprived of her Estate, and confined to the Monastery of Bermondsey in Southwark; one Cause pretended for it, was, for that she had yielded up her Daughter into the Hand of the Usurper Richard, contrary to her Faith given to them who were in the Plot for bringing in of Henry. This unfortunate Queen was so wheedled into a Fool's Paradise by the Usurper Richard's Instruments; that forgetting the Murder of her Sons, the Dishonour of the King her Husband, the Bastardy of her Children, and her Scandal for Sorcery; also the faithful Promise she made to Lady Margaret the Earl of Richmond's Mother, she delivered her five Daughters out of Sanctuary into the Usurper's Hands. A. D. 1498, a Cordwainer's Son was hanged at St. Thomas Waterings, for assuming the Name and Title of the Earl of Warwick, thereby to raise Disturbances.

Wheat was sold at London in some time of this King's Reign for Three Shillings a Bushel, and at another Time for Sixpence the Bushel.

HENRY VIII.

A. D. 1509 HENRY the Eighth was born at Greenwich, June 22, 1491. His Youth was so trained up in Literature, that he was accounted the most learned Prince in Christendom. In A. D. 1509, and June 25. he was crowned at Westminster, together with his Queen Catharine, the Relict of his Brother Arthur, by William Warham Archbishop of Canterbury. His Counsellors he chose of the gravest Divines and wisest Nobility, with whom he not only often sat to the great Increase of his politick Experience, but would also yield his Authority to their Wisdoms.

Empson and Dudley he caused to be imprisoned, then to be brought to their Trials, and at last to lose their Heads. To regain the ancient Right of England, he first sent his Herald Clarencieux into France, roughly demanding the Dutchies of Normandy, Guyen, Main, and Anjou, and with them the Crown of France. Then sent certain Nobles before him thither, and afterwards followed himself.

E. ste-one that in-ard, hem ging ueen ara-ultru-rther
the ly of l for omise
the e de-out of lands.
on was s, for
of the raise don in gn for nd at e the

Expehis Au-caused to brought to lose the ancient sent him France

chies of d Anjou France
efore him followed himself

Superstitious Images demolished, and removed out of Churches.

himself, pitching his Tents before Terouanne, where he raised his Royal Standard of the Red Dragon, and begirt the City with a strait Siege. To which Place Maximilian the Emperor repaired, and to the great Honour of Henry entred into his Pay, wearing the Cross of St. George, with a Rose (the King's Badge) as his faithful Soldier. The French attempting to relieve the Town with Victuals and Men, were so encountered by King Henry, that many of their chiefest Captains were taken Prisoners, and six of their Standards won, and the rest of the Monsieurs for Safeguard of Life so posted away, that this Conflict was called the Battle of Spurs; shortly after which the Town yielded unto the King. Then was the Siege removed to Tournay, which in short time was also surrendered to the King with Ten Thousand Pounds Sterling for the Citizens Redemption, who, to the Number of 80,000, then took their Oaths to become his true Subjects, A. D. 1513. The safe keeping of this City the King committed to Sir Edward Poynings, Knight of the Garter, and ordained Thomas Woolsey Bishop of Tournay.

Whilst King Henry was busy in France, his Lieutenant Thomas Earl of Surrey marched against the Scots, who were entred into Northumberland, and at Flodden the Armies engaged in Fight, and the English won the Day. In this Battle King James of Scotland was slain, one Archbishop, two Bishops, two Abbots, twelve Earls, seventeen Lords, Knights and Gentlemen a great Number; in all about eight Thousand were slain, and almost as many taken Prisoners in Anno Dom. 1513, Sept. 9.

A. D. 1514. by the Procurement of Pope Leo, a Peace was concluded betwixt the Kings of France and England; immediately after which, Mary the Sister of King Henry was honourably conducted into France; where at Abbeville, October the 9th, she was married unto old King Lewis, who died eighty two Days after the Marriage.

A. D. 1517, by Reason of the great Concourfe of Strangers at London, to the Hindrance of Trade, and their Insolency towards the English, the Youth and vulgar Sort of Citizens, upon May-Day, assaulted these Strangers, doing much Harm to their Houses, Substance, and some of their Persons; for which riotous Offence John Lincoln, the Instigator thereof, was hanged, and four hundred Men and Youths, with eleven Women, were led in Ropes along the City in their Shirts, with Halsters about their Necks, to Westminster, where the King pardoned their Offence, to the great Rejoycing of the Londoners.

A. D. 1519, the City of Tournay was delivered back to the French on these Conditions; That they should pay to King Henry six hundred thousand Crowns in twelve Years; that the Dauphin should marry the Lady Mary, King Henry's young Daughter; which Marriage, if it happened not to take Effect at the Years of Consent, then Tournay should be redeliver'd to the English; that Cardinal Woolsey should have a thousand Marks paid him yearly for the Revenues of the said Bishoprick.

A. D. 1521, Edward Stafford, Duke of Buckingham, was beheaded on Tower-hill, for imagining to destroy the King, and to enjoy the Crown himself; Woolsey was the Duke's grand Adversary, because that the Duke had sometimes spoken certain Words to his Disgrace. About this Time the Pope sent his Legates about, to incite the Christian Princes to attempt the Recovery of the Holy-Land, sending Cardinal Campejus on his Errand into England: Which Cardinal and his Company being come to London, as they passed thro' Cheapside, the Sumpter-Mules cast their Carriages and Coffers on the Ground; out of which, the Lids flying open, fell old Breeches, Boots, and broken Shoes, torn Stockings, tatter'd Rags, old Iron, and Horseshoes, broken Meat, Marrow Bones, roasted Eggs, and Crufts of Bread, with such like Treasure.

1525.

About A. D. 1521, the Emperor Charles passing towards Spain landed at Dover, where the King met him, and conducted him in great State to London, lodging him in his new Palace in the Blackfriars, then feasted him at Windsor; and in such Bands of Amity the Emperor and King Henry seem'd to be link'd, that in London this Sentence was set up in the Guildhall, over the Door of the Council-Chamber, Carolus, Henricus, vivant, defensor uterque, Henricus fidei, Carolus ecclesiæ. The Reason of which Titles, Defender of the Faith and Church was, for that Charles the Emperor had directed such a solemn Writ of Outlawry against Doctor Martin Luther, who had then given a great Blow to the triple Crown; and King Henry had wrote a Book against the said Luther, for which the Pope gave the Title of Defender of the Church to the Emperor, and Defender of the Faith to the King, and for the same Cause he sent King Henry a consecrated Rose.

A new Variance happening again betwixt the Kingdoms of France and England, the King assembled a Parliament at the Black-Fryers in London, which granted him Half of the yearly Revenues of all Spiritual Livings to be paid for Five Years Continuance, and the Tenth Part of all Temporal Substance to carry on the Wars against France and Scotland. When the King being furnished with Money sent a great Army into France, under the Conduct of Charles Brandon, Duke of Suffolk, who had married Mary, the King's Sister, Queen Dowager of France. This valiant Commander first besieged and won Bell-Castle, then took the Castle of Boulevard, Braie, Roie, Libome, Montedier, and Boghan: Which done, he returned. King Henry was so enraged against the Scots, that he took from all those inhabiting England, all their Goods, sending them into their Country on Foot, with white Crosses sewed upon their uppermost Garments. But Margaret Queen of Scots soliciting her Brother Henry for a Peace, the Difference betwixt the two Nations was for a while reconciled.

About A. D. 1525, arose great Troubles in Ireland, the wild Irish casting off all Obedience, and killing many of the King's English Subjects. Girald Fitz Girald, Earl of Kildare, was sent Prisoner into England, for that the Earl of Offory had accused him of many Misdemeanors; as, that he connived at the Earl of Desmond's Escape, whom he should have attached by Order from the King; that he grew over-familiar with the Irish, and that he put to Death the King's best Subjects. When the Earl was brought to London, he was committed to the Tower by the Cardinal's Means, who did not love him. In the Tower he expected Death daily, but with such courageous Resolution, that being at Slide Groat with the Lieutenant, when the Mandate was brought for his Execution on the Morrow Morning, and seeing the Lieutenant struck into a sudden Sadness, he said unto him, By St. Bride, Lieutenant, there is some mad Game in that Scroll, but fall how it will, this Throw is for a Huddle. And when the worst was told him, he said, I pray thee, Lieutenant do no more but assuredly learn from the King's own Mouth, whether his Highness be witting of this, or not. Whereupon the Lieutenant, loving the Earl well, went to the King, and shewed him the Warrant, which the King seeing, controuled the Sauciness of the Priest (for so he then called the Cardinal) and gave the Lieutenant his Signet for a Nullity of the Warrant; so the Earl was delivered from the Death threatned, and not long after from his Imprisonment.

About or in A. D. 1528, King Henry began to call in question the Lawfulness of his Marriage with his Queen Catharine, who was Daughter to Ferdinand King of Spain, and had been married to Prince Arthur (eldest Son of Henry the Seventh) when he was about Fifteen Years of Age; but he dying e'er he had been married Twelve Months, King Henry, his Brother, by the Advice of his Council, took this Princess Catharine to Wife in two Days after his Father's Death, and enjoyed her Nuptial Society near Twenty Years; in which Time she had born him two Sons, both dying in their Infancy, and one Daughter named Mary, afterward Queen. But now, he said, his Conscience was much dissatisfied, doubting it might not be lawful for him to have his Brother's Wife, notwithstanding he had a Dispensation from the Pope for it; therefore first he refused his Queen's Bed; and having moved the Doubt to his own Divines, he next sent for the Opinion of most of the Universities of Europe, which concluded against it, and signified so much under most of their common Seals. He also sent Agents unto Rome, with an humble Request to the Pope, that an indifferent Judge might be sent to determine this weighty Affair. 1528.

Whereupon Cardinal Campejus was sent over into England, with whom Cardinal Woolsey was joined in Commission. These Cardinals had a Place ordained them in the Black-fryers in London, for the keeping of their Court of Judicature: To which Court the King and Queen were summoned to appear personally; which accordingly they did, having several Seats prepared for them. When the Court was sat, the Crier called King Henry to appear; who forthwith answered, Here. Then was the Queen called, who made no Answer at all, but presently rose up, and going to the King, fell on her Knees at his Feet, and in the Audience of the People, said unto him, 'Sir, I desire you to take some Pity upon me, and do me Justice and Right; I am a poor Woman, a Stranger born out of your Dominions, having here no indifferent Council, and less Assurance of Friendship. Alas! wherein have I offended, or what Cause of Displeasure have I given you, that you thus intend to put me away? I take God to be my Judge, I have been to you a true and humble Wife, ever conformable to your Will and Pleasure, never gainsaying any thing wherein you took Delight. Without all Grudge or discontented Countenance, I have loved all them that loved you, howsoever their Affections have been towards me. I have born you Children, and have been your Wife now these twenty Years. Of my Virginity and Marriage-bed I make God and your own Conscience the Judge; and if it otherwise be proved, I am content to be put from you with Shame. The King your Father, 1528.

in his Time for Wisdom, was known to be a second Solomon, and Ferdinand of Spain, my Father, accounted the wisest among their Kings; could they in this Match be so far over-seen, or are there now more wise and more learned Men than at that Time were? Surely it seems wonderful to me, that my Marriage after twenty Years should be thus called in Question, with new Invention against me, who never intended but Honesty. Alas! Sir, I see that I am wronged, having no Council to speak for me, but such as are your Subjects, and cannot be indifferent upon my Part; therefore I most humbly beseech you, even in Charity to stay this Course until I may have Advice and Counsel from Spain; if not, your Grace's Pleasure be done.' Then rising and making low Obeisance to the King, she departed the Court; and though the Cryer called her to come into the Court, as she was going away, yet she went on, bidding her Attendant to go forward, and saying to him, This is no indifferent Court for me. When the King perceived that she was departed, he presently spake thus unto the Assembly; 'I will, quoth he, in her Absence, declare before you all, that she hath been to me a most true, obedient, and comfortable Wife, endued with all virtuous Qualities and Conditions, according to her Birth, and in Lowliness equals any of baser Sort.' Which said, Cardinal Woolsey humbly requested the King, that he would be pleased to declare before that honourable Assembly, whether he had been the Cause of this his intended Divorce, wherewith he was charged in the Opinions of the People? Whereupon the King said,

My Lord Cardinal, I can well excuse you in this, and rather affirm, that you have been against me, in attempting it thus far. Then by and by the Court was adjourn'd till May 28, following; which Time being come, the King's learned Council alledged many Reasons and Likelihoods to prove, that Prince Arthur had Nuptial Knowledge of Lady Catharine's Body, as their being both of Years capable to explete the Act; he above Fifteen, she above Sixteen, and both lay in one Bed almost five Months together, &c.

From Day to Day the Pleas proceeded, but nothing was concluded touching the Divorce; therefore the King sent the two Cardinals to persuade with the Queen, to put the whole Matter to himself, which he said would be far better and more honourable for her, than to stand to the Trial of the Law. These Legates accordingly repaired to her; she from among her Maids at Work, came forth of an inner Room to them, having a Skein of white Thread about her Neck; to whom she said, Alack, my Lords, I am very sorry to make you attend upon me. What is your Will? Madam, quoth Woolsey, we are come in good Will to know your Grace's Mind in this great Matter of your Marriage, and to give you our Advice, with the best Service we can. The Queen thanking them, said, That by Order of Holy Church she was espoused to the King, as his true Wife, and in that Point she would abide till the Court of Rome (which was privy to the Beginning) had made thereof a final Determination and End. The King then, hopeless of his Queen's Consent, hastned his Lawyers to forward the Divorce, which daily they did; but when the Day appointed was come for the final Determination of the Matter in Question, then Cardinal Cam-

pejus

thus reserved it for the Pope himself to conclude. Which so enraged the Duke of Suffolk, that with stern Countenance he said, It was never merry in England since we had any Cardinals amongst us. And Cardinal Woolsey, though he sought to excuse himself herein, as not having sufficient Authority, yet did he fall under the King's high Displeasure. The first Step of this great Prelate's Fall, was the Dislike of the King's Affection unto Anne Bullen, a Gentlewoman nothing favourable to his Pontifical Pomp, nor no great follower of the Ceremonies of those Times of Popery; which moved the Cardinal to write unto the Pope, to defer the Judgment of Divorce, till he had wrought the King's Mind in another Mould: Which was not done so secretly, but it came to the King's Ear, and proved to his Ruin. For first the Broad Seal was taken from him, and some of his Bishopricks; his House and Furniture seized upon;
 and shortly after he was suddenly arrested by the Earl of Northum- berland at Carwood Castle, (for arrogant Words against the King, importing a Desire of Revenge) from whence he was conveyed toward London; in which Journey, at Lei- chester Abby he ended his Life, by taking an over-great Quantity of Confection, to break Wind from off his Stomach. So ended this mighty Cardinal, who was born at Ipswich, his Father a good honest Butcher, himself a good Philosopher and Orator. His Education in his Yonth was at Magdalene Col- lege in Oxford; his first Preferment was from the Lord Marquis of Dor- set, who bestowed a Benefice upon him. Then Sir John Naphant presented him to King Henry the Seventh, (Fox, Bishop of Winchester, being also Woolsey's great Friend)

which King having urgent Business 1528. with Maximilian the Emperor, he sent this his Chaplain to him Post, Thomas who posted again back before he Cranmer, was thought to be there; and withal A. B. of concluded some Points forgot in his Cant.
 Directions, to the high Content of his Sovereign, for the which he bestowed upon him the Deanry of Lincoln; after which he was preferred to be the King's Almoner, then one of his Council, then Bishop of Toumay, then Bishop of Lincoln, then Archbishop of York; whereby he became, as it were, three Bishops at once; then was made Priest, Cardinal, and Legate de Latere, then Lord Chancellor, and Bishop of Winchester, and, in commendam, the Abby of St.
Albans was bestowed upon him.
 And with them the Cardinal held in Farm the Episcopal Sees of Bath and Wells, Worcester, and Hereford, enjoyed by Strangers Incumbents, not residing in the Realm. This Prelate, raised to this Greatness, was attended with so many Officers and Servants as is incredible. And being Ambassador to the Emperor at Brussels, he was there waited upon by many English Nobles, and served at the Table by his Servitors on their Knees. Insatiable he was to get, but Princely in bestowing; lofty to his Enemies, and not easily reconciled;
 which hasten'd his Fall when he began. The Grudges against this Cardinal were not only for the especial Favour he stood in with the King, and great Stroke he bare at the Council-Table, but for his intolerable Pillagings; who to patch up his Pride in the Raising of his new Colleges at Oxford and Ips- wich, suppressed forty Monasteries of good Fame, converting all their Goods and Moveables to his own Use. As also, that he emptied the Land of Twelvescore Thousand Pounds, enforced by him from the King,

1528.

King, which he employed to relieve and ransom the Pope then in Prison, to the impoverishing of his Majesty's Coffers. And, lastly, his so intolerable Pride, as no less than 1200 for his Retinue, eighty Waggon for his Carriage, and sixty Mules for Sumpter Horses, attended him into France, when he went thither Ambassador; but, sic transit gloria mundi. He built Whitehall and Hampton-Court. A prodigal and merry conceited Nobleman, having lately sold a Manor of an hundred Tenements, came ruffling into the Court in a new Suit, saying, Am not I a mighty Man that bear an hundred Houses on my Back? Which Cardinal Woolsey hearing, said, You might have better employed it in paying your Debts. Truth my Lord, said the Nobleman, you say well, for my Father owed my Master, your Father, Three Half-pence for a Calf's Head; hold, here is Two-pence for it. But now whilst the Matter of the King's Marriage hung in Suspence the Space of Two Years, it happened that Dr. Cranmer said, That the King's Cause would easily be determined by the Law of God; which the King hearing of, put the Doctor upon the Work; who thereupon penned a Treatise, therein proving by Scripture, General Councils, ancient and modern Writers, that the Bishop of Rome had no Authority to dispense with the Word of God, so as contrary thereunto to grant Liberty for a Man to marry his Brother's Wife. This he presented to the King; which, when the King had well read, he demanded of the Doctor if he would abide to what he had writ? That I will, said he, by God's Grace, even before the Pope himself, if your Majesty shall so appoint. Marry, quoth the King to him, you shall go.

And accordingly the King sent Thomas Bullen Earl of Wiltshire, Dr. Cranmer, and other Divines, to the Pope, who was then at Bononia. But when the Day of Audience was come, and Cranmer prepared to defend what he had writ; on the sudden all was interrupted by an unmannerly Spaniel of the Earl's; which seeing the Servus Servorum put forth his Foot to be kissed, got his great Toe in his Mouth, 'tis said. But be it so, or not, yet this is sure that there was no Conclusion of the Matter made by the Pope; therefore King Henry resolved to cut the Gordian-knot himself without more ado; and withall began to call in Question what Authority the Pope had in his Dominions; which being afterward debated in Parliament, an Act passed against his usurped Authority of Supremacy; and all Persons were prohibited from appealing or making any Payment to Rome and the King's Marriage with the Queen Catharine dissolved; and that from thenceforth she should be called only Princess Dowager. The Parliament made it appear, that in Forty Years last past the Court of Rome had received from this Kingdom 160,000 Pounds for Investitures of Bishops.

Whilst the Divorce was under Debate, one Elizabeth Barton (commonly called the Holy Maid of Kent) made a Votress in Canterbury, was taught by Booking, a Monk, to counterfeite many Trances; and in the same to utter many pious Expressions to the Rebuke of Sin; under which she was heard the more freely against the Doctrine of Luther, and the Scriptures Translation then desired by many. Also giving forth from God and his Saints, by sundry pretended Revelations, That if the King proceeded in his Divorce and second Marriage, he should not reign his Realm one Month after, nor left in his Favour one Hour. But the Impostures being detected, she and Seven of her Complices were executed at Tyburn for Treason, and others of them fined and imprisoned.

A. D. 1533, and November the fourteenth, was King Henry married with Anne Bullen, Marchioness of Pembroke (solemnly so created at Windsor the Year before) Daughter of Sir Thomas Bullen, Earl of Wiltshire; and June the First she was crowned at Westminster; and on September the Seventh following, she bare into the World that most excellent Princess Elizabeth, A. D.
1534.

And A. D. 1535, January 29, she was again delivered of a Child,
but that was dead. Nor had the Queen herself long to live, for she was accused of Incest and Adultery with her own Brother George Roch-ford, who was beheaded for this Fact on Tower-hill. And May the ninth, 1536, this Queen was brought upon a Scaffold erected on the Green within the Tower; where, in the Presence of many Noblemen, the Lord-Mayor, and others, she said,
Good Christian People, I am come hither to die; for according to the Law, and by the Law,
I am judged to Death, and therefore will speak nothing against it:
I come hither to accuse no Man, nor to speak any Thing of that I am accused of, and condemned for. As for my own Offences, God knoweth them, and unto God I remit them, beseeching him to have Mercy upon my Soul;
and if any Person will meddle in my Case, I desire them to judge the best. And so I take my Leave of the World, and of you all, and do heartily beseech you to pray for me; and I beseech

Jesus save my Sovereign and Master the King long to live and reign over you, the most Godliest, Noblest, and Gentlest Prince that is. These Words she utter'd with a smiling Countenance; which done, she kneeled down, and with a fervent Spirit said, To Jesus Christ I commend my Soul; Lord Jesus receive my Soul. And repeating these Words very often, suddenly with a Sword the Executioner severed her Head from her Body, which were buried in the Choir of the Chapel in the Tower. 'Tis said, that the Lord Rochford, the Queen's Brother, coming to her Bedside to solicit a Suit, leaned thereupon to whisper her in the Ear; which the Spials gave forth, that he did so to kiss the Queen. Most probable it is, that the Crimes which this Queen was charged withal, were Matters contrived by Popish Instruments, because she gave great Encouragement unto many more publicly and with Boldness to profess the Reformed Religion, and procured a Toleration for the Protestant Di-vines. Moreover, that this Queen's Death was rather sought for than merited by her, seems also very probable, because that the next Day after her Death the King was married unto the Lady Jane Seymour, Daughter of John Seymour, Knight, who in October 1537, bare to the King a Son, who was named Edward, and succeeded his Father; but with that Birth suffered Death herself in the Travail.

About this Time began to flourish
Thomas Cromwell, a Blacksmith's Son of Putney, whom King Henry first raised to be a Master of the Jewel-House, then Baron of Okham, then Earl of Essex, then Lord Great Chamberlain, and lastly, ordained him Vicar-General over the Spirituality. Cardinal Woolsey had been his 1535.

1535.

his great Friend ; but he, 'tis said, was an Instrument of the Cardinal's Fall.) This great Cromwell procured it to be enacted in Parliament, That the Lord's Prayer, Creed, and Ten Commandments should be read in the English Tongue. Other Matters also, tending to reform the English Church from the Roman Corruptions, were attempted by Cromwell, which did not at all please the Monks and their Party. The Lincolnshire Men began a Commotion under the Leading of one Mackarel a Monk, who named himself Captain Cobler. A Copy of their Grievances they sent to the King ; some of which were, the Suppression of many Religious Houses, whereby the Service of God, they said, was minish'd : The King's taking into his Council Men of low Birth, who sought their own Lucre : That there were divers Bishops lately preferred, that had subverted the Faith of Christ : That by Reason of their Loss of Sheep and Cattle, they were not able to pay the Quindecim, or Tax, granted to the King, &c. But these Rioters the King soon pacified with good Words.

In whose Steads others arose up immediately, for Forty Thousand Rusticks assembled in Yorkshire, furnished with Horse, Armour, and Artillery. Their Pretence was Religion, and Defence of Holy Church. Their Banners were painted with the five Wounds of Christ, the Chalice, Cake, and other Romish Inventions. This their Rebellion they termed the Holy Pilgrimage. Their General of Foot was one James Diamond, a poor Fisherman, stiled the Earl of Poverty ; their chief Leader was Mr. Robert Aske, a Man it seems of Terror : For when Lancaster, Herald at Arms, was sent to him to declare the King's Message, this Aske did so terribly bluster forth his Answers, that the Herald fell before him on his Knees, excusing himself to be but a Messenger. Many Persons of great Note were Parties in this Insurrection. And to draw them more into his Side with them Aske and his Complices set forth in writing these scandalous Untruths against the King.

First, That no Infant should be permitted to receive the Blessed Sacrament of Baptism, bot onles a trybet to be paid to the King.

Secondly, That no Man under Twenty Pound Lands shall eyte no Brede made of Wheat, ner Capon, Chekyn, Gois, ner Pig, bot onles to pay a Trybet to the King.

Thirdly, That for every Plough Land the King will have en Trybet with other extreme urgent Causes and heartily, Fare ye well.

Their Oath wherein they bound themselves in this League, was the Preservation of the King's Person and Issue ; the purifying of Nobility, and expulsiing of Villain Blood and evil Counsellors ; nor for any to enter into their Pilgrimage, or any private Commodity, but for the Common Weal, the Restitution of the Church, and Suppression of Heresy and Hereticks. But a great Force being drawn against them, they dispersed themselves, upon Promise of Pardon and Redress in their just Complaints ; yet notwithstanding this the King's Clemency, some of the Chief of these Actors engaged themselves again in a new Insurrection in short Time after this ; for which Offence they suffer'd Death. Of Ecclesiastical Persons were put to Death, four Abbots, two Priors, three Monks, seven Priests ; also Captain Mackarel ; and of Temporal Persons were executed, Robert Aske, the Lord Dacres, Sir Robert Constable, Sir Francis Bigod, Palmer Pierce, Hamilton, Tempest, and Lumley. These

These Stirs being stinted, a Commission came forth to purge the Churches of Idols, and to suppress the Monasteries to the King's Use, granted him by Parliament. When down went the Rood of Boxely in Kent, commonly called the Rood of Grace, which was made with divers Images to bow down and lift up itself, to shake and stir both Head, Hands, and Feet, to roll the Eyes, move the Lips, and to bend the Knees, thereby to cheat silly Souls. So likewise the Images of our Lady of Walsingham and Ipswich, set with Jewels and Gems; also divers others, both of England and Wales, were brought to London, and many of them burnt before the Lord Cromwell at Chelsea, A. D. 1538.

Then down went the Monasteries to the Number of about 645, besides 100 Colleges, and of Chantries and Free Chapels 2374. Almost all these were borne down in these boisterous Times, to the World's Amazement. Amongst the Shrines, that of Thomas à Becket was defaced, whose meanest Part was pure Gold, garnished with many precious Stones; the chiefest of which was a rich Gem of France, offered by King Lewis, who asked and obtained of this prime Saint, (believe it who list) that no Passenger betwixt Dover and Whitesand should perish by Shipwreck. But instead of these Impertinencies, the Holy Bible was commanded to be read in English in the Churches, and Register-Books of Weddings, Christnings, and Burials, to be kept in every of them. If we will credit Tradition, shameful Villanies were too frequently perpetrated by the Monasticks, as Whoredoms, Incests, Sodomy, and Murthers. Many Infants Bones, the Products of their Wantonness, were found in many of their Religious Houses. The Monasteries thus dissolved, and the Revenues thereof converted to secular Uses, King Henry thereby run in great Obloquy with many Foreign Princes and Potentates, but especially of the Pope. Yea, and home-born Subjects disliking hereof, by secret working sought to deprive King Henry, and to elevate Reginald Pole to the Regal Dignity, for the which Treason Henry Courtney Marquess of Excester, the Lord Mantacute, Cardinal Pole's Brother, and Sir Edward Neville, were beheaded on Tower-bill.

A. D. 1540. and January the 6th, was King Henry married unto the Lady Anne, Sister to the Duke of Cleve; but he refrained her Bed, for the Dislike he had to her Person; and she, good Lady, no other Cause alledged, was divorced by Parliament the June following; when it was also enacted, that she should no longer be called Queen.

In this Parliament was Cromwell attainted for setting at Liberty certain Persons committed for Misprision of Treason and Heresy; for favouring and maintaining the Translation of heretical Books (so called) into English; for countenancing and supporting heretical Teachers; for being an Heretick himself; and for having spoken great Words for the upholding his said Religion; to wit, That the King himself should not change it, if he would. The Cause why the King fell into Dislike of him, and consequently of his Ruin, was, because he stood in the Defence of the Lady Anne of Cleve, and spake not all well of the Lady Catharine Howard, whom the King was minded, and did take to Wife. Which Distaste of the King's against him, his Enemy Stephen Gardiner, Bishop of Winchester, did improve to Cromwell's Destruction, who was beheaded on Tower-Hill, and with him the 1535. the Lord Hungerford of Heitsbury, for Buggery.

Margaret Countess of Salisbury, Daughter of George Duke of Clarence, and Mother of Cardinal Reginald Poole, being neither arraigned nor tried, but condemned by Parliament as Cromwell had been, was beheaded. And the Lord Leonard Grey, about the same time, lost his Head for Treason. And the next Day after his Death, Tho. Fines Lord Dacres of the South, died at Tyburn for killing a Man in a Fray. Nor was the Sword sheathed until the Heads of Queen Catharine Howard, and the Lady Jane Rochford were struck off; the former for Adultery, the other for Concealment, as was alledged. The Parties offending with Catharine Howard, were Francis Dereham and Thomas Culpepper; Dereham before she was Queen, and Culpepper after, who both were executed at Tyburn, December the 10th, and on February the 12th following, Mrs. Catharine Howard, (for so in the Act of Attainder she is called) who had been Queen for the Space of a Year and half, with the Lady Jane, Widow of the Lord Rochford, were brought unto the Tower Hill, where in lamentable Passions they suffered Death. This Queen protested, after her Condemnation, to Dr. White, her last Confessor, that she was guiltless, having never so abused her Sovereign's Bed.

But as these in Case of Treason, so others in Matters of Conscience, were put to Death by Force of the Statutes made under this King: Whereof one was the renouncing the Pope's Supremacy, and owning the King for supreme Head of the Church in his own Dominions; this concerned the Papists. The other was the Six Articles; this concerned the Protestants. Which six bloody Articles were:

First, That after the Words of Consecration there is no other Substance consisting in the Bread and Wine, besides the Substance of Christ, God and Man.

Secondly, That the Communion in both kinds were not necessary to Salvation, the Flesh only in Form of Bread being sufficient to the Laity.

Thirdly, That Priests might not marry by the Law of God.

Fourthly, That the Vows of Chastity ought, by God's Law, to be observed.

Fifthly, That private Masses were necessary for the People, and agreeable to the Law of God.

Sixthly, That Auricular Confession was expedient to be retained in the Church of God.

For offending against the former Law of abjuring the Pope's Supremacy, &c. was John Fisher, Bishop of Rochester, put to Death, and Sir Thomas More, Lord Chancellor; so merry conceited a Person, that he could not forbear his Jest, though bloody Death star'd him in the Face. For when on the Scaffold the Executioner desir'd his Forgiveness, he replied, I forgive thee, but I promise thee thou wilt get no Honour by cutting off my Head, my Neck is so short. And when he was to lay his Neck on the Block, he stroaked out his white Beard, and said unto the Headsman, I pray let me lay it over the Block, lest you should cut it off; for though you have a Warrant to cut off my Head, you have none to cut off my Beard. Besides these two, there were put to Death, for the same Cause, many Abbots, Priors, and Friars.

For oppugning the Six Articles, and asserting Gospel Truths, did many Christians of the Reformed Religion suffer Death in the Flames. Amongst the rest Dr. Robert Barnes was one, and Mrs. Ann Askue a Person of rare Wit and elegant Beauty; who when she had been twice tormenting upon the Rack to the jointing of her Bones, then gave her Body to the Flames for Christ's sake. And the Life of Queen Catharine Parre was hard laid for by Stephen Gardiner; but through her Wisdom and prudent Carriage towards the King, it was preserved.

About A. D. 1545, was a Match concluded to be made between Prince Edward, King Henry's Son, and the youngest Princes of Scotland, the Scots Nobility approving thereof; and in the Parliament of three Estates, the Match was confirmed in England, the like also in Scotland: But Cardinal Beton, Archbishop of St. Andrews, fearing lest thereby Scotland should also change the Church Orders; and the French likewise not liking the Union, Means were therefore wrought to break the said intended Marriage of the two young Heirs; whence Wars ensued, and the English invaded Scotland, spoiled Leith, burnt Edinburgh, and wasted the Country for Seven Miles about, set Fire upon Haddington and Dunbar, then returned: And because the French refused the Performance of certain Covenants, King Henry made War also upon that Nation, and in short time won the strong Town of Bulwigh. Then the French King, with intent to balance the Loss of Bulwigh, invaded the Isle of Wight, and the Sea Coasts of Suffex, though it proved to the Loss of many of his Captains, and Thousands of his Soldiers.

A. D. 1546, the Rhinegrave came with a great Force to victual a Fort built near to Bulwigh, which the Earl of Surrey sought to prevent him in, but was discomfited with the Loss of many brave Mens Lives. Shortly after which, by the Mediation of the Emperor, and other Christian Potentates, Peace was concluded betwixt France and England. 1547.

A. D. 1546, and January the Twenty Eighth, Sanguine King Henry yielded to Death's impartial Stroke, whose Body, with great Solemnity, was buried at Windsor. In his Will he ordained (howsoever Titles had been made invalid in Parliaments) That his three Children should succeed each other, for Want of other Issue. 1000 Marks he commanded should be given to the Poor; and to twelve poor Knights at Windsor, each of them twelve Pence a Day for ever; every Year a long Gown of white Cloth, the Garter to be embroidered upon the Breast, and therein the Cross of St. George, and a Mantle of red Cloth to be worn thereupon. His Wives were Catharine his Brother's Relict, Anne Bullen, Jane Seymour, Anne of Cleve, Catharine Howard, Niece to the Duke of Norfolk, and Catharine Parre, the Daughter of Thomas Parre of Kendal. His Issue Henry, which lived not full two Months, another Son not named, and Mary, these by Catharine of Spain; Elizabeth, and a Son still-born by Anne Bullen; Edward by Jane Seymour. His natural Issue Henry Fitz-Roy, Earl of Nottingham, Duke of Richmond and Somerset.

After the Dissolution of the Religious Houses, he erected the Bishopricks of Westminster, Chester, Oxford, Peterborough, Bristol, and Gloucester, and also erected the Cathedral Churches of Canterbury, Winchester, Worcester, Chester, Peterborough, Ely, Gloucester, Bristol, Carlisle, Durham, Rochester, and Norwich. In all which he founded a Dean, with a certain Number of Prebendaries. The College of 1546. Christ-Church in Oxford, begun by Cardinal Woolsey, he ordained to be the Cathedral of that Bishop's See.
Christ-

I remember I have read this Observation of the Letter H, respecting England, which may be here inserted.

*Not superstitiously I speak, but H, this Letter still,
Hath been observed ominous to England's Good or Ill.*

*Humber the Hun, with Foreign Arms did first the Brutes invade.
Helen to Rome's Imperial Throne the British Crown convey'd.
Hengist and Horfus first did plant the Saxons in this Isle.
Hungar and Hubba first brought Danes that sway'd here along while.
At Harold had the Saxon End, at Hardy Knute the Dane.
Henries the First and Second did restore the English Reign.
Fourth Henry first for Lancaster did England's Crown obtain.
Seventh Henry jarring Lancaster and York unites in Peace.
Henry the Eighth did happily Rome's Irreligion cease.*

Bolton, Prior of St. Bartholomew's in London, for Fear of an Inundation after a great Conjunction of Planets in the watry Triplicity, built him an House upon the Top of Harrow Hill, storing it with Provisions necessary to keep himself from drowning, in A. D. 1524.

Many died of the Sweating Sickness in England, especially about London. In the Twenty third Year of his Reign, Richard Rice, a Cook, was boiled to Death in Smithfield for poisoning divers Persons. In the Thirty seventh of his Reign, the Stewes on the Bankside in Southwark were put down by the King's Appointment.

A. D. 1546, William Foxley continued sleeping in the Tower Fourteen Days and Fifteen Nights, and could not by any Means be awakened during that Time; yet when he did awake, he was in very good Temper, as though he had slept but one Night, and lived Forty Years after.

King Henry, by Act of Parliament assumed the Stile and Title of King of Ireland, former Kings of England bearing only the Stile of Lords thereof. 'Tis said, that now Turkey, Carps, Hops, Pickarel, and Beer, came into England all in a Year.

EDWARD VI.

A. D. 1546. EDWARD VI. was born, but not without the Death of his Mother, A. D. 1537, October 12.

A. D. 1547, and February 20, he was crowned at Westminster. At which Time, when three Swords were delivered to him, as King of England, France, and Ireland, he said, There was yet another Sword to be delivered him; namely, the sacred Bible, which is, said he, the Sword of the Spirit, without which we are nothing, neither can do any thing. His Mother's Brother, Edward Lord Seymour, Earl of Hertford and Duke of Somerset, was, by the Consent of the Nobles, made Protector over his Minority, and the Realms. In short time after the King's Coronation, the Lord Protector and Council sought to effect the Marriage betwixt the young King and the young Queen of Scotland, as it had been formerly agreed on by both Nations; but this the Scots refused to yield unto; wherefore the Protector led an Army into Scotland, and at a Place called Edmonstone-edge, near to Masleborough, fought the Scots, and vanquished them, following the Chase of them almost five Miles; wherein the Lord Fleming, with sundry Men of Note were slain, and 10,000 of the Soldiers; and about 1,000 were taken Prisoners, the Chief whereof were the Earl of Huntly, the Lords Yester, Hobby, and Hamilton, the Lord Weems, and a Brother of the Earl of Castles; Leith the English sacked, and set on Fire, took the Island St. Colmes, Broughticrag, Roxbrough, Humes Castle, and others; insomuch, that many Gentlemen in Tividale and the Meres came to the Protector, and entred into Terms and Conditions of Peace with him. After the Protector's Return, a Parliament was assembled at London, wherein the Six Articles were repealed, those Colleges and Chapels that King Henry had left were given to the King, and the Churches ordered to be purged of all Images. And accordingly Commissioners were appointed, who first began at St. Paul's in London, and thence proceeded throughout England and Wales. But this Reformation occasioned great Commotions, which began in the West. A Priest stabb'd one Mr. Body, a Commissioner, to the Heart, for plucking down certain Images; and this Fact of his was so favoured by the Cornish and Devonshire Rusticks, that Ten thousand rose in Arms, heading themselves under Mr. Humphrey Arundel, 6 other Gentlemen, and 8 Priests. These Rebels besieged the City of Excester, and sorely distressed it, yet did the Citizens loyally hold out against them; for which the King did enlarge their Liberties, and gave unto their City the Manor of Exilond. At last the Rebels agreed upon Articles to be sent to the King, therein requiring to have Mass celebrated as in Time past it had been. To have Holy Bread and Holy Water in Remembrance of Christ's Body and Blood. To have the Six Articles again in Force, &c. To these and the rest of their Demands, the King sent an Answer; therein pitying their Ignorance, reproving their Sauciness, and withal a general Pardon to as many as would desist in time, concluding thus: We for our Part seek no longer to live than to be a Father to our People; and as God hath made us your King; so he hath commanded your Obedience; by whose great Majesty we swear, you shall feel the same Power in our Sword, which how mighty it is no Subject knoweth, how puissant it is no private Man can judge, and how mortal no English Heart can think. Therefore embrace our Mercy whilst it is offered, lest the Blood spilt by your Means cry for Vengeance from the Earth, and be heard in the Ears of the Lord of Heaven. Notwithstanding all this, the Rebels still persisted in their Traiterous Attempts; the King therefore sent an Army against them, which put them to flight at Honiton, then worsted them at Excester, where the Rebels laid Siege, and lastly upon Clift-Heath destroyed the greatest Part of them; their consecrated Host, Crucifix, Crosses, consecrated Banners, Holy Bread and holy Water (which the Rebels had brought into the Field, thinking by virtue of them to have made all sure on their Side) were all trampled into the Dirt. Arundel, Winsland, Holmes, and Bury, four Rebel Captains, were taken and executed at London. Others also of their Partakers were executed by Martial Law, amongst whom was Boyer the Mayor of Bodmyn in Cornwall. Nigh to which Town dwelt a Miller that had been a busy Fellow in the Rebellion, but he knowing his own Danger, willed his Man to take the Name of Master, if any enquired after him. To this Miller's House Sir Anthony Kingston, Marshal of the Field, came, where calling for the Master, the officious Man in his Name very boldly presented himself, whom Sir Anthony straight commanded to the Gallows; and when the poor Fellow, seeing the Danger he was in, changed his Note, confessing himself to be but the Man, Sir Anthony said, Well, thou canst never do thy Master better Service than to hang for him, causing him to be trussed up on the next Tree. Other Commotions arose in other Parts of the Realm; but the most dangerous was that in Norfolk, headed by Robert Ket a Tanner of Wimontham, who took upon him to be the King's Deputy, giving out Warrants in the King's Name for what he pleased. His Tribunal Seat was in an old Tree, where sat the jolly Tanner, accompanied with his Counsellors and Assistants, being Two chosen Men out of every Hundred of the Rout. Hither came the Complaints of the Camp, and from hence Commissions were issued out to plunder Ships and Gentlemens Houses of Armour and Artillery; so that this Tree was termed the Oak of Reformation. Whence likewise sometimes Sermons were delivered, and once by the Reverend Dr. Parker, for which his Life was endangered, his Sermon was so displeasing to the Rabble. To pacify these Rebels, the King caused his general Pardon to be proclaimed by an Herald at Arms. Notwithstanding which they still proceeded in their Rebellion, and made themselves Masters of the City of Norwich. The King therefore sent William Parre Marquis of Northampton against them, but him they overpowered. Then the Lord Dudley Earl of Warwick was employed against them, who with small Assistance gained the Market-place of Norwich, where he caused sixty Rebels, whom he had taken, immediately to be executed by Martial Law. The main Body of the Rebels entrenched themselves at the Foot of the Hill called Duffindale, partly upon vain Prophecies given forth amongst them by Wizards, That Hob, Dic, and Hie, (meaning the Clowns) should with their Clubs fill up the Valley of Duffindale with dead Bodies. On August 27, the Earl prepared for Fight, the Rebels likewise set themselves in order, placing in their Fore Rank all the Gentlemen whom they had taken Prisoners, coupled in Irons. Upon the Rebels Captain Drury with his own Band and the Almains charged courageously, and opened their Battle, to the setting at Liberty of the captive Gentlemen, and the Earl's Light Horse came so valiantly on, that the Rebels gave back and fled, and with the foremost their Captain Ket. The Chase held Three Miles and more, with the Slaughter of 3500 Rebels. The rest of the Rebels that kept about the Ordnance, by the General's Persuasions and Promise of Pardon, cast away their Weapons, and with one Voice cried, God save King Edward.

1547.

Edward. The next Day following Ket was apprehended in a Barn, where he had hid himself, and shortly after was hanged in Chains upon the Castle of Norwich; William Ket his Brother was hanged upon the high Steeple of Wimborne, and Nine others of them were hanged upon the Oak of Reformation. This Rebellion was at the first broached under the Pretence of throwing open the Inclosures, which the King by Proclamation had commanded to be done, tho' it was neglected. These Disturbances being settled, others were made in the North by Thomas Dale a Parish Clerk, William Ombler a Yeoman, and one Stephenson the Post of Seymour. Their Pretences were to restore to the Church her Rights, and to disburthen the Land of Grievances; giving out that the Pope was the Man, that King Edward was an Intruder, if not a mere Heretick, that the Church had Power of both the Swords. When these Fellows were increased to the Number of about 3000, the King's Par-son being sent to them, they most of them departed to their own Homes; but Ombler and Dale, with Four others, were executed at York, September 21, 1549.

And as the Commons disquieted the Country, so did some Lords and Ladies disquiet the Court. The Protector's Brother, Thomas Seymour, Baron of Sudley, High Admiral of England, had married Queen Catherine Parre; which Lady contending for Place with the Protector's Daughters, occasioned the haughty Daughters ('tis said) to procure the Lord Sudley's Ruin. Which Lord was accused to have designed the setting of the King's Person into Custody, and Government of the Realm; for the which (with some smaller Matters charged upon him) he was condemned by Act of Parliament, and by his Brother's the Protector's Warrant, was beheaded on Tower Hill, March 20, 1548-9. But the Brothers being now disjoined, who might have supported each other, had they lived together in brotherly Love, the Protector himself is marked out for Destruction. Divers Lords article against the Duke, accusing him that he had animated the Rebels in the Rebellion: That he was a Sower of Sedition amongst the Nobles: That he had against Law erected a Court of Requests in his own House, in forcing divers of the King's Subjects thither to answer for their Freeholds, &c. And so close and cunningly they prosecuted the Matter against him, that they got him into the Tower, October 12, 1549, but the King procured his Liberty immediately, tho' not his former Authority. In the mean Space that the Protector was under these Troubles, the Scots recovered the Places that the English had gained from them. The French also attempted to gain the Fort of Bulloinberg by Surprise, unto which Enterprize 7000 Men were chosen, who secretly marched in the Night with Ladders and Furniture meet for the Design, and approached within a Quarter of a Mile of the Fort; but one Carter an English Man, a Soldier amongst them, understanding what was intended, hastily and privately made from his Company, and gave the Alarm to his Countrymen in the Fort; whereupon Sir Nicholas Arnault the Governour made such Preparations against the French Mens coming, that at their Approach he repulled them with so great a Slaughter, that Fifteen Waggon went away laden with dead Bodies of the French. After this the French assaulted the Isles of Guernsey, and Jersey, but were beaten off with the Loss of a Thousand Men.

1551. Howbeit the French King gave not over till he had recovered, by Surrender, Bulloinberg, and the Town of Bulloin; which last he purchased at a high Price.

A. D. 1550, that mortal Disease called the Sweating Sicknefs, raged extreamly through England, whereof died the two Sons of Charles Brandon, both of them Dukes of Suffolk successively, besides an infinite Number in their best Strength. And, which is wonderful, this Disease followed only English Men in Foreign Countries, no other People being infected thereby. And to fill up the Dolours of these doleful Times, the good Duke of Somerset was again by the Over-reaching of the Earl of Warwick (lately created Duke of Northumberland) and other his Emulators, committed Prisoner, and not long after put to Death. For the Duke of Somerset giving Ear to such false Friends as sought his Ruin, privily armed himself, and so went to the Council Table, his Flatterers having put him in fear of some sudden Attempt intended against him. But at the Council-Table his Bosom being opened, and the Armour found, he was forthwith apprehended as intending the Death of some Counsellor, and sent to the Tower, October 16, 1551, and in December following he was condemned of Felony, as seeking the Death of some of the King's Counsellors; and on February 22, of the same Year, he was brought to the Scaffold on Tower-Hill, where he thus spake to the People: Dearly beloved Friends, I am brought hither to suffer Death, albeit I never offended against the King, either in Word or Deed, and have always been as true and faithful to this Realm as any Man hath been. But forasmuch as I am by Law condemned to die, I do acknowledge my self as well as others to be subject thereunto. Wherefore to testify my Obedience which I owe unto the Law, I am come hither to suffer Death; whereunto I willingly offer myself, with most hearty Thanks unto God, that hath given me this Time of Repentance, who might through sudden Death have taken away my Life, that I neither should have acknowledged him, nor myself. When having uttered these Words with others exhortatory, That the People would continue constant in the Gospel, suddenly there was heard a great Noise, whereby the Assembly was struck into great Fear; which Noise was made by some of the Train band Hamlets coming hurrying on the Tower Hill. This Stir being ceased, another presently ensued; for the People seeing Sir Anthony Brown ride toward the Scaffold, they violently ran and crowded together thitherward, supposing he had brought a Pardon from the King, and with a sudden Shout cried, A Pardon, A Pardon, God save the King. But these Interruptions over, the Duke proceeded in his Speech; requesting the People to join in Prayer with him for the King, exhorting them unto Obedience to him in his Council. Which done, asking every Man Forgiveness and declaring, that he freely forgave every Man; he meekly submitted his Head to the Ax. Whose Death the People very much grieved for speaking very bitterly against the Duke of Northumberland; and the good King sorely mourned because of it, which like did much increase his consumptive Distemper, that brought him to his End. When he lay in his Weakness he was overwrought to disinherit his Two sisters, Mary and Elizabeth, and ordain by Will, for his Successor England's Diadem, Guildford Dudley.

Wife, Jane, the Elder Daughter of the Duke of Suffolk, whose Mother the Lady Frances was the Daughter of Mary Queen of France, and Charles Brandon, Duke of Suffolk. Unto this Will King Edward, all his Council, the Bishops, and all the Judges, saving Sir John Hollis, subscribed. When the King drew towards his last Breath, he prayed as followeth: Lord God, deliver me out of this miserable Life, and take me among thy chosen; howbeit, not my Will, but thy Will be done. Lord, I commit my Spirit to thee. O Lord, thou knowest how happy it were for me to be with thee; yet for thy chosen sake, if it be thy Will, send me Life and Health, that I may truly serve thee. O my Lord, bless thy People, and save thine Inheritance. O Lord God save thy chosen People of England. O my Lord God, defend this Realm from Papistry, and maintain thy true Religion, that I and my People may praise thy Holy Name, for thy Son Jesus Christ's Sake. So turning his Face and seeing some by him, he said, I thought you had not been so nigh. Yes, said Dr. Owen, we heard you speak to yourself. Then, said the King, I was praying to God. O, I am faint. Lord have Mercy upon me, and receive my Spirit. And in so saying, he yielded up the Ghost, July 6, 1553. And was interred in the Chapel of St. Peter's at Westminster. He was a Prince very well learned in the Latin and Greek Tongues, also in the French, Spanish and Italian, adorned with the Skill of Logick, Natural Philosophy, Musick, and Astronomy. Of such Observation and Memory, that he could tell and recite all the Ports, Havens, and Creeks, belonging to England, Scotland, and France; what coming in there was, how the Tide served in every of them; what Burthen of Ship, and what Wind best served the coming into them. Of all his Nobles, chief Gentry, and Magistrates, he took special Notice of their Hospitality, and Religious Conversations. He was very sparing of his Subjects Blood, tho' Rebels or Hereticks. When Joan Butcher was to be burnt for Heresy, all his Council could not move him to sign the Warrant for her Execution, till Dr. Cranmer, Archbishop, laboured with him therein; to whom the King said, What my Lord, will you have me send her quick to Hell? And taking the Pen he used this Speech, I will lay all the Charge thereof upon Cranmer before God. So zealous he was for the reformed Religion, and against Popery, that he thrust all the Roman Fopperies out of the Churches; and Superstitions out of the English Church; nor would he permit his Sister Mary to have Mass said in her House, tho' the Emperor Charles made Suit for it in her Behalf. So charitable, that he conferred on the City of London, Christ's-Hospital, and St. Thomas's-Hospital for the Relief of the Impotent, Fatherless Children, and wounded Soldiers; and Bridewell for Vagabonds and idle Persons; and so circumspect as to himself and Publick, that he kept a Journal-book written with his own Hand, how all Things proceeded with him and the State, even from the first Day of his Reign unto his Death.

At Feversham in Kent, one Mr. Arden was murdered; for which Fact his Wife was burned at Canterbury; one Mosby and his Sister were hanged in Smithfield, at London; a Maid burnt, and Michael, Mr. Arden's Man, was hanged in Chains at Feversham; one Green, that had fled, came again certain Years after, and was hanged in 1553. Chains in the Highway over-against Feverſham, and Black Will the Ruffian, that was hired to do the cur-fed Act, was burnt in Zealand, at Fluſhing.

M A R Y.

A. D. 1553. PIOUS King Edward having exchanged this mortal Life for a happy Immortality, the Council in the first Place perſuaded the Lord-Mayor, and certain of the Aldermen of London, to take their Oaths to be faithful to the Lady Jane Grey; then cauſed the ſaid Lady Jane to be proclaimed in London, Queen of England. But when Queen Mary heard the News of her Brother's Death, and the Council's Proceedings, by her Letters ſhe required the Council, as they tendered her Diſpleaſure, and their own Safeties, to proclaim her Queen and Governor of the Land. Unto which Letters the Lords forthwith answered, That by good Warrant of ancient Laws of the Realm, beſides the laſt Will of King Edward, the Right was in the Lady Jane to govern England, unto whom therefore, and none other, they muſt yield Subjection. They alſo remembred the Queen of the unlawful Marriage and Divorce of her Mother, of her own Illegitimation, deſiring her to forbear any farther Claim, and to ſubmit herſelf to the Queen Jane, now her Sovereign. Which Letters ſent to Queen Mary, were ſubſcribed by Tho. Canterbury Archbiſhop, Thomas Ely Chancellor, Henry Suffolk Duke, the Duke of Northumberland Marquis of Wincheſter, &c. Upon the Receipt of the Letters, the Queen removed from Keningat to Fremingham Caſtle, unto whom the Suffolk Men firſt reſorted, offering their Service, with Condition, that they might ſtill embrace the Goſpel in the ſame Manner that King Edward had eſtabliſhed it. To which ſhe then condeſcended, tho' afterward being petitioned to perform her Promise herein, ſhe both puniſhed the Writer, and answered, That they ſhould one Day well know, that they being but Members, ſhould not direct her their Head.

July the Twelfth, the Earl of Oxford, and other Lords, came in to the Queen's Aſſiſtance, and proclaimed her at Norwich; and July the Fourteenth, the Duke of Northumberland, with an Army, ſet forth from London towards Norwich; but few or none of the People bade this ambitious Duke God-speed; which himſelf took Notice of as he marched out of London with his Army.

But whiſt Northumberland was on his way, the Lord Windſor and other Gentlemen raiſed the Commons of Buckinghamſhire for Queen Mary; ſo Sir John Williams, and Sir Leonard Chamberlain of Oxfordſhire, and Sir Thomas Triſham in Northamptonſhire. And at London the Tide turn'd, and Queen Mary was there proclaimed, and many of the Lords deſerted the Duke; inſomuch, that the Duke himſelf, thinking it the eaſieſt to ſwim with the Stream, even fairly in the Market-Place at Cambridge proclaimed Mary Queen of England, throwing up his Cap in Token of Joy. The Way thus made free,
Queen

Queen Mary repaired to London, and there set at Liberty Edmund Bonner, imprisoned in her Brother's Time, restoring him to the See of London, which Dr. Ridley had possessed, and made him a Prisoner. Other Protestant Bishops she removed, placing Papists in their Steads. Dr. Cranmer, Archbishop of Canterbury, she committed to the Tower, and Stephen Gardiner she made Lord Chancellor. And to assure her Estate the better, the Duke of Northumberland was arraigned and condemned, and brought upon the Scaffold on Tower-Hill to suffer Death: Where this Duke having Promise of Life, if he would recant the Reformed Religion, did so, and withal exhorted the People to follow the Romish Way, though when he had so done, the Executioner made him shorter by the Head; with him suffered Sir John Gates and Sir Thomas Palmer, August 22.

A few Days after which, the Queen was crowned at Westminster by Stephen Gardiner Bishop of Winchester. And October the 18th began a Parliament, wherein that Act was repealed, which was made in Edward the Sixth's Time, intituled, An Act for the Uniformity of Common Prayer and Administration of the Sacraments.

Then came all the Popish Trinkets into Fashion again, the Mass-Book, Crucifixes, Agnus Dei's, Relicks, with all the Idols and Abominations. And the temporizing Priests were forced to forego their Wives, though not to live honestly: For as Master Heywood merrily said to the Queen concerning these Men, when she told him, that the Priests must no longer have their Wives; Your Grace then must allow them Lemmons; for the Clergy cannot live without Sauce.

A. D. 1553, was the Lady Jane Grey and her Husband arraigned and condemned at the Guildhall in London, and February the 12th her Husband Guildford Dudley, Fourth Son to the Duke of Northumberland, was had to Tower-hill, where, with Prayers and great Signs of Repentance, he ended his Life. Whose Body all bloody laid in a Cart, together with the Head wrapt in the Cloth, was brought into the Chapel of the Tower, even in the Sight of this sorrowful Lady his Wife, who was now to mount the Scaffold raised upon the Green within the Tower; whither being ascended, she with a chearful Countenance spake unto the Spectators, declaring, That her Offence was only in consenting to others; that she never sought that Greatness; then desired the People to bear her Witness, that she died a true Christian Woman, and looked to be saved by no other Means, but only by the Mercy of God in the Blood of Christ Jesus his only Son; confessed that when she did know the Word of God, she neglected it, and loved the World and herself, and that therefore this Plague and Punishment justly happened to her for her Sins. Lastly, desired the People to pray for her whilst she lived. Then kneeling down, said in English the 51st Psalm; which done, she stood up, and gave her Book to Mr. Bridges Lieutenant of the Tower; then by the Help of her two Gentlewomen, made her ready for the Block, and commending her Spirit into the Hands of the Lord Jesus, her Head was sever'd from the Body. Thus ended the Life of this most ingenious and virtuous Lady, ruined by the Ambition of her Husband's Father, rather than her own.

On the 23d of the same Month, her Father Henry Duke of Suffolk, for a second Offence, the Promoting an

A. D.
1554.

Insurrection to hinder the Queen's Marriage with Philip of Spain, was beheaded on Tower-hill. And A. D. 1554, April 23, was his Brother the Lord Thomas Grey beheaded in the same Place. Against this foresaid Match with Spain many Combinations were made, and many Persons in divers Places of the Realm were up in Arms. And amongst the rest, Sir Thomas Wyatt with the Kentish Men, against whom the Duke of Norfolk was sent; but many of his Followers forsook him, and joyned with Wyat. Then Wyat advanced to Dartford, and from thence to Deptford by Greenwich, at whose Approach so nigh the City, the Fears were there so great, that the Lord-Mayor, Aldermen, and most of the Citizens, were in Armour, and the Serjeants and Lawyers in Westminster in the Hilary-Term pleaded their Causes in Harnesse. The Queen, to make the City sure on her Side, came unto the Guildhall; where she made an Oration to the Citizens, therein acquainting them, that tho' the Rebels Pretence was to resist the Marriage with Spain, yet that their Intention was against her Religion. That they arrogantly demanded the Possession of her Person, the Keeping of the Tower, the Placing and Displacing of her Counsellors. She also therein alledged her Right to the Crown, professed her entire Love and Affection to her Subjects, promised them on the Word of a Queen, that if it should not probably appear before the Nobility and Commons in Parliament, that her designed Marriage with Prince Philip would be for the Profit of the Nation, she would abstain from it. Wherefore, faith she, good Subjects, pluck up your Hearts, and like true Men, stand fast with your lawful Prince against these Rebels, both Ours and yours, and fear them not; for I assure you, I do not. Against these Rebels, the Earl of Pembroke was made General, and 100 Pound Lands by the Year was promised to be given to him and his Heirs for ever, that should bring Wyat either alive or dead.

Howbeit, Wyat with Fourteen Ensigns, and about Five Thousand Men, advanced to Southwark, where he made Proclamation, that no Soldier should take any Thing without due Payment. Southwark he fortified, planting diverse great Guns therein; and London was fortified against him, and the Draw-Bridge cut down. Wherefore Wyat perceiving that he could have no Access into the City that Way, he in the Night marched round about by Kingstone, thinking that Way to have surprized the City on the sudden; but staying to remount a great Gun that was dismounted by the Way, by that Means he could not reach the City so soon as he expected, nor till his Coming was discovered, and Preparations on that Side the City made against him.

The Earl of Pembroke possessed himself of St. James's, which Wyat at his coming perceiving, marched a little aside toward Charing-Cross. At Charing-Cross the Lord Chamberlain and Sir John Gage stood to resist Wyat; but the Kentish Men rushing violently into the Streets, forced their Opposites into the Gates of Whitehall, where was a great Distraction within, and no other Voice heard than Treason, Treason. Mean while Wyat, with some small Company as he had with him, hastened to Ludgate, where he knocked to have Entrance, but was debarred. In the Interim, those his Followers, that had turned to Whitehall, were dispersed; about Twenty of which dirty bemired Rebels were slain in the Conflict, and no other Cry heard on on the contrary Part, but down with the Daggle-tails.

Wyat returning from Ludgate, sat down upon a Stall against Bell Savage Inn, where he mused a While, and retired towards the Court, and was not opposed till he came to Temple-Bar, where began some Bickering; but Clarencieux King at Arms coming to him, persuaded him to submit to the Queen's Mercy; to whom Sir Thomas Wyat said, If I must yield, I will yield to a Gentleman, and yielded himself to Clarencieux. Then was he mounted behind Sir Maurice Berkley, and so carried to the Court, and in the Afternoon to the Tower. About Fifty of his Fellow-Rebels were hanged in London, and Four Hundred more were led through the City with Halberts about their Necks to Westminster, where they were all pardoned by the Queen.

A. D. 1554, and April the 11th, Sir Thomas Wyat was beheaded on Tower-hill; where at his Death he warned the People to beware how they took any Thing in Hand against the higher Powers; and excused the Lady Elizabeth, and the Lord Courtney, of having any Hand in his Rebellion. Alexander Bret, and Twenty two Kentish Persons more, were executed in divers Parts of that Country. These Commotions were the Occasion of great Troubles to the Lady Elizabeth, for the great Difference in Judgment that was betwixt her Sister the Queen and her, caused the Queen to suspect that she was a principal Mover in them. Wherefore the good Princess was in all Haste sent for from her Manor of Ashebridge, where she then lay sick, and was committed Prisoner to the Tower of London; at her first coming being kept a close Prisoner under Locks and Bolts; but at Length the Lord Sbandois obtain'd Liberty for her to walk in the Queen's Chamber in the Garden. About May 9, she was removed to Woodstock, where her Cardinal Liberty was not much enlarged. In Reginald this her Confinement, as she sat look Pole, A. B. ing out of the Window, she happened to see a Maid milking in the Park, and merrily singing over her Pail, which struck this pensive Prisoner into a deep Muse, preferring the Maid's Fortunes above her own, and heartily wishing that herself was a Milkmaid. Perhaps this might be the Place where Stephen Gardiner (with Intent to ensnare her Life) caused her to be examined what she thought of those Words of Christ, hoc est Corpus meum, this is my Body. To which, after some Pause, the Princess thus warily, and as wittingly answer'd,

*Christ was the Word that spake it,
He took the Bread and brake it;
And what the Word did make it,
That I believe, and take it.*

A. D. 1554, and April the 16th, a Disputation began concerning Transubstantiation, between certain learned Men of the Popish Persuasion, and Thomas Cranmer Archbishop of Canterbury, Nicholas Ridley, late Bishop of London, and old Father Latimer, sometime Bishop of Worcester, of the Reformed Religion; which Dispute ended on the 20th of the same Month; and a Year and six Months after, the aforementioned Bishops gave Testimony to the Truth in the Flames in the Town-ditch of Oxford.

A. D. 1554, and July the 25th, was the Marriage betwixt Philip of Spain and Mary Queen of England, with great State solemnized, and their Titles by Garter King at Arms solemnly proclaimed, with these following Stiles, Philip and Mary, by the Grace of God, King and Queen of England, France, Naples, Jerusalem, and Ireland, Defenders of the 1557.

the Faith, Princes of Spain and Sicily, Archdukes of Austria, Dukes of Milain, Burgundy, and Brabant, Counts of Habsburg, Flanders, and Tyrol. In the November next following this Marriage, the Queen was reported to be with Child, for Joy whereof Te Deum was commanded solemnly to be sung, and Processions and Prayers were made for her safe Delivery.

The Queen took her Chamber, the Court was full of Midwives, all due Provisions made against the good Hour. And so certain it was taken to be, that some were punish'd but for questioning the contrary, and the Parliament enacted, That if God should take away Queen Mary, this their young Matter coming into the World should succeed, and that King Philip should be Protector during the Prince's Minority. Howbeit, tho' they had this Confidence to trust Philip with the Government of England, if such a Case should happen; yet had Philip little Confidence in the English; first, because they would have hindred the Marriage betwixt him and the Queen, and then because a Nobleman had given his Counsel to cut off the Lady Elizabeth's Head, whence he assured himself that those so bad-minded to their natural Princesses, could not be well-minded to him a Stranger. A great Friend, 'tis said, King Philip was to the said Princess Elizabeth, nor would he cease soliciting his Queen till he had gained her some Freedom from her close Restraint. But now the expected Time of Queen Mary's Deliverance being come, a Rumour was spread that a Prince was born, for Joy whereof the Bells were rung, Bonfires flamed, Processions were made, and some in their Sermons fondly described the Beauty of this young Prince. Notwithstanding at last it proved no such Matter. Some said this Rumour was spread in Policy, and that the Queen, to have put the Lady Elizabeth besides the Crown, would have mother'd another Body's Child; but King Philip scorned to father it. Others said, that the Queen miscarried; others, that she had a Tympany.

A. D. 1557, the Queen, to take Part with the Spaniard and Pope, proclaimed War against France, and King Philip crossed the Seas into Flanders. After whom his Queen sent a Thousand Horsemen, Four thousand Foot, and Two thousand Pioneers, under the Conduct of the Earl of Pembroke, who came with his Forces before the Town of St. Quintins, (at that Time besieged by the Dukes of Savoy and Brunswick) and in short Time by their manly Courage forced the Town to yield; for Joy whereof great Triumphs were made in England, which lasted not long; for this Success made the English too secure, insomuch, that thro' Neglect of seasonable and fitting Supplies, the Town of Calais was forced to yield to the French, upon but indifferent Terms on the English Part. Thus the Town of Calais, won by the victorious King Edward the Third, and that by no less than eleven Months Siege, was now in the Compass of eight Days besieged and regained, and that in the Depth of Winter, it being surrendered on January the 17th, 1557. And in the same Month and Year were also the strong Forts of Guises and Hames taken by the French, whereby all the English Footing was lost in France. This Loss with the Absence of King Philip (who did not passionately love his Consort the Queen) was thought to have hastened the Death of Queen Mary. She was heard to say, That the Loss of Calais was written in her Heart, and might therein Martyrs for True Religion denying the Errors of Popery. p. 171.

The Victory over the Famous Spanish Armada. 1588. p. 176.

there shoul Burni venter
West ons v Hand
Sayin
Salve did h was yet t to ri callee stant Spac
of th othe fume Chri mir ley l shop
Glor
Dac men men
Wiv Boy whi ner
of bur aga mo feff

A 15

of la N he
to

therein be read when her Body should be opened. She died of a Burning Fever, November the Seventeenth, 1558, and was buried at Westminster. The Church Possessions which this Queen had in her Hand, she freely resigned with this Saying, That she set more by the Salvation of her own Soul, than she did by Ten Kingdoms. Though she was of no bad natural Temper, yet through a blind Zeal she dealt so rigidly and cruelly against those called Sacramentarians, the Protestants, that in less than Four Years Space, she caused to be put to Death of them 277. In Smithfield, and other Parts of the Land, were consumed of them in the Flames, for Christ's Sake, 5 Bishops, i. e. Cranmer Archbishop of Canterbury, Ridley Bishop of London, Latimer Bishop of Worcester, Hooper Bishop of Gloucester, and Farrar Bishop of St. David's; 21 Ministers, 8 Gentlemen, 48 Artificers, 100 Husbandmen, Servants, and Labourers, 26 Wives, 20 Widows, 9 Virgins, 2 Boys, and 2 Infants; one of them whipped to Death by bloody Bonner; and the other springing out of its Mother's Womb, as she burned at the Stake, was thrown again into the Fire. Sixty four more were persecuted for their Profession of the true Christian Doctrine; whereof 7 were whipped, 16 perished in Prisons, and were buried in Dunghills, and many lay in Captivity condemned till the coming in of Queen Elizabeth; and many fled the Realm in those scorching Times, amongst whom was Catharine Dutches of Suffolk, the last Wife of Charles Brandon, Duke of Suffolk. Pray God of his great Mercy defend England from the Religion and Cruelties of Antichristian Rome!

On the self-same Day that Queen Mary died, died also Cardinal Pole, Archbishop of Canterbury, and was buried at Canterbury.

In the Reign of this Queen, extreme Dearth's raged, also Quartan Agues, of which many old People died, especially Clergymen.

At a little Town about a Mile, and Eastward from Nottingham, a Tempest of Thunder did great Harm, beat down many Houses, forced the Bells out of the Steeple, carrying them to the Outside of the Church-yard, and some Webs of Lead Four hundred Feet into the Field. A Child, by the Violence of it, was taken out of a Man's Arms, and carried an hundred Feet. Five or six Men, besides the Child, were slain by it. Some Hail-stones fell that were fifteen Inches about.

ELIZABETH.

A. D. 1558. Queen Elizabeth, the Restorer and Defender of the publick Profession of the Apostolical Religion in England, begun her Reign A. D. 1558, November 17. Upon the Death of her Sister Queen Mary, she removed to the Charter-House of London, and from thence was royally attended thro' the City unto the Tower. In which Triumphal State, as she passed through the Streets of London, when the Book of God was presented to her at the little Conduit in Cheapside, she received it with both her Hands, and kissing it, laid it to 1564.

Matthew Parker,
A. B. of
Cant.

to her Breast, saying, That the same had been her chiefest Delight, and should be the Rule by which she meant to frame her Government. January 15, was the Crown Imperial set on her Head by Dr. Oglethorp Bishop of Carlisle. Shortly after which, a Parliament sat, wherein the Title of the Supremacy was restored to the Crown, with the Tenths and First-Fruits of all Ecclesiastical Livings, and the Book of Common Prayer (set forth in Edward the Sixth's Time) was ratified, as also those Acts repealed which were enacted, in Queen Mary's Time, in favour of the Romish, and against the Reformed Religion. During this Parliament, a Petition was made unto her Majesty to move her unto Marriage, in Hope of Royal Issue from her. To which she replied, That she best liked a Virgin's Life; but that if it happened that her Affection should change, her Choice should be only of such an one as should be as careful as any of themselves for the publick Good. As for her Issue, she said, if she should have any, it might grow out of Kind, and prove ungracious; and therefore to leave behind her a more lasting and grateful Remembrance, she held it sufficient, that a Marble-Stone should declare to Posterities, that she a Queen had reigned, lived, and died a Virgin. This Maiden Queen, the better to secure herself against the Bishop of Rome, who sought to disable her Title by the Calumny of Illegitimation, entred into a League with some Princes of Germany. This done, she claimed the Restitution of Calais as her Right, having been lawfully granted and assured by the French themselves unto the Crown of England. But the English Queen was not more desirous to have Calais, than the French were unwilling to part with it;

howbeit, at length it was thus concluded, that Calais should remain to the French the Term of Eight Years, and then to return to the English, else the French to pay 500,000 Crowns; which they never performed, tho' the Agreement was sealed and sworn unto. Next, her Highness proceeds to purge the Clergy of England, ordering the Oath of Supremacy, and other Articles, to be tendred them; which many refusing, were forthwith deprived of their Ecclesiastical Benefices and Promotions. Then went forth Commissioners to suppress those Monasteries restored by Queen Mary, and to cast out all Images set up in the Churches; and after the reducing of Church Matters into Order, this happy Queen brought her Coins into fine and pure Sterling, debasing of Copper Coins; causing likewise great Store of Munition, Armour, and Powder, to be brought into the Land, and laid up in Readiness against a Time of Need.

A. D. 1562, her Majesty sent Aids into France to support the Reformed Religion there. These with great Joy were received into the Towns of Newhaven, Raan, and Diep; but within the Space of Twelve Months they were forced back into England, bringing thence many sick Soldiers, which dangerously infected the Nation with a long continuing Plague.

About the Year 1564, the Irish sought to shroud themselves from their Obedience unto Queen Elizabeth, under the Shelter of Shan-O-Neal, a Man cruel by Nature, and claiming an Hereditary Right to the Province of Ulster, as the O-Neals formerly had done to all Ireland. Against this Rebel so great Preparations were made, that he, terrified therewith, came over into

Eng-

England, and on his Knees begged the Queen's Pardon, which she granted him; howbeit, not long after he rebelled, but at length was slain by some of his own Countrymen.

A. D. 1567, so great civil Dissensions were in Scotland, that Outrages were not only committed upon the best Subjects, but even upon the King and Queen themselves; him they barbarously murdered; and forced her to leave Scotland. Which unhappy Queen having embarked herself for France, hoping there to find many Friends, was by cross Winds drove upon the English Coasts, from whence she might not return, but was detained Prisoner in England.

A. D. 1568, by the working Instruments of the old Doctor at Rome, there were Discontents bred and nourished in some great Persons of England, as the Earls of Northumberland and Westmoreland, Leonard Lord Dacres, Nevil, &c. who had in Readiness certain English Priests, Morton and others, with Bulls and Instruments of Absolution, Reconciliation, and Oaths to be taken to the Pope. These Romish Rebels raised Forces, and with Banner displayed entred Burrow-bridge, old Morton being their Ensign-bearer, in whose Colours were painted the Cross and Five Wounds of Christ. But at the Approach of her Majesty's Forces, the Captains of the Rebels fled into Scotland, and their Followers were taken without any Resistance. Of these Traitors were put to Death at Durham by Martial Law, an Alderman, a Priest, sixty-six Constables, besides others of them in other Places about.

A. D. 1570, Leonard Dacres of Harfey renewed the Rebellion, and had amongst his Followers, many Women Soldiers; but upon a Moor high unto Naworth, the Lord Hunsdon dispersed them in Fight.

August 22, of this Year, was the 1570. Earl of Northumberland beheaded at York, where in his last Speech he Edward avowed the Pope's Supremacy, denied that Subjection was due to the A. B. of Queen, affirmed the Realm to be Cant. in a Schism, and that obedient Subjects were no better than Hereticks. For you must know that Pope Pius V. had, by his Bull dated 1569, deprived the Queen of her Kingdoms, absolved her Subjects of all Subjection to her, and pronounced all that yielded her Obedience accursed; as appears by the latter Part of the said Bull, in these Words, — Being therefore strengthened with his Authority, who both pleased to set us in this supreme Throne of Justice, though unfit for so great a Burthen, We by the Fulness of our Apostolical Power, do declare the aforesaid Elizabeth an Heretick, and a Maintainer of Hereticks, and those that take her Part in the Things aforesaid [that is, in using wicked Rites and Institutions according to Calvin's Prescriptions, and commanding them to be observed by her Subjects, and abolishing the Sacrifice of the Mass, Prayers, Alms, difference of Meat, Single Life, and Catholick Rites, and compelling many to forswear and abjure the Authority and Obedience of the Bishop of Rome, &c.] to have incurred the Sentence of Anathema, and to be cut off from the Unity of Christ's Body. And moreover, that she is deprived of the pretended Right of her said Kingdom, and also from all Rule, Dignity, and Prebeminence whatsoever; and also her Nobility, Subjects, and People of the said Realm, and all others which have sworn unto her by any manner of Means, are absolved for ever from such Oath, and from all Duty of Empire, Fidelity, and Obedience, in such sort as we do absolve them by these Presents, and deprive the said Elizabeth of the pretended Right of the 1577. the Kingdom, and of all other Things aforesaid. And we do command and forbid all and singular of the Nobility, Subjects, People and others aforesaid, that they presume not to obey her Admonitions, Commands, or Laws. Whosoever shall do otherwise, we do enwrap them in the like Curse, &c. Given at Rome at St. Peter's in the Year of the Incarnation of our Lord, 1569, the Fifth of the Calends of March, and of our Papacy the Fifth. Which Bull was privately hung upon the Bishop of London's Palace Gate at the West End of St. Paul's. And such Influence it had upon the Spirits of many Persons disaffected to the Reformed Religion, that they sought by divers Means to work the Queen's Destruction. Many were the Projects and Devices to ruin the Church and Queen, but by the good Providence of Almighty God, the Projectors were defeated in their Purposes, and suffered deserved Punishment. In Norfolk, John Throgmorton, Brook, Redman, and others, sought to raise a Commotion, for the which they suffered Death. Dr. Story was executed for his Treason, 1571. John Sommersvil instigated by one Hall, a Seminary Priest, to murder the Queen, was executed. John Payn employed to murder her as she took her Recreation Abroad, was executed; so was Edmond Champion, a Seminary Priest, also executed. Francis Throgmorton for endeavouring to procure an Invasion, was executed. William Parry, who purposed to have murdered the Queen, was executed. Henry Piercy Earl of Northumberland, being privy to the Plots of Throgmorton for the bringing in Foreign Powers, was committed to the Tower, where to save the Hangman a Labour, he shot himself to the Heart. Thomas Howard being too busy in some Po-

John Whitgift
A. B. of
Cant.

pish Designs was also put to Death. Other Popish Traitors were likewise deservedly executed, whose Names, Facts, and Places, and Times of Execution, for Brevity sake are omitted.

A. D. 1572, November 18, appeared a strange Star or Comet Northward, in the Constellation of Cassiopeia, not much less than the Planet Venus, never changing Place, fixed far above the Moon's Orb, the like to which never did appear since the beginning of the World, that we read of, saving that at the Birth of Christ.

A. D. 1573, was built at London the Royal Exchange (so named by her Majesty) whose Founder was Sir Thomas Gresham.

A. D. 1576, Sir Martin Forbisher sailed into the North-East Seas, far farther than any Man before him had done, giving to those Parts the Name of Queen Elizabeth's Foreland. He brought from the farthest Northern Countries, a Ship's Lading of Mineral Stones (as he thought) which were afterwards cast out to mend the Highways.

A. D. 1577, and November 15, Capt. Drake set sail from Plymouth, and in three Years wanting twelve Days, he encompassed the Earth, landing again in England on November 3, 1580. In America, in the Country which he named Nova Albion, the King thereof presented unto him his Net-work Crown of many colour'd Feathers, and therewith resigned his Scepter of Government unto his Dispose. The People there so admired the English Men, that they sacrificed to them as to their Gods. At his Departure from thence, he reared a Monument to witness her Majesty's Right to that Province, as being freely given to her Deputy, both by King and People. The little Ship ship called the Pelican, wherein his admirable Voyage was performed, was, at her Majesty's Command, laid up in the Dock by Deptford, as a Monument of England's Fame, and Captain Drake was honoured with Knighthood.

A. D. 1581, was the Motion renewed for a Marriage betwixt Francis Valois Duke of Anjou, and Queen Elizabeth; and so effectually was the Suit moved, and acceptably heard of her Highness, that the Monsieur came over in Person, tho' to the little liking of many of the English Nobles, and to the great Discontent of the Commons, as was made known by a Book written against it, which cost William Stubbs, the Inditer thereof, the Loss of his Right Hand.

About A. D. 1583, the Pope and King of Spain sent Supplies to the Irish Rebels, under the Command of Thomas Stukely, an English fugitive, whom the Pope had stiled Marquis of Ireland. These landing in Ireland, raised the consecrated banner, built their Fort Del Ore; but the Lord Grey of Wilton, Lord-Deputy, quickly put most of them to the Sword.

A. D. 1585. after several Suits made unto the Queen by the distressed States of the Netherlands, and their Grievances recommended to her by the King of France, with promise of his own Assistance; her Majesty was graciously pleased to undertake their Protection, sending to their Assistance Sir John Norbury with 5000 Foot and 1000 Horse, all retained at her Highness's Pay during those Wars against Spain, which Monthly amounted to 12526 l. sterling. For which Monies so distributed, the Towns of Flushing and Brill, with two Sconces, and the Castle of the Ramekins in Holland, were delivered to the Queen's Use in Pledge, until the Money was repaid. The Considerations moving her Majesty to assist the United Provinces were, The Defence of the Reformed Religion, because of the bloody Inquisition, that without respect had persecuted her Subjects; because the King of Spain had sent Forces into Ireland; and lastly, to prevent her Enemy the Spaniard from being so nigh a Neighbour to her.

A. D. 1587, and February 7, was Mary Queen of Scotland, King James's Mother, beheaded at Fotherbinghay Castle, to the great Discontent, it is said, of Queen Elizabeth, who committed Secretary Davison to the Tower thereupon, and never admitted him more to his Place, because of his Forwardness in promoting the Death of that Roman Catholick Queen. But what is above us is nothing to us. The Matters for which she was condemned in the Star-Chamber Court at Westminster, were her pretending Title to the Crown of England, her being privy to certain Treasons of Anthony Babington and others, tending to the Hurt and Death of the Royal Person of Queen Elizabeth. This she absolutely denied, affirming, that she never attempted any Thing against the Queen's Person; tho' for her own Delivery out of Prison, she confessed she did make some Attempts. Babington with thirteen other Traitors, were executed.

A. D. 1588, Henry III. King of France, who ever honoured Queen Elizabeth, and not the least because of her Religion, sent speedy and secret Notice unto her of the Spaniards Intentions to invade her Realm of England. Against whose coming the Queen caused her Trained-Bands to be in Readiness. Tilbury in Essex was the Place for her Camp, whereunto were appointed to march 15000 Horse, and 22,000 Foot.

1588. Foot. And for her special Guard out of the several Counties of the West, East, and South Parts of England, were selected 1352 Horsemens, and 34,500 Footmen. The Queen herself was Generalissimo, and Robert Dudley, Earl of Leicester, Lieutenant-General.

A. D. 1588, and May 19, the Armado, or Invincible Navy of the Spaniards (as they termed it) loosed Anchor from Lisbon, and on July 20, it passed by Plymouth towards Calais, hoping about those Coasts to have met with the Prince of Parma, but in their Way the English Fleet changed some Bullets with them. July 21, the two Fleets fought with in Musket-shot, when the English Admiral, Lord Charles Howard, fell most hotly on the Spaniards Vice-Admiral. In this Fight they well perceived how that their great unweildy Ships were unfit for Service in those narrow Seas, the English smaller Ships being too nimble for them, as well in Respect of saving themselves as in annoying the Spanish.

July 12, Sir Francis Drake, Vice-Admiral, took one of their great Galleons, wherein was Don Pedro de Valdez, with divers other Noblemen. The Soldiers had the Spoil of this Ship, in which were 55,000 Duckets of Gold.

July 23, the Spaniards came right against Portland, when the forest Fight was performed, and the English gained a great Venetian Ship, with other lesser ones.

July 24, the Fight was only betwixt the Four great Galeasses, and some of the English Ships.

July 25, the Spaniards came against the Isle of Wight, where was a terrible Encounter, till at length the English so battered the Spanish tall Ships, that they were forced to secure themselves in an Half-moon Posture.

July 28, as the Spanish Fleet lay at Anchor within sight of Calais, the English sent in amongst them Eight Fire-ships filled with Gunpowder, Pitch, Brimstone and other combustible Matter, their Ordnance charged with Bullets, Stones, Chains, and the like. These being drove with Wind and Tide unto the Spanish Fleet, and then taking Fire such a sudden roaring Clap was given that the Spaniards affrighted, in the Dead of Night, were struck into a horrible Fear lest all their Ships should be fired by these, wherefore in great Hast they cut their Cables, hoisted their Sails, and drove at Random in to the Sea.

July 29, ranging themselves in order, they approached over-again Graevelling, where the English again getting the Wind of them, discharged upon them from Morning till Night to the Confusion of divers of the Spanish Ships. The Hollanders with Thirty-five of their Ships watched the Coasts about Dunkirk, to prevent the Duke of Parma from having any Intercourse there.

July 30, the Spanish Dons having gotten more Sea-room for the huge bodied Hulks, spread the Sails, and made away as fast as Wind and Water would permit them, fearing the small Fleet and Forces of the English; whereas, had they known but the Want of Powder that was on the English Side, they would sure have stood longer to the Tacklings. The English Admiral followed now the Vincible Armado towards Norway, and the Spaniards for the saving of their fresh Water cast all their Mules and Horses overboard. The Duke of Medina, the Admiral, when he at last arrived in Spain, was deprived of all Authority, and otherwise disgraced. Many of the Spanish Ships in their Flight perished, through Tempest upon the Irish Seas, others were driven into the Channel of England, where Part of them were taken by the English, others by the Rochellers, and some arrived at Newhaven. Of 134 Ships which had set Sail from Lisbon, only 53 returned into Spain. Of the four Galleasses of Naples, but one; and of the ninety-one Galleons and great Hulks from divers Provinces, only thirty-three returned. Of the four Gallies of Portugal but one. In brief, there were missing of their whole Fleet eighty-one Vessels, and of the 30,000 Soldiers, 13,500 and odd. Of Prisoners taken in England, Ireland, and Low Countries, were 2000 and upwards. So that it appears there was small Virtue in the Pope's Crusado, wherein he publish'd a safe Passport for the Spaniards to enter England. The English Fleet was betwixt fourscore and a hundred Sail. Captains therein were, the Lords Howard and Sheffield, Sir Francis Drake, Sir John Hawkins, Sir Walter Rawleigh, Sir Martin Fawbisher, &c. For this Deliverance the 19th of November was appointed a Day of Thanksgiving; Blessed be the Lord who gave us not a Prey into their Teeth, &c. Psal. cxxiv.

Ologesimus octavus, mirabilis annus Clade Papistarum, faustus ubique piis.

Dr. Fulk.

The Thunder-clap of this Armado being thus over, and the Invincible become Vincible, the Queen determined to assist Don Antonio, the expelled King of Portugal, for the regaining of his Kingdom; to which End a Fleet was sent out under the Conduct of Sir Francis Drake, and Sir John Norris for the Land Service was General. These landing in the Bay of Galicia near to the Groin, took the base Town by Surprise, which they found well victualled and stored with Wine, to the Damage of the English, who taking too immoderately of it, so inflamed and infected their Blood, that it caused great Sickness and Mortality in the whole Army. After some Conflicts with the high Town, they fired the base Town of Suburbs, and put again to Sea; and when some Struglings with the Winds were over, they recovered the Burlings. In which Passage Robert Earl of Essex, with his Brother Mr. Walter Devereux, accompanied with other gallant Men, came Volunteers to the Fleet, which landing in Portugal won the Town and Castle of Peniche. Then the English Army marched over-land to Lisbon, where a strong Sally was made upon the English, but the Earl of Essex chased them back to their very Gates. And the meanwhile Admiral Drake with his Fleet were come to Cascais, and possessed the Town without any Resistance, and during the Stay there, the English took threescore Hulks from the Spaniards laden with Corn, Malts, Cables, Copper, and Wax.

About A. D. 1591, Queen Elizabeth sent Aids into France in the Behalf of Henry IV. whom the Popish Party would not admit to the Crown of France, though his absolute Right, because he leaned to the Reformed Religion; nor was he admitted till he had taken Oath to defend the Roman Faith against all Oppugners.

A. D. 1596, and June the first, did Charles Lord Howard, and the Earl of Essex, with a gallant Fleet, begin their Voyage for Cadiz, which in a short Time after their coming to it, was surrendered to them. The Spoil thereof was given to the English Soldiers, the Wearing-Cloaths of the Inhabitants only excepted, and the Citizens upon the Payment of 120,000 Duckets for their Ransom had their Liberty.

N

The

1596. The Spanish Fleet which lay in the Harbour valued at Twelve Millions of Duckets was fired by the Admiral's Command, to the End it might not become a Prize to the English. The Town the English burnt, and spoiled the Island, then set Sail towards Favo, a Town in Algarva, where the English landed, foraged the Country for about three Leagues, burnt the Town Lotha, and then returned for England. But the Wrongs which had been offered by the Spaniards seeming far greater to the English, than was yet the Justice upon them, and the wise Queen holding it best to keep the Spanish King employed at home, the Earl of Effex was therefore commissioned with a well furnished Fleet to sail for the Azores Islands. Which Fleet, upon September 15, 1597, fell in with the Isles of Flores, Evernes, Fyall, and Pike, all which submitted to the Earl. Then he sailed to St. Michael's, where Sir Walter Rawleigh kept the Seas with the Ships, whilst Effex landed and sacked the rich Town Villa Franca; but the Winter Storms approaching, the Earl returned Home, bringing with him a Brazil Ship of War, with three other Prizes, valued at 400,000 Duckets. The Pope and Spaniards, though they had hitherto been frustrated in all their mischievous Designments against the Queen and Church of England, yet still they hoped that by one treacherous Means or other they might at length effect the Ruin of both; though praised be God the Ruin proved to their own vile Instruments. Patrick Cullen, hired to murder the Queen, was executed at Tyburn. Philip Earl of Arundel and Sir John Perat were both condemned for High Treason, but died by Course of Nature. Roderick Lopez, a Spaniard, one of the Queen's Physicians, undertaking to poyson her, was with his two Complices executed at Tyburn. Edmund York and Richard Williams, hired by one Holt an English Jesuit, were executed for their Treasons. Edward Squire was executed for imploying the Pommel of the Queen's Saddle, and Pommels of the Earl of Effex his Chair, though by God's Providence the Poyson effected not what was intended by it.

One Wallpole a Jesuit, animated him to the Fact, by alledging that he might do it without much Danger of his Life; but tho' he should lose his Life for it, yet he should be assured that in Exchange of this transitory one, he should enjoy the Estate of a glorious Saint in Heaven. So meritorious it seems it is, to murder Catholick Princes, so they be not Roman Catholick ones. But besides all these Romish Agents, there was the Irish Tir-Owen, who used his greatest Endeavours to divert Subjection from the English Crown, against whom that martial Knight Sir John Norris was sent General, who after he had brought Tir-Owen to a Submission (though, as it after proved, but a feigned one) ended his Days. The Irish rebelling again, the Earl of Effex was sent thither, where in the Province of Munster he became terrible to those wild Irish Rebels, chasing them before him into the Woods, though with more Expence of Time, and Loss of Men, than was well liked by some Statists in England. Then the Earl advanced into Leinster Province against the O-Coners and O-Moils. Then made towards Ulster, where he entred into Parley with Tyrone. But her Majesty being informed (likely by some that envied the Earl's being so highly in her Favour) that the Spring, Summer, and Autumn were spent without Service upon upon the Arch-Traytor Tir-Owen; that her Men were diminished, and large Sums of Money consumed without the Earl's doing that he was sent for; and that without her Highness's Order he entered into Parley with the Rebels. Hereupon her Majesty sent sharp Letters unto the Earl, upon the Receipt whereof, in Discontent he hasted into England, well hoping to pacify the Queen's Displeasure; but after a short verbal Welcome from the Queen, he was commanded to his Chamber, and soon after committed to the Custody of the Lord-Keeper, 1599. In the Earl's Stead, Charles Blount, Lord Montjoy, was sent into Ireland, who held Tir-Owen very hard, and forced him to with-draw into his old lurking Places. But to strengthen the Irish Part, the King of Spain sent into Ireland Two thousand old trained Spanish Soldiers, with certain Fugitive Irish under the Command of Don d'Aquila, who straight after his Arrival published a Writing, wherein he styled himself Master-General and Captain of the Catholic King in the Wars of God, for preserving the Faith in Ireland. Unto these Two Thousand Spaniards more were shortly sent, under the Conduct of Alphonso Campo; but Alphonso had not long nested in Ireland, e'er himself and Three of his Captains were taken, and Twelve Hundred of his Spaniards were slain.

And at the Siege of King'sale the Spaniards made Suit to the Lord-General for a Peace, which was yielded unto; whereupon the Spaniards departed, and the Irish submitted themselves to the merciful Queen.

The Earl of Effex, who had been committed to the Keeping of the Lord-keeper, was by her Majesty's Clemency quit of that Durance, and only commanded to his own House; but the Earl, of a daring Spirit, and exasperated by his martial Followers, likewise presuming upon the Queen's high Respect towards him, resolved by Force and Violence to have personal Conference with the Queen, and to remove from about her such as he deemed his Enemies. To effect which, many of his Favourers assembled at his House, as well Noblemen and Knights, as Captains and other Officers; but this being understood by the Statists, they made it known to her Majesty, who thereupon sent four of her Honourable Counsellors to the Earl to offer him Justice, and to command the Assembly to depart. These Counsellors accordingly went to the Earl of Effex's House, where they delivered their Message to the Earl, and commanded his Followers whom they saw about him to lay down their Weapons, and depart; but the Earl leaving these Counsellors under Custody in his own House, with his Attendants, in tumultuous Manner, made into London, his Followers crying through the Streets, that the said Earl of Effex should have been murdered by Cobham, Cecil, and Rasleigh.

Howbeit, instead of finding that Friendship in London, which they expected, the Earl was proclaimed a Traitor in divers Places thereof. Wherefore the Earl made Haste back, and fortified his own House in the Strand; but after some little Resistance yielded himself to the Lord Admiral, and the same Night was sent Prisoner to the Tower. And upon February the Nineteenth, the Earls of Effex and Southampton were arraigned and condemned at Westminster, and on February 25, 1600, the Earl of Effex suffered Death

1600. Death on the Green within the Tower; whose Dying-Speech was to this Effect, That his Punishment was just, his Sins innumerable, his last Sin for which he died, a great, crying, bloody, and infectious Sin, that had drawn others, for Love to him, to offend God, their Sovereign, and the World. He prayed God to forgive his Sins, and her Majesty and the State to forgive him; prayed for them, thanked God that he was neither Atheist in denying the Scriptures, nor Papist in trusting to his own Merits for Salvation, but in the Merits of Christ Jesus his Saviour; prayed the People to join with him in Prayer, that his Soul might be lifted up by Faith above all earthly Things: desired Forgiveness of all the World, as he from his Heart forgave all Men.

His Head was with three Strokes

Spain's Rod, Rome's Ruin, Netherland's Relief.

Earth's Joy, England's Gem, World's Wonder, Nature's Chief.

In her Reign were executed in England of Jesuits and Seminary-Priests, for sowing Sedition and plotting Treason, the Number of sixty-seven, and fifty-three more of them were banished.

A. D. 1571, and February the Seventeenth, at Kingstone near Marleeb in Herefordshire, the Ground opened, and certain Rocks, with a Piece of Ground, removed and went forward the Space of four Days. It removed itself betwixt Six of the Clock in the Evening, and Seven the next Morning, forty Paces, carrying great Trees and Sheep Cotes, some with Flocks of Sheep in them. It overthrew Kinnastone Chapel, also two Highways were removed nigh an hundred Yards with Trees and Hedges. The Ground thus carried being in all Twenty-six Acres; and where Tillage Ground was, there severed from the Body, and his Death generally lamented. For Accessories, Abettors in the Offence, were executed, first Captain Lee, and after him Sir Gilliam Merrick, and Henry Cuff, a learned Man, were executed at Tyburn; and on Towerhill were beheaded Sir Charles Davers and Sir Christopher Blunt. But as the Death of this noble Person was much bewailed of the Subjects, so was it of her Majesty, who would oft-times shew Passions of her Grief for his Death, even until her own Death, which, to the great Sorrow of her People, befel on the 24th of March, 1602. Her Body was buried in Henry the Seventh's Chapel at Westminster, where her Successor King James erected her a Princely Monument, Memoriae Sacrum, &c. She was, 'tis said, Pasture is left in Place, and where Pasture there Tillage.

A. D. 1578, Mark Scalist, a Blacksmith of London, made a Lock of Iron, Steel, and Brass, of eleven several Pieces, and a Pipe Key, all which weighed but one Grain of Gold. He also made a Chain of Gold of Forty-three Links; which Chain being fastened to the Lock and Key, and put about a Flea's Neck, the Flea drew them with Ease: Chain, Key, Lock, and Flea weighed but one Grain and a half.

A. D. 1580, in the Marshes of Dainsey in Essex was so infinite a Number of Mice, that they almost covered the whole Marsh, and tainted the Grass with their venomous Teeth, that the Cattle grazing thereon were infected with the Murrain, and died. And by no Art could Men destroy these Mice, but at length Owls in Abundance, to the great Admiration of the Country, came and devoured them.

In or nigh the Year of our Lord 1591, was William Hacket, a hot-headed Sectarist, arraign'd and found guilty of having spoken many seditious and traitorous Words, &c. For the which he was brought from Newgate in London to a Gibbet in Cheapside, and there executed. Divers Persons called Brownists, were executed in several Places of England, for sowing Sedition, namely, Henry Barrow and John Greenwood, one Penrie a Welshman, Elias Thacker and John Copping.

A. D. 1600, and August the 5th, did James the Sixth, King of Scotland, narrowly escape a grand Conspiracy, practised by the Earl of Gowry and his Brother.

A. D. 1586, that Mirror of Men for Letters and Arms, Sir Philip Sidney, died of a Wound he received at Zutphen Fight in Guelderland.

JAMES I.

A. D. 1602. KING James's Title to the Crown of England sprung from Henry VII. whose Issue by the Male failing in the late deceased Queen Elizabeth, the Off-spring of Margaret his eldest Daughter was the next Heir, which Lady Margaret being married unto James IV. King of Scotland, by him had Issue James V. whose only Daughter and Child Queen Mary was the Mother of King James VI. of that Name that had swayed the Scepter in Scotland. Which Learned Prince, when he heard of the Death of Queen Elizabeth, set forward out of Scotland, and was with great Joy received of all his English Subjects in his Way to London, and at his Approach unto that Honourable City, the Lord Mayor and Aldermen, with Five Hundred choice Citizens, all in Chains of Gold, and well mounted, met his Majesty, and with all solemn Observance attended him unto the Charter-house. Then Preparations were made for his Coronation; but before the Day appointed thereunto, a Proclamation came fourth, that no Citizen should presume to approach the Court, the City having buried in one Week above One Thousand of the Plague. And yet a greater Plague than this was intended against England about the King's coming in, had not God in his Mercy prevented it: For Pope Clement VIII. having sent unto Henry Garnet, Superior of the Jesuits in England, two Bulls, therein prohibiting any to be admitted to the Crown, unless he would first tolerate the Romish Religion, and by all his best Endeavours advance the Catholick Cause. Hereupon the Pope's Creatures, to do their unholy Father the best Service they could, combined with some (whom private Discontents had discomposed) to surprize the King's Person and Prince Henry, intending to retain them Prisoners in the Tower; or if they could not gain the Tower, then to carry them to Dover-Castle, there to keep them till they had brought the King to their own Terms, and compleated their Designs. The Persons accused for this Conspiracy, 1604. were Henry Brook, Lord Cobham, Thomas Lord Grey of Wilton, Sir Walter Rawleigh, Sir Griffin Markham, Sir Edward Parham, George Brook, and Bartholomew Brooksby, Esquires; Anthony Copley, Gentleman; Watson and Clarke, Priests.

A. D. 1603, and July 21, King James and Queen Anne were crowned at Westminster by John Whitgift Archbishop of Canterbury, and when the Coronation was over, the Conspirators were conveyed to Winchester, (where the Term was then kept, because of the Plague at London) and there had their Tryal, and were all condemned by their Jury, save Sir Edward Parham: Howbeit, only three of them were executed, namely, Watson, Clarke, and George Brook. This Business thus transacted for the Safety of King and Kingdom, his Majesty to gratify the Puritan or Presbyterian Party, (that had petitioned for a Reformation in the English Church) commanded an Assembly of selected Divines to appear in his Royal Presence at Hampton Court, whither the summoned accordingly repaired. Persons summoned to maintain the Cause of the Church of England, were the Archbishop of Canterbury, Bishops of London, Durham, Winchester, &c.

Persons for the Reformation of the Church were Dr. Reynolds, and Dr. Sparks of Oxford, Mr. Knewstubs, and Mr. Chaderton of Cambridge. At this Conference his Majesty notably vindicated the Church of England: See the Conference at Hampton Court, printed 1604. After an Endeavour of settling Church peace, the King commanded a new Translation of the Holy Scriptures, which was accordingly done.

A. D. 1604, and August the Nineteenth, was Peace proclaimed betwixt the two Nations of Spain and England. And the King, to join the Nations of England and Scotland into an happy Union, caused himself by Proclamation to be styled King of Great Britain. A Proclamation also came forth, commanding all Jesuits and Seminary Priests out of the Land; but these Underminers of Church and State mean not to leave England so, but design to stay and triumph in its Ruins, purposing by one fatal Blow to destroy the King, the Prince, the Peers both Temporal and Spiritual, the Knights and Burgeses of Parliament.

And the Traytors Intent, when that damnable Villany should be effected, was to surprize the Queen, and Remainder of the King's Issue, to bring in Foreign Powers, and to alter Religion. Sir Edward Baynham, an attainted Person, was sent to the Pope to acquaint him with the designed Gunpowder Treason, and Thomas Winter brought with him out of Flanders, Guy Faux, as a fit Executioner of their hellish Project. The Conspirators resolved among themselves, that it was lawful for Ease of Conscience to destroy the Innocent with the Nocent, and this by the Authority and Judgment of Garnet himself.

Then they took Oath of Secrecy, swearing by the Blessed Trinity, and the Sacrament they then were about to receive, never to disclose, directly or indirectly, by Word or Circumstance, this their Plot in Hand, or any of them to desert from the Execution thereof, until the rest of the Conspirators should give Leave. This done, Mr. Thomas Piercy hired an House next adjoining to the Parliament-House, pretending it to be for his Lodgings, and Guy Faux, who changed his Name to Johnson, was to be his Man, and to have the keeping of

of the Keys of the House. December 11, 1604, the Traytors entred into their Work of Darknes, beginning their Mine, and by Christmas-Eve they had brought their Work under an Entry unto the Wall of the Parliament-House, under-propping all still as they undermined. The Wall, which was very hard, and Nine Foot thick, with great Labour they wrought half way through, but then it happening that a Cellar was to be let, which was under the Parliament-House, they ceased their undermining, and Thomas Piercy hired the Cellar for the laying in of his Winter Fuel, Wood and Coal. But instead of these, they stored it with Thirty Six Barrels of Gunpowder, upon which they laid Bars of Iron, Logs of Timber, massy Stones, Iron Crows, Pick-axes, with the rest of their undermining Tools, and to cover all, Store of Billets and Faggots: So that now all was in Readiness against the next Meeting of the Parliament. The Secular Traytors had hitherto done their Parts, nor were the Jesuitical Priests wanting on their Parts in doing their utmost. Their Masses and Sacrifices they usually concluded with Prayers for their Brethrens good Success, supplicating their God to prosper their Pains who laboured in his Cause Day and Night, and that Heresy might vanish away like Smoke, and their Memory perish with a Crack, like the Ruin and Fall of a broken House. But through the Goodness of the God of Heaven, these Romish Saints were taken in the Snare that they had laid for the Just. They wrought their own Destruction; for upon Thursday in the Evening, ten Days before the Parliament were to convene, a Letter directed to the Lord Monteagle, was delivered to a Footman of his in the Street, by an unknown Person, with a Charge to deliver it into his Lord's own Hand. This Letter, without Date or Subscription of Name, somewhat unlegible, and of strange Contents, perplex'd the Lord; he hastes therefore to Whitehall, there to impart it to the Lord Cecil, Earl of Salisbury, principal Secretary, who shewed it to the Lord Chamberlain and other Lords, and then convey'd it to the King. The Letter was as followeth:

My Lord, Out of the Love I bear to some of your Friends, I have a Care of your Preservation. Therefore I would advise you, as you tender your Life, to devise some Excuse to shift your Attendance at this Parliament. For God and Man have concurred to punish the Wickedness of this Time, and think not slightly of this Advertisement, but retire your self into the Country, where you may expect the Event in Safety: For though there be no Appearance of any Stir, yet I say, you shall perceive a terrible Blow this Parliament, and yet they shall not see who hurts them. This Counsel is not to be contemned, because it may do you good, and can do you no Harm; for the Danger is past so soon as you have burnt the Letter. And I hope God will give you the Grace to make good Use of it, to whose Holy Protection I commend you.

His Majesty, after he had read this Letter, first paused a while; then reading it again, delivered his Judgment upon it: That he apprehended by these Words, of receiving a terrible Blow this Parliament, and yet should not see who hurt them; that a sudden Danger, by a Blast of Gunpowder should be intended by some base Villain in a Corner, no

1607. Insurrection, Rebellion, or desperate Attempt appearing. And therefore he wished that the Rooms under the Parliament House might be thoroughly searched, which accordingly was done, November the Fifth about Midnight, at which time Sir Thomas Knevet went to search those Under Rooms; where at the Entrance into the Cellar he found Guy Faux at so unseasonable a Time, cloaked and booted, whom he apprehended; then entering the Cellar, he found therein under the Billets Thirty Six Barrels of Powder; and when he came to search the Traytor Faux, he found about him a Dark-Lantern, Three Matches, and other Instruments for blowing up of the Powder. And the Villain, no whit daunted, instantly confessed himself guilty; but so far from Repentance, that he vowed, if he had been found within the Room, he would have blown up himself and them all.

And when he was brought before the Lords of the Council, he lamented nothing so much, as that the Deed had not been done, saying, That the Devil, and not God, was the Discoverer of the Plot. But the News of the Plot's Discovery coming to the Ears of Catesby, Piercy, Rockwood, the Wrights, and Thomas Winter, they posited into Warwickshire to other of their Associates, who now began an open Rebellion, pretending that all the Catholics Throats were appointed to be cut. And after that they had hovered about a while, they fled to Holdbeth in Herefordshire, whither they were pursued, and where John Wright and Christopher Wright, Gentlemen, making Opposition, were slain, and Thomas Piercy and Robert Catesby, Esquires, fighting Back to Back, were both of them slain with one Bullet; others were there taken.

A. D. 1605, January 27, Sir Everard Digby, Kt. Thomas Winter, Robert Winter, Ambrose Rockwood, John Grant, Gentlemen, Robert Keys, Thomas Bates, and Guido Fawkes, were tried, found guilty, and condemned, and on Thursday following Digby, Grant, Bates, and Robert Winter, were hang'd and quarter'd at the West End of St. Paul's, and on Friday the rest were executed in the Parliament Yard at Westminster. In Memory of this great Deliverance, the Fifth of November (being the Day appointed for the Execution of this hellish Plot) was by Authority of Parliament enacted to be observed as a Day of Thanksgiving.

A. D. 1606, March the 28th, was Henry Garnet, Provincial of the English Jesuits, arraigned for concealing the aforesaid Treason, and on May the Third was executed at the West End of St. Paul's; at his Death confessing his Fault, asking Forgiveness, and exhorting all Catholics never to attempt any Treason against the King or State, as a Thing that God would never prosper.

A. D. 1607, was an Insurrection in Northampton, Warwick, and Leicestershires, about the throwing down of Inclosures. At the first the Rout was without any particular Head, but at length one John Reynolds undertook to be their Captain, affirming to the Company, that in his great Pouch hanging by his Side, he had sufficient to defend them against all Opposers; though afterwards being apprehended, and his Pouch searched, there was nothing found in it but a Piece of Green Cheese.

June 12, King James was entered a Brother of the Clothworkers, when also many Lords and Gentlemen were made free of the same Company.

A. D.

A. D. 1608, George Jarvis, a Seminary Priest, and Thomas Garnet, a Jesuit, were executed at Tyburn, the last of which had Pardon offered him, if he would take the Oath of Supremacy; but the Traytor would hang rather.

About this Time very many famous English Pirates, some of whom denied their Faith and turned Turks, lived in great State at Tunis, as Captain Ward, Bishop, Sir Francis Verney, and Glanvil. Nineteen of the Pirates were taken and hanged at Wapping.

A. D. 1609, was the New Exchange built, the King naming it Britain's Bourse. In the same Year the King by Proclamation prohibited all Foreign Nations from fishing on any of the Coasts of England, Scotland, Ireland, or the Isles adjacent, without special Licence from his Commissioners. In this Year also the King, according to an ancient Custom, had Aid of his Subjects through England, for making his eldest Son Prince Henry knight.

A. D. 1610, June 4, all Romish Priests, Jesuits, and Seminaries, as being the Incendiaries of Disturbances, were commanded to depart the Realm. Then the Oath of Alliance was ministred to all Sorts of People.

His Majesty caused to be built the goodliest Ship of War that had ever been built in England, being the Burthen of 1400 Tun, and carrying 64 Pieces of Ordnance: Prince Henry named it the Prince.

A. D. 1612, the Corpse of the late Queen of Scotland, the King's Mother, was translated from Peterborough to the Chapel Royal at Westminster. On November the Sixth following, Prince Henry died of a malignant Fever, which reigned that Year in most Parts of the Land. Some said that he died by poisoned Grapes which he eat; others, by Gloves of a poisoned Perfume, given him for a Present. But be his Death by what Means it would, certain it is, that he was infinitely beloved of the People, as one that had given great Hopes of proving a wise and martial Prince.

February 14, The Marriage of the Prince Palatine of the Rhine with the Princess Elizabeth, was solemnized in the Chapel at Whitehall. She was attired all in White, having a rich Crown of Gold upon her Head, her Hair hanging down at length, curiously beset with Pearls and precious Stones; her Train supported by Twelve young Ladies all in White. In this same Year, the City of London, having before had the Province of Ulster granted them by the King for a Plantation, sent thither about three Hundred Persons of all Sorts of Handicrafts-men, chiefly to inhabit the Cities of Londonderry and Colrain. And for the advancing of this or the like Plantation in Ireland, the King about this Time began a new Order of Knights called Baronets, which Order he limited within the Number only of two Hundred; and as the Issue should fail, the Order to cease. About this Time also, an exemplary Punishment was imposed upon Sir Peckshall Breckas, which was to stand at Paul's Cross in a White Sheet, holding a Wand in his Hand, he having been formerly convicted before the High Commissioners for many notorious Adulteries with divers Women.

About A. D. 1614, Mr. Hugh Middleton, Citizen and Goldsmith of London, with infinite Cost and Labour, brought the New River to the City of London, from the two great Springs

1614.

1618. Springs of Chadwell and Amwell in Hertfordshire. And about the same Time was the Moorfields by London converted from deep stinking Ditches, and noisome common Shores, to pleasant sweet Walks.

George
Abbot,
A. B. of
Cant.

A. D. 1615, Smithfield, which was before a rude dirty Place, was paved all over, and the middle Part thereof railed in.

September 27, the Lady Arabella, the King's Cousin German, died. She had sometime before, without the King's Privy, secretly married the Earl of Hertford's younger Son, for which they were both committed to the Tower:

Sir Edward Coke, the famous Lawyer, upon some Displeasure, was discharged from being Lord Chief Justice.

In this Year was a Divorce made betwixt Robert Devereux Earl of Effex, and his Countess, for his Insufficiency, and she left free to marry any other. After which Divorce, Robert Carr, Earl of Somerset, took her to Wife. But Sir Thomas Overbury, the Earl's special Friend, having dissuaded the Match, and perhaps laid some Imputation on the Lady's Fame, according to Desert, did by this Means so incense these Lovers against him, that they first found Means to have the said ingenious Gentleman committed to the Tower, and then by their Instruments to have him poisoned; some say by a Tansy sent him to eat; some by a Glister ministred to him. For which Fact Sir Gervas Elwes, then Lieutenant of the Tower, and Mrs. Turner, with others, were put to Death. The Earl and his Countess were also arraigned and condemned, but had a Lease of their Lives granted them for Ninety Nine Years, yet so as never after to see the King's Face more. This made Way for the Advancement of

Mr. George Villers; for this great Favourite, the Lord Carr, being upon this Occasion laid aside, the said Mr. Villers was accepted in his Stead. Whom the King first of all knighted, and made Gentleman of his Bed-Chamber, soon after Viscount and Master of his Horse, and while after Earl of Buckingham, then Marquis of Buckingham, and Lord High Admiral, and lastly Duke of Buckingham. A Person 'tis said, he was of delicate Composure of Body, and of excellent natural Parts, and one that was very mindful of his Relations and Kindred, most of whom he procured to be advanced.

A. D. 1618, Sir Walter Raleigh, who had lived a condemned Man many Years in the Tower of London, now to procure some Liberty, propounded to the King a Project for the fetching of Gold from a Mine at Guyana, and that without any Wrong to the King of Spain. This the King condescended unto, and Sir Walter set forward in his Voyage; but when after a real only a Shew of Search, no Treasure could be found, he fell upon St. Thome belonging to the King of Spain, which he plundered and burnt, then returned, though to his Ruin. For though Sir Walter sought to excuse his spoiling of St. Thome, by alleging that the Spaniards had first assaulted him; and moreover, that he could not come at the Mine without first winning of that Town, yet did the Spanish Leigere Gun more aggravate this his Fact, as prevailed so with the King, who preferred the publick Peace before the Life of a Man already condemned, that he gave Way to have the Sentence of his former Condemnation executed upon him. And accordingly this Man, famous for Letters and Arms, was beheaded in the Park.

ment Yard at Westminster. His own Epitaph he had framed himself 1621.
these Lines.

*Even such is Time, which takes in Trust,
Our Youth, our Joys, and all we have ;
And pays us nought but Age and Dust,
When in the dark and silent Grave,
When we have wandered all our Ways,
Shuts up the Story of our Days ;
And from which Grave, and Earth, and Dust,
The Lord will raise me up, I trust.*

In this Year 1618, and March the second, Queen Anne died at Hamp- Court, and was buried at Westmin- ster. The November preceding her death, a famous Comet or Blazing star appeared.

A. D. 1620, July the 17th, Bernard Calvert, of Andover, rode from St. George's Church in South- ark to Dover, from thence passed by Barge to Calais in France, and from thence returned back to St. George's Church the same Day. This his Journey he performed betwixt the Hours of Three in the Morning and Eight in the After- noon.

A. D. 1620, Sir Francis Michel, Justice of the Peace of Middlesex, was sentenced by Parliament to die with his Face to the Horse- tail through the City of London, for practising sundry Abuses in setting up new Ale-houses, and exacting Monies contrary to the Law. This Sentence was executed upon him. Sir Francis Bacon, Viscount of St. Albans, Lord Chancellor of England, was for Bribery (but they were his Servants that were brought) put out of his Place, and committed to the Tower for some days.

A. D. 1621, the Count Palatine of the Rhine was elected King of Bohemia by the States of that Kingdom ; but immediately after, the Emperor with great Forces assaulted him in Prague, drove him with his Wife and Children from thence, and deprived him of his Patrimony the Palatinate. Prince Charles, about this Time, by great Gundamore's Persuasions, was sent into Spain, in order to the gaining of the Infanta to Wife, it being suggested, that by that Match with Spain, a Re-settlement of the Prince Palatine in his Patrimony might have been procured. But when the Prince was arrived in Spain, though he found Royal Entertainment in the Court, yet was he suffered to have little Acquaintance with the Infanta, insomuch that in all his Eight Months Stay in Spain, he never spake with her but twice, and that before Company, with certain Limitations also what he should speak to her. Some thought that a Difference betwixt the Duke of Buckingham, (then with the Prince) and Count Olivares, the King of Spain's great Favourite, was no small Obstruction to the Match. Others thought that the King of Spain never intended any such Thing, but meant only by this Treaty to spin out Time till he had compassed some Designs in the Low Countries and Palatinate. But howsoever it was, Gundamore made some good Improvement of the Treaty to himself, for he persuaded some English Ladies of the Certainty of the Match, and they gave him 1621. him good Sums of Money to be put in such and such an Office, when the Spanish Princess should come to the English Court. King James at last wearied with Delays, if not angered with the Delusion, sent for the Prince to return, which accordingly he did; and not long after, this Treaty of Marriage with Spain was utterly ended, and the King made Preparations both of Men and Money to recover the Palatinate, and sent to treat of a Marriage with France.

A. D. 1625, and March 27, this politick and peaceable Monarch King James died of an Ague at Theobalds, and was buried at Westminster with great Solemnity, and greater Lamentations of his Subjects. His Wife was Anne the Daughter of Frederick the Second, King of Denmark. His Issue were Henry, Charles, Elizabeth, and Mary, and Sophia, who both died young.

Two obstinate Arian Hereticks, Bartholomew Legate and Edward Wightman, were burnt, the first in Smithfield, the other at Litchfield. George Abbot, Archbishop of Canterbury, being on Hunting, as he shot at a Deer, his Arrow by Mischance glanced and killed a Man, but he was cleared; yet out of a religious Tenderness, he kept the Day of the Year on which the Mischance happened, with a solemn Fast all his Life after.

The Murder of one Waters, murdered by his Wife, was discovered by a Dream. One of the said Waters's Neighbours dreamed, that Waters was strangled and buried in such a certain Dunghill, which upon Search was found true, and the Wife was burned for the Fast.

Robert Dove, Merchant Taylor of London, gave competent Means for ever for the Tolling of a Bell in St. Sepulchre's Church, to mind good People to pray for such Malefactors as are to be executed out of Newgate, and to cease when they are executed. Every Execution - Day this Bell should begin to Toll at Six in the Morning.

The Wife of Richard Home of East Grinstead in Suffex, without any known Cause, murdered her own three Children, and threw them into a Pit, and then cut her own Throat.

A. D. 1606, Virginia was planted with an English Colony. It was first discovered A. D. 1584, by Sir Walter Rawleigh, who is said to have first brought that charming Weed Tobacco into England. The Bermudas and New England were also made English Plantations. King James, for a Sum of Money, quit the cautionary Towns, Brill, &c.

A. D. 1606, and April 11, happened a dreadful Fire at St. Edmunds-Bury in Suffolk, which did much Spoil to many fair Buildings and consumed One Hundred and Sixty Houses, &c. the Damage amounting to the Value of Three score Thousand Pounds and upwards. To the Repairing of which Loss his Majesty himself contributed very liberally, as also the Gentry of that Country, and City of London.

A. D. 1612, a Blazing Star was seen streaming towards the West infinite Slaughters and Devastation following both in Germany and other Places.

CHARLES I.

CHARLES the First was born at Dumfermling in Scotland on November the Nineteenth, A. D. 1600, but in so much Weakness that his Baptism was hastened. In the Second Year of his Age was created Duke of Albany, Marquis of Ormond, Earl of Ross, and Baron of Ardmo-

In the Fourth Year of his Age he was brought to the English Court, and made Knight of the Bath, and invested with the Title of Duke of York. In his Eleventh Year he was made Knight of the Garter, and in his Twelfth Year Duke of Cornwall. In his Sixteenth Year he was created Prince of Wales, Earl of Hereford and Flint, the Revenues thereof being assigned to maintain his Court. In his Nineteenth Year he performed a Jousting at Whitehall, wherein he acquitted himself with Bravery equal to his Dignity.

A. D. 1622, he was sent into Spain, there to contract a Marriage with the Infanta, whither he was to pass incognito through France, accompanied only with the Marquis of Buckingham, Mr. Endymion Porter, and Mr. *Francis Cotting-*ton. But this Attempt of King James, in sending him to the Court of Spain, raised the Censures of the World upon him, as being too forgetful of the Inhospitality of Princes to each other, when they have been found in another's Dominions. And this none other daring to mind the King of, his Jester Archee did it after this Manner: He came to exchange Caps with the King: Why so, said King James? Because, said Archee, thou hast sent the Prince into Spain, 1625. from whence he is never like to return. But, said the King, what wilt thou say when thou seest him come back again? Marry, said the Jester, I will take off the Fool's Cap, which I now put upon thy Head for sending him thither, and put it on the King of Spain's for letting him return.

When the Prince was returned from Spain, a Wife was sought for him from France, by a Marriage with Henrietta Maria, the Daughter of King Henry the Fourth. The Love of whom the Prince had received by the Eye, and she of him by the Ear: For having formerly received Impressions from the Reports of his Gallantry, when she was told of his passing through Paris, she answered, That if he went to Spain for a Wife, he might have had one nearer Home, and saved himself a great Part of that Labour. Prince Charles, after the Celebrating of his Father's Funeral, whereat himself was chief Mourner, he next hastened the coming over of his dearest Comfort the Princess Henrietta Maria, whom the Duke of Chevereux had in his Name espoused at the Church of Nostrredame in Paris; and he received her at Dover; the next Day after Trinity-Sunday, at Canterbury, began the Nuptial Embraces.

June the 18th, a Parliament was assembled, at the Opening of which the King acquainted them with the Necessities of Supplies for the War with Spain, which themselves importunately had engaged his Father in, 1622. and made it as Hereditary to him as the Crown. But through the Practice of some unquiet Persons of that Parliament, two Petitions, one respecting Religion, the other Redress of Grievances, were brought into Debate, both formed in King James's Time, which delayed the Succours, and increased the Necessities: Yet at Length the Parliament granted two Subsidies; which done, and divers Acts passed, the Parliament was adjourned till August, and their Convention to be at Oxford, by reason of the Plague then raging in London. When the Parliament was met again according to the Time appointed, there were high and furious Debates of Grievances; as, That evil Councils guided the King; that the Treasury was misemployed, with Reflections on the Duke of Buckingham's Miscarriages. The Commons consulting to divest the Duke of his Admiralship, and to demand an Account of those publick Monies where-with he had been intrusted. The King hereupon dissolved the Parliament; and the Infection decreasing at London, his Majesty was crowned at Westminster, February the Second; and February the Sixth, another Parliament was begun, wherein the Commons voted the King Four Subsidies. But some of the Members highly taxed the Duke of Buckingham, and Articles were carried up against him to the Lords House, for his ill Management of the Admiralty, his ingrossing Offices, preferring his Kindred to Places unfit for them, making Sale of Places of Judicature, and his Mother and Father in Law's fostering of Popish Recusants.

These leading Commoners were Mr. Cook, Dr. Turner, Sir Dudley Digs, Sir John Elliot, and Sir William Walter. And to make the

Faction more Sport, the Duke and Earl of Bristol did mutually impeach each other. But his Majesty, to put a Stop to these Contests, dissolved the Parliament, June 18, 1626, before the Bill for the Subsidies was passed. Therefore the King, by the Advice of his Council, took Care to provide Money some other Way; hence followed the levying of Customs and Imposts upon all such Merchandizes as were Imported and Exported. Then Compositions to be made with Recusants for the Leases of their Lands and Tenements for Forfeitures due since the Tenth Year of King James. Also Privy Seals were issued out, and Benevolences proposed, &c. The several maritime Countries and Port Towns were ordered by the Council to set out Ships for the Guarding of the Sea Coasts against the Attempts of Spain and Flanders, which they very unwillingly, if at all, yielded unto. A Royal Fleet was also preparing to be set out, designed for Barbary, as was given out. But at last, as the most expeditious Way for raising of Money, a general Loan was resolved upon, and Commissioners forthwith appointed for the Purpose; which grand Assessment of the Loan met with much Opposition from People of all Sorts and Degrees, upon which divers Gentlemen were committed Prisoners; and George Abbot, Archbishop of Canterbury, refusing to license a Book in Behalf of the Loan, was suspended for a Time from his Archiepiscopal Jurisdiction; and Dr. Williams, Bishop of Lincoln, for speaking some Words concerning the Loan in Disadvantage of the King, fell into some Disfavour; and Sir Randolph Crew for being backward to promote it, was displaced from his Office of Lord Chief Justice,

A. D. 1627, His Majesty being now sued by the French Protestants of Rochel for his Protection, and because the King of France had seized on the English Merchants Goods in the River of Bordeaux, therefore sent the Duke of Buckingham to attack the Isle of Rhee, which had now submitted to the English Valour, had not the Duke managed that War more with the Gaities of a Courtier, than the Arts of a Soldier. In this Expedition many brave Englishmen lost their Lives; from which when the Duke was returned, those poor Remains of his Army, most of them Irish and Scots, were billeted in divers Villages of England, to the great Discontent of the Country. This Expedition being so unhappy, and the Miseries of Rochel making them importunate for the King's Assistance, he therefore summoned a Parliament to meet March 17th, 1627. He also passed a Commission under the Great Seal to levy Monies throughout the Nation by Impositions in the Nature of Excise.

Not long before the Convention of the Parliament there were apprehended a Company of Jesuits at Werkswell by London, where amongst the rest of their Papers, there was found the Copy of a Letter written to their Father Recor at Brussels, in which the Author of it acquainted Father Rector with all the subtle Plots their Society here had laid for the embroiling this State, and for erecting of an Universal Catholick Monarchy; and to this end, he said, they chiefly made use of Arminians and Projectors; also how that many times, to bring their Purposes about, they pretended themselves to be

When the Parliament were met at their prefixed Time, there was forthwith presented to the House of Commons a certain Paper, called, A Speech Without-Doors. Wherein were laid open the Miscarriages of many Persons in Places of Trust, with several Sorts of National Grievances. The first Matter that the Parliament took into their Consideration was the Grievances of the Country; and the first Grievance they debated was the Case of those Gentlemen, who having refused the Loan, were, notwithstanding their Habeas Corpus, committed to Prison. This Paper took up a long Debate and in earnest, which was chiefly managed by Sir Francis Seymour, Sir Thomas Wentworth, Sir Benjamin Rudyard, Sir Edward Coke, and Sir Robert Philips. Next the House proceeded to the drawing up of a Petition against Recusants, to which Petition the King gave a satisfactory Answer. Then after the granting of the King Five Subsidies, they took into Debate the Petition of Right, wherein they prayed his most Excellent Majesty,

First, That no Man hereafter be compelled to make or yield any Gift, Loan, Benevolence, Tax, or such-like Charge, without common Consent by Act of Parliament, and that none be called to make Answer, or to take such Oaths, or to give Attendance, or be confined, or otherwise molested concerning the same.

Secondly, That no Freeman be taken and imprisoned, or be disseized of his Freedom or Liberty, or his free Customs, or be out-lawed, or exiled, but by the lawful Judgment of his Peers, or by the Laws of the Land.

Thirdly, That the Soldiers and Mariners now billeted in divers Counties, 1627.

Counties, might be removed, and the People not be burthened so for the Future.

Fourthly, That the late Commissions for Proceeding by Martial-Law might be revoked and annulled, and that hereafter no Commissions of like Nature might be issued forth. To all which the King at last yielded his Consent; sending this Answer to the Parliament, Soit droit fait comme il est desiree. And to the Peoples further Satisfaction, his Majesty received into his Favour the Archbishop of Canterbury, the Bishop of Lincoln, the Earls of Essex, Lincoln, Warwick, Bristol, and the Lord Say.

The Parliament next resume their Accusation of the Duke of Buckingham, against whom they drew up another Remonstrance: The like they did against Bishop Neal, and Bishop Laud, and at last were about to take away the King's Right to Tunnage and Poundage; whereupon the King adjourned them till October the Twentieth, and afterwards by Proclamation till the Twentieth of January following.

About this time, Dr. Lamb, a Favourite of the Duke of Buckingham's and supposed Necromancer, was killed in London by the Rout of People, who hated him both for his own Sake and the Duke's. A. D. 1628, during the last Session, a Fleet of Fifty Sail was sent to the Relief of Rochel, but was repelled with much Loss. Then another Expedition was agreed on, and a more formidable Fleet was prepared; but as the Duke of Buckingham was at Portsmouth, hastening his Preparations for Sea, he was suddenly stabbed by Lieutenant Felton, who after his Apprehension, being demanded what invited him to the bloody Fact, boldly answered, That he killed him for the Cause of God and his Country. The Murderer was hanged at Tyburn, his Body sent to Portsmouth, where without the Town it was hanged up in Chains.

In the Duke's Place, the Earl of Lindsey, an excellent Soldier, was sent for the Aid of Rochel, who after some valiant, yet fruitless Attempts, returned into England, and the Rochellers to the Obedience of the French King. And within a short Time after, Peace was concluded betwixt France and England.

January the 20th, the Parliament assembled again, when they prepared a Bill against Tunnage and Poundage, and the Commons made a Protestation amongst themselves, That whosoever should seek to introduce Popery or Arminianism or other Opinions disagreeing from the True and Orthodox Church should be reputed a Capital Enemy to the Commonwealth; that whosoever should counsel or advise the taking or levying the Subsidies of Tunnage or Poundage, not being granted in Parliament, or should be an Actor or Instrument therein should likewise be reputed an Enemy to the Commonwealth; that whosoever should voluntarily pay the same, not being granted by Parliament, should be reputed a Betrayer of the Liberties, and an Enemy of the Commonwealth. Hereupon his Majesty presently dissolved the Parliament. After which he called to Question certain refractory Members at the Council-table; namely, Sir John Elliott, Sir Miles Hobard, Mr. Denzil Hollis, Sir Peter Hayman, Sir John Barrington, Mr. Selden, Mr. Stroud, Mr. Coriton, Mr. Valentine, and Mr. Kirtan, who were all committed to Prison.

by the dissolving of the Parliament 1629, the popular Odium was in a high Measure stirred up against the great Ministers of State, as was manifested by certain invective Libels published against Bishop Laud, and the Lord Treasurer Weston.

Some there were in those Times, who considering how little Success the King's Affairs had by this and the two former Parliaments, 'tis said, advised his Majesty never for the future to call any more Parliaments. And for the better carrying on of the Design, a Book of Projects was published and dispersed in several Places, containing a Proposition addressed to the King, how he might so order the Matter, as not to be troubled in the future with the Impertinencies (as 'twas worded) of Parliaments. Some of those Projects for the avoiding of Parliaments were; For the King to demand the Tenth Part of Mens Estates; To take the Benefit of Salt into his own Hands; To demand a Rate for the Sealing of Weights every Year; To demand an Impost for Wools: At the Princes Marriage to raise the Degrees of Men, as from Earls to Marquisses, &c. and to make rich Yeomen and Farmers Esquires, each paying for their Honours according to their several Degrees; with many like Conceits.

This Year a Peace was concluded with Spain.

A. D. 1630, and May 29, was Prince Charles born, and about noon of the same Day was a Star seen in the Firmament.

In this Year was the old Prerogative Statute for Knighthood put in Execution, whereby those who had Estates of 40 l. per Annum, were summoned to appear to receive Knighthood, and upon Default to be fined; by which Means One Hundred Thousand Pounds was brought into the Exchequer. Sir Thomas Wentworth was now made Viscount Wentworth, and Lord President of the North.

A. D. 1631, Mervin Lord Audley Earl of Castlehaven, was arraigned for Rape and Sodomy; when divers unnatural and beastly Acts were proved against him; for the which he was condemned, and on May the Fourteenth beheaded on Tower-Hill. He so pleased himself in his Impieties, that he boasted, that as others had their several Delights, some in one thing, some in another, so his whole Delight was in damning Souls, by enticing People to such Facts as might surely effect it. He was educated a Protestant, but turned Papist, and so died.

A. D. 1632, his Majesty recalled the Lords Justices out of Ireland, who then had the Government thereof, and in their Stead sent thither the Lord Wentworth as Lord-Deputy.

The King recommended to the Nobility and Gentry, the raising amongst themselves a large Contribution towards the Reparation of St. Paul's Church in London; which Motion was so far entertained, that a considerable Sum was gathered, and the Work had a fair Progress.

A. D. 1633, and May 13, the King took a Journey into Scotland, there to be crowned, and it was but Time for him so to do; for not long before this, he had received a Letter from a Scotch Lord, wherein was this Expression, That should he longer defer his coming to be crowned, the People might perhaps be inclined to make Choice of a new King. As soon as the Coronation Rites were accomplished, the King summoned a Parliament, and pass'd an Act for the Ratification of all those Laws that 1637. King James had made in that Nation, for the better Regulation of that Church, both as to the Government and Worship of it. Which Act too many finisier Persons opposed, because it favoured of establishing Episcopacy.

October the 13th was James Duke of York born. The Book for tolerating Sports on the Lord's Days, first published by King James, was now ratified, which greatly dislusted the Puritannical Party, and many Episcopalsians also.

A. D. 1634, the English Coasts being infested with Pickeroons, Turks, and Dunkirk Pirates, and the Fishing usurped by the Hollanders, on the King's Dominions, in the narrow Seas, and the Exchequer not being able to furnish out a Fleet sufficient for the repressing these Incroachers, his Majesty hereupon consults his Attorney-General Noy, what might be done herein; Noy acquaints him with ancient Precedents of raising a Tax upon the Nation, for setting forth a Fleet in case of Danger, and assures him of the Legality of the way in proceeding by Writs to that Effect; which Counsel being embraced, there were Writs directed to the several Counties, for such a Contribution, as might in the whole build, furnish, and maintain 47 Ships for the Safety of the Kingdom; but this Tax was by many disrelished, and censured as a Breach of the civil Liberties, and to be against Law, because not laid by Parliament; and Mr. John Hampden and others refused to pay this Ship-Money, standing it to a Tryal of Law; against whom several of the Judges, to whom the King had referred the Cause, gave Judgment, Hutton and Crook excepted.

The Pirates were curbed by the King's Fleet, and the Hollanders reduced to a precarious Use of the English Seas.

A. D. 1637, Mr. Pryn, Dr. Bastwick, and Mr. Burton, a Lawyer, Physician, and Divine, for writing against Episcopacy and Bishops, were sentenced to pay 5,000 l. to the King, to lose their Ears in the Pillory, which they did, and then were sent into Banishment, or remote Confinement. Dr. Williams, Bishop of Lincoln, was fined, and suspended from his Offices and Benefits, and imprisoned, for underhandly fomenting popular Disaffections, and venting some dishonourable Speeches concerning the King.

Now about these Times many of those called Puritans, by reason of the severe Proceedings against them, passed over into New-England, and there seated themselves; others into Holland.

July 13, While the Dean in his Sacerdotal Habiliments was reading a new composed Liturgy, in St Giles's Church at Edinburgh, the common People, both Men and Women, flung Cudgels, Stones, Stools, or any Thing that came next Hand, at him; and after that was done, reinforced their Assault upon the Bishop then present. Not was it the Rabble only, that were disaffected to the Church Liturgy and Discipline, but Persons of Degrees and Orders, who mutually obliged themselves, and the Scottish Nation, in a Hellish Covenant, to extirpate Episcopacy, and to defend each other against all Persons. To reduce this People to a more peaceful Practice, the King sent Marquis Hamilton as his Commissioner; but he secretly encouraged the Covenanters, directing by his Countenance the first Motions of those his Dependents, the Lords Traquair and Roxborough. All his Allies were the Covenanting Party. 'Tis also said, that his Mother rid armed with Pistols at her Saddle-bow for the Defence of the Covenant; and his Aétings such, that new Seeds of Discontents and War were daily sown; so that to pacify the Discontents of the Scots, his Majesty at Length gave Order for revoking the Liturgy, the High Commission, the Book of Canons, and the Five Articles of Perth made by King James; also granted, that a General Assembly of the Kirk should be holden at Glasgow, Nov. 21, 1638, and a Parliament at Edinburgh the 15th of May, 1639.

When the Assembly were met, they fell to declare against Bishops, to excommunicate them and their Adherents, and to abolish Episcopacy; and the Covenanters were also so daring, that they seized upon the King's Revenue, surprized his Forts and Castles, and at last put themselves in Arms; Cardinal Richelieu of France heightening them, 'tis said, in their factious Proceedings, by promising them Assistance from the French King.

King Charles now well perceiving that his Clemency to the Scots was converted to his own Prejudice, raised a gallant Army, with which he marched to Berwick, within Sight of the Rebel Scots; but they petitioning for a Pacification, the King yielded thereunto.

A. D. 1639, June 17, the King disbanded his Army, expecting that the Scots would have done the like, according to the Articles agreed on; but the Covenanters, instead of keeping these Articles, retained their Officers in Pay, changed the old Form of holding Parliaments, invaded the Prerogatives of the Crown, and solicited the French King for an Aid of Men and Money. His Majesty hereupon calls a Parliament in England to 1639. sit April the 13th, 1640, and another in Ireland. The Irish Parliament granted Money to raise and Laud, pay 8,000 Men in Arms, and to A. B. of furnish them with Ammunition; Cant. but the English Parliament were not so free in granting Supplies against the Scots, although the King promised them for ever to quit his Claim of Ship-Money, and give Satisfaction to their just Demands, if now they would supply him. When his Majesty sent old Sir Henry Vane unto them to demand six Subsidies, he either purposely or accidentally (the first is rather thought) named Twelve, which put the Commons into such a Heat, that they were about to remonstrate against the War with Scotland. Whereupon the King was forced to dissolve the Parliament May the 5th, 1640. Howbeit, he continued the Convocation of the Clergy, which granted him Four Shillings in the Pound for all their Ecclesiastical Promotions. Soon after this, a Tumult was stirred up against the Bishop of Canterbury, insomuch that a great Number of Apprentices and vulgar Persons assaulted his House at Lambeth, some of whom being apprehended and imprisoned, were by their Companions rescued out of Prison; for which one of the Ringleaders was hanged and quartered.

The People were now much dissatisfied, because some obsolete Things were revived and severely enforced by some Ecclesiasticks, (the Popularity called them Introductions to Popery) as the Railing in of the Communion-Table, and raising of Steps to it, &c. It hath been the Opinion of some, reputed of good Judgment, that if moderate Bishop Juxon had been in these Times Primate of all England, this Kingdom

A. D. 1640. had not been made so unhappy by a Civil War, as it was.

Now whilst these Things were acting at Home, the turbulent Scots had entred England, and defeated a Part of the King's Army before the Whole could be imbodyed, and had gained Newcastle and Durham. And no sooner was his Majesty come to his Army in the North, but there followed him from some English Lords, a Petition conformable to the Scots Remonstrance, which they called the Intentions of the Army, (viz.) not to lay down Arms till the Reformed Religion (meaning Scotch Presbytery) was settled in both Nations; and the Causes and Abettors of their present Troubles were brought to publick Justice, and that in Parliament. The King therefore summons the Lords to appear at York, September the Twenty-fourth, 1640, who accordingly met, where it was determined that a Parliament should be called to meet November the Third following; then a Treaty was agreed upon betwixt the English and Scotch for the Ceasing of all Acts of Hostility; and one of the Articles was, That the Contribution of 850 l. per Diem should be raised out of the English Northern Counties, to maintain the Scotch Army during the Treaty, and till Peace was secured.

A. D. 1640, the fatal long Parliament began November the Third, which Day, it is said, was looked upon by the Archbishop of Canterbury as an unlucky Day for meeting of Parliaments in reference to Church Affairs, having proved so in the Time of King Henry VIII. Whereupon he advised the King to put off their Sitting to another Day; which his Majesty inclined not unto, but at their Meeting acquainted them, that he was resolved to put himself wholly upon his English Subjects, that he would satisfy all their just Grievances; then commended to their Care, the chasing out of the saucy Scots, making Provision for his own Army, and relieving the oppressed Northern Counties. But the Parliament, instead of complying with their Sovereign in his just Proposals, first set upon purging their House of such whom they thought would not comply with their Designs; finding Fault either with their Elections, or else making them Criminals in some publick Grievance; then settled Committees for Grievances, and receiving Petitions, voted down Monopolies, impeached the Lord Wentworth Earl of Strafford of High Treason, and committed him to the Black-Rod; committed Archbishop Laud likewise to the Black Rod, and Ten Weeks after voted him guilty of High Treason, and sent him to the Tower. In the mean while Pryn, Furton, and Bastwick, were freed from their Confinement, and conducted into London in great State and Triumph.

Sir Francis Windebank, Secretary of State, fearing to be called to an Account by the Parliament, for reprieving Jesuits and Priests, fled into France. The Lord Keeper Finch sailed over into Holland.

Alderman Penington, with some Hundreds attending him, presented to the Commons a Petition from the Citizens of London against the present Church-Government. Divers Petitions from other Places came before them of the like Nature. And now the Parliament, well perceiving their own Strength and Interest, drew up a Bill for Triennial Parliaments; wherein the Power of calling that great Council of the Nation was, upon Refusal of the King, and Neglect of others devolved devolved upon Constables. This the King through their Importunities granted unto them. February the 16th the Parliament voted, That no Bishop should have any Vote in Parliament, nor any Judicial Power in the Star-chamber Court, nor have any Sway in temporal Affairs; and that no Clergyman should be in Commission of Peace. The Pope's Nuncio Rosetti, who was here in England to preserve Correspondencies between the Queen and the Key-keeper of Purgatory, was sent away to Rome. And after about five Months from their Sitting, the Earl of Strafford, Lord Deputy of Ireland, was brought to his Tryal, in Westminster-hall, before the Lords as his Judges: The King, Queen, and Prince sitting behind a Curtain in an adjoining Gallery, and round about the Court stood the Commons his Accusers, and the Witnesses against him were English and Scotch Anti-Episcopalians, and Irish Papists. His Charge consisted of 28 Articles, to all which he answered with such firm Reasons, that he could not be found guilty of Treason, either in Particulars, or in the Whole. The Parliament therefore resolved (for right or wrong this wife Man must fall) to proceed against him by Bill of Attainder, and upon April the 19th, by making a Law after the Fact, vote him guilty of High Treason; yet withal add a Caution for the Security of themselves, that it should not be drawn into a Precedent. Which Vote of theirs passed not without a long Debate and Contention, and 59 of the Members honestly dissented from the Vote, whose Names were afterwards posted and marked for the Fury of the Rabble. In the Bill of Attainder, the Earl was charged for endeavouring to subvert the ancient fundamental Laws and Government of the Realms, and for exercising a tyrannous and exorbitant Power over the Liberties and Estates of his Majesty's Subjects; and for having by his own Authority commanded the laying and assessing of Soldiers upon his Majesty's Subjects in Ireland. And also for that, upon the Dissolution of the last Parliament, he did slander the House of Commons to his Majesty, and did advise his Majesty that he was loosed and absolved from Rules of Government, and that he had an Army in Ireland which he might employ to reduce the Kingdom. And that the said Earl had been an Incendiary of the Wars betwixt England and Scotland, &c.

May 1, his Majesty called both Houses together, and told them, that he had been present at the hearing of the great Cause, and that in his Conscience positively he could not condemn the Earl of Treason, and yet could not clear him of Misdemeanours; but hoped a Way might be found out to satisfy Justice and their Fears, without oppressing his Conscience.

May 2, the Prince of Orange was married to the Princess Mary at Whitehall.

May 3, there came a seditious Rabble of about 5 or 6000 of the Dregs of the People, armed with Staves, Cudgels, and other Instruments of Outrage, to the Parliament-Doors, clamouring Justice, Justice; and posted upon the Gate of Westminster a Catalogue of the Names of those that would have acquitted the Earl, whom they styled Straffordians. Then at the Doors of the House of Peers, they affronted some of the Lords, especially the Bishops, at their passing in and out; after this they forced open the Abby-Church, where they broke down the Organs, spoiled the Vestments and Ornaments of Worship. From thence they hurried to the Court, and there most impudently and traiterously cried out, That they would have Strafford's Head, or a better; upbraiding the King himself (who persuaded them, as they passed by, to a modest Care of their own private Affairs) with an Unfitness to reign; and when some Justices of the Peace, according to their Office, endeavoured to suppress those Tumults, by imprisoning some of the Leaders of them, they themselves were imprisoned by the Command of the Commons, upon Pretext of an Injury offered to the Liberties of the Subjects; one of which was (as they then dictated) that every one might safely petition the Parliament; howbeit afterwards they acted quite contrary to such whose Petitions were too honest to please them. But notwithstanding these tumultuous Inforcements, his Majesty would not sign the Bill of Attainder, till he had consulted both with the Judges, as to Matter of Law, and the Bishops, as to Matter of Conscience. When the Judges told his Majesty, that in point of Law (according to the Oath made by Sir Henry Vane, of the Earl's Advice to raise Horse to awe this Nation) the Earl was Guilty of Treason; 'tis said, an eminent Bishop did answer the King, that he had a Conscience as a private Man, and as a publick; and though by his private Conscience he could not yield to the Earl's Death, yet by his publick (considering the present State of Things) he might.

1641.

May 10, with much Reluctancy the King signed a Commission to some Lords to pass the Bill of Attainder, and another of ill Consequence also, which was for Continuation of the Parliament during the Pleasure of the two Houses.

May 12, 1641, was the Earl of Strafford strongly guarded to Tower-hill, and there, with Courage befeeming a Christian, he suffered the severing of his Head from his Body. The Death of which great and able Minister of State did so terrify the other Ministers of State, that many of them made a voluntary Resignation of their Offices. At the Request of the House of Commons, the King for Peace Sake, relinquished his Claim of Tonnage and Poundage, and yielded to sign the Bills for taking away of the High Commission and Star-Chamber Courts.

October 12, the Natives, or Wild Irish, began a most bloody Rebellion throughout the whole Kingdom of Ireland, on a sudden invading the unprovided English that were scattered amongst them, despoiling them of their Goods, and massacring 200,000 of them, without any respect of Sex, Age, Kindred, or Friendship, making them as so many Sacrifices to their bloody Superstition, the Popish Religion. The chief Heads of this Rebellion and Massacre (beside the Priests) were Sir Phelim O-Neal, Turbough O-Neal his Brother, Rozey Mac-Guire, Philip O-Rely, Moelmury O-Rely, Sir Conno Mac-Gennis, Mac-Brian. and Mac-Mahon. His Majesty then in Scotland, having Intelligence of the dismal Fate of the English in Ireland, sent Post to the Parliament of England to have them send Reliefs thither; but Differences still heightning betwixt the King and his Parliament, Succours were not seasonably sent, by which the Rebels much strengthened themselves. At the King's Return from Scotland, the Parliament presented him with a Petition for taking away the Votes of Bishops in the House of Lords, and the Ceremonies of the Church, and for the removing of evil Counsellors from about him. Their grand Remonstrance they also presented him, wherein were reckoned up the Offences of the Courtiers, the unpleasing Resolves of some Judges, the Neglects or Rigors of some Ministers of State, the undigested Sermons of some Preachers, the Positions of some Divines in the Schools; unpleasing Accidents they therein represented as Designs of Tyranny; and those Things which had been reformed, were yet mentioned as Burthens. To this Remonstrance his Majesty answered, That he thought he had given Satisfaction to the Peoples Fears and Jealousies concerning Religion, Liberty, and Civil Interests, by the Bill he had pass'd this Parliament; desiring that Misunderstandings might be removed on either Side, and that the bleeding Condition of Ireland might persuade them to Unity, for the Relief of that unhappy Kingdom. But this modest Answer of his Majesty's did not at all satisfy the Faction. The Apprentices and Rabble in great Number and much Confusion resorted again to Westminster; some crying out against Bishops and Liturgy of the Church; others boldly menacing, that the Militia should be taken out of the King's Hands; affronting the Bishops at their passing in and out of the Lord's House; and before Whitehall behaving themselves very insolently. His Majesty hereupon took a Guard of such Gentlemen as offered their Service for his Safety; but the Faction made use of this to raise the Rage and Jealousy of the whole City against the King; for at Midnight there were Out-cries made in the Streets, that all People should rise to their Defence, for the King and his Papists were 1641.

coming to fire the City, and to cut their Throats in their Beds. The King therefore, not always to encourage these Indignities with his Patience, resolved by a Course of Justice to punish the Authors and Countenancers of these seditious Practices; so commanded his Attorney-General to accuse Five Members of the Lower House of High Treason, namely, Mr. Denzil Hollis, Sir Arthur Hazelrig, Mr. John Pym, Mr. John Hampden, and Mr. William Stroud; and the Lord Kimbolton, Earl of Manchester, of the House of Peers. He also sent some Officers to seal up their Trunks and Cabinets in their several Lodgings, and to secure their Persons. To this the Commons voted, That all those Persons were Enemies to the Commonwealth, that should obey the King in any of his Commands concerning them; and it was lawful for any Person to assist the said Members. And because the King came into the House of Commons, and there demanded to have the Five Members delivered up to him (though he left his Guard of Pensioners, and Lords and Gentlemen, without upon the Stairs) the Commons voted this Proceeding of the King a Breach of the Privilege of Parliament; and withal published a Declaration, That whosoever should arrest any Member of Parliament by Warrant from the King only, was guilty of the Breach of Parliamentary Privileges; and likewise, That all they who attended the King when he came to demand the Five Members (then hid in the City) were Guilty of a Traiterous Design against the King and Parliament. The Londoners came thronging to Westminster in a tumultuous Sort, to petition for the Impeached 1642. peached Members, behaving themselves very rudely towards the Bishops. And such Increase and Numbers of the heady common People assembled in a tumultuous Manner about Whitehall and Westminster, that the King justly mistrusting some Danger from them, withdrew himself, with the Queen, and their Children, to Windsor. The next Day after which, the Five Members were triumphantly guarded from London to Westminster by Water. Strange Reports were in these Times given out concerning Dangers from the King; how that Troops of Papists were gathered about Kingslon upon Thames, under the Command of Colonel Lundsford, who was character'd to be of so monstrous an Appetite, that he would eat Children, and other like false ridiculous Stories. Petitions were presented to the Parliament, requiring that neither the Bishops nor Popish Lords should continue to vote amongst the Peers. Women also presented a Petition to the like Purpose. The House of Commons petitioned his Majesty, that they might have the Tower and London Militia put into their Hands; which he denied to grant. Yet did they place Major General Skippon over that Militia.

The King, in hopes to stay the Fury of the Faction, consented to almost all that they desired. However, notwithstanding all his gracious Condescensions, Endeavours were still used to create an Hatred of his Majesty. Mr. John Pym publicly charged him with Connivance, at least, if not with Contrivance of the Irish Rebellion; and when the King requir'd Satisfaction for the Calumny, the Commons justified Pym's Speech to be the Sense of their House. The Irish, Rebels indeed, to dishearten the English from any Resistance, boasted that the Queen was with their Army, that the King would come with auxiliary Forces, that they did but maintain his Cause against the Puritans, that they had the King's Commission for what they did, shewing a Patent for this Purpose, but 'twas of their own drawing; to which they affixed an old Broad Seal that had been taken from an obsolete Patent out of Farnham Abbey by one Plunket, in the Presence of many of their Lords and Priests, as was afterwards attested by the Confession of many. And now the Breach, through bad Mens Practices, growing still wider and wider, betwixt his Majesty and his two Houses of Parliament, his Majesty resolved to withdraw into the North, there to abide till he saw what Issue this Storm would have; taking with him the Prince, and Duke of York. The Queen he had before sent with the Princess of Orange, into Holland.

When the King was departed, the Parliament made Preparations both by Land and Sea, upon pretext of great Dangers at Home, and more prodigious Terrors from Abroad; pretending, that by Intelligence from Paris, Rome, and Venice, they were assured of great Designs to overthrow the Parliament, together with the Protestant Religion, and strange unheard of Plots, they said, were made to murder the most eminent Patriots.

In this Year the Parliament ordered, that all superstitious Pictures and Crosses, within Churches and without, should be pull'd down and defaced.

A. D. 1642, and April 23, the King, attended with his Guard consisting for the most part of Lords and Gentlemen only, would have entred into his Town of Hull, but Sir John Hotham insolently shut the

Gates

Gates against him, and kept him out; whereupon the King proclaimed him Traitor, and complained to the Parliament of this Indignity; but they justified Hotham's Act, and authorized him to strengthen the Garrison of Hull. In short time after this, England's Miseries commenc'd by an intestine War. A little before which were strange Sightings seen in the Air in many Parts of England, Musqueteers, harnessed Men, and Horsemen, moving in Battle Array, and assaulting one the other in divers furious Postures. The King and the two Houses now began to make all the speediest warlike Preparations to defend themselves, and offend each other; but the Two Houses had a great Advantage of his Majesty, both in Respect of Monies, and the speedy raising of Men, and also Arms and Ammunition for War of all Sorts, through their having the City of London on their Side, the Citizens whereof were very free in parting with their Plate upon the publick Faith; and their Wives were so zealous for the good Cause as that of the Two Houses was (then miscalled) that they gave their very Bodkins and Thimbles towards the maintaining of it, and were forward to have Husbands and Children to venture their Lives in this Rebellion.

His Majesty in the mean Time to secure himself and Rights, procures Arms and Ammunition out of Holland, upon Pawn of the Crown Jewels, and by Degrees raiseth a considerable Army.

June 2, both Houses of Parliament sent 19 Propositions to the King's Majesty, for a Reconciliation of the Differences between his Majesty, and the said Houses, &c.

I. That the Lords and others of the King's Privy-Council, and such great Officers and Ministers of State, might be put from his Privy-Council, and from those Offices and Employments, excepting such as both Houses should approve of, &c.

II. That the great Affairs of this Kingdom might not be concluded or transacted by the Advice of private Men, or by any unknown or unsworn Counsellors, but that such Matters as concern the Publick, and are proper for the High Court of Parliament, his Majesty's great and supreme Council, might be debated, resolved, and transacted only in Parliament, &c.

III. That the Lord High Steward of England, Lord High Constable, Lord Chancellor or Keeper of the Great Seal, Lord Treasurer, Lord Privy Seal, Earl Marshal, Lord Admiral, Warden of the Cinque Ports, Chief Governor of Ireland, Chancellor of the Exchequer, Master of the Wards, Secretaries of State, two Chief Justices and Chief Baron, may all be chosen with the Approbation of both Houses of Parliament, &c.

IV. That he or they, to whom the Government and Education of the King's Children shall be committed, shall be approved of by both Houses of Parliament, and in the Intervals of Parliament, by the Assent of the major Part of the Council, &c.

V. That no Marriage shall be concluded or treated for any of the King's Children, without the Consent of Parliament, under the Penalty of a Præmunire unto such as shall so conclude or treat any Marriage, as aforesaid, &c.

VI. That the Laws in Force against Jesuits, Priests, and Popish Recusants, be strictly put in Execution, without any Toleration or Dispensation to the contrary, &c.

VII.

1642.

VII. That the Votes of Popish Lords in the House of Peers be taken away so long as they continue Papists, and the Children of Papists be educated in the Protestant Religion.

VIII. That such a Reformation be made in the Church Government and Liturgy, as the Parliament shall advise, &c.

IX. That his Majesty would rest satisfied with that Course that the Parliament have appointed for ordering the Militia, until the same should be further settled by a Bill, &c.

X. That such Members of either House of Parliament, as have during this present Parliament been put out of any Place and Office, be either restored to that Place and Office, or have Satisfaction for the same, &c.

XI. That all Privy-Counsellors and Judges take an Oath for the maintaining of the Petition of Right, &c.

XII. That all the Judges, and all Officers placed by Approbation of both Houses of Parliament, may hold their Places, Quamdiu bene se gesserint.

XIII. That the Justice of Parliament might pass upon all Delinquents, &c.

XIV. That the General Pardon offered by his Majesty might be granted, with such Exceptions as should be advised by the Parliament.

XV. That the Forts and Castles of this Kingdom be put under the Command and Custody of such Persons as his Majesty shall appoint, with the Approbation of his Parliament, &c.

XVI. That the extraordinary Guards, and military Forces then attending his Majesty, be removed and discharged; and that for the future he shall raise no such Guards, or extraordinary Forces, but according to Law, in case of actual Rebellion or Invasion.

XVII. That his Majesty would be pleased to enter into a more strict Alliance with the States of the United Provinces, and other Neighbour Princes and States of the Protestant Religion, for the Defence and Maintenance thereof, against all Designs and Attempts of the Pope, and his Adherents, to subvert and suppress it, &c.

XVIII. That his Majesty would be pleased by Act of Parliament to clear the Lord Kimbolton, and the Five Members of the House of Commons in such Manner, that future Parliaments may be secured from the Consequence of that evil Precedent.

XIX. That his Majesty would be graciously pleased to pass a Bill for restraining Peers made hereafter from sitting or voting in Parliament unless they be admitted thereunto with the Consent of both Houses of Parliament.

To these Propositions his Majesty returned Answer, but not satisfactory.

On August 22, 1642, did his Majesty set up his Standard Royal at Nottingham, and after three Days sends a Message to the Parliament to propose a Treaty. To which the Parliament answered, That unto his Majesty shall recall his Proclamations and Declarations of Treasons against the Earl of Effex, and themselves, and Adherents, and that the King's Standard of War be taken down, they cannot, by the Fundamental Privilege of Parliament give his Majesty a further Answer. The King replies, That he never intended to declare the Parliament Traitors, or set up his Standard ainst them; but if they shall reolve to treat, either Party shall evoke their Declarations against all Parties as Traitors, and the same Day to take down his Standard. To his they answered, That the Differences could not any ways be concluded, unless he would forsake his evil Counsellors, and return to his Parliament. And accordingly, September the 6th, they order and declare, that the Arms which they have taken up, or shall take up, for the Parliament, Religion, Laws, and Liberties of the Kingdom, shall not be laid down, until the King withdraw his Protection from such Persons as are and shall be declared Delinquents, and shall leave them to Justice, to the End that their Estates may discharge the Debts, and Loan Money of the Commonwealth. So War was inevitable. His Majesty's General was the valiant Earl of Lindsey; the Parliament's General was Robert Devereux Earl of Essex, and their Admiral the Earl of War- wick. The first Blood that was spilt in this unhappy War, was near under Hull, whither some of the King's Forces were drawn, upon whom Sir John Hotham and Sir John Mel- ton sallied, taking some, and killing others.

September 9, 1642, the Earl of Essex set forth with his Army out of London, and October 23, the Cavaliers (so called) which were the King's Party, and the Roundheads so called from the Custom of the Puritans cutting their Hair short to their Ears) which were the Parliament's Party, met between Keinton and Edgehill in Warwickshire, and were engaged in Fight, which was fought with such Fury, that near 6000 were slain upon the Place. The King had so much the better of the Day, as to keep the Field. Persons Remark slain on his Majesty's

Side were the Earl of Lindsey, and Sir Edward Verney, Standard-bearer; and Mr. John Smith immediatly recovered the Standard, for which Service he was Knighted in the Field. On the Parliament's Part were slain the Lord St. John of Blet- so, and Col. Essex. From this Fight at Edgehill the King marched to Banbury, which was surrendred to him; then entred Oxford triumphantly, and having secured that Place, he advanced towards London, and at Brentford fell upon two Regiments of the Enemies, taking about 500 Prisoners. The Parliament, to increase their Numbers, declare, that all Apprentices that would list themselves in their Service for the publick Cause, should be secured from the Injury of their Masters, and their Time go on toward their Freedom; by which means Multitudes of Youth forsook their Masters to fight for the Parliament.
They also invited their Brethren the Scots (as they called them) to come into England to their Aid. And to animate the People to take up Arms for the Parliament, some busy Clergymen made great (not good) Use of that sacred Text in their Pulpits, Curse ye Meroz, &c. Judg. v. 23.
but blessed be the Peacemakers, saith the Prince of Peace. About the Beginning of March, Commissioners were appointed to meet at Oxford, in order to treat of a Reconciliation,
when the two Houses of Parliament humbly besought his Majesty (so they worded it) graciously to accept and grant these most humble Desires and Propositions:

I. That his Majesty would be pleased to disband his Armies, as they likewise would be ready to disband all their Forces, and that he would be pleased to return to his Parliament.

II.

1643.

II. That he would leave Delinquents to a legal Tryal, and Judgment of Parliament.

III. That the Papists may not only be disbanded, but disarmed according to Law.

IV. That his Majesty would be pleased to give his Royal Assent unto the Bill for taking away superstitious Innovations, to the Bill for the utter abolishing and taking away of all Archbishops, Bishops, their Chancellors and Commissaries, &c. to the Bill against scandalous Ministers, to the Bill against Pluralities, &c.

V. That his Majesty would be pleased, for the better Discovery and speedier Conviction of Recusants, that an Oath might be established by Act of Parliament, to be administered in such Manner as by both Houses should be agreed on, wherein they shall abjure and renounce, the Pope's Supremacy, Doctrine of Transubstantiation, Purgatory, &c.

VI. That the Earl of Bristol be removed from his Majesty's Councils, and that both he and the Lord Herbert, eldest Son to the Earl of Worcester, may likewise be restrained from coming within the Verge of the Court, &c.

VII. That the Militia both by Sea and Land, and the Forts and Ports of the Kingdom, be settled in such a Manner as should be agreed on by both Houses, &c.

VIII. That his Majesty would be pleased by his Letters to make Sir John Bramston Chief Justice of the King's-Bench, and Mr. Serjeant Rolls, and Mr. Serjeant Atkins, Justices of the King's-Bench, &c.

IX. That all such Persons as have been put out of the Commission of Peace, &c. since the first Day of April (other than such as were put out by the Desire of the Parliament) may again be put into those Commissions, &c.

X. As the 18th Proposition of the 19 Propositions.

XI. That the Royal Assent be given unto such Acts as shall be advised by Parliament, for satisfying the Debts wherein the Parliament had engaged the Publick Faith of the Kingdom.

XII. The same with the 17th of the 19 Propositions.

XIII. As the 14th Proposition of the 19 Propositions.

XIV. The same with the 10th Proposition of the 19 Propositions sent to the King, June 21 1641. But this Treaty became fruitless.

A. D. 1643, in the Beginning of the Spring the Queen returned into England, bringing with her considerable Supplies of Money and Ammunition out of France; and that Year his Majesty became Master of the North and West, some few Garrisons excepted. July 5, Sir Ralph Hoopes with his Cavaliers routed Sir William Waller at Lansdown near Bath; and July 15, he again defeated him at Roundway-hill by the Devizes, killing many Hundred on the Place, and taking many more Prisoners. Bristol and Exeter were yielded to those two martial Princes Rupert and Maurice, Son of Frederick Prince Palatine of the Rhine and Elizabeth his Wife, Sister to King Charles I. Gloucester the King besieged with a brave Army; and the Besieged, under the Colonel Edward Massie, defended themselves with great Bravery, till the Earl of Essex came with his Army, and raised the Siege. From this Siege the two Armies marched within few Miles of each other without any Engagement (save a little Skirmish by Alborne Chase) till they came to Newbury, where a sore Battle was fought. On the ing's Part were slain the Earls of Armarvon and Sunderland, and the earned Lord Faulkland; Effex lost many of his Officers.

King

January 22, those loyal Members of Parliament, who dissented from them at Westminster, met at Oxford by the King's Summons; of these, besides the Prince and Duke of York, the Lord-Keeper Littleton, Treasurer Cottingham, Duke of Richmond, and Marquis of Hertford, there were Nineteen Earls, and as many Lords, and one hundred and seven-teen Knights and Gentlemen. Other loyal Lords, Knights, and Gentlemen, Members of Parliament, were at this Time employed in the King's Service in divers Places of the Nation.

In this Month and Year the Scotch Army, under the Conduct of the Earl of Leven, entred England for the Parliament, being about 18,000 Foot, and 2000 Horse.

About this Time was loyal Newark besieged by Sir John Meldrum; but by Prince Rupert's coming, it was relieved, and the Parliamentarians forced to march away after great Losses, on such Conditions as the Prince would grant them.

This Year, upon a Cessation of Arms in Ireland, some Forces came over to the King's Assistance.

This Year also that Rebellious Thing called a Parliament, met at Westminster, and their Adherents, and some, to save themselves from Punishment, took the Scottish Solemn League and Covenant, with Hands lifted up to the most High God, swearing to endeavour the Preservation of the Reformed Religion, the Extirpation of Popery and Prelacy, to preserve the Rights and Privileges of Parliament, and Liberties of the Kingdom, and to defend and preserve the King's Majesty's Person and Authority, to make Discovery of all Incendiaries, malignant or evil Instruments, dividing the King from his People, to maintain a firm Peace betwixt the Confederate Nations of England and Scotland, to assist and defend all those that enter into this solemn League and Covenant, in the maintaining and pursuing thereof, to endeavour the Amending of their Lives, and each one to go before another in the Example of real Reformation, that the Lord might turn away his Wrath and heavy Indignation, and establish these Churches and Kingdoms in Truth and Peace. All the Parliament's Pretence in raising Arms was Reformation, for the Defence of the King's Person, to rescue him from his evil Council, and to make him a glorious King; which at length they did when they deprived him of his natural Life.

A. D. 1644, Sir William Waller defeated Sir Ralph Hopton about Brandon-Heath. The Lord Fairfax and his Son Sir Thomas took divers of the King's Garrisons in the North. Prince Rupert raised the Siege of Latham House; which Garrison had been defended the Space of about eighteen Weeks, by that loyal and magnanimous Lady the Countess of Derby. June 29, the King's Forces gave a great Defeat to Waller's Army at Cropely-Bridge. And presently after this the King drove the Earl of Effex up into Cornwall; but the Earl deserted his Army, passing by Water to Plymouth; and his Horse taking the Advantage of a dark Night, escaped, leaving the Foot to shift how they could, who capitulated for their Lives, leaving their Arms, Cannon, Ammunition, and Baggage to the King's Disposal. Then Ilferdcome, Barnstable, and Salisbury, yielded to the King, who now victoriously marched towards London.

July

1644.

1644.

July the 3d, was a great Fight at Marston - moore, where the Parliament Army obtained a very considerable Victory. And October the 27th, Essex, Waller, and the Earl of Manchester, met the King as he came out of the West at Newbury, where a sharp Battle was fought, and the King's Party forced out of the Field.

In November, Mack Mahon, an Irish Rebel, was hanged and quartered at Tyburn. And December 23, Sir Alexander Carew was beheaded on Tower-hill, for attempting to give up the Island of Plymouth to the King's Forces.

January the 1st, Hotham the Son, and January the 2d, Hotham the Father, were beheaded on Tower-hill, for designing to betray Hull to the Royalists, and for other Treacheries.

William Laud, Archbishop of Canterbury, having been voted guilty of High Treason by the House of Commons, and condemned by the House of Peers to be drawn, hanged, and quartered, (though upon his Petition they changed the Manner of his Execution) was brought to the Scaffold on Tower-hill, January 10, where he preached his last Sermon, taking for his Text, Hebr. xiii. 2. So yielding his Neck to the Stroke of the Executioner. The Charge against him was, endeavouring to subvert the Laws, Religion, and Privileges of Parliament.

January 30, by his Majesty's Procurement, a Treaty was held at Uxbridge, where the Parliament's Demands were, That Episcopacy might be extirpated; that Presbytery might be established, and that the King should yield up the Militia solely unto the Parliament's Disposal, &c. as in the 19 Propositions, and those in the Treaty at Oxford, with some Additional; as That his Majesty, according to the laudable Example of his Royal Father, of happy Memory, would be pleased to swear and sign the late solemn League and Covenant, and that an Act of Parliament be passed in both Kingdoms respectively, for enjoying the Taking of the same by all the Subjects of the three Kingdoms; That the Persons who shall expect no Pardon, be only these following, Rupert and Maurice, Sons of the Count Palatine of the Rhine, James Earl of Derby, John Earl of Bristol, William Earl of Newcastle, Francis Lord Cottington, John Lord Pawlet, George Lord Digby, Edward Lord Littleton, Matthew Wren Bishop of Exeter, Sir Robert Heath, Dr. Bramhall Bishop of Derry, Sir John Biron, William Widdrington, Colonel George Goring, Henry Gernyn, Esq; Sir Ralph Hopton, Sir Francis Doddington, Mr. Endymion Porter, Sir George Ratcliffe, Sir Marmaduke Langdale, Sir Henry Vaughan, Sir Francis Windebanke, Sir Richard Greenville, Mr. Edward Hyde, Sir John Marley, Sir Nicholas Cole, Sir Thomas Riddle, jun. Colonel Ware, Sir John Strangways, Sir John Culpeper, Sir Richard Floyd, John Bodvile, Esq; Mr. David Jenkins, Sir George Strode, Marquis of Huntley, Earl of Montrose, Earl of Niddesdale, Earl of Traquair, Earl of Carnwath, with some other Scotch Lords and Gentlemen (named.)

2. All Papists and Popish Recusants, who have been, now are, or shall be actually in Arms, or voluntarily assisting against the Parliament or Estates of either Kingdom.

3. All Persons who have had a Hand in the Plotting, Designing, or Assisting the Rebellion in Ireland.

This Treaty also proved fruitless.

February

February 20, the Lord Mac-Guyer, another of the Grand Irish Rebels, was executed at Tyburn.

About this Time was the Parliament's Army new modell'd. The Earl of Essex and the other Commanders, who were Parliament Men (Oliver Cromwell was excepted) were by the Self-denying Ordinance (lately made) to attend in Parliament, in whose Stead others and more active Persons were appointed. Sir Thomas Fairfax was constituted Captain General, Oliver Cromwell (then the Sectaries Darling) was made Lieutenant General, Henry Ireton Commissary General, &c. After which Model the King's Affairs of the Nation began fatally to decline.

A. D. 1645, his Majesty drew his Army out of Oxford, in order to relieve his Northern Counties and Garrisons; but after he had stormed and taken Leicester, in his Way he was called back to secure Oxford, which the Parliament Army threatened with a Siege. This while Sir Thomas Fairfax had intercepted a Letter of the Lord Goring's to the King, wherein that loyal Subject had desired of his Majesty to forbear engaging with the Enemy, till he could be joyned with him. Hereupon Fairfax left his Siege before Oxford, and made directly towards the King with a Purpose to fight him before that Addition of Strength should come in. And at a Place near Naseby in Northamptonshire, both Armies met on Saturday June 14, 1645. His Majesty commanded the main Body, Prince Rupert and Prince Maurice the Right Wing, Sir Mar- maduke Langdale the Left, the Lord Asely the Right Hand Reserve, and Sir George Lisle the Left. Of the Parliament Army Fairfax and Skip- ton had the ordering of the main Battle, Cromwell the Right Wing, and Ireton the Left. Prince Rupert charged that Wing commanded by Ireton so home, that he disordered it, taking Ireton Prisoner; and for a while he followed the Parliamentarians towards Naseby, but in the Interim Cromwell worsted the King's Right Wing, and then came in to Fairfax's Assistance, who together charged upon the King's main Body, and they, no longer able to stand it out, retreated out of the Field, leaving a compleat Victory to the disloyal Party, who pursued them within two Miles of Leicester, killing in their Way many Women that had followed the Cavaliers Camp. On the Parliament's Side were wounded and slain above 1,000. On the King's Side were slain 20 Knights, Colonels, and Officers of Note, and 600 private Soldiers; and of Prisoners were taken 6 Colonels, 8 Lieutenant Colonels, 18 Majors, 70 Captains, with many other Officers, 4,500 common Soldiers, 13 of the King's Household Servants, 12 Pieces of Ordnance, 8,000 Arms, 40 Barrels of Powder, 200 Carriages, Store of rich Pillage, 3,000 Horses, the King's Standard, one of his Coaches, his Cabinet of Letters, which the Parliament caused to be made publick.

April 16, Leicester was yielded up to Sir Thomas Fairfax, which accomplished, he marched into the West to relieve Taunton, then besieged by the Royal Party. At Langport he discomfited the Lord Goring's Forces, taking 1,400 Prisoners. Then Bridgwater and Bath yielded to him. Then he besieged Sherbourn Castle, and sent Cromwell to suppress the Wilts and Dorsetshire Clubmen, associated about Shaftsbury, which he did; killing some, taking others, and dispersing 1645.

1646. dispersing the rest. These Clubmen declared themselves Neutrals, pretending only to secure their own Properties. August 15, Sherbourn Castle was surrendered upon Promise of Quarter.

At Rowton Heath, near Chester, Colonel Poyns worsted his Majesty's Forces.

In Yorkshire Colonel Robert Lilbourn routed the Royalists commanded by the Lord Digby, and Sir Marmaduke Langdale. Colonel Birch and Colonel Morgan, by a Stratagem took Hereford for the Parliament. At Bovey-tracey Oliver Cromwell surprized the Lord Wentworth, took three Regiments, dispersing two others. Fairfax took Dartmouth, defeated the Lord Hopton at Torrington, and immediately after blocks him up at Truro, enforcing him to disband his Army. March 21, Jacob Lord Ashby was routed at Stow in the Wold, by Sir William Brereton and Colonel Morgan. The loyal Lord himself was taken Prisoner, with 1500 others. Many of the King's Garrisons fell this Year into the Hands of the Parliamentarians; as Bristol, the Devizes, Winchester-Castle, Basing House, Laycock House, Berkly Castle, Cheapslow, Winchester, Belvoir Castle, Latham House, Monmouth, and Welbeck House, &c.

A. D. 1646, This Year the Parliament began with disabling all such of their Fellow-Members as were with the King, from ever sitting in the House again, empowering the Speaker to give Warrants to the Clerk of the Crown for new Elections in their Places; and also commanded all Cavaliers to depart the City of London, betwixt the Thirtieth of March and the Sixth of April. And in London a Court-Marshall was erected, who made it Death for any to repair to the King, Queen, Prince, or malignant Lords and Commanders; for Malignant was a Term applied by the Parliamentarians to the King's loyal Subjects. And now his Majesty was reduced into a very low Condition. His Forces beaten out of the Field in all Places, and his Garrisons surrendered and taken daily, as St. Michael's Mount, Ruthen Castle, Woodstock, Excester, and Barnstaple; and General Fairfax approaching to besiege Oxford, the King upon Thoughts of providing for himself, went in Disguise to the Scotch Camp that was then before Newark, May the 4th. The Scotch Officers engaging to secure both him and as many of his Party as should seek for Shelter with them, and to stand to him with their Lives and Fortunes. But upon his Majesty's Departure from Oxford, divers of the Noblemen, as if they had been deserted by the King, yielded themselves to Fairfax: And June 24, the most loyal University and City of Oxford was surrendered upon honourable Terms by Sir Thomas Glenham. After which a Number of the King's Garrisons yielded to the Parliament, as Barbury, Ludlow, Borstal, Carnarvon, Lichfield, Worcester, Wallingford, Gothbridge, Ragland, Pendennis, and Newark by the King's Order was delivered up; and the Lord Montrose in Scotland, and the Lord Ormond in Ireland, by the King's Command, desisted their Hostilities. After the Surrender of Newark, the Scotch Army marched back toward their own Country as far as Newcastle upon Tyne, where when they were come, they tendered their Covenant to the King, pretending that unless he would take that they durst not bring him into Scotland. This the King refused not, they would still satisfy the Scruple concerning concerning Church Government, which lay upon his Conscience; which to effect, Mr. Alexander Henderson, a Minister, the Oracle of the Kirk, was employed to converse with him. But his Majesty's Parts were so great, and Cause so good, that made all Mr. Henderson's Attempts successful. See the printed Papers of their Disputations.

Whilst these Things were acting at Newcastle, the Bargain was struck at London betwixt the Parliament and Scotch Commissioners, and for 100,000*l.* the Scots delivered the King up to the English Parliament. Yet to mask their Perfidy, the Scots added this Caution, That there should be no Attempt made upon the King's Person, but being entertained at one of his own Palaces, he should be there treated with upon Propositions from both Nations, which shall be speedily sent unto him.

July 24, were Nineteen Propositions presented to his Majesty from the Parliament for a safe and well-grounded Peace; the Heads of which Propositions were as follow-

I. That his Majesty call in his Declarations and Proclamations against the Parliaments of both Kingdoms.

II. That his Majesty swear and sign the Covenant.

III. That he pass a Bill for abolishing Bishops.

IV. To confirm the sitting of the Assembly of Divines (which Assembly the Parliament had called to meet together, July 6th, 1643.)

V. That Religion be Reformed to the Parliament agree.

VI. That such Uniformity be passed into Act.

VII. To pass an Act against Popish Recusants.

VIII. An Act for the Education of the Children of Papists by Protestants.

IX. An Act for laying Penalties on Papists.

X. An Act for Prevention of Popish Practices.

XI. And the like for the Kingdom of Scotland.

XII. An Act for the due Observance of the Lord's Day, for preaching against Pluralities, &c.

XIII. For settling the Militia and Navy in the Parliament's Hands.

XIV. For nulling all Honours conferred since 1642.

XV. For confirming the Treaties, &c. passed betwixt the two Kingdoms.

XVI. For exempting certain Persons from Pardon, &c.

XVII. For making void the Cessation of Ireland.

XVIII. For settling the London Militia.

XIX. The Great Seal to be with the Commissioners of Parliament, and all Acts by it to be made good.

These were sent to his Majesty to Newcastle.

February the 6th, the Scots left Newcastle, and marched homeward; and two Days after the King set forward with the Parliament's Commissioners for Holmby; attended with 900 Horse. And now the Parliament, because they wanted others to quarrel withal, fell to quarrel amongst themselves, dividing into two Parties, Presbyterians and Independents, with Anabaptists and the other Sectarists; for the Independents comprehended all the several Sects. The Presbyterians were then powerful in the House, but the other in the Army, and were a subtil and resolute People. The former of these Parties 1646.

seeing themselves in Danger of being supplanted by the other, voted in Parliament, to have Part of the Army disbanded, another Part of it sent over into Ireland towards the reducing that Country, and the Remainder to be disposed into several Places of England, to keep the Royalists in Awe. This put the Army into a Heat, who, to make their Part sure, sent a Party of Horse, commanded by Cornet Joyce, to seize upon the King's Person, and to bring him from Holmby into their own Quarter, which was done, June 3. 1647. From Holmby they conveyed his Majesty to Childersley, and thence to New-Market, the Grandees of the Army pretending to him, how they were grieved for his Imprisonment and Sufferings, professing they would never part with their Arms, till they had made his Way to the Throne (but it must be a Throne in Heaven.) Oliver Cromwell the Grand Grandee, to clear himself from Dissimulation herein, 'tis said, did afterward pretend, that as he was praying for a Blessing from God on his Undertaking, to restore the King to his pristine Majesty, his Tongue did cleave to the Roof of his Mouth, that he could not speak one Word more, which he took as a Return of Prayer, and that God had rejected him from being King. And the more to palliate their Evil-Meanings, they permitted him the Service of his own Chaplains, which he had been denied at Holmby, the Commerce of Letters with the Queen, the Visits of his own Party, and Attendance of his Courtiers. The Parliament voted, that the General should be required to deliver the King to their Commissioners, who were to bring him to Richmond, to the End that Propositions of Peace might be speedily presented him. Hereupon the Army drew up Articles against Eleven of the Members of the Commons House, namely Mr. Denzil Hollis, Sir Philip Stapleton, Sir William Lewis, Sir John Clotworthy, Sir William Waller, Sir John Maynard, Colonel Maffey, Colonel Long, Colonel Harley, Mr. Glynn, and Mr. Anthony Nicholls. Nor would the Army be satisfied till the House was purged of these Members. Which being done, the Army Party became something prevalent, who voted that the London Militia should be taken out of the Hands of the City, and transferr'd to others better affected to the Army; and that it should be Treason to seek for Subscriptions to Petitions. Hereupon great Multitudes of Apprentices and others, in a tumultuous sort, resorted to the Parliament-House, and there kept the Speaker in his Chair till this Vote was pass'd, That the King should come to London to treat, and that the City should have the ordering of their own Militia. Fairfax understanding this, hastes with his Army to London, and at Hounslow was met by the Speaker, and such of the Members as sided with the Army, who complained of the Violence that was offered them. In the mean while the Citizens and Presbyterian Part of the Parliament made some Preparations to oppose the Army; but upon the General's Approach to the City, the Gates were thrown open, and the Army marched in Triumph thro' the City, seized upon the Tower, dismantled the Fortifications, imprisoned the Mayor, and divers of the chief Citizens, and committed some Noblemen to the Black-Rod.

In September the Members at Westminster sent Propositions to his Majesty then at Hampton Court, which were the same in Substance with those formerly offered, as, for the abolishing Episcopacy; the Parliament to have the Disposal of all great Offices of Trust, and Militia, &c.

About this Time the Parliament voted, That 6,000 Foot, and 2,400 Horse and Dragoons should be sent into Ireland, and 18,000 Foot and 7,200 Horse, and 1,000 Dragoons, should be kept up as a standing Army for England, the rest of the Soldiers to be disbanded. The Army also, for the better carrying on of their Designs, about the same time selected out of every Regiment a certain Number of Soldiers to meet and consult, by the Name of Adjutors; which were a Military Common-Council, being two Commission Officers and two private Soldiers out of every Regiment, to consult for the Army's Good, to draw up their Grievances and present them to the General, and he to the Parliament. These Oliver and his Assistant Ireton encouraged as long as suited their Designs, and then laid them aside.

November the 6th, the Scotch Commissioners sent a Letter to the Speaker of the Lower House, that the King might be admitted to a personal Treaty, at least that the Army might not remove him from Hampton-Court; but some of the Army Officers having informed his Majesty in Design to have him the surer at their Dispose) that his Person was in some Hazard from the Adjutors and Levellers, he therefore with three of his most trusty Attendants, Sir John Berkley, Mr. Asburnham, and Colonel Legg, in the dark and tempestuous Night of November the 11th, escaped from Hampton-Court, and after some wandering, committed himself to Colonel Hammond, Governour of the Isle of Wight; who conveyed him to Carisbrooke-Castle, the very Pit, 'tis said, that his Enemies had designed for him; for it was rumour'd above a Fortnight before in the Army, that the King should be in the Isle of Wight: And the very Night he departed from Hampton-Court, the Centinels were withdrawn from their usual Standings, on Purpose to facilitate his Escape thence.

Whilst his Majesty was at Hampton-Court, Propositions (being the same with those at Newcastle) were presented to him by the Earls of Pembroke and Lauderdale, Sir Charles Erskin, Sir John Holland, Sir John Cooke, Sir James Harrington, Mr. Richard Brown, Mr. Hugh Kenedy, and Mr. Robert Berkley, in the Names of the Parliament of England, and in Behalf of the Kingdom of Scotland.

From Carisbrooke-Castle, his Majesty wrote a Letter to the Parliament, wherein he professed he could not either, as a King or Christian, consent to the abolishing of Episcopacy, because he esteemed it to be Apostolical, and at his Coronation was sworn to maintain it; yet he was willing Presbytery should be settled for Three Years, and that a free Debate should be had by such a Number of Divines, about the Settlement of Church-Government for the future. And was willing also that the Parliament should dispose of the Militia, and should have the Choice of his Privy-Council by Grant of Patent from him during his Reign: Withal earnestly soliciting them to pity the languishing Condition of the Kingdom, and to come to a personal Treaty with him. After Three Days Debate, the Parliament sent Four Bills to his Majesty to be signed by him; but so derogating they were from his Royalty, that the 1648. Scotch Commissioners declared against them, and the King refused the signing of them. The Parliament thereupon voted, That no more Addresses should be made to the King.

In the mean while Colonel Hammond had dismissed the King's Servants, and used him more severely than formerly, which occasioned Captain Burleigh to beat up the Drum for the King's Service and Freedom in the Isle of Wight; but he was soon apprehended, and afterwards executed.

A. D. 1648, the Parliament voted, That all they who would not submit to the Power (meaning their usurped Authority) should be expelled the University, and that all the College Rents should be payed to the Visitors by them appointed.

April the 9th and 10th, the London Boys made an Insurrection, seized the Magazine at Leadenhall, crying out for God and King Charles, but were quieted by Fairfax. Poyer, Langborn, Powel, and Sir John Owen, took up Arms for the King in Wales, but Colonel Langborn and Powel were defeated by Colonel Horton, and Sir John Owen by Major-General Mitton, and Pembroke-Castle, kept by Colonel Poyer, was yielded to that Arch-Traytor Cromwell. July the 13th, Powel, Poyer, and Langborn, afterwards cast Lots for their Lives; and the Lot falling upon Poyer, he was shot to Death.

April the 20th, the Duke of York, disguised in Woman's Apparel, escaped from St. James's, and pass'd into Holland. Many were the Petitions that were now presented to the Parliament for a personal Treaty, and for disbanding the Army; but the Surrey Petitioners, by Command of the Army Officers, and Parliament Men, were assaulted at the Parliament-Doors, and some of them were killed, some wounded, and most of them plundered by the Soldiers. And now the Kentish Men, to the Number of 10,000, took up Arms for the King, and embodied themselves at Maidstone, where they made a gallant Resistance against General Fairfax for the Space of six Hours; but his Veteran Soldiers at last prevailed, taking many of them, and eight Pieces of Ordnance. June the 2d, the old Lord Goring, Earl of Norwich, with 500 Men, crossed into Essex, and got into Colchester, whither the Country People flock'd unto him, also a Party from London, and the Lord Capel and Longborough out of Hertfordshire.

Some of the Navy also fall off from the Rulers at Westminster, and setting the levelling Admiral Rainborough on Shore, 17 Ships delivered themselves to the Prince of Wales.

The Earl of Holland also headed a Royal Party at Kingston upon Thames; but after a short, yet smart Fight, his Party was dispersed, the Lord Francis Villers was slain, and many Prisoners of Note were taken July the 7th, and shortly after the Earl of Holland himself was apprehended.

The Parliament of Scotland sent into England an Army under Duke Hamilton, in order to recover the King's Liberty, and to re-establish him on his Throne; but August the 17th, at Preston in Lancashire the Scots Army of near 21,000, was totally routed by Oliver Cromwell. 'Tis said in this Day's Fight and the Pursuit, the English took more Prisoners than their own Army amounted unto, and that was about 12,000. The Parliament lost here that daring Martialist Colonel Francis Thornhaigh. Shortly after the Battle Battle, Duke Hamilton was taken Prisoner; and Cromwell, to improve this Success, followed the scattered Parties into Scotland, where, when he was come, there repaired to him the Earls of Argyl, Lowden, Leven, and other of the Scotch covenanting Nobility, who contracted with him for subduing the common Enemy, meaning the Loyal Party.

Colchester, that had endured a tedious Siege, and was now brought to such Scarcity of Provision, that they had not Horse-Flesh enough to serve them one Day longer, and on it they had lived almost a Fortnight, August the 27th yielded upon Articles; the private Soldiers to depart with Life, the Commanders to remain at the General's Dispose, and the City to raise 14,000 l. to save it from Plunder. Prisoners of Quality taken here, were the Lords Goring, Capel, and Loughborough, eleven Knights, twelve Colonels, eight Lieutenant-Colonels, nine Majors, thirty Captains, and sixty-five Gentlemen. Three of the Knights were presently condemned by a Council of War, two of whom, namely, Sir Charles Lucas and Sir George Lisle, were shot to Death, dying as they had lived, with great Courage.

But whilst these Things were managed by the Army, the Parliament was busied with Petitions from London and other Places for a Personal Treaty. The Parliament therefore, contrary to the Humours of some of their factious Members, repealed those Votes they formerly made for no more Addresses to the King, and both Houses voted a Treaty to be with the King in Honour, Freedom, and Safety. And September the 18th the Treaty began at Newport in the Isle of Wight, where his Majesty condescended so far unto the Parliament's Demands,

(as, that Presbytery should be settled for three Years, the Parliament should dispose of the Militia, and should have the Choice of his Privy-Counsellors and great Officers of State, during the Term of his Life, &c.) that both Houses came to this Resolve, That the King's Concessions were a sufficient Ground for Peace. But this did exceedingly irrage the factious Members and Commanders of the Army, who resolved to seize the King into their own Hands and Dispose, which they did, removing him out of the Isle of Wight, and making him Prisoner in Hurst Castle.

November the 30th, the Army then fell to purging the Parliament, apprehending forty Members thereof that were Persons of the most known Integrity and highest Resolution, denying Admission to 150 more; and suffering none to enter the House, save such whom they knew would serve their Designs. Which Army-Members revived those Votes, of no more Addresses to the King; the Votes for a Treaty with the King, and of the Satisfactoriness of his Concessions, they rased out of the Journal-Book. And then proceeded to vote, That the supreme Authority of the Nation resided in themselves; That to raise Arms against the Peoples Representatives or the Parliament, was High Treason; That the King himself took Arms against the Parliament, and so was guilty of the Blood-shed throughout the Civil War. And therefore this Fag end of a Parliament are resolved to have his Majesty brought to his Tryal; in order thereto, giving their Commands for bringing him up to London; and January the 19th he was accordingly brought to St James's. When the factious Members, whom the Army had licensed to sit, proceeded to constitute a Court for the Tryal of the King, giving it the specious Name of, The High Court of Justice; which said Court they impowered to convene, hear, judge, and execute Charles Stuart King of England. These Proceedings the House of Lords detested, so did the Parliament of Scotland; the Judges of the Land affirmed it to be contrary to the known Laws and Customs of England, for the King to be brought to Tryal; and the Presbyterian Ministers did both publicly and privately dissuade them from this horrid Action, though all in vain: And the more to animate the King's Judges in their illegal Proceedings, the Pulpit-Jester Hugh Peters, preached before them on that Text, Psal. cxlix. 8. To bind their Kings in Chains, &c. Such Honours have all his Saints; when he assured them, that they were the Saints there meant, often in his Sermons calling them the Saints Judges; and professed, that he had for certain found, upon a strict Scrutiny, that there were in the Army 5000 Saints, no less holy than those that now conversed in Heaven with God Almighty. Afterwards kneeling in his Pulpit, weeping and lifting up his Hands, he earnestly begged them, in the Name of the People of England, that they would execute Justice upon that Wretch Charles, and would not let Benbadad escape in Safety, &c.

1648.

January the 20th, his Majesty was brought before the High Court of Justice in Westminster-Hall, where he boldly and chearfully took the Seat prepared for him; and the Charge was read against him with all those reproachful Terms of Tyrant, Traitor, and Murderer, and impleaded in the Name of all the People of England. But General

Fairfax's Lady, from a Scaffold adjoining, cried with a loud Voice, That not Half the People of England were guilty of that Crime, but that 'twas by Means of that Traitor Cromwell that this Wickedness was done. The King alledged to the Court, that he could not make his Defence, unless they first produced their Authority for the Tryal of him their King, which they not being able to do, (except that of the sword) remanded him to the Place of his Captivity.

January the 22d, the High Court of Justice met again, when the King being brought to the Bar, Solicitor Cook required that he might be put upon it, either to give in his positive Answer, or else that the Charge against him, upon his Refusal to plead, might be taken for confessed. The Substance of which Charge was, That the said Charles Stuart, King of England, had been the Occasion, Author and Contriver of the Wars, and therein was guilty of all the Treasons, Murthers, Rapines, Burnings, Spoils, Desolations, Damage, and Mischiefs to this Nation, acted or committed in the Wars, or occasioned thereby. To the Charge, President Bradshaw required the King's Answer; but his Majesty firmly persisting in the Disowning of their Authority, and offering to give Reasons why he could not own their Court, the Court was adjourned to the next Day.

January the 23d, the King was again brought before his fictitious Judges, when he was again pressed to give in his Reasons why he could not own their Authority. To which he answered, That to own this new Court was against the Privileges of the People, and the Fundamental Laws of the Kingdom. Whereupon the President commanded the

Clerk

Clerk to record the Default, and the Guard to take back the Prisoner, which was accordingly done.

January 27, his Majesty was again brought to the Bar, where he still refused to own their illegal Court, but said he had some Matters conducing to the Good of the People, which he desired to have the Liberty to speak before the Members of both Houses; which the Court would by no Means yield unto, but commanded the Clerk to read the Sentence against him, which was, That whereas the Commons of England, in Parliament assembled, have appointed them a High Court of Justice for the trying of Charles Stuart King of England, before whom he had been three times convened, and at the first time a Charge of High-Treason, and other Crimes and Misdemeanors was read in Behalf of England, &c. To which Charge the said Charles Stuart refused several times to answer, &c. for all which Treasons and Crimes mentioned in the Charge, this Court doth adjudge the said Charles Stuart as a Tyrant, Traitor, Murderer, and publick Enemy, to be put to Death by severing his Head from his Body. This Sentence being read, the Members of the Court approved it by holding up their Hands. His Majesty offered to speak after the Sentence, which Bradshaw would not suffer him to do, but commanded him to be taken away; when in his passing along, the Soldiers reviled him with many irreverent Taunts, blew their stinking Tobacco into his Face, which they knew to be very distasteful to him, and one or two, more barbarous than the rest, spit in his Face, the good King wiping it off again, and saying, My Saviour suffered far more than this for me. And when the rude Soldiers, instructed by their Commanders, cried out, Justice, Justice, Execution, Execution, this pious King pitied their Blindness, saying, Poor Souls, for a Piece of Money they would do as much for their Commanders. Such as pulled off their Hats, or bowed to him, as he was carrying back to his Imprisonment, the Soldiers beat with their Fists and Weapons, and knocked one down dead, but for saying, God be merciful unto him.

January 28, the right Christian King was guarded from Whitehall to St. James's, where Dr. Juxon Bishop of London, preached before him on these Words, In the Day when God shall judge the Secrets of all Men by Jesus Christ, according to my Gospel, Rom. ii. 16.

January 29, the Lady Elizabeth and Duke of Gloucester being admitted to take the last Farewel of their condemned Father, his Majesty, after he had given his Blessing to the Princess Elizabeth, bad her tell her Brother James, whenever she should see him, that 'twas his Father's last Desire, That he should no more look upon Charles as his eldest Brother only, but be obedient to him as his Sovereign, and that they should love one the other, and forgive their Father's Enemies. He also bad her to read Bishop Andrew's Sermons, Hooker's Ecclesiastical Policy, and Bishop Laud against Fisher, which would ground her against Popery; wished her not to grieve for him, for he should die a glorious Death, it being for the Laws and Liberties of the Land, and for maintaining the Protestant Religion: Bad her tell her Mother, that his Thoughts had never strayed from her, and that his Love should be the same unto the last. Then gave her his Blessing, bidding her to send his Blessing to the rest of her Brothers and Sisters, and Commendations to all his Friends. To the Duke of Gloucester he said, He heard the Army intended to make him King, but that he told him he must not accept, so long as his two elder Brothers were living; commanding him to fear the Lord, and he would provide for him.

1648.

*Thursday January 30, in the Morning the Bishop of London read Divine Service in his Majesty's Presence, when the 27th Chapter of St. Matthew's Gospel, the History of our Saviour's Crucifixion fell out to be the Second Lesson. After Morning Prayer, the King received the Sacrament, and performed private Devotions in Preparation to his Passion; which being ended, about Ten of the Clock this most Christian King was brought from St. James's to Whitehall by a Regiment of Foot, and a private Guard of Partizans, the Bishop on one Hand of him, and Colonel Thomlinson (who had the Charge of him) on the other, both bare-headed. His Majesty walked very fast, and bad them go faster; thus saying, That he now went before them to strive for a heavenly Crown, with less Solitude than he had often encouraged his Soldiers to fight for an Earthly Diadem. Being come into the Cabinet Chamber in Whitehall, where he used to lodge, he there passed the Time for near two Hours in his Devotion, about Twelve he eat a Bit of Bread, and drank a Glass of Claret; and towards One, Colonel Hacker, with other Officers and Soldiers, brought him through the Banqueting House, and through a Window of that upon a Scaffold which was hung with Black. Divers Companies of Foot, and Troops of Horse, were placed on each Side of the Street, which hindred the Approach of the very numerous Spectators; therefore the King directed his Speech chiefly to Colonel Thomlinson.*

I Shall be very little heard of any Body here, I shall therefore speak a Word unto you.

Indeed I could hold my Peace very well, if I did not think that holding my Peace would make some think that I submit to the Guilt as well as to the Punishment; but I think it is my Duty, to God first, and to my Country, for to clear myself, both as an honest Man, a good King, and a good Christian.

I shall begin first with my Innocency. In truth, I think it not very needful for me to insist long upon this, for all the World knows that I never did begin a War first with the two Houses of Parliament, and I call God to witness, to whom I must shortly make an Account, that I never did intend for to inroach upon their Privileges: They began upon me; it is the Militia they began upon, they confess'd that the Militia was mine, but they thought it fit for to have it from me. And to be short, if anybody will look to the Dates of Commissions, of their Commissions and mine, and likewise to the Declarations, they will see clearly that they began these unhappy Troubles, not I. So that as to the Guilt of these enormous Crimes that are laid against me, I hope in God, that God will clear me of it. I will not (I am in Charity) God forbid, that I should lay it on the two Houses of Parliament, there is no Necessity of either, I hope they are free of this Guilt. For I do believe that all Instruments between them and me have been the chief Cause of all this Bloodshed. So that by way of speaking, as I find my self clear of this, I hope, and I pray God that they may too. Yet for all this, God forbid that I should be so ill a Christian as to say, that God's Judgments are not just upon me; many times he doth pay Justice upon an unjust Sentence, that is ordinary. I will only say this, that an unjust Sentence that I suffer'd to take effect is punish'd now by an unjust Sentence upon me.

That

That is ——— So far I have said, to shew you that I am an Innocent Man.

Now for to shew you that I am a good Christian, I hope there is a good Man (pointing to the Bishop) that will bear me witness that I have forgiven all the World, and even those in particular that have been the chief Causes of my Death; who they are God knows, I do not desire to know, I pray God forgive them. But this is not all, my Charity must go further, I wish that they may repent, for they have indeed committed a great Sin in that Particular: I pray God, with St. Stephen, that this be not laid to their Charge. Nay, not only so, but that they may take the right Way to the Peace of the Kingdom; for my Charity commands me not only to forgive particular Men, but my Charity commands me to endeavour, to the last Gaspe, the Peace of the Kingdom. So, Sirs, I do wish with all my Soul, and I do hope here is some here will carry it further (turning to some Gentlemen that wrote) that they may endeavour the Peace of the Kingdom.

Now, Sirs, I must shew you both how you are out of the way and will put you in the way.

First, You are out of the way. For certainly all the Way you have ever had yet, as I could find by any thing, is in the way of Conquest. Certainly this is an ill Way: For Conquest, Sirs, in my Opinion, is never just, except there be a good just Cause, either for Matter of Wrong, or just Title; and then if you go beyond it, the first Quarrel you have to it, that makes it unjust at the End, that was at first. But if it be only matter of Conquest, then it is a great Robbery, as a Pirate said to Alexander, that he was the great Robber, he was but a petty Robber. And so, Sirs, I think the Way that you are in is much out of the way.

Now, Sirs, for to put you in the way, believe it, you will never do right, nor will God ever prosper you, until you give God his Due, the King his Due (that is my Successors) and the People their Due; I am as much for them as any of you.

You must give God his Due, by regulating rightly his Church (according to his Scripture) which is now out of Order. For to set you in a Way particularly, now I cannot, but only this, a National Synod, freely called, freely debating amongst themselves, must settle this, when that every Opinion is freely and clearly heard.

For the King indeed I will not, ——— (then turning to a Gentleman that touched the Axe, he said, Hurt not the Axe that may hurt me) For the King, the Laws of the Land will clearly instruct you for that, therefore because it concerns my own Particular, I only give you a Touch of it.

For the People. And truly I desire their Liberty and Freedom as much as any Body whomsoever; but I must tell you, that their Liberty and Freedom consists in having of Government, those Laws by which their Life and their Goods may be most their own. It is not for having Share in Government, Sirs, that is nothing pertaining to them; a Subject and a Sovereign are clear different Things. And therefore until they do that, I mean that you do put the People in that Liberty as I say, certainly they will never enjoy themselves. Sirs, It was for this that now I am come here. If I would have given Way to an arbitrary Way, for to have all Laws changed according to the Power of the Sword, I needed not to have come here; and therefore I tell you (and I pray God it may not be laid to your Charge) that I am the Martyr of the People.

In troth Sirs, I shall not hold you much longer, for I will only say this to you, That in Truth I could have desired desired some little time longer, because that I would have put this that I have said in a little more Order, and a little better digested than I have done, and therefore I hope you will excuse me.

1648.

I have delivered my Conscience. I pray God that you take those Courses that are best for the Good of the Kingdom and your own Salvation.

Then the Bishop said,

Though it be very well known what your Majesty's Affections are to the Protestant Religion, yet it may be expected that you should say somewhat for the World's Satisfaction in that particular.

Whereupon the King replied,

I thank you very heartily, my Lord, for that I had almost forgotten it.

In troth, Sirs, my Conscience in Religion, I think, is very well known to all the World, and therefore I declare before you all, That I die a Christian, according to the Profession of the Church of England, as I found it left by my Father; and this honest Man (pointing to the Bishop) I think will witness it.

Then turning to the Officer, he said,

Sirs, Excuse this same. I have a good Cause, and I have a gracious God, I will say no more.

Then to Colonel Hacker he said,

Take care that they do not put me to Pain. And Sirs, this, and it please you —

But a Gentleman coming near the Axe, the King said,

Take heed of the Axe, pray take heed of the Axe.

And to the Executioner he said,

I shall say but very short Prayers, and when I thrust out my Hands—

Then he called to the Bishop for his Cap, which as he was doing, and having put it on, he asked the Executioner, Does my Hair trouble you?

Who desired him to put it all under his Cap; which as he was doing by the Help of the Bishop and Executioner, he turned to the Bishop, and said,

I have a good Cause, and a gracious God on my Side.

The Bishop said,

There is but one Stage more (alluding to the Posts and Stages in a Race) which though turbulent and troublesome, yet is a very short one. You may consider it will soon carry you a very great Way; it will carry you from Earth to Heaven, and there you shall find; to your great Joy, the Prize you hasten to, a Crown of Glory.

The King adjoins,

I go from a corruptible to an incorruptible Crown, where no Disturbance can be, no Disturbance in the World.

Bishop. You are exchanged from a temporal to an eternal Crown. A good Exchange!

Then the King asked the Executioner,

Is my Hair well?

And taking off his Cloak and George, he delivered his George to the Bishop, saying, Remember, (twice said) to send it the Prince.

Then putting off his Doublet and being in his Waistcoat, he put on his Cloak again, and looking upon the Block, said to the Executioner,

You must set it fast.

Execut. It is fast, Sir,

King. It might have been a little higher.

Execut. It can be no higher, Sir,

King. When I put out my Hand this Way, then —

Then having said a few Words to himself, as he stood, with Hand and Eyes lift up, immediately stooping down, he laid his Neck upon the Block, and the Executioner

oner again putting his Hair under his Cap, his Majesty thinking he had been going to strike, bad him stay for the Sign.

Execut. Yes, I will, and it please your Majesty.

After a very short Pause, his Majesty stretching forth his Hands, the wizar'd Executioner at one Blow severed his Royal Head from his Body. Whose Blood was taken up by several Persons for different Ends ; by some as Trophies of their Villany, by others as Relicks of a Martyr. His Corpse, embalmed and wrapped in Lead, was conveyed to Windsor by some of his Servants. And Feb. 9, 1648, was there interred in the Chapel Royal by the Duke of Richmond, Marquis of Hartford, Earls of Southampton and Lindsey, and the Bishop of London.

A Prince he was very temperate, chaste, humble, affectionate to his People, eloquent, notwithstanding some small Hesitation in his Utterance ; exceeding in Fortitude and Patience ; most devout in, and constant to his Religion. His Wife was Henrietta Maria, the Daughter of Henry the Fourth King of France, by whom he had Issue Charles James, born at Greenwich, May 13, 1628, but died near as soon as born. Charles, afterwards King of England, born at St. James's, May 29, 1630. James, Duke of York, and afterwards King, born also at St. James's, October 14, 1633. Henry, Duke of Gloucester, born in the same Place, July 8, 1639. Mary, born Nov. 4, 1631, married to William, Count of Nassau, Prince of Orange, by whom she had the late Prince of Orange, who was King of England 1648. in Right of his Wife Mary, eldest Daughter of King James II. Elizabeth, born January 28, 1635. Anne, born March 17, 1637, died before her Father. Catharine, who died almost as soon as born. Henrietta, born at Excester, June 16, 1644, married to the Duke of Anjou and Orleans, only Brother to Lewis XIV. King of France. In his Troubles he composed an excellent Book, intitled, Εἰκὼν Βασιλική. He had begun the Repairing of St. Paul's at London ; he built that Ship called the Royal Sovereign, whose Burthen was 1636 Tons, her Length 127 Feet, her Breadth within the Planks 46 Feet, her Depth from her Breadth 19 Feet, carrying 100 Pieces of Ordnance wanting four ; her Lanthorn so large, that ten Men might stand in it ; her Building cost 80,000 Pounds.

In the last Year of King James the First, and first of King Charles the First, (viz. 1625.) the Plague began in White-Chapel in London, in the same House, on the same Day of the Month, with the same Number that died 22 Years before, when Queen Elizabeth departed this Life. Of this Plague there died in all within the Bills of Mortality, 41,313, besides of other Diseases 8,848.

A. D. 1632, and February the 11th, happened a great Fire on London Bridge.

A. D. 1635, Thomas Parre died, being aged 152 Years, and was buried in the Abbey-Church in Westminster.

C H A R L E S II.

1648. *J*anuary the 30th, Charles II. was then in Holland when his Father King Charles I. was murdered; and that Tail of a Parliament sitting at Westminster, were resolved, instead of admitting him the lawful Heir unto the Government of England, to assume it to themselves. To which End, they first set forth a Proclamation, That no Person whatsoever should presume to proclaim, or any Way to promote Charles Stuart, Son of Charles Stuart, late King of England, or any other Person, to be King or Chief Magistrate of these Kingdoms; but he that should attempt any such Thing, should be adjudged a Traytor. After this, they voted the House of Lords to be useless and dangerous, and kingly Government to be unnecessary and burthensome, and therefore they abolished both. However, the Marquis of Ormond caused his Majesty to be publicly proclaimed King of Ireland, and the Scotch Parliament did the like in Scotland. But the Members of Westminster having a victorious Army on their Side, proceeded to establish their Projects; caused all publick Writings to be issued out in the Name of the Keepers of the Liberties of England by Authority of Parliament; ordering a new Great Seal to be made, with the Cross and Harp on one Side, and this Inscription, The Great Seal of England; on the other Side, the Picture of the House of Commons, with this Inscription, In the first Year of Freedom by God's Bless- ing restored, 1648. And afterward they appointed, that all Monies to be coined, should be stamped with the Cross and Harp on one Side, and the Cross on the other, with this Motto, The Commonwealth of England, God with us. And instead of the Oaths of Supremacy and Allegiance, they imposed an Engagement upon the People, To be true and faithful to the Commonwealth, as it was then established without King or House of Lords. A Council of State they constituted by the Name of the Keepers of the Liberties of England, consisting of Forty Persons, who were to have the executive Part of the Government. Thus was England's ancient Government soon changed by about Fifty Persons, who styled themselves a Parliament, and the Representative Body of England. The Maxim upon which they grounded these their Alterations, and all other their illegal Proceedings, was this, That all Power and Authority is originally in the People; and that they were the People's Representative. When this Junto had made such a Model of Government, they erected another High Court of Injustice for the Tryal of Duke Hamilton, as Earl of Cambridge, of the Earls of Holland and Norwich, the Lord Capel, and Sir John Owen, all which were condemned to die for engaging in their Sovereign's Cause; but the Earl of Norwich and Sir John Owen were reprieved; the other three were beheaded in the Palace Yard at Westminster.

March

March the 9th. The ever Loyal Lord Capel, in his Speech on the Scaffold, declared, That he died against the Justice of the known Laws of the Land, and for no other Cause than his asserting the Fifth Commandment; prayed heartily for the King, for his Restoration, long Life and Prosperity; shutting up his Speech with a Profession of his Chearfulness in forgiving his Enemies. Other good Subjects they put to Death in other Places of the Nation, as Lieutenant Colonel Morris, Mr. Beaumont a Minister, Major Monday, and Cornet Blackburn. And many were the Loyal Persons that were now proscribed, and had their Estates confiscated, as the Marquis of Newcastle, Earl of Bristol, the Lords Cottington, Widdrington, Culpepper, Byron, Sir Edward Hyde, Sir Philip Musgrave, Sir Marmaduke Langdale, Sir Richard Greenvill, and others. And all that had been in actual Arms for the King, or other Service, were forced to compound for their Estates, if they had any, to the great impoverishing of the Royal Party.

A. D. 1649, April the 7th, the Members at Westminster, for the better Supply of their Army, and taking away Free-Quarter, passed an Act for levying of 90,000 l. a Month upon England for Six Months. Then took into Consideration the Sale of Dean and Chapters Lands.

May the 15th, divers Troops of the Army for mutinying were surprized by Fairfax at Burford, where some few of the Ringleaders were shot to Death, and the rest disbanded. There were of that Party a People called Levellers, who in those Times of Distraction would have all Things in the Commonwealth ordered according to their wild Humours, and yet all their Cry was for the Liberties of Free-born Englishmen. 1649.

About this Time Dr. Dorislaus, whom the disloyal Members had sent over as their Agent into Holland, was slain there by Colonel Whitford, a Scotch-man; and not long after, one Ascham, another of their Agents sent into Spain, was there also slain by one Sparks.

May the 30th, in the City of London, England was proclaimed a Free State. And June the 13th, the House ordered that no Ceremony should be used to the King's Children, the Duke of Gloucester, and Lady Elizabeth, then in the Junto's Custody.

In Ireland, the King's Lieutenant, the Marquis of Ormond, in order to promote the King's Cause there, concluded a Peace with the Irish, and June the 22d he besieged the City of Dublin; but August the 2d, Colonel Michael Jones, with his whole Strength, being between 8 and 9,000, sallied out upon the Besiegers, who were 19,000 Horse and Foot, and routed them totally, slew of them about 3000, took Prisoners 2517, took all the Marquis's Train of Artillery and Ammunition, and a very rich Booty in the Camp. August the 16th, Oliver Cromwell landed with his Forces at Dublin, and after a short Stay there, marched with great Expedition against Tredagh, or Drogheda, where Sir Arthur Ashton was Governor; the Defendants of the Town did bravely behave themselves, however Oliver gained it by Storm, giving strict Orders to his Soldiers, that they should afford Quarter neither to Man, Woman, nor Child, but should kill all. He vowed to one of his Commanders, That he would sacrifice their Bodies to the Souls of the Englishmen they had formerly 1650. merly murdered. Next Oliver besieged Wexford, which, through the Treachery of one Strafford, was yielded : And shortly after this many engarrisoned Towns were reduced by Oliver's Forces. The Plantation of Virginia, that had refused Subjection to the new Republick of England, was forced to a Conformity by Sir George Ayscough's Fleet.

October 23, Mr. John Lilbourn, the Leader of the Levelling Party, one that had Wit enough, but of a thwarting turbulent Spirit, was try'd at Guildhall in London, for writing against the Members at Westminster, and their Council of State ; but he so well pleaded his Cause, and had so lucky a Jury, that he was quit in despite of his Judges.

Now, or near this Time, sprung up a beastly Generation, call'd Ranters, who gloried in and practised all manner of Lasciviousness.

About this Time Prince Rupert, the King's Admiral, was distressed and put to his Shifts by the Junto's Fleet, losing most of his Ships, with his Brother Prince Maurice, who was then cast away.

A. D. 1650, in the Beginning of this Year, the truly loyal and magnanimous Marquiss of Montrose was defeated in Scotland by Major General Straughan ; the Marquiss himself, by quitting his Horse, and shifting into an ordinary Highlander's Habit, found Means to escape for the present, but his Standard was taken, in which was pourtray'd the Head of K. Charles I. lying a bleeding, and severed from the Body, with this Motto, Judge and revenge my Cause, O Lord. The Marquiss, after some Days wandring about in by-places, came to the Laird of Aston's House, a Person whom the Marquiss had done several Kindnesses for ; but this false Scot, whether for Fear or Lucre, betrayed this distressed Peer into the Hands of his Enemy David Lesley, who sent him to the City of Edinburgh, where the common Hangman met him at the Town's End, and first pulled off his Hat, then forced him into a Cart, which had a high Chair placed in it, in which the Marquiss was seated, that thereby he might be the more obnoxious to the Scorn of the Vulgar. But his noble Soul was not at all dismayed, for God he said, did all the while most comfortably manifest his Presence to him, and furnished him with Courage to overlook the Reproaches of Men, and to behold him for whose Cause he suffered.

After the Sentence of Parliament was passed for the bereaving him of his Life, he expressed to them how much he was beholden to them for the Honour they had conferred on him ; For, said he, I account it a greater Honour to have my Head stoned on the Prison Gate for my Loyalty to my King, than to have my Picture placed in his Bed-chamber : And I wish I had Flesh enough, not only to be set up in four Cities, but to have a Piece of it sent to every City in Christendom, for a Testimony of my Loyalty to my King and Country.

May the 31st, he was brought to the Place of Execution, where being mounted on a Scaffold, he told the People, That God doth sometimes suffer a just Man to perish in his Righteousness, and a wicked Man to prosper in his Wickedness ; praying God to forgive his Enemies, for he did ; declared, That what he had done in that Kingdom was in Obedience to the most just Commands of his Sovereign.

ign. That he esteemed the late lived a Saint, and died a martyr; prayed God he might so as he had done: That he believed never People could be more happy, than they might in his presented Majesty: Gave God Thanks that he went to Heaven's Throne with Joy, though Death looked upon him in its most ugly Shape.
Then desired their Charity and Prayers, concluding thus: I leave my Soul to God, my Service to my Prince, my Good-will to my Friends, and my Name and Charity to you 11. Then having prayed a while, he received from the Executioner a board, whereat hung a Declaration of his Fact, to hang about his Neck, which accordingly he hung there, saying, That he thought himself not more honoured by the Garter, than by that Cord and Paper;

adding, That if they had any more Dishonour to put upon him, he was ready to accept it. And then, with a chearful Countenance, he submitted himself to the Execution of the Sentence, to be hang'd on a Gallows thirty Foot high, for three Hours.
Which being done, he was taken down, and had his Head cut off, which was fixed on Edinburgh Tal- booth; his Quarters were sent to be set up in several Places, and the rest of his mortal Parts to be buried under the Gallows.

This may serve for a Taste of the Rebellious and Diabolical Spirit of that malicious Consistory. When this noble Lord first heard of the Murder of King Charles I. 'tis said, that with the Point of his Sword he wrote,

Great, Good, and Just, could I but rate
My Grievs, and thy too rigid Fate;
I'd weep the World to such a Strain,
That it should deluge once again.
But since thy loud-tongu'd Blood demands Supplies
More from Briareus Hands, than Argus Eyes,
I'd therefore sing thy Obsequies with Trumpet Sounds,
And write thy Epitaph with Blood and Wounds.

Shortly after the Death of this King, an Agreement was concluded betwixt the King and the Scots at Utrecht, from whence the King went to the Hague, and took Shipping for Scotland; and at the Spoyn in the North of that Country, he safely arrived; hereupon the Members of Westminster fearing lest the Scots should invade them, resolv'd to invade Scotland, and to make that the Seat of War; in order to which, they sent for their Idol Cromwell of Ireland, whom at his coming to London they made their Captain-General, for Thomas Lord
 Fairfax laid down his Commission, as not willing to engage against his Presbyterian Brethren the Scots.

on, as not willing to engage against his Presbyterian Brethren the Scots.

June the 28th, this new Captain-General Oliver advanced with his Army towards Scotland. August the 10th, King Charles the First's Statue in the Royal Exchange, by Order of the Westminster Members, was defaced (the Head being broken off) and this Inscription set over, Exit Tyrannus Re- gum ultimus, Anno Libertatis Angliae restitutæ primo, Anno 1648, January the 30th. And about the same Time were the King's Arms ordered to be erased in all publick Places;

1650. Places; and in Lieu of them the States Arms (being St. George's Cross and the Harp) were set up in Courts of Judicature.

August the 22d, was Colonel Eusebius Andrews beheaded on Tower-Hill, for receiving a Commission from his Majesty. In Scotland the English Army under Oliver having made themselves Masters of some Garrisons on September the First, marched to Dunbar, whither the Scotch Army followed them, and pent them up on a Neck of Land not a Mile and a half from Sea to Sea; great were the Streights of the English Army at that Time, many of the Soldiers being sick and disabled, and the whole Army shut up as it were in a Pound; but these Extremities, instead of disheartning them, set the greater Edge to their Courages, and resolv'd they were on September the 3d, 1650, either to force their Way through their Enemies, or nobly to die in the Attempt; to which End, a Party was sent to gain Cowper's Perth-pass from the Scots; which being effected, the whole English Army charged, and after about an Hour's hot Engagement, the Scotch Horse were routed, and thereupon the Foot threw down their Arms, and made the best Use they could of their Legs. In the Scots Army were this Day near 16,000 Foot, and 6,000 Horse, whereof 4,000 were slain, and near 10,000 taken Prisoners. The English Army were not above 7,500 Foot, and 3,500 Horse, besides disabled Men. There were taken from the Scots in this Fight 27 Field-pieces, 10,000 Arms, many Prisoners of Note, and near 200 Horse and Foot Colours, which were afterwards hung up as Trophies in Westminster-Hall.

September the 8th, the virtuous Princess Elizabeth died in her Confinement at Carebrook-Castle in the Isle of Wight. And in August following the Prince of Orange died at the Hague in Holland; and some Time after this, the Mock-Parliament, to free England of the Royal Blood, sent the Duke of Gloucester to Heidelberg, ordering him an Allowance of 1,500 l. per Annum.

October the 8th, some Cavaliers took Arms in Norfolk, for which about Twenty of them were executed.

December the 24th, the strong Castle of Edinburgh was yielded in to the English Hands, tho' not without Suspicion of some Treachery.

January the 1st, To begin the New-Year, the Scots crowned his Majesty at Scoon in Scotland, after he had conceded to some Kirk Conditions. A little before this time there were three different Parties in Scotland; David Lesley and his Army were for King and Kirk, the Marquis of Montrose and his Followers were for the King without the Kirk; and Colonel Kerre and Straughan, were for the Kirk without the King. Colonel Kerre's Party was routed, and himself taken Prisoner by Colonel Lambert; and Straughan and Swinton deserted the Kirk, complying with the English, for which the Kirk excommunicated them.

March the 4th, Sir Henry Hyde was beheaded before the Royal Exchange, because being the King's Leaguer at Constantinople, he had oppos'd Bendish, who was sent thither by the States of England.

The Quakers about this time first appeared; one George Fox (called by them the Elder, there being another of the same Name of a later Date among them) was the original Rife of them. Their beginning certainly was very prodigious, and being being first taken with Swellings in their Bodies, as if ready to burst, with Shakings and Tremblings (thence called Quakers) and many Times committing strange ridiculous Extravagancies.

A. D. 1651, March 29, was Captain Brown Rushel, an expert Seaman, beheaded under the Scaffold on Tower-hill, for taking Part with his Sovereign.

In Ireland, the Deputy thereof, Irton, was very successful against the Marquis of Ormond, the Lord Inchequin, Marquis Clinkard, Earl of Castlehaven, and other the King's Friends, taking many Garrisons from them; the like did Oliver in Scotland from the King's Friends there.

Howbeit, his Majesty hoping that now at length England might be favourable to his just Cause, he advances into England by the Way of Carlisle, with about 16,000 Men, bending his Course by a swift March for the West of England, though it was hoped by his Friends he would have directed his Course for London. But August the 23d, the King with his Army entered the City of Worcester, and Cromwell with all Haste marched after him, by the Way joining with Fleetwood, Desborough, the Lord Grey of Groby, Lambert, Harrison, and the Militia Forces of several Counties; so that his Army, when he was come to Worcester, could not amount to fewer than 80,000 Men. In Lancashire the Earl of Derby had raised for the King near 1500 Horse and Foot, against whom Colonel Lilbourn marched, and routed them, taking many Persons of Quality; the Earl of Derby himself with much ado escaped to the King at Worcester, where on that twice fatal, but once lucky Day, September the 3d, his Majesty being surrounded by his Enemies, resolved to sally upon them with his whole Force, which accordingly he did; and at the first made the disloyal Party retire somewhat disorderly, the King himself performing the Part of a valiant Soldier at the Head of his Horse. But at length his Army being overpowered by the numerous fresh Supplies of his Enemies, his Majesty's Side was put to the worst, his Horse flying again towards the North, and his Foot into Worcester, whither they were followed at the Heels by their Victors, who entered the City with them, which they plundered, killing and taking most of the Scots Prisoners; those Horse that fled were pursued, and great Part of them taken; and the poor straggling Scots were either made Prisoners, or killed by the Country People. The Number of the King's Party slain were judged to be about 3000, and of Prisoners taken in the Whole about 10,000, amongst which were Duke Hamilton, the Earls of Shrewsbury, Derby, Cleveland, Lauderdale, Rotho, Carnwath, and Killy, the Lord Synclair, Sir John Packington, Sir Charles Cunningham, Sir Ralph Clare, Major-General Piscotty, Major-General Montgomery, Colonel Graves, Mr. Fanshawe the King's Secretary, the Adjutant-General, Marshal-General, General of the Ordnance, together with 5 Colonels of Horse, 13 of Foot, 17 Lieutenant-Colonels, 19 Majors, 109 Captains; there were also taken 158 Colours, the King's Standard, Coach and Horses, Collar of SS's, and Star-Cloak, with other Things of great Value. His Majesty, in his Escape, endeavoured to go for Scotland, but missing his Way the first Night, was conducted by the Earl of Derby to a House called 1651.

Bojocobel,

Q

1652.

Boscobel, inhabited by one Pendrel, a faithful Person, and seated in a fine Grove in Shropshire, upon the Confines of Staffordshire. While he was here, his Majesty was obliged to keep out all Day in the Wood, to avoid the Search of the Parliament Soldiers, who frequently visited the Place; where his Majesty with Colonel Carlisle sat all Day in a large thick Oak. From hence he wander'd in Disguise, and after many Disappointments and providential Escapes, he came at last at Six Weeks End to Shoreham in Sussex, from whence he got Passage, and in a short Time arrived safe at Frecam, near Havre de Grace in France, although his Foes had all that Time been making the strictest Search imaginable.

A little before this Fight at Worcester, divers Persons, many of them Presbyterian Ministers, were seized on for holding Correspondence with Charles Stuart (none might, as they loved their Lives and Estates, call him King) and on August the 22d, were two of them, namely, Mr. Christopher Love, Minister, and Mr. Gibbons, beheaded on Tower-Hill.

The common Prisoners, Scotch and English, taken at Worcester, were sent up to London; and that they might no farther trouble the States of England, they were transported into foreign Plantations.

October the 15th, the Earl of Derby was beheaded, and Sir Timothy Featherstonhaugh died the same Death also, for the same Crime, viz. for honouring the King. In short time after the Fight of Worcester, the Mock-Parliament had the welcome News of reducing the Isle of Man, the Barbadoes, the Isle of Jersey, and Cornet Castle in Guernsey; but a little to allay their Transport, they had the unwelcome News of the Death of their Admiral Popham, and Ireton their Deputy of Ireland; this last died of the Plague under the Walls of Limerick, but was buried in great State in Westminster-Abbey.

All was now in a Calm at Home, and Scotland and Ireland both almost subjected to the English States; they therefore in this leisure Time judged it seasonable to vindicate themselves on the United Netherlands, for the Affronts done to their Ambassadors, Oliver St. John and Walter Strickland, in Holland, and their encroaching on the English Merchants Trade, and slighting the English States, who preferred strict Amity and Alliance with them.

Hereupon they prohibited the importing any foreign Commodities, except upon English Bottoms, or such as were of the Country whence the Goods came, beginning withal to stand high upon the Claim of Dues, and Reparations for the Prejudice done the English in their Trading; and when no Satisfaction would be given, but the Dutch grew rather more lordly, calling into question the English Sovereignty in the narrow Seas, and refusing to give the English the Honour of the FLAG, the States of England resolved to beat them into better Manners. And in the Year 1652 May 19, was the first Sea-fight between the States of England and the Netherlands; the Fight continued about four Hours, till the Night parted them, without much Cause of boasting on either Part that which was, the English had Right to. But shortly after this Admiral Blake took twelve Dutch Men of War.

August the 16th, Sir George Ascough, with a Squadron of seven Ships, charged through and through through the Dutch Fleet, consisting of sixty Men of War, in which Encounter Captain Pack was slain.

September the 5th, as the French Fleet (who took Part with the Dutch) were going to the Relief of Dunkirk, most of them were taken by Admiral Blake; and about the Conclusion of the same Month, the Dutch were banged to Purpose by Blake, at a Place called the Kentish Knock, and were pursued by the English into their very Harbour. But in the Beginning of Winter, Blake was worried by the Dutch in the Doons, losing the Garland, Bonaventure, and two Merchantmen. Upon the 18th, 19th, and 20th Days of February, the two Fleets fought again, when the Dutch were forced to fly, the English taking fifty-two of the Merchantmen they had in Convoy, and nine Men of War.

A. D. 1653, April the 20th Oliver Cromwell took upon him to put a Period to the sitting of those long-winded Members at Westminster, objecting to them when he came to displace them, That they delayed, if not utterly neglected the redressing of publick Grievances; that they designed their own Interest, and perpetuating themselves, therefore they were to sit there no longer. Instead of these Members turned out of Doors, Oliver and his Officers constituted a Council of State to rule the Common-wealth, though they resolved to rule the Council of State.

June the 2d, the English and Dutch Fleets engaged again in Fight, when at the very first Shot made by the Dutch, Admiral Richard Dean, was slain. June the 3d, the Fleets joyned again, and the Dispute was very hot and bloody, till at length the Dutch tacked about, and made haste to their own Coasts. Of the Dutch were taken Prisoners 6 Captains, 1350 others, 11 Men of War were taken, and 2 Hoys, 6 of their best Ships were sunk, and 2 blown up. Of the English were slain, besides Admiral Dean, one Captain and 120 others, but not one Ship lost or disabled.

Cromwell this while, with some of the leading Officers of the Army, had made Choice of certain Persons not above 150 for the three Nations, who were to have the Legislative Power, and to be stiled a Parliament. These Parliament-Gentlemen, and Soldiers of the new-fashioned Election, met July the 4th, at Westminster, where they chose Mr. Rouse for their Speaker: But not agreeing among themselves (for about sixty of them contested hard for the taking away of Tithes from the Ministers as Antichristian) they fairly re-delivered their Power into Oliver's Hands, December the 12th, after they had enacted a Law, That Justices of the Peace, and not Ministers, should join Persons together in sacred Wedlock.

But while this cunning Thing called a Parliament was doing little, or little to the Purpose, the active Dutch were again put forth to Sea, with about 120 Men of War, and before the Texel were encountered by the English, July the 29th; the Fight was vigorously maintained on both Parts, till the Dutch Admiral Van Trump, fighting in the midst of the English Fleet, was with a Musquet shot shot into the left Pap, and slain out-right, whereby the rest of the Fleet was so discouraged, that they made to the Texel as speedily as they could. The Dutch in this Fight lost thirty Men of War, and about 1200 of their Men were taken. The English had slain on their Part, Graves, Owen, Chapman, Newman, Taylor,
Q 2 Crisp,

1654. Crisp, Cox, and Peacock, Captains, and 400 common Seamen. The Ship named the Oak was fired, and two or three disabled. For this eminent Piece of Service the little Parliament ordered, that Chains of Gold should be presented to the Admirals, Blake and Colonel George Monk, Vice-Admiral Pen, and Rear-Admiral Lawson; and that other Chains likewise should be presented to divers Flag-Captains, and Medals of Silver to the Officers of the Fleet.

But to return to Oliver, who, after his patched Junto had dissolved themselves, called a Council of Officers, with some other of his Creatures, to consult about the Settlement of a Government; and these at length, after great Pretences of seeking God's Mind herein, concluded to have a single Person again to be the Head of the Commonwealth of England, Scotland, and Ireland, and the Dominions and Territories thereunto belonging, and Oliver Cromwell must be the Man, who though awhile seeming unwilling to undertake so great a Charge, yet at length yielded, and accordingly was installed Lord Protector of the Commonwealth of England, with much Formality and Ceremony, in the Chancery-Court at Westminster, before the Judges, the Lord-Mayor and Aldermen of London, with the Chief Officers of the Army, on December the 16th. Immediately after which, all publick Writings changed their Stile from that of The Keepers of the Liberties of England, to that of Oliver Lord Protector of England, &c. And the City of London to manifest their Good-liking of this Government and Governor (at least to make Shew of it) invited the Protector to a magnificent Feast at Grocer's-hall, on February the 8th, and Oliver to gratify them for this Favour, knighted Thomas Viner, then Lord-Mayor.

Aspiring Cromwell having thus obtained the Supreme Authority, in short time yielded to a Peace with the Dutch, who had been brought exceeding low by the War with England.

A. D. 1654, and in the Month of May, upon an Accusation of a Plot to destroy the Protector, seize the Tower, raise an Army, and bring in the King, there were divers Royalists apprehended and committed to Prison; three of them were condemned by a High Court of Injustice, and two of them executed, namely, Colonel John Gerrard, who was beheaded on Tower-Hill, and Mr. Vowel, who was hanged at Charing-Cross. On the same Day with Colonel Gerrard was beheaded Don Pantaleon Sa, Brother to the Portugal Ambassador, for a Riot made in the New Exchange; but Death was so terrible to this Person, that his Heart was nigh quite dead within him before his Neck came to the Block.

September the 3d, a pretended Parliament met at Westminster, where, after they had heard their Master Oliver's Speech, and chose William Lenthall for their Speaker, they debated whether the Legislative Power should be in a single Person and a Parliament, or in a Parliament only. The Protector's Faction were for the former; those called the Commonwealth Party, that were for a Democratical Government, were for the latter; one declaring, That as God had made him an Instrument in cutting down Tyranny in one Person, so now he would not endure to see the Nation's Liberties shackled by another, whose Right to the Government 1655.

vernment could be measured out no other Way than by the Length of his Sword. But when these Things were reported to the Usurper Oliver, he hastened from Whitehall to Westminster, and there declares to the Parliament, that he would have them to take Notice of this, That the same Government made him a Protector, as made them a Parliament: That as they were intrusted with some Things, so was he with others: That there were certain Fundamentals which could not be altered; as, That the Government should be in a single Person and Parliament: That Parliaments should not be perpetual: That in Religious Matters there should be Liberty of Conscience, &c. And then he enjoyned them to sign this Recognition of the Government, viz. I do hereby promise and engage to be true and faithful to the Lord Protector and Commonwealth of England, Scotland, and Ireland, and shall not, (according to the Tenor of the Indenture, whereby I am returned to serve in Parliament) propose, or give my Consent to alter the Government as 'tis settled in one Person and a Parliament. The Subscription to this was refused by several Members; the rest who subscribed it were permitted to sit till January the 24th, 1654; at which Time Oliver dissolved them, because they delayed to settle him in the Government.

December the 19th, Pen and Venables, with a Fleet of Thirty Ships, wherein were three thousand Forces, put to Sea; and in April following arrived at Hispaniola, and came within Sight of that Golden Town Sancta Domingo, upon which their first and chief Enterprize was designed; but thro' the excessive Heat of the Clime,

Want of fresh Water, and some other Discouragements, great Numbers of the Soldiers perished, and that Design was fruitless; therefore they set Sail for the Island of Jamaica, where being arrived, they were there so successful, as in short time to possess themselves of the chief Town called Otranto, bringing the whole Island into Subjection.

In England the Royal Party were busy to take down the Protector's Greatness; but the Plot was discovered before it was ripe for Execution, and many of the Conspirators in several Places seized on by the Oliverians. At Salisbury, March the 11th, a Party of about 200 Cavaliers were in Arms, but were dispersed, and some of their chief Leaders taken, as Mr. Grove, Lieutenant-Colonel Penraddock, Major Dean, Jones, &c. Others there were in Arms about Shrewsbury, Sherwood Forest in Northumberland; and another Party in Yorkshire, where Sir Henry Slingby was taken. Lieutenant Colonel Penraddock, and Mr. Grove, were beheaded at Salisbury, and some others of them were hanged.

A. D. 1655, about the Beginning of this Year, Admiral Blake with his Fleet performed a daring Piece of Service at Tunis, where demanding from the Dey or Governor of Tunis the Reparation for the Losses the English sustained from Turkish Pirates, and having a scornful Answer returned, he boldly pressed upon their Ships lying under the Castle of Goletta, and there burnt nine Ships, with but the Loss of 25 Men; in the mean time plying continued Broadfides upon the Castle, within Musket-shot of it.

In England the Protector constituted a new kind of Officers called 1657. Major-Generals, who were each of them (being eleven in Number) in their several Limits assigned them to supervise the Actions of the poor Royalists, and to decimate their Estates, and indeed to do what they listed; but these after they had tyrannized a while were laid aside.

February the 16th, the Spaniards at Dunkirk declared open War against England, and immediately thereupon was a Peace concluded betwixt France and England; one of the Articles of which was, That the King of France should exclude Charles Stuart, (King of England) and all his Relations and Adherents, out of his Dominions. And accordingly the Duke of York was complimented to depart France by such a Time; nor was his Retinue to stay after him: Had his Majesty himself been there, he must have expected the same Dealing.

February the 21st, died that learned Prelate Dr. Usher, Archbishop of Armagh, and was buried in Westminster-Abbey.

A. D. 1656, to begin this Year well for fortunate Oliver, some of his Fleet under the Admirals Blake and Mountague, not far from Cadix or Cales, set upon a Fleet of eight Spaniards, one of which they sunk, burnt two, one run ashore, and two the English took, one whereof had a great Quantity of Plate and Cochineal in her, the other laden chiefly with Hides.

September the 17th, another of Oliver's Parliaments assembled at Westminster, where, before they were admitted to enter the House, they must severally engage not to act any thing prejudicial to the present Government; whereupon some of them returned Home; the rest entering the House, chose Sir Thomas Widdrington their Speaker, and set themselves to act suitably to Oliver's Wishes, passing an Act for renouncing and disannulling the Title of Charles Stuart unto the Government of the Nations of England, Scotland, and Ireland, &c. and making it to be Treason against the Protector, as it formerly had been against the King's Person; then ordained Monies to be raised in the three Nations for paying the Armies; and ordered a Year's Rent to be paid the Protector for every House built upon a new Foundation within Ten Miles of the City of London.

Yet notwithstanding the Provision made to secure the Protector's Person, there were divers Attempts made to kill him, and a printed Paper was published, intituled, Killing no Murther. One Miles Sindercomb, formerly a Soldier in the Army, had determined to shoot, or by one Means or other to rid the World of him; but his Design being betrayed, he was condemned to be hanged and quartered; to prevent which, he procured his own Death, it is said, by snuffing up a poisonous Powder into his Head; wherefore, as a Self-murderer, he was dragged at a Horse's Tail from the Tower to Tower-Hill, where being turned naked into a Hole, a Stake spiked with Iron was driven through him.

A. D. 1657, this Year commenced with a Conspiracy of Fifth Monarchists to have pulled down Oliver; but the Plot was discovered, and the Projectors apprehended; the chief of whom was Major-General Harrison, Vice-Admiral Lawson, Colonel Rich, Major Danvers, and Captain Venner; their Standards, which they had in Readiness, had pourtray'd in it a Lion Couchant, Gules, in a Field Argent, with this Motto, Who shall rouse him?

April

April the 20th, Admiral Blake performed another notable Exploit; for at Sancta Cruz in Teneriffa, the chief Island of the Canaries and belonging to the Spaniards, he fired and sunk 16 great Ships, among which was the Admiral, Vice-Admiral, and Rear-Admiral, and two or three Galleons. The Spaniards, besides the Loss of the whole Fleet, had many hundred of Men slain on the Shore; yet in this notable Action, the English had but 48 Men slain, and 120 wounded. The Protector, to gratify the Admiral for this his brave Service, sent him a Diamond Ring worth 500 l. and Captain Richard Stainer, who led the first Squadron, was at his coming into England, for this and his other good Service at Cadiz, honoured with Knighthood.

And now the Parliament, who had been long debating concerning the settling of his Highness, at last presented him with a certain thing called, The Humble Petition and Advice, desiring him to take the Government of the three Nations upon him, with the Stile of King; which Stile he refused, as foreseeing this would disgust the Sectarists generally; therefore contented himself with the Power Royal, and his old Stile of Lord Protector, which the Parliament confirmed. And June the 26th, his Highness was with great State and Magnificence installed in his Office of Protectorship in Westminster-Hall; where the Speaker, in the Name of the Parliament, presented him with a Robe of Purple Velvet, lined with Ermine, a Sword, a large Bible richly gilt and bossed, and a Sceptor of Gold. And when the Speaker, Earl of Warwick, and Sir Bulstrode Whitlock, had vested Oliver, then the Speaker administered the Oath to him in these following Words: I do in the Presence, and by the Name of God, promise and swear, That to the utmost of my Power I will uphold and maintain the true Reformed Protestant Religion in the Purity thereof, as it is contained in the Holy Scriptures of the Old and New Testaments, and encourage the Profession and Professors thereof; and that, to the utmost of my Power, I will endeavour, as chief Magistrate of these three Nations, the Maintenance and Preservation of the Peace and Safety, and just Rights and Privileges of the People thereof; and shall in all things, according to my best Knowledge and Power, govern the People according to Law. This Oath being taken by him, he was immediately proclaimed Lord Protector of the Common-wealth of England, &c. and that done, some Soldiers and others cried, God save the Lord Protector. Oliver thus established in his Mightiness by Parliament, he falls to fashion his Family after the Manner of a King's Court; hath his Yeomen of the Guard, in their Livery of Grey Cloth welted with black Velvet, over whom commanded Walter Strickland; his Lord Keeper was Nathaniel Fines; and Lord Chamberlain Sir Gilbert Pickering, &c. And the better to strengthen himself at Home, and to raise his Family into Esteem, he gave his eldest Son a Command in the Army, his younger Son he made Lord Deputy of Ireland; his two younger Daughters, that were not yet disposed of in Marriage, he matched the elder of them with Mr. Robert Rich, the Earl of Warwick's Grandson, and the youngest with a Person of great Honour, the Lord Falconbridge. And that he might be 1657.

1658. as King-like as possible, and withal check the Commons in Parliament, he constituted an Upper House of Parliament, instead of the House of Lords, sixty-two in Number, most of them his own Creatures; among whom were Colonel Hewson, one by Trade next kin to a Cobler, and Colonel Pride, formerly a Brewer's Servant; who before this had been made two of his Knights Errants. And, to honour the Mushrooms, he elected to sit in his Upper House some few Noblemen, as the Earl of Warwick, &c.

February the 20th, the Parliament, that had been adjourned, now re-assembled; but because they admitted those Members to sit with them, who at first refused to subscribe to Oliver's Instruments; and because they questioned the Protector's Power in erecting his Upper House, (which in Contempt they called, The other House;) Oliver hereupon sent for them to his Upper House Bar, where he made a long Speech to them, and in Conclusion told them, That it did concern as well the Peace and Tranquility of the Nation, as his own Interest, to terminate that Parliament, and therefore he did at this Time put an End to their Sitting.

In or near the Year of our Redemption, 1657, a Woman and two Men (one or both her Sons) were hanged in Gloucestershire for murdering one Mr. Harrison, an Inhabitant in or near Cambden in the said County, which Mr. Harrison (as in some few Years after it proved) was not murdered by them, or any other; for he returned from beyond Sea, whither he had withdrawn himself privately, to avoid some Trouble that otherwise he feared would befall him,

A. D. 1658, this Year began with a Discovery of a most horrible Plot, as Oliver called it; and indeed he had an excellent Art for the Discovery of Plots, having his mercenary Trepanners and Instruments of Falshood, who counterfeiting themselves forward Royalists, thereby insinuated themselves into the Council of the King's Friends, and then betrayed them. And the King himself was troubled with one of these false Creatures about his own Person; for Captain Manning, one of his Secretaries Clerks, was taken in the very Act of receiving Letters from Thurloe, Oliver's Secretary, for the which he was instantly shot to Death. But the Loyal Confederates in the late discovered Plot, were divers of them apprehended, as Dr. Hewit, Colonel Edward Ashton, Mr. Mordaunt, the Earl of Peterborough's Brother, and others, who were indicted of High Treason, for endeavouring to levy War against his Highness and the Government, and to promote Charles Stuart to the Government of these Nations, and for holding Correspondence with the said Charles Stuart. Mr. Mordaunt was acquitted; but Dr. Hewit and Sir Henry Slingsby were beheaded on Tower Hill, June the eighth, though many Endeavours were used by divers Persons of Quality, and Ministers, for the saving of their Lives, especially the Doctor's; Colonel Ashton and others were hanged and quartered in London.

Near about this Time there came up the Thames as far as Greenwich, a Whale of a very great Length and Bigness.

June the 25th, the Town of Dunkirk was surrendered by the Spaniards to the French, who immediately mediately resigned it to the English Forces, who had been the main Instruments in gaining it. This Resignation was made according to former Articles agreed on between the King of France and the Lord Protector of England.

But whilst the English were removing Abroad, Oliver had Occasion of Sorrow at Home; for his most dearly beloved Daughter Mrs. Elizabeth Claypole, on August the 14th departed this Life, whose Body was interred in the Royal Chapel at Westminster. It is said of this Gentlewoman, that she was much troubled at the harsh Usage of the Royal Party, and that upon her Knees she begged of her Father to save Dr. Hewit's Life; but his hard Heart would not yield thereunto, though he loved this Daughter passionately, that he never enjoyed himself after her Death; but growing pensive and melancholy; in short Time was seized with a Tertian Ague, which ended his Life at Whitehall, September the 10th. He was born in the Town of Stantington, April the 25th, 1599, and descended from a worshipful Family of the Cromwell's, alias Wilkins; his Mother was the Niece of Sir Robert Steward, and his Wife Elizabeth Daughter of Sir James Burchier; he was of a very martial Spirit, and of excellent Conduct, and attended with very good Success in his Attempts. Nor was he a Soldier only, but also a very good Orator, and deep Politician; and so great a Dissembler, that he could shed Crocodilian Tears at Pleasure, when those would at any Time advantage among the Religious; an high Pretender he was to Religion, though, as his Actions manifested, it was only thereby to obtain his ambitious End; so immoderately resolute for the Effecting his Designments, that he valued not the Violation of the most solid Promises, or sacred Oaths; nor the Shedding any, though the Blood of the Lord's Anointed. Yet was this Man courted or feared by most of the Princes in Europe; and the Kings of France and Sweden were entered into so strict a League with him, as, had he lived, might have troubled good Part of the World.

In Oliver's Stead, Richard Cromwell his eldest Son, whom he had appointed his Successor, was proclaimed Protector. Shortly after which, several Addresses, protesting both Love and Obedience to Richard's Highness, were presented from the Armies of the Three Nations, from the London Ministers, from divers Counties, Cities, and chief Towns of England. And the Foreign Ambassadors then in England pretended to lament with Mr. Richard for the Death of his Father; desired the Continuance of that League and Amity which was granted and maintained by his late Highness Oliver Lord Protector.

November the 23d, were the Funerals of Oliver solemnized (after his Horse had lain in the greatest State some Weeks in Somerfet-house) at a vast Charge, and in greater Pomp than had formerly been used for the greatest English Kings. His Corpse had been privately interred many Days before in the Chapel-Royal of Henry the Seventh at Westminster. But the vast Expences of those Funerals were never discharged; for those Tradesman, who had Hopes of gaining the most by it, sat down the greatest Losers at last. As soon as the Funeral Rites of this old Fox Oliver were accomplished, his Son Richard proceeded to the carrying on of Matters of publick Concernment.

The

CHARLES II.

The first of which was the sending a Naval Supply to the King of Sweden, for the aiding him against the King of Denmark. The next of any Moment was the calling of a Parliament, to convene January the 27th, at Westminster; where when they were met, they chose for their Speaker Mr. Challoner Chute; and the Members severally took the Oath, not to alter the Form of Government. Which done, they went to purge out those Members who had borne Arms for the King; then after many Debates, it was at length resolved, That the House of Commons would transact with the Persons of the other House, as a House of Parliament, during this present Parliament; but with this Proviso, That it was not intended thereby to exclude such Peers as have been faithful to the Parliament, from their Privilege of being summoned to be Members of that House.

Then they took into their Consideration the Cases of divers Persons who had been imprisoned in the Time of Oliver; Major-General Overton, and others of the Commonwealth Party, they released. The Duke of Buckingham was also freed out of Windsor-Castle, upon his Father-in-Law the Lord Fairfax's giving 20,000 l. Security, that he should not seek by any means to promote the Interest of Charles Stuart. Next, after long and tedious Debates, they yielded that the Members who had been returned to serve for Scotland and Ireland, should continue to sit amongst them as Members for that present Parliament. They likewise proceeded to draw up a Bill, which should be intitled, An Act of Recognition of his Highness's Right and Title to be Protector, and chief Magistrate of the Commonwealth of England, &c. But this was never perfected.

A. D. 1659. The Army now grew jealous of his Highness, complaining of the Company that he kept; how that divers of them were no better than Cavaliers; censuring his Religion also; giving out, that Godliness was discouraged by him; that he had rather favour those of loose Principles, than the zealous Professors of the Gospel.

April the 6th, General Charles Fleetwood presented to the Protector a Representation of the Officers of the Army, wherein they complained, That they who had born the Brunt of the War, were now despised, and like to be laid aside: That the Cavaliers held dangerous Meetings in and about London: That Lists of the Names of such who were the Tryers of the old King, were printed in red Letters, and scattered about as if they were Men appointed for Destruction: That the famous Actions of the Long Parliament and his late Highness, in and since 1648, were traduced and vilified. Therefore they desired that his Highness would be pleased to represent these Things to the Parliament, and procure their Remedies. The Army also began to grow jealous of the Parliament, as if they were too favourable to the Royal Party, and joined with the Protector to bring the Officers of the Army into Subjection. Thereupon the General Council of Officers held many Meetings and Consultations, which the Parliament hearing of, voted that there should be no Meeting nor General Council of Officers, without Consent and by Order of his Highness the Lord Protector: And that no Person should have any Command in the Army, who should refuse to subscribe

subscribe that he will not disturb the free Meetings in Parliament, or their Freedom in their Debates and Councils. These Votes the Protector sent to the Officers of the Army, which they valued not at all; but on the contrary resolv'd, that the Parliament should be dissolved. And in order thereunto, Deborah with other chief Officers, went to the Protector, and forced him to sign a Commission for the Parliament's Dissolution; and accordingly the Parliament was dissolved. Which being effected, their next Work was to put a Period to the Protector's Power, by restoring that Remnant of the Long Parliament which his Father had turned out; to which End the Officers of the Army invited those Members of Parliament, who continued sitting till April the 20th, 1653, and promised them that they would be ready in their Places to yield them their utmost Assistance that they might sit and act in Safety. These Members accepted their Invitation, and accordingly took their Places in the Parliament May the 7th; and upon Notice that these were again housed, divers of those that were secluded in 1648, attempted to have taken their Places, but were repulsed.

Then these Members caused the Protector's Great Seal to be broken, and voted their own old Seal up again. Then sent to the Protector for an Acknowledgment from him of his Submission to their Government; and accordingly on May the 25th, he made his Resignation and Submission; declaring in Writing, That though in respect to the particular Engagements that lay upon him, he could not be active in making a Change in the Government of these Nations, yet through the Goodness of God, he would freely acquiesce in its being made; 1659. and that he held himself engaged, as (with other Men) he expected Protection from the present Government, so to demean himself with all Peaceableness under it; and to procure to the utmost of his Power, that all, in whom he had Interest, should do the same. In short Time after this Henry Cromwell came over, and yielded up the Lieutenantancy of Ireland unto the Members sitting at Westminster, who appointed five Commissioners for the Government of that Kingdom. General Monk in Scotland conformed himself to their Directions; and Colonel Lockhart, Governor of Dunkirk, likewise submitted to their Authority.

Then this Junto commanded all such as had been in Arms for the King, to depart 20 Miles from London; passed an Act for settling of the Militia in the respective Counties of England and Wales; ordered a whole Year's Assessments at 35,000 l. a Month on England, 6,000 l. the Month on Scotland, and 9,000 l. on Ireland, to be paid into the Treasury before the 11th of August next following; ordered the immediate Sale of Whitehall, Hampton-Court, and Somerset-House, towards Payment of the Army's Arrears. To their quondam Protector they were so friendly, as to protect him from all Arrests, and withal to promise the Payment of all his Debts (for his Father's Funeral and other Occasions) which amounted to 29,640 l. but this they never performed.)

The while these Things were in Agitation, the King's Friends were very busy in promoting his Interest, by engaging as many as they could for his Service in all Places of England; and so successful were the King's Commissioners, that great 1659.
Part

Part of the Nobility and Gentry of England and Wales were interested by them in the King's Quarrel; and a Day was fixed in July for their appearing in Arms; the first Rising was to be chiefly of such as had never engaged on the King's Side in the late Wars, thereby to draw the Army into a more faint Opposition. Sir George Booth, Sir Thomas Middleton, and some others of the old Parliamentarians, raised a Party in Cheshire, Flintshire, and Lancashire, to the Number of about 3 or 4000 Men, who declared for a free Parliament, and the due Rights and Privileges of the Nation, against that Fanatick and unlawful Power which now usurped Dominion over them. But Major-General Lambert marching speedily against them, and encountring them, his old Soldiers, without much Blood-shed, totally routed them near Namptwich. August the 17th, Colonel Charles White raised a small Party in Nottingham and Derbyshire; other inconsiderable Parties were raised in other Parts, but dispersed themselves again; for the Rulers at Westminster, having met with some Hint of their designed Rising, had so ordered their Standing Army and Militia Forces in most Places of the Land, that no considerable Parties of the King's Friends could have Opportunity to get into a Body.

James Naylor, a Quaker, was now discharged from his Imprisonment, September the 8th. This Person, in the Time of Oliver's Protectorship, was for Blasphemy whipt both at Bristol and London, then pillory'd at the Royal Exchange, burnt through the Tongue, stigmatized in the Forehead with the Letter B (for Blasphemy) which done, was committed to Bridewell, where he remained till this Time, and might longer, had not Lambert been now in so high Esteem.

After the Defeat of Sir George Booth's Forces, the Members at Westminster prepared an Act for Sequestring of the Estates of such Persons as were engaged in this Rising; and in Token of their Favour and Gratitude, they ordered Lambert 1,000 l. for his good Service, which he presently distributed amongst his Soldiers, thereby to engage them the more firmly to his Designs: For though himself and other Grandees of the Army carried fair with the Junto, yet were they not well pleased with them, because since their last Sitting, they had somewhat lessened the Army's Power, in giving Order to their Speaker William Lenthall, to issue out Commissions for Commanders, which had been done before by the General; and had withal reserved the chief Command of the Army to themselves without any Captain General. Therefore now, whilst they were flustered with their late Victory, they drew up their Propositions to be presented to the Parliament, which they entituled, The humble Petition and Proposal of the Army, under the Right Honourable the Lord Lambert, in the late Northern Expedition, therein desiring that the Army might be commanded by Fleetwood as chief General, by Lambert as the next superior General, &c. This was sent up to London from Lambert's Army to be presented to the Parliament; but Sir Arth. Haslerig being made acquainted with it before it was delivered, immediately informed his Fellow-Members thereof, alledging that it was a Matter of dangerous Consequence. The Junto hereupon passed a Vote, That the having of more General Officers was a T and dang sicers of cating t

the whol into thei thereupon should b whatsoev lect Moni liament;
the Arm otherwise tenance;
That La
Berry, A vow, and missionate enjoy the ordered t my to h in whom reside; t Ludlow, and Hasle Complice
Tug wit be Maste engaged giments them; a giments t with the Parties h a hostile facing e ready to towards ties fair their rel next Da took car Doors, t might en now the laid afic Choice o wood to Army;
aspired t

was

was a Thing needful, chargeable, and dangerous. But the Army-Officers of Lambert's Party still prosecuting their Intentions, of gaining the whole Ordering of the Army into their own Hands, the Junto thereupon passed an Act, That it should be Treason in all Persons whatsoever, to raise, levy, or collect Monies without Consent of Parliament; designing hereby to bring the Army into Subjection, because otherwise they could have no Maintenance; they likewise ordered, That Lambert, Desborough, Kelsey, Berry, Ashfield, Cobbet, Packer, Barrow, and Creed, should be discom-missionated, and that others should enjoy their Commands. They also ordered the Government of the Army to be in seven Commissioners, in whom the Power should jointly reside; these were Fleetwood, Monk, Ludlow, Walton, Morley, Overton, and Haslerig. But Lambert and his Complices were resolved to try a Tug with the Junto, who should be Masters; and to that End they engaged divers Companies and Regiments about London to side with them; and the Junto drew two Regiments to Westminster to take part with them; but when these two Parties had stood at Westminster in a hostile Sort almost a whole Day, facing each other, and sometimes ready to fall to it in good Earnest; towards the Evening, the two Parties fairly agreed to draw off to their respective Quarters. And the next Day, and forward, Lambert took care to guard the Parliament-Doors, that none of the Members might enter into the House. And now the Junto being once more laid aside, Lambert's Party made Choice of Lieutenant-General Fleetwood to be Captain-General of the Army; Lambert (who 'tis thought aspired to Sovereignty) to be Major-General, and Desborough to be Commissary-General. They framed likewise a new Government, on October the 26th, nominating twenty-three Persons to have the Management of publick Affairs, whom they would have to be called, A Committee of Safety: Their Names were, Bulstrode Whitlock, Edmund Ludlow, Sir Henry Vane, Sir James Harrington, Sir Archibald Johnson, General Fleetwood, General John Lambert, Colonel Desborough, Colonel Sidenham, Major Saloway, Colonel Berry, Mr. Lawrence, Colonel Thomson, Colonel Hewson, Colonel Lilbourn, John Ireland, Lord-Mayor, Alderman Robert Tichburn, Walter Strickland, Cornelius Holland, William Steel, Clerk, Bennet, Brandrith. Thus was miserable England subjected to the arbitrary Power of an Army, to have what Lords and Laws they pleased. But the Time of its Liberty approached, the principal Instrument whereof was General George Monk, who pretending to a Resettlement of the Junto, and not to be able to see the Nation so enslaved by Lambert and his factious Party, drew his Army out of Scotland, having first changed some of his Officers. The Committee of Safety exceedingly courted this General to comply with them; and when that would not do, Lambert drew his Army into the North, with Design to impede General Monk's March to London; but all their Projects availed nothing with the General. And to help forward his Majesty's Interest, and the Nation's Deliverance, the City of London grew very discontented and furly against the Army; the Fleet declared for the Junto; likewise many of Lambert's Party withdrew themselves from him; and the Country in general was full of Discontents and 1659.

and Murmurings; insomuch that the Committee of Safety perceived themselves to be in a very unsafe and kind of desolate Condition; and therefore with great Submission they sent for the Speaker desiring him, with the rest of his Fellow-Members, to return to the Exercise of their Trust; which accordingly they did on December the 26th. Colonel Lambert finding that all now went bad on his Side, privately slipped away from his Soldiers (then about Newcastle upon Tyne) and they returned to their Obedience to the Junto; who upon their Resettlement, discomissionated Lambert, with divers Colonels and Commanders of the Army; published a Declaration for a Commonwealth, without a single Person, or House of Lords; for Preservation of the Laws, upholding of the Ministry, the University, and Tythes (all which had lately been in great Danger) and for maintaining Liberty of Conscience. General Monk, in the mean time, advanced with his new-modelled Army towards London, all the Way being caressed by the Gentry of the several Counties, as he passed along, with all Testimonies of Affection, and Petitions for restoring of the secluded Members, and procuring of a Free Parliament. Commissioners were sent to him from the City of London, with the like Request for a Free Parliament; but the General wisely concealed his Inclinations and Intentions, pretending strong Resolutions to be faithful to those Members sitting at Westminster; and yet carried himself with so much Evenness, that the City and Country had Hopes he would stand their Friend, as the Junto could see but little Cause to misdoubt his real Good-meaning towards them: However to make him the surer on their Side, they ordered him and his Heirs 1000 per Annum.

February the 3d, General Monk came to London with the Army he had drawn out of Scotland; the Army which had been quartered in London, having marched out the Night before by the Junto's Command, though not without Discontent, and some Disorder and Mutiny. The next Day his Excellency was conducted to the Parliament-House, where he received Thanks from the Members for his good Service; after which he acquainted them with the numerous Addresses he had received from the Counties for the Admission of the secluded Members, and a Free Parliament; minding them also of the Danger themselves and Nation would be in, if the Fanatick Party should be continued in Civil or Military Power. But the General's Speech was not well liked of by Mr. Thomas Scot, and some other of the Members. And the City of London, with whom they thought his Excellency too gracious, gave them greater Cause of Discontent; for the Common-Council was now resolved to pay no more Taxes, till such Time as the House was filled up with equal Representatives. Hereupon the Junto resolved to punish the City, and to make the General an Instrument in it; ordering him to seize upon eleven of the most active of the Common-Council, and commit them to the Tower; and also to pull down and break the Posts, Chains, Gates, and Portcullices of the City; which he put in Execution accordingly, on February the 9th, tho' not with any Pleasure to himself, but of Necessity, that so the House might not take any Occasion from his disputing their Commands, to vacate his Com-

Commis
Capacity End he Action ingly a tizens, and ma
the goo had of
to put cerning solved t
Power. very nex
to the
that the nance t veral o
late Cor had too lately d Barebon
and the Day, be fue out that fo Sitting,
The J
Letter, of it, a
of the in secur same D his Pow the Go five Cor of them
tures;
rig, Col
tan, an General conven together
fier, wh
Member liament
to the Parliame now call and to

Commission, and put him out of Capacity to accomplish the blessed End he designed. However, this Action of the General's did exceedingly amuse the loyal-hearted Citizens, and other good Subjects, and made them almost give over the good Hopes they had formerly had of him: But his Excellency, to put them out of all Doubt concerning his Intentions, bravely resolved to put an End to the Junto's Power. And in order thereto, the very next Morning he sent a Letter to the House, therein complaining, that they gave too much Countenance to Lambert, Vane, and several others that engaged with the late Committee of Safety; that they had too much favoured a Petition lately delivered by one Praise-God Barebone, and other Fanaticks; and then concludes with a prefix'd Day, before which they should issue out Writs for a new Parliament, that so they might terminate their Sitting, and come to a Dissolution. The Junto received the General's Letter, dissemble their Resentment of it, and order him the Thanks of the House, in his faithful Service in securing the City; yet the very same Day, that they might limit his Power, they passed an Act for the Government of the Army by five Commissioners, he to be one of them, the other their own Creatures; namely, Sir Arthur Haslerig, Colonel Morley, Colonel Walton, and Colonel Allured. The General hearing thereof, with all convenient Speed drew his Army together, and marched to Westminster, where he gave the secluded Members Re-admission into the Parliament-House, February the 21st, to the great Grief of the Rump-Parliament (for so the Junto was now call'd in Scorn and Contempt) and to the exceeding Joy both of the City and Country. And now 1660. the Parliament vote General Monk to be Captain-General of all the Forces in the Three Nations; constitute a new Council of State; set at Liberty Sir George Booth, and such of his Party that were Prisoners; also all such as had been imprisoned for petitioning for a Free Parliament; as Sir Robert Pye, Major Fincher, &c. caused the Rump Militia, consisting most of Sectaries, to be disbanded; made such Acts as might best conduce to the Settlement of the Nation, as for taking away all Places of Trust and Power out of the Hands of the Sectarian Party; also voted a Full and Free Parliament to be chosen and sit at Westminster, April the 25th. This Parliament was called Free; yet (as in all the Protector's Parliaments) no Loyalist that had been in actual Arms for the King, was capable of being elected a Parliament-Man.

March the 17th, the Long Parliament dissolved themselves, leaving a Council of State to govern till the next Parliament should assemble. But in the Interim that the Parliament was busied for the recovering the Peace and Freedom of the Nation, some Male-contentes were very active for sowing the Seeds of Division in the Army, especially in that Part which had been for the Committee of Safety; yet by the Care and Prudence of General Monk (who displaced most of the Fanatick Officers) their Designs were frustrated. Lambert, after the Dissolution of the Parliament, attempted to involve the Nation again in a Civil War; but Colonel Richard Ingoldsby dispersed his small Force, and took him Prisoner.

A. D. 1660, April the 25th, the Free Parliament assembled at Westminster.

1662. minster, and on May the 1st, voted, that according to the ancient and fundamental Laws of this Kingdom, Charles the Second is the lawful and undoubted King of these Nations. Transcendant was the Joy all over England, which issued from this good News. His Majesty from his Court, then at Breda, had sent his Letters to both Houses of Parliament, to General Monk, and to the City, to Admiral Montague and the Officers of the Fleet, with a Declaration also to all his loving Subjects, the Substance whereof was, That he did grant a free and general Pardon to all his Subjects that should within Forty Days lay hold upon his Grace and Favour, excepting such Persons as should be excepted by Parliament. That he would shew all possible Indulgence to tender Consciences, and such as differ in Matters of Religion, so they did not disturb the Peace of the Kingdom; that he would preserve them free from Injury in their Lives and Estates; and that all Things relating to Sales and Purchases (for there had been more Lands bought and sold in the late Usurping Times, than what the right Owners, loyal Subjects, had consented to) should be determined in Parliament: That he would take Care for the Arrears of the Soldiery under the Command of General Monk; and that they should be received into his Service, upon as good Pay and Conditions as at that present they enjoyed. The Parliament considering that his Majesty had for many Years been deprived of his Revenues, and therefore could not but be in Want of Money, they therefore ordered, that the Sum of 50,000 l. should be sent him for a Present; and 10,000 l. to the Duke of York, and 5,000 l. to the Duke of Gloucester. The City of London likewise, to testify their Gratitude to his Majesty, sent him 10,000 l. and to his two Brothers 1000 l. a Piece; and 300 l. they presented to the Lord Mordaunt and Sir John Greenvil, who brought them his Majesty's Letters, to buy each of them a Ring; and the Parliament, for the same Reason, gave 500 l. to Sir John Greenvil to purchase a Jewel.

May the 8th, by Order of Parliament, Charles the Second was proclaimed at London with very great Solemnity, The most Potent, Mighty and Undoubted King of England, Scotland, &c. At which Time the Acclamations of the People were wonderful great, and their Joys such, that they could not find Ways to express them.

May the 22d, his Excellency General Monk set forth from London, in order to meet his Majesty; and May the 23d, his Majesty with his Brothers set Sail for England from the Hague, and on Friday landed at Dover, where the Loyal General received the King. About two Miles from Dover his Majesty forsook his Coach, and took Horse, his Brothers riding on his Right-Hand, and the General on the Left; after whom the Duke of Buckingham and many other Noblemen and Gentlemen followed in gallant Equipage. For the excellent Service that General Monk had done for the King and his Kingdoms, his Majesty was pleased to dignify him with the Honour of being Knight of the Garter, Master of his Horse, Duke of Albemarle, and Earl of Torrington, Baron Monk of Potheridge, &c. Chief General of all his Land-Forces in the Three Kingdoms, and one of his Privy-Council.

May

May the 29th, his Majesty made his Triumphant Cavalcade through the City of London, whither he was welcomed with all the Expressions of Joy possible. And being come to Whitehall, he there in the Presence-Chamber offered the Sacrifice of Praise and Thanksgiving unto Almighty God for his wonderful Restoration: Then applied himself to the ordering of his Court, and appointed the chief Officers of State; His Highness James Duke of York he invested with the Office of Lord High Admiral; Sir Edward Hyde (whose Daughter the Duke of York married) he constituted Lord-Chancellor; the Earl of Manchester Lord-Chamberlain; the Lord Wriothesley, Earl of Southampton, Lord High-Treasurer; Sir Edward Nichols, and Sir William Morice, chief Secretaries of State, &c. And others who had been constantly loyal to him, or had performed any eminent good Service for him, he advanced to Places of high Trust and Dignity in the Court and Common-wealth; But because the Persons were numerous that had in an extraordinary Sort been serviceable in promoting the King's Interest, and his Majesty had no other Way to express at present his gracious Acceptance thereof to many of them, he therefore honoured their Name and Family by conferring on them, according to their Merit, the Titles of Duke, Earl, Viscount, Baron, or Knight.

June the 6th a Proclamation was published, wherein it was declared, That all such of the late King's Judges as would not render themselves within so many Days to Mercy, should be excepted out of the General Pardon then preparing; whereupon 20 of the Regicides came out of their Coverts, and presenting themselves to the Speaker of the House of Commons, were committed to Custody. In August following, the long expected Act of Indemnity was passed, by which all that had been any ways engaged against the King, were pardoned, save the Regicides, and a very few others; and amongst those there were three who were freed in respect of Life, Liberty, and Estate, because they had given evident Signs of their hearty Sorrow for that crying Sin. It was also enacted, That the 30th of January should to all Posterity be observed as a Day of Humiliation, for that great Wickedness of murdering God's Vicegerent the King; also, That May the 29th should in all succeeding Ages be observed as a Day of Thanksgiving for the King's peaceable Restoration to the actual Possession and Exercise of his legal Authority over his Subjects. An Act for Poll-Money was likewise passed, and an Act for enabling Soldiers of the Army to exercise Trades in any Corporation, that thereby they might be in a Capacity of living honestly and comfortably after their disbanding.

September the 13th, that hopeful Prince, Henry Duke of Gloucester, departed this Life; and on the same Day the Parliament was adjourned to the 6th of November following.

In October, Major-General Harrison, Mr. John Carew, and other of the Regicides, were arraigned at the Old-Baily in London, where they were all found Guilty, and condemned to die the Death due to Traitors. Of the Regicides now condemned, were hanged and quartered at Charing Cross, Harrison, Carew, Cook, Peter, Scot, Scroop, Jones, and Clement; and at Tyburn, Hacker was hanged; and Axtel, a busy

R

1660.

W. Jux-
on, A. B. of Cant.

1660.

busy Promoter of the King's Death, was hanged and quartered. All, save Hugh Peters, died very resolutely. The Persons whose Names follow, had the Favour to be reprieved after Condemnation, because they delivered themselves to the Parliament's Mercy upon their Proclamation, Hardress, Waller, Wi-at, Tichburn, Marten, Pennington, Row, Holland, Downs, Garland, Temple, Millington, Haveningham, Lilburn, Fleetwood, Smith, Meyn, and Hulet. This last was accused to be one of those two which in a Frock and Vizard assisted in the horrid Execution of the King; but because the Evidence against him seemed to the Judges not sufficiently clear, he had his Reprieve.

December 24th, Mary the Princess of Orange died at Whitehall, and on the 29th of the same Month was buried at Westminster; and the Parliament on the same Day dissolved. At the Dissolution whereof the King gave his Royal Assent to these Acts, amongst many others, viz. An Act for granting to the King's Majesty 40,000 l. per Mensum, for six Months, for disbanding the Army, and paying the Navy; and an Act for Attainder, which was made to attain the Judges and other Actors in the Murder of the late King. Cromwell, Ireton, Bradshaw, Pride, and all the rest of the Regicides deceased, are adjudged to be convicted and attainted of High-Treason, to all Intents and Purposes, as if they and every of them respectively had been attainted in their Life-time; and all Persons fled for that Treason, that is to say, John Lisle, William Say, John Berkstead, Valentine Walten, Edward Whaley, Edmund Ludlow, Sir Michael Lovejoy, John Okey, John Herwen, William Goff, Thomas Challoner, William Cavley, Miles Corbet, Nicholas Low, John Dixwell, Daniel Blagrove, Andrew Broughton, Edward Dendy, and every of them, stand and be adjudged convicted of High-Treason, &c.

After his Majesty had given his Royal Assent to the Acts presented him, he made a Speech to both Houses, wherein he used these memorable Expressions: That this Parliament should be called to all Posterity, The Healing and the Blessed Parliament: And that it should be a Rule to his Actions, and his Councils, to consider, What is a Parliament like to think of this Action, or this Council?

In the Beginning of January following, whilst his Majesty was accompanying his Royal Mother, and Sister Henrietta Maria, Part of their Journey to France, an inconsiderable Number of the Fifth Monarchists raised a great Disturbance in London, killing some of the City Watch; and two Nights, with great Desperateness, opposing the Trained-Bands and other Force, till at length divers of them being wounded, and others slain, the rest that could, made their Escape. And in a few Days after was Captain Venner, and twelve more of them executed in Coleman-street, over against their Meeting-house, and in other Parts of London.

January the 30th, were the dead Bodies of those infamous Traitors, Cromwell, Ireton, Bradshaw, (all buried at Westminster) taken out of their Coffins, and drawn upon Hurdles to Tyburn; they were hanged by the Neck for some Hours, and then had their Heads chopt off, which were placed upon Westminster Hall, and their Bodies thrown into a Hole under the Gallows.

This

This Year of Jubilee were the Lands of the King's loyal Subjects restored to them, that had been unjustly taken from them by the late Usurper. The Bishops, Deans, and Chapters Lands were likewise restored to the Use of these Churchmen.

A. D. 1661, the Entrance of this Year was made famous by the magnificent Coronation of King Charles II. In Preparation unto which his Majesty created six Earls, six Barons, sixty-eight Knights of the Bath; and on the 22d of April he made his Cavalcade from the Tower through London to Westminster, against which time four magnificent Triumphal Arches had been erected by the City (as their Charter obligeth them) for his Majesty to pass through.

The first of which was placed in Leadenhall-street, representing his Majesty's happy Arrival in England: The second was near the Royal-Exchange, being a Naval Representation: The third in Cheapside, representing the Temple of Concord; The fourth in Fleet-street, representing the Garden of Plenty. April the 23d was the Day of his Majesty's Coronation, when he disposed of the Regalia unto the Noblemen hereafter mentioned, to be carried by them from Westminster Hall to the Abbey-Church.

St. Edward's Staff to the Vice-Admiral Montague Earl of Sandwich. The Spurs to the Earl of Pembroke. The Scepter with the Cross to the Earl of Bedford. The pointed Sword (born on the left Hand of Courtana) to the Earl of Derby. The pointed Sword (born on the right Hand of Courtana) to the Earl of Shrewsbury. King Edward the Saint's Sword, called Courtana, to the Earl of Oxford. 1661. The Sword of State to the Earl of Manchester. The Scepter with the Dove to the Duke of Albemarle. The Orb with the Cross to the Duke of Buckingham. St. Edward's Crown to the Duke of Ormond. The Paten to the Bishop of Exeter, and Chalice to the Bishop of London.

Then the King, with his Nobles, Officers, and Attendants, made their Proceeding, upon blue Cloth spread on the Ground, from Westminster-Hall to the Abbey-Church; whither his Majesty being come, he was received with this Anthem: I was glad when they said unto me, We will go into the House of the Lord, &c. Psal. cxxii. 1, 4, 5, 6 Verses. Then after some Ceremonies, this Anthem was sung by the Gentlemen of the King's Chapel, Let thy Hand be strengthened, and thy Right-Hand be exalted. Let Justice and Judgment be the Preparation of thy Seat, and Mercy and Truth go before thy Face. Then, after that the King had offered the Pall, and a Wedge of Gold of a Pound Weight at the Altar, and that the Regalia were laid thereon, the Bishop of London said this Prayer; O God, which dost visit those that are humble, and dost comfort us with thy Holy Spirit, send down thy Grace upon this thy Servant Charles, that by him we may feel thy Presence amongst us, through Jesus Christ. Amen.

This done, the Bishop of Worcester began his Sermon on these Words: For the Transgression of a Land many are the Princes thereof; but by a Man of Understanding and Knowledge, the State thereof shall be prolonged, Prov. xxviii. 2. And during the Sermon his Majesty wore a Cap of crimson Velvet turned up with Ermins. Sermon being ended, 1661. the King uncovered his Head, and took the usual Oath, To confirm the Laws to the People, and namely, the Franchises granted to the Clergy by St. Edward the Confessor: To maintain the Gospel established in the Kingdom: To keep Peace, execute Justice, and grant the Commons the rightful Customs.

Then followed this Hymn, Come Holy Ghost, Eternal God, &c. a Prayer for the King, and the Litany; which being finished, and his Majesty seated in the Coronation-Chair, the Archbishop of Canterbury anointed him, first in the Palms of his Hands in Manner of a Cross, pronouncing these Words; Let these Hands be anointed with holy Oil, as Kings and Prophets have been anointed, and as Samuel did anoint David to be King, that thou mayest be blessed and established King in this Kingdom, and amongst this People, whom the Lord thy God hath given thee to rule over.

After which, the Choir sung this Anthem: Zadok the Priest, and Nathan the Prophet, anointed Solomon King, and all the People rejoiced, and said, God save the King.

At the End of which Anthem, the Archbishop said, Look down, Almighty God, with thy favourable Countenance upon this glorious King, &c. and then proceeded to anoint the King's Breast, between his Shoulders, and on both his Shoulders, the Bowing of his Arm, and Crown of his Head: Which being done, the Anointing was dried up with fine Linnen; and two short Prayers followed. Then the Dean of Westminster put on the Coif with the Colobium Sindonis, or Surplice, upon the King; whereupon the Archbishop prayed, saying, O God, the King of Kings, and Lord of Lords, by whom Kings do reign, and Lawgivers do make good Laws, vouchsafe, we beseech thee, in thy Favour, to bless this kingly Ornament, and grant thy Servant Charles our King, who shall wear it, may shine in thy Sight with the Ornament of a good Life and holy Actions; and after this Life ended he may for ever enjoy that Life of Glory which hath no End, through Christ our Lord. Amen.

This said, the Tissue-Hose, Sandals, and Super-Tunica, were put upon the King; then the Sword of State was received by the Archbishop from the Lord Chamberlain, Earl of Manchester, and laid upon the Altar, and a Prayer made, That it might be sanctified to protect and defend Churches, Widows, Orphans, and all the Servants of God; and that it might be a Fear and Terror to all those that lie in wait to do Mischief.

The Prayer ended, the Archbishop and Bishops delivered the Sword to the King, saying, Accipe Gladium per Manus Episcoporum; whereupon the Lord Chamberlain girt it about the King, and the Archbishop said, Receive this kingly Sword, which is hallowed for the Defence of Holy Church, and delivered unto thee by the Hands of the Bishops, though unworthy, yet consecrated by the Authority of the Holy Apostles, &c.

Then successively the Armil and Mantle were put upon the King, St. Edward's Crown upon his Head, a Ring upon the Fourth Finger of his Right Hand, and into each Hand a Scepter; all which were severally consecrated by the Archbishop, as the Colobium Sindonis and Sword of State had been.

Then

Then the Archbishop and Bishops present did their Homage to the King, kneeling down before his Knees, and promising to be faithful to him and his Heirs, King's of England; which said, they kissed the King's Left Cheek.

After them, the Temporal Nobility did their Homage also at the King's Knee, in these Words: I G. M. do become your Liegeman of Life and Limb, and of earthly Worship, and of Faith and Truth I shall bear unto you, to live and die against all manner of Folks. So God me help. Which said, they singly ascended the Throne, and touched the King's Crown, promising by that Ceremony, to be ready to support it with all their Power.

Then the King went to the Altar, there presented another Wedge of Gold, and receiv'd the Sacrament, after which an Anthem was sung, and the King put off St. Edward's Crown, and had the Imperial Crown set upon his Head, the Scepter with the Cross put into his Right Hand, and Globe into his Left, immediately going back to Westminster-Hall, where himself and Nobles feasted.

May the 8th, according to his Majesty's Summons, the Parliament met at Westminster, and elected Sir Edward Turner for their Speaker.

May the 20th, by Order of Parliament, was the Scots Solemn League and Covenant, that had been imposed on the King's Subjects without his Consent, burnt in London by the Hands of the Common Hangman. May the 27th, James Marquis of Argyll, for his former disloyal and treasonable Practices, was beheaded at the City of Edinburgh in Scotland.

November the 26th, John James, a Fifth Monarchist, was drawn, hanged, and quartered at London, for speaking treasonable Words.

January the 17th, the Lord Mounson, Sir Henry Mildmay, and Mr. Wallop, three Instruments in procuring the Death of the late King, were shamefully drawn upon Hurdles from Newgate to Tyburn, and from thence back again.

February the 8th, happened a violent Wind, the like to which had not been known in the Memory of any then living; it did very much Harm in many Parts of the Nation, by tearing up of Fruit and Timber Trees, and ruining Houses. This Year the Book of Common-Prayer was restored to the Church, and confirmed by Act of Parliament.

February the 13th, Elizabeth, Queen of Bohemia, the King's Aunt, departed this Life at London.

A. D. 1662, and April the 19th, three of the Regicides, namely, Barkstead, Okey, and Corbet, (taken in Holland) were drawn upon Hurdles from the Tower to Tyburn, and there hang'd and quarter'd.

May the 14th, Catharine the Infanta of Portugal, Daughter of John IV. King of Portugal, and Sister of Alphonso IV. arrived at Portsmouth, where she was married to Charles II. King of England, Scotland, &c.

May the 19th, at the Prorogation of the Parliament, the Bill for Hearth-Money received the Royal Assent.

In the Beginning of June were Sir Henry Kane, and Lambert, tried at the King's Bench Bar, for formerly disturbing the Peace of the Nation, &c. and were found guilty of Treason, and condemn-

1663.  ed; and on June the 14th was Sir Henry Vane beheaded on Tower-Hill, but through his Majesty's Clemency, Lambert had his Life respited. On St. Bartholomew-Day did many Ecclesiastical Persons relinquish their Benefices, rather than conform to the Church-Discipline, and declare their unfeigned Assent and Consent to all and every thing contained and prescribed in and by the Book of Common-Prayer, and subscribe the following Acknowledgment, viz. 'I do declare, That it is not lawful, upon any Pretence whatsoever, to take Arms against the King. And, That I do abhor that traiterous Position of taking Arms by his Authority against his Person, or against those that are commissioned by him, &c. That I will conform to the Liturgy of the Church of England, as it is now established by Law. And I do declare, That I hold there lies no Obligation on me, or any other Person, from the Oath, commonly called, The Solemn League and Covenant, to endeavour any Change or Alteration of Government, either in Church or State, and that the same was in itself an unlawful Oath, and imposed upon the Subjects of this Kingdom against the known Laws and Liberties thereof.'

G. Sheldon, A.B.
of Cant.

December the 23d, were executed at Tyburn four discontented Sectarists, for plotting to disturb the Peace of the Nation, viz. Thomas Tongue, George Philips, Nathaniel Gibbs, and Francis Stubbs.

A. D. 1664, numerous Complaints being made unto the Parliament, of the many Injuries and Depredations done by the Dutch to the English Nation, they freely declared, That they would with their Lives and Fortunes assist his Majesty, to the redressing of his Subjects Wrongs, and to the curbing again of that ungrateful People. In order to which, great Preparations were made to furnish out a gallant Fleet, and War was proclaimed against the United Netherlands. And, that nothing might be wanting to further this great Undertaking, the House of Commons voted his Majesty a Supply of Two millions five hundred thousand Pounds, to be raised in three Years time. And to hasten the Naval Preparations, the City of London lent his Majesty 100,000 l.

December the 24th, a Blazing Star appear'd; and two others shortly after darted down their malignant Influences upon London, and other Places in England.

March the 7th, the London-Frigat, as she was coming up to Lee, was accidentally fired; to supply which Loss, the City of London speedily built another; this his Majesty was pleased to name, The Loyal London.

A. D. 1665, and in the Month of May, began that transcending Plague in London, whereof died in a little more than a Year's Space near 100,000 Persons; many other Places of England were sorely visited at this Time with that dreadful Judgment of God, the Pestilence.

June the 3d was that eminent Victory obtained over the Dutch Fleet, when twenty two of their Ships were taken by the English, and about 8000 of their Men taken and killed, and their Admiral Opdam was sunk, together with his Ship. The English lost in this Fight the Earl of Falmouth; and that excellent Sea Captain Sir John Lawson received his mortal Wound therein.

October

October the 3d, the Parliament met at Oxford, by reason of the Infection at London.

A. D. 1666, and in the Month of June, was the second great Fight between his Majesty's Naval Forces and the Dutch, which took up Part of the 1st, 2d, 3d, and 4th Days of the said Month. July the 2d, was the third great Fight, wherein the Duke of Albemarle, through the great Number of his Enemy's Ships, was very hardly tasked, till Prince Rupert with a Squadron came in to his Aid unlooked for; but then the Dutch were soon sent Home. In this War the Dutch were assisted by the French.

Upon the Second of September, about Two of the Clock in the Morning, began that dreadful Fire in London, which lasted till Thursday following, the 6th of the same Month: It began in the House of one Fariner, a Baker in Pudding-Lane, near the Bridge, and spread itself in Length (besides Breadth) from the Tower of London to St. Dunstan's Church near Temple-Bar in Fleet-street; by which, according to the Computation of Surveyors, were consumed 373 Acres of Building within the Walls of London, and 63 Acres 3 Roods without the Walls; eighty-seven Parish-Churches, six consecrated Chapels, the Royal Exchange, the Guildhall of the City, with many stately Halls, belonging to several Companies; and according to the best Account, Thirteen thousand two hundred Houses. The Total of the Loss sustained by these devouring Flames, was valued to be Nine millions and nine hundred thousand Pounds Sterling. That the Hand of God (for the Punishment of the SINS of this City and Nation) was visible in this 1666.

Fire, no Man will deny; but whether Carelessness or Design were the immediate Occasion of it, is variously believed and discoursed of. As it happened in the Time of a War with the French and Dutch, many at that Time did conclude it to be a treacherous Act of the former of these People; especially seeing one Hubert, a crazy brained melancholick Frenchman, confessed he did the Fact, by putting a Fireball into the House of the Baker, where it began; and was therefore hanged at Tyburn. But of late, one Mr. Oates, of whom more particular Mention shall be made hereafter, lays the Guilt of this merciless Action on a Knot of Jesuits, Friers, and Irishmen, in all to the Number of Eighty, or thereabouts; who having laid the Project long before, could not conveniently put it in Execution till this unlucky Time.

This fatal Accident, the Fore-runner of many more of the same Kind, that happened in his Majesty's Dominions afterwards, gave the King a sad Opportunity of exercising his Compassion and Care towards many distressed and distracted Families, who then lodged in the open Fields, under the Canopy of Heaven: His Majesty therefore not only issued Proclamations to Justices of the Peace for causing Provisions to be sent into the Markets, and ordered his Sea-Stores to be opened for a present Supply of Bread in Ship-Bisket; but likewise passed a Declaration for preventing such lamentable Accidents for the future, that none should offer to rebuild, until necessary Measures were appointed for rendering the new Structures more secure and lasting.

1666. The Parliament met on the 18th of September, and having given the King Supplies for the carrying on the War, passed an Act for establishing a Judicature, to take Cognizance of and determine all Differences that might arise among Parties, concerning burnt or demolished Houses. A new Model of Building was appointed, and the Parliament was prorogued till the 10th of October following.

The Court seldom escapes free, when Combustions rage in the City, nor did it at this Time; for by Carelessness in using a Candle, a Fire taking in the Horse Guard at Whitehall, a great Part of that Building was burnt down; but by the special Care of his Majesty and his Guards, its Progress was quickly stopt.

His Majesty at this time meeting with bad Usage from many Hands, in order to a Redress, published several Proclamations; one for prohibiting the Importation of Canary Wines, and all Commerce with those Parts; another to the same Effect with France, and all the French King's Dominions; a third upon the humble Address of the Lords and Commons in Parliament, for banishing out of the Kingdom all Priests and Jesuits; and a fourth for open War with Denmark.

The City, now ashamed to lie longer smothered under Ashes, was by Sir Jonas Moore, a famous Mathematician (conformably to the Scantling and Model of Building appointed by the Committee of Parliament) began to be raised in Fleet-street; from which Beginning, it grew so hastily towards a Perfection, that in a few Years it outdid all its ancient Splendor and Glory, and appeared again far more beautiful than by its Fall it had been desolate and abject; no less a Wonder than the Suddenness of its Overthrow.

Scotland at this time shared likewise in Combustions, though occasioned by a Fire of another Nature; for a seditious Zeal having inspired some Malecontents with Revenge against Sir James Turner, for executing (too rigorously, as they pretended) the Laws against them, they committed an insolent Riot upon his Person, and hardly forbore the cutting him in Pieces. This Tumult was at first raised by a small inconsiderable Rabble, but in a short Time they increased to a Body of 1600 Men, who marching straight towards Edinburgh, were encountered and defeated by his Majesty's Forces, commanded by Lieutenant General Dalzell, and Major-General Drummond. Many of the Rebels were slain, more taken, whereof the Ringleaders were executed, and the rest either proscribed, or otherways punished by Law.

The Convention of Estates of Scotland, meeting in January 1666-7, for composing of the Affairs of that Kingdom, and for preventing both intestine and foreign Dangers that might threaten it, resolved to put the Country into a Posture of Defence; and for maintaining such Forces as were necessary for his Majesty's Service, assessed the Kingdom in an Imposition of 6000*l.* per Month.

About the latter end of this Year, the Lord Willoughby set out from Barbadoes with a considerable well-manned Fleet, with Design to annoy the French and Dutch Plantations in the West-Indies; but by a violent Hurricane his Fleet was dispersed, and himself with many more cast away.

A. D.

A. D. 1667, the Savedes having the Year before offered a Mediation for a Peace between the King of England, and the States of the United Provinces, prevailed this Year with the King to condescend thereunto, and to accept of Breda for the Place of Treaty.

The Dutch in the mean time were busy in making Preparations for continuing the War, upon a fair and approved Maxim of State, That with an Enemy it is surest Treating with Sword in Hand. The King of England, not ignorant of their Doings, resolved to make them spend the Summer in needless Experiences of War, and only keep himself upon his Guard.

The English therefore having but a small Fleet abroad, the Dutch put to Sea betimes, and about the latter End of April made an Attempt on Burnt-Island in Scotland, but were beaten off with Loss.

Their next Attempt was upon the Fort of Sheerness, which being a Place of small Force, was (after a short but stout Resistance) abandoned by Sir Edward Sprague; and the Mouth of that narrow River was left open, and thereby they had Liberty to proceed towards Chatham; a Disgrace our Nation has ever since stomach'd, altho' the Damage received was small, and the Resistance honourable. With 12 Men of War they failed up the Medway, and were able to break the Chain which with several sunk Ships was laid to stop them. The Opposition the Admiral, who was here in Person, then made was fruitless, through the Advantage of Wind and Tide the Enemy was favoured with; and therefore by their Ships they destroyed the Matilda, Unity, and Charles the Fifth, three Trophies of our former Victories over them. But the Royal Charles was the only Trophy they were able to carry Home, tho' not our only Loss, since the Royal Oak was also burnt, and the Loyal London and Great James much hurt. After this they assaulted and were beaten off from Languard Fort; engaged a Squadron of the English with a Squadron of theirs, and were worsted; shewed themselves before Portsmouth, and made some slight Attempts in Devonshire and Cornwall; and after De Ruyter their Admiral had been civilly complimented by the Earl of Bath in the West, and had received Advice of the Conclusion of the Peace, they sailed back for Holland.

The Peace was concluded at Breda the 21st of June; the Ratifications interchanged the 14th of August, and proclaimed afterwards in London the 24th of the same Month.

This Year died the Earl of Southampton, Lord High Treasurer of England; which Place the King thought fit to supply by Commissioners, viz. the Duke of Albemarle, the Lord Abley Cooper, after Earl of Shaftsbury, Sir Thomas Clifford, Sir William Coventry, and Sir John Duncomb.

The Parliament was to have met in July, but was prorogued till the 10th of October; in which Session several Acts were passed, amongst others, one for banishing and disabling the Earl of Clarendon, whom the Parliament charged—the Parliament then adjourned till February.

In America, Sir John Harman, with a Squadron of English Ships, attacked a Squadron of French in their Ports, with so good Success, that he burnt their Admiral, and six or seven of their best Ships; all the rest but two being sunk, either by the Enemy or the English Shot, and 1669.

and that with very small Loss of Men, or Damage to his Ships.

The King, to encourage the rebuilding of the City this Year, was pleased auspiciously to lay the first Stone himself in the Foundation of the Royal-Exchange; as shortly after his Royal Highness laid a Foundation Stone for the second Pillar thereof.

About the beginning of February, the Parliament, according to their Adjournment, met, and upon their humble Petition to his Majesty, procured a Proclamation to be emitted for enforcing the Laws against Conventicles, and for preserving the Peace of the Nation against unlawful Assemblies.

This Month was proclaimed the Peace with Spain, which had been (much to the Advantage of Commerce) concluded in May last.

A. D. 1668, about the End of March, in Easter Week, some licentious idle Persons, pretending former Custom, took the Liberty to pull down some Houses of bad Repute about the Suburbs of London. Though the Apprentices bore the Blame of this Riot, yet others were found Guilty; whereof four being apprehended, were convicted, and executed, and two of their Heads set upon London Bridge.

In May the King passed some Bills in the House of Lords, whereof one was for laying an Imposition on Wines and other Liquors, and the Parliament was adjourned till the 11th of August following.

In June, News was brought to London of the burning of the Bridge-Town in Barbadoes, where, besides the Loss of most of the Houses, the Magazine, to the great Prejudice of the Publick, as well as of private Persons, was blown up.

The Duke of Monmouth, upon the Resignation of the Lord Gerard, was made Captain of his Majesty's Life-Guards of Horse.

Sir Thomas Allen made Peace this Year with the Algerines.

About the middle of January the Dutchess of York was brought to bed of a Daughter, christened by the Name of Henrietta, by the Archbishop of Canterbury; the Duke of Ormond assisting as Godfather, the Marchioness of Dorchester and Countess of Devonshire having the Honour of being Godmothers.

A. D. 1699, the beginning of this Year the Earl of Carlisle was sent Ambassador Extraordinary to Sweden. As he was at Copenhagen on his way, he received a Letter from the King of England, in Answer to an obliging Letter of the King of Denmark's, to be delivered to that King. This Letter was so acceptable to the Dane, that upon the Ambassador's Instance he dispatched Orders to all his Ports and mercantile Towns, especially in Norway, for restoring the English to their former Freedoms and Privileges in Trading.

Being arrived in Sweden, he presented the King with the George worn by the Knights of the Garter; and afterwards the same Lord was solemnly installed at Windsor as his Swedish Majesty's Proxy.

This Year was the stately new Theatre of Oxford, the noble Gift of Dr. Sheldon, Archbishop of Canterbury, according to the Intent of the Donor, put into the Possession of the University: And upon his Grace's declining the Chancellorship, the Duke of Ormond was installed Chancellor of the University of Oxford.

Whilst the King was taking his Divertisement with the Duke of York, in the New Forest in Hampshire, hire, they both received an Express of the Death of their Mother, the Queen Dowager of England, who departed this Life at Colombee the last of August, and was buried in St. Dennis in November following.

About this Time arrived at Dublin the Lord Roberts, as Lord Deputy of Ireland.

The Exchange of London, ever since the Fire, had been kept at Gresham College in Bishopsgate-street, till now, to the great Satisfaction of the City, the Merchants returned to the Royal Exchange in Cornhill; a Fabrick as far exceeding the old one in Beauty and Structure, as the City rebuilt does that which was destroy'd.

At the Day of October prefixed, the Parliament met, to whom the King, amongst other Things in his Speech propos'd the uniting of England and Scotland into one Kingdom: this Project, in the Sequel, had no better Issue than another set on foot by King James for the same Purpose. The Parliament having sat about a Month, and done but very little, were prorogued till the 24th of February following.

The Parliament of Scotland sat at Edinburgh at the same time that the Parliament of England did at Westminster; in which the Earl of Lauderdale represented his Majesty as his Commissioner. In this Session of Parliament, amongst many other Acts, that of asserting his Majesty's Supremacy in all Causes, and over all Persons, Civil and Ecclesiastical, passed.

A splendid and magnificent Embassy was this Year sent to Taffettete, Emperor of Morocco, in the Person of Mr. Henry Howard, since Duke of Norfolk; which, by reason of the Troubles of that Country, and the Inability of the Emperor to procure a Safe-Conduct to a Person of that Quality, proved of small Consequence; and the Ambassador returned without seeing the Emperor, or performing his Embassy.

The latter end of this Year died the Duke of Albemarle, his Dutcheis not many Days surviving him. The King, as a Mark of Gratitude to the deceased Duke, sent his Son his Father's Garter, continued to him many of his Honours and Preferments; and sent him Word that he himself would take care of his Father's Funeral.

The Parliament met again at the appointed Time; and the King, among other Things, reminded them of the Project of Union between the two Kingdoms.

A. D. 1670, this Year in the beginning of April, the King having passed some Bills the Parliament was adjourned to the 24th of October. Amongst others, was an Act for authorizing such Commissioners as his Majesty should be pleased to nominate for treating with the Scottish Commissioners about the projected Union; who being nominated, and having afterwards met with those sent from Scotland, many Conferences were held; but insuperable Difficulties appearing in the Matter, it was wholly laid aside.

At this Time the Lord John Berkeley arrived in Dublin, and was invested Lord-Lieutenant of Ireland.

The Princess of Orleans made now her last Visit to her two Brothers, the King of England and Duke of York, at Dover; and upon her Return, which was shortly after, took her Journey out of this World; for to the great Grief and Surprize of the Court of England, she died suddenly.

Captain

1671.

~ Captain Beach being in the Streights with four English Frigats, met a Squadron of seven Algier Ships of War, well mann'd, gave them Battle, and after a short Dispute, forced them all ashore, where two of them were burnt by themselves, and the rest by the English, most of their Men were lost, and 250 Christian Slaves set at Liberty.

In October the Parliament met again, according to their Adjournment, and then was the Peace between England and Spain beyond the Line concluded and ratified.

The Prince of Orange came this Year into England, and having visited both Universities, after a short Stay he returned.

During this Session of Parliament, the Lords and Commons having humbly represented to his Majesty, their Fears and Jealousies of the Growth of Popery, the King by Proclamation commanded all Jesuits, and English, Irish, and Scottish Priests, and all others that had taken Orders from the See of Rome, except such as were to wait upon the Queen and foreign Ambassadors, to depart the Kingdom, upon Pain of having the Laws and Statutes of the Realm put in Execution against them.

A. D. 1671, in the Beginning of this Year died at St. James's her Royal Highness Anne, Dutchess of Tork. Daughter to the Earl of Clarendon; and was shortly after privately buried at Westminster. She was educated a Protestant, but turned Papist.

The Parliament still sat, and amongst others, having passed an Act for an Addition to the King's Revenue, by an Imposition on Proceedings at Law, by an humble Address they petitioned his Majesty, That he would be pleas'd by his Royal Example to encourage the wearing of the Manufactures of his own Kingdom, and to discountenance the Use of foreign; to which the King having graciously condescended, they were prorogued till the 26th of April ensuing.

In June Sir Edward Sprague, Admiral for the King in the Mediterranean Sea, burnt and took under the very Guns of the Castle of Bugia, nine of the best Men of War of Algier. This News so incensed the People that in a tumultuous Manner they cut off the Head of their King; the Aga having done the like to their General, and forced their new-created King to make a Peace much to the Advantage of England.

This Year his Majesty was pleased to honour the City of London with his Presence at the Lord-Mayor's Feast, being the first that since the Fire was kept at Guildhall, after it was advantageously repaired.

The King having long conceal'd his just Displeasure against the Dutch, and his Resentments of their unworthy Dealings towards him, intends now an open War with the United Provinces. In order thereunto, in January 1671, his Majesty declared, That seeing his Neighbours were making great Preparations, both by Sea and Land, he looked upon himself as obliged to put himself in such a Posture, as might best secure his Government and People. And that, seeing Money, which was absolutely necessary for that End, was wanting, he was unavoidably forced (which otherwise he would not have done) to put a Stop to the Payment of all Monies brought in, or to be brought in, to his Exchequer, for the Space of one whole Year.

In the mean Time, Sir George Downing, his Majesty's Ambassa-

for in Holland, pressed the States hard with the Business of the Flag; but finding his Demands shifted off with Delays, and his Negotiation like to prove successless, he returned back in a short time to England, where he was committed to the Tower for not having punctually obeyed his Instructions.

And soon after, Sir Robert Holmes with five Men of War, cruising near the Isle of Wight, met the Dutch Smyrna Fleet convoyed by six Men of War, of whom he demanded the Flag; which they refusing he set upon them March the 13th, and maintained the Fight all Night: The next Morning three other Frigats coming in, the Fight was continued to the great Damage of the Dutch, whose Rear Admiral was sunk, and five of their best Merchant-Men taken. And then open War was proclaimed against Holland.

One Mrs. Jones, of Monmouth, or some adjacent Parish, was murdered; for which cursed Fact, her Son, a Lawyer by Profession, was pressed to Death, the Maiden-Daughter burnt, and the Servant-Boy, who did the Fact, was hanged at Monmouth. The Son refused to plead, the Daughter fled, and the Boy, upon Examination, confessed the Fact.

A. D. 1672, the French King now being joined with the English in War against the Dutch, in the Beginning of this Year marches at the Head of his main Army to the Frontiers of the United Netherlands, and sends his Fleet to join the English.

In May both Fleets were joined at Sea, under the Command of his Royal Highness the Duke of York, making all together about 160 Sail. They had often Sight of the Dutch, but no Engagement till the 28th of this Month; and then in Southwold-Bay a sharp Fight began, about five of the Clock in the Morning, and was obstinately maintained on both Sides till Night; the Dutch then bore away, and the Duke stood after them, keeping within Sight of the Lights all Night. In the Engagement died the Earl of Sandwich, Captain Digby in the Henry, Sir John Cox hard by the Duke in the Prince, Sir Frescheville Hollis, and Monsieur de la Rabiner the French Rear-Admiral. Several other Officers were slain and wounded, about 700 common Seamen lost, and as many wounded; the Royal James burnt, and the Katharine taken, but by her own Men rescued again. On the Dutch Side were killed Admiral Van Ghent, and Captain Brackbell. Their great Ships were sadly shattered, two sunk, one taken, and one burnt; many others were missing, whereof no Account could be given, and a great many of their common Seamen killed and wounded. The French at the same time, to increase their Loss, took several of their Towns and Forts by Land.

Next Day after this Engagement, the Duke of York put twice out his bloody Flag upon Sight of the Dutch, but was as often prevented from engaging them by thick Fogs and Mists, which gave the Dutch Opportunity to retreat; and so no more considerable Action was performed this Year.

The States being thus pressed (in all Probability) above the Strength of so small a Republick; having the French on the one Side, the Bishop of Munster on the other, by Land, and the English by Sea, to deal with, were not able to suppress the Tumults and Insolencies of the exasperated People. The Burghers of Dort, in a tumultua-1673.

ry Manner, got the Prince of Orange created Stadt-holder, which was afterwards confirmed by the States. And at the Hague, not long after, a masterless Rabble haled out of Prison the Ruart van Putten, and his Brother De Witt, who had been condemned to lose their Dignities and be banished, for some Designs against the Prince, and barbarously murdered them, dragging their Bodies through the Streets, hanging them on the Gallows by the Heels, and afterwards inhumanly tearing and cutting them to pieces.

This Year was the Earl of Essex sent into Ireland, to succeed the Lord John Berkley, as Lieutenant of that Kingdom. The Lord-Keeper of England, Bridgman, now aged and infirm, having resigned his Place, the Earl of Shaftsbury was made Chancellor of England, and Thomas Lord Clifford Lord High-Treasurer.

Towards the Beginning of December, the Duke of Richmond, who had been this Year sent Ambassador Extraordinary into Sweden, died in his Calasche, as he was upon his Return to Elfenore, from being aboard of the Yarmouth Frigate. No other Reason could be given for the Suddenness of his Death, but the extreme Coldness of that piercing Air, to which his Body was not accustomed.

The Time of Prorogation being expired, the Parliament met again; and upon the Removal of Sir Edward Turner, their Speaker, to be Lord Chief Baron of the Exchequer, Sir Job Charleton was made Speaker; but he shortly after falling sick, Edward Seymour, Esq; succeeded. This Session of Parliament voted the King a Supply of eighteen Months Assesment, not exceeding 70,000 l. a Month, but began to be dissatisfied with the King's Indulgence and Toleration to Dissenters; though his Majesty, by a gracious Answer to an Address of theirs, endeavoured to remove that Scruple.

A. D. 1673. to prevent Dangers which might happen from Popish Recusants (Romish Emissaries being at that Time, and for some Years past having been, more than ordinarily busy to seduce the King's good Subjects, and having been too successful, especially among the Great Ones) it was enacted, That all, as well Peers as Commoners, that shall bear any Office, Civil or Military, or shall receive any Pay, Salary, Fee, or Wages, by reason of any Grant or Patent from his Majesty, or shall have any Place of Command from or under the King, or be of his Household, or in his Service, or the Duke of York's, should take the following Oath in open Court, viz. I A. B. do declare That I do believe that there is no any Transubstantiation in the Sacrament of the Lord's Supper, or in the Elements of Bread and Wine, at or after Consecration thereof, &c.

The Island of Tobago was this Year taken by the English from the Dutch, in Exchange whereof the Dutch took St. Helena from the English; which might have proved of very bad Consequence to the English East-India Trade, had it not been retaken by Captain Munday with three Dutch East-India Merchant-Men besides, which fully paid the Charges of its Retrievement. For this good Service Captain Munday was knighted.

The Dutch this Year were in the Sea, and attempted a vain Project of stopping up those narrow Channels that gave Entry to the River of Thames. Prince Rupert, who

comm out to retrea
Prin
he m of the shortl made and th
Schon and t on th Squad
provok
The L on, ca engage emulou extraor what e length magna nemy as far permit
the C gained lost bu and no
were f Woode killed V Admira
more.
Men, b named t
On th another great E ther Sid Distance
Night-ti
And t Warlike without of Augu Sea, and this War
the Gore

commanded the English Fleet, put out to encounter them; but they retreating to their own Shoar, the Prince stood to the Westward, that he might join the French and Part of the English Fleets. This being shortly after done, the whole Fleet made toward the Coast of Holland; and the Prince finding them before Schouvelt, secured by their Banks and the Shallowness of the Water, on the 28th of May detached a Squadron of 35 small Frigats to provoke them to an Engagement. The Dutch, contrary to Expectation, came forth in good Order, and engaged. The French and English, emulous for Honour, fought with extraordinary Eagerness, and somewhat entangled each other; but at length, after a sharp Dispute, the magnanimous Prince forced the Enemy to run, and followed them as far as the Sands and Water did permit, till Night put an End to the Conflict, and the Dutch regained their Station. The English lost but a few common Seamen, and not one Ship; Captains slain, were Fowles, Finch, Tempest, and Woorden. On the Dutch Side were killed Vice Admiral Schram, Rear-Admiral Vlugh, and six Captains more. They lost considerably in Men, but only one Ship, that was named the Deventer.

On the 24th of June happened another Engagement, wherein no great Execution was done on either Side, it being managed at great Distance, and most part in the Night-time.

And that the Series of this Year's Warlike Actions may be continued without Interruption, on the 10th of August both Fleets met again at Sea, and gave the last Stroke to this War. The Dutch being about the Goree, got the Wind of the English, and bore briskly down upon them; the Fight was obstinate and bloody on both Sides, especially between Sir Edward Sprague and Van Trump: but the French making as if they stood off for the Wind, did it in Reality, that they might have the Conveniency of being Spectators. Prince Rupert and De Ruyter, who had been engaged together all Day, finding themselves at Distance from their respective Squadrons, stood back again to their Assistance; and De Ruyter, designing to have cut off the Blue Squadron from the rest of the Fleet, was so smartly charged by the Prince, that he was fain to give way; so that, had the French made use of the Wind they had, the Dutch had certainly sustained far greater Loss than they did, and not so easily drawn off by Favour of the Night. In this Engagement, Sir Edward Sprague, as he was shifting from one Ship to another, had his Longboat, by a Random-shot, shivered to Pieces under him; and so, to the Grief and Regret of all that knew him, was drowned; his Ship, strangely disabled, was by his valiant Second, the Earl of Ossory, brought off. Captain Necve was slain, Reeves and Heywood died of their Wounds, and Martel only of the French was killed. The Loss of common Seamen was not very great on the English Side. The Dutch lost two Flag-Officers, several Captains, and about 1000 common Seamen.

About the Middle of June the Lord Clifford resign'd his Treasurer's Staff; and Sir Thomas Osborn, created Viscount Osborn of Dumblain in Scotland, and afterwards Earl of Danby in England, was made Lord High-Treasurer. And this Year also Sir Heneage Finch, Bart. was made Lord Keeper of the Great Seal, and 1676. and created a Baron by the Style of Lord Finch, Baron of Derwentry in the County of Northampton.

The King issued out his Proclamation, requiring all Judges and Justices of the Peace, effectually to prosecute the Laws against all Papists and Popish Recusants.

About the latter End of November, his Royal Highness the Duke of York was married to the Princess of Modena, a Roman Catholick, after the Parliament had used great Endeavours to prevent it.

Though the Preparation for War went on vigorously, both on the English and Dutch Sides, yet Overtures of Peace were still set on foot; and his Majesty condescended to a Treaty at Cologne, which took no Effect. The Dutch, in the mean time, thought it not fit to desist; but by another way of Negotiation, that is to say, by Intercourse of Letters, they at length prevailed so far, as to receive a condescending Letter from the King of England, in February 1673, which was shortly after followed by a Conclusion of the Peace by them so much desired.

A. D. 1674, Peace being now concluded, this Year affords no great Transaction of Importance; the Consultations of Government being chiefly directed to the Preservation of Quietness and Unity at Home, in order to which his Majesty published several Proclamations against the Papists and Jesuits.

The Duke of Monmouth, upon Resignation of the Duke of Buckingham, was chosen Chancellor of the University of Cambridge. The Earl of St. Albans giving up the Staff of Lord-Chamberlain of his Majesty's Household, his Place was given to the Earl of Arlington, to whom Sir Joseph Williamson succeeded as Principal Secretary of State.

His Majesty having been pleased, to accept of the Freedom of the City of London, and of the Goldsmiths Company, was, in December, by Sir Robert Viner, Lord-Mayor, in the name of the City presented with the Copy of the Freedom in a large square Box of massy Gold, the Seal appending being in a Box of Gold, set all over with large Diamonds.

About the Beginning of January 1674, her Royal Highness was brought to bed of a Daughter, christened at St. James's by the Bishop of Durham, by the Name of Katharina Laura; the Duke of Monmouth being Godfather, and the Lady Mary and Lady Anne Godmothers.

A. D. 1675, there happened this Year a dangerous Plot, carried on with great Secrecy by the Blacks of Barbadoes against the English, which upon the very Nick of being put in Execution was detected, and the Conspirators punished.

The Natives of New-England, under the Command of King Philip Hegamore, rose likewise against the English, and did them considerable Damage; but were in a short time curbed for their Insolencies, and driven to their Sculking-holes.

In September most part of the Town of Northampton was by a dreadful Fire burnt down; nothing left standing except a few Houses in the Outskirts of the Town.

On the 5th of March 1675, Sir John Narborough concluded an honourable Peace, and of great Advantage to the Trade of this Nation, with the Government of Tripoly.

A. D. 1676, the French in the last Campaign lost their famous Marshal Turenne; and the Dutch marine Expeditions are this Year uttered

ushered in with a Fate as unlucky to the States ; for their Darling, Admiral De Ruyter, on the 29th of April, died of the Wounds which he had received some Days before in an Engagement with the French, in the Bay of Augusta on the Coast of Sicily.

But to return home ; the first Thing we meet with this Year, of Note, is a dreadful Fire, which happened the 26th of May in the Borough of Southwark ; it began about Four in the Morning, and continued all Day, and Part of the Night ; and notwithstanding the indefatigable Pains and Diligence of his Grace the Duke of Monmouth, of the Earl of Craven, and Lord-Mayor, yet above 600 Houses were burnt and blown up by this sad Accident.

His Majesty, for securing Trade to and from his Ports, which was much disturbed by the Insolency of Dutch, Spanish, and French Privateers, amongst whom the War still continued ; on the 2d of June caused a Proclamation to be published, declaring all Ships, of what Party soever, that should put into any of his Ports, to be under his Protection during their Stay there, commanding his publick Officers, and all other his Majesty's Subjects, to use their best Endeavours to hinder the roving of any private Men of War so near his Coasts, as might give Apprehensions to Merchant-men ; That if a Man of War of any Party, and one or more Merchant men of another, should come into his Majesty's Ports, the Merchant men should have the Privilege to sail out two Tides before the Man of War ; That none of his Seamen should presume to enter and lift themselves on board of any foreign Man of War, or any Ship designed for Traffick or the Fishing-Trade, without his Majesty's Leave first obtained ; with several other Rules relating to the securing of Trade, and his Majesty's Sovereignty in these Seas : in Pursuance of which Proclamation, several Privateers were stopt and detained in many of the Ports of this Kingdom.

August the 20th, her Royal Highness was brought to Bed of a Daughter, christened by the Name of Isabella ; the Lord High Treasurer being Godfather, and the Dutchess of Monmouth and Countess of Peterborough, Godmothers.

October the 26th, his Majesty passed an Order in Council. That none of his Subjects, except the Queen's domestick Servants, should repair to her Majesty's Chapel, or to the Houses or Chapels of any foreign Ambassadors or Agents, there to hear Mass, or English Sermons, upon Pain of having the Laws severely executed against them ; and his Majesty appointed Messengers of the Chamber, and other Officers, to wait without at the Houses of foreign Ambassadors, and Agents, and to take Notice of such of his Subjects as should come out of the said Chapels from Religious Worship and bring them or their Names to the Council Board. The Principal Secretaries of State were by his Majesty likewise required to repair to the said Ambassadors and Agents, and in his Majesty's Name acquaint them with his Royal Pleasure in executing his Laws, that they might have no Cause to complain of Disrespect offered to their Character, or of any Purpose of infringing their Privileges.

A. D. 1677, April the 16th, his Majesty in his Royal Robes, with the usual Solemnities, came into the House of Lords, whither the 1677. House of Commons being called, several Bills were passed; amongst others, an Act for raising the Sum of W. Sand croft, A B 584,978 l. 2 s. 2 d. halfpenny, for the of Cant. speedy building of thirty Ships of War; another for an additional Excise upon Beer, Ale, and other Liquors for three Years; another for erecting a Judicature to determine Differences touching Houses burnt and demolished by the late dreadful Fire in Southwark; another for taking away the Writ De Hæretico comburendo, &c. and then both Houses adjourned to the 21st of May following.

S

House

This Month the Duke of Newcastle, and Earl of Danby Lord High Treasurer of England, were installed Knights of the Garter at Windſor.

May the 21st, both Houses, according to their last Adjournment, met again at Westminster, his Majesty having before by Proclamation required all the Members to be present, in order to the debating Matters of great Importance. In this Session the House of Commons made an Address to his Majesty, That he would be pleased, for the Security of the Nation, and representing the growing Greatness of France, to enter into some Leagues proposed by them in their Address; to which, on the 28th of the same Month, he gave them his Answer at the Banqueting House; which being in Print, we shall refer you to the Answer it self. His Majesty farther told them, That it was his Pleasure the House should be adjourned to the 16th of July following; and that if he intended they should sit again before Winter, he would give them Notice by his Proclamation. Accordingly both Houses were adjourned till the 16th of July ensuing.

August the 4th, his Grace the Duke of Ormond, Lord Lieutenant of Ireland, began his Journey for that Kingdom.

And now his Majesty thinking fit to put a Stop to the French victorious Proceedings in Flanders be-thought himself of entring into Alliances with some Princes and States abroad, and began to raise Forces for that Purpose; of whom the Year following will afford more Matter of Discourse.

October the 9th, the Prince of Orange landed at Harwich, and went directly from thence to New Market, in his Majesty's Coaches that attended his Highness there.

Sunday, November the 4th, the Marriage between her Highness the Lady Mary, the Duke of York's eldest Daughter, and his Highness the Prince of Orange, was privately celebrated at St. James's by the Bishop of London, in Presence of his Majesty, their Royal Highnesses, and some of the chiefest of the Nobility: And on Wednesday following, her Royal Highness the Dutchess of York was brought to Bed of a Son, who was christened by the Name of Charles, but died in December following.

November the 11th, about Nine of the Clock in the Morning, their Highnesses the Prince and Princess of Orange parted from Whitehall, in order to their embarking in the Yatches appointed to transport their Highnesses to Holland; his Majesty and his Royal Highness having accompanied them to Erith, where their Highnesses went on board.

The Parliament, pursuant to their last Adjournment, having met at Westminster, received an Intimation from the King, That his Majesty had Matters of very great Importance to communicate to both Houses,

Houses, in order to the Satisfaction of their late Addresses for the Preservation of Flanders, but Matters not then being ripe enough, it was his Majesty's Pleasure they should be adjourned till the 28th of the same Month, and accordingly they were adjourned.

At the prefixed Time they met again, and the King in a gracious Speech acquainted both Houses to this Purpose, That according to his Promise to them, that he would do somewhat for their Satisfaction before they met again, he had made Alliances with Holland for the Preservation of Flanders, which, if seconded by plentiful Supplies from them, and due Care from the Spaniards for their own Preservation, might be able by Arms to restore such an honourable Peace to Christendom, as might not be in the Power of one Prince alone to disturb; which he had endeavoured to do by a fair Treaty: That he had married his Niece to the Prince of Orange, and so engaged himself to maintain his Interest. And having laid before them the Expences he had been at, and what an actual War would needs require, with very pressing Considerations, his Majesty demanded of them answerable Supplies.

March the 20th, amongst other Bills in Parliament, there passed an Act for raising Money by Poll and other Ways, to enable his Majesty to enter into an actual War against the French King; with a Prohibition of all French Commodities.

A. D. 1678, many of the Forces raised by his Majesty since September last being already in Flanders, and more going over daily; his Majesty, that he might put himself in a Posture of acting by Sea as well as by Land, caused a Proclamation to be published the Beginning of this Year, strictly charging all Seamen, his Subjects, who had listed themselves in the Service of Foreign Princes or States, forthwith to withdraw and return home, and that none for the future should presume, without Permission from his Majesty, to engage in any such Service.

About this Time, at Bruges in Flanders, happened a great Disorder, occasioned by a rude Action of a Burgher, who in Time of a Procession, struck a Dutch Captain with a lighted Torch over the Face, because he did not uncover himself so soon as the Townsmen would have had him; this occasioned presently the drawing of many Swords; and the English being falsely accused of the Tumult, some Soldiers were killed in the Streets; but by the Care of the Magistrates and Officers, the Stir being quieted, and the Truth of the Matter discovered, the Magistrates of the Town imprisoned and punished some of the Authors of the Tumult; and to testify their Trouble at the Accident, magnificently treated the English Officers and Soldiers, and published a Placard in their Justification, charging all Persons to use the said Soldiers with all Kindness and Civility.

On Saturday, April the 13th, a Woman of Swansey was brought to Bed of a dead Female Child, which had two perfect Heads and Necks upon one Body, with all the Parts of each Head exact, and the Members of the Body perfect.

The Parliament, pursuant to the last Prorogation, having met the 23d of May, and continued sitting till the 15th of July following; his Majesty that Day in his Robes came into the House of Lords, and there gave his Royal Assent to several Acts, amongst which, to one 1678.

for raising Money for disbanding of the Army, a great Part of which was now in Flanders; another for granting an Additional Duty to his Majesty upon Wines for three Years; a third for burying in Woollen, and a fourth for the Relief and Discharge of poor distressed Prisoners for Debt.

After which the Lord Chancellor, by his Majesty's Command, acquainted the two Houses, that his Majesty had thought fit, in the present Conjunction of Affairs, to prorogue them to the first of August following, and so keep them in Call by short Prorogations; his Majesty not knowing how soon he might have Need of their further Service and Assistance; but that his Majesty's Intention was, they should not meet till towards Winter, unless there were Occasion for their assembling sooner, of which he would give them timely Notice by Proclamation: And accordingly the Parliament was prorogued till the first Day of August.

In pursuance of this Prorogation, a Parliament met at Westminster the first Day of August, and were then by Commission prorogued to the 29th of the same Month; at which Time his Majesty being willing they should meet and continue sitting for the Dispatch of weighty Affairs, did issue out a Proclamation, requiring all the Members to give their Attendance at Westminster the said Day. But the Face of Affairs abroad being much altered by the Conclusion of the Peace betwixt the French King and the States of the United Provinces, which was signed at Nimwegen the first of August, his Majesty thought fit likewise to change his Resolution; and therefore by Proclamation declared, That both Houses should be prorogued from the 29th of August, to the first of October following; and afterwards by another Proclamation, to the 21st of the same Month; at which Time his Majesty required a full Meeting of the Members, in order to their sitting for the Dispatch of weighty Matters; which indeed happened to be of greater Concern than was imagined.

The Prince of Orange was now marched with his Army to the Relief of Mons, at that Time blocked up by the French under the Command of the Duke of Luxemburg, before he had the News of the Peace: And his Highness, accompanied with the Duke of Monmouth, about the Beginning of August, being advanced near the Enemy's Camp at St. Denis, bravely attacked it, and after a long and brisk Dispute, forced the French to dislodge, and possessed himself of the Ground. The Prince and the Duke of Monmouth were in great Danger in this Engagement, but both came off without any Hurt; the Earl of Ossory commanded his Majesty's Subjects that were in the States Service, who gained no small Share in the Honour of this Day's Action, tho' many gallant Men perished in the Attempt.

This Year likewise, one Titus Oates, who had been educated at Cambridge, and admitted into Orders, did afterwards (seemingly at least) turn Roman Catholic, and going over to St. Omers, was admitted into the English College there; where having continued some Time, he went into Spain, and at length, after some Years Correspondence with the English Jesuits abroad, came home, intrusted with Letters and other Matters to their Friends here. This gave them a Con-

a Confidence in him, and obtained him the Privacy to all their Designs, which when he had sufficiently informed himself of, he consulted with one Dr. Tongue, a Minister in London, concerning the Discovery thereof; who advised him to apply himself to Sir Edmundbury Godfrey, a Justice of the Peace in Westminster; to whom he went, and on the 28th of September, 1678, discovered several treasonable Designs, that the Jesuits and Romish Priests, and others of that Religion, were carrying on, to murder the King, destroy the Government, and subvert the Established Religion. That in order to it, there had been Consults held by several of the Conspirators, on the 24th of April, in the Month of August, and at other times, in which it had been resolved to kill the King; one Grove, a Layman, and Pickering, a Priest, being contracted with to do it; for which the former was to receive 1,500 l. but the latter content to have 30,000 Masses said for his Soul after his Death; That this Resolve be put into Writing, and signed and sealed by several of the Conspirators: And lest this should fail, a Contract was by others made with Sir George Wakeman, a Physician, who for 15,000 l. was to poison the King; Again, lest both these should fail, a third Means was proposed, and that was by four Russians, who were hired for 80 l. to assassinate his Majesty at Windsor. That he had seen the Pistols that Grove and Pickering had prepared with silver Bullets to shoot the King in St James's Park, and that he had several times seen Grove and Pickering in the Park waiting an Opportunity; That in March last Pickering had a fair Opportunity, but that the Flint of his Pistol being loose, he could not shoot; 1678. That 5,000 l. had actually been paid in Part to Sir George Wakeman, the rest being to be paid when the Thing was effected. And that the four Russians had been sent to Windsor in August last, and the 80 l. sent after them, himself having seen the Money paid. That an Army was to be raised and commanded by certain Lords. That there was also a Design laid for killing the Duke of Ormond, and raising a Rebellion in Ireland, 40,000 Blank Bills being provided to be sent thither for the Papists. That Commissions had been granted from Rome, to make the Lord Arundel of Wardour Lord Chancellor, the Earl of Porvis Lord Treasurer, the Lord Bellasis General of the Army, the Lord Peters Lieutenant-General, the Lord Stafford Paymaster of the Army, Mr. Coleman Secretary of State, and Mr. Langborn Advocate of the Army. The chief Conspirators were Mr. Coleman and Mr. Langborn, Lawyers; Tho. Whitebread, Provincial of the Jesuits in England; William Harcourt, pretended Rector of London; John Fenwick, Procurator of the Jesuits in England; John Garwen, Anthony Turner, William Ireland, William Marshall, William Rumley, James Corker, Thomas Pickering, Jesuits, Popish Priests, and Monks, John Grove, the five Lords abovementioned, and several others not taken.

To corroborate Oates's Testimony, there afterwards came in divers other Witnesses, namely, William Bedloe, formerly Servant to the Lord Bellasis, but afterwards employed in carrying Letters beyond the Sea for the Jesuits; Stephen Dugdale, who had been Servant to the Lord Aston; one Smith who had been a Priest of the Church of 1678. Rome; Thomas Dangerfield, Miles Prance, and several others.

There were also seized several Papers in Mr. Coleman's Chamber, importing a Design of obtaining a Toleration for, and Propagation of, the Popish Religion in England, being assisted from France and Rome with great Sums of Money, which was to be disposed of in England to certain Persons for that Purpose. Which Papers discovered that he kept a constant Correspondence with la Chaise, the French King's Confessor, who negotiated this Matter there; and with the Pope's Nuncio at Brussels, who agitated the same at Rome; this he himself confessed, but to his Death denied any Design of killing the King, or raising a Rebellion.

There were likewise Letters and Papers seized in Mr. Harcourt's Lodgings, some of which gave an Account of a general Consult to be held in London by the Jesuits on the 24th of April, for the transacting of some grand Affair.

To which must be added, three Letters written by some of the Jesuits.

Sir Edmundbury Godfrey having taken Oates's Depositions, carried them to the Lord Chief Justice Scroggs, who informed the King and Council of it, and Warrants were immediately issued for apprehending the Persons accused, who were accordingly seized, and sent to Prison. And in the Midst of the Consternation this Discovery had caused, Sir Edmundbury Godfrey was on Saturday the 12th of October missing from his House, no body knowing what was become of him; upon which it was immediately concluded that the Papists had murdered him. It was four Days before any News could be heard of him, and then he was found dead in a Ditch by Primrose-Hill, with his own Sword run through his Body; and upon the Inquest, the Coroner's Jury found that he had been murdered.

His Majesty published a Proclamation on the 20th for the Discovery of the Murtherers, promising a Reward of 500*l* which at the Parliament's Request, which met the 21st of October, being repeated, with a Promise of protecting the Discoverer, one William Bedloe, commonly called Captain Bedloe, came in, and declared that he had been treated with by some Popish Priests to murder a certain Gentleman, without naming whom, but was ordered to insinuate himself into the Acquaintance of Sir Edmundbury Godfrey; that the Day that Sir Edmundbury Godfrey was missing, one of the Priests, named la Fare, told him, that there was a considerable Gentleman to be taken off that Night, who had in his Hands all the Informations of Oates; that if they took those Papers from him, it would obstruct the Discovery; and asked him to assist in it, which he promised, and appointed to meet at Somerset House, but failed; that he seeing la Fare on Monday Night, was charged for a Breach of Promise; and that la Fare then shewed him the Body in Somerset House, which he immediately knew to be Sir Edmundbury Godfrey's, and promised to assist in carrying it off, but that he failed then also: and being much disturbed, went out of Town, and continuing still restless, at length resolved to discover it. This is the Sum of Bedloe's Testimony in this Matter.

But

But soon after one Miles Prance, a Silver-Smith, came in, and gave a more particular Account of it, viz. That one Girald and one Kelly, that were Popish Priests, together with Robert Green, and Lawrence Hill, were the Persons that perpetrated this wicked Villainy; the Manner thus: Hill went to Sir Edmundbury's House on the 12th of October, in the Morning, and pretending Business, he spoke with him; and afterwards with Girald and Green, dogged him all Day long, till at Eight a Clock in the Evening, as he passed by Somerset-House, Hill came to Sir Edmundbury, and pretending that two Men were quarrelling, desired him to come down to pacify them; which at their earnest Intreaty he was prevailed upon to do, when going into Somerset-House Water-gate, and passing down towards the Yard that opens to the Water, as he came to the Bottom of the Rails, Green threw a twitted Handkerchief about his Neck, and dragged him behind the Rails, and there throttled him, and punched him; and Girald would have run his Sword through him, but was hindered by the rest, lest the Blood might discover them; while this was doing, Prance (who had been engaged in the Business by the Persuasions of Girald and Kelly, and was called out of his House that Evening by Green) stood to watch at the Gate; and Berry, who was Porter to Somerset-House, did the same at the Stairs; and after the Murther was done, he helped Hill, Green, Girald, Kelly, and Berry, to carry the Body into Hill's Chamber in Dr. Godwin's House, where it lay till Monday Night, and then it was removed into Somerset-House; on Tuesday it was again removed near to Hill's Chamber, and on Wednesday it was again carried to the Room where it lay before, from whence it was at 12 a-Clock that Night carried in a Sedan by Prance and Girald, and Green and Kelly, by Turns, as far as Soho, where Hill received it, and on a Horse carried it to the Place where it was found, and run his Sword through the Body, that it might be supposed he killed himself. This is the Substance of what these two Witnesses deposed at the Trials of the Persons that were afterwards hanged for this Murther.

This horrid Murther made the House of Commons very rigorous in examining the Evidence, and seizing the Persons accused of the Popish Plot; among which the Earl of Porwis, Viscount Stafford, Lord Arundel of Wardour, Lord Peters, and Lord Bellasis were committed to the Tower: And upon the Parliament's Address to his Majesty to that Purpose, a general Fast was order'd to be observed on the 13th of November, to implore the Mercy of Almighty God upon his Majesty's Person, and in him upon all his Subjects, and that God would bring to Light all secret Machinations against his Majesty and the whole Kingdom; which Day of Humiliation was observed accordingly all over the Kingdom. Several Proclamations were issued for the Discovery and disabling of Popish Recusants, the first on the 30th of October, commanding all Papists or reputed Papists to depart from the Cities of London and Westminster, and all other Places within ten Miles of the same. And on the 2d of November, an Order of Council was published, promising a Reward of 20 l. to those that should discover any Officer or Soldier of his Majesty's Guards, who having formerly 1678.

1678. taken the Oaths and Test, had since been, or should hereafter be perverted to the Romish Religion. All Papists were besides confined within five Miles of their own Habitations, and a Reward of 20 l. was promised to the Discoverer of a Popish Priest.

None that were accused of the Plot came to Trial till November the 27th, when Edward Coleman, Esq; who had been Secretary to the Dutchess of York, was brought to the King's Bench Bar, and indicted for High Treason, in endeavouring to subvert the Protestant Religion, to introduce Popery, and kill the King: The Evidence against him were Oates and Bedloe; the first deposing, That he had received Letters of Mr. Coleman to carry to St. Omers, which contained Expressions that intimated a Design to kill the King; that Coleman was privy to Grove's and Pickering's Design of killing the King; that he was also privy to, and assisted in hiring of Russians to kill the King at Windsor, and also to the other Means of doing it by Sir George Wakeman, and to the Design of murdering the Duke of Ormond; and that he had seen a Commission from Rome for Mr. Coleman to be Secretary of State. Mr. Bedloe deposed, That he had heard of the Commission above mentioned, and that he had heard Mr. Coleman declare, That he would lose an hundred Lives, if he had them, to carry on the Design, and would destroy an hundred Heretick Kings to effect it. To these two Witnesses was added the Evidence of his Papers, which were produced and read in Court. The Prisoner endeavoured to invalidate Mr. Oates's Testimony, by proving himself in Warwickshire at a Time he swore him to be in Town; which not availing, he was found guilty, and on the 3d of December was drawn to Tyburn, and there hanged and quartered.

The Parliament were still wholly taken up in searching into the Plot, and Sir Edmundbury Godfrey's Murther, with whom the King heartily concurred, and came to the Parliament House on Purpose to thank them for their Care, and promise his Assistance, and at their Request, issued forth his Proclamation, promising a Reward and Pardon to any Person that could make further Discovery of the Plot. Which brought in Dugdale, Smith, Dangerfield, and others. And on the 30th of November, his Majesty gave the Royal Assent to an Act for disabling Papists to sit in Parliament, by obliging all Members of both Houses not only to take the Oath of Allegiance and Supremacy, but also to subscribe a Test, being a Declaration against Popery; but refused to pass a Bill tendered to him for raising the Militia, and continuing them in Duty for forty two Days, and gave his Reason for it; That that would put the Militia out of his Power, which he would not have consented to, if it had been but for half an Hour: But was pleased, at the Desire of the House of Commons, to consent to the disbanding of an Army then on Foot, that had been raised for the Preservation of Flanders.

On the 5th of December, the Commons sent up to the Lords an Impeachment of High Treason against Henry Lord Arundel of Wardour, William Earl of Powis, John Lord Bellasis, William Lord Peters, and William Viscount Stafford, and promised speedily to exhibit to their Lordships the Articles of the Charge against the said five Lords.

The

The rest of the Session was taken up in preparing a Bill for raising Money to disband the Army; wherein the Commons were so distrustful of the King, that the Money was by the Bill ordered to be paid into the Chamber of London, and not into the Exchequer; Sir Gilbert Gerard, Colonel Birch, and Colonel Whitley, three of their own Members, being appointed Commissioners for paying off the Soldiers; and in drawing up Articles of Impeachment against the Earl of Danby, Lord Treasurer, which was occasioned by some Clashings between him and Mr. Montague, who had been Ambassador in France, and was then a Member of the House of Commons. This Story having been told by this Lord himself in his Volume of Letters printed soon after the Death of Montague, must not be omitted.

than six Millions of Livres per Annum. But it seems a French Minister at London had got the King to consent to two Millions of Livres, which, as Mr. Montague argues (in writing to the King and to the Lord Treasurer) was 12,000 l. less than the 200,000 l. he insisted on, and was sure he could have obtained, besides four Millions of Livres at the End of the War, which the King let drop. This is the main Substance of those Letters, which seem to be published only to shew that Mr. Montague was deeper in that Negotiation than the Lord-Treasurer; whose Letters shew him indeed to be in the Secret, but against the French, and ignorant of the King's Contract. And he seems to lay some Stress and Glory upon the Money's not being paid to him, but to Mr. Chiffinch, who, every Body knows, was the King's Closet-keeper, and one whom the King much confided in.

By these Letters it plainly appears, that a Bargain was made at the Court of France, for an Annual Sum of Money to be paid to the King of Great Britain, to induce him to sit still, and not interrupt the French King in the Progress of his Arms in Flanders. Mr. Montague, who haggled for the King at the Court of France, always insisted upon 200,000 l. per Annum during the War, and demanded also four Millions of Livres at the Conclusion of the Peace. His Arguments at that Court were, That the King was unable to support his Affairs with a less Sum than 200,000 l. per Annum; That France might very well agree to his Demand, since the Increase of Power by the Conquests (which was absolutely owing to the King's being still), was vastly great, and the Addition of Revenue no less

Mr. Montague, who had desired to be Secretary of State, finding himself opposed in it by the Lord-Treasurer, came privately over in August, 1678, and got himself chosen a Member of Parliament. The King was displeased with his Conduct, and Montague found himself in Danger; which at first he endeavoured to avoid by Flight; but unable to endure the stormy Weather his Ship was attacked with in Margate Road, he came ashore, and afterwards endeavoured to get off at Dover, but was stoppt by the Officers, which obliged him to come to London; and finally, the King having sent a Message to the House of Commons Dec. 19, accusing him of Correspondence with the Pope's Nuncio at Paris, and having ordered his Papers 1678. pers to be seized, Mr. Montague on that Occasion told the House, "He had in his Custody several Papers, which he conceived might tend very much to the Safety of his Majesty's Person, and the Preservation of the Kingdom." A Committee was thereupon immediately ordered to fetch the Writings to the House; and Mr. Montague shewed the Letters from the Lord-Treasurer relating to the Bargains abovesaid, especially two, one whereof had a Postscript of the King's own Hand. This Letter is writ by my Order: C. R. wherein a Demand was made of 6 000,000 l. per Ann. for three Years, to be paid by France to the King, upon the Allies accepting the Terms of Peace offered by France, because (says that Letter) it will probably be two or three Years before the Parliament will be in Humour to give any Supplies.

The Indignation that an English Parliament, who had been so long labouring the Point of engaging the King to come into the War, for preserving Europe against the Invasions of France, must necessarily have upon this Discovery, may well be supposed to create a Flame that was not easily to be extinguished. Montague had the Art to screen himself, and turn the Blow upon the Lord-Treasurer, who unable to stand it, at first retired, but a Bill of Attainder being brought against him in the next Parliament, and near passing, he surrendered himself, and produced the King's Pardon; but in vain, for he was committed to the Tower, where he lay many Years, as is seen in the Course of the History.

This having put the House into a Ferment, the King thought it proper to separate them, and accordingly, on the 30th of December, prorogued the Parliament to the 4th of February following, and afterwards on the 24th of January dissolved it (after it had continued in being 17 Years, 8 Months, and 17 Days, and is therefore commonly called the Long Parliament) causing a new one to be summoned to meet at Westminster the 6th of March next.

The Courts of Justice in the meantime were not idle; for on the 17th of December, 1678, three of the Popish Conspirators, William Ireland, Thomas Pickering, and John Grove, were at the Sessions-House in the Old Baily arraigned and tried for High-Treason; the Witnesses against them were Oates and Bedloe, who swore that Ireland was present at a Consult held on the 24th of April, at the White Horse Tavern in the Strand, and signed the Resolve for killing the King, which Grove and Pickering undertook to do; and that he saw them two in the Park with screwed Pistols and silver Bullets, with which they had followed the King for several Years; that in March last Pickering had a fair Opportunity, but the Flint of his Pistol was loose, and so could not shoot, for which he was corrected. For these Treasons they were condemned, and executed at Tyburn; Ireland and Grove on the 24th of January, and Pickering on the 9th of May following.

February the 10th Robert Green, Henry Berry, and Laurence Hill, were brought to Trial at the King's Bench Bar, for the Murther of Sir Edmund-bury Godfrey; where, upon the Evidence of Prance and Bedloe, before mentioned, they were all three found guilty, and were accordingly executed at Tyburn on the 21st of February.

And now the Business of the Nation was canvassing for electing

Mem

Members to represent them in the ensuing Parliament, wherein there was much tugging between two Parties, that the whole Kingdom began now to be divided in two; which were afterwards called by the two ignominious Names of Whig and Tory. The former being the Dissenters in Religion from the Established Church, who by pretending an extraordinary Concern for the Protestant Religion, and by inculcating and magnifying Fears and Jealousies in the Minds of the People (already terrified with the late Popish Plot) added to their Party many honest well meaning Men, that fell in with the Croud, and Popery being the Cry, they pursued with such Vigour, that they over-shot their Mark, and had almost run down even Monarchy itself.

The Tories, as they were called, were the Partizans of the Court, and such who, though they had true Detestation of Popery, remembering the Miseries we were so lately got out of, were unwilling to enter into new Broils, and therefore resolved to stand by the King, and rather to bear with Faults in the Government, than permit it to be overturned, which in their Apprehension would have been the certain Consequence of those violent Courses the others would have taken.

The Time of the Parliament's Sitting drawing nigh, his Majesty commanded his Brother the Duke of York to absent himself, because, as he told the Parliament at the opening of it, He would not leave the malicious Men room to say, he had not removed all Causes which could be pretended to influence him towards Popish Counsels. And accordingly, the Duke and Dutchess departed from Whitehall March the 3d, and went to reside at Brussels in Flanders.

A. D. 1679. But tho' the King hoped by this, and many other Condescensions, to dispose the House of Commons to comply with his Desires, yet they were the same Men still; for so soon as the usual Preliminaries were adjusted, they again impeached the Earl of Danby, pursued him so close, that he absented and producing a Pardon, they voted against the Validity of it, and drew up a Bill of Attainder against him; but as it was just upon passing, he came in, and was committed to the Tower, where he continued a long Time with the Popish Lords that were there before. A Bill was voted to be brought in to exclude the Duke of York from succeeding to the Crown. Addresses were made to the King to remove several of the Ministers of State and chief Counsellors, and all standing Forces declared to be against Law; a Dispute raised, and hotly pursued, against the Bishops Power of voting in Capital Cases; and the Prosecution of the Popish Plot began to be neglected; so that the King perceiving them not in a Temper fit to do the Business he desired, on the 27th of May prorogued them to the 14th of August.

Before the Prorogation of the Parliament, News came from Scotland, that the Archbishop of St. Andrews was, on the 3d of May, most barbarously and inhumanly murdered, by a desperate Crew of blood thirsty Villains (being of the Party called Cameronians and Field Conventiclers) who assassinated him within a few Miles of his own House, as he returned home from Edinburgh in his Coach; and immediately after a Rebellion broke out there: To suppress which, the King sent down some Forces under the 1679. the Command of the Duke of Monmouth, who in a Battle at Bothwell-Bridge, defeated and totally routed these Rebellious Fanaticks.

On the 30th of June five Jesuits and Popish Priests, viz. Tho Whitebread William Harcourt, John Fenwick, John Garwen, and Anth. Turner, were brought to Trial at the Sessions-House in the Old Baily. Their Crime was High-Treason, in conspiring the Death of the King, and the Subversion of the Protestant Religion. The Evidence against them were Oates, Bedloe, Dugdale, and Prance, who swore, that Whitebread and Harcourt were present at the Consult in April, and signed the Resolve for killing the King, as did also Garwen and Turner; that Fenwick was privy to the Design, and carried Letters to and fro concerning it. So they were all found guilty.

The next Day Richard Langborn was for the same Crime of High-Treason indicted also, and upon the same Evidence found guilty, for that he likewise was privy to, and assisted in the Design of killing the King, and had obtained a Commission from Rome to be Advocate to the Army they were to raise in England, which Oates saw, with several other Commissions, at Langborn's Chamber. They were all six accordingly executed at Tyburn, the five Jesuits on the 20th of June, and Langborn on the 14th of July.

July the 12th, the Parliament was by Proclamation dissolved, and another called to sit at Westminster the 7th of October following.

On the 18th of July Sir George Wakeman, Physician to the Queen, William Rumley, William Marshall, and James Corker, Priests, were brought to a Trial at the Old Baily, upon an Indictment of High-Treason: But now Oates's Evidence lost its Authority, for in this Trial he stuck not to charge the Queen herself with assisting Sir George Wakeman in poisoning the King; and whereas he had before mentioned Sir George Wakeman's Design as a thing he had heard of only, and acknowledged before the House of Lords that he did not know Wakeman's Hand, and before the Council declared he could charge him with nothing upon his own Knowledge, yet here he swore that he saw a Letter mentioning the Design of poisoning the King, which he knew to be Wakeman's Hand, having at another Time seen him write in his Chamber the same Hand with that Letter; that he was present when Abby offered Sir George 10,000 l. to poison the King, and that he saw his Hand to a Receipt for 5000 l. in part. Bedloe's Evidence was only, That he knew Sir George Wakeman received 2,000 l. which was after made up 5,000 l. which Harcourt told him was upon that Account. Against the rest it was sworn, that they were privy to a Promise of raising 6,000 l. among the Benedictines to carry on the Design, which was not very fully proved; so that the jury brought them all four in Not guilty.

Whilst the King was this Summer at Windsor; he fell sick of an Ague which lasted longer than was at first expected; the Duke of York then at Brussel had notice of it, and on the 2d of September unexpectedly came to Windsor to see him; but his Majesty being perfectly recovered, he went over to Flanders again, and having made a short Stay there, he returned with his Dutchess and whole Family to England.

In the mean time the Election for Parliament Men having been carried on with great Warmth by both Parties, the King put off the Sitting of the Parliament by several Prorogations to the 21st of October, 1680.

The Countess of Powis was on the 4th of November, 1679, accused before the King and Council by Thomas Dangerfield, of several treasonable Practices, and committed Prisoner to the Tower. And there began a new Plot; for Dangerfield accused the Countess of Powis and others, of tampering with some Persons to swear against Oates and Bedloe, and by that means to invalidate their Testimony. To which was added, a strange Account of a Design of throwing the Plot upon the Protestants, by lodging treasonable Papers in their Houses, which being sought for by Authority, were to be there found, and a Catalogue of their Names was found in a Meal-Tub; which made this be called the Meal-Tub-Plot.

A. D. 1680, the Generality of the new Faction had for a long time eyed the Duke of Monmouth, as a fit Person to head a Party, and consequently flattered and cajoled him to a better Opinion of himself and his Interest, than was fit for him to have entertained: And now nothing else will serve them but to have him their apparent to the Crown; to which End a Rumour was raised of a Black Box, which Sir Gilbert Gerard was said either to have in Custody, or to have seen, containing a Writing that did import a Marriage, or Contract of Marriage, between the King and the Duke of Monmouth's Mother. This being confidently reported, the King, on the 6th of April, called together an extraordinary Council, before which Sir Gilbert Gerard appeared, and being examined, declared upon Oath, that he knew not any thing of such Box or Writing. And his Majesty, to prevent the bad Consequences of that bold Calumny ordered a solemn Declaration, which he then made, and which referred to several former Declarations, of his never being married to the Duke of Monmouth's Mother, to be printed and published; and in June following commanded the said Duke to withdraw, and for some time reside beyond Seas, which he obeyed, and went abroad; but, upon the Duke of York's Return to Court, not long after, came privately over again, and came to London, where his Friends, who had Intelligence of it, received him joyfully with ringing of Bells and Bonfires; whereupon the King was pleased to remove him from his Offices and Places of Trust. This the House of Commons in January following resented, and voted, That it was done by the Influence of the Duke of York; and ordered an Address to be made to his Majesty, to restore his Grace the Duke of Monmouth to what had been taken from him.

The Time of the Sitting of the Parliament approaching, the King was so indulgent to the Fears which the People still retained of the Popish Plot, that he published a Proclamation, commanding all Papists, or reputed Papists, to depart from the Cities of London and Westminster, and from within ten Miles of the same.

And now the 21st of October being come, the Parliament assembled, to whom the King made a Speech, intimating, That the Prorogations he had made, had been advantageous to the neighbouring States, and useful to himself, having employed that Time, in making an Alliance with Spain, as he had done before with Holland; which being so much desired by former Parliaments, he believed must needs be acceptable to this, as being the best Measures that could be taken for the Safety of England, and Repose of Christendom; and could not but attain their Ends, if our Home Divisions did not render our Friendship

1680. ship less considerable Abroad. He gave them all Assurances that nothing should be wanting on his Part for the Security of the Protestant Religion, which he resolved to maintain, and to concur with them in any proposed Remedies that might consist with the preserving the Crown in its due and legal Course of Descent; to which Purpose he recommended to them the speedy Examination of the Plot, and that the Lords in the Tower might be brought to their Trials. Then he laid before them the Matter of Tangier, and the Expences he had been at to maintain that Place, upon which he desired their Advice and Assistance. After which, he exhorted them to Union, and to avoid gratifying the publick Enemy by unseasonable Disputes; which, if they should happen, the World would see was no Fault of his, who had done what was possible to keep them in Peace; concluding, that from their Prudence and good Affections, he could fear nothing of that kind, but trusted they would use their best Endeavours to bring this Parliament to a happy Conclusion.

During the Interval of Parliament, Petitions with great Rolls of Subscriptions, had been presented to the King for their Sitting; Which his Majesty publicly declaring his Dislike of. Addresses were also made to him by the other Party, testifying their Abhorrence of them.

The House of Commons, after they had chosen a Speaker, who was William Williams, Esq; and adjusted Preliminaries, immediately fell upon the Matter of Petitioning, and resolved, That it is the undoubted Right of the Subject to petition the King for the Sitting of Parliaments, and redressing of Grievances; That to traduce such Petitioning as a Violation of Duty, and to represent it to his Majesty as tumultuous and seditious, was to betray the Liberty of the Subject, and contributed to the Design of subverting the ancient legal Constitution of this Kingdom, and introducing arbitrary Power; and appointed a Committee to enquire after all such Persons as have offended against the Right of the Subject. Many Persons who had appeared against petitioning, being brought before them, were committed to the Serjeant at Arms, where they lay imprisoned at great Expence, till they acknowledged their Fault, and begged Pardon in the House.

The House presented an Address to the King, declaring their Resolutions to defend and support the King's Person and Government, and the Protestant Religion; and ordered their Votes to be printed. The Exclusion of the Duke, having from the Beginning of the Session been under Debate, on the 2d of November they passed these Votes. That the Duke of York being a Papist, the Hopes of his coming to the Crown hath given the greatest Countenance and Encouragement to the present Designs and Conspiracies against the King and the Protestant Religion. Whereupon resolved, That in Defence of the King and Government, they would stand by the King with their Lives and Fortunes, and if he came to an untimely Death they would revenge it upon the Papist. And then resolved, That a Bill brought in to disable James Duke of York to inherit the Imperial Crown of this Realm. Which Bill was accordingly brought in, and being passed, was carried up to the Lord but there rejected.

Next they resolve, That a Bill brought in for the better uniting of Majesty's Protestant Subjects; which was afterward seconded by a Resolution olve, That it is the Opinion of this House, that the Acts of Parliament made in the Reigns of Queen Elizabeth, and King James, against Recusants, ought not to be extended to Protestant Dissenters. And ordered a Bill to be brought in, to repeal all or any Part of the Act made in the 35th Year of Queen Elizabeth. And farther resolved, That the House be moved that a Bill be brought in, for an Association of all his Majesty's Protestant Subjects, for the Safety of his Majesty's Person, the Defence of the Protestant Religion, and the Preservation of his Majesty's Protestant Subjects, against all Invasions and Oppositions whatsoever; and for preventing the Duke of York, or any Papist from succeeding to the Crown. Another Vote passed, That it is the Opinion of this House, that the Prosecution of Protestant Dissenters upon the Penal Laws is at this Time grievous to the Subject, a weakening of the Protestant Interest, and an Encouragement to Popery, and dangerous to the Peace of the Kingdom. And an Address was made to the King, to stop the Proceedings against Dissenters.

The Debates about the Bill of Exclusion, and examining of some Witnesses about the Plot, and the above-mentioned Votes, with the Debates relating to them, had taken up all their Time; so that the taking Care of Tangier, which the King in his Speech desired, had been quite omitted; wherefore his Majesty, on the 15th of November, sent a Message to the House of Commons to put them in Mind of it.

The Town and Garrison of Tangier in Africa, which came to the King by his Marriage with the Princess of Portugal, had for some time been straitly besieged by the Moors, and for want of necessary Succours and Supplies, in great Danger of being lost; this was a Place which the preceding Parliament judged to be of so great Importance, that a Bill was then ordered to be brought in for annexing it to the Imperial Crown of England; and a Vote passed, That those who did advise his Majesty to part with Tangier to any foreign Prince or State, or were instrumental therein, ought to be accounted Enemies to the King and Kingdom. But the present Parliament believing the Revenue already granted to his Majesty would, with due Application, suffice for the Preservation of this Town, instead of the Supply demanded in an Address told his Majesty, That though in due Time they should omit nothing for the Preservation of every Part of his Majesty's Dominions; yet the Dangers they were now under from the Power of Popish Counsels, would not at present permit them to enter into Considerations thereupon.

On the 30th of November, William Viscount Stafford was brought to Trial before the Peers in Westminster-Hall, being charged with High-Treason, in conspiring to depose and murder the King, and extirpate the Protestant Religion. The Evidence against him were Dugdale, who declared that the Lord Stafford was present at a Meeting at Tixall in Staffordshire, where it was resolved to kill the King, and introduce Popery; and that the said Lord proffered him 500 l. to kill the King, saying, That he was an excommunicated Traitor, and an Enemy to Jesus Christ; Dr. Oates, who deposed, That while he was in Spain he saw several Letters from the Lord Stafford, wherein he assured the Jesuits of his Zeal in promoting the Catholick Designs; that in June 1678, the Prisoner received at Fenwick's Chamber a Commission to be Pay-Master of the Army; that he was then going to Staffordshire, and said he doubted not, but at his Return, Grove should do the Business; and Mr. Tuberville, who swore that the Prisoner told him of a Design to kill the King, and would have had him to have done it. To which his Lordship answered in general, That he was innocent, that he was always loyal to the King, and that he hated Treason, and never held the King-killing Doctrine. And to invalidate the Evidence against him, by some Objections to the Witnesses, he proved that he was not at Tixall at the Time Dugdale swore he was, and that when he was there Dugdale was never with him but when his Servants were by; which was again contradicted by other Witnesses for the King; for the Particulars of all which we must refer the Reader to the printed Trial: A Committee of the House of Commons were the Prosecutors, and he was at last found guilty by a Majority of 24 Voices. He accordingly received Sentence of Death, and was beheaded on Tower-Hill on the 29th of December.

that

1680.

This Trial being over, the House of Commons returned again to the Business of Exclusion, which they still pressed very hard; and the King having by Speeches and Messages repeated his Assurances of granting any thing for the Security of the Protestant Religion, that did not infringe the Right of Succession, and urged them to take Care of Tangier, if they intended to preserve it, the Expence of it being above his Power: The House voted,

That there was no Security for the Protestant Religion, the King's Life, or the established Government of the Kingdom, without passing a Bill for disabling the Duke of York to inherit the Imperial Crown of England, and that to rely on any other Means, was not only insufficient but dangerous.

That unless a Bill were passed for excluding the Duke of York, the House could not give any Supply to his Majesty, without Danger to his Majesty's Person, the Hazard of the Protestant Religion, and Breach of Trust in them to the People.

That they who did advise the King to insist upon an Opinion against the Bill, had given him pernicious Counsel, and were Promoters of Popery, and Enemies to the King and Kingdom.

That it was the Opinion of the House, that the Earl of Hallifax, the Marquis of Worcester, and the Earl of Clarendon, were the Persons that gave that pernicious Advice: And that therefore an Address should be made for their Removal from the King's Person and Presence, and from their Offices and Employments.

Also,

That whoever should lend, or cause to be lent, any Money upon any Branch of the King's Revenues should be adjudged Obstructors of the Sitting of Parliament, and be responsible for it in Parliament. And,

That whoever should accept or buy any Tally of Anticipation upon any Part of the King's Revenue, or whoever should pay such Tally, should be deemed guilty of the same Offence, and be liable to be questioned in Parliament.

The other Business transacted this Parliament was the examining certain Witnesses concerning a Plot in Ireland; these were Macnamar, Hethrington, Eustace Comyn, &c. who swore, That the Earl of Tyrone, and others, had a Design to extirpate the Protestant Religion in Ireland, &c. upon which both Houses voted,

That they were fully satisfied,
that

that there was, and had been for several Years, a Popish Plot in Ireland, for massacring the English, and subverting the Protestant Religion, and the Established Government of that Kingdom. And the Earl of Tyrone was impeached of High Treason, and committed to Prison.

Sir Edward Seymour was impeached by the House of Commons of High Misdemeanours, for having misapplied some Money formerly given by the Parliament, and appropriated to the Fleet.

Some Men had preferred to the Grand Jury of Middlesex a Bill against the Duke of York, as being a Papist, &c, which the Court discountenanced, and the Lord Chief Justice Scroggs discharged the Grand Jury, without giving them Opportunity to present it. This was much resented by the House of Commons; and after the Matter had been examined into, for that and such other Things, Articles of Impeachment were drawn up against the Lord Chief Justice Scroggs, and the same ordered against several of the other Judges.

Near three Months had been now spent, and nothing of what the King desired done, or like to be done, the Heats rather increasing than abating; his Majesty therefore, on the 10th of January, prorogued the Parliament to the 20th, and soon after dissolved it; appointing another to meet at Oxford in March following.

In this Interval of Parliament, a certain Person, one Fitz-Harris an Irishman, was seized for writing a most scandalous and seditious Libel against his Majesty and the Duke of York, and committed to Prison. I mention this, because there was a great Bustle in the succeeding Parliament concerning him.

The 21st of March 1680-1, was 1689. the Day the Parliament met at Oxford; to whom his Majesty made a Speech to this Effect:

That the unwarrantable Proceedings of the last House of Commons was the reason of parting with them, for that he would never use Arbitrary Government himself, and would not suffer it in others. That whoever calmly considered the Assurances he had renewed to that last Parliament, and what he had recommended to them, viz. his foreign Alliance, the Examination of the Plot, and the Preservation of Tangier, and reflected upon their unsuitable Returns, might rather wonder at his Patience, than that he grew weary of their Proceedings; that it was his Interest, and should be as much his Care as theirs, to preserve the Liberty of the Subject, the Crown not being safe when that was in Danger.

That by calling this Parliament so soon, he let them see that no Irregularities of Parliaments should make him out of Love with them: By which Means he gave them another Opportunity to provide for the Publick Security, and had given one Evidence more, that he had not neglected his Part. He hoped the ill Success of former Heats would dispose them to a better Temper.

That as for the future Prosecution of the Plot, the Trial of the Lords in the Tower, &c he omitted to press them, as being obvious to Consideration, and so necessary for the publick Safety. But desired them not to lay so much Weight upon the Expedient against Popery, as to determine all others ineffectual. That what he had so often declared, touching the Succession, he should not recede from.

But that, to remove all reasonable Fears that might arise from the T Possibility

1680.

Possibility of a Popish Succession, if Means could be found that in such a Case the Administration should remain in Protestant Hands, he should be willing to hearken to any such Expedient, by which Religion might be secured, and Monarchy not destroyed. Lastly, he advised them to make the known and established Laws the Rules and Measures of their Votes.

After which the Commons returned to their House, and chose William Williams, Esq; again for their Speaker, and the Preliminaries being over, the Votes were ordered to be printed, and an Enquiry was made after a Bill that had passed both Houses the last Session, but was never presented for the Royal Assent; this, as they had great Reason, they strictly enquired after. Next, in taking his Majesty's Speech into Consideration, they came again upon the Matter of Exclusion, and it was by some proposed, that since it was plain the King would not pass the Bill, an Expedient might be proposed: This took up a whole Day's Debate, but was over-ruled, and the old Bill ordered to be brought in. Next a Message was sent to the Lords, to demand Judgment against the Earl of Danby upon the Impeachment of the Commons.

Then the House went upon the Examination of Edward Fitz-Harris, who having been privy to the Popish Plot, was by the Commons impeached for the same; and the Impeachment ordered to be carried up to the Lords by Mr. Secretary Jenkins, which he esteeming an Affront to the King (whose Prisoner, as I have told you, Fitz-Harris then was) did refuse to do it; but at length, to avoid Contention, he submitted, and accordingly carried the Impeachment to the Lords; but it was there rejected, as a Matter not belonging to them, but to the common Courts of Justice; this the Commons were pleased very highly to resent; and voted,

1. That it was the Right of the Commons in Parliament, to impeach any Peer or Commoner for Treason or other Crimes; and that the Refusal of the Lords to proceed upon such Impeachment was a Denial of Justice, and a Violation of the Constitution of Parliaments.

2. That the Resolution of the Lords, That Fitz-Harris should be proceeded against at common Law, and not by way of Impeachment, was a Violation of the Constitution of Parliament, &c.

3. That for any inferior Court to proceed against Fitz-Harris, or any Person lying under an Impeachment in Parliament, was a high Breach of the Privilege of Parliament.

These Proceedings tired the King's Patience, so that he came to the House on the 28th, and suddenly dissolved the Parliament; and immediately took Coach for Windsor, and thence came to London the same Night; by which he happily defeated the wicked Design that some evil Men had upon his Person, as will appear hereafter. Shortly after a Protestation of 29 Lords, the Duke of Mormouth being at the Head of them, came out against this Proceeding of the House of Lords in Fitz-Harris's Case.

A. D. 1681, his Majesty, to vindicate himself from the malicious Aspersions of disaffected Persons, on the 8th of April, set forth a Declaration of the Reasons that moved him to dissolve the two last Parliaments, which he ordered to be read in all Churches, wherein he set forth, With how much Reluctancy he did it, and how absolute his Intentions were to have complied, as far far as would have consisted with the very Being of the Government, with any thing that could be proposed for preserving the established Religion, the Liberty and Property of the Subject, and supporting the Foreign Alliances. Then enumerated the unwarrantable Proceedings of the Commons, in arbitrarily taking divers Persons into Custody, in declaring others Enemies to the King and Kingdom without legal Process. Their Votes against lending the King Money, and their Vote against prosecuting Dissenters, whereby they assumed a Power of dispensing with Laws: And that tho' he promised to grant any Limitations of the Power of a Popish Successor, yet they would think of no other Expedient, but that of a total Exclusion, which he could not in Honour, Justice, or Conscience, consent to. That the Business of Fitz-Harris was carried to that Extremity, by the Votes of the Commons, that there was no Hope of Reconciliation, which put the two Houses out of a Capacity of transacting Business together; which Heats and Disappointments of the Publick Ends caused him to put an End to these two Parliaments.

Stephen Colledge, a Joyner by Trade, and commonly called the Protestant Joyner, was indicted of High-Treason, and the Bill preferred to the Grand-Jury of London, which was sworn to by Dugdale and Smith, two of the Witnesses to the Popish Plot, but could not be brought to a Trial, because the Jury brought in the Bill Ignoramus; however, he was afterwards tried and condemned at Oxford, as will be shewn in its proper Place.

The Impeachment of Fitz-Harris, and the Votes thereupon, were esteemed by the King, as he expressed in his Declarations, as a Purpose to delay and hinder his being tried. However, on the 27th of April, an Indictment of High-Treason was presented against him, and found by the Grand Jury; and after long Arguings concerning the Jurisdiction of the Court, upon account of the abovementioned Votes, he was on the 9th of June brought to Trial; the Evidence against him was Edmund Everard, who deposed, That the Prisoner hired him to write a Pamphlet to scandalize the King, &c. which he discovered to Sir William Waller and others, whom he placed in private Places to over-hear Fitz-Harris read it, &c. That the Libel was to be presented to the French Ambassador, and that it was to beget a Difference here, while the French should gain Flanders, &c. Then the Paper was produced with Fitz-Harris's Amendments, in which were these Words: If James be guilty, Charles is too, they are Brethren in Iniquity, they are in Confederacy with the Pope and French.—Let the English Spirit be up, and move us all as one Man to Self-defence; nay, and if need be, to open Action, and sling off these intolerable Riders. In another Place: J. and C. both Brethren in Iniquity, corrupt both in Root and Branch—they study to enslave you—Where is that old English Spirit? O brave Englishmen, look to your own Defence, e'er it be too late! rouse up your Spirits! Again, As it is the Right of Parliaments to make a Law against a Popish Successor, so it is their Right to dethrone any Possessor that follows evil Counsellors—Then let all be ready; let the City stand by the Parliament, with Assistance in any extreme Way, if Occasion, &c. For which Libel he was found Guilty of High-Treason, and was executed at Tyburn on the 1st of July.

On the 3d of May, Oliver Plunket, titular Primate of Ireland,

1681. was arraigned at the King's-Bench Bar for High Treason, and on the 8th of June brought to Trial for the same; the Evidence against him were, Florence Wyer, who deposed, That there had been a Plot for several Years to introduce a French Army into Ireland, to destroy all the Protestants, which the Prisoner was privy to, and assistant in; Henry O Neal, Neal O Neal, Owen Murfy, and others, who all testified the same thing. So he was found Guilty, and executed at Tyburn with Fitz Harris.

Stephen Colledge having committed Treason at Oxford, as well as at London, the King ordered him to be carried thither to be tried for the same, where he was accordingly indicted on the 17th of August; the Witnesses against him were Stephen Dugdale, who deposed, That he had often heard Colledge rail at the King, saying, 'He was a Papist, was in the Popish Plot, and had a Hand in the Murder of Sir Edmundbury Godfrey: That he would arm himself and be at Oxford, having several stout Men that should stand by him, if there should be a Rising: That at Oxford, upon the King's not yielding to the Commons, he said, 'Let him begin (meaning the King) as soon as he would, he cared not how soon, for their Party [the King's] were but a Handful to his: And that when the King went from Oxford, he said, 'The Rogue was afraid of himself, he was shirked away: John Smith, who swore, that he said to him, 'That the King was a Papist; that he doubted not but the King would be brought to the Block, as his Father was; that the Prisoner shewed him Arms and Armour he had provided, saying, 'These are the Things which ' shall destroy the pitiful Guards of Rowley [the King]; that he told him the City was provided with Powder and Bullets; that he would go to Oxford, expecting Sport there upon the Divisions between the King and Parliament, and he would be one that would seize the King, &c. That meeting the Prisoner after he came to Oxford, he told him, 'That he was afraid, and run away like to beshit himself: Haynes, who testified many Things to the same Purpose. Likewise several scandalous Pamphlets were produced, which he acknowledged himself the Author of. The Prisoner endeavoured to invalidate the Evidence, by discrediting the Persons of the King's Witnesses. Upon the whole, the Jury found him Guilty; and he was accordingly executed the 31st of August at Oxford.

The Earl of Shaftsbury being accused of Treasonable Practices, was committed to the Tower, and on the 24th of November a Bill of Indictment was preferred against him to the Grand Jury of London, before whom was produced a Paper, importing an Association to oppose the Duke of York's coming to the Crown, by Force of Arms, &c. which Paper was found in the Lord Shaftsbury's Closet, and eight Persons swore against the said Lord very treasonable and irreverent Words that he had uttered against the King, and that he had hired fifty Men to attend him at the Oxford Parliament, where, upon any Disturbance, they were to have seized the Guards, &c. But the Jury brought in the Bill Ignoramus, and so obstructed his further Trial.

The Parliament which sat in Scotland, July the 28th, under the Duke of York, the King's High-Commissioner there, enacted several Laws, and and appointed a Test (which that Nation extremely resented) for securing the established Government, and asserting the Right of Succession; and did likewise, in Answer to his Majesty's Letter, which was read to them at the opening of the Sessions, with all Expressions of Duty and Loyalty acknowledge the Honour his Majesty had been pleased to do them, in sending his Brother to preside as High Commissioner among them.

A. D. 1682, on the 12th of February, this Year, there happened a very sad Accident, in this Manner; Thomas Thynn, of Longleet, Esq; a Gentleman of a very great Estate, was set upon in his Coach near the Hay-market, by three Russians, of whom one firing a Blunderbuss at him, discharg'd two Brace of Bullets into his Belly, whereof he died soon after. The Murtherers were Christopher Vratz, George Boroki, and John Stern, all three Foreigners, and Dependents on Count Conigsmark, a Swedish Lord, who had incited them to the Attempt. They were all apprehended, the three Russians in Town, and the Count in Disguise at Gravesend, endeavouring to make his Escape beyond Sea; and being brought to Trial for the Murther, the principal Actors were condemned to be hanged; but the Count was by the Jury brought in Not Guilty. They were accordingly executed in the Pall-mall, near the Place where they had committed the Fact, and Boroki, a Pole, who fired the Blunderbuss, was afterwards hanged in Chains at Mile-End.

The Duke of York came from Scotland in March, and having made some short Stay in England, in the Beginning of May embarked in the Gloucester Frigate, attended with several Persons of Quality, and some other Ships and Yachts, and set sail again for Scotland; 1682. but when he was out at Sea, and off of Yarmouth Road, the Ship wherein he was, early in the Morning, on the 5th of May, struck upon the Lemon Ore Sands, though the Weather was fair, and one Ayres, reckoned the best Coaster in England, his Pilot; the Duke put off in his Pinnace with some Persons of Quality, and saved himself on board a Yatch, where he had not long been before he saw the Frigate sink to the Bottom, in which above an Hundred and Fifty Persons perished, and some of them Gentlemen of Quality; as the Earl of Roxborough, the Lord Obrian, and the Laird of Hopton, Lieutenant Hyde, Brother to the Earl of Clarendon, and others; he afterwards arrived in Scotland, and on the 27th of the same Month returned with his Dutcheß and Lady Anne, to Whitehall.

The Election of Sheriffs for London, on Midsummer-Day this Year, caused a great Disturbance; the Occasion thus: It had been an ancient Custom for the Lord-Mayor, at the Bridge-house Feast, to drink to some considerable Citizen, thereby nominating him for Sheriff at the next Election, which the Citizens had used to comply with, and commonly chose that Person with another for their Sheriffs. Sir John Moor, who was Mayor this Year, had, according to this Custom, drank to Dudley North, Esq; and issued his Precept to the Companies to meet at Guildhall for the Confirmation of him, and chusing another to be his Colleague.

The Citizens met accordingly, and made a very numerous Assembly; but this new Form of Confirmation, which had never before been seen in the Precept, raised such an Indignation, that it was resolved solved to lay aside the Lord Mayor's Election, and proceed to the Election of two, out of four proposed, viz. North and Box on one Side, and Papillon and Dubois on the other; this was very warmly pursued, and was as zealously opposed by the Lord-Mayor's Party, who cried out for supporting the Honour of the Chair, and conforming to the ancient Custom. And a Poll being demanded, the Lord Mayor, contrary to all former Practice, provided Books and Clerks to take it; the Sheriffs, as usual, claimed this as their Business, and provided other Books; so that there were two Pollings at the same time, which caused very great quarrelling and Disorder, and made the Lord-Mayor interpose his Authority, and by Proclamation to adjourn the Court to another Day, and departed out of the Hall, but not without Indignities and Assaults from some of the other Party, who, notwithstanding the Adjournment, staid still with the Sheriffs, and polled on till Night.

1682.

For this the two Sheriffs were by the King and Counsel committed to the Tower, where they lay from Monday to Friday, that by a Habeas Corpus they were bailed. After their Enlargement, they still persisted, and declared Papillon and Dubois Sheriffs for the Year ensuing; while the Lord-Mayor went on also, and Mr. Box having the Majority in his Books, he declared North and Box duly elected Sheriffs for the next Year. The other Party petitioned the Court of Aldermen, that Mr. Papillon and Mr. Dubois might be called forth to give Bond to serve as Sheriffs the next Year. To which the Court answered, That they would maintain the Rights and Privileges of the Chair and the whole City; that they would take care that such as were lawfully elected should take upon them the Office of Sheriff, referring the Matter to Law, if the Petitioners thought they did otherwise.

All the Bustle was not over, for Mr. Box fined; so another was to be chosen in his Place; this was rejected by the other Party, who not acknowledging the Election of him valid, refused to chuse another, but clamoured against it. Nevertheless the Lord Mayor proceeded, and the Majority of Voices falling upon Peter Rich, Esq; he was thereupon declared Sheriff, and the Court dissolved.

On Michaelmas Day, at the Election of a Lord-Mayor, the Heats were renewed; for Sir William Pritchard, who was the senior Alderman below the Chair, being, according to the ancient Method, put up by one Party, was by the other Party opposed, and Sir Thomas Gould, who was of a far later standing, and Henry Cornish, Esq; who had been Sheriff but the Year before, put up against him, and a Poll being taken, the Majority fell upon Gould and Cornish, till by a Scrutiny it appeared there had been many false Pollers on their Side, who being rejected, the Election rested upon Sir William Pritchard, who was accordingly sworn.

Mr. Pilkington, the late Sheriff, in the Court of Aldermen used some indecent expressions against the Duke of York; for which being afterwards sued in an Action of Scandalum Magnatum, in the Court of King's Bench, he was cast, and an Hundred thousand Pound Damages given the Duke, for which he lay several Years in the King's Bench Prison.

Nov. 29, Rupert Prince Palatine of the Rhine, Son to the Princess Elizabeth, Daughter to King James I. departed this Life in the 63d Year

Year of his Age, and was buried at Westminster on the 6th of December following.

A. D. 1683, the two late Sheriffs, Pilkington and Shute, the Lord Gray of Wark, Sir Tho. Player, Mr. Cornish, Mr. Bethel, and 8 more, were on the 26th of March indicted for a Riot, for continuing the Poll, after the Lord-Mayor had adjourned it on Midsummer-Day, as above mentioned; and were all severally fined for the same.

In April following, one Broom, Coroner of the City, at the Suit of Papillon and Dubois, arrested the Lord-Mayor, the Sheriffs, and some of the Aldermen, and for some time detained them at Skinners-Hall; which being a strange Affront to Authority, might well cause a great Consternation; but to prevent any Disorder, the Lieutenanty immediately assembled, and ordered all the Regiments of the Trained Bands to be raised with all Speed: For this Sir William Pritchard afterwards sued Mr. Papillon (Mr. Dubois dying before it came to a Trial, and recovered 10,000 l. Damage) against him.

These Proceedings in the City moved the King, that he might take away the Occasion of all Heats, to bring a Quo Warranto against the Charter, which was grounded upon some Exactions in the Market, and the having levied a Tax upon the Citizens, for rebuilding the Conduits, &c. in which it was adjudged they exceeded the Bounds of their Charter; and thereupon in Trinity-Term, this Year, after long Pleadings on both sides in the Court of Kings-Bench at Westminster-Hall, the Court declared their Opinion, That the Liberties and Franchises of the City of London be seized into the King's Hands.

After which the King appointed the Magistrates all the Time of his Reign, and till the Restoration of the Charter by King James, at the Coming of the Prince of Orange.

The like Quo Warranto's were also brought against all the other Corporations in the Kingdom, which by like Judgment were surrendered to the King.

A fatal Remedy for a slight Disease, and like cutting off an Arm to cure a sore Finger. A Faction among the People was indeed too bold: But the Generality of the Nation were so passionately affected to the King, that perhaps never had any Prince enjoyed a greater Share of his Peoples Love, which his Majesty could not be insensible of; and therefore (to say nothing of the Illegality of the Act) 'tis very wonderful that a King so applauded for his Clemency, could so far forget the paternal Care of a Prince, as to permit (for the Faults of a few) his Authority to be made use of in laying the Ax to the very Root of all his Peoples Liberties; for it was no less, since by this seizing the Franchises of Corporations, the King was virtually possessed of the Power of chusing a large Majority of the People's Representatives in Parliament; and by the Management of cunning Ministers, would soon have had the Power, if they could have the Will, to have repealed all those Laws which our Ancestors had obtained for the Security of our Liberties.

On the 12th of June this Year, a wicked Conspiracy was discovered by one Josiah Keeling, a Citizen, and by Trade a Salter; a Person of good Credit in his Calling, but a most busy Stickler in the late publick Oppositions, particularly had committed that Assault upon Authority, in the Person of the Lord-Mayor, 1683.

Mayor, being the very Man that, by being constituted a special Bailiff for that Occasion, did arrest Sir William Pritchard in his Mayoralty, as above related; by which bold Piece of Service, and his former Activity, he obtained that Credit with the Party, that he was made a Confident in all their Counsels, and was to have been one of the Forty that were to have assassinated his Majesty. But it pleased God to touch his Soul with the Horror of his Crime, so that he could not rest, till after much Conflict in his Mind, he had resolved to discover it, and accordingly, by the Advice of a Friend, addressed himself to the Lord Dartmouth, who remitted him to Sir Lyonel Jenkins, Secretary of State; before whom he deposed, That there was and had been, for some Months past, a horrid Conspiracy on Foot, for raising a Rebellion or general Insurrection all over the Kingdom, and for taking away the Life of the King, and his Brother the Duke of York; whose Evidence being corroborated by his Brother's, who had also been in the Cabals, Warrants were thereupon issued against the Conspirators, and many of them were taken and committed to Prison, several of whom confessed, and confirmed Keeling's Evidence, with a full and ample Relation of the whole Affair; these were Thomas Sheppard, a Merchant, at whose House some of the Consults were held; Colonel John Rumsey, who had been a Soldier abroad, and since a Dependent on the Earl of Shaftsbury, and was one of that Party that were for assassinating the King: Robert West, Barrister at Law; who had been very active in this Design, and had himself bought a Quantity of Arms to be used in it: Zac. Bourn, a Brewer, at whose House Ferguson lodged, and several others; which, together with the Confessions of those that were executed, do give such undeniable Proof of the Truth of the whole Relation, that there is no Room for Doubt. The Sum of the Evidence, in short, according to the History of this Conspiracy, written by the then Bishop of Rocheſter, was thus:

This Design was first set on Foot after the late Election in London, which being carried so contrary to their Expectation, had extremely enraged the whole Party; and they were now resolved to get that by Force, which they had been so long endeavouring to obtain by Law. To which Purpose the E. of Shaftsbury, the D. of Monmouth, &c. held frequent Consults for raising a general Insurrection in London, and in some distant Countries, and by that Means seize the Guards, &c. And the 19th of Nov. was pitched upon to be the Day for this wicked Attempt; but it seems their Friends could not get ready so soon, so that nothing could at that Time be effected; the cunning Lord Shaftsbury, considering that Delays were dangerous, and that it being imparted to so many, it was impossible to be kept long secret, thought fit to take care of himself, and slipt over into Holland; where not long after he ended his Days.

This hasty Flight of his at first somewhat damp'd them, but in a little Time they recover'd their Spirits, and renew'd their Consultations with great Vigour; and now it was agreed, that one Grand Council should be constituted, and frequently held by the Chiefs of the Party, from whence Orders and Directions were to be issued to the inferior Cabals; which Council sat the first time about the middle of January 1682-3, and consulted upon Means for an Insurrection.

It seemed necessary that Scotland also also should be drawn into the common Concern, and the Discontents and Divisions of that Kingdom being grown to a great Height, easily made way for a Coalition; and upon a Message sent to them, Sir John Cockrain, and others, came up to London, agreed to raise a Rebellion in Scotland, in Concert with that in England, if they might be furnished with a Sum of Money to enable them to it, which these did agree to and promise them.

The Earl of Argyll had promised the same before, when Shaftsbury first began the Design; but they not making Haste enough, he was fain to retire to Holland, for Fear of being discovered, having lately escaped out of Edinburgh Castle, where he lay under Sentence of Condemnation for High Treason, for refusing the Test enjoyn'd by Act of Parliament made the last Year, when the Duke of York was High Commissioner there.

In these Consults and the inferior Cabals it was projected, That the City of London should be divided into twenty Parts, and each Division assign'd to some one principal Man of great Trust, Courage, and Conduct, and each of them to have Nine or Ten under him, who were to engage as many as they could by Insinuations against the Government, &c. and by this Means they hoped to provide ten thousand Men, to assist them in their desperate Design of seizing the King's Guards, the Tower, Whitehall, and Savoy, &c. For this Purpose great Quantities of Arms were provided by several of the Conspirators, and certain Places of Rendezvous pitched upon, whence they might attack the above-mentioned Places; an hundred old Liverian Officers were to head the Insurrection, and those in the City were to be assisted with 500

Horse from the neighbouring Counties; besides which, all the Horses about the Town were to be seized in the Stables. The Tower was to be surprized by Stratagem; and Whitehall was to be attacked on all Sides, by a Party from the Strand, that were to seize the Guards and Meuse; by a Party from Westminster on that Side; and a Number of Seamen were to assault it with Grana- does from the Boats in the River. And at the same Time a Party were to way-lay the Road to Windsor, to seize the King, if he fled thither.

An Interest was likewise made in the Country, and several considerable Towns were promised to be secured for them. Portsmouth was to have been surprized by Stratagem, and a Party in Bristol were to have secured that City, with the Ships in the Haven. This was one Part of the Plot.

But another Party among them were not contented with this Way of compassing their wicked Designs, esteeming it too difficult and tedious, but were for a more compendious and expeditious Means, by assassinating and murdering his Majesty and the Duke of York. This was briskly agitated in the inferior Cabals, and many Ways proposed to effect it. The chief Manager of it being one Richard Rumbald, a Master by Trade, a virulent Republican, and a most barbarous Miscreant; he with Ferguson, Walcot, Rumsey, &c. after much Consultation, and many Ways propos'd, at length agreed upon the following Manner of perpetrating this horrid Villainy.

This Richard Rumbald lived in a lone House called the Rye, about two Miles beyond Hoddesdon in Hertfordshire, which stood in the King's Road to Newmarket: it was moated round, and the Road there

but 1683.

but narrow, having on one Side the Moat of this House, and on the other a Hedge and Ditch. And this House Rumbald propos'd to be the Place for this barbarous Action, offering himself to command the Party that should do the Work. The convenient Situation of which was immediately approv'd by all, and determined to be the best Place. The next Business was to provide Men and Arms, and after some Consultation, it was adjudged that Forty Men were necessary, who were to be armed with Blunderbusses, Muskets, Carbines, and Pistols. Their Emissaries therefore were now sent out to engage the most hardy and trusty of their Friends, and they quickly made up a Roll of 40 Miscreants, that promis'd to assist them in this devilish Attempt; and Arms for them were bought by West.

The Manner of doing this villainous Action, was to have been thus:

When the King returned from New-market, some were to go out into the Road, to give an Account what Company attended him, which were commonly but very few at that Place, for it being near Hoddesdon, where the King took fresh Guards, those of the former Stage were usually tired before that Time, and lagged behind, so that not above five or six came into Hoddesdon. Notice being given of the King's Approach, the Assassins were to issue from the House and Yard; some were to overthrow a Cart in the narrowest Place to stop the Way, others were to fight the Guards, others were to shoot the Coachman, Postillion, and Horses, whilst Rumbald and his Gang were to fire into his Majesty's Coach. This they suppos'd feasible without much Opposition.

The execrable Deed being done, they were, by back Ways over the Field, to fly to London; where at the same Time was to be made a grand Entertainment for the Heads of the Party, that they might be ready to head the Faction at the first News.

It was to be declared to the People, That they should be eased from Chimney-money, and have Toleration for Religion, which, they thought, would engage all the common People. And then for Money, it was agreed that half a Year's Revenue of the Chimney-money, which would be then due, together with what was in the Excise-Office and Custom-House, should be seized, and the Money and Plate in Lombard-street be borrowed upon publick Faith.

But whilst with strange Presumption and diabolical Remorsefulness they were thus feeding their accursed Hopes, it pleased God Almighty to defeat all their pernicious Counsels, by suffering an auspicious and most providential Fire to break out at New-market, the Flames of which having driven his Majesty out of his Palace, he removed to another Part of the Town, remote from the Fire, and the Annoyance of the Smoke, where he intended to stay till the Day he had at first intended to return; but no sooner was he settled there, but the Wind chang'd, and blew the Smoke and Cinders upon his Lodging, so that he was forced immediately to return to London, which being some Days sooner than he intended, the Assassins were not prepar'd at the Rye, and by that Means his Majesty most happily escaped, and came safe to London on the 26th of March: But notwithstanding this Disappointment, they persisted, and resolved to take the first Opportunity that offered. [Thus far our Author.]

The first that was brought to Trial for this Conspiracy, was Lieutenant nant

the
the when him, fins
King had that he af rectio
Conf swore terous Tawe
one o
House
That the L Place divide for an and t same he ha sonabl a Lett
to the know fered Pardon
and ex Month
The Willia him K he was buying one of house.
fessed tain R him gu Bar; a confesse
The his Co Ruffel,
at the Rumsey

nant Colonel Tho. Walcot, who on the 12th of July was arraigned at the Sessions-house in the Old-Baily, where Rumsey witnessed against him, that he was one of the Assassins that were to have killed the King at Rye; particularly, that he had undertaken to head the Party, that was to fight the Guards. That he assisted in contriving the Insurrection also, and that he was at the Consult for buying Arms. Keeling swore that he was present at a traitorous Assembly at the Salutation Tavern. Zach. Bourn, a Brewer, one of the Conspirators, at whose House Ferguson lodged, deposed, That Walcot was one that met at the Dragon on Snow-hill, and other Places, in order to raise Men, and divide the City into twenty Parts, for an Insurrection to seize the King and the Duke. West deposed the same Rumsey had done; and that he had been present at several treasonable Consults. Besides which, a Letter was produced that he sent to the Secretary, wherein he acknowledged himself guilty, and offered to discover, if he might have Pardon. So he was found guilty, and executed on the 20th of the same Month.

The next that was tried, was William Hone, a Joyner. Against him Keeling and West deposed that he was present at the Consult for buying Arms, and had agreed to be one of the Assassins at the Rye-house, which himself also had confessed to Sir Nicholas Butler and Captain Richardson; also the Jury found him guilty without going from the Bar; and at his Execution he again confessed it.

The next that was arraigned for this Conspiracy, was William Lord Russel, who was brought to Trial at the Old Baily, July 13; where Rumsey deposed against him, That he was present at a Consult at Mr. Shepherd's in October or November, 1682, where there was a Discourse about a Rising and Seizing the Guards; and that the Lord Russel did speak about the Rising. Shepherd swore, That the said Consult was held at his House, and that my Lord was there. That their Discourse was how to surprize the Guards; that the Duke of Monmouth, the Lord Gray, and Sir Thomas Armstrong, went one Night to the Meuse to view them; that Armstrong said, the Guards were very remiss, and the Thing feasible; that they had two Meetings at his House; that in one of them something was read by Ferguson, in the Nature of a Declaration, in order to a Rising; that he could not say the Lord Russel was there when that was read, but that he was there when they talk'd of seizing the Guards. The Lord Howard of Essex deposed, That after the Earl of Shaftsbury's Flight, the chief Persons concern'd agreed they had gone so far, that they could not with Safety go back; and that for the carrying it on, it was necessary to have some General Council. Which they therefore constituted of six Persons, who were the Duke of Monmouth, the Earl of Essex, the Lord Russel, Colonel Algernon Sidney, Mr. Hampden, and himself: That these Consults were frequently held; and the Things debated in them were concerning an intended Insurrection, whether it should begin first in London, or in the Country; what Counties and Towns were fittest; what Arms were to be provided, and how to be disposed; and concerning raising a common Bank of 25 or 30,000 l. but that the greatest Point was to draw in Scotland into a Consent with them; to which Purpose a Messenger was sent to the Earl of Argyll in 1683.

in Holland, and another to Sir John Cockrain, &c. to Scotland. That the second of these Consults was held at the Lord Russel's House. Against this Evidence the Lord Russel's Defence was, That the Meetings were only to talk of News in general; and that he was at Shepherd's to taste Sherry. He denied the knowing of any such Council; that the Witnesses swore to save their Lives; that a Design of levying War without an Overt-Act was not Treason; that to the Business at Shepherd's, there was but one Witness, &c. To which was added the Testimony of the Duke of Somerset, the Earl of Anglesea, and many other eminent Persons, for his Lordship's Probity, Virtue, and good Temper, which rendered it extremely improbable he should enter into such Designs; and some of them witnessed that the Lord Howard had declared, That he believed the Lord Russel innocent, and knew nothing against him. But all his Pleas were over-ruled, as may be seen in the printed Trial, to which we refer, being found Guilty by the Jury; and on the 21st of that Month he was beheaded on a Scaffold in Lincoln-Inn-Fields. At his Death he delivered a Paper to the Sheriff, wherein he absolutely denies having ever had the least Thought of changing the Government, and would have suffered any Extremity rather than have consented to the taking away of the King's Life, for whom he expresses the most earnest Wishes of Happiness. He denied he was ever privy to the Undertaking of seizing the Guards, but owned there was some Discourse of the Feasibility of it, which he never concurred in, and had on the contrary inveighed against. He urged, That what was charged upon him could at most amount only to Misprision of Treason. And finally, he denied that he had ever had any Design against the King's Life, or the Life of any Man whatsoever.

The Earl of Essex having been accused of being concerned in this Conspiracy, was quickly after the Discovery committed Prisoner to the Tower; where on the same Day that the Lord Russel was tried, he cut his own Throat.

July 13. John Rouse also was brought to Trial, against whom Thomas Lea, a Dyer, and William Leigh evidenced, that he undertook to provide 100 Arms for the Insurrection; that he contrived to bring in some Sea Captains, who should engage the Seamen to assist in seizing the Tower; and also to get Seamen to seize the Guard-Ships at Woolwich and Deptford. He was found Guilty, and on the 19th of July made a Confession and Information of the whole Plot; and at his Execution declared, He had deserved the Sentence passed upon him, that he had heard and understood too much in several Meetings, especially of some, who though they called themselves true Protestants, were Ten Thousand Times worse than any others.

On the 7th of November, Colonel Algernon Sidney was arraigned, and on the 21st of the same Month brought to Tryal, for being one of the Council of Six above-mentioned, for sending a Messenger into Scotland to invite them into the Rebellion, and for writing a treasonable Libel found in his Closet. The Lord Howard deposed, That he was one of the Council of Six, and that he sent the Messenger, Aaron Smith, to Scotland, to invite hither Melvin, Cockrain, and the Campbells. And several other Persons witnessed, That those Scotchmen were in London about that Time. Concerning the Libel, it was proved that it was found in Colonel Sidney's Closet, and as far as such a Matter will bear, to be of his own Hand writing. The Libel was of very treasonous Import, as it was then called. But the Book having been since printed, the World is a Judge of it. To which he answer'd, That the Papers, if they were his, might be written long since in Answer to Filmer's Book, and for his own Diversion, not for Publication. Denied he sent the Messenger, &c. but he was found Guilty, and on the 7th of December was beheaded on Tower Hill.

1683.

The rest that suffered for this Conspiracy, were James Holloway and Sir Thomas Armstrong, who being Out-law'd, were both taken Abroad, one in Mexico in America, and the other at Leyden in Holland, brought over to England in the following Year, and both executed; Holloway confessing all; but Armstrong died reviling Authority for not granting him a Trial, notwithstanding the Out-lawry.

And thus you have the Sum of what this horrid Plot produced in this King's Reign; who, for his and his Kingdom's happy Deliverance from it, appointed a Day of solemn Thanksgiving to be kept, both through England and Scotland, on the 9th of September; at which Time his Majesty's Declaration to his Subjects, giving an Account of the horrid Conspiracy, was publicly read in all Churches.

The Discovery of this Conspiracy, with the Indignation and even horror that it created in the Minds of the People, sufficiently strengthened the Hands of the Ministry; and, as they call'd it a Warrantry for what they had been doing, so they look'd upon it as a Licence to proceed. And now not only the whole Rigor of the Laws, both Ecclesiastical and Civil, was let loose upon the Dissenters, of whom many Thousands were prosecuted to Excommunication; and many Hundreds thrown into Gaol for Non-Conformity only; I say, not only were the Dissenters prosecuted with the utmost Severity, but also many true Conformists and loyal Subjects (but denominated Whigs) were vex'd with litigious Prosecutions upon the slightest Pretences, and often fined in very great Sums. By these Practices, the Whiggish Party were so intirely subdued, that during the rest of this Reign, there was as much Quietness in England upon Politicks, as there is upon Religion in those Countries where the Inquisition reigns.

But to proceed: On the 19th of July, this Year, 1683, Prince George, Brother to the King of Denmark, arrived at Whitehall, and on the 28th of the same Month was married to the Lady Anne, second Daughter to the Duke of York.

Sept. 29, Sir George Jefferies was sworn Lord Chief Justice of the King's Bench, in the Room of Sir Edmund Saunders, deceased; Sir Thomas Jones made Chief Justice of the Common Pleas; and Sir Richard Holloway one of the Justices of the King's Bench.

The Parliament having neglected to provide for Tangier in Africa, and it having cost the King a vast Treasure, in building Fortifications, and a noble Mole in the Sea for securing the Haven, and in maintaining a Garrison continually in it; besides the great Expence in defending it when it was straitly besieged the last Year by the Moors; and continuing still to be a greater Charge than the Crown was willing 1683. to bear, it was this Year slighted; the Lord Dartmouth being sent thither by his Majesty, with a Fleet of Ships, to bring away all the Inhabitants and their Effects, demolish the Town, blow up the Mole, and spoil the Harbour, that it might not be useful to any other Nation; which was accordingly done in November and December.

The Duke of Monmouth having been accused of being concern'd in the late Conspiracy (at the first Discovery of it) withdrew and absconded; upon which he, among others, was put into a Proclamation, and an Out-lawry sued out against him, which being almost drawn to an Issue, the said Duke, about the Middle of November, sent a Letter to his Majesty, craving his Pardon for what was past, with Promise of exact Obedience for the future, and to reveal many Things yet unknown. Which the King granted, and he accordingly surrendered himself to Secretary Jenkins on the 24th of November, and was introduced to his Majesty, where, with Signs of most humble Contrition and sincere Sorrow for his past Miscarriages, he did fully and freely acknowledge his having been conscious of the Conspiracy, but without any the least Design upon his Majesty's Life, which he firmly denied to have ever thought of; and gave his Majesty much greater Light into many Particulars of it, than he could possibly else have obtain'd; but prayed that he might not be obliged to be a Witness. Upon this the King granted him a Pardon, and received him into his Favour, and withal promised him he should be excused from Evidencing. But no sooner was the Pardon passed, when he again associated with Persons that his Majesty had Reason to dislike; and his Dependents began to brag, That he had made no Confession, but asserted the Innocence of some that suffered; this alarm'd the King, and made him put the Duke in mind of his late Promises, and bid him beware of Relapsing; and further, demanded of him to give some such Satisfaction to the Nation in publick, as he had already given to his Majesty in private; which he seemed ready to comply with, and accordingly did actually subscribe a Letter of the same Import with the Confession he had made to the King; but it seems the Solicitation of his old Adherents was of more Force with him, than the Consideration of his Duty and future Happiness; for, at their Instigation, he came to the King, and earnestly entreated the Letter might be restored him, lest (as he pretended) some Opportunity might be taken from it by his Enemies, to blast his Reputation, and perhaps to bring him in to give Evidence against others; which tho' his Majesty often assured him, he need not fear, yet he persisted in his Request, That the Paper might be restored, which at last the King told him, he would not keep against his Will, and delivered it to him again; but withal, from that Moment banish'd him his Presence and Court, where he never after appear'd.

This Year was shut in with such an extraordinary Frost, as History can hardly parallel in this Kingdom; it lasted from the Middle of December to the fifth of February, during most Part of which the Thames was frozen over so hard, and the Ice was so strong and solid, that Hundreds of Shops and Booths were set up upon the River, and Coaches plied as confidently from the Temple-stairs to Westminster, as if it had been by Land; also also several Diversions, as Bull-baiting, Fox-hunting, Ninepin-playing, &c. and even an Ox was roasted whole upon the Ice, over-against Whitehall.

The Death of the Earl of Essex before-mentioned had been maliciously misrepresented, and a scurrilous Libel was published, wherein it was insinuated, that the Earl was murdered by some Persons about him; and one Laurence Braddon, and Hugh Speke had been busy in pretending to detect the same; for which an Information of High Misdemeanour was exhibited against them, and on Feb. 7, 1683-4, tried at the King's Bench Bar, where a little Boy was produced, who had reported that he saw a bloody Han' throw a Razor out of the Window, where the Earl of Essex lodged in the Tower, that Morning that the said Lord was killed; which Report Braddon had taken from the Boy's own Mouth, and written down, and made him sign it; which however he now in Court declared to be false. And further, another Boy who was with him at Play in the Tower at the first Rumour of the Earl of Essex's Death, and stood before the House where my Lord was, for an Hour together, did swear he was sure there was no such thing as a Razor thrown out of the Window. Mr. Braddon, in his Defence, produced a little Girl, who swore she also saw a Razor thrown out, but contradicted the Boy in one Particular; for whereas he said the Razor fell without the Pales, she said it fell within them; and also contradicted herself in another; for at one Time she said a Soldier stood there, and call'd to have the Razor taken up, and now in Court she said, she did not know any Soldier was there, and that she did not hear any Body speak. Besides which, he produced several Country People to witness, that they heard the Report of the Earl of Essex's Death 50, 60, and 100 Miles off, the very same Day that it happened. Then on the other side, all the Persons were sworn that attended about his Lordship, to give a particular Account of what they knew concerning his Death: And first, my Lord's Servant declared, That his Lord did often ask for a Penknife, which he said was to pair his Nails; the Footman had several times Order, when he went Home, to bring one, but neglected; so that at last his Lord bid him give him one of his Razors, which he did, and then went away and left him; that a little while after, the Footman came and brought some Things from Home, and a Note for his Lord; which he coming up to deliver, found no body in the Chamber; but thinking he might be retired into the Closet, and busy, he came down again, and stayed some time, and then went up again. And not yet seeing any body in the Chamber, and the Closet Door still shut he knock'd at the Door, and call'd, but no body answering, he peep'd through a Chink, and saw Blood and Part of the Razor, upon which he call'd to the Warder and the People of the House, who forcing open the Door found his Lord kill'd, and the Razor lying by his Side. Next the Warder deposed, That he heard my Lord ask for the Razor, and that none came into the Chamber till the Warder return'd. That upon his calling out, he came in and open'd the Door, and found my Lord lying in his Blood, and the Razor by him. And further, That the Window open'd to a back Yard, and that there was no Window to the Street at all. Then the Soldier

1683.

1683.

Soldier that stood Centinel at the Door, swore, That he saw no Rascal, nor did call out to any Body, nor no Maid in a white Hood came out; and that there was no Centinel there but himself. Capt. Harwley, at whose House my Lord lodged, deposed, that the Casement would not open far, and is so low, and the Pales nine or ten Feet high, that it is impossible for any thing to be seen that is thrown out at the Window, and that it was the most unlikely thing that could be heard. So that upon the whole, the Report was adjudged false and malicious; and Mr. Braddon fined 2000*l.* and Mr. Speke 1000*l.* for being the Spreaders of it. But because Braddon pretended he had Injustice done him, the Matter has been brought upon the Carpet, at a Time when he had full Liberty of bringing all the Witnesses he was able, before an Honourable Assembly, viz. A Committee of the House of Lords, who in the Year 1689, sat several Days, and examin'd all the Circumstances; but did not find Mr. Braddon had Reason to make this Bustle; for when they had heard all that could be said, they let the Matter drop.

A. D. 1684, The Earl of Danby, and the Lords accused of the Popish Plot, who for six Years time had been detained Prisoners in the Tower; and the Earl of Tyrone, who had lain very near as long in the Gatehouse, and often, but in vain, moved that they might be bailed out, were now, in Hilary Term, 1683-4, upon bringing their Habeas Corpus, admitted to Bail by the Lord Chief Justice Jefferies: The Names of the Lords were, the Earl of Danby, the Earl of Powis, the Lord Arundel of Warder, the Lord Bellasis, and the Earl of Tyrone, the Lord Peters being dead in the Tower.

Quo Warrants's were now sent out against almost all the Corporations in the Kingdom (the several Companies of London not excepted) some of which voluntarily surrendered, others stood Trial, but were all cast: and new Charters granted them with such Restrictions as the King thought fit.

Several Persons were this Summer punished for seditious Speeches and Libels. And John Dutton Celt, Esq; and Dr. Titus Oates being sued in Actions of Scandalum Magnatum, by the Duke of York, had 100,000*l.* Damages awarded against each of them, for which they were committed to the King's-Bench Prison.

In Michaelmas Term following, the said Dr. Oates was indicted for Perjury in the King's-Bench Court, and afterwards in December, a second Time at the Sessions house in the Old Baily, upon Account of the Evidence he gave in the Popish Plot. Both which Indictments were to have been tried the next Term, but the Death of the King intervening, respited him till the next Reign.

And now I must mention some Promotions in Church and State made this Year. On the 14th of April, Sir Lyonel Jenkins resign'd his Place of Secretary of State, which the King gave to Sidney Godolphin, Esq; August the 25th, the Earl of Rochester was made Lord President of the Council, in the Place of the Earl of Radnor, and at the same Time Mr. Secretary Godolphin was made First Commissioner of the Treasury, and the Earl of Middleton Secretary of State. And on the 6th of September, Sidney Godolphin, Esq; First Commissioner of the Treasury, was created Baron Godolphin of Rialton in Cornwal. November the 3d. Dr. Sprat, Dean of Westminster, was made Bishop of Rochester. Dr. Turner made Bishop of Ely, which was vacant by the Death of Dr. Gunning, and November the 24th, Dr. Meaw, Bishop of Bath and Wells, was translated to the Bishoprick of Winchester, on the Death of Dr. Morley; and Dr. Kenn succeeded in the See of Bath and Wells.

And now we are come to the Period of the King's Reign, for on Monday Morning, February the 2d, 1684-5, the King was suddenly taken with a Fit of an Apoplexy, but upon Blood-letting, and the Use of other proper Remedies, he came to his Senses, and continued so, but in a weak and languishing Condition, till Friday the 6th of the same Month, when about Noon he died, being exceedingly bewailed by his Subjects. He was buried privately in King Henry's Chapel in Westminster, where he had an Effigies in Wax placed.

He left no lawful Issue by his Queen Catharine of Portugal; but many natural Children of both Sexes, by several Women; of all whom he was extremely fond.

JAMES II.

JAMES Duke of York, second Son of King Charles the First, was born on the 14th of October 1638, and succeeded his Brother King Charles the Second on Friday the 6th of February, 1684-5, on which Day he was with great Solemnity proclaimed in the usual Places of the City of London, and afterwards through all England and all the English Dominions.

All Offices and Places, both Military and Civil, in England and Ireland being void by the Death of the late King; a Proclamation was issued to confirm the present Possessors in them till the King's farther Order. And the Orders and Directions of the Privy-Council of the late King were commanded to be of the same Validity as in his Life. Which Order was also sent to all the Foreign Plantations belonging to the English Crown.

The first Time the King sat in the Privy-Council, he made a Speech to them to this Effect:

That since it had pleased God to place him in that Station, he thought fit to declare, That he would follow the Example of his Brother, in Ten- derness and Clemency to his People. That he affected not Arbitrary Power as was laid to his Charge: That he would preserve the Government, both in Church and State, according to the Established Laws: That he was satisfied and secure in the Loyalty and unshaken Fidelity of the Church of England, and would therefore always support it: That he aimed to be no greater than the Laws would make him, and therefore as he would not part with his own just Rights and Prerogatives, so would he neither invade any Man's Property: That as he had often ventured his Life in Defence of the Nation, he would go as far as any Man in preserving it in all its just Rights and Liberties.

And, at the Request of the Lords of the Council, this Speech was printed.

The Act of Parliament that imposed the Duties of Tonnage and Poundage, or Customs upon Merchandize, given to the late King, being expired by his Death, the Merchants scrupled now to pay them. The King therefore published a Proclamation, commanding the Payment of the said Duties, as 1684. in the Life of the late King, to maintain the Fleet for the Defence of the Nation and Security of Trade, till the Parliament that was soon to meet, should take Care of a sufficient Settlement on the Crown for the Support of the Government. Which although a manifest Violation of the People's Rights, and an Assumption of arbitrary Power, was at this time taken little Notice of.

On the 14th of February, in the Evening, the Corpse of his late Majesty King Charles the Second was privately interred in the Chapel of King Henry the Seventh in Westminster Abbey, in a Vault under the East-End of the South Isle. The Prince of Denmark being the chief Mourner, attended by many Lords and Gentlemen of both the late and present King's Servants.

The next Day, the Duke of Ormond, the Earl of Arlington, the Lord Viscount Newport, the Lord Maynard, and Henry Savil, Esq; were confirmed in their Places of Lord Steward, Lord Chamberlain, Treasurer, Comptroller, and Vice-Chamberlain, which they enjoyed in the late King's Time.

On the 16th, Laurence, Earl of Rocheſter, Lord President of the Council, was made Lord High-Treasurer of England; on the 18th the Lord Marquis of Hallifax was declared Lord President of the Council; the Lord Clarendon Lord Privy Seal; the Duke of Beaufort President of Wales, and the Lord Godolphin Lord Chamberlain to the Queen. Several other Persons were at the same time confirmed in the Places they enjoyed in the late King's Reign.

The News of the King's Death being arrived at Edinburgh, the Lords of the Privy-Council were immediately called together by the Earl of Perth, Lord High Chancellor, and the Duke of Queensbury,

Lord Treasurer, who being assembled, and all sworn a-new, gave Orders for the proclaiming King James; which was accordingly done on the 10th of February with all usual Ceremonies, their Lordships assisting at it. After which, by his Majesty's Command, a Proclamation was published to continue all Officers, Judges, and Magistrates, in their respective Places, till further Order. This being done, the Lords of the Council sent a Letter to the King, containing an Account of their Proceedings, with Assurances of hazarding their Lives and Fortunes in Defence of his Person and Dignity. And at the same time, the Archbishops and Bishops of that Kingdom sent a Letter to the King, expressing both their Sorrow for the Death of his late Majesty, and their Duty and Affection to himself.

On the 11th of the same Month, the King was proclaimed in Ireland also, with no less Solemnity and Expressions of Joy, by his Grace the Duke of Ormond, assisted by the Lords Spiritual and Temporal, the Lord Mayor and Aldermen of Dublin, &c.

In the mean Time Addresses daily arrived from all Parts of the Kingdom, congratulating his Majesty's Accession to the Throne, and to thank him for his Promise of maintaining their Religion and Laws: Which were all kindly received by the King; and the Assurances repeated.

Nor were foreign States wanting in their Respect, each sending their Ambassadors to congratulate his Majesty's Accession to the Throne. The first of which, that arrived, was the Count Serclais de Tilly, who was sent from the Marquis de Grana, Governor of the Spanish Netherlands, with Compliments of Condolance and Congratulation, and 1685.

and was followed by the rest of the Princes of Europe.

In Scotland, on the 20th of February, a Proclamation was published to summon a Parliament to meet at Edinburgh, on the 9th of April following. And an Address of Congratulation was sent to the King from the Magistrates and Council of that City, as were likewise others from several Corporations in that Kingdom.

The King's Coronation being now under Consideration, in order to it, a Proclamation was published on the 6th of March, commanding all those who by Tenure of Lands, &c. are obliged to claim or assist thereat, to put in their Claims before the Lords thereby authorized to receive them.

But before we speak of that Solemnity, the Order of Time requires us to look over into Ireland, where on the 21st of March, the Duke of Ormond, Lord Lieutenant, delivered up the Sword of State to the Lord Archbishop of Armagh, Chancellor of Ireland, and the Lord Granard, whom the King constituted Lord Justices for the Government of that Kingdom. And the next Morning the Council being called together, were dissolved, and a new one appointed; the Members of which, that were in or near the City of Dublin, were immediately sworn.

A. D. 1685, on the 23d of April was solemnized the Coronation of the King and Queen. Their Majesties proceeding from Westminster-Hall to the Abbey Church, attended by the great Officers of State, Nobility, Archbishops, Bishops, Judges, Masters in Chancery, Lord Mayor and Aldermen of London, Choir of Westminster, &c. in their respective Robes, where the Sermon being over, which was preached by Dr. Turner, Bishop of Ely, their Majesties were crowned with the usual Ceremonies, and then returned with the whole Assembly in the same Order into Westminster-Hall to Dinner; at which Time Sir Charles Dimock, the King's Champion, in complete Armour, accompanied by the Lord High-Steward and the Earl-Marshal, rode into the Hall, and performed the usual Ceremony of the Challenge.

On the same Day that the King was crowned at Westminster, the Parliament met in Scotland: At the opening of which, a Letter was read, which the King had sent to them; wherein he was pleased to intimate,

That their Zeal and Loyalty, which he had experienced in his Brother's Reign, engaged him to summon them at the Beginning of his, to give them an Opportunity of demonstrating their own Duty, and to be exemplary to others in their Affections to his Person and Service.

That what he had now to propose, was for the Security of their Liberties and Properties, more than the Aggrandizing of his Power; though the Preservation of that would the better enable him to preserve them in the quiet Possession of their Rights and Religion, against the Endeavours of the Fanatics, the restless Enemies of both.

That the Importance of the Matters now to be proposed, would have obliged him to have come himself to them had it been possible at this Juncture of Time; he had therefore instructed the Duke of Queensbury in all Things relating to his Service and their Happiness; not doubting of their Compliance and Assistance.

After the reading of the Letter, the Lord Chancellor made a Speech; wherein, after an Eulogium upon the King, and assuring them of his Majesty's Protection of the 1685. Established Church, and that he would maintain them in all their Rights according to Law, not suffering them to be arbitrarily oppress'd by Soldiers, or others; and further, That the King would condescend, as far as could be expected, in the Business of the Excise and Militia; he propos'd to them the establishing the Revenues upon the King, as amply as his Predecessors had enjoyed them: And that effectual Means might be found to destroy the desperate Fanatick Party, that had brought that Kingdom to the Brink of Ruin.

The Lord Chancellor made also a Speech to them, wherein he remembered them of the Disorders the Nation had been subject to, through the restless Endeavours of the Fanaticks; and by what gentle Means the King, when he was Lord Commissioner, had quieted them; and therefore urged them to serve the King, promote his Interest, and destroy that Brood of villainous Men.

Which Speeches being over, the Parliament drew up a Letter to the King, expressing how sensible they were of his Remembrance of their former Services, and their Resolutions to exceed what they had formerly done, and be exemplarily loyal in advancing such Laws as might secure his Authority, extirpate the Fanatical Party, and punish the late Conspirators.

And soon after, they pass'd these Four Acts, viz. 1. For securing the Protestant Religion. 2. For annexing the Excise upon Foreign and Inland Commodities to the Crown of Scotland for ever. 3. Concerning Citations and Processes of Treason, ratifying the former Customs of the Justiciaries Proceedings against Pannels already in Prison, &c. 4. Concerning Witnesses, That those that are cited to give Testimony in Cases of Treason, and refuse to do so, should be proceeded against as guilty of the same Crime they were to witness.

On the 28th of April, a Proclamation was published for putting the Kingdom of Scotland into a Posture of Defence, against the Enemies of the King and Government, commanding all the King's Subjects to be in Readiness, and with their best Arms to assist against any Comotions and Insurrections: And, That care be taken of the Coasts, and ordering all the Militia and standing Forces of that Realm.

But to return to England.

On the 9th of May, Dr. Oates was tried at the King's-Bench Bar, upon the two Indictments of Perjury, preferred against him in the last Reign, and was found guilty of both. And about the middle of the same Month, was brought again to the Bar, where the Lord Chief Justice being on the Bench, he received Judgment, To be divested of his Canonical Habit for ever: To be carried round Westminster Hall, with an Inscription upon his Forehead, declaring his Crime: Afterward, to stand in the Pillory; and to be whipp'd from Aldgate to Newgate, and from Newgate to Tyburn. Also, to stand in the Pillory five times yearly, during his Life; to pay 1000 Marks for each Perjury, and to be imprisoned during Life.

And on the 30th of May, Thomas Dangerfield was tried upon an Information, for writing a Libel called his Narrative, and being found guilty, was on the 29th of June sentenced to stand in the Pillory; to be whipp'd from Aldgate to Newgate, and from Newgate to Tyburn, and fined 500l. He was accordingly whipp'd; but, as he return'd to Newgate, was run through the Eye into the Brains, of which Wound he

he died ; and the Person that did it was tried, found guilty, and hanged for it.

Near the same time the King conferred some Honours ; viz. Henry Jermayn, Esq; was created Baron of Dover; John Lord Churchill, who had been created Baron of Anmouth in Scotland by King Charles II. in the Year 1683, had the Title of Baron of this Kingdom conferred on him, by the Name and Stile of Baron Churchill of Sandbridge in the County of Hertford; and Sir George Jefferies, Lord Chief-Justice, was made Baron of Wem in the County of Salop.

But King James was hardly settled in the Throne, when two Attempts were made to heave him out; one by the Earl of Argyll in Scotland, and the other by the Duke of Monmouth in England. You have heard that the Earl of Argyll was condemned for High-Treason in Scotland, but made his Escape, and fled into Holland; and that the Duke of Monmouth, having been pardoned by King Charles, offending again, was banished the Court. After which he also went over to Holland, where these two meeting together with several others that had been concerned in the Rye-House Conspiracy, and were fled, immediately after the Death of the late King, set themselves at work to form a Rebellion, and resolved to invade both England and Scotland at the same time. Accordingly, Arms and Ammunition were bought, and as many Men got together as they could find in those Countries fit for their Purpose. With part of these, and five Ships, Argyll first set forth for Scotland, and on the 9th of May, appeared before Orkney; where sending his Secretary and Surgeon on Shore, they were both seized by the Inhabitants of the Island, and the News immediately sent to Edinburgh, from whence an Express was dispatched to the King.

On the 19th of May, the Parliament met at Westminster, where the King being on the Throne, and the House of Commons attending, the Lord Keeper told them, The King would defer speaking to them, till they had taken the Oaths: And that it was his Pleasure they should immediately proceed to make Choice of a Speaker. And they returning to their House, unanimously chose Sir John Trevor, who was that Afternoon presented to the King. And on the 22d the King came again to the House of Lords; whither the House of Commons being come up, his Majesty made the following Speech to the Parliament.

My Lords and Gentlemen,

AFTER it pleased Almighty God to take to his Mercy the late King my dearest Brother, and to bring me to the peaceable Possession of the Throne of my Ancestors, I immediately resolved to call a Parliament, as the best Means to settle every thing upon those Foundations which may make my Reign both easy and happy to you; towards which I am disposed to contribute all that is fit for me to do. What I said to my Privy-Council at my first coming there, I am desirous to renew to you; wherein I fully declared my Opinion concerning the Church of England, whose Members have shewed themselves so eminently loyal in the worst of Times, in Defence of my Father, and Support of my Brother, of blessed Memory, that I will always take Care to defend and support it. I will make it my Endeavour to preserve this Government, both in Church and State, as it is now by Law established; and as I will never depart from the just Rights 1685.

‘ and Prerogatives of the Crown,
 ‘ so I will never invade any Man’s ‘ Property : and you may be sure,
 ‘ that having hitherto ventured my ‘ Life in defence of this Nation, I ‘ shall still go as far as any Man, in ‘ preserving it in all its just Rights
 ‘ and Liberties. And having given ‘ you this Assurance concerning
 ‘ the Care I will have of your ‘ Religion and Property, which I ‘ have chosen to do in the same ‘ Words I used at my first coming ‘ to the Crown, the better to evidence
 ‘ to you, that I spoke them ‘ not by Chance, and consequently ‘ that you may the more firmly ‘ rely upon a Promise so solemnly ‘ made; I cannot doubt that I shall ‘ fail of suitable Returns from you,
 ‘ with all imaginable Duty and ‘ Kindness on your Part, and particularly ‘ in what relates to the ‘ settling my Revenue, and continuing ‘ it during Life, as it was ‘ in the Time of the King my Brother.
 ‘ I might use many Arguments to ‘ enforce this Demand, from the Benefit ‘ of Trade, the Support of the Navy,
 ‘ the Necessity of the Crown, and the ‘ Well-being of the Government itself, ‘ which I must not suffer to be ‘ precarious ; but I am confident ‘ your own Consideration of what ‘ is just and reasonable, will suggest ‘ to you whatsoever might be ‘ enlarged upon this Occasion.
 ‘ There is one popular Argument, ‘ which I foresee may be used against ‘ what I ask of you, from the Inclination ‘ Men may have for frequent ‘ Parliaments, which some ‘ may think would be best secured,
 ‘ by feeding me from time to time
 ‘ by such Proportions as they shall ‘ think convenient : and this Argument,
 ‘ it being the first time I ‘ speak to you from the Throne,
 ‘ I will answer once for all, That ‘ this would be a very improper

‘ Method to take with me ; and ‘ that the best way to engage me to ‘ meet you often, is, always to use ‘ me well. I expect therefore, That ‘ you will comply with me in what ‘ I have desired, and that you will ‘ do it speedily ; that this may be ‘ a short Session, and that we may ‘ meet again to all our Satisfaction.

My Lords and Gentlemen,

‘ I must acquaint you, That I ‘ have had News this Morning
 ‘ from Scotland, that Argyll is landed ‘ in the West-Highlands, with the ‘ Men he brought with him from ‘ Holland ; and that there are two ‘ Declarations published ; one in ‘ the Name of all those in Arms
 ‘ there, the other in his own. It ‘ would be too long for me to repeat
 ‘ the Substance of them ; it is ‘ sufficient to tell you, I am charged ‘ with Usurpation and Tyranny :
 ‘ The shorter of them I have ‘ directed to be forthwith communicated ‘ to you. I will take the best ‘ care I can, that this Declaration
 ‘ of their own Treason and ‘ Rebellion may meet with the ‘ Reward it deserves ; and I will not ‘ doubt but that you all will be more ‘ zealous, to support my Government,
 ‘ and give me my Revenue
 ‘ as I have desired it without Delay.

The first thing the House of Commons did, was to vote their most humble and hearty Thanks to the King, for his most gracious Speech and Declaration ; and then unanimously resolved, That all the Revenues enjoyed by the late King should be settled on his Majesty for Life : And next both Houses made an Address to the King, to assure his Majesty, That they would stand by him with their Lives and Fortunes against Argyll, and all other Enemies.

In Scotland the Parliament, in pur-

purſuance of the King's Deſire, paſſed an Act, wherein they ordained, That any that ſhould hereafter preach in any Houſe, or Field-Conventicle, or ſhould be Hearers at ſuch Conventicles, ſhould be puniſhed by Death and Confiſcation of Goods. And another Act, to make it Treason to Give or Take the National Covenant, as interpreted in the Year 1638, or League and Covenant, as it is commonly called, or to write in its Defence: And a third Act for raiſing 260,000 Pounds yearly for the King's Life.

The Earl of Argyll, upon his Secretary's being ſeized, quitted Orkney, purſued his Courſe to the Weſt of Scotland, and landed at Dunſtaffnage, an old ruinous Caſtle in Lorn, formerly belonging to himſelf: Having put a Garriſon into this Caſtle, he marched up farther into the Country, and publiſhed his Declaration; the Title of which was,

The Declaration of the Proteſtant People, that is to ſay, the Noblemen, Barons, Gentlemen, and Commoners of all ſorts, in Arms, within the Kingdom of Scotland, with the Concurrence of True and Faithful Paſtors, and of ſeveral Gentlemen of the Engliſh Nation joined with them.

In this Declaration they pretended many Advantages had accrued to the Proteſtant Religion by the War againſt King Charles I. aſcribing the Succeſs of the War to the Favour and Bleſſing of Heaven, gained by the Goodneſs and Juſtice of their Cauſe: And extolled the Fidelity of the Covenanters of Scotland, reproaching the Parliament for deſtroying the Laws made in thoſe Times, and turning out the Fanatical Miniſters; arraigned the Government for putting Men to Death, &c. declared againſt the King's Supremacy, and his Succeſſion, terming him only James Duke York.

The Engliſh Parliament they declared againſt as packed; next, gave their Reaſons for taking up Arms, viz. To reſtore and ſettle the Proteſtant Religion, and entirely to exclude Popery; ſolemnly declaring, That they would never capitulate with the King; but proſecute the War till they had perfected what they came for.

The other Declaration was in the Name of the Earl of Argyll himſelf; wherein he declared he appeared not in Arms for any private Reaſon, but upon thoſe only contained in the general Declaration, and deſired no more than his own Eſtate, with which he promiſed to pay his own and his Father's Debts, &c.

The Parliament in the mean time continued firm to the King, and enacted, That the Oath of Allegiance ſhould be taken againſt that Juncture, by all the Scotch Subjects; and that they ſhould aſſert the Pre-rogatives of the Crown, whenever the Council ſhould require it of them, on Pain of Imprisonment, Banishment, &c.

Argyll being come to Loch head, alias Campleton, eight Miles from the Mill-head of Kintire, he ſent out Summons, ſubſcribed by himſelf, and dated at Campleton, May 21. requiring all Heritors, Tenants, and others, and all ſenſible Men within the Division of Corwall, of the Age of Sixteen to Sixty, to come to the Tarbut by the 26th of May, or ſooner, with all their uſeful Arms, and Proviſions for a Fortnight. And to back this Summons, put his Son Charles into Corwall, who ſent Letters to ſeveral Gentlemen to repair to him without Delay under the Penalty of Fire and Sword. But neither the one nor the other had any Effect, for the Gentlemen and Heritors came not near him.

The Number of his Army was variously

1685. variously reported, but all Accounts came within 5000; whereas the King's Party were, in seven Days time, no less than 22,000 Men, part of which, under the Command of the Marquis of Athol, the Earl of Broad-Albin, and Sir Ewan Cameron, marched into Argyllshire after the Enemy, and had like to have surprized Charles Campbell, the Earl's Son, who lay there with a Party of 120 Foot, and 12 Horse, having upon Notice of the Marquis's Approach, but just time to recover his Boats, to which he fled, losing three of his Men, one killed, and two taken Prisoners.

From Cambleton the Earl of Argyll marched to Turbet, thence embark'd to the Town of Ross in the Island of Boat, where taking Provisions for himself and his Men for one Night, he sailed round the Island, and returned to Ross again, and fired seven Guns at his Landing, having with him 2500 Men. Upon the Arrival of the King's Ships, he quitted the Island of Boat, and passed to Corwall, and would have brought his Ships into Loch-Finne, towards Inverary; but being detained by contrary Winds, the King's Ships came first up to the Entrance of Loch-Rarwan, and obliged him to bring his Ships under the Shelter of the Castle of Ellengreg, and to fortify that, and a Rock, that lay near it in a little Island, to secure his Ships in Loch-Rarwan. After which himself marched towards the Head of Loch-Finne, leaving 150 Men for the Guard of the Ships, and first putting his Cannon, Arms, and Ammunition, into the Castle.

On the 11th of June a Party of the King's Forces under the Marquis of Athol, consisting of 300 Foot, defeated a Party of Argyll's of 400 Foot, and 80 Horse, killing and wounding a great Number, and also taking some Prisoners, and many Horses and Arms. This made them retire to Ellengreg, where they continued till the 15th, and then passing Loch-Long, marched towards Lenox, in the Shire of Dunbarton. The same Day the King's Ships came up to the Castle, where Argyll's Arms and Ammunition still lay, with a Resolution to batter it, and destroy the Ships. But upon firing a Gun, two Men put off in a Boat with a White Flag, telling them there would be no Opposition made, the Enemies being all fled; which proving true, they took Possession of the Castle, and found in it 5000 Arms, and 500 Barrels of Powder, with Ball, and all other Ammunition in Proportion.

On the 16th, Argyll marched to the Head of Gais Loch, towards the Fords of the River Levin.

On the 17th the Earl of Dunbarton, Commander in Chief of the King's Forces, having an Account of their passing the River Levin above Dunbarton, marched from Glasgow after them, and overtook them in the Parish of Killerne, in the Way to Sterling. The King's Horse and Dragoons kept up with them till the Foot arriv'd; but it being late in the Evening, and the Enemy very strongly posted, it was not thought fit to attack them then: The Army therefore continued in Battalia all Night, intending to fall upon them as soon as Day appear'd. But Argyll found Means in the Night very silently to march off, and took his Way towards the River Glyde, which he and his Horse swam over and procured Boats for the Foot, and got into Renfrew. The King's Forces missing them in the Morning, march'd back to Glasgow, and after two Hours Rest the Earl of Dunbarton, with the Horse and Dragoons, marched after them, ordering the Foot to follow with all the Haste they could make.

1685.

At Renfrew, Sir John Cockrain, one of Argyll's chief Friends, undertook to provide Guides to carry them safe into Galloway; but they mistaking their Way, led them into a Bog, where having lost their Horses and Baggage, the Foot were dispersed into small Parties; which the King's Forces having Notice of, divided to pursue them. Argyll himself returning towards Clyde, was set upon by two of Gremock's Servants at whom he fired, and refused to yield; but receiving a Wound in his Head he left his Horse, and run into the Water. This Noise brought out a Countryman, who run into the Water, where Argyll being almost up to the Neck, presented a Pistol at him, but that missing Fire, the Countryman gave him a Blow over the Head, with which he fell, and in falling cried out, Unfortunate Argyll! and before he could recover himself, the Soldiers took him up and carried him to their Commanders.

A Party of 40 Horse, commanded by the Lord Ross, with as many Dragoons, fell in with a Party commanded by Sir John Cockrain, who had taken the Way to the Sea. Upon the Approach of the King's Forces, they posted themselves within a small Inclosure, which covered them Breast high: This hindered not the Lord Ross from charging them; but the Ground being too strong for the Horse, and the Captain of the Dragoons being killed in the Approach, the Lord Ross slightly wounded, Sir Adam Blair shot through the Neck, and Sir William Wallace shot in the Side, gave them an Opportunity to make up into a Wood, before the Dragoons could dismount, and come up on Foot; but were, however, so surrounded by the King's Party, that they could not escape; yet Sir John and his Son made a Shift to break through, but were afterwards taken and sent to Edinburgh.

A Party of five of the Earl of Ar-ran's Militia of Clyddesdale, took Rumbald the Maltster, and his Man, who fought with great Courage, and killed one of the Militia; but being wounded, was forced to submit; and Colonel Aylloff with 200 more were soon after brought Prisoners to Glasgow.

On the 22d of June the Earl of Argyll was brought to Edinburgh, and committed to the Castle; Colonel Aylloff, who should have been brought with him, prevented it by ripping up his own Belly with a Penknife. Rumbald was tried and condemned for High Treason, and was hanged on the 26th of June; and on Tuesday following, Argyll was beheaded on a Scaffold at the Cross in Edinburgh, his Head was fixed on the Tolbooth, and his Body buried in St. Magdalen's Chapel in the Corvate. This Execution was in pursuance of his former Condemnation. He made no Speech on the Scaffold, only delivered a Paper to the Dean of Edinburgh, to be given to the Lord Chancellor. And thus ended this Tragedy.

The English Parliament, according to their Vote, passed an Act, for settling the Revenue on the King during his Life, which received the Royal Assent on the 30th of May; at which Time the King made a Speech to thank them for it, and the Dispatch they made in it; and desired a farther Supply for the Stores, Navy, Ordnance, Debt of the late King, &c. recommending the Navy in particular, and assuring them of his Zeal for the Glory of the Nation. Which Speech the Commons took immediately into Consideration, and resolved to give the King a Supply for the Occasions mentioned in his Speech.

On the first of June, her Royal High-1685.

Highness the Princess of Denmark was delivered of a Daughter, who was the next Day christened Mary by the Bishop of London.

I have told you that the Duke of Monmouth was making Preparations in Holland to invade England, and second Argyll. Accordingly having made the best Provision he could, with his small Force, being but three Ships, and not above 150 Men, he set Sail from the Texel, and steering to the West of England, on the 11th of June landed at Lyme Regis in Dorsetshire, the Mayor of which Town sent an Express to the King to inform him thereof; which the King having communicated to the Parliament, they immediately expressed their Detestation of the same, in an Address from each House, wherein they offered their utmost Assistance, and promised to stand by his Majesty with their Lives and Fortunes against the Duke of Monmouth, and all his Adherents, &c.

A Proclamation was issued immediately, declaring, That the King having received Advice, That the Duke of Monmouth, the Lord Grey, and several others were landed at Lyme, in a hostile Manner, and had possessed themselves of the Town, and sent their Accomplices into the adjacent Country, to excite the People to join with them; the said Duke of Monmouth, and all his Adherents, were therefore declared Traytors and Rebels, &c.

The Parliament, to make good their Promise, ordered a Bill of Attainder against James Duke of Monmouth, which being brought into the House of Commons, on the 14th, was read three times and passed the same Day, and received the Royal Assent on the 16th; together with two Acts more, granting a Supply to the King, by an Imposition on Tobacco, Sugars, Wines, and Vinegars,

The same Day a Proclamation was published for the apprehending all Persons that should publish or disperse the Duke of Monmouth's Declaration, and another Proclamation promising a Reward of 5000 l. to him that should bring the Body of James Duke of Monmouth dead or alive.

The Duke of Monmouth's Declaration was intitled, The Declaration of James Duke of Monmouth, and the Noblemen, Gentlemen, and others, now in Arms, for the Defence and Vindication of the Protestant Religion, and of the Laws, Rights, and Privileges of England, from the Invasion made upon them, and for delivering the Kingdom from the Usurpation and Tyranny of James Duke of York. And in it he charged the King with poisoning his late Majesty.

On the 14th of June, Monmouth having already increased his Number, marched out of Lyme with 60 Horse, and 120 Foot, went with them two Miles, and then left them to the Command of the Lord Grey. These entered Bridport (where were assembled some of the Gentlemen of the Country, and Soldiers of the Militia) in a very hostile Manner, firing the Guns and Pistols very thick; some of them attacked an Inn, where they seized ten Horses, and killed two Gentlemen, Mr. Wadham Strangerways, and Mr. Edward Coaker, and wounded a third, one Mr. Harvey. This alarmed the rest of the Gentlemen and Soldiers, who soon got to their Arms and charged them, killed about seven, and took twenty three Prisoners, and put the rest to flight, who left behind them about forty Muskets, but carried off one of their Officers that was killed. Upon this the King sent down with all speed several Officers, and some Troops to assist the Militia, till the Body of the Army could could be ready to move; these under the Command of the Lord Churchill being arrived at Chard, a Party of 20 Horse, under the Command of Lieutenant Monoux, on the 19th, fell in with a Party of Monmouth's of the same Number, killed twelve of them, and wounded many of the rest, but were forced to retire upon another Party of Monmouth's coming up.

In the mean Time, Monmouth marched to Taunton, and from thence to Glastenbury, Wells, and towards Bristol, gathering still as he went, notwithstanding the Dukes of Albemarle, Somerset, and Beaufort, had posted themselves near Taunton, at Bath, and at Bristol, to obstruct the Country's coming in to him. But notwithstanding his Numbers, he was able to effect nothing; for the Militia and the King's Forces so straitned him that he was forced to march back again the same Way, not being able to advance forward into Wiltshire, the Militia of which County, under the Command of the Earl of Pembroke, Lord-Lieutenant, behaved themselves very bravely. His Lordship being informed that the Rabble, headed by the Constable at Frome, had set up the Duke of Monmouth's Declaration in the Market-place, drew out 160 Horse, and mounted some Musqueteers behind them, with which he marched thither; where the Rabble hearing of his coming, were increased to two or three Thousand; notwithstanding which, his Lordship marched into the Town; the Rabble at first seemed very resolute, and some fired, but the main Body of them quickly threw down their Arms, and fled; upon which the Declaration was pulled down, and the Constable committed to Prison, the Lord Pembroke having first made him receive an Abhorrence of the same.

The same Day Colonel Oglethorp, 1685. with a Party of 100 Horse, fell upon a Party of Monmouth's at Canisham-Bridge, between Bristol and Bath, and cut off two Troops of their Horse. The next Day, being the 26th of June, all the King's Forces joined near Bath, upon which the Duke of Monmouth, with his Forces that lay then near that Place, drew off and marched towards Philips-Norton; and were followed the next Day by the Duke of Grafton, with a Detachment of 500 Foot, Horse, Dragoons, and Grenadiers, who hearing some shooting in a Lane that led to the Town, the Duke entered it with a detached Party, but quickly found it to be lined on both sides with Musqueteers, who so galled his Men, that several were killed, besides 30 wounded. He passed however through the Lane, but in his Return was stoppt by the Enemies Horse, through which he was fain to fight his Way to get to the main Body of his Men. From hence they marched off with the rest of the King's Forces under the Earl of Feversham, who was Lieutenant-General, and drew up on a little Hill hard by, where the Cannon played on both Sides, but without any very considerable Damage. Nothing of Moment happened after, till the great Action that put an end to all.

The Duke of Monmouth marched and countermarched from Place to Place, till July the 2d he came to Bridgwater; the King's Forces, July the 4th, marched from Somerton to Weston, within three Miles of Bridgwater. The Horse and Dragoons were quartered at Weston, and the Foot encamped in an advantageous Post near it, fronting towards the Moor (being a fine large Plain) with a Ditch before them. 'Twas in this Place that

the 1685.

the Duke of Monmouth resolved to attack them in the dead of the Night. Accordingly late in the Evening he drew his Men out of Bridgwater, and ordered his March with that Care and Silence, that he passed without Opposition into the Moor, and formed his Foot into Battalia, being in Number between 5 and 6000 Men; the Duke himself at the Head of them. With these, in the Morning before Day-break, he advanced very near to the King's Camp, before they were discovered. But when Notice was given of their Approach, the Earl of Feversham immediately ranged the King's Forces, being 2000 Foot and 700 Horse, in order to receive them. The Duke of Monmouth's Party began with a great Volley of Shot and Shouts, which was returned by the King's. In the mean time, the former intending to bring up their Horse, which were commanded by the Lord Grey, to second their Foot, were hindered by a Party of the King's Horse, commanded by Colonel Oglethorpe, who engaged them till the Earl of Oxford's Regiment and a Detachment of the Guards came up to form the Line; and so the Duke's Horse performed nothing, but quitted the Field in a little Time, and were never drawn up into a Body, notwithstanding they were between 1000 and 1200 Men. But the Foot on both Sides stood firm, exchanging several Volleys of Shot, before they were able to close, because of the Ditch we have mentioned. But the King's Cannon coming up, and his Horse breaking in upon the Enemy, they were at last entirely routed, their Cannon taken, and near 2000 of their Men killed, besides a great Number taken Prisoners. Of the latter, the most considerable were Colonel Holmes, Perrot, his Major, the Constable of Crookhorn, and the Duke's Servant, with 200 Guineas of his Master's. The Duke's Coat he usually wore was found in the Field, which gave Occasion to a Report of his being killed in the Fight. Of the King's Forces about 300 were killed, and a great many wounded.

The Duke of Monmouth, and the Lord Grey made towards the Seaside, and coming to Gillingham, were conducted by a Guide to Hen-good, but Parties being sent out in Pursuit of them, on the 7th of July the Lord Grey was taken in a Wood near Holt-Lodge, with his Guide; and the next Day the Duke of Monmouth, with a German Colonel, was also taken in an Inclosure adjoining to the Wood, by some of the Lord Lumley's Regiment of Horse, and was immediately brought to London, and committed close Prisoner, in the Tower. And on the 15th of the same Month was beheaded on Tower-Hill, by Virtue of an Attainder in Parliament.

Thus ended the Life of this Duke, who made himself unhappy by his imprudent Ambition. He was the eldest of King Charles's Natural Sons, and dearly beloved of his Father, who had heaped upon him Honours and profitable Employments, and married him to the Heiress of one of the Richest and Noblest Families in Scotland, with whom he lived in great Splendor and Reputation till he lost his Father's Favour, as before related. He left two young Sons, who were for some time confined, but with honourable Attendance.

And now the publick Peace being restored, the King by Proclamation appointed a publick and solemn Thanksgiving to Almighty God, to be made on the 26th Day of July, for the happy End of this Disturbance.

Soon

1685.

Soon after the Lord Chief Justice Jefferies was sent down into the West with a Commission of Oyer and Terminer, to try and judge those that had been concern'd in the Rebellion; great Numbers of whom, being found guilty, were at several Times and Places executed; besides which, about 700 had their Lives given them; but were transported into the Plantations in America. And many others made a shift to obtain their Pardons. The Condemnations and Executions in this truly call'd Bloody-Assize, were so numerous, that Jefferies bragg'd He had hang'd more Men than all the Judges of England, since William the Conqueror. And this too after Kirk (a Man famous for his Cruelty) had already by Martial Law hang'd up great Numbers.

The Parliament in the mean time had demonstrated their hearty Loyalty to the King, by passing an Act, to grant an Aid to his Majesty for suppressing the Rebellion, by Impositions on French Linnens, East India Goods, &c. which together with an Act for consolidating the Estates Tail and Reversion in Fee, which the King has in the Post-Office; and an Act to enable his Majesty to make Leases, &c. received the Royal Assent on the 27th of June, and, at the same Time, an Act to revive former Acts to encourage Coining. An Act against the Importation of Gunpowder, Arms, &c. An Act for continuing former Acts, for preventing Thefts on the Northern Borders of England. Two Acts concerning providing Carriages for the King's Progress, &c. An Act for the Improvement of Tillage. And an Act for finishing the Building of St. Paul's Cathedral Church.

On the 2d of July the Parliament was adjourned to the 4th of August; and Five more Bills were then passed into Laws: Among which was one to encourage the Building of Ships. And the King then intimated to the Parliament, That he did not intend they should then sit, but be continued by Adjournments till the Winter.

On the 19th of this Month a Proclamation was issued to summon the Lord Delamere to appear within ten Days at the Council Board. And on the 26th another Proclamation to summons George Speak, Esq; and others there named, to appear within twenty Days.

On the 23d the Duke of Norfolk, Lord Peterborough, and Lord Rochester, and on the 31st the Earl of Faversham were installed Knights of the Garter; and the next Day the Lord Mulgrave was sworn of the Privy-Council.

On the 26th the Lords Stamford, Brandon Gerrard, and Delamere, were committed Prisoners to the Tower.

On the 28th the Earl of Arlington, Lord Chamberlain of the King's Household, departed this Life in the 67th Year of his Age, and the Earl of Ailsbury succeeded him in that Place.

On the 4th of August the Parliament met, and were again adjourn'd to the 9th of November.

On the 5th of September, Francis Lord Guilford, Lord Keeper of the Great Seal, departed this Life, and on the 28th of the same Month George Lord Jefferies, Baron of Wem, and Lord Chief Justice, was made Lord Chancellor of England. And on the 21st of October, Sir Edward Herbert, Chief Justice of Ches-ter, was made Lord Chief Justice of the King's Bench; and Sir Robert Wright, one of the Barons of the Exchequer, was removed to the King's Bench, in Place of Sir Thomas Walcot, who had his Quietus.

Henry

Henry Cornish, Esq; sometime Sheriff of London, was now accused of having been concern'd in the Conspiracy in the late King's Reign, for which he was committed to Prison, and on the 19th of October brought to a Trial at the Sessions House in the Old-Baily. The Evidence against him was Colonel Rumsey, who deposed, That he being at Shepherd's House at a Meeting of the Duke of Monmouth, the Lord Grey, &c. a Paper was read, being a Declaration designed to be dispersed at the intended Insurrection: That Mr. Cornish coming in, it was again read to him, who being asked his Opinion of it, said he liked it very well, and that what poor Interest he had, he would join in it; and that it was out of Compassion to Mr. Cornish, being his old Acquaintance, that he had not accused him before. Next Goodenough, who had been lately pardon'd, swore, That he being at Mr. Cornish's House, and discoursing him alone, said The Law will not defend us, some other Way must be thought upon; to which Cornish reply'd, He wonder'd the City was so unready: Goodenough answer'd, Something was to be done here, but first the Tower must be seized: Mr. Cornish paused a little, and then said, I will do what I can. Afterwards meeting Mr. Cornish, he asked him how Things went? To this Evidence the Prisoner answer'd, with Protestation of his Innocence, and that Rumsey had formerly sworn, That he had nothing else to swear against any Man. That he had always an ill Opinion of Goodenough, and was against his being Under-Sheriff, which he brought several Witnesses to prove. Also he brought several Witnesses to give Account of his Life and Conversation. And lastly, Mr. Shepherd, who declared, that Mr. Cornish, at one of those Meetings, came to speak with the Duke of Monmouth, that he tarried but half an Hour, and that no Paper was read while he was there. Upon the Whole he was by the Jury found guilty. And on the 23d of October, was executed in Cheapside, over against King-street. A Severity that justly gave occasion to much Indignation.

On the 29th of October, William King, John Fernley, and Eliz. Gaunt, were also tried and condemned at the Old-Baily, for High-Treason, in having concealed and succoured three Persons concerned in the late Rebellion.

On the 27th of October, Richard Nelthorp and John Ayloff, were brought from Newgate to the King's Bench Bar; where being asked why Sentence should not pass upon them, being out-lawed for High-Treason, in conspiring the Death of King Charles; and having nothing to say, they were both, by Rule of Court, executed the 30th, the first before Grey's Inn, and the other before the Temple Gates.

The King had, during the late Rebellion, made great Levies of Men to increase his Army for suppressing it; and although that was so easily accomplished, yet the Forces were continued and increased; and not only so, but Roman Catholics were made Officers, without taking the Oaths and Test, as commanded by Act of Parliament. This was much resented by the Protestant Nobility and Gentry, especially those of the Church of England, who had faithfully and effectually served the King's Interest, against all his Enemies, particularly against Monmouth. But the King, it seems, was resolved to gratify those, however ungrateful it seemed to these, as appeared by his Speech to the Parliament; which accor-

according to the Adjournment, met on the 9th of November, to whom the King spoke to this Effect:

That he was much satisfied, after the Storm that threaten'd, to meet them in Peace and Tranquillity: That the strange Progress so small a Beginning had made, would convince them, he hoped, that the Militia was not sufficient for such Occasions; and that nothing but a good Force of well disciplin'd Troops in constant Pay, could defend us from such as either at Home or Abroad were disposed to disturb us: That this made him to think it necessary to increase his Forces to what he had done, which he owed to the Honour, as well as Safety of the Nation, whose Reputation was much exposed by the having lain open to the late Attempt. He therefore asked their Assistance for the Supply of this Charge. And then said, Let no Man take Exception, that there are some Officers in the Army not qualified according to the late Tests, for their Employments: The Gentlemen, I must tell you, are most of them well known to me; and having formerly served with me on several Occasions, and always approved the Loyalty of their Principles by their Practice, I think them fit now to be employed under me: and will deal plainly with you, That after having had the Benefit of their Services in Time of such Need and Danger, I will neither expose them to Disgrace, nor my self to the Want of them, if there should be another Rebellion, to make them necessary to me. Then told them, He feared some wicked Men hoped, that a Difference might happen between him and them upon this Occasion; but if they considered the Advantage had already accrued by a good understanding between them, he hoped they would continue steady and loyal to him, who would give them all Returns of Kindness and Protection.

This Speech occasioned pretty warm Debates in the House of Commons, many of the Members expressing their Resentment of this Breach of the Laws, in employing Popish Officers: But however, they agreed to grant the King a Supply for his Army, though not so much as he demanded; for he ask'd 12, but they voted him only 700000*l.* which they computed would maintain the Army two Years; and at the same time voted also an Address to his Majesty, wherein, after thanking him for his Care in suppressing the Rebellion, they humbly represented, That the Officers not qualified according to the late Test-Act, being incapable of their Employments, and subject to great Penalties, which were no ways to be taken off, but by Act of Parliament, they were therefore preparing a Bill to indemnify them for what was past. But because the Continuance of them in those Employments was dispensing with Laws, the Consequence of which is of the greatest Concern to his Subjects, they humbly besought his Majesty to give such Directions therein, as that no Apprehensions of Jealousy may remain in the Hearts of his good and faithful Subjects.

This Address was presented on the 17th of November; to which the King was pleased to answer in these Words:

I Did not expect such an Address from this House of Commons, after having so lately recommended to your Consideration the great Advantage a good Understanding between us had produced in a very short time, and given you

1685.

1685. you warning of Fears and Jealousies among yourselves. I had reason to hope the Reputation God has blessed me with in the World, would have created and confirmed a greater Confidence in you of me, and of all I say to you. But however you proceed on your Part, I will be steady in all the Promises I have made you, and be very JUST to my WORD in every one of my Speeches.

After which they sate but three Days, which time was employed in preparing a Bill for the Supply, and in considering upon a Bill for making the Militia more serviceable; but had not time to perfect either; For,

On the 20th of November, the King prorogued the Parliament to the 10th of February next: But they sate no more; for after several Prorogations, they were finally dissolved on the 2d of July 1687.

The next considerable Matter that occur'd, was the Trial of the Lord Brandon Gerrard, Son to the Earl of Macclesfield, who on the 28th of November was brought to the King's Bench Bar, and arraigned for High-Treason, in endeavouring to raise Rebellion, and depose the late King Charles; of which he was found Guilty, but shortly after obtained a Pardon. And,

On the 9th of December, Charles Bateman (a Surgeon) was likewise tried for High-Treason, in conspiring the Death of the late King, and found Guilty, for which he was executed the 18th of the same Month.

On the 4th of December the Earl of Sunderland was made President of the Privy Council.

His Majesty was pleased to constitute the Earl of Clarendon Lord Lieutenant of Ireland; who, on the 16th of December, set out from London on his Journey thither. And his Lordship being at that time Lord Privy-Seal, the Lord Trevor, Col. Philips, and Mr. Evelyn, were appointed to execute that Office in his Absence.

On the 15th of December, the Ambassadors extraordinary, which the Republick of Venice sent to congratulate the King, and to desire Permission to make Levies in England for the Service of the State, against the Turks; made their publick Entry through the City from the Tower to their House in St. James's Square; and three Days after were admitted to publick Audience, being conducted by the Earl of Derby, and Sir Charles Cotterel, with the Honours usually given to the Ambassadors of Crown'd Heads. But they effected not their Design; for it was not esteemed adviseable by any Means to give Jealousy to the Grand Seignior, by reason of the great and profitable Trade our Nation yearly made to Turkey. So that after some Months tarrying here, and having been honourably entertained, they departed home.

On the 30th of December, John Hamden Esq; was indicted for High-Treason, to which he pleaded guilty, casting himself upon the King's Mercy, and obtained his Pardon.

On the 14th of January, Henry Baron Delamere was brought to Trial in Westminster Hall, before the Lord Jefferies, constituted Lord High Steward pro hac vice, and such Peers of the Realm as the King had appointed; and was arraigned for High-Treason. The Indictment being read, &c. the Lord Howard was first sworn, who gave an Account of the Lord Shaftsbury's design'd Insurrection. Next, the Lord Grey of Wark deposed, That Chebbire was one of the Places pitch'd upon for the Rising; for which end, the Duke of Monmouth went his

Progress in those Parts; and, That the Prisoner was one he was directed to advise with. Then gave an account of the Duke of Monmouth's preparing in Holland for the Rebellion; and that the Duke at first intended to land in Cheshire, he very much relying upon that County. Next Nath. Wade was sworn, and gave an account of the Manner of carrying on the Design of the late Invasion; and, That the Duke of Monmouth sending over one to acquaint his Friends, he heard the Lord Delamere named for one. And, That when the Duke was landed, he ordered his March so, that he might meet his Cheshire Friends. Richard Goodenough deposed, That being beyond Sea with the Duke of Monmouth, a Messenger was sent from thence to the Lord Delamere among others, to give notice to him to be ready. Jones swore, That the Duke of Monmouth sent a Message from Holland by him to Captain Matthews, or Major Windham, to desire them to acquaint the Earl of Macclesfield, Lord Brandon, and Lord Delamere with his Design. Several other Witnesses were also produced, to prove the Prisoner acquainted with Monmouth's Design; and that he went down into the Country about the end of May privately, under a feigned Name. And lastly, Thomas Saxton was sworn, who deposed, That he was sent for to my Lord Delamere's House, on the 3^d or 4th of June; where being come, he found Sir Robert Cotton, and Mr. Offley Crew, with my Lord: That they told him, my Lord came down into the Country to have rais'd 1000 Men for the Duke of Monmouth in Cheshire, but could not get them ready time enough; and therefore asked him if he would undertake to carry a Message to the Duke of Monmouth, which he said he would;

and that thereupon the Prisoner gave him eleven Guineas and five Pounds in Silver, and hired him a Horse for his Journey; and that he did deliver the Message accordingly. And here ended the King's Evidence.

To which the Lord Delamere began his Defence, with Protestation of his Innocence; and urged his Father's and his own Loyalty. And as to the Evidence, he observed it was all circumstantial, and by Hearsay only, except Saxton's; and therefore applied himself particularly against that. And several Witnesses were produced, who testified Saxton to be an ill Man, and guilty of Cheating and Forgery. Next he called several to prove, That neither he, nor Sir Robert Cotton, nor Mr. Offley Crew, were in Cheshire at the Time that Saxton swore he was with them there: Which being declared, he proceeded to give an Account of the Reason of his going down, which was to see a sick Child. That he went under a feigned Name, because he heard there was a Warrant against him: That he came to his House on the 21st of May, and returned again to London on the 3^d of June, his Son in London being also fallen sick; which he also proved, by several Witnesses. After which the Peers retired for half an Hour; and being returned, declared him Not Guilty.

And it having manifestly appeared that Saxton was perjured, the King ordered an Indictment to be preferred against him; and accordingly on the 10th of February, he was tried and found Guilty of the same.

The Earl of Stamford, who was committed, as you heard, in July last, no Prosecution being made against him, petitioned to be admitted to Bail, which was this Hilary Term granted; and he was bound 1686. to appear at the Bar of the House of Lords, or at the Council-Board, when he should be required: But his Lordship in a little time after obtained a Pardon.

Philip Vernatti, who had long since been out-lawed for the Murther of Sir Edmundbury Godfrey, appeared now at the King's-Bench Bar, and was allowed to reverse the Out-lawry, and take his Trial on the 10th of February. Upon which no Evidence appearing against him (for Prance had retracted, and Bedloe was dead) he was acquitted.

And now these Trials being over, the King was pleased, on the 18th of March to publish a Proclamation of General Pardon, with the usual Exceptions of Murther, Felony, &c. and of very many Persons by Name.

Great Alterations were now made among the Judges. February 13. Sir Thomas Jennor, was made one of the Barons of the Exchequer, in the room of Sir William Gregory; and Sir Henry Beddingfield was made one of the Justices of the Common Pleas, in Place of Sir Creswel Levinz.

On the 21st of April, Sir Thomas Jones, Lord Chief Justice of the Common-Pleas, the Lord Chief Baron Montague, Sir Joh Charlton of the Common Pleas, and Sir Edward Nevill of the Exchequer, all received their Quietus's: And Sir Henry Beddingfield succeeded Sir Thomas Jones; Sir Edward Atkins was made Lord Chief Baron, Sir Edward Lutwiche was advanced to be a Justice of Common-Pleas, and Richard Heath, Esq; to be a Baron of the Exchequer, and on the 26th of April Sir Christopher Milton was made Baron of the Exchequer, and Sir John Powel Justice of the Common-Pleas.

The Parliament of Scotland met about the latter end of April, to whom the Earl of Murray (being High-Commissioner) made a Speech to this Effect;

'He told them how sensible the King was of their Zeal and Loyalty to him. That they should all share in the Protection and Care his Majesty would have over them. To demonstrate which, the King was opening a free Interchange of Trade between England and Scotland. That he had full Instructions to consent to any Proposal for freeing them from the Inconvenience of Importing Liffs Cattle, and to the settling an open Mint for the Benefit of Trade. That the King desired no further Supply, being extremely satisfied in what they had already given. That he was impowered to consent to whatsoever Laws they should contrive for the Regulation and Pay of the Soldiers. And to consent to an Act of Oblivion, with some necessary Exceptions.'

The 10th of May the Parliament met at Westminster, but were again prorogued to the 22d of November.

On the 14th of May the King and the whole Court removed to Windsor, where the Princess of Denmark was brought to bed of a Daughter, who was christened Anna Sophia, by the Bishop of Durham.

Miles Prance, one of the Witnesses of the Papists Plot, finding Things run high, and himself in danger of either starving abroad (whether he had fled) or of some severe Punishment, if he came home, it seems thought it his best way to compound the Matter, acknowledge himself a Villain, and retract all he had sworn concerning the Death of Sir Edmundbury Godfrey, and the Plot. But the doing this in private was not sufficient, it must be published to all the World: to which purpose he was on the 14th of May, at the

King's

King's-Bench Bar, indicted of Perjury, to which he pleaded guilty.

The Army, as we have said, was kept up, and increased, and being quartered up and down in the Countries became a great Grievance to the Subject; to ease whom, and to injure the Soldiers to a warlike Manner of Living, the King caused his Army to lie encamped on Hounslow-Heath, a good part of this Summer, as he did also every Summer after, all his Reign.

June 21. Mr. Samuel Johnson, Clerk, was tried at the King's-Bench, Bar upon an Information of High-Misdemeanor, for writing and publishing two Libels, of which he was found Guilty; and on the 16th of November following was sentenced to stand in the Pillory, to be whipt from Newgate to Tyburn, and besides, fined 500 Marks, and to lie in Prison till it is paid.

July 17, the Earl of Perwis, the Lord Arundel of Wardour, the Lord Bellasis, and the Lord Dover, all Roman Catholics, were sworn of the King's Privy-Council.

The King having named Dr. Cartwright Dean of Rippon, and Dr. Parker Archdeacon of Canterbury, to succeed the eminently learned and pious Dr. Pearson, and Dr. Fell, deceased, in the Bishopricks of Chester and Oxford, they were accordingly consecrated on the 17th of October.

The King, that he might demonstrate his Respect to the Church and Court of Rome, was pleased to send the Earl Castlemaine Ambassador to the Pope, where he made a very splendid Entry, and was received with much Affection.

The Pope, in return, sent a Nuncio to the King, Count Dada, who made his publick Entry at Windsor, and resided here, in that Quality, all the rest of his Reign.

The King was very uneasy under the Restraint of the Test Act, by which Roman Catholics were excluded from all Places of Trust, and made it his great Study to get over it; in order to which, a Proposition was started, and very strenuously argued in Pamphlets, That the King, in case of Necessity, had a Power of dispensing with Laws; and that he was Judge of that Necessity. This was brought into Westminster Hall, and cauted to be declared for Law in the following Manner;

An Action was this Trinity-Term, brought by one Godden against Sir Edw. Hales, for holding the Place of Governor of Dover Castle without qualifying himself according to Law by taking the Test, &c. to which he pleaded the King's Dispensation; the Validity of which being disputed, it was referred to a special Verdict; and the Judges being consulted, they did all, except one, Mr. Justice Street, agree in the following Judgment, viz.

1. That the King is an Independent Prince.
2. That the Laws are the King's Laws.
3. That the Kings of England have Power to dispense with Penal Laws, if Necessity require.
4. That they are Judges and Arbitrators, and have Power to judge of the Necessity, which may induce them to make use of these Dispensation.

And lastly, That the Kings of England cannot renounce the Prerogatives annexed to the Crown.

And thus all the Laws made for the Security of the Subjects Liberty ever since the Conquest, were at once declared of no Force; for since those restrained the Prerogative that Wil-

1686. liam and his Successors sometime had, and since the Kings could not renounce that Prerogative, the Nation of consequence was reduced into a conquered State. But to do Justice to the Gentlemen of the Long Robe, it was with some Difficulty that the Judgment was obtained, most of the old Judges having been removed in order to it.

From hence we must date King James's Ruin, and the Nation's Misery. 'Twas this extravagant Judgment that gave the Pretence of Law to, and so encouraged the executing of the most illegal Actions.

The Popish Priests, in order to the gaining of Profelytes, daily published Pamphlets and Sermons, in which they dressed up their Religion in the most plausible Outside they could invent, by palliating the uncouth Doctrines of Adoration of Images, Plenary Indulgences, Transubstantiation, &c. persuading the Protestants they were much misrepresented; and exerted their utmost Stock of Learning to defend their Catholicism. But all their Arguments were quite baffled by the Clergy of the Church of England, who most ingeniously and learnedly defended her Doctrines, in the Books and Sermons they wrote in answer to those of their Adversaries. So that the Papists finding they could not conquer the Clergy by their Pens, were resolved to do it by their Power. To which Purpose they persuaded the King to set up a Court for inspecting Ecclesiastical Affairs. By whose Power they thought to curb the English Clergy at their Pleasure.

Accordingly at the latter end of this Summer, a Commission passed the Great-Seal, to constitute the Lord Archbishop of Canteibury, the Lord Chancellor the Earl of Rocheſter Lord High-Treasurer; the Lord Sunderland President of the Council, and the Bishops of Durham and Rocheſter, and Lord Chief Justice Herbert, Commissioners for inspecting all Ecclesiastical Matters; with Power to punish, by all manner of Ecclesiastical Penalties and Censures, all Matters and Things punishable by the Ecclesiastical Laws. Also to visit the Universities, Cathedral, Collegiate, and Parish Churches, Schools, Hospitals, and other Houses under Ecclesiastical Jurisdiction; and Authority to make new Laws, and abolish the old Constitutions, notwithstanding any Rights, Privileges, or Exemptions whatsoever. And all their Acts to pass under their peculiar Seal. But the Lord Archbishop of Canterbury refused to sit, or be concerned in it. So a new Commission was issued, wherein the Lord Chief Justice Wright was inserted.

The first remarkable Cause that came before these Commissioners was that of the Bishop of London, upon account of Dr. Sharp.

The Bishop of London, when the dispensing Power in the last Session of Parliament was under Debate, made a pretty smart Speech against it; which the Papists watched an Opportunity to revenge; and therefore made use of the following Pretext.

Dr. Sharp, then Rector of St. Giles's, afterwards Lord Archbishop of York, had in a Sermon uttered some Words against Popery, which some busy Popish Emissary immediately carried to Court with all imaginable Aggravations; so that the King took Offence at it, and was pleased to send to the Bishop of London, commanding him forthwith to suspend Dr. Sharp from preaching in his Diocese, till Satisfaction was given. The Bishop in Answer wrote a Letter to the Lord Sunderland, and sent it by Dr. Sharp, wherein he expressed his Readiness to yield yield Obedience to the King in all Things that he could do with a safe Conscience. That in this he could not comply, till he had heard the Doctor's Defence. That he had inform'd the Doctor of the King's Displeasure, and found him ready to give all Satisfaction to his Majesty; to which Purpose he made him the Bearer of this Letter, in hope that, being introduced to the King's Presence, he might have an Opportunity to clear himself: But the Doctor could not gain Admittance, nor the Bishop get an Answer. The Doctor therefore drew up a Petition to the King, wherein, with all Humility, he expressed his Sorrow for having fallen under his Displeasure, That he had always been careful not to utter any thing that might any ways tend to the Disturbance of his Majesty's Government; however, if any thing had unwarily slipped from him, that had given his Majesty Offence, he was heartily sorry; that he had no ill Intentions in it, and would hereafter be more careful of his Duty; and that he had, in Compliance to the King's Command, abstained from all publick Exercise of his Function: and prayed his Majesty to restore him to his Favour. This Petition the Doctor endeavour'd to present to the King, but could by no Means gain Admittance.

The Ecclesiastical Commissioners in the mean Time sent out their Citations to the Bishop of London to appear before them.

Accordingly, on the 4th of August, the Bishop appeared, where the Lord Chancellor Jeffries asked him, why he did not suspend Dr. Sharp, when the King commanded him so to do? and told him, it was for preaching seditiously, and against the Government. The Bishop answered, That if he had done amiss, it was not a wilful Fault; that he had taken the best Advice he could get, who inform'd him he could not legally do it. After which he desired Time to make his Defence, and a Copy of their Commission; the latter they would not grant, but gave him to the 9th of August to prepare for his Defence. At which time he again appeared, but desiring longer time, his Council being out of Town, they granted him a Fortnight more.

On the 24th of August, the Bishop of London appeared before the Ecclesiastical Commissioners, where after a short Apology, he said his Council told him, that their Proceedings in the Court were directly contrary to Law, and were ready to plead it. But the Chancellor told him, they were satisfied of the Legality of their Commission, and therefore would not hear his Council. Then the Bishop urged, That their Commission did not extend to the Faults laid to his Charge; for they were to censure Faults which shall be committed; but this was before the Date of their Commission: but this was over-ruled. Then the Bishop protesting in his own Right to the Laws of the Realm as a Subject, and to the Rights and Privileges of the Church as a Bishop, gave in his Answer, and Dr. Sharp's Petition, which he had endeavour'd to deliver to the King. The Answer contained only the King's Letter to the Bishop, and the Bishop's Letter to the Earl of Sunderland, before-mentioned. Which being read, the Chancellor asked if he had any more to say. The Bishop then desired his Council might be heard, which was granted, and they were called in, being four Doctors of the Civil Law. These pleaded, That the King's Letter did not mention the particular Cause; that the Bishop could not absolutely suspend the Doctor without Proof of such Crime as the Laws direct: That there was no such Thing in their Law as suspending from Preaching; it must therefore be meant Silencing him, which the Bishop had done, and in such a Method as is observed in their Courts: That the Doctor had complied with the King's Command; and that the Bishop having written, and heard no further from the King, he ought to conclude, that the King was satisfied. After the Council had done, the Bishop said, if he had errred in any Circumstance, he was very ready to beg his Majesty's Pardon, and would make any Reparation he was able. After which, the Bishop withdrew, and being called in again he was desired to attend again on the 9th of September, at which time his Lordship appearing, the Sentence of the Court was read, by which the Bishop of London was suspended from the Execution of the Episcopal Office during his Majesty's Pleasure upon Pain of Deprivation. Which Sentence was sealed with the Commissioners Seal, but subscribed by no Body. And on the 28th of September an Order was sent to the Dean and Chapter of St. Paul's, to cause this Sentence to be affixed on the South Gate of the Church, and on the Chapter-House Door.

1686.

And the Bishops of Durham, Rochester, and Peterborough, were appointed to officiate during the Suspension, which lasted till the Approach of the Revolution.

On the 8th of October the Parliament was by Proclamation prorogued to the 15th of February; and on the 7th of January, they were again prorogued to the 28th of April.

The Lord Clarendon, as you have heard, was made Lord Deputy of Ireland in Dec. 1685, where he had governed to the great Satisfaction of the Subjects of that Kingdom; however was ordered to resign to Col.

Talbot, a Roman Catholick, now made Earl of Tyrconnel, whom the King appointed to enjoy the Charge; and accordingly, about the Middle of February, the Earl of Clarendon delivered up the Sword of State to him, and soon after departed for England.

On the 2d of February the Lady Anna Sophia, and on the 8th, the Lady Mary, Daughters to the Princess of Denmark, both departed this Life.

The King was now pleased to exert the Power of dispensing with the Execution of Penal Laws, in granting a Toleration of all Religions, notwithstanding the Laws to the contrary; but he began first with Scotland, whither he sent a Declaration for Liberty of Conscience, which he commanded the Council to publish. The Substance of which was:

That all the Disturbances that have happened of late Years, ow'd their Rise to the Differences in Religion, which he thought fit to obviate, by uniting his Subjects Affections to God and himself in Religion and Loyalty; to which Purpose he granted a Toleration for Religion by Virtue of his Prerogative and Absolute Power, to all moderate Presbyterians, Quakers, Roman Catholicks, &c. provided they would meet in Houses, and forbear preaching Sedition, &c. Also, that all Laws against Roman Catholicks be suspended; and that they be free, not only in the Exercise of Religion, but in the Enjoyment of Offices and Places, notwithstanding their refusing the Oaths; and to that End, all Oaths which incapacitate any of the King's Subjects from serving him, were hereby annulled. And further, an Indemnity was granted to all Roman Catholicks that had incurred the ‘ Penalty of the Statutes about the ‘ Oaths.’ The King further declared, ‘ That he would protect the ‘ Bishops and Clergy in the Posses‘ sion of their Religion and Rights :

‘ And as his Principle always was,
‘ that Conscience ought not to be ‘ forced ; that he would not at‘ tempt any such Thing, aiming at
‘ the universal Ease of his Subjects, ‘ without Exception of any but the ‘ Field Conventiclers, whose fun‘ damental Principles were against
‘ the Government.’

Which Declaration was accordingly published : And the Council sent an Account of the same to the King, with an Assurance of their firm Adherence to him, and Thanks for his Promise of protecting the Church as by Law established.

In Ireland the Protestant Party were very much grieved at the Change of their Government. The new Lord Deputy, by his being a Romanist, made that Party very brisk, and gave the Protestants great Distrusts and Jealousies ; to allay which, a Proclamation was published at Dublin on the 21st of February, by the Lord Deputy and Council, to assure the People, that notwithstanding the Endeavours of disaffected Persons to persuade them to the contrary, his Majesty resolved to govern them by him, according to Law, and in the quiet Possession of all their Rights and Privileges. But for all these fair Promises, the Protestants fared very hardly all this King’s Reign ; all Offices of Power and Profit being given to the Irish Papists, they insulted over them as they pleased, insomuch that great Numbers of the wealthier Sort left the Kingdom, remembring the barbarous Cruelty these Sort of Men had formerly exercised there.

In England, about this Time, were several Promotions made, Mr.

James Fitz-James, the King’s natural Son, who had all along been privately educated in Italy, and came over to England the last Year, was on the 11th of March created Duke of Berwick, Earl of Tinmouth, and Baron of Bosworth. The Earl of Powis was made Marquis of Powis. The Lord Arundel of Wardour was constituted Keeper of the Privy Seal ; and the Lord Thomas Howard Master of his Majesty’s Robes.

On the 18th of March, the King in Council declared his Design of farther proroguing the Parliament, which was accordingly by Proclamation prorogued to the 22d of November.

At the same Time the King declared his Resolution to grant Liberty of Conscience to all Dissenters. And the Attorney and Solicitor General were ordered not to permit any Process to be issued against any Dissenter whatsoever.

On the 4th of April, the King’s Declaration for Liberty of Conscience was published, containing in Substance :

‘ That the King was willing to ‘ unite his Subjects to him, by In‘ clination as well as Duty ; which ‘ he thought could by no Means so ‘ effectually be done, as by grant‘ ing to all the free Exercise of ‘ their Religion ; and tho’ he could ‘ not but wish, that all his Subjects
‘ were Members of the Catholick ‘ Church, yet he declared, it had ‘ always been his Opinion, That ‘ Conscience ought not to be con‘ strained, the contrary having been ‘ the Occasion of the Destruction ‘ of Trade, depopulating Countries
‘ and the Discouragement of Stran‘ gers. Wherefore he did in the ‘ first Place declare, That he would ‘ protect the Church of England in ‘ the free Exercise of their Religi‘ on, and the quiet Enjoyment of ‘ all

1687. all their Possessions, without Molestation. And did likewise declare, That the Execution of all Penal Laws in Ecclesiastical Matters is suspended, and commanded that all Persons be permitted to meet and exercise their Religion without Disturbance, so that nothing seditious be preached among them, and that the Meeting be peaceably and publickly held, and that they do signify the Place of their Meeting to the next Justice of the Peace. And further did declare, That the Oaths of Allegiance and Supremacy, and the Tests enjoined by the Act of Parliament, should not hereafter be required to be taken by any Persons imployed in any Office or Place, Military or Civil. He added a Pardon and Indemnity to all Penalties incurred by Nonconformity, and an Assurance of maintaining all his Subjects in the free Enjoyment of all their Properties, as well Church and Abbey Lands, as any other Lands and Properties whatsoever.

This Declaration was followed by Addresses to the King, from the Dissenters of all Persuasions all over England, filled with most hyperbolic Expressions of Gratitude and Loyalty, with a thousand Assurances of standing by him with their Lives and Fortunes.

And now many Popish Chapels were erected in and about London, also in all the chief Cities and Towns of the Kingdom, as at York, Bristol, Gloucester, Cambridge, St. Edmundsbury, &c. And not only so, but two Convents of Monks were erected in London, the one at St. John's near Smithfield, where they purchased the Earl of Berkley's House, and were at great Expence in fitting it to their Purpose; the other was in Lincoln's Inn Fields, where they began to build a very large Chapel; but both this and that were destroyed at the Revolution. Besides these, there was a College of Jesuits planted in the Savoy, where they erected a School for the Education of Youth, and published fair Promises of teaching Children gratis, without meddling with their Religion; these had also a very large Chapel. The King, for his own Use, built a new Chapel at Whitehall, which was very finely beautified with Paintings, &c. But all their Endeavours procured them but few Profelytes, for though their Chapels were crowded, it was by such only who went for Curiosity to see the Pageantry, a very small Room containing those who came for Devotion.

On the 16th of April, Sir Robert Wright, one of the Justices of the King's Bench, was made Lord Chief Justice.

On the same Day his Grace the Duke of Buckingham departed this Life at his House in Yorkshire.

About this Time was reviv'd the ancient Order of the Knights of St. Andrew, or the Thistle, in Scotland, which was first instituted there by King Achaius, but had been discontinued for some Reigns.

July 2d, the Parliament was by Proclamation dissolved.

This Summer ended with the King's Progress round the North-West Parts of England, where he was received in every Town with all Respect. The King and Queen tarried some Time at Bath, making use of those Waters. From which Time the Conception of the Prince of Wales was dated.

One Edward Petre, a Jesuit, commonly called Father Petres, who some time ago came from Flanders, being related to the late Lord Petre, had by his Means been introduced at Court, where he made a Shift to gain such Interest, that the

the King was pleased to make him even a Privy Counsellor, into which Place he was sworn on the 11th of November.

The King in his Declaration for Liberty of Conscience, had repeated his Promise of protecting and maintaining the Church of England in the free Exercise of their Religion, and in the quiet Enjoyment of all their Possessions; which how well he perform'd, may be judged by the Proceedings against the Bishop of London already related; and by the Prosecutions of the Vice Chancellor of the University of Cambridge, and the Fellows of St. Mary Magdalene College in Oxford, which I am now going to relate. And first that of Cambridge, which was thus;

One Alban Francis, a Benedictine Monk, obtained the King's Letter to the University of Cambridge, commanding them to admit him to the Degree of Master of Arts, without taking the usual Oaths. This Letter he posted with to Cambridge, where arriving the 9th of February last, he immediately shew'd it to the Vice Chancellor, and demanded Obedience to it, which the Vice Chancellor desired Time to consider of, and to consult the Senate of that University, whom he accordingly assembled on the 21st. And the Letter being read to them, it was resolv'd, That the Vice Chancellor be advised to forbear admitting the said Francis till they had petitioned the King to revoke his Mandate; and in order to it, the Vice Chancellor wrote a Letter to the Duke of Albemarle, their Chancellor, to intercede with the King for the same, which the Duke accordingly did, but without Effect; wherefore he advised them to petition the King themselves, supposing that such a Body as the University might have more Prevalency with his Majesty;

upon which they sent the proper Officers to inform Mr Francis, that the Senate were ready to admit him upon his taking the Oaths required by Law; which he refusing, and insisting upon the King's Dispensation, they made Choice of two of their Body (to avoid tumultuous Petitioning) to wait upon the King, and with all Submission, to represent to him, That they thought the Admission of Mr. Francis, without the usual Oaths, illegal, and contrary to the Oaths themselves had taken. But in the mean Time Francis was posted to London, to possess his Patrons with the Stubbornness, as they call'd it, of the University; this obliged them immediately to dispatch a Squire-Beadle with a Letter to their Chancellor, and another to the Earl of Sunderland, purporting a Submission to the King in all legal Commands; and protesting that what they did, proceeded not from Disobedience, or Want of Respect to his Majesty, but out of a conscientious Sense of the Obligations they were under to the Laws and the Oaths they had taken; and that they were ready to petition the King, if his Majesty would please to admit them; to which Purpose they entreated his Lordship to mediate for them. But the Officer was sent back without any Answer; on the contrary, a second Letter was sent down to the same Purpose with the former; two of their Members were thereupon sent up to London with Letters, but were received as before, and told that the King was offended at the Proceedings of the University, and would take Order very shortly to give a farther Answer. Not long after a Messenger was sent down from the Ecclesiastical Commissioners to summon the Vice Chancellor and the Senate by Deruties to appear, to answer what should be be objected against them; accordingly the Vice-Chancellor, Dr. Peacbell, and eight Members of the Senate, appeared in the Council-Chamber at White-hall, where were present six of the Commissioners for Ecclesiastical Affairs; who demanded of the Vice-Chancellor, why he did not obey the King's Commands, and admit Mr. Francis; to which, after a Week's Time granted to him to prepare it, the Vice-Chancellor put in his Answer in Writing, containing a Recital of several Statutes, which commanded several Oaths to be taken by all Persons promoted to any Degree in the Universities, and insisting, that himself, and every Member of the Senate and University had taken the said Oaths; that they had tendered the said Oaths to Alban Francis, but he refused to take them; that the admitting him without the said Oaths was a Breach of their Trust, and Violation of their Oaths; and therefore they could not admit him: to which they added, That this being no Ecclesiastical Matter, they desired their Lordships to consider if this Case were under their Cognizance; and lastly, That by the Statute of 16 Car. 1. it was ordained, That no Court, like the High-Commission-Court, should be thereafter erected, but that all Commissions for such be void.

This Answer being read, the farther Consideration of it was adjourned for ten Days, and they were commanded to attend again on the 7th of May, which they did accordingly, and some Questions being put, concerning Persons being formerly admitted without the Oaths, and concerning any former Refusal of the King's Mandate, to which the Vice-Chancellor gave direct Answer; That none had been so admitted, and that the King's Letters had been refused. Notwithstanding which the Commissioners were pleased to sentence the Vice-Chancellor to be deprived of his Office, and not only so, but he suspended, ab Officio & Beneficio, of his Headship of Magdalene College.

The next was the Prosecution of the Fellows of St. Mary Magdalene College in Oxford, upon a Quarrel of the same Nature.

Dr. Clark, President of that College, happening to die, the King's Mandate was procured by some ill-affected Persons, for one Farmer to succeed him; a Person not only incapable by the Statutes of the College, but also a very dissolute ill-Liver; which Mandate being received, the Fellows immediately sent a Petition to the King, representing that the said Mr. Farmer was altogether incapable by their Statutes to be President; they therefore besought his Majesty to let them proceed to Election, or recommend one to them capable by their Statutes of the Office. To this they received a short Answer from the Lord President, That the King expected to be obeyed. The Fellows again petitioned the King, and wrote to the Duke of Ormond, Chancellor of the University, and to their Visitor the Bishop of Winchester, deploring their Misfortune in being reduced to the Necessity of either disobeying the King, or violating their Oaths. At length the Time being come, when by the Statutes they were bound to make Election, and receiving nothing farther from Court, they proceeded according to the Statutes, and on the 15th of April chose Dr. Hough, one of the Fellows, for President, who being presented to the Visitor, was approved, sworn, and installed in the Form of Law.

The News of which being arrived at Court, the Fellows were commanded to send the King an Account of what they had done, which they did, and set forth the Incapacity of the Person recommended: Upon which they were cited to appear before the Lords Commissioners for Ecclesiastical Causes, where Dr. Aldworth the Vice President and five more as Delegates for the rest, appeared accordingly; and being demanded why they refused to obey the King's Mandate, they put in their Answer in Writing, which contained to this effect:

'That Magdalene College was a Body Corporate, and govern'd by Statutes granted by King Henry VI. and confirmed by several Kings; that by the Statutes the President must be a Man of good Life and Understanding, and otherwise qualified to be fit for such a Charge. That none but Fellows of that College, or of New College, could be admitted to that Office, which they were bound by Oath to observe. And all the Fellows had been sworn at their Admittance to observe all the Statutes of the College, and not to make Use of, or consent to any Dispensations. And because Mr. Farmer was a Person no ways qualify'd as the Statutes required, they could not, without manifest Violation of their Oath, comply with his Majesty's Letter, and had therefore chosen Dr. Hough, one every way qualified as the Statutes directed.' Which Answer the Commissioners took time to consider of, and they were ordered to attend again, on the 2d of June. At which time the Fellows delivered in their Reasons for not Electing Mr. Farmer, as being a Person of ill Life, viz. That he had misbehaved himself at Trinity College in Cambridge, where he had received Admonition in order to Expulsion; That he had taught School without License; that he was of so troublesome and turbulent a Nature, that he was desired to leave Magdalene Hall, where he had been admitted; that at the very time the King's Letter came down, he was at Abingdon in very ill Company, drinking to Excess; and that in a Frolick, he, with other dissolute Persons, had pull'd up the Stocks in the Town, and threw them in the River; with many other lewd Actions, such as attempting to debauch divers Women, Drunkenness, Profaneness, and what not: All which they proved by Certificates, Letters, and Witnesses of undoubted Credit. These Objections against Farmer prevailed to lay him aside; but Dr. Hough the President, and Dr. Fairfax, one of the Delegates were however suspended upon pretence of the undue Election, and Contempt of the King's Letter.

The King then granted a new Mandate to Dr. Parker, Bishop of Oxford, commanding the Fellows to admit him for their President, but they still persisted in their Resolution of observing the Statutes of their College, according to which they had already elected; so that nothing was done in it, which made the King, when he came through Oxford, in his Progress this Summer, send for them to come to him, where himself was pleased to tell them, they were undutiful, and had affronted him, and commanded them to admit the Bishop of Oxon their Head; the Fellows, upon their Knees, offered a Petition, which the King rejected, and again commanded them to elect the Bishop, telling them they must expect to feel the Weight of his Hand. Upon which they returned to their College, where Dr. Pudsey, the Senior Fellow, proposed to the rest of the Fellows whether they would elect the Bishop; to which they answered, That they were ready to obey his Ma-1687.

Majesty in any Thing that lay in their Power, but the electing the Bishop of Oxon being directly contrary to the Statutes and the Oaths they had taken, they apprehended it not in their Power to obey him in this Affair. In this State the Matter continued till October 19, when the King sent down the Bishop of Chester, the Ld. Chief Justice Wright, and Baron Jennor, with a Commission of Visitation, who summoned the Fellows to attend them in the Chapel of the College, on the 22d of October, where they appearing were demanded if they submitted to the Visitation; to which they answered they did, so far as it was consistent with Law, but withal observ'd, that their Commission empowered them to change and alter the Statutes, which they told their Lordships they were bound by their Oaths not to admit of. Afterwards some Expostulations were made concerning Persons formerly admitted by Mandate, whom the Fellows proved to have been all Statutable Men. After which the Fellows were all asked if they would choose the Bp. of Oxon President, which they refused, as being not in their Power, having already elected Dr. Hough, who was duly elected, sworn, and installed, as the Statutes directed, and therefore it was not in their Power to put him out again. It was, among other Things, urged by the Commissioners, that they ought not to have made an Election till the King had been satisfied that Farmer was an unqualified Person; to which the Fellows proved in Answer, that they tarried to the very last Day that the Statutes permitted, before they made the Election; in fine, the Fellows persisting in their Resolution, the Commissioners proceeded first to install the Bishop of Oxon as President, and, upon their Refusal to acknowledge him as such, to deprive and expel 26 of them, besides Dr. Hough and Dr. Aldworth (already suspended) Accordingly their Names were struck out of the College Books, and the Sentence of Expulsion, dated the 16th of November, was fixed on the College Gates; and not only so, but they were, by the Ecclesiastical Commissioners at London, declared incapable of any Ecclesiastical Promotion or Benefice; and those of them that were not in Holy Orders, they adjudged incapable of receiving them; and all Archbishops, Bishops, &c. were required to take Notice of this Sentence, and pay Obedience to it.

On the 23d of December, a Proclamation was issued, appointing a Day of solemn Thanksgiving for the Queen's Conception. And the same was ordered likewise in Scotland, on the 17th of January.

About this time, Commissioners were appointed by the King, and sent into the several Counties of England, to enquire what Money or Goods had been levied upon Roman Catholics and Dissenters upon the Prosecutions for Recusancy, and not paid into the Exchequer.

On the 11th of March, a Council of Officers, or Court Martial, was appointed to meet every Friday, for redressing Grievances, and correcting the Disorders of the Soldiers, to whom all Complaints against the Soldery were ordered to be made.

On the 14th of March, a Proclamation came out, to command all the King's Subjects that were in Arms in the Service of the States of Holland, to return to England. Which Proclamation gave occasion to some Disputes betwixt the Marquis of Abbeville, the King's Envoy at the Hague, and the States General.

There were six Regiments of Foot, three of English and three of Scottish Soldiers, which by the last Treaty of Peace the States General agreed always to maintain in their Pay; but to be at the King's Command when he should have occasion. Accordingly when Monmouth was here, they, upon the King's Order, were sent over to England, and upon the suppressing that Disorder, returned again to Holland. But the King now requiring them without any Reason given, the States refused to let them go. Upon which the Marquis Abbeville gave in a Memorial to let them know, That the King was much surprized at their Resolution of detaining his Subjects, and did hereby require that they let them return. After some Dispute, the States did at last agree to permit those that were willing to return, which prov'd to be but very few, the rest entering themselves anew in the States Service.

On the 27th of April, the King renewed his Declaration for Liberty of Conscience with some Additions, and a Promise to get it established by Act of Parliament. And on the 4th of May, it was order'd in Council, that this Declaration be publickly read in all the Churches and Chapels throughout the Kingdom. This was a Thing that gave great Offence both to Clergy and Laity of the Church of England, it seeming very hard that the Ministers should be obliged to publish to their Congregations, That they need not any longer come to Church; to say nothing of the Illegality of it.

On the 10th of June, being Sunday, between Nine and Ten a Clock in the Forenoon, the Queen was said to be brought to Bed of a Son at St. James's, to the great Satisfaction of the King, who now esteemed himself perfectly happy. About Noon the Council was assembled, when a Day of publick Thanksgiving throughout the Nation was ordered, and the News sent to the Lord Mayor, with Order, that Bonfires and publick Rejoicings be made, which was done accordingly.

The King, as you have heard, repeated his Declaration of Liberty of Conscience, and added to it a Command of reading it in Churches. And the Bishops were ordered to distribute it to all Parishes in their respective Dioceses. Upon which, the Lord Archbishop of Canterbury, together with the Bishops of S. Asaph, Ely, Chichester, Bath and Wells, Peterborough, and Bristol, drew up a Petition in the following Words:

To the King's most excellent Majesty.

The humble Petition of William Archbishop of Canterbury, and of divers of the Suffragan Bishops of that Province (now present with him) in behalf of Themselves and others of their absent Brethren, and of the Clergy of their respective Dioceses,

Humbly Sheweth,

THAT the great Averseness they find in themselves to the Distributing and Publishing, in all their Churches, your Majesty's Late Declaration for Liberty of Conscience, proceeded neither from any want of Duty and Obedience to your Majesty; our Holy Mother the Church of England being both in her Principles and in her constant Practice, unquestionably Loyal, and having, to her great Honour, been more than once publickly acknowledg'd to be so by your gracious Majesty: Nor yet for any want of due Tenderneſs to Dissenters, in relation to whom they are willing to come to such a Temper, as shall be thought fit, when that Matter shall 1688.

shall be consider'd and settled in Parliament and Convocation. But among many other Considerations, from this especially, because that Declaration is founded upon such a dispensing Power as hath been often declared illegal in Parliament: and particularly in the Years 1662, and 1672, and in the beginning of your Majesty's Reign; and it is a Matter of so great Moment and Consequence to the whole Nation, both in Church and State, that your Petitioners cannot in Prudence, Honour, or Conscience, so far make themselves Parties to it, as the Distribution of it all over the Nation, and the solemn Publication of it once and again, even in God's House, and in the Time of his divine Service, must amount to, in common and reasonable Construction.

Your Petitioners therefore most humbly and earnestly beseech your Majesty, that you would be graciously pleased not to insist upon their Distributing and Reading your Majesty's said Declaration.

And your Petitioners (as in Duty bound) shall ever pray, &c.

Which they all sign'd; and the Bishops of St. Asaph and Chichester went with it to the Lord Sunderland, whom they inform'd, that they came in the Name of the Archbishop and four of their Brethren, humbly to present a Petition to the King; and desired to know of him which would be the most proper Way to do it. He told them, he would know his Pleasure: And going to the King, returned with an Answer, that they might come when they pleased. Upon which they sent for their other four Brethren (the Archbishop being confin'd at home by Indisposition) and they were all together introduced, and delivered their Petition to his Majesty; to which he returned a cold Answer: That he had heard of their Design, but did not believe it, nor expect such Usage from the Church of England; especially from some of them: However, if he chang'd his Mind, they should hear further from him; if not, he expected his Commands should be obey'd; with which they were dismissed. And now one would think it impossible, that this modest submissive Manner of delivering an humble Petition to the King, by Persons of such Character and Dignity, should be deem'd a tumultuary Publication of a seditious Libel: Yet so it was, and as such all these Reverend Prelates were summoned to answer for it at the Council Board; where they appeared, and having acknowledged the Petition to be theirs, the Council were pleas'd to order them to put in Bail, to answer the King's Suit the first Day of the next Term; which they refused to do, and pleaded, that being Peers, they were not obliged, but ought to be served with the usual Process of Subpœna only, and not imprisoned. Which Plea was over-ruled, and they were by Warrant of Council, all seven committed to the Tower, an Information of High Misdemeanour being ordered to be brought against them next Term.

On the 15th of June, the Archbishop and the other Six above-mentioned Bishops, appeared at the King's Bench Bar, where, after some Debate concerning the Irregularity of the Commitment, in which they were over-ruled by the Court, the Information against them was read setting forth, That the Archbishop of Canterbury, the Bishops of St. Asaph, Ely, Chichester, Bath and Wells, Peterborough, and Bristol, &c. unlawfully, maliciously, seditiously, and scandalously, composed and

wrote
sediti posed Arms Preser
rious
ed Pe
TH Bisho
Copy allow was o media verall
which Bar v 19th, into R
Day.
On made Bench great Specta sworn,
read,
was pr
which duc'd;
to pro
signed King's a Li posed b very le fended of this as to the Re
the Tr wards p
to say,
was th
them,
all did which l lice W who wa suppres udge who did

write a certain false, pernicious and seditious Libel; and being so composed and written, by Force and Arms did publish the same in the Presence of the King; which seditious Libel was the above mentioned Petition.

The Information being read, the Bishops Council moved to have a Copy of it, and that they might be allowed Time to plead to it. Which was opposed, and they obliged immediately to plead, which they severally did, Not Guilty. After which, the Day for a Trial at the Bar was appointed to be on the 29th, and their Lordships entered into Recognizance to appear on that Day. Accordingly,

On the 29th of June, the Bishops made their appearance at the King's-Bench Bar, where were present a great Number of the Nobility as Spectators. And the Jury being sworn, the Information was again read, and the King's Declaration was produced and sworn to. After which the Bishops Petition was produced; and divers Witnesses brought to prove their Hands, as having signed it, &c. And lastly, the King's Council endeavour'd to make it a Libel, in which they were opposed by the Bishops Council, who very learnedly and ingeniously defended their Clients. The Brevity of this Abridgement will not admit us to set down their Arguments, the Reader is referred for them to the Trial itself, which was afterwards printed; we have only room to say, that the Dispensing Power was the Subject of most Part of them, in which the Bishops Council did sufficiently baffle the King's, which Dispute, when the Chief Justice Wright, and Judge Allibone, who was a Papist, endeavoured to suppress, they were opposed by Judge Holloway, and Judge Powel, who did both appear much on the Bishops side all the Day. In fine, the Judges summed up the Evidences, wherein the Lord Chief Justice Wright gave his Opinion, That it was a Libel, as did Mr. Justice Allibone; but Mr. Justice Powel the contrary. And it being by this time Night, the Jury were ordered to be lock'd up, after some Repast allow'd them, till the next Morning; at which time they gave in their Verdict Not Guilty; which caused very great Acclamations in the Hall, and even in the very Court itself, to the great Regret of the Prosecutors.

A Week after this Trial, the King removed Sir Richard Holloway and Sir James Powell from their Places of Justices of the King's-Bench.

On the 21st of July, his Grace the Duke of Ormond departed this Life, in the Seventy Ninth Year of his Age; a Person of great Honour and Merit, who had faithfully served three Kings in the highest Posts of Honour and Trust, having been several Times Lord Lieutenant of Ireland, and was now, and had been for several Years Lord High Steward of his Majesty's Household, one of the most Honourable Privy Council, and Knight of the most Noble Order of the Garter. To him succeeded in his Honour and Estate, his Grandson the Earl of Offory, a worthy Son of that eminent Example of true Honour and Nobility, the late Earl of Offory.

Though the Seven Bishops had escaped, the Clergy were not to come off so; the Lords Commissioners for Ecclesiastical Affairs were still right (except the Bishop of Rockester, who now quitted it) and went on as the King pleased to command. The Order for reading the Declaration in Churches had met with but cold Entertainment among the Clergy, few having paid Obedience to it. The Commissioners 1688.  ers therefore, in order to the severe punishing those that had neglected it, sent forth their Mandate to the Chancellors, Archdeacons, &c. of every Diocese in England, to make Enquiry, and send them an Account where, and by whom the King's Order had been obeyed, and where not. But the approaching Revolution put a Stop to this.

On the 24th of August, the King declared in Council, That in pursuance to his late Declaration, he was resolved to call a Parliament, to meet on the 27th of November next, and the Chancellor was directed to issue out Writs accordingly.

On the 21st of September, came out a Declaration to remove Prejudices and Mistakes, in the Choice of Members to serve in the ensuing Parliament; assuring the People of his Majesty's Intentions to establish by Law the universal Liberty of Conscience; and for the Security of the Establish'd Church he was willing that the Romanists still remain incapable of being chosen Members of the House of Commons.

The King was most zealously intent upon his Resolution of establishing Toleration of Religion by Act of Parliament; and that he might be sure to effect it, he caused a Regulation to be made in all the Corporations in the Kingdom; to which Purpose, certain Persons, of mean Character enough, were sent up and down to examine Mens Opinions; and on those that would promise to assist in taking off the Penal Laws and Tests, the Honours of Mayors, Aldermen, &c. were conferred, which generally happen'd very preposterous; for the wiser and better Sort of Men refusing it, the meanest and most ignorant Members were commonly advanced to the highest Dignities in Corporations, and the most considerable ones quite turned out. In London particularly, all the old Aldermen, except two or three, were removed, and others put in their rooms. Also the Companies of London were reformed, in order to the obtaining a Majority in the Livery. And not only in Corporations, but in all Offices throughout the Kingdom, the like Alterations were made; all Lieutenants, Deputy-Lieutenants of the Militia, and Justices of the Peace, all Officers in the Customs, Excise, Hearth-Money, Treasury, &c. were all closetted and interrogated upon this Point; and upon Refusal, removed. This made a strange Alteration in the Kingdom, which was so far from pleasing, that even the Dissenters, for whose Sake all this was said to be done, did not take it very cordially, many refused to be concerned in it, or to take Offices offered to them.

This Matter had been the Business of all this Year, and was hotly prosecuted, but now abated. For a Rumour began to spread, That great Preparations of War were making in Holland, which 'twas feared were designed against England. This diverted the King's Mind, and in a little Time he thought it more adviseable to restore every body to their former Posts, than to displace more. Accordingly,

About the latter End of September, the Lords Lieutenants were impowered to grant Deputations to such Gentlemen as had been removed from being Deputy-Lieutenants; and Directions were given to the Chancellor, to put into Commission of the Peace such Gentlemen as had been laid aside, and should now be recommended by the Lords Lieutenants.

September the 28th, the Bishops of Winchester, Ely, Chichester, and Rochester, and the Archbishop of Canterbury, the Day following, upon on the King's desiring their Advice, waited upon his Majesty, when there passed nothing but general Expression of Favour on one side, and Duty on the other; wherefore they desired a second Admission, which was granted, and appointed to be the 3d of October.

The next Day a Declaration was published by the King, to inform the Nation, 'That he had received certain Advice, that the Preparations in Holland were designed against England, the Greatness of which intimated the Design of a Conquest: And, that though his Majesty had Notice of this intended Invasion of Strangers, he had yet refused to make Use of Foreign Assistance that had been offered him, depending wholly upon the Loyalty of his own Subjects, &c. That his Majesty did intend to have met a Parliament in November, Writs having already been issued to that Purpose; but this Attempt of his Enemies had obliged him to recall them, which by these Presents he did.' And concluded with Commands to all his Subjects to oppose them, and not to give them any Assistance, or hold any Correspondence, upon pain of High-Treason.

Upon the 30th, the Duke of Newcastle, the Earl of Derby, the Lord Fermyn, offer'd their Service, and had Commissions given them to raise Men for his Majesty's Service.

And now the Suspension of the Bishop of London was taken off.

On the 2d of October, the King declared in Council, That he would restore the Charter of the City of London; and the same Evening the Lord Mayor and the Sheriffs waited upon his Majesty, who told them of his Resolution, and that he would put them in the same State they were in before the Judgment was given against them on the 2nd Warranto. And the Chancellor and Attorney-General were ordered to prepare the Instrument of Restoration and Confirmation; which was done accordingly, and on the 6th was brought into the City by the Lord Chancellor, and deliver'd in the Guildhall.

At the same Time a General Pardon was publish'd, with Exception of Treason committed beyond the Seas, and of Eighteen Persons by Name.

On the 3d of October, the Archbishop of Canterbury, the Bishops of London, Winchester, St. Asaph, Ely, Chichester, Rochester, Bath and Wells, and Peterborough, waited on the King; to whom the Archbishop spoke to this Purpose:

'That he gather'd from the Account his Majesty and his Brethren the other Bishops had given him of their Conference with his Majesty, That only general Expressions had passed betwixt them: That the Bishops were grieved to have come so far, and done so little: His Grace had then desir'd, that they might wait upon his Majesty all together as at this Time they did; where they humbly begg'd Permission to offer their Advice, and leave it to his Princely Consideration.

Which was drawn up in Writing, and contained in Substance.

1. To put the Administration of Affairs through England into the Hands of such Person as are qualified according to Law.

2. To dissolve the Ecclesiastical Commission, and to erect no such Court for the future.

3 To put none into Offices not qualified by Law, especially into Benefices that have the Cure of Souls, and to withdraw his Dispen-sations for not taking the Oaths, and to restore the Master of Magdalene College in Cambridge, and 1688. the President and Fellows of Magdalene College in Oxford.

4. To put down the Jesuits Schools, in London, and that none such be permitted for the future.

5. That his Majesty would act no more by a dispensing Power, but permit that Point to be argued and decided in Parliament.

6. To inhibit the four Roman Catholick Bishops from exercising Ecclesiastical Jurisdiction in England, which by the Law of the Land was invested in the Bishops of the Church of England only.

7. To fill up the Ecclesiastical Vacancies in England, particularly the Archbishoprick of York, with Persons of Learning and Piety, and such as are qualified by Law.

8. To supersede all farther Prosecutions of Quo Warranto's against Corporations, and to restore the old Charters to them all, as he had done to London

9. To issue out Writ for a Free and Regular Parliament, in which the Church of England may be secured, according to the Acts of Uniformity, Provision made for a due Liberty of Conscience, the Liberties and Properties of the Subject secured, and a good Understanding obtained between His Majesty and his People.

10. And lastly, To permit the Bishops to offer Arguments to His Majesty, to prevail with him to return to the Church. Which was subscribed by the Bishops.

On the 5th of October, the King declared in Council, That he had dissolved the Ecclesiastical Commission, to take away all Fears and jealousies of his Care and Protection of the Church of England.

The same Day the Duke of Newcastle was made Lord Lieutenant of the Three Ridings of Yorkshire.

On the 10th, the King in Council authorized and requir'd the Lords Lieutenants of the several Counties to examine into the Abuses and Irregularities committed in the Regulations of Corporations, and to give their Advice what they thought convenient to be done in that Case.

On the 11th a Form of Prayer, drawn up by the Bishops, at the King's Command, was published and order'd to be used in all Churches; in which were three Prayers, one for Repentance, another for the King, and the third for Peace and Unity.

On the 12th of the same Month, the King order'd the Bishop of Winchester, as Visitor of Magdalene College, to settle that Society according to the Statutes; which was accordingly done, and Dr. Hough, and the former Fellows recall'd and restor'd.

On the 17th a Proclamation was publish'd for restoring Corporations to their ancient Charters, Rights, Liberties, and Franchises, as fully and amply as they had held them before the Quo Warranto's and Surrenders. On the same Day the Earl of Derby was declared Lord Lieutenant of Cheshire and Derbshire.

On the 20th a Proclamation came out to command all Lieutenants, Deputy Lieutenants, Justices of the Peace, &c. to cause the Coasts to be carefully watched, and all Cattle, Horses, &c. to be removed twenty Miles from the Place where the Enemy shall attempt to land, to secure them from falling into their Hands. The same Day the Earl of Oxford was restored to the Lieutenancy of Essex. Several others of the Nobility and Gentry that had been displaced, were now restored.

Ever since the Discourse of the Queen's Conception, there were violent Presumptions that it was a false Report, which was increased by the Confidence wherewith the

Papists

Papists assured themselves that she would have a Son. The Princess of Denmark was at the Bath at the Time of the Birth, which with other Circumstances, caused a very common Discourse and Belief, that the Prince of Wales was not the true Son of the King and Queen. The King had hitherto taken no manner of Notice of it, but now he saw Things brought to that pass, that he must do something to satisfy the World. Wherefore on the 22d of October, an extraordinary Council was called at Whitehall, being, besides the Privy-Council, all the Peers that were in and about London, as well Spiritual as Temporal, and the Lord Mayor, and Aldermen of London. Where the Queen Dowager, and all the Ladies and others that were present at the Birth of the Prince of Wales appeared, and gave, upon Oath, an Account of what they knew concerning the said Birth; which Depositions were afterwards printed and published.

Three Days after this, a Proclamation was published against spreading false News; for which there was Cause enough, the great Aversion the People had to the Court, making them magnify the Prince of Orange's Forces incredibly.

On the 18th the Earl of Sunderland was removed from his Office of Secretary of State, and the Lord Preston put in his Place.

On the 29th, News came, that the Dutch Fleet, consisting of 52 Men of War, and a numerous Company of Transport Ships and Tenders, set sail on the 19th from the Flats near the Brill, his Highness the Prince of Orange, with the Mareschal Schomberg, Count de Solmes, Count Nassau, the Heers Overkirk and Bentink, and many other Persons of Quality being on Board.

But were hindered from proceeding in their Voyage by bad Weather, which drove them back again, and cast away two or three of their Ships. But they quickly got themselves in order again, and on the first of November set Sail a second Time.

The King had been careful in fitting out a Fleet to intercept them, which was commanded by the Lord Dartmouth, as Admiral; but the Wind happened so contrary, that he could not get out of the Channel Time enough.

In the mean Time the Prince of Orange's Declaration had arrived at Court, and because it contained, that he was invited over by several of the Nobility, as well Spiritual as Temporal, the King sent for the Bishops, and required a Paper under their Hands in Abhorrence of the Prince of Orange's intended Invasion, which he commanded them to bring him by such a Day. But the Archbishop of Canterbury, the Bishops of London, Peterborough, and Rochester, refused to do it, as contrary to the Privilege of Peerage, and to their Profession as Divines, that being declaring War against a Sovereign Prince; and earnestly desired this might be left to a Free Parliament. This the King was much displeased at, and left them in great Indignation.

On the 2d of November was published a Proclamation for Suppressing the Prince of Orange's Declaration.

On the 3d of November about Five in the Morning, the Dutch Fleet was discovered half Seas over, between Dover and Calais, steering Westward, the Wind at East North-East. And the same Day a Fly-boat belonging to them, was taken by one of the King's Ships, and brought into the Downs, having on board four Captains of Foot; this 1688. Ship had by an Accident lost her Rudder, and so could not continue her Course, but it was the only one of all that numerous Fleet that miscarried.

The Prince of Orange continuing his Voyage Westward, on the 4th the Fleet was seen to pass by Dartmouth, and it being a thick foggy Morning, they over-shot Torbay, which was the Port they designed; but the Wind changing W. S. W. they made it again, and the same Day the whole Fleet, consisting of between 6 and 700 Ships, entered the Bay, and anchored with great Safety; and his Highness himself went on Shoar that Evening; and the next Day began to land his Men, which he did without any Interruption whatsoever.

On the 6th of November the King published a Declaration, setting forth, That Whereas the Prince of Orange's Declaration signified, That his coming was for a Free Parliament, it was his Intention, by restoring all the Charters to Corporations, &c. to do the same, and would, as soon as the Nation was free from the Invasion; it being impossible that one can be freely chosen as long as there is an Army of Foreigners in the Heart of the Kingdom.

On the same Day an Account was sent from Exeter, that the Prince of Orange was marching towards the City, and that they were in no Condition to oppose him. The Bishop therefore left the City, and came to London to wait upon the King, with an Account of the State of Affairs, with which his Majesty was so pleased, that he translated him to the Arch-bishoprick of York, which had been a long Time vacant.

On the 8th, about One in the Afternoon, the Prince enter'd Exeter with Part of his Army, and was so far from being resisted, that they were received with Shouts, and Quarters willingly allowed to his Soldiers.

The King had been all this while busy in his Preparations for War, having, besides the Army already in England, sent for Six Regiments of Horse and Foot out of Scotland and three Regiments of the very Flower of that Army out of Ireland. And also had newly here raised five Regiments of Horse, and eight Regiments of Foot; besides which, there were seventeen Men added to each Company of the old Forces. By which Means the Army was extremely larger than it was last Summer, and did now consist of 21 Regiments of Horse, reckoning the four Troops of Guards, three Regiments of Dragoons, and 31 Regiments of Foots, and could not contain less than 6000 Horse and Dragoons, and 15000 Foot. Besides Garrisons in all the usual Places, which took up 92 Companies more.

On the other side, the Prince of Orange's Army consisted of but 14 Regiments of Horse and Dragoons, containing 3660 Men, and 15 Regiments of Foot, containing 10692 Men, in all 14352. His Fleet consisted of 57 Men of War, 500 Fly-Boats, 60 Pinks, and 10 Fire-ships.

The Prince of Orange continued three Days at Exeter without any Body's coming to him.

On the 11th the Lord Lovelace was seized at Cirencester, going to the Prince with 60 or 70 Men, by the Militia, by Order of the Duke of Beaufort; three Gentlemen being killed, and Six Soldiers wounded, in the Resistance they made.

The King's Army were by this Time marched as far as Salisbury, where they lay some Time.

On the 12th the Lord Cornbury, who commanded the Royal Regiment

ment of Dragoons, pretending Orders from the King, caused the Royal Regiment of Horse, his own Regiment of Dragoons, and the Duke of St. Alban's Regiment of Horse, commanded by Lieutenant Colonel Langston, to march from Salisbury to Dorchester, and thence to Bridport; where some of the Officers, apprehending some Design, refused to follow him; but he, with as many of his Regiment as would follow him, and Lieutenant Colonel Langston, with almost all his Regiment, went over to the Prince; the rest, being the major Part of the Dragoons, and the Royal Regiment, came back to Salisbury. The same Day the Earl of Feversham came down to Salisbury, to command the Army in Chief.

A Proclamation, to forbid the holding of Exeter-Fair, was published on the 16th. And the same Day Dr. Lampleugh, the Bishop of Exeter, was translated to the See of York; and Dr. Trelawney, Bishop of Bristol, translated to Exeter. Also a Proclamation was published for a Collection of Charity to be made for Relief of such poor House-keepers as were reduced to Want by the Deadness of Trade, &c.

The next Day the Archbishop of Canterbury, the Archbishop Elect of York, with the Bishops of Rochester and Ely, presented a Petition to the King, humbly desiring him to call a free Parliament, to redress the People's Grievances, being the only Way to prevent a War breaking out in the Nation: and in the mean Time to use what Means he thought fit to prevent Effusion of Blood; and this Petition was subscribed by,

W. Cant.	Dorset.
Grafton.	Clare.
Ormond.	Clarendon.

Burlington.	Tho. Roffen.
Anglesey.	Tho. Peterborough.
Rochester.	T Oxon.
Newport.	Paget.
Nom. Ebor.	Chandos.
W. St. Asaph.	Ossulston.
Fr. Ely.

To which Petition the King return'd this Answer:

My Lords,

What you ask of me I most passionately desire; and I promise you, on the Faith of a King, that I will have a Parliament, and such a one as you ask for, as soon as ever the Prince of Orange has quitted this Realm; for how is it possible a Parliament should be Free in all its Circumstances, as you petition for, whilst an Enemy is in the Kingdom, and can make a Return for near an Hundred Voices?

About this Time the Prince of Orange's Declaration was published by Authority, with Remarks upon it: The Title of it was,

The Declaration of William Henry, by the Grace of God Prince of Orange, &c. Of the Reasons inducing him to appear in Arms in the Kingdom of England, for preserving of the Protestant Religion, and for restoring the Laws and Liberties of England, Scotland, and Ireland. And in it he set forth;

I. That as a Kingdom cannot be preserv'd in Peace and Happiness, where the Laws, Liberties, and Customs, establish'd by the lawful Authority in it, are openly violated; more especially where the Religion is endeavour'd to be alter'd. and one contrary to Law imposed; so those who are most immediately concern'd in it, are indispensably bound to endeavour to preserve and secure them: This being the more necessary 1688. necessary, because the Greatness of Kings, Royal Families, and all in Authority, as well as the Happiness of the Subjects, depends on the inviolable Observation of them.

II. And for this Reason he cannot longer forbear declaring his Regret, to see all these subjected to Arbitrary Government, by those Counsellors that wholly possess the King, and that too openly and plainly.

III. and IV. those Counsellors have set on foot the dispensing Power, which renders the Laws for the Security of the Religion and the Properties of the People, establish'd by the joint Power of the King and Parliament, ineffectual and of no Use; tho' it be most certain, Laws can only be repealed by the same Authority that made them.

V. These Counsellors, to colour the Matter, have gained from the Judges a Sentence, That this Dispensing Power is a Right inherent in the Crown; as if Twelve Men could give up all the Rights of the Nation, in spite of the Laws enacted for their Security: Tho' this Opinion of the Judges, being beforehand privately agreed on, raised them to the Bench, several having been removed for refusing; and some of these new Judges make open Profession of the Popish Religion, by which they are incapacitated by Law to enjoy the Place.

VI. That as his Majesty was unanimously received and acknowledged as King, tho' openly professing the Popish Religion, so he did then promise, and at his Coronation solemnly swore to maintain his Subjects in all their Rights and Liberties; and particularly, That he would maintain the Church of England, as it was established by Law. That it is no less evident that Laws have been enacted for the Security of the same; especially that none should be admitted to any Ecclesiastical Dignity or Employment, Civil or Military, without declaring themselves no Papists, by taking the Oaths of Allegiance and Supremacy, and subscribing the Test; yet these evil Counsellors have in effect annulled and abolished those Laws both in Ecclesiastical and Civil Employments.

VII. In Ecclesiastical Affairs they have, contrary to Law, set up a Commission for certain Persons to have Cognizance and Direction of Ecclesiastical Matters; one of which, tho' he be one of his Majesty's chief Ministers of State, is a profess'd Papist. That by this means the Protestant Religion is reduc'd to a most deplorable Condition, the Church of England being subjected by Commissioners, not only illegal in their Institution but in their Acts also. They submitting themselves in all Things to the Direction of these Evil Counsellors; who are careful to raise none to Ecclesiastical Dignities, but such as have no Zeal for the Protestant Religion. The said Commissioners have suspended the Bishop of London, only for refusing to suspend a worthy Divine without formal Process. They have turned out a President of Magdalene College legally chosen, and afterwards all the fellows, without so much as citing them to a Legal Court to make their Defence; and the only Reason given for it was, That they refused to chuse for their President one recommended by those Evil Counsellors, though the Right of free Election lay undoubtedly in them. Notwithstanding which they have turned them out of their Freeholds, contrary to Law, and the express Words of Magna Charta, which says, That no Man shall lose his Life or Goods but by the Lawes of the Land. And this College since put into the Possession sion of Papists. They have cited the Chancellors and Archdeacons to certify the Names of all those that did not read the King's late Declaration for Liberty of Conscience, though the Bishops had not enjoined them to do it. The Illegality of this Commission was so notorious, that the most Reverend the Archbishop of Canterbury refused to sit or concur with it.

VIII. Churches or Chapels for the Exercise of the Popish Religion, Monasteries and Convents, especially of Jesuits, are expressly forbid by the known Laws of the Land; yet have been set up by these evil Counsellors; and further, they have raised up one of the Order of the Jesuits to be a Privy Counsellor and Minister of State. Which evidently shews, That no Laws or Rules bind them, but that they have subjected the Honours and Estates of the Subjects and the established Religion to a despotick Power and arbitrary Government; in all which they are served by Ecclesiastical Commissioners.

IX. In Civil Affairs they have followed the same Methods, for they have examined all Lieutenants, Deputy Lieutenants, Justices of the Peace, &c. of each County; and those who out of Conscience refused to concur in the taking off the Penal Laws and Test, were turned out of Commission, and others put in, more compliant to their Designs of defeating the Intent of the Laws made for the Security of the Protestant Religion; and in many of these Places have put profess'd Papists, though disabled by Law.

X. They have invaded the Privileges, and seized on the Charters of most of the Towns that have a Right to send Representatives to the Parliament, and have placed new Magistrates as they thought fit.

XI. And tho' no Nation can subsist without the due Administration of Justice, yet these evil Counsellors, that they might subject all to an arbitrary and despotick Power, have admitted only such Persons to the Bench as would conform themselves to their Intentions, without any Regard to their Abilities; and have preferr'd even profess'd Papists to the Courts of Judicature, notwithstanding their Incapacity by Law, and that their Sentences are invalid; and further, have depriv'd Judges, who in the common Administration of Justice have been govern'd by their Consciences, rather than their Directions. By which it is apparent they design to make themselves absolute Masters of the Lives, Honours, and Estates of the Subjects, without regard to the Equity of the Cause, or the Conscience of the Judge, whom they make to submit to their Will and Pleasure in all Things; and hope by these Means to intimidate those that are now in Employment, as well as those they shall hereafter put in their Rooms. Much Blood had been shed in the Kingdom by Judges governed by those evil Counsellors against the Rules and Forms of Law.

XII. By putting the Administration of Justice into the Hands of Papists, all Matters of Civil Justice are brought into great Uncertainties; their Sentence in Law being no more to be regarded than a private Man's; so that those who had been cast by their Sentences may justly look upon them as of no Force, but void in themselves. The Military Employments too, both by Sea and Land, of the highest Command, have been, contrary to Law, put into the Hands of Papists; so that having made themselves Masters of the Affairs of the Church, the Government of the Nation, and Courts of Judicature, and subjected all to a despotick and arbitrary Power. they might

1688. might be able to maintain it, and execute their wicked Designs by the Assistance of the Army, and thereby enslave the Nation.

XIII. The dismal Effects of this Subversion of Laws, Liberties, &c. appear by what we see done in Ireland, where the whole Government is in the Hands of the Papists, several of the Protestants having left their Habitations and Estates, remembering the cruel Massacre in 1641.

XIV. Those evil Counsellors have prevailed with the King to declare in Scotland, That he has an absolute Power, and that the Subjects are bound to obey him without Reserve; which shews what England must expect when Things are prepared for it.

XV. Those Oppressions, and the Contempt of all Law, put the Subjects under just Fears, and made them have Recourse to lawful Remedies, but without Effect: and even Petitioning has been made dangerous by the Proceedings against the Archbishop of Canterbury, and the other Bishops, for presenting an innocent Petition to the King, full of Respect, setting forth the Reasons why they could not obey that Order, which by the Instigation of those evil Counsellors was sent them, to appoint the Clergy to read in the Churches the Declaration for Liberty of Conscience; they being sent to Prison, and brought to Trial, as for some enormous Crime, before profess'd Papists, and by Consequence interested to condemn them, and those Judges turned out who gave their Opinion in their Favour.

XVI. It cannot be pretended a Crime for Subjects to petition a King, how great soever, provided they do it in the Manner the Law allows. Those evil Counsellors have treated a Peer of the Realm as a Criminal, for saying, that the Orders of a Papist Justice of the Peace were not obligatory; tho' they be evidently by Law deprived of all such Trusts, it being the Security the Subjects have by the Law, for their Lives, Estates, &c. that they are not to be subjected to the arbitrary Proceedings of Papists.

XVII. That both the Prince and Princess of Orange have, with all Respect, signified to his Majesty their great Regret at these Proceedings; and at his Desire declared their Thoughts concerning the repealing the Penal Laws and Test; which they did in such a Manner, as, they hoped, they had proposed an Expedient for settling the Peace of the Kingdom, and a happy Agreement among the Subjects; but this has been wrested by those evil Counsellors, to alienate the King from them, and to persuade him that the Prince designed to disturb the Quiet of the Kingdom.

XVIII. The last and great Remedy for these Evils, is the calling of a Parliament, for securing the Nation from the evil Practices of those wicked Counsellors: But this could not be obtain'd; for those Men, fearing to be called to an Account, having obstructed it, sowing Divisions between the Church and Dissenters, upon the specious Pretence of Liberty of Conscience, that by that Means they might bring about their Designs, they have caused all Persons in Employment to declare they would vote in their Elections for a Parliament, for such only as would take off the Penal Laws; and those that refused to do so were turned out. And contrary to the Charters of those Boroughs that send Members to Parliament, they made such Alterations in their Officers and Members as they thought fit for the effecting their Design, of assuring themselves of the Representatives chosen by these Boroughs, and so avoid the Punishment they deserve. So that the Returns

turns of Popish Sheriffs and Mayors being illegal, no lawful Parliament can be had as long as they are in Power. And though by the Constitution of the English Government the Elections to Parliament ought to be perfectly free, and the Members when chosen give their Opinions freely, without Force or Awe; yet this cannot be expected. But one may perhaps be called, wherein the Elections will be carried by Fraud and Violence, and the Members of it directed and influenced by those evil Counsellors, without regard to the Good or Happiness of the Nation. Which is evident by their Attempts on the last Parliament; which, because it could not be brought to comply with their wicked Designs, was dissolved.

XIX. But to crown all, there are great Presumptions to believe, that those evil Counsellors, in order to carry on their wicked Designs, have falsely published, That the Queen hath brought forth a Son; though there have appeared, both during the Queen's pretended Bigness, and the Management of the Birth, visible Grounds of Suspicion, which tho' known, were not endeavoured to be removed.

XX. And since the Princess, as likewise the Prince, have so great an Interest in this Matter, the many Demonstrations of Affection and Services of the English Nation to them and the States General would not admit of an Excuse, of not endeavouring to his Power to succour the Protestant Religion, and the Laws and Liberties of these Kingdoms, and secure them the continual Enjoyment of them; being invited by many Lords Spiritual and Temporal, Gentlemen, and others of all Ranks.

XXI. This is the Cause of his coming to England, with a Force sufficient to secure his Person from the Malice of those evil Counsellors; this Declaration being designed to give a true Understanding of the Motives, of which a true Account has already been given. It is now declared, that this Expedition is to procure a free Parliament, the Restoration of all Charters, and Privileges of Corporations, especially London: That Writs for the Choice of a Parliament, be addressed to Persons qualified by Law: That all displaced Officers, Civil, Military, and Ecclesiastical, be restored to their Places; and none elected Parliament men, but such as are qualified by Law: That they, being legally chosen, may sit in full Freedom, that so both Houses may concur in making such Laws as they shall think convenient for the Security of the Protestant Religion, and for the Agreement betwixt the Church of England and Dissenters, as also for the securing all that will live peaceably under the Government, Papists not excepted; and whatever else they shall think proper for securing the Nation from Arbitrary Power. To this Parliament also the Enquiry into the Birth of the pretended Prince of Wales shall be referred.

XXII. That the Prince will concur in any Thing this Parliament shall determine, as having nothing in his Eye but the Safety of all.

XXIII. This is the Design of this Expedition, in which Strictness of Discipline shall be observed by the Prince's Forces, and, as soon as the State of the Nation will admit, the Forces shall be all sent back.

XXIV. He therefore hopes all People will judge rightly of, and approve, his Proceedings, relying on God for Success.

XXV. He invites the Nobility and Commons of all Ranks to assist him in the Execution of his Design: that all the Violences and Disorders may be redressed in a free and legal Parliament.

XXVI.

JAMES II.

XXVI. That as soon as the Nations are brought to a quiet state, he will take care that a Parliament shall be called in Scotland, for the settling that Kingdom.

And also will study to bring the Kingdom of Ireland to such a state, that the Settlement may be observed, and the Protestant and British Interest secured. And endeavour to procure such an Establishment in the Three Kingdoms, that they may all live in a happy Union and Correspondence; and the Protestant Religion, the Peace, Honour, and Happiness of these Nations, be established upon lasting Foundations.

Dated at the Hague, the 10th of October, 1688, and Signed

WILLIAM HENRY,
Prince of Orange.

To this was added another Declaration, importing,

That since the Printing of the former, those Subverters of the Religion and Laws had given some seeming Redress in the Grievances therein complained of, to persuade the People not to have Recourse to the Shelter of the Prince's Arms for the Re-establishment of their Religion and Laws. And they have given out, That the Prince's Designs were to conquer and enslave the Nation; wherefore this Addition is made, That his Highness is confident no Person can so far mistake his Intentions, since as his Forces are not sufficient, if he could conceive such a Design, so neither could the great Number of the principal Nobility and Gentry, that invite, accompany, and assist him, so far forget themselves, as to join in a Design that must make void their own lawful Titles to their Honours and Estates

That his Design is no more than to procure a Settlement in Religion, and of the Liberties and Properties of the Subjects so as that they may not be again invaded.

That as the imperfect Redress now offered, is a Confession of those Violations of the Government he has set forth in his Declaration; so the Defect of it is no less apparent, they laying down only what they can take up again with Pleasure, the Ground of them, Arbitrary Power, being still retained. And it is plain there can be no Redress but in Parliament, by a Declaration of the Rights of the Subjects that have been invaded: His Highness therefore declares he will refer all to a free and lawful Parliament.

Dated at the Hague, the 24th of October, 1688.

WILLIAM HENRY,
Prince of Orange.

This Declaration was seconded with Letters; one to the Officers and Soldiers of the Army, the other to the Officers and Seamen aboard the English Fleet, to invite them to join in the Common Cause.

On the 10th of November the Lord Delamere having received certain Advice of the Prince's landing, assembled 50 Horse, and went to Manchester, and the next Day to Boden-Dorons, his Number being increased to 4 or 500, and declared for the Prince of Orange.

Before the Prince left Exeter, the Gentlemen of that Country entered into an Association, whereby they obliged themselves by solemn Promise, to stand by and assist the Prince of Orange, in maintaining the Protestant Religion, and the Laws and Liberties of England, Scotland, and Ireland; and to revenge any Injury done to the Prince with with the utmost Rigour, not only against those that attempt it, but all their Adherents also.

In this great Revolution there happened no considerable Actions, two or three small Encounters being all the Signs of War; the first of which was at Wincanton in Somersetshire, on the 20th of November, between a Party of 120 Horse and Dragoons under Colonel Sarsfield on the King's Side, and about 30, under Colonel Campbell, of the Prince's Men, who having posted themselves behind the Hedges in a Line, got the Advantage of the King's, and killed many of them; and a sudden Alarm being given that the Enemy approached, the rest fled.

On the 19th of November, the King came down to Salisbury, which was the Head Quarters; where,

On the 22d, he put out a Proclamation, promising Pardon to those that would quit the Prince of Orange.

But it was not the Prince of Orange's Army only that the King had to deal with; the Nation was too sensible of the Injuries they had received, to sit still now that they had this Opportunity of righting themselves. We have told you, that the Lord Delamere appeared in Cheshire with great Numbers of Gentry; quickly after, another great Party of the Nobility, Gentry, and Commons, assembled at Nottingham, where on November the 22d, they made a Declaration, setting forth the Reasons of their Undertaking, in enumerating the Grievances the Nation suffered, by which they were made sensible of the Arbitrary Tyrannical Power coming on the Nation, by the Influence of the Jesuitical Counsels. To avoid therefore the enslaving themselves and their Posterity, they will to their utmost Power, oppose the same, in Conjunction with the Prince of Orange, to recover the almost ruined Laws, Liberties, and Religion: That they ought not to be Bug-bear'd out of their Reason, by the opprobrious Name of Rebels, it being no Rebellion to resist one that makes his own Will his Law. And therefore all good Protestants ought, and they hope will join with them: And that the Redress already made were not to be regarded, but all to be referred to a free Parliament.

On the 25th of November, the Prince of Denmark, the Duke of Grafton, the Lord Churchill, and many more of the Nobility, did actually leave the King, and go over to the Prince. Prince George and the Lord Churchill left each of them a Letter to the King, to this effect; viz. To assure him, That it was with great Grief they complied with the Dictates of Honour, since they obliged them to forsake him; but it was in the Common Cause of Christendom, and for the Security of the Protestant Religion, themselves, &c.

This struck so great a Damp upon the King, that on the next Day, with some Precipitation, he left Salisbury, and ordered the Army to retire to Reading. His Majesty lay that Night at Andover, and came the next Day to London.

The Princess of Denmark the Day before retired privately from Whitehall, with the Lady Churchill.

Immediately after the King's Return to London, he removed Sir Edward Hales from being Lieutenant of the Tower, and put Sir Berwick Skelton, a Protestant, in his stead.

And now at last the King was contented to call a Parliament; which he declared in Council on the 28th. And,

On the 30th a Proclamation was pub-

1688. published for chusing a Parliament to meet at Westminster, January the 15th, which he declared should be free in all its Circumstances. To which Purpose Indemnity was granted to all that should be chosen Members, though they had been in Arms against him. But alas! it was now too late, the Nation was in such Ferment, that it was not much regarded. However, the Chief Officers of the Fleet, as soon as they heard the News, drew up an Address of Thanks to the King, which was subscribed by the Lords Dartmouth and Berkley, Sir Roger Strickland, and 38 Commoners.

Soon after the Prince of Wales with his Nurse was sent to Portsmouth, in order to his being transported to France; but either upon my Lord Dartmouth's refusing to do it, or upon some other Reason, he was brought back again to London, on the 8th of December.

In Norfolk, the Duke of Norfolk, and a great many of the Gentry of the Country, declared for a free Parliament and the Protestant Religion. The Earl of Shrewsbury, and Sir John Guise seized Bristol, and the Lord Lovelace was delivered by the Gentry of the Country out of Gloucester Castle.

The Lords Molineux and Aston, being Roman Catholics, seized Chester for the King. And Berwick stood firm to him; but Newcastle received the Lord Lumley, and declared for a free Parliament. York was in the Hands of the Earl of Danby, and the other associated Lords: and Hull seized their Governor the Lord Langdale, disarmed the Papists, and declared for a free Parliament: And Plymouth had long before submitted to the Prince of Orange.

The Common People took this Opportunity of revenging themselves on the Papists, by destroying the Chapels they had erected at York, Bristol, Gloucester, Woolverhampton, Birmingham, Cambridge, and St. Edmundsbury.

On the 8th of December the King's Army at Reading, upon a false Alarm, retired in great haste to Twyford-Bridge; but endeavouring to regain the Post the next Day, a Party of the Prince's, who had been sent for by the Town, set upon the Irish Dragoons, and killed 50 of them, they making little Defence, upon a Belief that all the Army was at hand.

About this Time a Paper was published called the Third Declaration, in the Prince of Orange's Name, which was filled with Commands to all Magistrates to disarm and seize Papists, with terrifying Threats to those that neglected it.

On the 19th, the Queen left Whitehall, and went down to Graveland, where she embarked on a Yatch for France, with Count Da the Pope's Nuncio, and others.

A little before this the Marquis of Hallifax, the Earl of Nottingham, and the Lord Godolphin, had been sent by the King and Council to treat with the Prince of Orange and adjust Preliminaries in order to the holding of a Parliament; who on the 8th of December sent a Letter to his Highness, dated from Hungerford; the Substance of which was.

That his Majesty, observing that the Differences and Complaints alledged by his Highness seemed to be referred to a free Parliament, resolved to call one and had issued out Writs and a Proclamation to that Purpose, his People persisting in the Desire of it; though he had thought it more adviseable to defer it till Things were more composed. And to prevent Interruption in it, ready to agree to all reasonable Propositions, for the Security of those that shall come to it. That to this purpose they were deputed by the King, for the adjusting of Matters necessary for the Freedom of Election, and Security in sitting, and are ready to enter into a Treaty in order to it. And proposed, That both Armies may be kept at such a convenient Distance from London, that the Parliament may be free from Apprehensions of being disturbed: His Majesty being desirous the Meeting may be no longer delayed, than necessary Forms require.

Subscribed,
Hallifax. Godolphin.
Nottingham.

To which the Prince, with the Advice of the Lords and Gentlemen assembled with him, replied in the following Proposals:

I. That all Papists, and Persons unqualified by Law be disarmed, disbanded, and removed from all Employments civil and military.

II. That all Proclamations be recalled, that reflect on any of the Prince's Adherents, and all set at Liberty that have been committed on that Account.

III. That the Tower of London be put into the Hands of the City.

IV. That the Prince and King, with equal Guards, be in London, at an equal Distance from it, during the Sessions of Parliament: That the Armies be forty Miles from London, and no more Forces brought into the Kingdom.

V. That Tilbury Fort be put into the Hands of the City.

VI. That a sufficient Maintenance for his Forces be assigned to the Prince, out of the publick Revenue, till the Sitting of the Parliament. And,

VII. That Portsmouth be put into such Hands as shall be agreed between the King and Prince, to prevent French or foreign Troops from Landing.

Dated at Littlecot, Dec. 9, 1688.

This Answer was by Express sent to his Majesty on the 10th of Dec. but was far from producing the desired Effect; for the King immediately stopt the Writs for the Parliament, and ordered a Caveat to be entred against the executing those that were sent down, and immediately resolved to leave the Kingdom. He sent a Letter to the Earl of Feversham to inform him of his Design, and to thank him, and the other Officers that stuck to him, for their Services, telling them he did not expect they would further expose themselves. Upon the Receipt of which, the Earl of Feversham disbanded all the Army he had then under his Command, and immediately sent a Letter to the Prince of Orange to inform him of the King's Order and Departure.

The 11th of December, about Three in the Morning the King went down to Gravesend in a small Boat in order to leave the Kingdom, but without leaving any Power or Instruction behind him. Whereupon the principal of the Army met, and sent an Express to the Prince of Orange, to inform him of the King's Departure, and to assure him they would assist the Lord Mayor in keeping the City in Order.

Also the Lords Spiritual and Temporal that were in and about London, came to Guildhall, where, together with the Lord Mayor and Aldermen, they made a Declaration to this Effect, viz. That the King being by pernicious Counsels withdrawn, and, as they apprehended, in order to leave the Nation, their Zeal to the publick Good obliged them unanimously to apply themselves to the Prince of Orange, who 1688. with such Hazard and Expence had delivered them from Popery and Slavery. They did thereby declare their Resolution to assist his Highness in the procuring a free Parliament with all speed, wherein the Laws, Liberties, and Properties might be secured, and also the Church of England, with a due Liberty to Protestant Dissenters, and the Protestant Religion and Interest over the whole World, supported and encouraged. That in the mean time they would endeavour to secure the City and Parts adjacent, by disarming Papists, and securing Popish Priests, &c. and all Things else that may promote his Highness's generous Intention for the publick Good. Signed

W. Cant.	P. Winchester,
T. Ebor.	W. St. Asaph,
Pembroke,	F. Ely,
Dorset,	Tho. Rossen.
Mulgrave,	Tho. Peterburgh,
Thanet,	Wharton,
Carlisle,	North and Grey,
Craven,	Chandois,
Ailbury,	Montague.
Burlington,	T. Fermyn,
Suffex,	Vaughan Carbery,
Berkley,	Culpeper,
Rochester,	Crews,
Newport,	Ossulston.
Weymouth,

This Declaration was ordered by the Lords Spiritual and Temporal to be carried to his Highness by the Earl of Pembroke, the Viscount Weymouth, the Bishop of Ely, and the Lord Culpeper, and to give him an Account what they had done at that Meeting.

After this, the Lord Mayor, Aldermen, and Common Council followed the Peers Example, and sent an Address to the Prince by four Aldermen, and eight Commoners, inviting his Highness to London. Also the Lieutenantcy did the same, which was carried to the Prince by Sir Robert Clayton, Sir William Ruffel, Sir Bazil Firebrass, and Charles Duncomb, Esq;

The Lords at the same time sent for the Keys of the Tower, which they delivered to the Lord Lucas, appointing him Lieutenant till further Order.

The King in his Departure had put himself aboard a small Yatch, commanded by one Captain Saunders, which was forced for Want of Ballast to put into the East Swale in the Isle of Shippy, where the Inhabitants being abroad searching for Jesuits, &c. stopt it the 12th of December, not knowing the Persons on Board. There were with the King Sir Edward Hales, and one Mr. De la Badie; who were all, the King himself not excepted, at first very rudely treated, and brought up to Fewersham as suspected Persons, where the King being arrived, and by that time known, the People's Carriage was quite altered, and those who at first had rudely taken from him his Watch, Money, &c. came with all Submission to restore them, and beg Pardon: He lodged at the Mayor's House, and sent for the Earl of Winchelsea, Lord Lieutenant of the County, to come to him. And immediately the Militia were drawn into the Town, to guard his Majesty's Person from any Insults.

In the mean time, in London all was in Confusion; the same Evening the King departed, the Rabble got together in great Multitudes, and pulled down the Popish Chapels, which they had begun while the King was here, but had been suppressed by his Guards, two or three of them having been killed. But now that there was no Authority, and no body in Power to punish them, they took their full Revenge beginning with the Convent of the Benedictines in Lincolns-Inn-Fields, where they quite destroyed the Inside of the House, but were more merciful to this than that at St. John's near Smithfield, where they left not one Brick upon another: A wonderful Effect of popular Rage! But what is most inexcusable they also pulled down the Spanish Ambassador's Chapel at Wildhouse, and rifled his House. Upon which the Lords met at Whitehall on the 12th of December, and published an Order for the Discovery of the Goods taken from the Spanish Ambassador, promising a good Reward; and commanding all Books and Papers taken out of his Study to be brought to the Council Chamber.

The same Day the Lord Chancellor Jefferies was seized in a Disguise at Wapping, and brought before the Lord-Mayor, who committed him to the Tower for the present, to secure him from the Rabble, that were very insolent to him; which Commitment the Lords afterwards confirmed.

The Lord Feversham, as you have heard, had disbanded the Army upon the King's Letter, but without taking from them their Arms, and there being among 'em 5 or 6000 Irish, gave occasion to a strange Alarm that happened about Midnight of the 12th and 13th of December, viz. That the Irish, in a desperate Rage, were approaching the City, putting all to the Sword, and burning and destroying in a most dreadful manner; which necessarily putting every Body in a Fright, caused a great deal of Confusion for some Hours, till upon a little Enquiry it appeared wholly false. And which is wonderful, this Alarm happened not in London only, but all over the Kingdom also, and much about the same Time every where.

On the 13th the News was brought to London of the King's being at Feversham, upon which some of his Servants were sent down to wait upon his Majesty.

On the 14th the Lords published an Order commanding the Irish Officers and Soldiers to repair to their respective Bodies, promising them Subistence-Money till they could be otherwise provided for; and ordered them to deliver up their Arms to the Officers of the Ordnance, commanding all others to be seized.

The Lords sent the Lords Feversham, Ailbury, Yarmouth, and Midleton to the King, humbly to entreat his Majesty to return to Whitehall; and also sent down the Guards to protect his Person, and with them the Servants of his Household to carry him Necessaries.

On the 15th the King removed to Rocheſter, in order to his Return, where the Guards met him, and the next Day, being Sunday, came to London, where he arrived about five in the Evening, and was welcomed by the Acclamations of the People quite through the City.

The Prince of Orange, upon the Invitations he received from London, was come as far as Windsor, whence he sent Monsieur Zuileſteine to the King, to desire him to tarry at Rocheſter, but he missed his Way. As soon as the King came to Whitehall, he sent the Lord Feversham to invite the Prince to St. James's with what Number of Troops he thought fit. But the Lords, with the Prince, thought it adviseable, That the King should be desired to retire to some Place near London, Ham-house being thought most convenient; and accordingly the Prince sent a Letter to the Lord Marquis of Hallifax, the Earl of Shrewsbury, and the Lord De la Mere, desiring them to let the King know, that for the Quiet of the City, and Safety of his Person, it was convenient 1688.

nient that his Majesty remove to Ham, where he should be attended with his Guards, &c.

As soon as the King arrived at Whitehall, he ordered Leiburn, the Popish Bishop, to be discharged out of Newgate, whither he had been committed in the King's Absence.

And the next Day published an Order against the pulling down Houses, &c. commanding all Magistrates to suppress those Disorders.

The Popish Priests and Party, presuming upon the King's Protection, began now again to resume their wonted Temper, encouraged by the favourable Access they had at Whitehall, whither they resorted in great Numbers.

The Lords, with the Prince, in the mean Time, thought it not safe for his Highness to venture his Person to London, till his Guards had secured the Way. Wherefore the Lords at Windfor resolved to send the Prince's Guards to take Possession of the Posts about Whitehall.

The Lords, whom the Prince sent with the Message to the King, concerning his Removal, arrived not at Whitehall till twelve at Night, when they sent Word to the Lord Middleton, that they had a Message to deliver to the King of that Importance, that they desired they might be immediately admitted; he accordingly presently introduced them, the King being by that Time in Bed; where, after an Apology for the unseasonable Time, they delivered their Message, which the King said he would comply with; upon which the Lords desired his Majesty would remove before Noon, to prevent meeting the Prince, who intended to come to London that Day; to which the King also agreed. But afterwards desired he might rather return to Rocheſter, to which the Lords answered they would acquaint the Prince; and accordingly sent to the Prince, who readily agreed to it; and thereupon his Majesty left Whitehall before Noon, and went that Night in his Barge to Graveſend, attended by the Earl of Arran, and some others.

The same Day, being the 18th of December, the Prince of Orange came to St James's, where he arrived at Three in the Afternoon, attended by Monsieur Schomberg, and divers of the Nobility, and welcomed by the joyful Acclamations of the People, with ringing of Bells, Bonfires, &c.

The King continued at Rocheſter till the 23d of December, when in the Night he privately went out, with one Mr. Ralph Sheldon and Mr. De la Badie in his Company, and embarked in a Vessel for France; but before his Departure, left a Paper, which was afterwards printed, containing the Reasons of his withdrawing. The Queen, who went hence the 10th, arrived at Calais the 11th, and wrote to the King of France to inform him of her Arrival, and crave his Protection.

Upon the Prince's Arrival, the Common-Council of London, assembled, and ordered, That the Aldermen and their Deputies should wait upon his Highness to congratulate his Arrival, which they accordingly did the next Day; the Recorder, Sir George Treby, made a Speech to excuse the Lord-Mayor, who was at that Time sick, and to testify to his Highness their Gratitude for the happy Deliverance he had wrought for them.

The first Thing the Prince of Orange did, was to take Care of the English Army, and published an Order, commanding all Persons who had in their Custody the Arms of the Soldiers, who had lost or embezzled them, either to restore them to the Officers of the respective Regiments, or deliver them to the Britannia enthralld by Popery & Power. is releiv'd by K. William. p. 347

*Britannia Crown'd by Victory & attended by Plenty & Commerce.
Holds in Chains Envy, Fraud, Tyranny & Ambition. p. 432*

J. Cole Sculp.

the C appoi lib, whom dom
An great at St sixty,
in the which
to the

My
I Ha
I aa pursue calling servant
and re
of the
that th ing ag

Up Propo
the ne and Si Polex
kinson, dered

Acc semble ber of Temp
the pr
this E heard the tw drefs to fired h
the A Affairs and th
venue,
gion,
And t Care to prev that I

the Office of the Ordnance; and next appointed Quarters for all the English, Scotch, and Irish Regiments, whom he disposed all over the Kingdom.

And on the 21st of December, a great Council of the Nobility met at St. James's, to the Number of sixty, where they subscribed a Paper in the Name of an Association; after which, the Prince expressed himself to them in these Words:

My Lords,

I Have desired you to meet here, to advise the best Manner how to pursue the Ends of my Declaration, in calling a free Parliament for the Preservation of the Protestant Religion, and restoring the Rights and Liberties of the Kingdom, and settling the same, that they may not be in Danger of being again subverted.

Upon which it was resolved, these Proposals should be further debated the next Day in the House of Peers, and Sir John Maynard, Mr. Holt, Mr. Polexsen, Mr. Bradford, and Mr. Atkinson, Counsellors at Law, were ordered to attend to give their Advice.

Accordingly on the 22d they assembled at Westminster, to the Number of fifty-five Lords, Spiritual and Temporal, who having consulted of the proper Method to be taken in this Exigence of Affairs, and having heard of the King's Departure, on the twenty-fifth, Resolved on an Address to the Prince, wherein they desired his Highness to take upon him the Administration of all publick Affairs, both Civil and Military, and the Disposal of the publick Revenue, for the Preservation of Religion, and the Peace of the Nation: And that he would take particular Care of the Condition of Ireland, to prevent the Dangers threatening that Kingdom. All which they desired him to undertake till the Meeting of a Convention, intended to be assembled on the 22d of January following.

They further desired his Highness to send Letters subscribed by himself, to all the Lords Spiritual and Temporal, and to all the Counties, Cities, Boroughs, &c. in England and Wales, to make Choice of such a Number of Members as they are of Right to send to serve in Parliament, within ten Days after the Receipt of those Letters.

These Addresses were signed by the Lords Spiritual and Temporal then assembled, and presented to the Prince the same Day, who accepted this Offer, and promised them to perform what they had desired.

On the 26th, the Members that had served in Parliament in King Charles the Second's Time, the Lord Mayor, Aldermen, and Fifty of the Common-Council of London, were desired by the Prince to attend him; and all but the Lord Mayor, who was sick, did so, to the Number of One hundred and sixty, and were by him informed of the State of Affairs, and desired to repair to the House of Commons, and consult what was convenient to be done: accordingly they went thither, and having sent to know what the Peers had done, they concurred with it, and presented the same Addresses to the Prince, who gave them the same Answer he had done to the Lords.

On the 30th, the Prince put out a Proclamation, for continuing Sheriffs, Justices of Peace, &c. and on the 5th of January, an Order for preventing Disorders in Elections, commanding the Soldiery to retire out of all Towns during the Time of Election.

The Nobility and Gentry of Scotland, in and about London, were like-

1688. likewise called to St. James's, where they met on the 7th of February. The Prince made a Speech to them, intimating, that the Security of the Protestant Religion, their Laws, and Liberties, had engaged him in this Undertaking, and therefore asked their Advice, what was to be done for effecting that.

Then they withdrew to the Council Chamber at Whitehall, and chose the Duke of Hamilton their President, and after Consultation, at last agreed on Heads of a Paper, which they ordered to be drawn up, and then adjourned to the next Day, when they met again, approved the Paper, and ordered it to be engrossed, and on the 9th signed and presented to the Prince; it was to the same Effect with that of the English Nobility, desiring his Highness to take upon him the Administration of the publick Affairs, and the summoning of the States of the Kingdom of Scotland to meet on the 14th of March, and the disposing of the Fortresses, Revenues, &c. of that Kingdom. Thirty Lords and Eighty Gentlemen signed it, and it was delivered by the Duke of Hamilton. The Prince graciously accepted of their Advice and Offer.

His Highness finding the Treasury very empty, desired the City to advance a Sum for his present Occasions, which they on the 10th of January readily granted, and in a short Time, by voluntary Subscriptions, raised him 150,000 l.

On the 22d of January, the Convention met: The House of Lords chose the Marquis of Hallifax their Speaker, and the House of Commons Henry Powle, Esq; for theirs. After which, a Letter from the Prince was read to both Houses, on Occasion of their Meeting, setting forth,

‘ That he had, to the utmost of his Power, performed what they desired, in order to the publick Peace, and had omitted nothing that tended to the Preservation of it, since he had had the Administration of Affairs: That it now lay upon them to provide for the Security of their Religion, Laws, and Liberties. That he did not doubt but that by such a full and free Representative of the Nation as was now met, the Ends of his Declaration would be attained: and as it hath pleased God hitherto to bless his Intentions with such Success, he trusted he would complete his own Work, by sending a Spirit of Peace and Union to influence their Counsels.

And then intimated to them the Danger of Delay, as well as of Division, by Reason of the dangerous Condition of Ireland, and the Occasion Holland would have of their Troops now in his Service; and put them in Mind of the Obligation we were under of assisting them, as they had us, against a powerful Enemy now declared against them.

The first Thing the Convention did, was to present an Address of Thanks to his Highness, for the Deliverance he had wrought for Them, and for his Care in the Administration of the Government, which they desired him to continue. To which the Prince expressed himself in this Manner:

My Lords and Gentlemen,

I am glad that what I have done hath pleased you; and since you desire me to continue the Administration of Affairs, I am willing to accept it. I must recommend to you the Consideration of Affairs Abroad; which maketh it fit for you to expedite your Business, not only for making a Settlement ment at Home upon a good Foundation, but for the Safety of all Europe.

On the 28th of January, the House of Commons passed this Vote, viz.

Resolved, That King James the Second, having endeavoured to subvert the Constitution of this Kingdom by breaking the Original CONTRACT between the King and People; and by the Advice of Jesuits and other wicked Persons, having violated the Fundamental Laws, and having withdrawn himself out of the Kingdom, hath Abdicated the Government, and the Throne is thereby Vacant.

Which Vote was sent to the Lords for their Concurrence.

Whereupon followed several Conferences between the Lords and Commons, which took up several Days; till at last, on the 6th of February, the Lords concurred with the Commons in the abovesaid Vote.

After which followed many Debates concerning a Regency during King James's Life; which being rejected, the Declaration of the Princess of Orange as next Successor, was proposed by some; the Election of the Prince of Orange for King by others: Which occasioned warm Debates, that continued some Days, till at last they agreed in a Medium: And,

On the 12th of February, both Houses agreed in the following Declaration:

The DECLARATION of the Lords Spiritual and Temporal, and Commons, assembled at Westminster.

WHEREAS the late King James the Second, by the Assistance of divers evil Counsellors, Judges, and Ministers, employed by him, did endeavour 1688. to subvert and extirpate the Protestant Religion, and the Laws of this Kingdom.

By assuming and exercising a Power of Dispensing with, and Suspending of Laws, and the Execution of Laws, without Consent of Parliament.

By Committing and Prosecuting divers worthy Prelates, for humbly Petitioning to be executed from Concurring to the said assumed Power.

By issuing and causing to be executed, a Commission under the Great Seal, for erecting a Court called the Court of Commission for Ecclesiastical Affairs.

By levying Money for and to the Use of the Crown, by Pretence of Prerogative, for other Time, and in other Manner than the same was granted by Parliament.

By raising and keeping a standing Army within the Kingdom in Time of Peace, without Consent of Parliament; and Quartering Soldiers contrary to Law.

By causing several good Subjects, being Protestants, to be disarmed, at the same Time when Papists were both Armed and Employed contrary to Law.

By violating the Freedom of Elections of Members to serve in Parliament.

By Prosecutions in the Court of King's Bench, for Matters and Causes cognizable only in Parliament, and by divers arbitrary and illegal Courses.

And whereas of late Years, partial, corrupt, and unqualified Persons, have been returned and served on Juries and Trials, and particularly divers Jurors in Trials of High Treason, which were not Free-holders: And excessive 1688.

‘ Bail hath been required of Persons committed in criminal Cases, to elude the Benefit of the Law made for the Liberty of the Subject.

‘ And excessive Fines have been imposed.

‘ And illegal and cruel Punishments inflicted.

‘ And several Grants and Promises made of Fines and Forfeitures before any Conviction or Judgment against the Persons upon whom the same were to be levied.

‘ All which are utterly and directly contrary to the known Laws and Statutes, and Freedom of this Realm.

‘ And whereas the late King James the Second having abdicated the Government, and the Throne being thereby vacant :

‘ His Highness the Prince of Orange (whom it hath pleased Almighty GOD to make the glorious Instrument of delivering this Kingdom from Popery and Arbitrary Power) did (by the Advice of the Lords Spiritual and Temporal, and divers principal Persons of the Commons) cause Letters to be written to the Lords Spiritual and Temporal, being Protestants, and other Letters to the Counties, Cities, Universities, Boroughs, and Cinque Ports, for the chusing such Persons to represent Them, as were of Right to be sent to Parliament, to Meet and Sit at Westminster, upon the 22d Day of January 1688, in order to such an Establishment, as that their Religion, Laws, and Liberties, might not again be in Danger of being subverted: Upon which Letters, Elections have been accordingly made.

‘ And thereupon the said Lords Spiritual and Temporal, and Commons, pursuant to their respective Letters and Elections, being now assembled in a full and free Repre‘ sentative of this Nation, taking into their most serious Consideration, the best Means of attaining the Ends aforesaid, do in the first Place (as their Ancestors in like Case have usually done) for the vindicating and asserting their ancient Rights and Liberties, Declare,

‘ That the pretended Power of Suspending Laws, or the Execution of Laws, by Regal Authority, as it hath been assumed and exercised of late, is illegal.

‘ That the Commission for erecting the late Court of Commissioners for Ecclesiastical Causes, and all other Commissioners and Courts of the like Nature, are illegal and pernicious.

‘ That levying Money to or for the Use of the Crown, by Pretence of Prerogative, without Grant of Parliament, for longer Time, or in other Manner, than the same is or shall be granted, is illegal.

‘ That it is the Right of the Subjects to petition the King; and all Commitments and Prosecutions for such petitioning, are illegal.

‘ That the raising or keeping a Standing Army within the Kingdom, in the Time of Peace, unless it be by Consent of Parliament, is against Law.

‘ That the Subjects, being Protestants, may have Arms for their Defence, suitable to their Condition, and all allowed by Law.

‘ That the Election of Members of Parliament ought to be Free.

‘ That the Freedom of Speech, and Debates, or Proceedings of Parliament, ought not to be impeached or questioned, in any Place or Court out of Parliament.

‘ That excessive Bail ought not to be required, nor excessive Fines imposed, nor cruel and unusual Punishments inflicted.

‘ That

1688.

‘ That Jurors ought to be duly impannelled and returned ; and Jurors, which pass upon Men in Trials of High Treason, ought to be Freeholders.

‘ That all Grants and Promises of Fines and Forfeitures of particular Persons before Conviction, are illegal and void.

‘ And that for Redress of all Grievances, and for the amending, strengthening, and preserving of the Laws, Parliaments ought to be held frequently.

‘ And they do claim, demand, and insist upon all and singular the Premises, as their undoubted Rights and Liberties ; and that no Declarations, Judgments, Doings, or Proceedings, to the Prejudice of the People of any of the said Premises, ought in any wise to be drawn into Consequence and Example.

‘ To which Demand of their Rights, they are particularly encouraged by the Declaration of his Highness the Prince of Orange, as being the only Means for obtaining a full Redress and Remedy therein.

‘ Having therefore an entire Confidence, that his said Highness the Prince of Orange will perfect the Deliverance so far advanced by him, and still preserve them from the Violation of their Rights, which they have here asserted, and from all other Attempts upon their Religion, Rights, and Liberties :

‘ The said Lords Spiritual and Temporal, and Commons, assembled at Westminster, do Resolve,

‘ That WILLIAM and MARY, Prince and Princess of Orange, be declared King and Queen of England, France and Ireland, and the Dominions thereunto belonging, to hold the Crown and Royal

Dignity of the said Kingdoms and Dominions, to them the said Prince and Princess, during their Lives, and the Life of the Survivor of them ; and that the sole and full Exercise of the Regal Power be only in, and executed by the said Prince of Orange, in the Names of the said Prince and Princess, during their joint Lives ; and after their Deceases, the said Crown and Royal Dignity of the said Kingdoms and Dominions, to be to the Heirs of the Body of the said Princess ; and for Default of such Issue, to the Princess Anne of Denmark, and the Heirs of her Body ; and for Default of such Issue, to the Heirs of the Body of the said Prince of Orange.

‘ And the Lords Spiritual and Temporal, and Commons, do pray the said Prince and Princess of Orange, to accept the same accordingly.

‘ And that the Oaths hereafter mentioned, be taken by all Persons of whom the Oaths of Allegiance and Supremacy might be required by Law, instead of them ; and that the Oaths of Allegiance and Supremacy be abrogated.

I A. B. Do sincerely promise and swear, That I will be faithful and bear True Allegiance to their Majesties King William and Queen Mary.

So help me God.

I A. B. Do swear, That I do from my Heart Abhor, Detest, and Abjure, as impious and Heretical, this damnable Doctrine and Position, That Princes excommunicated or deprived by the Pope, or any Authority of the See of Rome, may be Deposed or Murdered by their Subjects, or any other whatsoever. And I do declare, That no foreign Prince, Per- 1688. son, Prelate, State, or Potentate, hath or ought to have any Jurisdiction, Power, Superiority, Preheminence, or Authority Ecclesiastical or Civil, within this Realm.

So help me God.

The same Day the Declaration bears Date, her Highness the Princess of Orange arrived from Holland, at Whitehall, and was received with all imaginable Demonstrations and Expressions of Joy.

Upon presenting the above recited Declaration to the Prince and Princess of Orange, his Highness answered,

My Lords and Gentlemen,

THIS is certainly the greatest Proof of the Trust you have in us that can be given, which is the Thing that maketh us value it the more; and We thankfully Accept what you have offered. And as I had no other Intention in my coming hither, than to preserve your Religion, Laws, and Liberties; so you may be sure, that I shall endeavour to support Them, and shall be willing to concur in any Thing that shall be for the Good of the Kingdom, and do all that is in my Power to advance the Welfare and Glory of the Nation.

Which Answer was Ordered by the Lords and Commons to be added to the engrossed Declaration in Parliament, and to be Enrolled in Parliament and Chancery.

And accordingly, on the 13th of February, the Prince and Princess of Orange were declared King and Queen.

WILLIAM and MARY.

WILLIAM Count of Nassau, Prince of Orange, and now King of England, was the sole Heir of an illustrious Family, who had been Sovereign Princes for a Thousand Years past. Four Hundred Years ago had the Honour to wear the Imperial Crown in the Person of Adolphus of Nassau, who succeeded Rhodolphus of Hapsburgh in the Year 1292. Egilbert I. in 404 married the Heiress of Locke and Breda, and added those Estates to the Demefnes of the Family. Egilbert II. was a Prince of great Renown for Wisdom and Valour, and therefore was constituted by the Emperor Maximilian I. Governor of the Netherlands in the Beginning of the Sixteenth Century. Henry the eldest Son of John, Brother to Egilbert, was very instrumental in advancing Charles V. to the Imperial Dignity, and was afterwards chosen by King Francis I. of France, for Husband to Claude de Châlons, only Sister to Philibert Prince of Orange, in the Year 1515, in whose Right after the Death of Philibert, his Son Rene succeeded in that Principality; who dying without Issue, left it to his Uncle William, younger Son to John, and Brother to Henry. Which William embraced the Reformed Religion, and was Father to the great William Prince of Orange, who so gloriously asserted the Cause of Liberty in the Netherlands. He was born in 1533, and was killed by Assassination at Delft, in the Year 1584. Prince Maurice, his second Son (the eldest having been some time time detained in Spain, and therefore not confided in by the States) was a Person of so great a Character for military Skill, that perhaps none has ever exceeded him. Henry Frederick, Brother to Maurice, succeeded and acquired just Fame by his military Atchievements. William his Son, who succeeded to all his Honours, and the Stadtholdership of Holland, was by his Majesty King Charles I. of Great Britain, thought a proper Husband for his eldest Daughter Mary, whom he accordingly espoused in the Year 1641, by whom he had Issue WILLIAM HENRY our King, of whom we are now to speak. This Prince was born on the 14th of November 1650, eight Days after his Father's Death. His History, during his Minority, while he was by a prevailing Faction in Holland excluded from the Dignities his Ancestors had so worthily possessed; or during those Years he so gloriously executed the Offices of Stadtholder and Captain General of the United Netherlands, are not the proper Subject of this Work, and therefore we shall omit that, as having been too long already in speaking of this Family; if it were not necessary, in order to remove a Contempt which the common People have been poisoned with, by the malicious Insinuations of some among us, That our King was an Upstart, who from General of a Neighbour's Army, was lifted up to Honours his Ancestors were Strangers to. But let the Publick judge, after this short Account of a very small Number of the many Honours this Family hath enjoyed, whether the Crown of Great Britain was dishonoured by his wearing it.

King Charles II. whose penetrating Judgment is universally acknowledged, declared of the Prince of Orange, that he was the honestest

Man in the World, and in that Confidence gave him that most Virtuous and Beautiful Princess his Niece, the Lady Mary, in Marriage, to whom he was betrothed, November 4, 1677.

MARY, eldest Daughter to his Royal Highness James Duke of York, and afterwards King of Great Britain, was born April 30th, 1662, and now succeeded her Father in the Throne conjunctly with her Spouse, who were both accordingly, as hath been already said, proclaimed King and Queen of England and Ireland, Feb. 13th, 1688-9.

Their Majesties being thus seated on the Throne, nominated the Privy Council, and the Ministers of State, which Dignities were conferred on the principal Nobility; the three great Offices of Lord High Admiral, Lord High Treasurer, and Lord Chancellor excepted, all which were put into Commission for the present. And then propounded to the Privy Council, Whether the present Convention might not be legally turned into a Parliament. Which being by the Majority answered in the Affirmative, the King, February 18th, went to the House of Lords, where the Commons also attending, he made a Speech to them, setting forth the present Posture of Affairs, and demanding their Advice upon it. The House of Lords immediately brought in a Bill to prevent Questions and Disputes concerning the assembling and sitting of this Parliament, which imported the Continuance of it as a Parliament, without a new Election. It passed the House of Lords in two Days, but occasioned some Debates in the House of Commons; however it passed there too, and on the 23d received the Royal Assent.

The first Matter of publick Nature in the House of Commons was, the Question whether the Revenue 1688. expired by the Vacancy of the Throne, or devolved on their Majesties, which was carried Expired. And the first Bill presented to the Lords, was For regulating the Trials of Peers. And next to that, A Bill for exempting the Protestant Dissenters from the Penalties of certain Laws, which was read the first Time in that House on the 28th of February.

The Session was of long Continuance, because of the Variety of Matters transacted in it, the Relation whereof in a continued Thread cannot be conveniently carried on, because divers Matters abroad will require immediate Attention. At present therefore we can only say, that the Business which came before the two Houses in the Beginning of the Session were chiefly these; 1. An Examination of the Circumstances of the Death of the late Earl of Essex by the House of Lords. 2. Two Messages to the House of Commons from his Majesty. (1.) That in the present Conjunction of Affairs, it was necessary to detain some suspected Persons in Custody, longer than the Act for Habeas Corpus admitted. (2.) To declare the King's Consent to the taking away the Duty on Fire-hearths, which had been enjoyed by his two Predecessors. (3.) The several Bills for Toleration, Abrogating the Oaths of Allegiance and Supremacy, and appointing new ones. And the Bill for suspending the Habeas Corpus Act. All which were the Subjects of Debates, but passed at last, as we shall have Occasion to say hereafter.

On the 27th of February the King received Advice, that the late King James was sailed from Brest, with a considerable Number of French Troops, for Ireland; which he imparted to the Parliament, and thereupon the Commons voted, That they would stand by, and assist the King in reducing Ireland; which being communicated to the Lords, was agreed to, and both Houses presented an Address to his Majesty to that Purpose. In the Answer to that Address, the King set forth not only an Estimate of what Forces were necessary for Ireland, viz. 20,000 Men, but also pressed the Parliament to consider the Condition of the Dutch, who now wanted our Assistance against France; and recommended the providing a sufficient Fleet for both these Services.

Some of the Scotch Forces now in England, viz. the Royal Regiment of Horse, and Part of Dumbarton's Regiment of Foot, pretended to desert the Service, and accordingly set forward for Scotland; but the King, pursuant to the Advice of Parliament, (March 15.) sent Forces after them, which soon reduced them to their Duty, and to prevent future Evil, they were immediately sent to Holland.

On the 11th of April, 1689, their Majesties were crowned at Westminster, with the Magnificence, Splendour, and Ceremony, usual on such Occasions. But antecedent to it an Act was passed for establishing the Coronation Oath; and divers new Honours were conferred, namely:

Prince George of Denmark was created Baron of Ockingham, Earl of Kendal, and Duke of Cumberland. And soon after by Act of Parliament he was naturalized, and thereby qualified to sit in the House of Lords. The Marquis of Winchester was created Duke of Bolton. The Earl of Danby, already President of the Council, was made Marquis of Carmarthen. Mynheer Bentinck, a Gentleman who had recommended himself to his Majesty's Favour, by most faithful and affectionate Service from his very Infancy, and especially at the Time he had the Small Pox, during which the Prince declared,

clared, that he knew not whether Mr. Bentinck had slept or not for sixteen Days or Nights, since in all that Time he never called but was answered by him immediately, as if awake; this Gentleman was created Baron Cirencester, Viscount Woodstock, and Earl of Portland. The Viscount Falconbridge Earl of Falconbridge. The Viscount Mordaunt, Earl of Monmouth. The Lord Montague, Viscount Mount Hermer and Earl of Montague. The Lord Churchill Earl of Marlborough. Henry Sidney, Esq; Baron of Milton, and Viscount Sidney of Sheppy. The Viscount Lumley, of Waterford in Ireland, Viscount Lumley of Lumley-Castle, in Durham. The Viscount Cholmondeley, of Kellis in Ireland, Baron Cholmondeley of Witchmalbank in Cheshire. And Mareschal Schomberg was naturalized, and soon after created a Duke. He, together with the Earl of Devonshire, were already elected Knights of the Garter.

Having now given our Reader a View of the State of Affairs in England, we must take a Transition to Scotland, in which Kingdom we have not yet told him their Majesties were proclaimed; nor in effect were they till that Day on which they were crowned at Westminster, viz. April 11, 1689.

The Convention which was elected there, like as in England, in the same Manner as a Parliament used to be elected, had been appointed to meet on the 14th of March; on which Day they accordingly assembled. And after Prayers, wherein the Bishop of Edinburgh implored the Restoration of King James, they proceeded to the Election of a President, wherein the Marquis of Arbol was proposed by King James's Friends, and Duke Hamilton by King William, and the latter carried it by 40 Voices. And then took into Consideration the Provision for the publick Peace, and the Castle of Edinburgh being held by the Duke of Gordon, a Papist, a Message was sent, requiring him to put that Castle into their Hands. The Duke demanding an Indemnity and Security, the Convention granted it to him, and by the Earls of Tweeddale and Lothain, sent him a Pardon in Writing; but he desiring twenty-four Hours to consider, the same Earls went to him the 15th, and then he demanded twelve Days: And in short, held the Castle till it was forced from him.

On the 16th of March, one Crane, an Englishman, presented to the Convention a Letter from King James. And the same Day the Lord Lewin arrived Express with a Letter from King William to the Convention. It was debated which Letter should be read first, but carried for King William's, which, in pathetic and affectionate Terms, advised them to consult on the Means of settling and securing the Peace and Happiness of their Country, and recommended to them an Union of the two Kingdoms. King James's Letter advised them to shew their Fidelity and Loyalty to him, who had always had great Affection to them his ancient People; that they should not be frightened nor bugbeared, for he would give them speedy Assistance and Protection, and concluded with Threats on those who were wanting in their Duty.

The Convention were so far from minding these Threats, that they imprisoned the Messenger; but not thinking him worth detaining, they sent him away without any Answer. To King William's Letter they ordered an Answer to be drawn up in the most thankful and dutiful Manner; which being done by a Committee, it was read in the House on the 23d, and being signed by the President in the Name of the Convention, was sent to London by the Lord Ross. The Care that was necessary to be taken for preserving the Peace, and with-holding those that were disposed to raise Arms, took up the Convention's Time for some Days; which being done, on March 26, a Committee was appointed to consider of the proper Ways of settling the Government; which Committee, after five or six Days sitting, came to a Resolution:

on

1689.

That King James being a professed Papist, and acting as King without ever taking the Oaths required by Law, had invaded the fundamental Constitution of the Realm, and altered it from a Legal and Limited Monarchy, to an Arbitrary Despotick Power, subverted the Protestant Religion, violated all the Laws and Liberties of the Nation, and inverted all the Ends of Government, whereby he had forfeited the Crown, and the Throne was become vacant.

Which being reported, the whole House, except Twelve, agreed with the Committee, and passed it into an Act. They also appointed the same Committee to bring in an Act for settling the Crown on Their Majesties King William and Queen Mary, and to consider of the Terms, and prepare an Instrument of Government to be offered with the Crown, for Redressing Grievances, and securing the Liberties of the People.

The Act drawn up by the Committee, contained in Substance, That King James being a Papist, and acting as King, without taking the Oath whereby every King at his Accession obliges himself to maintain the Protestant Religion, and govern according to Law, altered the Constitution of the Kingdom: That he had by Proclamation asserted an Absolute Power to disannul and disable Laws; and exerted that Power to the Subversion of the Protestant Religion, and to the Violation of the Laws and Liberties of the Nation;

1. By erecting Popish Schools, and Societies of Jesuits, and setting up the Popish Worship in many Places. 2. By allowing Popish Books to be published. 3. By sending the Children of Protestants abroad, to be bred Papists, and employing Priests to pervert Protestants, by Offers of Preferments. 4. By discharging Protestants, and putting Papists into Places of Trust, and putting the Forts and Magazines into the Hands of such. 5. By imposing Oaths contrary to Law. 6. By exacting Money without Consent of Parliament. 7. By levying and keeping on Foot an Army in Time of Peace, without Consent of Parliament, and maintaining Soldiers on Free Quarters. 8. By allowing the Officers to be Judges, whereby the Subjects were put to Death without legal Trial. 9. By imposing exorbitant Fines, and exacting extravagant Bail. 10. By imprisoning Persons without shewing Cause, and delaying Trial of them. 11. By causing Persons to be prosecuted upon Statutes of old forfeited Laws, and condemned upon weak Pretences and lame Proofs. 12. By subverting the Rights of the Royal Boroughs, imposing Magistrates and Council upon them contrary to their Charters, without Pretence of Forfeiture, or Surrender of such Charters, whereby the Nomination of Commissioners to Parliament was in the King, as being chosen by those Magistrates put in by him, many whereof were Papists. 13. By directing the Courts of Justice, stopping the usual Course, and commanding the Judges how they should proceed in Causes that came before them; and by changing the Nature of the Judges Commissions ad Vitam or Culpam, to bene Placito. 14. By granting Personal Protection for Civil-Debts contrary to Law. All which being Miscarriages of King James, and directly contrary to the known Laws, Freedoms, and Statutes of the Realm, the States of the Kingdom did find and declare, That the said King James had forfeited the Crown, and the Throne was become Vacant.

Papists

Therefore, in Regard his Royal Highness, then Prince of Orange, now King of England, whom it pleased God to make the Glorious Instrument of Delivering these Kingdoms from Popery and Arbitrary Power, by Advice of several Scottish Lords and Gentlemen then at London, did call the Estates to meet, in order to make such an Establishment, that their Religion, Laws, and Liberties, might not again be in Danger of being subverted: The said Estates being accordingly assembled in a full and free Representation of the Nation, taking into their most serious Consideration the best Means for attaining the Ends aforesaid, did in the first Place, as their Ancestors in like Cases had usually done for vindicating and asserting their Rights, declare, 1. That by the Law of Scotland, no Papist could be King or Queen of the Realm; nor that any Protestant Successor could exercise the Regal Power till he had sworn the Coronation-Oath. 2. That all Proclamations asserting an Absolute Power to annul and disable the Laws, in order to erect Popish Schools, Colleges of Jesuits and Mass-houses, and print Popish Books, was contrary to Law. 3. That taking the Children of Protestants and sending them abroad to be Educated in the Popish Religion; the founding Popish Schools, and bestowing Pensions on Popish Priests, and seducing Protestants, is contrary to Law. 4. That disarming Protestants and putting Papists into Places of Trust, is illegal. 5. That imposing an Oath without Authority of Parliament. 6. Raising Money without Consent of Parliament. 7. Officers exercising the Place of Judges. 8. Imposing extraordinary Fines. 9. Imprisoning Persons without shewing Cause. 10. Prosecuting Men upon Obsolete Laws. 11. Imposing Magistrates upon Boroughs contrary to their Charters. 12. Directing the Judges in the ordinary Course of Justice. 13. Granting Personal Protections. 14. Forcing the Subjects to depose against themselves. 15. Using Torture without Evidence. 16. Sending an Army into the Country in time of Peace, and exacting Free-quarter. 17. Charging the Subjects with Law-Boroughs, imposing Bonds, and suspending Advocates for not appearing when Bonds were offered. 18. Putting Garrisons into private Mens Houses in time of Peace: were all contrary to Law. 19. That the Opinions of the Lords of the Sessions in these two Cases was illegal, viz. That the concerting the Demand of the Supply of a defaulted Person, altho' not given, is Treason. And, That it is Treason to refuse to discover a Man's own private Thoughts concerning Mens Actions in relation to Points of Treason. 20. That fining the Husband for his Wife's withdrawing from Church, was illegal. 21. That Prelacy and Superiority of Office in the Church above Presbyters, is and has been a great Burthen to this Nation, who Reformed from 1689. from Popery to Presbytery. And therefore ought to be abolished. 22. That it is the Right of the Subject to protest for Remedy of Law to the King and Parliament, against Sentences given by the Lords of the Sessions. 23. That it is the Right of the Subjects to petition the King, and all Prosecutions for such petitioning is contrary to Law. Therefore for the Redress of all these Grievances, and for preserving and strengthening the Laws, they claimed, That Parliaments be frequently called, and allowed to sit and debate with Freedom.

And then farther claimed and insisted upon all the Premises as their undoubted Rights; and that no Proceedings to the Prejudice of the People, in any of the Premises, be drawn hereafter into Example, but all Fines, Imprisonment, &c. be considered, and the Parties redressed. To which Demand of their Rights, they took themselves to be encouraged by the Prince's Declaration for Scotland in October last. Therefore, having entire Confidence, that his Majesty King William would perfect their Deliverance, and preserve them from the Violation of their Rights, and all Attempts upon their Religion, Laws, and Liberties;

‘ The said States of the Kingdom of Scotland had resolved, That William and Mary, King and Queen of England, be declared King and Queen of Scotland, to hold the Crown during their Lives, and the longer Liver of them, and that the sole and full Exercise of the Power be in the said King only in the Name of both. And after their Decease, the Crown to descend to the Heirs of the Body of the said Queen, and in want thereof, to the Princess Anne of Denmark, and the Heirs of her Body, &c.

And then prayed the King and Queen to accept the same accordingly. And prescribed the Form of the Oath of Allegiance.

Pursuant to this Declaration, the King and Queen were proclaimed at Edinburgh, on the 11th of April 1689.

We must now look back to Affairs without Doors, having for the sake of giving at once the Proceedings of the Convention, omitted what was transacting, by the Enemy.

The Duke of Gordon, as we have said, demanded twelve Days time to consider of the Surrender of Edinburgh Castle, and declared at last that he would not surrender it at all; whereupon he was proclaimed by the Heralds at the Market Cross, a Traytor and a Rebel.

The Viscount Dundee meditating a War in King James's Behalf, held a private Conference with the Duke of Gordon at the Castle Gate, and concerted Measures for executing his Purposes. Which the Convention having Notice of, summoned him to appear before them; but he went off with thirty or forty Horse, and retired to Linlithgow. A Party of Horse was sent after him, and the Convention obliged the Earl of Mar, who was Governor of Sterling Castle, to repair immediately thither, to prevent Dundee's seizing that Fortrefs. The Duke of Gordon in the mean time pretended to capitulate, and some Persons were sent to him, but it was found to be all Amusement, and that nothing but Force would reduce him. Therefore Orders were given to block up the Castle; which was the sooner executed, because on the 22d of March, he sent Word to the Magistrates of Edinburgh, that having received Advice of King James's safe Arrival in Ireland, he found himself obliged to fire all his Cannon, but told them he would do the City no Harm.

His Majesty, in his timely Care for Scotland, had sent four Regiments of Foot, and one of Dragoons, thither, under the Command of Major General Mackay, who now arrived; and on the 25th of March the Convention ordered them to be quartered at Leith, and the Suburbs of Edinburgh. And the 28th gave a Commission to that General to be Commander in Chief of all the Forces.

On the 13th of April a Proclamation was ordered to forbid any Body to own King James, or obey any Commissions given out by him, occasioned by some Letters from the Lord Melford that were intercepted, wherein to encourage his Friends, he told them, the Estates of the Rebels would recompense them for the Service they did King James; and by the Arrival of one Brady from Ireland, with Commissions from that King. And for their better Defence, the Estates ordered four new Regiments of Foot, and ten Troops of Horse, to be raised. Garrisons were disposed in the proper Castles, and a Ship sent from Ireland, with 6000 Arms for the Rebels, was seized on the Western Coast of Scotland.

And now Commissioners were sent by the Convention to London, with a very dutiful Letter, and a Power to receive their Majesties Coronation Oaths. Accordingly, on the 11th of May, in the Banqueting House at Whitehall, they presented to his Majesty the Letter; the Instrument of Government; the Declaration of Grievances, and Claim of Right; and an Address for converting the Convention into a Parliament. All which being read, his Majesty gave them a very gracious Answer, and then both their Majesties took the Coronation Oath.

Duke Hamilton, on the 5th of June, acquainted the Convention in Scotland, that his Majesty had constituted him his High Commissioner, and impowered him to pass an Act to turn the Convention into a Parliament, wherein the Lord Crawford was appointed to preside. An Act accordingly passed the same Day, and then the Parliament was prorogued to the 17th of June. At which Time being met again, they passed an Act for abolishing Episcopacy.

The Siege of Edinburgh Castle was in the mean Time vigorously carried on, and the Place so distressed, that on the 13th of June it was surrendered to Sir John Lanier. Dundee, with his few Followers, were all that now stood out: Several Skirmishes passed between him and the King's Forces while he skulked in the Highlands. But receiving a Reinforcement of 300 Irish, he advanced with 6000 Foot and 100 Horse, to meet Lieut. Gen. Mackay, who had with him but 4000 Foot and four Troops of Horse. A Battle was fought on the 16th of July, wherein, after a long Engagement, Mackay was forced to retreat; but on the other Side, Dundee being killed, it may be called a Victory, since by his Death the Party were so broken, that from that Time they never made any notable Resistance, but were defeated wherever they were met, and in a little Time totally suppressed.

Thus having shewn their Majesties quietly possessed of England and Scotland, we must pass over to Ireland, where they found more Difficulty to oppose the Resistance.

The

1689.

The Earl of Tyrconnel, who, as we have formerly said, was sent over by King James as Lord Deputy of Ireland, had taken effectual Care to secure all the Fortresses and important Places. He disarm'd the Protestants, and so afflicted them, that they all fled into the Northern Province of Ulster, where through the Neighbourhood of Scotland, the Protestants had been always more numerous than in the other Parts of the Kingdom. That Province therefore upon the Revolution, declared for King William and Queen Mary, and stood upon their Defence against the Deputy. In this Posture Things stood, when

King James, on the 12th of March, arrived in Ireland; he landed at Kinsale, and went immediately to Cork, where Tyrconnel receiv'd him. And on the 24th of the same Month, made a triumphal Entrance into Dublin. Among the first Business he transacted, he displaced the Lord Granard and others from the Council, putting Papists, and among the rest the Count d'Arvaux in their rooms, and then made Tyrconnel a Duke. He published a Proclamation to call a Parliament to assemble at Dublin, May 7, and ordered the Forces he brought with him from France, which were Veteran Soldiers, commanded by experienced Officers, to march forwards.

The Protestants at the same Time formed themselves into as strong a Body as they could make, and pretended to keep the Field, but being routed at Drummore, they were forced to retreat to Fastnesses. And King James, on the other hand, treated all the Protestants in his Power with Severity, and resolved to march with an Army of 20000 to reduce those that were in the strong Towns.

Londonderry, situate in the North of Ireland, upon a River, which a little below the Town falls into a commodious Bay of the Sea, called Lough Foyle, was a Place of the best Strength of any the Protestants possessed, and therefore timely taken Care of here, his Majesty having sent Colonel Dundee, in whom he had great Confidence, to be Governor of it, and with him sent good Store of Arms and Ammunition.

On the 13th of April they were alarm'd by the Arrival of Mr Walker, a Clergyman in the County of Tyrone, who had raised a Regiment of Volunteers: That King James having taken Colraine and Kilmor, was drawing his Forces towards Londonderry.

Colonel Cunningham and Col. Richards, sent from England, arrived the 15th at Derry with their two Regiments, and on the 17th were called to a Council of War, where it was resolv'd, That Provisions being wanting, it was more adviseable to land the two Regiments; and that the Place not being tenable against a well appointed Army, the Officers should withdraw, and leave the Inhabitants to make a Capitulation. This Resolution being discovered by the People, put them into great Disorder, and the Governor durst not appear among them; but soon after got secretly abroad, and with Cunningham and Richards, returned to England, where they were both cashier'd.

Mr. Walker now with Major Baker were chosen by the People to govern, who acted with such Bravery and Constancy, that an ill fortified Town, with a Garrison of raw undisciplin'd Men, with only 20 small Cannon, and Provisions for but ten Days, held out from the 20th of April (when King James 1689.

with a large Army well provided and officered, invested it) to the 10th of July, when they were at last relieved, after having for a long time had no better Food than Horse flesh, Dogs, Cats, and Vermin, and of them too only nine lean Horses left. King James being to meet his Parliament at Dublin, left the Management of the Siege, on the 29th of April, to Conrade de Rose, the French General, who fretting to see himself thus opposed, declared he would destroy all the Protestants round the Country, if the Town continued to hold out, and in Effect drove a great Number of them under the Walls, to lye there and starve; but the Besieged erecting Gallows on the Walls, on which they protested all the Prisoners they had should immediately be hanged, if these miserable People were not permitted to go off, he was at last prevailed upon to let them go, and with them the Town found Means to let many of their useless Mouths to pass off also.

About the Middle of June, the Town spied three Ships attempting to come up the River, but were hindered by the Enemy's Fire, and soon after they discovered a Fleet of 30 Sail in the Lough, which they supposed came from England, but could not contrive a Way of getting Correspondence with them. The Enemy guarded the River very strongly, and laid a strong Boom cross it; however, one Man by swimming got over, and informed the Besieged, that General Kirk with Arms and Provisions was come to their Relief. This encouraged them to undergo that miserable Famine they endured for a Month together. At last on the 20th of July, General Kirk, resolving to relieve them or perish, sent the Dartmouth Frigate, with two other Ships, to attempt to break the Boom, which after much Fire received from the Enemy they effected, and put Provisions into the Town, with which the Enemy were so discouraged, that the next Day they broke up the Siege; and Mr. Walker (who now left his military Exercise and put on his Gown) was sent immediately to London, with an Address from the Town to the King, by whom he was bountifully rewarded.

Iniskilling, another Town in the North, was as notable in the Annoyance it gave the Enemy, as Derry was for its Defence. This Town on the 11th of March proclaimed King William and Queen Mary, and having chosen Gustavus Hamilton, a Person of great Courage and Conduct, for their Governor, raised a Regiment of 12 Companies, which they put under his Command, and refused all Overtures that were made to them from King James. In the many Excursions which they made upon the Enemy, they always remained Victors; and on the very Day that Londonderry was relieved, 2000 of them fought and routed 6000 Irish, and took Mackarty their Commander Prisoner; and not to mention many small Exploits, in September following 2000 of them defeated 5000 Irish going to Sligo.

King James in the mean time was employed at Dublin, where he met his Parliament the 7th of May. His Majesty made a gracious Speech, wherein he omitted not to own the Obligations he had to the French King; and the next Day published a Declaration, expressing an Affection to his Subjects, as well Protestants as Catholics, Lenity and great Mercy to those that had offended, Protection to the Church of England, and Liberty of Conscience to Dissenters, &c.

The

1689.

The Parliament, the Majority whereof were Papists, immediately voted an Address of Thanks to the King, and another to the French Monarch, which Count d'Avaux was desired to transmit. And then a Bill was brought in to recognize the King's Titles, and condemn the Prince of Orange's Usurpation. The King had in his Speech intimated, his Willingness to relieve those that were injured by the Act of Settlement; which it seems was understood to mean a Repeal of it; for a Bill was brought in on the 12th of May to that Purpose; and passed in a few Days. Next followed a Bill of Attainder, wherein two Archbishops, one Duke, seventeen Earls, seven Countesses, twenty-eight Viscounts, two Viscountesses, seven Bishops, eighteen Barons, thirty-three Baronets, fifty-one Knights, eighty-three Clergymen, 2182 Esquires and Gentlemen, were declared Traitors, although none of them had been heard. And the best Reason given for it, was what the Speaker told the King when he presented it, That many were attainted upon such Evidence as satisfied the House, and the rest upon common Fame. And as a further Instance of their Cruelty, this Act was not made publick till four Months after, whereby those that were in the Kingdom could not escape, nor those out of it come over to crave Mercy. They also passed an Act for Liberty of Conscience, and some few others of less Importance, and were prorogued on the 20th of July to the 12th of January.

At the same Time that the King was declaring his merciful Disposition, and the Parliament enacting Liberty of Conscience, the Professors, Fellows, and Scholars of the College or University of Dublin, were all turned out, and their Places possessed by Papists. And the next Year all the Churches in Dublin were seized upon for the Use of the Papists. And on the 18th of June, 1690, Colonel Lutterel, Governor of that City, issued Orders, That all Protestants that were not Householders should depart the City, and all that were such should deliver up their Arms; and forbad, That above five Protestants should meet together, upon Pain of Death.

And the Governor being asked, whether this was to extend to meeting in Churches, he answered, Yea. And accordingly all the Protestant Churches were shut up all over the Kingdom. Thus much for Ireland; we must now return to England.

On the 24th of April, the King gave the Royal Assent to the Acts, For impowering his Majesty to imprison such as conspire against the Government; for removing Papists from London; for taking away the Duty of Hearth-Money; for abrogating the Oaths of Supremacy and Allegiance, and appointing new Oaths, and some others.

The King having a due Sense of the Usurpations of the French King, and the War he had now renewed in Europe to continue and enlarge them, and being possessed with a noble Zeal for the Liberties of Europe, and especially of his own Kingdom, found it necessary to join with the Emperor, the King of Spain, and States General, in opposing that turbulent Monarch: In which Sentiments the Parliament concurred, and on the 25th of April, the House of Commons presented an Address to his Majesty, 'Beseeching him to consider 'the destructive Methods taken of 'late by the French King, against 'the Trade, Quiet, and Interest of 'this Kingdom, and particularly 'the the Invasion of Ireland, not doubting but the Alliances his Majesty in his Wisdom should make would be effectual to reduce the French King to such a Condition, that it might not be hereafter in his Power to violate the Peace of Christendom. And assured his Majesty, that whenever he should think fit to enter into a War against the French Monarch, they would give him such Assistance in a Parliamentary Way, as might enable him to support and go through with the same. The House of Lords also declared that they would serve and assist his Majesty in a War against France to their utmost Power. Soon after, namely,

May the 7th, 1689, A Declaration of War against the French King was published by his Majesty, founded, Upon the just Call his Majesty had from the neighbouring Potentates, to assist them in opposing the violent Attempts of the French King. Upon the Seizure of the Fishery of Newfoundland, where they formerly pretended not to fish but by Licence from England. Upon the Invasion of Hudson's Bay and New York, and Expulsion of the English thence; the Invasion of the Carribbe Islands; the Seizure of English Ships; the prohibiting many English Goods in France, and laying great Duties on the rest; disputing the Right of the Flag; persecuting English Protestants in France, and condemning Matters of English Ships to the Gallies upon Pretence of having on Board some of his own Subjects, who fled from his Cruelty. And lastly, for that he had by Promises of Assistance endeavoured to overthrow the Laws and Constitutions of this Realm, and was now actually in Arms to maintain a Rebellion in his Majesty's Kingdom of Ireland.

About this Time the King appointed the Judges, the three Chiefs being Sir John Holt, Sir Henry Pollexfen, and Sir Robert Atkins. The Seal being, as we have said, in Commission, which Commissioners were Sir John Maynard, Anthony Kecke, and William Rawlinson, Esqrs. who were soon after knighted.

The English Fleet under Admiral Herbert being now at Sea, and intending to intercept a Fleet of Supply which they understood were sailing from Brest to Ireland, stood off towards that Coast. But the Wind coming Easterly, which carried the French out, they turned off on the 24th of April towards the Coast of Ireland, and on the 30th in the Evening overtook them at Bantry-Bay. The next Morning the French in Line of Battle 28 Men of War, and 5 Fire-ships, under Chateau Renaut, bore down upon the English, who were only 20 Men of War and 2 Tenders, before they were reduced into Line of Battle, and firing all their Shot, kill'd 100, and wounded 300 on Board the English Fleet, where the Men fought with great Bravery; but through the Superiority of Force (for the French were all larger Ships than ours) and the Disadvantage of the Wind, which our Admiral endeavoured to gain, but could not effect, they were forced to retire, having first given the French so much that they thought not fit to follow them. Admiral Herbert was soon after created Earl of Torrington, Captain Ashbey and Captain Showel were knighted, and every Seamen had a Donative of Ten Shillings; although the King confessed that such an Attempt in the Beginning 1689. ning of a War may be proper, in the Course of it ought to be esteemed rash.

Their Majesties in the mean time receiv'd the Acknowledgments and Congratulations from Foreign Princes and States, namely the Emperor, the King of Spain, the King of Sweden, the King of Denmark, the Elector of Brandenburgh, the Dukes of Brunswick and Lunenburgh, and the States General, the last in a very solemn Embassy, which made a publick Entry on the 27th of May, in a most sumptuous Manner. And soon after his Majesty sent the Earl of Pembroke Embassador to Holland.

The Parliament continued sitting all this Summer, and in the Course of it divers Debates arose, and Conferences were held between the two Houses, upon the several Matters before them, whereof that concerning Titus Oates was the most troublesome, as having lasted above two Months. That Person styling himself Doctor in Divinity, petitioned to be restored in his Fame, and his Sentence to be revers'd, which the House of Commons agreed to, but the House of Lords deny'd. The Reasons given on both Sides in the long Conference July the 29th, upon the Subject of Amendments made by the Lords, is too long to have Place here. The End of it was an Address from the Lords to the King, to desire his Majesty's Pardon to the said Oates, whereby the Continuance of his Punishment according to the Sentence that had been given against him, might be remitted. Which the King comply'd with, and settled a Pension of five Pounds a Week upon him.

Bills were brought in and passed into Acts to reverse the Attainders of the Lord Russel, Algernon Sid- ney, Esq; Mrs. Alicia Lisle, and Mr. Cornish. And the House of Lords took into Consideration the severe Fine laid upon the Earl of Devonshire in King James's Time for striking Mr. Culpeper in the Court. It appear'd that his Lordship's Plea of Privilege of Parliament was overrul'd, and that he was fined 30,000 Pounds. The Judges that gave the Sentence were all severally examin'd, the Fact appearing, and the King's Council offering nothing to prove that a Peer of the Realm might be committed in Execution for a Fine, the Lords adjudged, That the Court in overruling that Lord's Plea of Privilege was guilty of a Breach of Privilege; that the Fine was exorbitant and illegal; and that no Peer ought to be committed for a Fine to the King. The Judgment against Mr. Samuel Johnson Clerk was also revers'd, and the Proceedings in his Degradation declared void.

A Bill being on the 9th of May sent up to the Lords for declaring the Rights and Liberties of the Subject, and settling the Succession of the Crown, their Lordships thought it proper to add the Princess Sophia's Name in the Entail, and amended the Bill accordingly, to which the Commons dissented, and occasioned divers Conferences, which was terminated by the Birth of a New Heir. For,

On July the 24th, Her Royal Highness the Princess of Denmark most happily gave Birth to a young Prince, afterwards baptiz'd William, created Duke of Gloucester.

Upon Enquiry into Miscarriages, a Report concerning Burton and Graham, the King's Solicitors for Criminal Matters in the two last Reigns, was made on the 23d of May: That it appeared that they had had received out of the Exchequer (from the Year 1679, to the Year 1688) 48,000*l.* for carrying on the several Prosecutions. And that they had by their vexatious Prosecutions endeavoured the Subversion of the Protestant Religion, and the Government of the Realm.

The Lords appointed a Committee to enquire into the Miscarriages in managing the Affairs for Ireland, which Committee declaring they could not come to a full Discovery without a Sight of the Minute Books of the Committee for Irish Affairs, to the 1st of May last, the House ordered an Address to his Majesty for a Sight of them; which being presented June the 18th, the King answered that he would consider of it; this obstructed further Proceeding in it, till the Commons passing a smart Vote about it, his Majesty on the 16th of July, acquainted the Lords, that the Committee might inspect the Book; but that Book not being satisfactory, they further desired that the Minutes from the Time his Majesty began to take the Administration of the Government, to the Time of the Beginning of these, might be laid before them; to which the King answered, there were no Minutes of the Irish Affairs for that Time.

The Commons on the 3d of August, voted an Address to his Majesty to represent, That there had been Delays in the Succour of Ireland; that there was not sufficient Preparations to transport the Forces, and that several Ships were taken for want of sufficient Convoy. And on the 12th, they further addressed, that Colonel Lundee might be sent over to London-Derry to be tried for the Treason laid to his Charge.

On the 20th of August, the Bill for Paying the Dutch 60,000*l.* for their Charge in his Majesty's Expedition to England passed the Royal Assent: As did also an Act for prohibiting Trade with France, an Act for Relief of the Irish Clergy, and several others, and then the Parliament adjourned to the 20th of September; and from thence to the 19th of October.

Thus terminated the Session, which would have been shorter if the Bickerings of the Two Parties had not occasioned long Debates; and the Conferences between the two Houses about some Bills that did not pass, as That for an Indemnity, That for an Attainder of several Persons, That for Declaring the Rights of the Subject, and some others, had not lengthened it so far as to induce the King on the 28th of June to come to the House, and advise them to dispatch.

Besides the Bills already mentioned, there passed in this Session; an Act for granting an Aid to their Majesties of 68820*l.* per Mens. for six Months. An Act for raising Money by a Poll. An Act for granting an Aid of 12 d. in the Pound upon Land. An Act for an additional Duty of Excise. An additional Act to the Land-Tax. And an Act for granting to their Majesties the same Revenues that were enjoyed by the late Kings, except Hearth Money, till the 25th of December 1689.

We must return to Ireland, and shew the Course of the War the rest of the Campaign.

Duke Schomberg being by his Majesty appointed his General for that Service, and Eighteen Regiments of Foot and five of Horse being expeditiously raised, but not so quickly transported, through the Neglect of the Purveyor; on the 12th of August the General failed 1689. with as many of the Forces as were yet shipped off at Chester and Lewerpool. On the 13th he arrived in Carickfergus-Bay, which lies over-against the South-West Coast of Scotland, and landed on Bangor, that is, the South Shoar of the Bay, without Opposition; and having sent out Parties to scour the Country he marched forward towards Belfast, which the Enemy upon his Approach quitted; this Town lies at the Mouth of the River Logan, or the Bottom of the Bay, on the opposite Side to that they landed on. From thence some Regiments were detached towards Carickfergus, which stands on the Sea-Coast on the Northern Shoar of the Bay, which Town they besieged on the 22d of August, and took on the 26th. And August the 31st, the rest of the Forces arrived, but the Artillery was still behind. The Duke therefore sent repeated Orders that the Train, with all belonging to it, should sail with all Expedition, and put in at Carlingford Bay, which lies more to the South, almost over against Chester, and was a much shorter Voyage: And then marched forward to meet it. He encamped for one Night at Drummore, and the next Day, as he marched forward, he was joined by the Inniskilling Horse and Dragoons. The Irish at Newry, a Town that defended a strong Pass, quitted and burnt it, which made the General send Word to the Duke of Berwick their Commander, that if the Irish proceeded in that barbarous Manner, he would give no Quarter, which had the Effect to make them abandon Dundalk without Harm. Here the General encamped to expect the Arrival of his Cannon, and there he lay in a moist Ground so long expecting it, that his Men were all sick, and many died. On the 20th of September, they had Notice that King James, at the Head of all his Forces, marched towards them, and in Effect the next Day they appeared in Order of Battle; the English Army was too much weakened by Death and Sickness to march out of their Camp to meet them, however they stood to their Arms, and were well prepared to receive an Attack, if the Enemy dared to offer it. But it seems they found the Entrenchments too strong, and therefore a great Party of Horse having advanced within Cannon Shot of the Entrenchments without being able to draw us out, they at last marched off. The Inniskillingers on the 27 of September defeated a great Body of Irish, that were marching to attack Sligo, a strong Town seated on the West Coast over against Dundalk, at 20 Miles Distance from it. It was hoped at first that this Defeat might have saved the Town, but it did not, for Sarsfield with a large Body marched thither, and attacked it so vigorously, that although it was well defended by St. Sauveur, with his Company of French, and Colonel Lloyd with the Inniskillingers, he took it. The Weather in the mean Time proving wet, and Provisions being scarce, the Soldiers in the Camp fared very ill, and a violent Sickness raging among them, many died, insomuch that before they decamped to go into Quarters, at least half the Army were either dead or sick.

There was nothing done at Sea this Summer, for Admiral Torrington attempting to surprize Cork, was diverted by a false Intelligence that the French advanced towards him, and his Men being sickly he returned to Torbay.

We shall not pretend to give the History of Foreign Affairs; but the Death of Pope Innocent XXI. which happened on the 12th of August this Year, is too momentous to be omitted. His Family Name was Odescalchi, and by that he is known to us, with whom he had no small Respect, because of the Opposition he always made to the growing Power of France, and the Countenance he gave to the present Confederacy against it.

During the Recess of the Parliament, the King, after having taken a Turn to New-market, and visited the University of Cambridge, set to Work to prepare Matters for the next Session; and because a Convocation was at the same Time to be assembled, a Commission under the Great Seal was issued to the Archbishop of York, the Bishops of London, Winton, Rossen, and others, to the Number of about Twenty in all, to prepare Matters for the Convocation. The Subject of this Commission was an Occasion of secret Censure, till Dr. Sacheverell, in his famous Sermon, having severely reflected upon Comprehension, gave Occasion to Dr. Wake, then Bishop of Lincoln, to reveal the whole Matter in the Parliament House, and appeal to the Lords for their Judgment upon it, as may be seen in that printed Speech.

We omitted to speak of Dr. Burnet's Promotion to the See of Salisbury, which by the Death of Dr. Seth Ward was vacant soon after the Revolution. At this Time these Sees, vacant by Death, were likewise filled up, viz. Worcester, by Dr. Stillingsfleet; Chichester, by Dr. Patrick; and Bristol, by Dr. Ironside; who were all consecrated the 13th of October.

The Time for the Clergy's taking the Oaths expired in August, at which Time the Archbishop of Canterbury, the Bishops of Glocester, Ely, Norwich, Chichester, Bath and Wells, and Peterborough, with some few of the Lower Orders, stood out.

Previous to the Meeting of the Parliament, the Marquis of Hallifax was, at his Request, removed from his Place of Speaker of the House of Lords, and the Lord Chief Baron Atkins was appointed to perform that Office.

On the 19th of October the Parliament met, to whom the King made a gracious Speech, exhorting them to prepare such Supplies as they should think fitting for the Service of the War, with as much Dispatch as might be, that the Preparations for the next Campaign might in due Time be made, and that our Allies, who were speedily to meet in Congress at the Hague, might be informed how to take their Measures. Telling them also, that to satisfy them how the Money they had given had been laid out, his Majesty had ordered the Accounts to be laid before them. And then recommended to them a Bill of Indemnity.

Because of the many Debates in the last Sessions, which might be revived, unless the Parliament were prorogued, it having hitherto been only adjourned, it was by Consent of both Houses accordingly prorogued by his Majesty on the 21st, and appointed to meet again the 23d.

After the Addresses of Thanks to his Majesty, a Committee was named, to report what Bills were depending last Sessions, wherein the Bill of Rights being of most Importance, was revived, and soon passed. A Bill of Indemnity was also brought in, and the House

A a 3 voted

1689. voted a Supply to their Majesties of Two Millions Sterling.

Colonel Ludlow, one of those who sat as Judges on King Charles I. and signed the Warrant for his Death, presuming to come over to England this Winter, and appear publickly at London, the Commons addressed the King against him, who accordingly published a Proclamation, November 14, ordering him to be apprehended, which drove him back to his old Retirement in Switzerland.

The Lord Griffin, who had been made a Peer by King James a very little Time before the Revolution, was one who adhered heartily to his Interest, but did not retire with him. The House of Lords therefore required his Attendance, and upon Neglect thereof, addressed the King to summon him by Proclamation, which obliging him to appear on the Day the Parliament met, he was required to take the Oaths, upon which he desired Time to consider. But it soon appeared he had no Inclination to it, for on the 21st of October a Discovery was made, of a Correspondence that Lord held with King James. The Matter was discovered thus: A Pewter Bottle, with a double Bottom, was brought late at Night to a Pewterer, to have the false Bottom soldered on, which the Workman prying into, discovered a Packet between the two Bottoms, and opening it, he found Letters to King James, the Duke of Berwick, &c. This occasioned him to seize the Person, who proved to be the Cook of the Lord Griffin. Upon Examination of the Letters by the Secretary, it was found, that they gave Advice of the secretest Councils, and the Strength and Posture of our Forces. The Lord himself had Time to escape, and his Lady only was seized and sent to the Tower, but such strict Guard was kept upon the Coasts, that he could not get out of the Kingdom, and therefore he surrendered himself also. The Examination of the Matter was left to the House of Lords, where it having been lately resolved, that Colonel Sidney was unjustly condemned, since nothing but Writings in his Custody was brought against him, some Lords argued a Parity of Case, and so he was let go.

The Lord Preston presented to the House of Lords a Patent of King James's, to create him a Viscount of England, dated at Ver-sailles, Jan. 21st, that is, one Day before the Parliament declared the Throne vacant; wherefore he urged, that his Patent was good; but upon Consultation with the Judges, the House declared that the Throne was vacant from the Time King James left the Government, and so his Plea was over-ruled, and he was committed to the Tower, but, upon Submission, soon after set free.

The Convocation met in November, and adjourned to the 21st of that Month, and then the Upper-House chose the Bishop of London, in Absence of the Archbishop, to preside, and the Lower House chose Dr. James their Prolocutor, who carried it against Dr. Tillotson, whom the King designed for the Place. The Bishop made a Speech, wherein he advised a Temper in Things not essential in Religion, in order to open the Door of the Church, and enlarge the Number of its Members; and hinted that the Charity and Indulgence formerly promised to the Dissenters ought now to be exercised. Dr. James's Speech was an Eulogium on the excellent Constitution of the Church of England, and a Caution against changing L on an don t

the Grea
them being recei wher to th Prote in pr vised prop
and Upp of T your bling ciling ter f Lower draw Term
receiv
But t be do Conv
24th
Th
the K desce
Chur Diffe
and willi
but t Valic same youn of th oppo made
Th
sinefs
Com
Irela Men bove
the f

ing Laws. Before they entered upon any Debates, the Bishop of London told them there was a Defect in the Commission, as wanting the Great Seal, and therefore adjourned them for some Days; the Defect being supplied, they met again, and received a Letter from the King, wherein he expressed his Affection to the Church, and promised his Protection, desired their Assistance in promoting its Welfare, and advised that such Things as should be proposed to them should be calmly and impartially considered. The Upper House drew up an Address of Thanks to the King for his Favour to the Church, and for assembling them to endeavour the reconciling the Dissenters. But the latter Part was disagreed to by the Lower House, and a new Form drawn up by them in very general Terms, which was presented, and received a very gracious Answer. But the King perceiving little was to be done of what he proposed, the Convocation was adjourned to the 24th of January.

The Commissioners appointed by the King had considered what Condescensions might be made by the Church in order to reconcile the Dissenters: The Cross in Baptism, and some other Things they were willing to give up for Peace sake, but the Dissenters insisting upon the Validity of their Orders, and at the same Time ordaining at least fifty young Students, and the Majority of the Convocation peremptorily opposing it, the Reconciliation was made impracticable.

The Parliament went on with Business, and in the Course of it made Complaint of the Miscarriages in Ireland; where instead of 23,000 Men established, there were not above 14,000. Duke Schomberg at the same Time sent over his Complaints, that the Artillery was a long Time withheld, that the Men and Horses were ill provided, and thereby the Army incapable of making that Progress which he should have done, if the Supplies from England had been duly sent over; alledging, that when he first landed, the Irish were so frightened, that he could have marched to Dublin, but waiting above a Month for the Artillery, they had Time to recover themselves, and discover his Weakness: The Fault of all which lay upon Mr. Shales, the Purveyor General, a Person who had served King James in the same Office in his Camp at Hounslow. The House addressed to know who advised his Majesty to employ Shales; to which he declared it was impossible to answer, for it seems he was proposed in full Council. But to give the Parliament Satisfaction, the King sent a Message to the Commons, desiring them to recommend seven Persons, to whom he would give Commission to inspect the State of the Army in Ireland, and the Preparations for it. The House in a full Body gave his Majesty Thanks for his Favour, and left it to him to name the Commissioners. The King also let the House know, that he had ordered Duke Schomberg to secure Shales.

Several Party Debates arose, but none important enough to be here recited. On the 16th of December the King came to the House, and gave his Assent to two Bills, viz. One for an Aid of Two Shillings in the Pound on Land. The other declaring the Rights and Liberties of the Subject, and the Settlement of the Crown. Which latter contained the whole Declaration made the 13th of February, which we have already given you at large, with some Additions, the principal whereof were, That no Papist shall 1689.

shall ever hereafter inherit the Crown, nor any King marry a Papist.

The Commons took into Consideration the settling the Revenue upon her Royal Highness the Princess Anne of Denmark, which they fixed at Fifty Thousand Pounds per Annum.

The Clashing between the two Parties in the House of Commons run pretty high, one Part of the Ministry being pecked at by one side, and the other Part by the other, both Sides excusing their Friends, and laying all the Blame on the other; one cried out of the Miscarriages in Ireland, another on the People that let the Lord Griffin into such Secrets, and others against certain Lords. Wherefore the chief Business being over, the King came to the House, January the 27th, and passed an Act for Review of the Poll, and to lay an additional Poll. An Act for laying one Shilling in the Pound more on Land. An Act declaring the pretended Parliament at Dublin illegal, and their Proceedings void, and some others. And then made a gracious Speech, wherein he thanked the Parliament for the Money granted, promising a due Application of it, and then told them, that he would go over in Person to Ireland, and endeavour to reduce that Kingdom, that it might be no longer a Charge to this. And the Spring growing on, it was convenient he should be as soon in the Field as might be, and therefore thought fit to put an End to the Session.

Accordingly the Parliament was prorogued: And on the 6th of February, by Proclamation, it was dissolved, and a new one appointed to meet on the 20th of March. And about a Month after Sir John Lowther, Mr. Hambden, Mr. Pelham, and Sir Stephen Fox, were constituted Commissioners for executing the Office of Lord High Treasurer. On the 19th of February, the King was pleased to take the Privy Seal from the Marquis of Hallifax, and gave it to William Cheyney, Esq; Sir John Knatchbull, and Sir William Pultney, in Commission.

On the 20th of March the Parliament met, and the Commons having chosen Sir John Trevor speaker, the King made a Speech to them the next Day, telling them, that he continued his Resolution of going to Ireland, and called them together to have their Assistance for prosecuting the War with Vigour, desired they would settle the Revenue, which he was willing might be made a Fund of Credit for the present, not doubting of their discharging hereafter what should be now laid upon it. Then declared his Desire of composing all Differences among his Subjects, to which Purpose he had formerly recommended an Act of Indemnity, but seeing the Debates upon it take up Time in the Houses, he intended to send them an Act of Grace, with as few Exceptions as might be. He told them, that the Disaffected encouraged themselves by the Hopes of creating Differences in the two Houses, and advised them to take care to disappoint them, by Unanimity and Dispatch. Then recommended to them an Union with Scotland, whose Parliament having nominated Commissioners for that Purpose, he wished they would do the same, proposed to them the preparing a Bill, to empower the Queen to administer the Government in his Absence, if they thought it necessary, and concluded with telling them, that the Season and his Journey to Ireland would admit but of a very short Session, and advised them to dispatch, that we might not be engaged in Debates, when our Enemies are in the Field.

This House of Commons had fewer Men of Heat among them than the former, and therefore Sir John Sedley's famed Speech against Places of Profit in the Court or State had no great Influence.

The Revenue, as we have formerly told you, was in the first Session of the former Parliament, settled upon their Majesties to Christmas 1689, which in the last Sessions had been continued one Year longer, and now a Bill was brought in for continuing it for four Years from Christmas 1690. Charging three fourths of the Customs with a Loan of 500,000*l.* and the Excise with a Loan of 250,000*l.* toward the Expence of the War. A Bill was also brought in for putting the Administration into the Queen's Hands, whenever the King's Affairs should call him out of the Kingdom. These, together with a Bill for reversing the Judgment against the Charter of London, a Bill for granting a General Pardon, and some others, passed into Acts this Session; which terminated the 23d of May, by Adjournment to the 17th of July, and from thence by several Adjournments to September, when they were prorogued.

On the 17th of April, the Lord Viscount Lumley was created Earl of Scarborough, the Lord Delamere Earl of Warrington, and the Lord Grey Viscount de Langueville.

In Scotland there remained still a Body of Rebels, who were headed by Colonel Cannon, and, skulking in the Highlands, made frequent Depredations upon the neighbouring Country. Wherefore General Mackay, and Sir Thomas Leving- ston, with sufficient Forces, were sent against them. Cannon endeavoured to engage the Gentry in his Party, but his Letters were intercepted, and all suspected Persons confined, which so far lessened his Power, that he thought fit to retire to Ireland, and then Sir Hugh Cameron became their Leader. He was reinforced from Ireland, by as many Officers, Arms, Clothes, and Ammunition, as King James could spare; which flushing his Party, they ventured to appear in a large Body, but were set upon so vigorously by Sir Thomas Levingston, near Strathspay, in the County of Murray, that 500 of their Men were killed, 100 taken Prisoners, and the rest put to flight. And several other Advantages were obtained by the King's Forces there this Spring.

In Ireland the Army for some Time continued in sickly State, but by the Care of the General, in providing them good Food, they began to recover, and by the Beginning of Spring were fit for Action. For the quicker recruiting it, the King had hired 7000 Danes, who, together with some Dutch Regiments and French Refugees being sent over, the Army was become considerable. In February the Enemy began to be in Motion, and seemed to threaten the Frontier Garrisons. To prevent which several Bodies of Forces were sent out, that under Colonel Woolfley from Belturbat, being not above 1000 Horse and Foot, adventured to attack a Body of the Enemy, whom they did not expect were so large, but found to be 9000 Men. However, being in, they fought so bravely, that they entirely defeated the Enemy, and pursuing them to Cavan, returned to Belturbat, with a good Booty of Cattle. Sir John Lanier took Bed-

1689.

1689.

loc Castle near Dundalk, with 1,500 black Cattle, Sir Cloudsley Shovel took in Dublin Bay the only Ship King James had. And in May, General Schomberg besieged Charlemont-Castle, a Place of good Strength, furnished with a sufficient Garrison, but by reason of a Blockade, for some Time past straitned in Provisions. This Place stands in the Heart of Ulster, on the Borders of the County of Armagh, towards Tyrone. King James considering the Importance of the Place, sent a strong Detachment, with Provisions, to relieve it, which were politickly let pass by the Blockade, but none permitted to come out; whereby the Number of Mouths being increased beyond Proportion to the Victuals they carried in, the whole Garrison was soon distressed. And the Siege at the same Time being vigorously pushed, they were forced to capitulate on the 13th of May. And on the same Day, Col. Woolfley took Ballingary Castle, near Cavan.

This was the Posture of Affairs when King William arrived, who landed at Carrickfergus, June 14th, attended by his Royal Highness Prince George, the Duke of Ormond, and several other Noblemen.

As soon as King James heard of King William's Arrival, he set forward to take the Field; and departing from Dublin on the 16th, with 6000 Foot Veteran Soldiers, he marched to join the rest of his Army, which equalled King William's for Number, besides 15,000 in Garrisons.

The Banks of the River Boyne, which is that River that falls into the Sea at Drogheda, was the Scene of that great Action, wherein the Empire of Britannia was finally lost by King James, and confirmed to King William. For the former having first passed the River, but afterward repassed it, chusing to have it in his Front, there expected his Enemy, who on the 30th of June ordered his whole Army, by Break of Day, to move. King William marching at the Head of his Army, took a View of the Enemy, and rode 300 Paces into the River to discover its Depth. The Irish soon after having discovered the King, fired hard upon the Place where he stood, and at the first Shot killed a Man and two Horses within a hundred Paces of his Majesty, and in the next Shot, a Bullet grazing upon a Hillock, in its Rebound struck the King aslant on the Shoulder, tore through his Cloaths, and raised the Skin. The Disorder that this necessarily made in those about the King, made the Irish conclude him killed; which Report immediately run to Dublin, and from thence to Paris, where they had the Folly to make publick Rejoicings for it.

King William, having got his Wound dressed, mounted again, and shewed himself to the whole Army. That Evening a Council of War was held, wherein it was resolved to pass the River on the Morrow. Duke Schomberg having advised something that was not accepted, retired to his Tent in Disgust, and had but a small Part in the Action: But his Son was in the Heat of it, and shewed great Bravery.

July 1. This famous Battle was fought, the Detail whereof is too long for this Manual. It is sufficient to say, that King William was continually in Motion, and in the Places of greatest Danger, leading up his Men, and giving Orders; and that in passing the River, his Horse stuck so fast in the Mud, that he was forced to alight to get him out. Whilst on the other hand, King James stood on a neighbouring Hill to see the Action, Count Lauzun, Lieutenant General Hamilton, and Mr. Sheldon, having the chief Command of his Army. The Battle lasted several Hours with various Success, both Parties having at several Times Advantages in the several Places of Action, till in the End the Irish gave way, and Hamilton being taken Prisoner, Lauzun rode to King James, and advised him to retreat, which without Delay he did, and arrived that Night at Dublin.

Duke Schomberg did not pass the River till Monsieur Caislemote, who commanded the French Refugees, was carried off to his Tent, which leaving that Body in some Disorder, the Duke hastied over to their Assistance, where he was presently after attacked by a Party of King James's Guards, and wounded, but not mortally; but his Friends in firing too hastily upon those that attacked him, shot the Duke himself through the Neck, of which he died immediately. Mr. Walker, the Defender of Londonderry, having again taken the Sword at this Place, was killed in the Fight. None others of eminent Note are named amongst the killed or taken in this Day's Action: Which indeed was not a very bloody one; for King James's Side, who lost most, were reckoned to be diminished but 1500 Men by the Battle. Prince George of Denmark accompanied the King's Person in all the Action, and both were by Providence guarded from the least Hurt, although both were frequently within Reach of the Enemy's Shot.

King James was dispirited by the Loss of the Battle, that although, as we have said, he lost but 1500 Men, and his Generals, by a skilful Retreat, brought off the rest, he tarried but one Night at Dublin, where he made a Speech to his Friends, advising them to shift for themselves. The next Day he rode to Waterford, where he went on board a Ship that lay ready for him, and sailed back to France with all Speed.

The Protestants at Dublin being hereby set at Liberty, possessed themselves of the Militia Arms, formed a Committee to take Care of Things, and sent away to King William to entreat his Presence among them. His Majesty sent the Duke of Ormond and Monsieur Overkirk, with a sufficient Body of Troops, thither the 3d of July, and himself with the whole Army followed on the 5th. For he thought proper first to take care of Drogheda, where lay a good Magazine of Stores. The Governor of that Place at first rejected the Summons, but being told that if he stood out he should have no Quarter, and having considered it was impossible he should be relieved, accepted Conditions, and marched out with his Garrison.

And now having brought the King to the capital City of his third Kingdom, although the Enemy was powerful enough to give him the Trouble of a third Campaign there, we may fairly say, he was in full Possession of the Britannick Empire.

But while the King was gaining Victories in Ireland, the Queen was alarmed in England with threatening Dangers. The Disaffected thereupon concerted Measures with France, meditated an Insurrection in several Places of the Kingdom, which was to be supported by the French Fleet, and assisted by Men sent over from France. The Queen had Intimation of the Design, and therefore gave immediate Orders to the Admiral to put to Sea, and fight the French. Accordingly,

On

On the 24th of June, the Earl of Torrington put to Sea, the French being at the same Time out, and lay hovering near the Coast. On the 30th, the two Fleets off of Beachy drew up in Line of Battle, and the Signal for Engagement being given, the Dutch, who were the Vanguard, began the Fight, and were seconded by the English Ships that lay nearest, but the Admiral in the Centre not engaging, the rest of the Fleet lay by, and did no more but make good a Retreat during the whole Day that the Fight lasted. The Dutch fought bravely, but bearing the whole Brunt of the Action, they must necessarily suffer, as in Effect they did, so far as to lose two Rear Admirals, and one Captain, and had several Ships disabled. The English also lost two Captains of Ships, and two Captains of Marines. The Admiral was universally blamed, and though upon Trial before a Court Martial he was acquitted, upon his arguing the Inequality of Strength, the Enemy being eighty-two Men of War, yet he was no more employed. However, when after the Peace the French came promiscuously to England, some French Sea Captains who were in that Engagement, coming over hither, applauded the Admiral's Conduct, as having, by preserving the Fleet, entirely disappointed them of the Advantages they hoped for from the Destruction their great Strength was able to have made in it, if they could have come to engage it.

The Advantage the French were supposed to have got, occasioned dreadful Apprehensions of Danger; every body expected a Descent, and the Militia was raised in the maritime Counties, and London was preparing to raise Auxiliaries additional to their Regiments of Trained Bands, which in a dutiful Address to the Queen they declared. But the French, disappointed of their Expectation upon the Fleet, did no more than send their Gallies, who had Land Men on board them, into Torbay, and from them sent some Boats with Men ashore, who burnt Tinmouth, ravaged the Country a little way up, stole some Sheep, and with their Plunder went aboard, and soon after returned to Brest.

On the 14th of July, the Queen published a Proclamation for apprehending the Earls of Litchfield, Ailesbury, and Castlemain, the Lords Montgomery, Preston, and Bellasis, Sir Theoph. Oglethorpe, Sir Edward Hales, and others.

Thus the Danger, which appeared so formidable at first, was happily dissipated, and his Majesty left again at Liberty to prosecute his Victories in Ireland, which upon the first News of it, he was preparing to leave to his Generals.

To return therefore to Ireland. King William entered Dublin July the 6th, and went immediately to St. Patrick's Church, where he gave God Thanks for his Victories, and heard a Sermon preached by Dr. King; and in the Afternoon returned to his Camp, which was pitched the Day before at Finglas.

The next Day he published a Declaration, promising Pardon and Protection to the Irish that should return to their Houses by the 1st of August, and soon after, a Proclamation to cry down the Brass Money, which King James, during his Residence at Dublin, had obliged the People to take. The Army in two Bodies broke up the 9th to enter upon new Action. One Part besieged Athlone, but ineffectually. And his Majesty marched Westward. Major General Kirk was detached to attack Waterford, which surrendered the 25th, as did Dun- cannon the 26th. Here the King left the Camp, and return'd to Dub- lin. But receiving there a good account of the Posture of Affairs in England, he returned to the Army

August the 5th.

Tyrconnel and Lauzun had drawn all their Forces towards Limerick, the Strength of which Place affording them convenient Head Quarters, they resolved there to make a Stand.

The King therefore resolved to besiege it; and accordingly on the 10th of August Limerick was invested. The Governor, one Boisseleau, who was assisted by the Duke of Berwick and Colonel Sarsfield, resolved to defend the Town, which was the Answer he returned by the Trumpeter who was sent to summon him.

The King was active all that Day in posting the Army, and ordered General Ginkle that Night to pass the River Shannon, which he performed, and invested the Place on all Sides. In the mean time the Artillery, which lay at Kilkenny, was ordered to march to the Camp.
The Town fir'd briskly, and aim'd their Shot much at the King's Tent, which his Majesty was therefore prevailed upon to remove.

On the 11th a Country Gentleman named O Brian, who lived near the Town, came to the Camp, and gave Notice that Sarsfield was gone out of the Town with 5 or 600 Horse and Dragoons, and passed the River nine Miles above, which he supposed was upon some ill Design. His Advice was not minded by the Officers, but being at last introduced into the King's Presence, his Majesty immediately gave Orders to Sir John Lanier to march out with 500 Horse to meet the Train. But it seems he was too dilatory in observing that Order, for before they had got far, they saw a great Light in the Air, heard a great Noise, which arose from the blowing up of the Train. The Artillery were come within Seven Miles of the Camp, when Sarsfield (who had skulked among the Mountains to watch a convenient Opportunity) came upon 'em on a sudden, cut the few Troops that guarded it, whose Horses were at that time a grazing, to pieces, blew up the Powder, burst the Cannon by over-charging and clapping the Muzzle in the Ground, and then marched off without Loss,

the Body sent from the Camp coming not in time enough to intercept them; for tho' they came in sight of the Rear, they could not overtake them. This unhappy Blow was a great Disappointment to the Besiegers; however, the King resolving to pursue his Work, sent for Cannon from Waterford.

The Trenches were opened before Limerick on the 17th, and Batteries being raised against a strong Fort that annoy'd them, that Fort was taken the 20th. By the 27th a Breach was made in the Counterscarp, at which an Assault was made with great Bravery, but the Breach being somewhat too small, which for want of Bullets could not be enlarged, after a long Action, they were forced to retreat.

The King perceiving the Work to be too difficult to be soon ended, and considering the Approach of the wet Season, resolved to raise the Siege, and accordingly on the 30th of August the heavy Baggage was sent away, and the next Day the Army decamp'd. And his Majesty having disposed the Army into Quarters, constituted the Lord Sidney and Thomas Coningsby, Esq; (since Lord) Lord Justices, and gave for the present the Command of the Army to Count Salmer. And then
he 1689.

he embark'd for England, September the 5th, arrived the next Day at Bristol, and on the 9th came to Windsor.

Cork in the mean time was besieged by Forces under the Command of the Earl of Marlborough, in the Attack whereof the Duke of Grafton, who acted as a Volunteer, was unhappily killed. On September the 28th the Town capitulated, and was accordingly surrendered. And,

On the 3d of October he invested Kinsale, opened Trenches the 5th, and by the 15th had made practicable Breaches, which occasioned a Capitulation, and the next Day the Town was surrendered, and soon after his Lordship returned to England, which ended this glorious Campaign.

Having thus related our own Actions this Summer, let us take a Step abroad, and view the State of our Confederates in the great War against France. The Alliance, upon which the War began, consisted of the King of Great Britain, the States General, the Emperor, and the King of Spain, to which was this Summer added the Duke of Savoy. That Prince refused all Overtures from France, and declared for the Confederates. Upon which the Marshal Catinat was sent with an Army of French to invade his Country; and after the Battle of Saluzes, fought the 18th of August, wherein the French had the better, they took the Town of Suza.

In Flanders, the only notable Transaction this Summer was the Battle of Flerus, fought on the 1st of July, between the French under the Duke of Luxemburgh, and the Dutch and Confederates under Prince Waldeck, wherein, after an obstinate and bloody Battle, the Confederates had the worst, as being obliged to quit their Cannon: In nothing else could the French boast Advantage having lost as great a Number of Men as the Confederates in the Action. In Germany nothing material was performed. And in Catalonia the French obtained some small Advantages.

In England the Parliament met on the 12th of September, and were prorogued to the 2d of October, at which time they met, and continued sitting. His Majesty on the Day of their Meeting made a Speech, wherein he represented to both Houses the Necessity of making early and effectual Provision for the carrying on the War; intimated the short Provision made last Sessions, and the Arrears of Pay to the Army thereby incurr'd; that the Revenue being all apply'd to the Service of the War, it was expedient to consider of a Provision for the Civil List. Mentioned the Bravery of the Army, and blam'd the Conduct of the Fleet, and concluded with exhorting them to be unanimous and expeditious in their Consultations.

Both Houses presented Addresses of Thanks to the King for his gracious Speech, and for the unparalleled Goodness and tender Affection his Majesty had shewn to his People in undertaking in Person the War in Ireland, where next under God the Success was owing to his Majesty's great Valour and good Conduct. And to the Queen, acknowledging the great Wisdom and Courage her Majesty had shewn in the Difficulties and Dangers during his Majesty's Absence, and declaring their Gratitude and affectionate Zeal to both their Majesties Service. On the 9th, the Commons voted a Supply for carrying on the War both in Ireland, and against France, and the next Day voted the Sums for the Navy to be, 1,791,695 l. And on the 4th of November they voted

2,294,560 l

2,294,560*l.* for maintaining an Army of 69,636 Men, which Sums they raised by divers Duties upon imported Goods, and by doubling the Excise; together with the Land Tax and Loans upon the Excise. But instead of that Loan, it was proposed to give the forfeited Estates in Ireland, which some were of Opinion might raise a Million of Money. But this Proposal was rejected, and even the Bill, which afterwards pass'd the House of Commons, for attainting the Persons in Rebellion, confiscating their Estates, and applying them to the Service of the War, was dropt in the House of Lords. The Commons had, in their Estimate for the Sea Service, made a Provision for building some Ships of War to reinforce the Navy. But taking that Matter into further Consideration, they voted on the 24th of December a Supply of 570,000*l.* for building 17 Third Rate Ships of War of 60 Guns a-piece, additional to what they had already provided for, and made Provision accordingly. They also pass'd a Bill for appointing Commissioners to take and state the publick Accompts. All which Bills, together with some others that were necessary, being pass'd both Houses, his Majesty gave his Royal Assent to them on the 5th of January, and then made a Speech to both Houses: Wherein he thanked them for the Dispatch they had made, which gave him Liberty to go into Holland (where his Presence was wanted at the great Congress appointed at the Hague) and declared he would make no Grant of the forfeited Lands in England and Ireland, till that Matter should be settled in Parliament. And then, by his Majesty's Direction, both Houses adjourned to the 31st of March next.

Nov. the 15th, the King was pleas'd to appoint the Lord Godolphin

First Commissioner of the Treasury; and accordingly a new Commission pass'd, wherein that Lord, with the four old Commissioners, Sir John Lowther, Sir Step. Fox, Mr. Hambden, and Mr. Pelham, were constituted Commissioners of the Treasury. And soon after Sir Charles Porter was made Lord Chancellor of Ireland, and one of the Lords Justices, and the Lord Sidney, who possessed that Post, was recalled.

On the 9th of January his Majesty embark'd for Holland, and on the 18th arrived on that Coast; but adventuring to go off in the Shallops, when the Yatches were a League and a half from Shoar, he was so surrounded by Ice, that he lay all Night in the Boat, accompanied by the Duke of Ormond, the Earls of Devonshire, Dorset, Portland, and Monmouth, Monsieur Overkirk, and Monsieur Zwylstein, who attended him. At length they got safe on Shoar, and arrived at the Hague the 19th in the Evening. And this being the first time his Majesty had been there since his Accession to the Throne, he was prevailed upon to make a publick Entry, which was accordingly perform'd the 26th with very great Solemnity and Pomp, several Triumphal Arches and divers Decorations being erected for that purpose.

To meet his Majesty here, and concert the Methods of defending Europe from the Invasions of France, the Electors of Brandenburgh and Bavaria, the Dukes of Lunenburgh, Zell, and Wolfenbuttle, the Landgrave of Hesse, with several other Princes of Germany, and the Plenipotentiary Ambassadors of all the rest of the Princes engaged in the Confederacy, arrived daily, and made the most illustrious Assembly that has any where been seen; who for the space of two Months held Conferences and Entertainments, 1690.

ments, wherein Resolutions were taken for carrying on the War, which if they had been as regularly perform'd by the rest, as they were by England and Holland, the French Monarch's Pride had been effectually pull'd down. For it was resolv'd that 222,000 Men should be the Complement of the Army to act against France, whereof the Emperor's 20, the King of England's 20, the States General 35,000, and perhaps the Duke of Savoy's Quota, were always compleat; but how short the other Princes were in theirs may be judg'd by the faint Efforts, which were made before England and Holland much enlarged the Number of their Forces.

The Entertainment, and the Conferences at the Hague were but just over, and the King retired to Loo, when he was alarmed with News that the French had besieged Mons. On the 15th of March N. S. a Detachment of French invested that strong Fortrefs, and a few Days after the King himself with the Dauphin and Duke of Orleans came to command in the Siege. King William halted to its Relief, and drew an Army together for that purpose, which he brought as far as Hull by the 6th of April, but thro' the Neglect of the Spaniards in providing Carriage his Artillery came not up in time; for the French advanced their Trenches with all possible Expedition and fired upon the Town from 60 Pieces of Cannon and 25 Mortars, with such incessant Fury, that the Burghers would not bear it, and as they were stronger than the Garrison, they beat the Chamade, and forced the Governor (who was resolv'd to hold out till the Succours came up) to sign the Capitulation, whereby this important Place was taken by the French King, April 10th, almost in sight of King William. The Town being taken, the French withdrew and put their Troops into Quarters, and the King bestowed his in the same Manner, and then came over to England, and arrived at Whitehall, April 13th.

In pursuit of the Thread of the Discourse, we omitted an Event at home this Winter, which is too considerable to be pass'd over. The Friends of King James were not totally discouraged by their Disappointment last Year, and by the Defeat at the Boyne, but still pursued their Designs; and to the purpose of carrying them on with Success, enlarged their Party by taking in Whigs as well as Tories, who had any remains of Affection to the late King. These held Consults, and resolv'd to apply themselves to the French King for Assistance; and accordingly the Lord Preston with two Gentlemen, Mr. Astton and Mr. Elliot, were deputed (and actually took shipping in the most private Manner) to go to France, but the Government having notice watched them, and a little below Gravesend their Ship was boarded, and the Persons seiz'd; in Mr. Astton's Bosom was found a Packet of Papers, which thro' the Suddenness of taking him he had not time to throw over board, as was apparently intended by the Lead affix'd. By this Packet it was plain that they were going to France to invite the French King to invade England; Letters and Addresses from several Persons (particularly Dr. Turner, late Bishop of Ely) to King James, Minutes of Instructions for the French Fleet, and other Papers of like import, being found in it.

The Lord Preston was brought to Trial at the Old Bailey on the 16th of January 1690-1, and Mr. Astton on the 19th; both of them were found guilty, and the latter executed, but the Lord obtained Pardon.

During

Bill for satisfying the Debt due to the Orphans of London, was last Session in the House, to push it forward the City made a Present of 1000 Guineas to Sir John Trevor, Speaker, twenty to Mr. Hungerford, Chairman of the Committee, five to Mr. Harcourt their Council, and 60*l.* to Mr. Joddrell the Clerk of the House. The Speaker finding the Displeasure this Discovery might give the House, forbore the next Day to give his Attendance, and therefore the House proceeded, March 14th, to the Choice of a new Speaker, which fell upon Paul Foley, Esq. And on the 16th they voted, That Sir John Trevor, being guilty of a High Crime and Misdemeanor, in receiving the Gratuity of 1000 Guineas for passing the Orphans Bill, be expelled the House; Mr. Hungerford also was expelled the House.

Sir Thomas Cooke having offended the House, by giving unsatisfactory Answers to the Questions propounded to him, a Bill was ordered to imprison him for a Year, and with him Sir Basil Firebrass, Mr. Craggs, and Mr. Bates, who was the Person that paid Robert the 5000*l.*

Our Coin was at this Time extremely debased by Clipping, which was got so far, that Half Crowns were reduced to Shillings, and Shillings were reckoned large that weighed Eight-pence, and then too near one half of what passed was counterfeit; for the old hammered Money being at first not curious, was easily counterfeited well enough to pass through many ignorant Hands. This made Foreign Exchanges rise upon us; for as Silver is the Medium of Trade, that Metal is by all Nations allowed to bear a certain intrinsic Value; and Coinage being invented to certify the Weight and Fineness of the Piece, any Nation that debases the Alloy, or diminishes the Weight in its Coin, does so much abate the Value of that Coin in Foreign Markets, however Authority may be able to keep it up at Home.

This made Guineas run up to thirty Shillings a piece; and milled Silver Money had done the same too, if by an Act of this Session it had not been prevented. The two Houses taking into Consideration the bad Estate of our Coin, a Committee of the House of Commons gave in a Scheme of what they judged proper, which went upon the Foot of altering the Denomination, although the Standard be retained. But the Lords judged wiser of the Thing, and sent down a Bill, wherein it was forbid to raise the Price of Silver Money. To which was added, by the Commons, many wholesome Proviso's, for preventing the melting down the Coin, as had been very much practised of late.

The two Bills which had so often miscarried, namely, For regulating Trials in case of Treason, and a Bill touching free and impartial Proceedings in Parliament, were again brought in this Session, but, as formerly, did not pass the two Houses. It is needless to say several other Bills did not pass, since that is usual.

These Matters spun out the Session to the 3d of May, on which Day his Majesty came to the House, passed the Bills that were ready, among which, that for imprisoning Sir Thomas Cooke, &c. An Act for appointing Commissioners to state the publick Accounts. An Act to prevent the counterfeiting the Coin. An Act for laying a Duty on Glass and Earthen Ware, Coals and Culm. And an Act for 1695.

the King's general Pardon. And then the King made a Speech, and the Parliament was prorogued to the 18th of June.

The See of Lincoln, which was vacant by the Archbishop's Promotion, was given to Dr. Gardiner.

As soon as the Parliament rose the King prepared to go to Holland, and in order to it constituted these to be Lords Justices for administering the Government in his Absence; namely, the Lord Archbishop of Canterbury, Sir John Somers Lord Keeper, Earl of Pembroke Lord Privy Seal, Duke of Devonshire Steward of the Household, Duke of Shrewsbury Secretary of State, Earl of Derby Lord Chamberlain, and Lord Godolphin first Commissioner of the Treasury. Sir John Trenchard being dead, Sir William Trumbal was made Secretary of State. The Lord Capel was made Lord Deputy of Ireland. Monsieur Zuylenstein was created Earl of Rocheſter, and the Lord Grey Earl of Tankerville. Which being performed, his Majesty departed, and arrived in Holland May the 14th.

A Parliament in Scotland assembled May 9, where the Marquis of Tweeddale, his Majesty's High Commissioner, after delivering a Letter from the King, made a Speech to them, wherein he advised raising a Supply for Payment of the Forces on Foot, the former Subsidies being near expiring. And hinted at an Improvement of Trade by establishing Plantations abroad, where it might lawfully be done.

The Parliament answered the King's Desire, and gave sufficient Supplies for maintaining the Forces, and for providing Cruisers and Convoys for the Protection of Trade. They passed also an Act for settling a Trade in the Western Plantations, and several other very good Laws.

And a Complaint being brought into the House of a very foul Business, the Slaughter of the Glencoe Men, that Affair was examined into; the Story was in sum thus: A Proclamation had been published, that all the Highlanders that withstood the King's Authority, who should come in and take the Oaths by the first of January, 1692, should have Pardon and Protection. One Mac-Jan Mac-Donald, Laird of Glencoe, one of the greatest Clans in the North of Scotland, came to Inverlochy, and addressed himself to Colonel Hill, Governor of the Fort, about the Time's expiring, to take the Oaths; the Colonel declared it was not in his Power but the Civil Magistrates, and therefore he must apply himself to the Sheriff, or some other Magistrate. He went afterwards to Inverary, the chief Town of Argyllshire, to the Sheriff, but the Time being then elapsed by one Day, the Sheriff made some Scruple of accepting him. But it being one Day, and he alledging he came to Colonel Hill in full Time, the Sheriff did administer the Oaths to him and his Attendants, And he went Home in Confidence of Indemnity. In the Month of January, there came to that Country the Earl of Argyll's Regiment, and Inverlochy being full, they quartered at Glencoe. On February the 12th, a sudden Order came, That the Soldiers at Five a Clock the next Morning should set upon the Glencoe Rebels (so they were termed) and destroy them, none were to be spared, and especially the Old Fox (which was understood to be spoken of Mac-Donald) and his Cubs were to be taken Care of. In Prosecution of these Orders, a dreadful Slaughter was made; Mac-Donald and all his Family were murdered in their Beds, their Houses fired, and their Cattle driven away. Duncanson, who was Major of the Regiment, produced his Orders from Colonel James Hamilton, and Capt. Campbell, who was the Commanding Officer at Glenco, produced Duncanson's Order. Upon Examination of the Matter, it did not appear that the King had given any Orders that could warrant this Execution, as the House voted June the 18th, when they declared it to be a Murder. Colonel Hill appeared, and was cleared, but Lieutenant Colonel Hamilton, although summoned, would not appear; and was therefore ordered to be apprehended, and was voted guilty of the Murder of the Glencoe Men. The Earl of Broadalbin was this Session impeached of High Treason, but it came not to Trial. And Process of High Treason was brought against the Earls of Middleton and Melfort, and Sir Adam Blair, the Indictment found, and Sentence passed in the House against them. And finally, on the 17th of July the Parliament was adjourned to the 7th of November.

taken

To turn to the Actions of the Campaign. His Majesty made no long Stay in Holland, but proceeded to Flanders, and arrived at Ghent, June 5, N. S. And having spent three Days in making a Review of his Army, he proceeded and put in Execution his concerted Projects. The Confederate Army being now superior to the French in Number, and proper Magazines erected, his Majesty resolved to make some Coup d'Éclat this Summer. To this Purpose he formed the Army into two great Bodies, one in Flanders and the other in Brabant; the King commanded the former, and the Duke of Bavaria the latter. A Siege in Flanders being in the common Judgment a more feasible Undertaking than any Attempt upon the Maese, made the French accordingly more industrious in covering themselves with Lines, and taking all Precautions for securing that Country more than the other. After divers Decampments, which the King made in Flanders to amuse the Enemy, he suddenly gave Order to the Earl of Athlone and the Baron de Heyden, with the Troops they commanded in Flanders, and Count Tilly with his Troops and Reinforcements from the Elector of Bavaria's Army, to invest Namur. Which they effected in excellent Order; but some Detachments of Brandenburghers, that were ordered to complete the Circumvallation on the other side the Maese, coming not in quite Time enough, gave Opportunity to Marshal Boufflers to throw himself into the Town with several Regiments, Volunteers, and Engineers, which encreased the Garrison to 15000 Men. The Investiture being completed, the King came to the Castle of Falaise the 2d of July, N. S. and was the next Day attended by the Elector of Bavaria and the Army he commanded. And the next three or four Days were spent in disposing the Encampments in such Manner as the better to cover the Siege. The Place was as strong as Art, which had been much employed on it since the French took it, added to Nature, which left it a craggy Rock, could possibly make it. The Garrison, as we have said, was 15000 Men, and those too the Flower of the French Army, with Ammunition and Provisions in full 1695.

Plenty. And such was the Condition of it, that as the French were at first in the most sanguine Security that the King would be baffled in his Undertaking, so the Intrepidity of the Assailants, and the stupendous Performance at last in reducing it, stunned them. And from that Hour to his Death, King William was honoured by all the Men of Bravery in France.

The Lines of Circumvallation were no sooner finished, than his Majesty received Advice from Prince Vaudemont, who commanded the Army in Flanders, that Marshal Villeroy, who commanded the French Army, was come out of his Lines, and, as it might be expected, intended to attack his Highness. But as a Defeat of that Army would have much disturbed our Affairs, it was of the last Importance to prevent it; which Prince Vaudemont accomplished in the handsomest Manner; for after three Days Observation of the Enemy's Motions, being confirmed that their Designs were against him, on the 14th of July he at the same Time made a shew of standing a Battle, when the Enemy was come in sight of him, and retreated under the Smoak of his own Cannon, which he played against them. He defiled towards Deynse, brought off his Cannon, and encamped in a safe Ground, while the Enemy all the while believed he was making only the ordinary Movements for a Battle. The next Day he continued his March, and encamped under the Walls of Ghent. And sent a sufficient Force to secure Newport, which Place the French purposed to besiege.

The Siege of Namur then was carried on with incredible Valour and Activity. The Particulars of it are too large to have Place here. We can only say, that the best Defence being ineffectual, the French were forced to surrender the Town by Capitulation on the 4th of August, and retired into the Castle; which being by Situation and Fortification excessive strong, took up another Month to reduce.

In the mean Time Villeroy fought by all possible Means to raise the Siege, which directly he was not strong enough to attempt, and therefore thought by Diversions to do it. He was disappointed, as we have said, in his Design against Newport, and could only take Dixmuyde and Deynse.

At this Time our Fleets at Sea were busy in bombarding the Towns on the Coasts of France, St. Malo's felt the Effect of it July the 4th and 5th, Granville the 6th, Dunkirk and Calais soon after, but these two last Towns were not much hurt by them. This gave Pretext to a Blow Villeroy struck upon Brussels, for Prince Vaudemont on one side, and the Earl Athlone, with Count Nassau, on the other, being obliged to keep their Stations, to prevent the Enemy's advancing towards Namur, Marshal Villeroy came before Brussels on the 14th of August, and by a Letter sent in Word, that the English having bombarded the Towns on the Coast of France, he was obliged to revenge it, by serving that City in the same Manner; but that as soon as he should be assured, that the English would no more bombard the Towns of France, he should no more attempt the like Practice. Accordingly on the 15th he began to throw in Bombs and red hot Bullets, which continued for two Days and Nights, and did vast Damage in the Town.

Villeroy being afterwards reinforced, and his Army thereby increased

1695.

creased to 90,000 Men, he marched towards Namur. Prince of Vaudemont, the Earl of Atblone, and the Prince of Hesse Cassel, with all their Troops, immediately marched and got before him to the advantageous Camp of Mazy, but 5 Miles distant from Namur, where they lay to expect the Enemy. The French advancing to Florus gave a Signal of Relief to the Garrison, which being returned by them, the King found it necessary to leave the Conduct of the Siege to the Elector of Bavaria, and repair to the Army August the 26th. On the 29th, Villeroy came up to attack the Confederate Army. but they were so well posted, that he durst not attempt it, but retired in the Night. Marches and Counter-marches were all the French could do afterwards, for they were so well observed by the Confederates, that they could not distress us enough to hinder the King's sending of 3000 Grenadiers to assist in the General Assault of the Castle of Namur, which was concerted for the 30th of August.

On that Day the Batteries having played all the Morning, and the Breaches being now practicable, Terms were offered to the Besieged before the Assault began, for preventing Effusion of Blood, but no Answer being returned, the Assault began at Noon, and was carried on till the Evening with great Slaughter on both Sides. But the Bravery of the Assailants, who renewed their Attacks from Time to Time with incredible Courage, overcame all Difficulties, and Lodgements were made on the Breaches: Which the next Day were perfected, and Preparations made for a second General Assault: But the Enemy prevented it. For first, demanding a Cessation to bury their Dead, it was granted. And in that Interval the Marquis de Guiscard the Governor made a Proposal of surrendering the Coehorn Fort; but being told that nothing less than a Capitulation for the whole would be listened to, it was at last agreed to by Boufflers. Advice whereof being sent to the King, he returned to the Siege, and Hostages being exchanged, the Treaty commenced, and that Night, August 31, was concluded.

The two Armies in the mean Time faced one another, but on the 2d of September, the Grand Salvo's in that of the Confederates having let Marshal Villeroy know that the Castle of Namur was surrendered, he retired with the Army he commanded, and attempted nothing further.

On the 5th of September, the French marched out of the Castle, the Confederates making a Lane for them to pass through. The King in private in his Coach, and the Elector of Bavaria in publick on Horse-back, with all the principal Officers were present. The Marshal de Boufflers with Monsieur de Guiscard rode at the Head of as good a Party of Dragoons as the Siege had left, when on a sudden Mr. Dickvelt came up to Boufflers and in his Majesty's Name arrested him for Reprizal of the Garrisons of Deynse and Dixmuyde, which the French had, contrary to the Capitulation, either forced into their Service, or sent into Catalonia, upon a knavish Construction of the Letter of the Capitulation, which said they should remain in one of the Towns last taken by the French from the Confederates (meaning in Flanders) till they could be redeemed, but it seems the last Towns taken by the French were those in Catalonia, and for 1695. want of expressing Low Countries dissolve the present Parliament, and in the Treaty, they sent them thither. The Marshal was fain to obey, altho' he uttered some blustering Words, and not thinking fit to give his Parole that those Men (which were 6,000 in Number) should be restored upon the Redemption Money, which had been tendered according to the Cartel, he was led back Prisoner to Namur, and from thence sent to Maastricht.

But eight Days after, upon the Return of a Messenger sent to Court, he gave his Word that it should be performed, and then was set at Liberty. Nothing more was transacted in Flanders this Campaign. The King returned into Holland, and the Armies on both Parts separated about the End of September.

In Catalonia the Spaniards had the better in several small Rencontres, but succeeded not in their two Sieges of Castle-Folet, and Palamos.

The Duke of Savoy with the Confederate Forces, among which were a Body of English under the Lord Galway, this Campaign took Cassel. And the Confederate Fleet in the Mediterranean kept the Coasts of Provence in continual dread of Invasion, which made a Diversion that favoured the Operations in Piedmont.

In Germany little happened this Year of publick Concern.

In Ireland the Lord Lieutenant (Lord Capel) held a Parliament, which assembled August the 27th, and sat till the 12th of October. Divers Acts passed, and the Transactions were carried on with Unanimity.

The King returned to England, and arrived at Kensington, October the 12th. He soon after called a Council, wherein it was resolved to call another to meet the 22d of November.

While the Elections were making, the King took the Divertisement of a Progress in the Country, he went first to Newmarket (October the 17th) to see the Horse Races, where he was complimented by the Vice Chancellor and Doctors from the University of Cambridge. From thence he went to the Earl of Sunderland's Seat at Althorp in Northamptonshire; and made Visits to the Earl of Northampton, and the Earl of Montague. October the 28th, he came to Stamford, and took a View of Burleigh House; and went thence to Lincoln, and thence to Welbeck, the Duke of Newcastle's Seat. November the 3d, he visited the Earl of Stamford at Broadgate; and the next Day the Lord Brook at Warwick-Castle. On the 5th, he dined with the Duke of Shrewsbury at Evesford. And finally, on November the 9th, he came to Oxford, where he was complimented by the University, and entertained in the Theatre, with fine Musick, an elegant Oration, and a noble Banquet. The King seemed to be marvelously entertained with the Belle-Assemblée of various sorts, the Vice-Chancellor, Proctors, Doctors, &c. in their Kobes, the several Orders of Graduates in their respective Gowns and Hoods, the Circle of Ladies that appeared in the Galleries, and the neat Disposition of the Banquet in the Area; which with the Form and beautiful Structure of that noble Room, might justly raise the Admiration of a judicious Stranger. His Majesty, I say, seemed wondrously pleased, and looked about him in that lively Manner peculiar to himself. And when Colonel Coodrington, a Gentleman he had had known in the Army, mounted the Rostrum, and accolted him with an Oration, he seemed delighted with his Eloquence. But the Absence of the University Orator, whose Place this Gentleman extempore supplied, was not agreeable to him. The usual Presents being made, the King rose from his Seat, and instead of taking the other, placed for him at the Table, passed out of the Theatre, without taking Notice of the Banquet. What his Majesty's Reasons were for putting that slight upon so considerable a Body were never known.

On the 22d of November the Parliament met, and the Commons having chosen for their Speaker Paul Foley, Esq; the next Day his Majesty made a Speech to both Houses, wherein he applauded the Courage the English Troops had shewn last Summer, intimated that as large Supplies were necessary for the next Year's Service, and that an Augmentation of Shipping was needful; declared that the Funds proved deficient, and that the Civil List was in that Condition, that he could not subsist without some Provision for it. Recommended again the Encouragement of Seamen; the Consideration of the bad Estate of the Coin; Relief of French Protestants, and Unanimity and Dispatch in their Deliberations.

Both Houses presented Addresses to the King, congratulating the Success of his Majesty's Arms, and assuring him of their Assistance in the Prosecution of the War.

November 26th, The Bill for Regulating Trials in Cases of Treason was again brought in, the Contents whereof were, That all Persons indicted for Treason shall have a Copy of their Indictment five Days, and of their Pannel two Days, before their Trial; that they shall not be convicted but upon the Oaths of two Witnesses to Overt-Acts of the same Treason; that they shall have Council to plead for them, and that they shall not be triable, unless the Indictment be found within three Years after the Fact, except in the Case of attempting to assassinate or poison the King: That they shall have Power to compel Witnesses to appear for them; and that in case of the Trial of a Peer, all the Peers shall be summoned 20 Days before hand, and be allowed to sit and vote in such Trial, first taking the Oaths required by Law. This Clause was added by the Lords, and now passed by the Commons; and the Bill received the Royal Assent on January the 21st following.

December 6th, the Commons voted for Sea Services for the Year 1696, the Sum of 2,500,000*l.* And on the 14th, they voted for the Land Service, the Sum of 2,524,853*l.* for 87440 Men, besides two Regiments of Marines.

The Ways and Means were, The 4 Shillings in the Pound on Land; the Continuation and Additions of Duties at the Custom-House, which was a Fund of Credit for a Million and half; by Contributions for Annuities; by Continuation of the Salt Duty; for erecting a Land Bank, intended to raise Two Millions and five Hundred sixty four Thousand Pounds.

But the Monies brought in upon these Funds, being all clipped Money, was recoined and produced not above half in the Tale, and the Tallies given out were paid at vast Discount. And at the same time, the Land Bank proved a total Deficiency, for nothing was subscribed upon it, and Tallies upon that Fund were paid instead of Money. So 1695. that upon the whole, the Deficiencies for this Year's Service amounted to 2,078,975 l.

The Business of reforming the Coin was the Matter next considered. Reasons Pro and Con were bandied upon the Subject. The Necessity of doing it was evident, but the Manner was the Question. To bring all the Coin at once to the old Standard, was by many looked upon as impracticable, and yet to depart from the Standard and give a Denomination above intrinsic Value, was giving no Relief in the most considerable Article of Grievance, Foreign Exchange. But upon the Issue, the Matter was most happily accomplished. First of all it was resolved by both Houses, That the old Standard should be maintained, and no Alteration admitted in Name or Value. Secondly, to relieve the People who possessed the bad Money, it was resolved, That it should be taken by tale as usual in the Exchequer, upon Loans and all Payments of Taxes. And that even the counterfeit Money of base Alloy should not be refused. Thirdly, for a quicker Supply of Coinage, a Premium was granted to all Persons that would bring in Plate. And for a Dispatch of the Coinage, Mints were erected at York, Norwich, Chester, Exeter, and Bristol. And lastly, all broad hammered Money was permitted to pass for some time, after the Day prefixed, which was February the 10th, provided it were punched thro' to prevent Clipping. And for all Monies which came not in by the 4th of May, Five Shillings and Eight Pence per Ounce was allowed in the Exchequer, till November, and after that Day Five Shillings and 2 Pence per Ounce.

By these Methods our Coin was miraculously restored. Difficulties to be sure must happen upon so great an Alteration, in the Means of Buying and Selling, but they proved extremely less than was apprehended. The broad Hammered Money pretty well supplied, till the re-coined came abroad. And the Law having already pinned down milled Money to its old Price, those that had it now no longer hoarded it. In Guineas alone there was a great loss felt, for when the milled Money became current, 'twas absurd to give 30 of those Shillings for a piece of Gold that was worth but 21 s. and 6 d. Wherefore the Price of them was lower'd by Degrees, first to 26 s. and then to 22 s.

To provide for the Loss of Re-coining the House voted 1200000 l. which they raised by a Duty on Houses, commonly called the Window-Tax.

The next considerable Matter this Session, was the Debates in the House about the Scotch Africa and East-India Company. On December the 14th, the Lords communicated to the Commons for their Concurrence an Address which they had drawn up to present to the King, complaining, That pursuant to an Act passed last Session of Parliament in Scotland, a Company of Merchants was erected and impowered to trade to Africa, the East-Indies, &c. free from all Payments of Customs. Taxes or any Impositions whatsoever, for the Term of 21 Years; and furthermore that his Majesty promised to protect them and interpose his Authority, for Restitution and Reparation of any Damage done to their Ships. Which Powers putting their Company upon so much a better Foot than the English were, would tend to the Destruction of the Trade of England. To which

Ad-

Address the Commons agreed, and it was accordingly presented to the King. Who answered that he had been ill served in Scotland, but he hoped some Remedies might be found to prevent the Inconveniences which might arise from this Act.

The House of Commons taking this Matter into Consideration, discovered that a private Oath de Fide-li, had been administered to the Members of this Company, and that divers Merchants of London had entered into it, and taken the said Oath, Twenty whereof being named, they were voted guilty of a High Crime and Misdemeanor, and ordered to be impeached. But the Person who was the principal Evidence against them withdrawing, so as not to be found, the Matter fell.

This produced an Act for establishing a Council of Trade to prevent future Evils of this Sort, which Council still subsists.

Another Affair which employed the Consideration of both Houses this Session, was a Grant from the King to the Earl of Portland, of the Lordships of Denbigh, Bromfield and Yale, and other Lands in the Principality of Wale, Part of the Demesnes of the Prince of Wales. Which Grant being brought to the Lords of the Treasury to be passed, was opposed by divers Welsh Gentlemen, who urged such Reasons against it, that it stopt for some time, and now being complained of in the House, after full hearing, the Commons unanimously voted, That an Address be presented to his Majesty to stop the said Grant; which was done accordingly.

And now a Scene opened which gave us great Surprise. The Enemy, as I have said, had taken up an Opinion, that it was not dishonourable to take away the King's Life by any way that could accomplish it, and therefore to assassinate him in his Palace, had the soft Term given it of attacking the Prince of Orange in his Winter Quarters. Agents were accordingly employed in England, and Measures concerted in France to back them. To which Purpose Troops were ordered to file down towards Dunkirk and Calais. And on the 18th of February, King James himself went to Calais to see the Men embarked, and to receive the Signal from England for Sailing.

But it pleased God to disappoint them, by discovering the Design.

The Conspirators at London, having received a Commission from King James, consulted upon the means of assassinating King William; divers Ways were named and disapproved, till at last it was agreed, that the most feasible would be to attack him as he returned from Hunting, in a Lane a little beyond Brentford, which the King usually passed through after he came over the Water, without waiting for the coming up of the Guards, the greatest Part whereof remained on the other Side, expecting the Ferry-Boat back again. The 15th of February was pitched upon to be the Day, but the King not then going abroad, it was put off to the 21st. But on that Day too, News was brought them by Keys their Messenger, called the Orderly-Man, who went daily to Kensington for Intelligence, that the Guards were all come back, and that there was a Muttering of a damnable Plot discovered. Thus far on their Side; let us now trace the Steps of the Discovery.

On the first Notice of the French Preparations, the Elector of Bavaria and the Duke of Wurtemberg sent Advices from Flanders to his Majesty of it. And both the Duke of Bavaria, and the States-General, stopped all shipping in Ostend and Bruges, and the Sas van Ghent, to transport the Forces which they immediately drew down to ship off for England.
of 1695.

Mr. Pendergrafs, a Gentleman of Virtue, but an Adherent to King James, being sent for to London by his Friends about this time, was informed of the Design, and invited to take part in it; but he had such Horror at the Wickedness of it, that he immediately resolved to discover it. Before this some dark Hints of it had been given to the Earl of Portland. So that when Pendergrafs on the 14th of February in the Evening, went to that Lord, he was admitted into Privacy and listened to, when he told him that if the King went abroad to hunt the next Day, he would be murdered: The Earl carried him that Night to the King, to whom he made a full Discovery of the whole Design. Mr. de la Rue, another of that Party, was by Brigadier Lewson brought the next Day to his Majesty, to whom he also made a full Discovery, which agreeing with what the former had said, put the Matter out of all Doubt. But as they were Men of Honour, they refused to name the Persons. The King gave them great Thanks for their Generosity in the Discovery, and used such Reasons to them, why as Men of Honour they should discover the Names of the Conspirators, that they were at last prevailed upon, under the Promise of not being made use of as Evidence. But Porter soon after coming in to make Discovery, and having accused Pendergrafs, altho' he himself was the Man that drew him in, he threw of all scruple, and became an Evidence.

On the 23d of February the King published a Proclamation for apprehending the Duke of Berwick, (who came to London to forward the Design) Sir George Barclay, Major Lowick, George Porter, Captain Stow, Captain Walbank, Captain James Courtney, Dinant, Chamberlain, Boise, George Higgings, Davis, Cardel, Goodman, Cranburn, Keys, Pendergrafs, Byerly, Trevor, Sir Geo. Maxwell, Durance, Chr. Knightley, King, Sir William Perkins, and Rekwood.

Upon publishing this Proclamation, several named in it, as well as others of the Conspirators, were taken into Custody. And on the 24th of February the King came to the House of Lords, and after passing some Acts, made a Speech wherein he acquainted both Houses of this Discovery of the Conspiracy for assassinating his Person, and of the intended Invasion. And that as he had taken up divers of the Conspirators, so he had also given Orders for the bringing over such Troops as might effectually protect the Nation from the impending Danger.

The Secretary Sir William Trumbal spoke more largely in the House of Commons concerning the Credibility of the Witnesses, and the several Ways the Discovery came; for besides the Informations from abroad, Mr. de la Rue went to Brigadier Lewson, Mr. Pendergrafs to the Lord Portland, without knowing one another. And one Harris who came from France with Sir George Barclay, upon the first Publication of the Proclamation, came voluntarily, and surrendered himself to him (the Secretary) and gave him sufficient assurance of the reality of the wicked Design, tho' he was not able to tell the Particulars of it.

Both Houses being convinced of the Danger the Nation had escaped, agreed in an Address to his 1695.

Majesty, wherein they express'd their Abhorrence of the wicked Design, assured him of their Assistance in the Defence of his Person, and support of his Government, and declared, That in case his Majesty should come to any violent Death, they would revenge it on all his Majesty's Enemies and their Adherents. And soon after they passed a Bill to empower his Majesty to imprison such as he should suspect were conspiring against his Person and Government. And also a Bill to enact, that the King's Death should not determine the Parliament. And if no Parliament were then in being, the last that was should assemble and be a Parliament; till dissolved by the Successor.

The Commons also entered into an Association; wherein, after declaring his Majesty's Right and lawful Title to the Crown, they promise to associate and stand by each other in revenging his Majesty's Death, in case he should come to an untimely End. This was signed by all the Members present, and those absent were ordered in sixteen Days to appear and sign it, or declare their refusal. Which being signed by all, was presented on the 3d of April to the King. The King wisely told them he joined with them, and would venture his Life against all who should endeavour to subvert the Religion, Laws and Liberties of England; and that this Association should be lodged among the Records in the Tower. And so zealous was the House now in the King's Interest, that the next Day they voted every Body an Enemy to the Kingdom, who should question the Legality of the Association.

The Example was followed not only by the House of Lords, but also through all the Corporations in the Kingdom. And finally, it was enacted, That no Person should be capable of any Office without subscribing it.

Several of the Conspirators being seized, Orders were given for bringing them to Trial. Accordingly Mr. Robert Charnock, a Gentleman of Parts, who was one of the principal Conspirators, was tried on the 11th of March. He went over to France the last Summer to demand an Assistance of the French King of 2,000 Horse and Dragoons, and 8,000 Foot, to which the Party promised to add 2,000 Horse for King James's Service. The French Court answered, they could not at that time comply, as being unable to spare so many Men. But that Answer seems to have been given, because they would not trust the Party here with the Secret, for it afterwards appeared that from that Time they set to work upon this intended Expedition, and had got all Things ready, even before King James himself was informed of it. It appeared by the Evidence upon this Trial, that this Gentleman was privy to, and, next Sir George Barclay, a prime Manager of the intended Assassination. He made an artful Defence, and said as much as was possible in a bad Cause, but could not exculpate himself, for the Evidence was too full, and therefore he was found guilty of High-Treason, and sentenced accordingly.

With Charnock also were tried King, who had been a Lieutenant, and was one of those who undertook to be the Assassins. And Tho. Keys, who was a Trumpeter, and afterwards Servant to Porter. This Man was employed to watch, at Kensington, the King's going out and in, and bring Advice to the Conspirators. It was proved he 1695.

he was privy to the intended Assassination, and assisted towards it as much as he could. They were both found guilty of High Treason, and sentenced to Death.

On the 18th of March they were all three executed at Tyburn, and all confessed the Fact they were condemned for, but pretended to extenuate it, by alledging the Duty they owed to King James. They laboured to clear the Roman Catholics of having any hand in this Design, and to deny that King James gave a Commission for the Assassination. Which was what was contained in the Papers they gave the Sheriffs at their Deaths.

The next that were tried were Sir John Friend and Sir William Perkins. These were brought to Trial at the Sessions House in the Old Bailey, March 23d and 24th; Sir John Friend on the First Day, and Sir William Perkins on the Second.

Against Sir John Friend Captain Porter deposed, that he was one of the Company who met at a Tavern in Leadenhall-Street, to give Charnock Instruction, to go over to France to invite King James into England, and to ask of the French Court an Assistance of 2,000 Horse and Dragoons, and 8,000 Foot to assist him: He also swore, That all the Company promised to contribute in adding 2,000 Horse to that Number. That Sir John Friend was also present at a second Meeting to the same purpose, wherein Charnock received his last Instructions. Then one Blair deposed, That he had seen a Commission from King James to Sir John Friend to raise a Regiment for his Service, which Sir John shewed him. That he (Blair) was to be his Lieutenant-Colonel. And that Sir John Friend told him from Time to Time of the advance he had made in raising his Regiment, and gave him 40 l. to be used in levying and subsisting Men. The Defence he made consisting only in some Attempts against the Reputation of the Witnesses, which not succeeding, he had no more to say but was found guilty.

Sir William Perkins was tried on the 24th of March. Against whom Captain Porter deposed, That he also was one of the Company who at two Meetings consulted upon and resolved to send Charnock to France to invite King James with a French Force. By other Evidence it appeared that he was raising a Regiment, that he had bought up Arms, several Chests full whereof were buried in his Garden, and he brought to Town four Horses with Pistols the Night before the Day wherein the Assassination was intended, and sent his Servant that Morning to Kensington. Upon the whole he was also found guilty. And both were executed upon the 30th of April.

On the 21st and 22d of April were tried and condemned, Ambrrose Rockwood, Charles Cranburn, and Robert Lowick, three of those that were to have assassinated the King, which was fully proved upon them, and they were condemned accordingly, and were executed April the 29th. Not denying at their Deaths the Truth of the Evidence.

May the 13th, Peter Cook was brought to Trial, as being one of those present at the two Meetings for sending Charnock to France, and above said, and gave his Consent to it. The Prisoner's Defence consisted only in endeavouring to invalidate Goodman's Evidence, which not being sufficiently done, he was convicted and sentenced, but not executed. These were all that suffered for this Plot, till Sir John Fenwick was taken and attainted by Act of Parliament in the following Session.

To proceed now to Parliamentary Affairs. The House of Commons went on upon the Ways and Means of raising the Sums granted for the War. To which they added, March 19, a Grant of 500,000*l.* for the Civil List, and 15000*l.* for Relief of the French Protestants. Among the Provisions for the War, as we have said, a Land Bank was voted. This was a Project of Dr. Chamberlen's, and had been long pushed for; it was proposed, That Land be made a Security for Credit, and Bills issued upon it pass in Payments, like as the Bank of England. But they were to raise the Sum of 2,564,000*l.* for the Service of the Nation, at an Interest of 7 per Cent. per Annum. With Proviso, that if this Sum or the Moiety of it be not subscribed, the Power of erecting this Bank into a Corporation should cease. Of this Sum 500,000*l.* and 140,000*l.* were to be applied to the paying off Loans on the Duties of Coals, and Tonnage of Ships, which being thought grievous were taken off; and 140,000*l.* to make good the former Duties upon Salt. The rest was to be applied to the Service of the War; and a Proviso was made, that in case the Subscriptions to the Land Bank did not fill, that the King might issue Bills and Tallies upon the Funds here given, with Interest of 7 per Cent. The Duties given to raise 176,480*l. per Annum*, which the Interest amounted to, were the additional Salt Duty continued for ever; the Duty on Glass, Glass and Earthen Bottles, &c. continued for ever, and a Duty on Tobacco Pipes. But no Subscriptions being made to this intended Land Bank, the Funds were afterwards taken off. The Provision for raising the Money voted to the Civil List, was a Duty on low Wines and Spirits.

On the 10th of April the King came to the House, and passed several Acts, but refusing the Bill for further regulating Elections to Parliament, it was moved in the House, and the Question put, That whoever advised his Majesty to refuse that Bill, was an Enemy to the Kingdom; but it passed in the Negative.

On the 27th of the same Month, his Majesty came again to the House, passed all the rest of the Bills, and then made a Speech to both Houses, wherein he thanked them for the Concern they had shewn for his Person, and Zeal for his Government, and assured them of all Returns a King could make to his People. And then the Parliament were prorogued to the 16th of June.

His Majesty now prepared for his Voyage for Holland, and in order to it, constituted the same Persons Lords Justices for executing the Government in his Absence, as had performed that Office last Year.

He also conferred some Honours, viz. the Lord George Hamilton was created Earl of Orkney; Sir John Lowther was made Baron Lowther, and Viscount Lonsdale; and Sir John Thomson was made a Baron, with the Title of Harversham.

The King went from Kensington on the 3d of May, but the Wind not favouring, he failed not till two or three Days after, and arrived the 7th in Holland.

His Highness William Duke of Gloucester, Son to her Royal Highness the Princess Anne of Denmark, was on the 24th of July installed Knight of the most noble Order of the Garter.

The Fleet was so early out at Sea this Spring, that on the 3d of April they 1695.

1696.

they bombarded Calais. And that commanded by Sir George Rook being arrived from Cadiz, the Lord Berkley went on board, and Sir George resigned the Command to him about the End of May. Soon after his Lordship set sail towards the Coast of France. Where he landed some Men, destroyed several Villages, brought off a great Booty of Cattle, and took several small Ships. At the same Time Sir Martin Beckman, with the Bomb-Vessels, sailed in at St. Martins, where he threw in above 2000 Bombs and Carcasses, and almost ruined the Place.

On the other side, Du Bart, a famous French Commodore, who cruized yearly Northwards, on the 18th of June fell in with a Fleet of Dutch Merchant Ships, bound homeward from the Sound; burnt four, destroyed thirty, and took the rest.

The Affairs abroad this Year were thus: Early in the Spring, March 16, the Prince of Vaudemont, while the Earl of Atblone surrounded Dinant to keep in that Garrison, sent a Party to Givet (a Place wherein the Enemy had laid up a great Magazine) and threw Bombs and red hot Bullets into it, which set the Town on Fire, and at the same time the Soldiers entered with Flambeaux, and burnt all the Magazines, and retired with little or no Loss.

The two Armies in Flanders came into the Field about the usual Time, but the Circumstances of Affairs were such, that no Action happened. On our side the Deficiency of the Funds, and the Scarcity of Money, by reason of the new Coinage, so stopped the Remittances for the Pay of the Army, that they wanted Subsistence. And a Mutiny, or general Desertion, must have happened, if Mr. Hill, Pay-master in Flanders, had not, upon his own Credit, borrowed One hundred thousand Pounds, and afterwards by coming over to England with a Message from the King to the Bank, prevailed upon that Body to advance such a Sum upon Tallies which lay in the Exchequer, as was necessary for subsisting the Army the rest of the Campaign.

Happily the French were at the same time in equal Straits, and therefore applied their Minds rather to Peace than Conquest. Overtures had already been made to the King at the Hague, by Monsieur Caillerie, an Agent of France. And were pushed by them at Court. The Dutch insisted upon the French King's acknowledging King William as the first Step, which was declined; but as an Expedient it was proposed, that the General Terms might be named, which being found reasonable, should facilitate the other. The Dutch therefore, besides what France proposed to give up, demanded the Restitution of Lorraine entire to its Duke, and the Surrender of Luxembourg and Strasbourg.

In the mean time the French, to spur on the King of Spain to Peace, resolved to give him a Blow at War; accordingly the Duke of Vendosme set upon the Spanish Army commanded by the Prince of Hesse Darmstadt at Ostarlick. But the Spaniards gave them so warm a Reception, that the French recoiled, and the Spaniards retreated in very good Order under the Cannon upon their Lines, having lost only about 300 Men.

But the French had better Success in their Negotiations in Switzerland. Such Propositions had been made to that Duke in the Spring this Year, that he was tempted to accept them, but being watched at Turin by the Lord Galway, and the other Confederate Generals, he durst do nothing there; and therefore under the Pretence of Religion, made a progress to Loretto, where by the Mediation of the Pope and the States of Venice a Treaty was concluded between France and Savoy. The Terms whereof were, the Restitution of all the Duke's Towns and Territories; the Marriage of the Duke's Daughter to the Duke of Burgundy; the Surrender of Pignol dismantled, and a Sum of Money equal to the Portion he was to give with his Daughter.

Pro-

He made a shew of continuing the War, but finding the Lord Galway and the other Generals had got a Hint of his Treaty, he wrote to all the Confederates except King William, to inform them of the great Offers made to him by France. And in opening the Campaign, so ordered it, that his Troops were put into the Frontier Towns, and the Confederates composed the Army. And when all was ready, Marshal Catinat advanced with an Army of 30,000 Men over the Mountains into the Plains of Turin. This was too powerful an Army to be marched against, and therefore entrenching deep, the Duke to make a Grimace sent out Parties daily against the French Foragers, whom they always beat, for Catinat would not suffer Parties to go to their Assistance, with which the other French Generals were extreme angry, being totally ignorant of the true Cause. In fine, his Royal Highness pretending his capital City, and therefore his whole State, in extreme Danger, concluded a Truce with the French, on the 12th of July, for a Month, which was afterwards continued to September 15th, in which Time the Duke laboured to get the Consent of his Allies to make Peace, as they on the other hand did with him to continue the War; but both in vain, and the Peace was concluded. The Duke of Savoy at the same time endeavoured to bring the Confederates into a Treaty of Neutrality for Italy, but could not prevail; he was therefore obliged to march at the Head of the French Army into the Milanese, to compel them to it. Which by besieging Valentia he effected. And Oct. 7, that Treaty also was concluded, and the War on that side perfectly terminated.

This Summer John King of Poland departed this Life, which gave rise to Disturbances in the North, that have continued to this Day. For the French King sent the Prince of Conti thither, and made all his Interest for an Election in his Favour. On the other hand, King William and the Confederates espoused the Interest of Augustus Elector of Saxony. The latter was chosen, June 26, and proclaimed by the Bishop of Cujavia; but the Cardinal Primate declared the Prince of Conti, who appeared there; but finding great Trouble and Bloodshed must attend his asserting the Title, he quitted it, and retired to France. But such Factions arose in the Kingdom, that Augustus enjoyed little or no Quiet in his Royalty.

The Parliament of Scotland met the 8th of September, and sat till the 12th of October, in which time they passed a Bill for a Supply to his Majesty, for maintaining the standing Forces, and some other Acts.

In Ireland the Lord Capel died May 30. And soon after Sir Charles Porter Lord Chancellor, with the Earls of Montrath and Drogheda, were constituted Lords Justices. The Parliament met there the 27th of June, and sat till the 4th of August, on which Day they adjourned.

The King left the Army August the 27th, and went to Loos, where having taken the Diversion of Hunting, and made a Journey to Cleeve, to visit the Brandenburgh Court, he returned to England, Oct. the 6th.

On

1696.

On the 20th of October the Parliament met. The King, in his Speech to them, declared the Difficulties the Publick had lain under this Year, by reason of the Deficiency of the Funds, &c, and said, That as our Enemies had hopes this would have proved fatal to us, we had reason to esteem it a great Happiness, that the Campaign had passed without any Disadvantage abroad. He intimated to them the Necessity of providing for the Deficiencies, and told them that Overtures had been made for a Peace, but he thought they would be of his Opinion, That we ought to treat with the Sword in Hand; and therefore it was necessary to make Provision for the next Year's Service. He put them in Mind of supporting the Civil List, and recommended to them the maintaining the Honour of Parliaments, in making good the Funds already granted. To which he added, That some Inconveniences relating to the Coin, which still remained, deserved their Consideration. The Commons addressed the King in very affectionate and zealous Terms, and proceeded immediately to the Business he had recommended. Resolutions for further remedying the ill State of the Coin were made, and Bills brought in accordingly, which in due Time passed both Houses.

And for Supplies to be granted, they voted on the 4th of November, for the Sea Service and Mariners next Year 2,372,169 l. And for the Land Service, 2,507,881 l. To raise which, there was granted 3 s. in the Pound on Land. A Capitation, or Poll Tax, wherein all Persons and all Substance were taxed; with Power to issue upon it 1500000 Pounds in Exchequer Bills. A Duty on Malt, with Power to raise upon it by Tickets, 885,000 l. And another 1 s. in the Pound on Land, and Duties at the Custom House. Upon which 1,200,000 l. more in Exchequer Bills were to be issued. But all these did not amount to what was voted by 184,707 l. And there proved a Deficiency by Discounts, by the Contract for circulating Exchequer Bills, and the Loss on Malt Tickets, so much as to make the whole Deficiency amount to 742769 Pounds. They voted also 125,000 l. for making good the rest of the Recoinage, and for the Reward for bringing in Plate, for which they laid a Duty upon Paper.

The House took then into Consideration that Part of his Majesty's Speech relating to the Deficiencies, and taking an Account of all the Sums of Money lent upon Parliamentary Security, which remained without a Fund, by reason of either the taking off the given Funds, or the short Produce of those remaining. And enquiring also how the several Taxes from Year to Year fell short of what the Parliament intended to give for the Service of the War, they informed themselves of the Sum Total now extant in deficient Tallies, which appeared to amount to 5,164,400 l. This was what the Honour of Parliament stood engaged for, and yet such was the Distrust the Publick had, that the Sum was too large to be wholly paid, that People were universally fearful of keeping Tallies, and therefore took all Opportunities of getting rid of them, which together with the Straits all Men were brought to for Money upon account of the Recoinage, caused so many to be brought to Market, that the Price was sunk to half the real Value. This was a deplorable Calamity, for besides the Loss those sustained, who having dealt with the Government received Tallies in Payment, the Government could now no longer be credited with

During the King's Absence, an unhappy Fire broke out at Whitehall, which burnt the Lodgings over the Stone Gallery, but was extinguished before it reached the King's Lodgings.

Sir Edward Villers was, on the 25th of March, 1691, created a Baron and Viscount of England, by the Title of Baron Villers of Hoo, and Viscount Villers of Hartford in the County of Kent.

His Majesty made but a short Stay in England, for, purposing to command the Army in Flanders in Person, he made as much Dispatch thither as possible. And therefore having given the necessary Orders for the total Reduction of Ireland; and for the fitting out of a numerous Fleet, whereof Mr. Ruffel (since Earl of Oxford) was appointed Admiral; and filled up the vacant Sees, he departed for Holland, where he arrived May the 10th.

The Ecclesiastical Promotions were, Dr. Tillotson to the Archbishoprick of Canterbury, Dr. Patrick Bishop of Chichester to the Archbishoprick of Ely, Dr. Grove to Chichester, Dr. Fowler to Gloucester, Dr. Cumberland to Peterborough, Dr. Moor to Norwich, Dr. Overidge to Bath and Wells; but declining it because Dr. Kenn was living, Dr. Kidder was afterwards promoted to that See. And in the Month of May this Year, Dr. Sharp succeeded Dr. Lamplugh in the Archbishoprick of York, and Dr. Ironside succeeded Dr. Crofts in Hereford, and Dr. Hall succeeded Dr. Ironside in Bristol.

And now we must look over into Ireland, where Lieutenant General Ginkle commanded in Chief his Majesty's Army.

In the Beginning of June the Army took the Field, and on the 7th of that Month sat down before Ballymore, a Town seated on the Edge of a Bog in West-Meath County, twelve Miles North East from Athlone, which surrendered the next Day. On the 19th they invested Athlone, and took the English Town Sword in Hand the 20th; the Irish Town being to be attacked cross the River, and the Besiegers having broke the Bridge, made the taking it exceeding difficult. However, after many Repulses, the English got over the River by a Ford, and by unparalleled Bravery gained the Bridge, which also gained the Town, for the Enemy deserted it, and fled to their Army, which lay all the while behind the Town; a Circumstance, that as it encouraged the Enemy, increased the Merit of the Generals and Soldiery, who in their Sight took a well fortified Town over a River in ten Days Time. On the 10th of July the Army marched after the Enemy, who were retired into a strong Situation near the Castle of Aghrim. A Morass lay on their Right, and a Rivulet with steep Hills and little Bogs on their Left, and the Castle in their Front. The French General St. Ruth commanded in Chief, assisted by Sarsfield. On the other side, General Ginkle was assisted by the Duke of Wirtemberg, Generals Mackay, Talmash, Telleau, la Melionere, &c. St. Ruth, perceiving our Army intended to attack him, made a blustering Speech to his Soldiers, and prepared to receive us. On Sunday, July 12, the Battle was fought, wherein the Irish fought so bravely, that although the English performed Wonders, the Victory was doubtful for some Hours, nay, St. Ruth thought he had us in his Power; but a Cannon-Bullet soon after put an End to his Life, which also put their Army into Confusion, for Sarsfeild was not acquainted with the Order of Battle. The English, perceiving their Disorder, pushed so seasonably, that they put the Enemy to the rout, and pursued them three Miles, till Night coming on, they were obliged to let the rest escape. The Irish lost above 4000 Men in the Battle, and the English had 700 killed, and as many wounded.

1691.

The General resolving to pursue his Blow, in a few Days marched the Army towards Gallarway, which was now, besides Limerick, the only considerable Place the Irish possessed. The Governor pretended at first to hold out, but after a few Days Experience of the English Bravery, he came to a Treaty, and on the 20th of July the Town was surrendered.

Limerick now was the next Undertaking. Tyrconnel died there the 14th of August, so the chief Command devolved upon Sarsfeild, who made a very obstinate Defence. On the 25th of August, the English Army sat down before the Town, and soon took the Out-Forts. But the Town was impregnable, till the General found Means to pass Part of the Forces over the River, and attack it on that Side also. Where, by a remarkable Bravery of the English Grenadiers, who were employed to attack two Forts at Thomond Gate, 600 of the Enemy were cut to pieces; when retiring from those Forts to the Town, the Gate was shut upon them, to prevent the English entering with them, so closely did they pursue: The English being hereby lodged at the Foot of the Bridge, which cut off from the Enemy all Communication with their Horse without, who were all this while scouring the Country, they soon after demanded a Cessation of Arms for three Days, till they might send to Lieutenant General Sheldon, who lay with 1,500 Horse not far off, in order to include him in the Capitulation, which they were disposed to enter into. Which being granted, and Hostages exchanged, on the 26th of September the Treaty commenced, wherein the Irish asked such high Terms, that a new Battery was ordered to be erected; but at the Request of the Besieged, the Treaty being renewed, it was finally concluded on the 3d of October. The Lords Justices having to that Purpose made a Journey to the Camp, and subscribed that Part of the Articles that related to Civil Rights. By this Treaty all that the Irish held for King James was to be surrendered, and all the Irish that were desirous to go to France were permitted to depart. Thus was Ireland entirely reduced to the Obedience of King William.

In England all was quiet this Summer, and nothing disturbed her Majesty's Administration, neither did any Event happen that may deserve publick Notice. The Fleet at Sea defended our Coast, and protected the Turkey Fleet, which the French way-laid, but no Action happened. In Flanders the two Armies, equally strong, lay at Bay all the Summer, but at breaking up, the French, falling on the Rear of the Confederates, killed them 1000 Men, with half that Loss to themselves. In Savoy the French had great Success; and in Spain they took a small Town, and bombarded Barcelona.

The King returned to England October the 19th. And on the 23d of the same Month the Parliament assembled; to whom his Majesty made a Speech, intimating the Reduction of Ireland, the M hit of that Army, and Reasonableness of paying the Arrears, the Necessity of a good Fleet at Sea, and an Army of 65,000 Men at Land. And advised them to Unanimity and Dispatch.

The usual Addresses being over, the Houses proceeded, and on the 6th of November the Commons voted, that a Supply be granted to their Majesties for carrying on the War against France. And on the 18th they voted, that the Sum for the Sea Service of the Year 1692, be 1,575,890 l. including the Ordnance and the building of Docks. And on the 14th of January, they voted 1,935,787 l. for the Army. Which they raised by a Land Tax, double Excise, and quarterly Poll. But these raised not what they were given for, by 230,000 l.

At the Beginning of this Session, Petitions were presented to the House of Commons, against the East India Company, praying that that Trade might be laid open. The Matters of Complaint being communicated to the Company, they presented their Defence. Both which being duly considered, the House voted on the 17th of December, several Articles of Regulation for the East India Trade, which are too numerous to be inserted here; the principal were, That the Company should annually export Goods of the Product and Manufacture of England, to the Value of 200,000 l. That no one Person should have a Stock of above 5000 l. That no private Sales should be made. That no Dividends should be made without leaving a sufficient Fund to pay all Debts, and carry on the Trade. And that Security should be given that the Stock was then worth, all Debts being paid, 749,000 l. All which Articles being agreed on, they addressed his Majesty, to incorporate the East India Company by Charter, that the same might afterwards pass into an Act. And a Bill was ordered accordingly, but when that Bill was brought in, in February following, so many Petitions appeared against it, that the House thought fit to address the King to dissolve the East India Company, and constitute a new One, for the better preserving that Trade to the Kingdom. A Bill passed the House of Commons for regulating Trials in Cases of Treason, to which the Lords added a Clause in their own Behalf, that in case of the Trial of a Peer, all the Peers should be summoned, and sit to judge the Cause. To which the Commons disagreeing, occasioned many Conferences, and both Houses adhering to their Opinions, the Bill was lost.

One Fuller, an obscure Fellow, who pretended to have been a Page in the Family of the late Queen, at the Time of the Birth of the Prince of Wales, and to be employed in the Service of their Cause in England, appeared before the House of Commons, declaring himself capable of making great Discoveries, and promised to produce Vouchers, if he might have a Pass for two Persons to come from beyond Sea, which was accordingly granted him. but to no Purpose, for such Persons never appeared, nor could be heard of, and therefore the House voted him an Impostor. And in consequence of their Address to the King to prosecute him at Law, he afterwards stood in the Pillory.

On the 24th of February, his Majesty came to the House, passed several Bills, and made a gracious Speech, and then the Parliament adjourned to the 12th of April.

It may not be amiss to remark, that the King at this Time made use of his negative Voice to a Bill for ascertaining the Commissions and Salaries of the Judges.

These other Events were the only remarkable ones this Year, namely, November the 10th at Night, a Fire happened in the Royal Palace at Kensington, which did much Mischief, but was suppressed before it came to the Royal Apartment. November the 25th, Doctor Tennison, Minister of St. Martin's, was nominated to the See of Lincoln, in the room of Doctor Barlow deceased. On the 20th of February General Ginkle was created Earl of Atblone. On the 1st of March the Earl of Pembroke was made Lord Keeper of the Privy Seal, Sir Edward Seymour and Mr. Montague were made Commissioners of the Treasury, in Place of Sir John Lowther and Mr. Pelham: The Lord Cornwallis was made Commissioner of the Admiralty. And on the 3d of March, the Lord Sidney was made Lord Lieutenant of Ireland. On the 19th of March, Thomas Coningsby, Esq; was made a Baron of Ireland; and Sir Henry Capel a Baron of England.

The King embarked the 5th of March, and arrived the next Day in Holland. And towards the End of the same Month the Queen Dowager departed from England to go into Portugal by the Way of France, where she safely arrived, and remained the rest of her Life, much honoured in that Kingdom.

Sir Rowland Gwin, at that Time Treasurer of the Chamber to the Queen, having spoken reflecting Words against the Lord Sidney, he was (April 7.) questioned before the Queen and Council, where not being able to justify what he had said, it was declared that the said Words were groundless and scandalous, and Sir Rowland was turned out of his Place.

The Partisans for King James were still busy in plotting his Return, which they were now more than ever in hopes of, by reason that the French King gave so much into it, as to lend that Prince 30,000 Men, with Assurance that the Number should be doubled, if necessary. This Force King James led to the Sea Coast of Normandy, and was ready to put on board, when our Fleet, by a most signal Victory over the French, prevented it. But first his Letters to certain Privy Counsellors, and other Persons of Quality, inviting them over to be Witnesses of the Birth of a Child his Queen then was pregnant with; and his Declaration inviting his Subjects to return to their Obedience, and promising Pardon with the Exceptions under-mentioned; were sent over to England, and delivered to the proper Persons. The large Exceptions in the general Pardon, sufficiently shewed the Strength of his Hopes, since so many Persons of known Worth could not be denied his Favour with less Views than absolute Conquest. The Persons excepted were, the Duke of Ormond, the Marquis of Winchester, the Earls of Sunderland, Bath, Darby, and Nottingham; the Lords Newport, Delamere, Wiltshire, Colchester, Cornbury, Dunblain, and Churchill; the Bishops of London and St. Asaph; Sir Robert Howard, Sir John Worden, Sir Samuel Grimston, Sir Stephen Fox, Sir George Treby, Sir Basil Dixwell, Sir James Oxendon; Dr. Tillotson, and Dr. Gilbert Burnet; Francis Ruffel, Richard Lewison, and John Trenchard, Esquires; Charles Duncomb; all those who had offered Indignities to him at Fewerham; those who as Judges, Jury-men, or otherwise, had a Hand in putting Ashton and Crofts to Death; and all Spies and such as had betrayed his Council during his Absence from England. But his Hopes were all blasted by the Victory, and he had the Mortification to be Eye-witness of the Destruction of sixteen of the best Ships of War the French King was Master of. The Particulars whereof, as far as the Brevity of this History will admit, are as follow:

The Queen was so vigilant in her Government, that she was informed from Time to Time of the Preparations against her, and took the necessary Precautions to protect her People. Orders were given for hastening out the Fleet, Directions issued for putting the Militia into a good Posture; and some Forces designed for Flanders were stopt, and with some other Troops were ordered to form a Camp at Portsmouth.

The Fleet put to Sea, and being joined with the Dutch, stood over to the French Coast. Tourville commanded the French Fleet, and hoped to fight us before the Dutch were joined; but that Junction being made, his King had sent Orders to avoid fighting, which either he did not receive, or could not obey, by our advancing so near him; so he put on a Face of Courage, and bore down upon us on the 19th of May, when a smart Engagement off Cape Barfleur was maintained from eleven to four; wherein the French suffered extremely. Before five they endeavoured to escape by rowing off their disabled Ships, and took the Advantage of a Calm, when we could not pursue; but about Six a fresh Gale springing up, the Blue Squadron and some of the Red renewed the Fight, and continued it till ten at Night, when the French, having lost four Ships which were blown up, and their Fleet much shattered, stood off for Conquest Road; the Night was foggy and calm, but clearing up about eight in the Morning, the Dutch discovered the Enemy, and the whole Fleet followed the Chase, with all the Sail they could make, till a Calm falling, both Fleets anchored till the Tide was spent; at Eleven they weighed, and stood to the West till Four next Morning, when the Tide obliged them to anchor again: That Day, the 21st, the Enemy endeavoured to escape through the Race of Aldernay, which is the Channel between that Island and Cape de la Hogue, but were so closely pursued by ours, that several of them were forced to run a-ground; in the Afternoon 18 more of them halled in for la Hogue, but the rest got off. Sir Ralph Delaval, Vice-Admiral of the Red, being in the Rear, was directed to keep Fire Ships about him to burn those that run in, while the Admiral pursued the Fugitives. Sir Ralph off Cherbury set Fire to Tourville's own Ship the Royal Sun of 104 Guns, the Ambitieux a Ship of 104 Guns, and the Admirable of 90 Guns. Of the 18 Ships of the Enemy that run a ground, five of them got off, so that when ours halled in close to la Hogue the 22d, they found but 13 remaining, which were drawn up as close to the Shore as possible to avoid Pursuit. But that did not save them, for on the 23d, Vice-Admiral Rook with several Men of War, who were sent in to fire them, not being able to get in far enough for want of Water, manned the Boats, and with incomparable Bravery attacked and burnt six of them in 1692.

spight of the Fire from the Platforms of Cannon planted on shoar. The next Day he repeated his Blow, went in again with the Boats, and burnt the other seven, together with several other Ships. These thirteen were all Ships of from 60 to 80 Guns apiece.

King James was very much afflicted at this Misfortune, which put an End to all his great Designs: He wrote a very mournful Letter to the French King on Occasion of it, and withdrew to St. Germain.

There was a Shew of a Descent on France from England this Summer, a Body of Forces under the Command of the Duke of Leinster (since Schomberg) being shipped off at Portsmouth for that Purpose; but whatever put a Stop to it, they returned, without failing further than the Place they were ordered to open their Orders at.

In Flanders Things went but ill this Summer. The French King came himself to take Namur, before which Place he opened Trenches the 29th of May, took the Lower Town the 5th of June, Fort Coeborn on the 22d of June, and the Castle was surrendered the 1st of July. King William marched on the 3d of June with an Army to its Relief, but was watched so well by the Duke of Luxembourg, who covered the Siege with 70,000 Men, and was so disfavoured by bad Weather, that after he had posted his Army on the Mebagn, and ordered the Pontons for passing it, he was fain to desist.

The French King, after the taking Namur, left the Army under the Command of Luxembourg, and returned to Versailles. That General encamped in an advantageous Post between Engbien and Steenkirk, where King William resolved to attack him.

On Sunday August the 3d, the Battle of Steenkirk was fought, wherein the Confederate Army acted with great Bravery, the English especially performed Wonders. After great Difficulties were got over in advancing through Woods and Defiles, they fired for two Hours together upon the Enemy, with such Order and Courage, that the French could not stand it, but deserted one of their Batteries of Cannon, which Colonel Warcup took, and the whole French Army were near deserting their Camp, when for want of Reinforcement, which Count Solmes was by repeated Orders commanded to send in, our Men were not able to follow the Blow, for the Foot being a Mile in the Rear, and in making too much haste to come up, threw themselves into Disorder, and the Vanguard being attacked by thirty Battalions, and a fresh Body of Dragoons brought in by Boufflers, they were forced to retreat, which, with the coming on of the Night, left the French the Possession of the Field, and some of our Cannon, with many Prisoners.

This Battle may be called fatal, since it lost us those brave Officers, Major General Mackay, Sir John Lanier, Sir Robert Douglas, the Earl of Angus, and many others, who were killed in it, besides 2000 Soldiers killed, and 3000 wounded or taken. On the French Side, the Prince de Turenne, the Marquis de Bellefonds, the Marquis de Tilladet, Brigadier Stoupa, the Marquis Fimacan, and several Persons of Distinction, with 2000 private Soldiers, were killed. It was afterwards discovered, that Luxembourg received Information of all that passed in our Army, by the Hand of one Millevoix, a Domestic of the Duke of Bavaria, which, which, as it most probably changed the Fortune of the Day, the Author could not be sufficiently punished for. He was hanged on a Tree soon after, and the Army retreated in excellent Order, without the least Disturbance from the Enemy.

Boufflers soon after bombarded Charleroy. And on the other side the English Forces, with the Duke of Leinster, commanded upon the intended Expedition, being at their Return sent over to Flanders, landed at Ostend on the 18th of September, and took the two Towns of Furmes and Dixmuyde.

But another Affair which happened in Flanders this Summer deserves our Notice. The French Court had for a long Time indulged itself in an Opinion, that it was lawful to take away the Life of King William by any Means that might effect it. And therefore Chamillard himself, their prime Minister of State, did not disdain to treat with one Granvæle, who last Campaign undertook to assassinate him. What he could not effect then, the same Man was now again attempting, and had associated to him for it two Persons, named Leefdeal and Du-Mont, who were to have stabbed the King at a convenient Opportunity, and then to have fled to a Body of Luxemburg's Army, who under the Command of Monfieur Chamlay and Colonel Parker (an Englishman, who had been in all their Designs against the King's Life) were to advance to receive him. But it pleased God to touch the Hearts of his two Accomplices with Compunction, and they having discovered the Thing, Granvæle was seized at Eyndenhoven, and brought to Trial, where, being convicted, he was executed August the 13th, and at his Death confessed the whole, and acknowledged his Guilt.

The Duke of Savoy this Campaign invaded Dauphiny, and took the City of Embrun, where he found twenty Pieces of Cannon, 20,000 Crowns in Gold of the French King's Money, which, with 40,000 Livres Contribution from the City, and large Contributions from all the neighbouring Towns, he brought off; and had carried his Arms much farther, if he had not unhappily fallen sick of the Small Pox, which was followed by an Ague, and hindered all farther martial Operations on his side.

In Germany the French had the better, for though they took no Towns this Campaign, they surprized a Party of 4000 Horse, commanded by the Duke of Wirtemberg, whereof they killed 1000, and took that Prince Prisoner, and afterwards lived at Discretion in his Country.

On the 7th of June this Year happened that dreadful Earthquake at Jamaica, which overthrew almost the whole Town of Port Royal, swallowed up 1500 Persons, and a vast Quantity of Merchandize in the Warehouses. On the 8th of September following a Shock of Earthquake was felt here in England, and Flanders, and France, but it was, blessed be God, not violent enough to do much Harm.

It was in this Year that the Duke of Hanover was by the Emperor constituted an Elector of the Empire, and thereby a ninth Voice made in the Electoral College.

It was this Summer also, that one Robert Young, a villainous Fellow, counterfeited the Hands of the Lord Marlborough, the Bishop of Rochester, and others, to an Instrument in the Nature of an Association against the Government, and then having lodged that and 1692.  some other such sort of Papers in the Bishop of Rochester's House, went and informed against him; the Papers being accordingly found by the King's Messenger, who was sent to search the House, his Lordship for the present underwent some Censure, but the Roguery was happily detected, and the Bishop's Innocence made plain.

In Scotland and Ireland all was quiet this Summer.

The King returned from Holland, and arrived at London, October the 19th. Both their Majesties did the City the Honour to dine at the Guildhall on the Lord-Mayor's Day this Year.

On the 14th of November, the Parliament met, and his Majesty made a Speech to them, wherein he mention'd the Victory at Sea, wishing the Fortune had been as good at Land, and applauded the Courage of the English. Advised a Provision for the War as large as before, and intimated a Design to invade France. The Commons thanked his Majesty by an Address for his Gracious Speech, and the Queen for her excellent Government. The House also gave their Thanks by the Speaker to Admiral Russel, for his Conduct and Courage in the late Victory. Some Exceptions indeed were made to his Conduct, as if the Victory might have been carry'd farther, and Enquiry was made into the Stoppage of the intended Descent, but after strict Examination of all Parties, the Admiral was by Vote fully acquitted.

On the 15th of November, a Motion being made for a Supply, it was unanimously agreed to, and on the 2d of December was voted for the Navy 1,926,516*l* and on the 10th, for the Army 2,090,563*l*. To raise which Money a Land Tax of 4*s*. in the Pound was granted.

A Fund of 100,000*l*. per Annum out of the Excise, to pay Annuities to Persons that should advance One Million of Pounds to the Service of the War, and Additional Impositions, and a Review of the Poll. All which did not raise the Sum voted by 545,596*l*.

Several Bills of a publick Nature, that were order'd to be brought in this Session, did not pass into Acts, viz. A Bill for Regulating Trials in Cases of Treason. A Bill for satisfying the Debts due to the Orphans of London. A Bill for better Preservation of their Majesties Persons. A Bill to ascertain the Fees of Officers of Justice. A Bill for free and impartial Proceedings in Parliament, whereby several Persons in Offices were to be excluded. A Bill for the frequent calling and meeting of Parliaments. Which last passed both Houses, but was stopped at the Throne on the 20th of January, when the King passed the Land Tax.

A Complaint being made in the House against a Pamphlet, intitled, King William and Queen Mary Conquerors, it was order'd to be burnt, as was also a Pamphlet written by the Bishop of Sarum, intitled, A Pastoral Letter, wherein the same Doctrine was maintained. The Lords also taking that Matter into Consideration, passed a Resolution That such Assertion is inconsistent with the Principles on which this Government is founded, and tendeth to the Subversion of the Rights of the People.

Complaints from Ireland being laid before the House of Commons they presented an Address to the King on the 9th of March, wherein they set forth Abuses and Mismanagements in that Kingdom. Complaining that the Protestant Subjects were exposed to free Quar-1692.

ter. That Irish Papists were listed among Recruits. That Protections were granted to Irish Papists. That Outlawries were revers'd. That forfeited Estates were lett at under Rates. That there were great Embuzzlements in the Stores and in the forfeited Estates. And that Additions were made to the Articles of Limerick, whereby the Irish Papists were encouraged, and the English Interest weaken'd. Which Abuses they prayed might be redress'd, and that no Grant might be made of the forfeited Estates, till the Matter could be settled in Parliament. They also prayed that the Articles of Limerick, with the Additional Articles, might be laid before them. The King gave them a Gracious Answer, and soon after put an End to the Session. For,

On the 14th of March his Majesty came to the House, passed the Tax Bills, a Bill for appointing Commissioners to state the Publick Accounts, and 18 other Publick Acts. And made a Speech, and then the Parliament was prorogued to the 2d of May.

In this Interval of the Sitting of the Parliament, the Events without Doors of publick Notice were, On the 30th of Dec. Sir John Trevor was made Master of the Rolls. On the 24th of February the chief Command of the Fleet was taken out of the Hands of Admiral Ruffel, and given to Mr. Killigrew, Sir Ralph Delaval, and Sir Cloudsley Shovel in joint Commission. And on the 8th of February Mr. Rook was made Vice Admiral of the Red, Lord Berkley Vice Admiral of the Blue, Colonel Aylmer Rear Admiral of the Red, and Mr. Michel Rear Admiral of the Blue.

The Lord Mohun was brought to Trial January 30th before his Peers for the Murder of Mr. Mountford

the Player, of which he was February the 4th acquitted.

On the 23d of March Sir John Trenchard was made Secretary of State, in the Place of the Earl of Nottingham. And the Custody of the Great Seal was on the same Day given to Sir John Summers, at that Time Attorney General. A new Commission of the Admiralty also passed, whereby that Charge was given to Sir John Lowther, Henry Priestman, Esq; Lord Falkland, Robert Austen, Esq; Sir Robert Rich, Henry Killigrew, Esq; and Sir Ralph Delaval.

On the 31st of March the King set out for Holland, where he arrived the 2d of April.

This Summer was unfortunate to the Confederates on all Sides; and first to us by Sea. The English and Dutch Fleet being joined, they set sail to the Westward with a very numerous Fleet of Merchant Men, bound for the Streights, which sailed under their Convoy. They sailed all in Company to a certain Latitude, as their Orders directed, and then Sir George Rook with a Squadron of 23 Men of War parted off to convoy the Merchant Men. Being arrived within 60 Leagues of Cape St. Vincent, June 15th, they discover'd the French Fleet. The Merchant Ships were ordered to make the best of their Way to the Streights, while the Men of War lay behind to cover them. In the Evening the French came up with the Stern-moost, and took three Dutch Men of War, who had engaged Eleven French. The Merchant Men making off to Shoar, the Enemy followed them, and gave opportunity to those Ships which lay to Windward to escape. Sir George Rook with the Men of War and some Merchant Men got safe to Ireland, but the Turkey Fleet run-1693. running into Gibraltar, were all either taken, burnt, or sunk. The Loss was great, for besides fifty Merchant Ships destroyed, the French took twenty-nine, besides two Dutch Men of War taken by Tourville and D'Etrees, and an English Man of War, and a rich Pinnace burnt.

In Flanders, Huy was taken by the French, July 23d. And soon after the Duke of Luxembourg, who commanded an Army much more numerous than the Confederates, attacked the King in his Camp at Neerhespen near Landen.

On July the 28th was fought the terrible Battle of Landen, wherein after much Bravery on the Confederates side, the French obtained the Victory, and the Confederates were forced to leave behind them sixty Pieces of Cannon and nine Mortars, besides 6000 Men, who fell in the Battle and in the Retreat; for a small River that lay behind them, whose opposite Bank was steep, exposed them to a double Danger, of Drowning and the Enemy's Fire. The Enemy did not acknowledge the Loss of above 2000 Men, but for their Honour they ought to have confessed more, since if their Loss was not greater, they were stupid to lie still for fifteen Days together, and give the Confederates leave to recruit, which by the Junction of a Body of fresh Troops under the Duke of Wirtemberg, who had forced the French Lines in Flanders, and lay levying Contributions in the Enemy's Country at the Time this Battle was fought, the Army was so restored, as to be able to make Head against the French all the Summer, but were not however strong enough to raise the Siege of Charleroy, which the French sat down before on the 10th of September, and after a Siege of twenty-three Days, took it by Capitulation.

In Germany the French took Heidelberg, set both City and Castle on Fire, and miserably ravaged the Palatinate.

In Savoy a Battle was fought at Marsiglia, wherein after an obstinate Combat the French got the Victory.

In England, the Lord Capel, Sir Cyril Wyche, and William Duncomb, Esq; were appointed Lords Justices in Ireland, and set out the 10th of July on their Journey thither. The Lord Sidney being recalled, who at his Return was made Master of the Ordnance. That Lord had acquired some Ill-will in Ireland, by insisting too positively on the King's Power of presenting Draughts of Bills to the Parliament, whereby the Parliament's Power would be reduced to a Negative Voice only; but they insisted on their Right of forming the Draughts, and have since enjoyed it uncontestedly.

The Earl of Bellamont and Sir James Hamilton exhibited Complaints to the Queen against the Lord Coningsby and Sir Charles Porter, late Justices in Ireland, which were referred to the Privy Council, but the Accusers declining to appear, the Matter fell.

On the 30th of October the King arrived at London from Holland, and on the 6th of November appointed Mr. Ruffel to resume his Place of Admiral of the Fleet.

November 7. The Parliament assembled: To whom the King recommended an Increase of our Forces by Sea and Land, which the Confederates had already resolved on. The House of Commons voted, That they would support their Majesties and their Government. And cheerfully agreed with his Majesty's Proposal of Augmentation; for on the 25th of November they voted voted that Two Millions should be raised for the Service of the Navy for the Year 1694, besides 500,000*l.* for paying Arrears of Wages to Seamen. They voted also, that the Army for the Service of the Year 1694, should consist of 83,122 Men, and that 2,530,582*l.* be raised for maintaining them; which was raised by a Land Tax of 4*s.* in the Pound; by a Lottery of one Million; and by erecting the Bank one Million and two hundred thousand Pounds; by Annuities; by a quarterly Poll; by a Stamp Duty; and by licensing Hackney Coaches: Which produced the Sums they were given for; but by Expences, Discounts, Loss on Guineas, &c. a Deficiency arose of 177,530*l.*

The House took into Consideration the Disappointment at Sea, and voted, November 17th, that there had been treacherous Mismanagement in the Miscarriage of the Turkey Fleet. They blamed the Grand Fleet for not accompanying Sir George Rook; and when it was alledged that they were not sufficiently victualled, after Examination into that, it was voted, That there was sufficient on board the main Fleet to have convoyed the Merchant Ships out of Danger. And afterwards, on December 6, it was voted, That the Admirals, by not sending into Brest for Intelligence, before they left the Streights Squadron, were guilty of a high Breach of Trust, to the great Loss and Dishonour of the Nation.

On the 25th of January the King came to the House, and passed the Act for the Land Tax, but refused a Bill for free and impartial Proceedings in Parliament, which, as we told you last Year, stopt in the House of Lords; but now having passed both Houses, the Commons resented much that it was stopt at the Throne; and therefore the next Day voted, that whoever advised the King not to give the Royal Assent to that Act, was an Enemy to their Majesties and the Kingdom. And by the expostulatory Representation concerning the ancient Usage in passing Acts, alledged, there were few Instances in former Reigns, where the Royal Assent had been refused to such Bills as both Houses passed, and where that Assent had been withheld by private Insinuations, without Advice of the Privy Council, it had been attended with great Inconveniences.

An Act passed this Session, for paying the Debts due to the Orphans of London. The East India Company having obtained a new Charter from the King, Petitions were presented to the Commons against it; this put the House upon examining into that Matter, which, it seems, appeared so disagreeable, that on January the 19th they voted, that all the Subjects of England have equal Right to trade to the East Indies, till prohibited by Act of Parliament:

The Earl of Bellamont presented Articles to the House against the Lord Coningsby, and Sir Charles Porter, but upon Examination and Consideration of the Circumstances of Affairs in Ireland, they were dismissed.

The Parliament having gone through all the publick Business before them, the King came to the House on the 25th of April, and passed the Acts that were ready. And having made a Speech, the Parliament was prorogued.

In November this Year, Captain Bembow, with a Squadron of Men of War, and new invented Bomb-Vessels, sailed to St. Malo, and bombarded it four Days successively, but with no great Effect.

On

1694.

On the 24th of November, Dr. Sandcroft, the depriv'd Archbishop of Canturbury, departed this Life.

On the 31st of December, Prince Lewis of Baden arrived in England, was lodged in Whitehall, and entertained by the King and Nobility with great Honour till his Return on February 14.

And now again the Turkey Fleet suffered a Misfortune. Sir Francis Wheeler, with a good Squadron of Men of War, was their Convoy, which secured them from the Enemy, but the Elements could not be contended with, for on the 17th of February a terrible Storm overtook them in the Mouth of the Streights, soon after they sailed from Gibraltar for the Levant, which continued two Days successively, and made miserable Destruction in the Fleet. Sir Francis's own Ship foundered, and he and all his Men were lost; four of the Turkey Ships, one for Leghorn, and one for Venice, were all driven a shoar, and the Men lost, together with three Dutch Ships richly laden, who had the same Fate. The rest made a Shift to get into Ports, but in very bad Condition.

On the 25th of April, the King conferred the Title of Duke upon the Earl of Shrewsbury, the Marquis of Carmarthen, by the Style of Duke of Leeds, and the Earl of Devonshire; the Title of Marquis on the Earl of Mulgrave, by the Style of Marquis of Normandy. And soon after the Lord Sidney was made Earl of Rumney, and Henry Herbert, Esq; Baron Herbert of Cherbury. The Lord Falkland (against whom a Complaint was made in Parliament about a Bounty received from the Crown) Mr. Killegrew, and Sir Ralph Delaval, were turned out of the Commission of the Admiralty; and Admiral Ruffel and Sir John

Houblon, put in their Places. A new Commission for the Treasury also passed the Seals, whereby that Charge was put into the Hands of the Lord Godolphin, Sir Stephen Fox, Charles Montague, Esq; Sir William Trumbul, and John Smith, Esq;

In the Month of June this Year, (the Commission being passed for that Purpose) the Books were opened for Subscriptions to the Bank of England, and the whole 1,200,000*l.* being subscribed, the Charter was soon after given them, whereby the Subscribers were made a Corporation, and enabled to sue and be sued, but with Proviso that they should never owe above the Capital Stock paid into the Exchequer, which together with 100,000*l.* per Annum, they received for Interest for it, were to be always liable to their Debtors. They were also forbid to trade in Goods otherwise than by Pawn; or to lend Money to the Crown but upon Parliamentary Security.

This Summer proved a Time of Action at Sea; the main French Fleet indeed escaped us, but the Alarm we gave their Coasts, and the Damage we did their Towns, was a Matter of great Trouble to the Enemy. The English Fleet being joined by the Dutch, were early at Sea, and stood over for the French Coast, with Intention to block up the French Fleet in Brest, but could not effect that, nor bring them to Battle, for the French avoided Engagement, and made the best of their Way for the Streights. The Admiral therefore sent out Detachments; one under Captain Pickard put into Berthaume Bay, and burnt or sunk 35 Merchant Ships. Another under Lieutenant General Talmash for the Land Service, and the Lord Berkley as Sea Commander, made an Attempt upon Brest. On the 5th of June they sailed from the Fleet, and on the 7th anchored in Camaret Bay. So many Ships as were necessary drew in near the Shore, and General Talmash, with the Well-Boats of 900 Men, landed, but made nothing of it; the Marquis of Carmarthen brought the Boats off, after the Loss of many Men, but General Talmash lost his Life in the Attempt. But the Lord Berkeley had better Success at Dieppe, whither he sailed, and threw in 1000 Bombs, which set the Town on Fire in several Places, and frightened the People so entirely, that if he had been sensible of it, the Town had been taken. From thence they went to Havre de Grace, where Bombow threw in at least 300 Bombs more, and did considerable Damage; but the Weather proving bad, he was forced to draw off. And then the whole Fleet sailed to Cadix, where they lay all the Summer, and protected Spain, which the French had Intention to have used roughly this Campaign.

The Prince and Bishop of Liege dying this Summer, the French endeavoured to get the Cardinal de Bouillon elected, but could not effect it, for by the Interest of the Confederates, Prince Clement of Bavaria, already Elector of Cologne by the same Interest, obtained to be elected along with the Great Master of the Teutonic Order; who also had such a Number of Votes, as to claim the Election; but he soon after dying, the Archbishop of Cologne's Election was confirmed by the Pope,

In Flanders, the Confederates had this Campaign a gallant Army, and were so far superior to the Enemy, that besides putting them to their Shifts all the Year, to defend their Country, they were able to take the Town and Castle of Huy, and keep the French at a distance, in Defence of their own Country.

In Catalonia the French had great Success this Campaign, they took Palamos, Gironne, and Ostalrick, and would have besieged Barcelona, if the Neighbourhood of our Fleet had not prevented. Admiral Russel was now able to contend the Dominion of the Mediterranean Sea, and forced the French to hide themselves in Thoulon all the rest of the Time of the War.

Nothing happened very considerable this Campaign, either in Piedmont or in Germany. And so we will dismiss the Story of Foreign Affairs.

The King returned to England on the 9th of November, and met his Parliament on the 12th.

His Majesty in his Speech mentioned the good Success at Sea, and the happy Prospect at Land; advised effectual Provision for the War, and recommended a Law for encouraging Seamen.

The Houses adjourned to the 19th, and being re-assembled, the first Thing the Commons went about was the Bill for frequent calling and meeting of Parliaments: A Law which they, having been twice disappointed in, were become the more earnest for now. The Tenor of that Bill was, that the Parliament should assemble and be allowed to sit and do Business every Year; and that no Parliament should last above three Years, but be re-chosen at the End of this Term. This Bill soon passed both Houses, and received the Royal Assent on the 14th of December. On which Day the King also passed an Act for continuing the Tonnage and Poundage for five Years, which was made a Fund of Credit for 1,250,000 l. for the Service 1694.

Service of the Year 1695.

The House of Commons unanimously voted a Supply to their Majesties, and upon calculating the Estimate, agreed that 2,382,712 l. be raised for the Navy, which was voted November the 30th; and that 2,500,000 l. be raised for the Army, which was voted December the 4th. To raise this Sum, there was granted a Land-Tax of 4 s. in the Pound. A Sale of Reversionary Annuities. A Duty upon Births, Burials, and Marriages, with a Clause of Credit for 650,000 l. A Duty on Coals, with a Credit on it for 564,700 l. together with the Duty on Tonnage and Poundage, as abovesaid. All which raised what was granted, and 400 l. over. But the State of our Silver Coin being at that Time extreme bad (Clipping and Counterfeiting having reduced its Value so low, that giving a Guinea for 30 s. was giving more in Value in Gold, than the Silver received for it was worth) reduced the Price of our Money abroad, and raised the Price of Commodities at Home, so that all Things was brought to the Estimate of 30 s. for a Guinea, whereby the Denomination of Pounds being retained, the King's Supply was near upon so much deficient as the Difference between 22 s. and 30 s. amounted to. Whereby, as was afterwards made appear in Parliament, there proved a Deficiency in this Year's Provision of 400,514 l. This was the Sum of Parliamentary Proceedings before a very melancholy Scene opened itself upon us.

But first we must say, that Dr. Tillotson, Archbishop of Canterbury, departed this Life November 22. The Bishop of Lincoln, Dr. Tenison, was nominated by his Majesty to succeed him.

On Friday the 21st of December,

her sacred Majesty Queen Mary was seized by a Sickness, which proved to be the Small Pox, and that so violent, and with such mortal Attendants, that all the Power of Art was baffled, and her Majesty expired on the 28th, to the excessive Grief of all the Nation. This Princess was extremely honoured and beloved by the People; but it may with Truth enough be said, not half so much valued as her Merits justly claimed.

Her Majesty's Corpse lay in State at Whitehall with great Solemnity for many Days; and was interred at Westminster with her Ancestors, on the 5th of March.

The Funeral was solemnized with as much Magnificence, as without Pageantry has been ever seen. Besides all the Officers of State, and the principal Mourners, there attended, the House of Peers in their Parliament Robes, the House of Commons in deep Mourning with long Cloaks, together with divers Noblemen, attended by the Heralds, bearing the Regalia and Insignia, and the Horse of State covered to the Ground with Purple Velvet. The Royal Corpse lay deposited in an open Chariot, with a Canopy over it, drawn by eight Horses, covered with Purple Velvet. In the Chariot sat a Lady in deep Mourning, at the Head, another at the Feet, the Coffin being covered with a Golden Pall, and the Crown, Orb, and Sceptre, on a Cushion; 300 old Women in Black Gowns led the Way; and a Number of Ladies, those that attended her Majesty's Person in her Life-time, followed the Hearse. This Attendance composed a very long Train, which moved with that decent Gravity the mournful Occasion claimed. At Nine in the Morning they set out from Whitehall.

hall, and soon after Twelve at Noon the Royal Corpse entered into Westminster Abbey. There a solemn Dirige was sung, and a Sermon preached by the new Archbishop of Canterbury, all which was not finished till the Close of the Day. The Way from Whitehall to the Church was planked and railed, as at a Coronation, and covered with black Cloth, the whole Proceedure being on Foot. The King presented Mourning to all the Members of the House of Commons.. In the middle of the Abbey Church there was built a large circular Pavilion on Columns, covered with black Cloth, and adorned with Insignia, or Scutcheons of the illustrious and Royal Families, from which her Majesty descended. Here the Corpse lay deposited during the Time of the Service and Sermon; afterwards it was kept standing for some Months, and a Coffin covered with a Velvet Pall, and a Crown lying on it, stood there in Remembrance of the real one. This was called a Mausoleum, as Structures of that kind usually are, from the famous Tomb of Mausolus, which was one of the Wonders of the World.

To return back to the Affairs transacting in the mean time.

On the 16th of January, Dr. Tennison, Bishop of Lincoln, was translated to the Archi-episcopal See of Canterbury.

The Time of the Session of the House of Commons was chiefly taken up in examining into two Particulars: First, the Lancashire Plot, and secondly, the Matter of Bribery.

The Lancashire Plot was a Design of the Roman Catholicks to raise a Rebellion against the King and Queen; to which Purpose Commissions were sent to them from King James, and Arms were bought up, and lodged in private Places, 1694. and Men lifted to bear them. All which was discovered by one Lunt, who came from France in December, 1693. Another Person named Taffe, who became acquainted with Lunt, pushed him forward in his Discovery, and was very active in assisting the Messengers sent down to search for Arms. But it seems, either the Informations were false, or the Conspirators had Time to remove them, for none or few Arms were found, nor any Commissions of Papers, except the Draught of a Declaration in Favour of King James. Taffe was thought over-busy in seizing, so far as not to scruple Felony, which put him out of Favour with the King's Officers, and therefore was denied the Reward he demanded. This put him out of Humour, and rendered him liable to the Temptations on the other Side, who failed not to take the Advantage, but bought him over to their Service. He then declared, that it was all a Sham, invented by him and Lunt, which together with the Circumstance of nothing found in searching, and some Management in the Trial, brought the Gentlemen off, who were tried for it at Manchester, October 16, 1694, and acquitted; and the Witnesses were ordered, by Authority, to be prosecuted for Perjury. If the Lancashire Gentlemen had sat still here, they might possibly have been believed innocent, but their own Warmth made them bring it into Parliament, Nov. 22, 1694. The House of Commons examined into it with great Exactness, and in the Month of February following voted, That there was sufficient Ground for the Prosecution and Trial of the Gentlemen at Manchester, and that there was a dangerous Plot carried on against the King and Government.

And

1694.

And the Matter being afterwards carried into the House of Lords, it was there also resolved, That the Government had sufficient Cause to prosecute the Lancashire and Cheshire Gentlemen. But notwithstanding all this, the Witnesses were convicted of Perjury at the Lancashire Assizes next Summer.

The next great Affair which employed the House of Commons several Months, was the Enquiry into Briberies, which from one Step to another grew to a large Extent.

A Petition was presented January 12, from the Town of Royston, against Abuses of the Soldiery, in exacting Subistence Money, which was voted arbitrary and illegal. And Tracy Pauncefort, an Agent, being guilty of it, was taken into Custody; and for Obstinacy in not answering the Questions propounded to him, committed Prisoner to the Tower. His Brother Edward Pauncefort being accused of contriving to cheat Col. Hastings's Regiment of 500 Guineas, was also ordered into Custody. And a Member of Parliament, who had taken a Bribe of 200 Guineas, was committed to the Tower. On the 26th of February the Commons made a Representation to the King against the Colonels and Agents.

The House examining further into Abuses, found occasion to call upon James Craggs, one of the Contractors for Cloathing the Army, to give an Account of the Disposition of the Money received to that Purpose, which he refusing, was committed to the Tower. And a Bill was ordered to oblige Pauncefort to discover, how the Monies paid into his Hands had been disposed of. And Harnage, another Cloather of the Army, was taken into Custody.

After this they censured the Commissioners for licensing Hackney Coaches as guilty of Bribery.

And finally, a Committee was appointed to search and make Discovery of all other Crimes of this Nature. And now came on the Discovery of that Mystery of Iniquity, the Dealings of the East India Company to obtain a Charter, and an Act of Parliament to confirm it.

The Committee examining the Company's Books, discovered, that in three Payments 77,258*l.* had been issued for special Service, besides several smaller Sums, which amounted to 10,144*l.* more. All in the Year 1693, while Sir Thomas Cook was Governor. It is too tedious and too intricate to enter into a Detail upon this Matter; for besides this Sum, 90,000*l.* more was discovered to have been paid by Sir Thomas Cook, whereof 30,000*l.* to Sir Basil Firebrass. And that the Company made a Contract to give 12,000*l.* for 200 Tun of Salt-Petre, the prime Cost whereof was but 2000*l.* to buy off an Interloper. In short, such terrible Waste appeared to have been made of the Company's Money, that provoked further Enquiry, which in the End produced a Discovery, that one Mr. Robart, a Servant to the Duke of Leeds, had received 5000*l.* of it, which some Enemies of that Lord caught such hold of, as to urge for an Impeachment. His Grace came to the House to defend himself, but could not divert the Storm, for an Impeachment was carried up to the House of Lords; but Robart, who was the only Witness, being withdrawn, the Matter never came to a Trial, though the Duke pressed earnestly for it.

While this was transacting, another Enormity of the same Sort was discovered. It seems when the without allowing the Discount that Tallies were ordinarily sold at, which the King had been fain to do of late, and thereby the Publick paid almost double Price for all it bought. But as this vastly increased our Taxes, and dishonoured Parliamentary Security, it was of the last Importance to remedy the Evil; which this Session most honourably and most wisely effected. Several Duties at the Custom-house, the Taxes upon Stamps, Marriages, Births and Burials, and some others, which were soon to expire, were continued to the first of August, 1706, and the Monies arising upon them were applied to the paying off the deficient Tallies. And it was further enacted, That if these Funds did not fully satisfy all such Tallies with Interest, what was wanting should be made up by the first Aids granted by Parliament after the Expiration of them. And the better to prevent Tallies being too much brought to Market, and thereby lessen the Discount, it was enacted, That the Bank of England should open their Books, and receive an Engraftment of new Subscriptions, whereof four Fifths to be paid in Tallies, and one Fifth in their own Notes; which was soon after accordingly done, and above a Million was subscribed, whereby 800,000 l. in Tallies, and 200,000 in Bank Notes being sunk, the Remainder presently bore a better Price, and in a few Months the publick Credit was miraculously restored.

Bill

When this great Difficulty was got over, the House took into Consideration that Part of his Majesty's speech relating to the Civil List, and on the 18th of February voted 15,000 l. for that Service, which they raised by a Duty on Malt for three Years, Duties upon Mum, Cyder, &c. and upon Goods made of Wooll, Silk, or Hair. And on the 8th of March they laid a Duty upon Hawkers and Pedlars, to raise Money for paying Interest for the Transport Debt. And because the Provision intended last Session for paying the Money remaining due upon the Fund on Coals and Calm, Tonnage and Salt, &c. proved deficient, by reason of the Non-Subscription to the Land Bank, the Duties upon Leather were appropriated to that Purpose.

And now having finished the Transactions of this Session relating to the Funds, we must turn back to speak of an Affair which occasioned great Debate in both Houses.

Sir John Fenwick, against whom both Porter and Goodman had deposed, That he was one of those who sent over Charnock to invite King James with a French Army to invade England, had, by absenting himself, avoided being taken into Custody, and made the best of his Way to get out of the Kingdom; but it happened that he was discovered and seized at Romney in Kent, June 11, and sent up to London. He amused the Lords Justices with Pretences of discovering the Counsels of his Accomplices, whereby he procured a Delay in being brought to Trial, and at the same Time Agents were at work for him to take off the Evidence. Porter had great Offers made him, which he refused; but Goodman gave into the Temptation, and fled away into France. This leaving but one Witness against him, he thought himself safe, and therefore instead of discovering the Enemies of the Government, he basely accused the best Friends of it, the Duke of Shrewsbury, the Lord Marlborough, the Earl of Bath, Admiral Russel, and the Lord Godolphin, as Persons in King James's Interest, 1696.

A D.

Interest, and such as had undertaken in their several Stations to do him Service.

Thus the Matter stood, when the King gave Admiral Ruffel leave to lay it before the House of Commons; to whom accordingly on the 6th of November he communicated the Examination of Sir John Fenwick, and desired he might have leave to justify himself. This produc'd an Examination of Sir John Fenwick in the House, wherein he was shy of answering, upon pretence of hurting himself, and demanded Security, that what he now confess'd should not appear in Evidence against him. The Answer given him by the House was, That there was no Room to doubt, that he should be hurt by what he said here, since he had already said it before the Council; that no Man that dealt candidly with this House, had ever suffered by it, and that he would gain the Favour of the House by making a full and free Discovery. He still pretended Fear, and then demanded Time to recollect himself, which the House did not think necessary to give him, and therefore desired him to speak now. What he said, imported only, that when he spoke to the Council he had desired a Pardon without being an Evidence, which the King did not refuse, but desired first to know what he had to say. 'Twas upon this Encouragement, he said, that he made the Discovery he had done; to which the King answered, he ought more fully to make good what he had said. He pretended he had explained his Informations to the Council, but was still told it was not satisfactory. And in Effect told the House he could go no farther without having a Pardon beforehand. In fine, such were his Prevarications to avoid making good the Accusations abovesaid, or, discover what he knew of the Plotters against the Government, that the House, after much Debate, came at last to a Resolution to attain him by Act of Parliament.

The Bill to attain Sir John Fenwick being brought in, many Speeches were made against it, and more for it, till the Question being put for the Second Reading it was carried in the Affirmative, Yea's 196, No's 104. And Council being assigned Sir John Fenwick, he was brought to the Bar on the 12th of November. Where the Bill being read and opened by the King's Council, and answered by the Prisoner's, Three Days Time was given to the Prisoner to prepare for his Defence. On the 16th, he was again brought to the Bar, and then the King's Council exhibited the Evidence, viz. Captain Porter, viva Voce, who deposed, That Sir John Fenwick was one of those who sent over Charnock to invite King James, with a French Power, to invade England. And the Deposition in Writing of Goodman to the same Purpose, sworn express against Sir John Fenwick before the Secretary of State; together with the Record of the same Goodman's Deposition at Cook's Trial, where he swore in open Court, That Sir John Fenwick was one of the Company with Cook as aforesaid. Here the King's Council left it; and then the Council for the Prisoner urged what they thought proper against the Form of Proceeding, but nothing in Defence of the Innocence of their Client. Which being concluded, they were ordered to withdraw, and the Question for Commitment of the Bill being proposed, another Struggle was made. But when the Question was put, it was carried in the Affirmative, Yea's 182, No's 128.

On

On the 25th of November, the Bill was read the third Time, and then the Question being put that it should pass, occasioned many and long Speeches for and against it; and upon the Question it was carried in the Affirmative, Yea's 189, No's 156.

In the House of Lords, the Bill went thro' all the same Forms with the same Oppositions; till in the End the Question being put for passing it, it pass'd in the Affirmative. Yea's 68, No's 61. And the dissenting Lords entered their Protest against it.

On the 28th of January Sir John Fenwick was beheaded on Tower-Hill, denying, that he went to that Meeting in Leadenhall-street with Intention to invite King James to invade England, or that he was provided of any Horse and Arms to assist him; declaring also that what he had discovered to a Great Man that came to him in the Tower, he received Knowledge of from France. He said he had been instrumental in saving the King's Life in 1694, by opposing a villanous Design then attempted against it. And finally gave Thanks to those who by opposing the Bill had endeavoured to save him.

In this Session the pretended privileged Places, such as White-fryers, the Savoy, Mint, &c. were by Act of Parliament disfranchised.

The perfecting the several Bills depending, took up the rest of the Session, which lasted till April the 16th, on which Day the King came to the House, passed the Bills, and made a Speech of Thanks, and then both Houses were prorogued to the 13th of May.

During the Session, the material Transactions without Doors were these. December the 12th, 1696, the King named the Earl of Pembroke, the Lord Villiers, and Sir

Joseph Williamson, his Plenipotentiaries for treating of a Peace with France; and Commissioners were appointed on the 6th of February, to execute the Office of Privy-Seal, during the Absence of the Earl of Pembroke. The Lord Galway was constituted one of the Lords Justices in Ireland; and Sir Charles Porter being dead, John Methuen, Esq; was made Lord Chancellor of that Kingdom. On the 12th of February, the Earl of Ailsbury, who, according to the Oaths of Porter and Goodman, was also one of those who sent over Charnock to France, was admitted to Bail.

On the 19th of April, the Earl of Sunderland was made Lord Chamberlain of his Majesty's Household, the Earl of Dorset, who had held that Place ever since the King came to the Crown, resigning it in Consideration of a Sum of Money. And on the 22d, the Lord Sommers was made Lord High Chancellor. And then the King appointed Lords Justices, and departed for Holland, April the 26th.

The Parliament of Ireland met July the 27th, to whom the Lords Justices made a Speech, importing, That a great Debt lay on the Crown, by the Revenue producing short of what it was given for. That it was expedient that Limerick and some other Places be fortified; and that it would be convenient to build Baraques for the Soldiers, at those Places where they are quartered. That the State of the Account of the Money already given, of the Debts, and of the computed Expence of what was now proposed, should be laid before the Parliament. And lastly, put them in mind of encouraging Protestant Strangers to come into the Kingdom, and thereby to promote the Linnen Manufactory. The Commons made a dutiful Address, and proceeded to the Business proposed to them. On the 12th of August, they voted 150,000*l.* for clearing the Debt to the End of June. And raised it by continuing the Additional Excise, and by an Act for a Poll Tax, which with several other Acts having received the Royal Assent, on the 4th of December, the Parliament was prorogued to the 10th of May.

A. D.
1696.

The Preparations for a Treaty of Peace were in the mean time carried on, and the Place of Treaty agreed to be the Palace of Ryſwick, seated in the Mid-way between Delft, and the Hague, the French Plenipotentiaries being to reside at Delft, and those of the Confederates at the Hague. The Preliminaries were stated and agreed to on the 10th of February, consisting of 24 Articles; whereof the principal were, That the Treaties of Westphalia, and Nimeguen, should be the Basis of this. That K. William should be owned by the French King. That Strasburgh, Luxemburg, Mons and Charleroy should be restored. That all that had been taken by the French in Catalonia should be restored. That Dinant and Philipsburgh should be restored. That the Principality of Orange and the Dutchy of Deux Ponts, as also many Lordships in Germany, should all be restored to their proper Owners; and that all the Re-unions made since the Treaty of Nimeguen be made void.

Charles XI. King of Sweden, had undertaken to be Mediator of this Peace, but it pleased God to take away the Life of that Prince, on the 5th of April. And his Son Charles XII. being then but 15 Years of Age, the Administration of the Government was given to the Queen and five Senators, till he should arrive to the 18th Year of his Age. The Regents willing to contribute to the Peace, accepted the Mediation in the King's Name, and so a new Commission being sent, that Death did not at all hinder the Progress of the Peace. And the Ceremonial being established, the first Conference was held May the 9th.

The Detail of this Treaty is too large to have Place in this Manual, neither is it necessary to the English Historian, except the Articles for our own Nation, the Substance whereof we shall give you when they are concluded; and proceed now to speak of the Operations of the Campaign.

The French Army was first in the Field in Flanders, and on the 16th of May set down before Aeth. King William went to the Army as soon as he heard of it. But the French being more numerous, and Inconveniences lying in the way of making a Diversion, his Majesty declared he would not sacrifice the Lives of his Men in relieving a Town, which being taken, must a few Months hence be restored by Treaty. The same Argument influenced the Besieged, so that it was surrendered the 5th of June. Nothing else was done in Flanders.

In Catalonia the Duke of Vendosme besieged Barcelona, both by Sea and Land. The Prince of Hesse Darmstadt commanded in the Place, and made a brave Resistance. But the French made such Expedition in sending Reinforcements to the Besiegers, and the Spaniards were so slow in sending Relief to the Besieged, that the City was surrendered by Capitulation, after a nine Weeks Resistance.

The Conferences for the Peace went on but slowly, thro' the Difficulties raised by the several Parties. And therefore King William, that he might in Earnest know the Mind of the French with relation to himself, sent the Earl of Portland, who as from himself advanced from the Head of our Army towards that of the Enemy, which lay not far off, and in the Mid-way sent to demand a Conference with Marshal Boufflers, which being granted, the two Generals, attended by an equal Number of Guards, held a Conference, which was repeated three Times. And at last (August the 2d) they retired into a House, where they were accommodated with Pen and Ink, and so adjusted Matters, that on the next Day the King left the Army, and coming to Dieren, dispatched the Lord Portland to acquaint the Confederates, That as to what concerned his Majesty, all Matters were so adjusted with France, that he desired no Delay might be made in the Peace on that Account.

A. D.
1697.

This probably facilitated the Treaty; for not many Weeks after, it was terminated by the Conclusion of a Peace with France, on the Parts of Spain, England, and Holland, which was signed by the Plenipotentiaries of those Nations, September the 20th, N. S. The Ministers of the Emperor, and the Princes of the Empire would not agree to the Terms proposed, but on the contrary protested against what was done, as being a separate Peace contrary to the Terms of the Alliances.

The Treaty therefore was continued longer between the Empire and France, but as that Nation alone could not oppose the whole Strength of France, they agreed to a Cessation of Arms on the 11th of September, and the 30th of October, the Peace on their Part too was signed.

Upon the Conclusion of this Peace great Blame was laid on the English and Dutch, on account of taking too little Care of the Protestant Interest. The French Refugees had Hopes, that at the Conclusion of the Peace they should be allowed to return home: But no Notice had been taken of them in the Treaty. And the Protestant Princes of Germany were enraged to see the Treaty with the Empire allow, that the Exercise of the Roman Catholick Religion should remain settled in the Places that were to be restored by France to their respective Owners, altho' their Ministers contended earnestly for a Clause in favour to the Protestant Religion.

The Imperialists somewhat repined that the Peace was so soon concluded, because on the very Day they made the Truce with France, Prince Eugene obtained a great Victory over the Turks in Hungary, the News whereof came a few Days after.

And on the other hand, News was come that Pointis, who commanded a French Squadron in America, set out at private Expence by the King's Permission, and reinforced by Buccaneers and Volunteers at St. Domingo, came before Carthagena, and having taken some neighbouring Forts, besieged the City both by Sea and Land. The Defence was courageous, but no Relief coming in, the Assailants prevailed, and on the 6th of May the Place was surrendered by Capitulation. The Terms were, that the Garrison should march out, and the Inhabitants depart, but that all the Silver in the Town should be the Prey of the Besiegers. 'Twas not practicable to abide there, and therefore they ruined the Fort, and quitted the Town soon after, carrying away an excessive rich Booty. The English Fleet in those Parts commanded by Admiral Nevil, came up with the French in the Streight of Babama, and were a superior Force. But they however

A. D. 1697. so unskillfully managed it, that the Enemy got off, and arrived safe in France, August the 19th.

Soon after the Conclusion of the Peace, the King created the Lord Jilliers Earl of Jersey, and appointed him his Ambassador at the Hague. And having concerted some important Matters with the Elector of Bavaria (supposed to be the first Partition Treaty) and given private Audience to the French Plenipotentiaries in his Closet, the King returned to England.

The Peace in the mean time was in the usual Form proclaimed at London, October the 19th, by order of the Lords Justices. The Substance of the Articles were as follows:

1. That there be a perpetual Peace between William III. King of Great Britain, and Lewis XIV. the most Christian King.

2. That Enmities and Hostilities cease.

3. That all Offences committed during the War be forgiven.

4. The French King engages, that he will afford no Assistance of any sort to the Enemies of K. William: Or any ways molest him in the Possession of all his Dominions. The King of Great-Britain promises reciprocally the same to the French King.

5. That there be free Commerce between both Nations.

6. That the ordinary Justice of both Kingdoms shall be fairly executed and freely claimed by the Subjects of the other Kingdom, according to the Laws of that where in they reside or have Effects.

7. The most Christian King shall restore all Places which did belong to England before the War, as the King of Great-Britain shall also restore all that did belong to France before the War. Both to be done in six Months time.

8. Commissioners shall be appointed to adjust and determine the Pretensions of both Nations to the Places in Hudson's Bay. But the Places taken by the French during the former Peace, and retaken by the English during this War, shall be left to the French, according to the next preceeding Article. The Capitulation of 1696 to be observed. Commissioners to meet in three Months and determine in six Months all Differences in this Matter.

9. All Letter of Marque and Reprisal shall be void, and none hereafter be granted.

The 10th declared the times when all Captures at Sea are forbid in the different Parts of the World.

11. The Peace shall not be broken between the two Kings by any Act of the Subjects of either thro' Inadvertency, contrary to this Treaty.

12. That in Case of future War between the two Kings, the Subjects of either shall peaceably enjoy their own, and have six Months time to withdraw their Effects.

13. That the Principality of Orange be restored to King William, and the French King to be accountable for all the Profits during the time he has been kept out of it.

14. The Peace concluded at St. Germain between the French King and the Elector of Brandenburgh in 1679 is restored.

15. The Treaty between the French and the Duke of Savoy confirmed.

16. Those named by either King in six Months shall be included in this Treaty; and both Kings express their Thanks to the King of Sweden for his Mediation, and comprehend him in the best Manner in the Peace.

17. The Ratification of this Alliance shall be delivered by both Parties at Ryſwick within three Weeks. And it was ratified accordingly by King William, September 25, and by King Lewis, October 3, N. S.

When his Majesty came to England he was desired by his Subjects to make a publick Entry into London; accordingly having landed the 14th of November at Margate, he lay the 15th at Greenwich, and on the 16th came to London, attended by Prince George, and a very great Train of Nobility in their Coaches. In Southwark the Lord Mayor and Court of Aldermen in their Formalities on Horseback, received his Majesty, and the Lord Mayor alighting, presented the City Sword to him, who returned it, with Order to carry it before him. The Recorder also made a congratulatory Speech, and then the Solemnity proceeded, which consisted of all the City Officers well mounted and well attended by Servants in rich Liveries. The Common Hunt attired in green Velvet bore the King's Banner. Besides the sitting Aldermen, all who had fined for that Office were allowed to wear the Scarlet that Day, whereof there being a large Appearance made that a beautiful Train. The Heralds attended in their Stations, and the Lord Mayor in a Crimson Velvet Gown, wearing the City Collar and Jewel, bore the Sword, riding between the King of Arms and the Usher of the Black Rod, immediately preceding the King's Coach. The King was accompanied by Prince George in a very rich Coach of State, and attended by the Yeomen of the Guard, and his Equeries in very rich Liveries, and followed by the Horse Guards. After which came a very long Train of Coaches of the Nobility all drawn by six Horses. The Way was lin'd by the Train'd Bands through Southwark and to the Exchange, from which the several Li-veries of London placed in Stalls, and clad in their Livery Gowns, made a Lane to Ludgate; from thence the Train'd Bands continued the same to Whitehall. And all the way his Majesty was entertained with the joyful Acclamations of his People, who expressed their hearty Affection by repeated Huzzas.

Immediately upon the Conclusion of the Peace, the King gave Directions for disbanding so many of the Army, as he judged not necessary to be continued on Foot. And accordingly of 87,440 Men the Army consisted of, 51,565 were disbanded forthwith, as appeared by an Account given in to the Lords of the Treasury in December 1697, which was afterwards laid before the Parliament, and the Pay of those Men, which amounted to per Annum 1,070,120 l. ceased immediately, whereas if they had been kept on foot till the Provision for their Pay could be made by Parliament, at least three Months more would have been due, and consequently the Nation saved about 260,000 l. hereby. But this had small Influence on the People; for in the next Session, when the King intimated that it was his Opinion that a competent Number of the Army should be kept on foot to provide against any Breach of Treaty that might happen, wherein an Eye on the Spanish Succession was had; the House was so averse to that Proposal, that they would allow no more than 12,000 Men for Guards and Garrisons to be kept on Foot. And in the next Session they were reduced to 7,000, and even the Dutch Guards, who having attended the King all his Life-time, he had a particular Regard for, were not permitted to remain in England.

The 2d of December was kept holy throughout the Kingdom in Solemn Thanksgiving to Almighty God

A. D.
1697.

God for restoring Peace to the Nation. And it will not be amiss to observe, that on this Day Divine Service was the first time celebrated in the new Fabrick of St. Paul's Cathedral in London.

The next Day, December the 3d, the Parliament met, and the King made a Speech, wherein he told them, That the War he entred into by Advice of his People, was by the Blessing of God, and their zealous Assistance, brought to the desir'd end, an honourable Peace. He was sorry his Subjects could not immediately find all the Relief he desired, for the Funds given for the last Year's Service fell so short of answering what they were given for, that there were considerable Deficiencies, and a Debt remained upon both the Fleet and Army. That the Revenues of the Crown were so anticipated for publick Uses, that there was nothing left for the Civil List. 'I can never distrust (said his Majesty) that you will suffer this to turn to my Disadvantage, but will provide for me during my Life, in such a Manner, as may be for my Honour, and for the Honour of the Government.' Then he told them that the Navy being increased to near double what it was, the Charge of maintaining it was proportionably enlarged, which ought to be provided for. He declared also, That the Circumstances of Affairs abroad at present were such, that England could not be safe without a Land Force. Recommended to them the Consideration of these Things. And then declared his hearty Affection to his People, and his Resolution to correct all Abuses that may have crept into the Administration during the War, and effectually to suppress Profaneness and Atheism.

Both Houses addressed the King with their Thanks and Congratulations, and Assurances of Affection and Duty.

The Business of this Session, which lasted long, consisted chiefly of these Particulars :

1. Debates about the Army, upon the King's Motion that Part of it be kept on Foot.

2. Providing Supplies for the Deficiencies, Debts, Civil Lists, Navy, Guards and Garrisons, &c.

3. Establishing a new East India Company.

4. Punishing Smugglers of French Goods.

And 5. Enquiring into and punishing the false Endorsers of Exchequer Bills.

Upon the first, the Debates were long; the King's Friends pleaded for continuing Part of the Army on Foot, because the Nation was still unsettled, and the just Fears of King James not quite removed, the Friends of that Prince being still bold and numerous, and because the French King still kept his whole Army up, and was thereby ready to break the Peace at that Time. But the other Side collecting together all the Arguments against a standing Army, and setting forth in the most lively Manner the Inconveniencies and Danger to the People arising from it: And no Man at that Time daring to mention the principal Argument, which was the approaching Death of the King of Spain, in which case, if we with the Confederates have no Army to oppose him, France may possibly seize that Crown: I say, this being not proper to mention then, the Court Party were extreemly outvoted, and it was resolved, That the Army should be disbanded, and no more than 12,000 be kept on foot.

Upon the second, it was voted, December 9, That a Supply be granted to his Majesty. And in order to state the Quantum, Accounts were were ordered to be laid before them of the Deficiencies; the Arrears to the Army and Navy; and the other Debts. By these Accounts it appear'd, that the Deficiencies amounted to 1,476,000 l. The Arrears due to the Army were 2,348,102 l. To the Navy 1,392,742 l. whereof 155,502 l. remained in the Treasurer's Hand. To the Ordnance 204,157 l. Subsidies to the Allies 177,000 l. For Bread and Forage 20,000 l. To Transports 466,493 l. And the old Clothing Debt of King Charles's Time 49,929 l. The whole Debt being known, it was found to be too large to be paid in one Year, and therefore they proceeded to state the Proportion that should now be paid. Upon which it was resolved, that upon the disbanding of the Army a Bounty shall be given to the Officers and Soldiers, for which Service there was voted 250,000 l. That the Clearings for the whole Army to April 1693, amounting to 139,066 l. should be paid. That the Subsistence to the Army in England for the Year 1696, and to August 1697, amounting to 203,450 l. be paid. Also the Subsistence for the Army in Flanders to October 1697, amounting to 405,816 l. be paid, That the Subsistence of the same Army to the End of December 1697, amounting to 137,990 l. be also paid. That 50,000 l. due to the General Officers be paid. That 1,100,117 l. be raised for the Navy. That 60,000 be raised for the Ordnance. And that Provision be made towards the paying the Principal and Interest of the Transport Debt.

It was afterwards resolved, that 350,000 l. be raised for Guards and Garrisons for one Year. And lastly, that 700,000 l. per Annum be settled upon his Majesty for his Life for the Civil List.

The Total of these, besides the Civil List, amounted to 3,967,439 l.

To supply this great Sum there was laid 3 s. per Pound on Land. The Poll and Capitation Tax was continued, some Duties at the Custom-House, and the Tax upon Hawkers and Pedlars were laid for three Years. And for a Fund to raise Annuities of 8 per Cent. for two Millions, so which the East India Trade was added, an Additional Duty of Salt was imposed, and the Stamp Duty doubled. For the Civil List it was enacted, That the Hereditary and Temporary Excise, an additional Subsidy of Tonnage and Poundage, the Post Office and the small Branches of the Crown Revenue, shall be applied to raise 700,000 l. per Annum, during his Majesty's Life. And the Overplus, produced by those Revenues, shall be applied as hereafter shall be directed by Parliament.

The Third, namely, settling the East India Trade, the House took great Care in, by imposing such Conditions on that Trade as might render it in the best Manner beneficial to the Nation.

The Old Company had offered 700,000 l. to be established by Act of Parliament. But others who desired to be concerned in that Trade, proposed to raise two Millions of Money at an Interest of 8 per Cent. redeemable by Parliament after a Term of Years, provided such Subscribers may enjoy solely the Trade to the East Indies. This Proposal was accepted, and it was accordingly enacted, That such Subscribers and no other Person whatsoever, shall have Liberty to trade to India, for so much Money every Year as they respectively subscribe and pay in towards raising the said two Millions. They were not obliged to be one joint Stock. But one Moiety of the said Sum being subscrib'd, such Subscribers may be incorporated at their Request, and enjoy

A. D.
1697.

A. D.
1697.

joy so much of the Trade to India, as their Subscription amounts to. That all Ships Trading to India, shall give Security that they will not unlade or break Bulk till they arrive in England. All Goods imported thence shall be sold publickly by the Candle. Every Person trading to India, except the Company, shall enter the Goods they export, that it may be seen they trade for no more than they are allowed. And all such separate Traders shall pay 5 per Cent. ad Valorem, as they produce on Sale here, to the Company, towards the Charge of Ambassadors, Forts, &c. Lastly, That on Repayment of these two Millions after September 1711, this Privilege shall cease. It was provided that the old East India Company should be allow'd three Years, to bring home their Effects, and then that Corporation to cease. It was also enacted, that the old Company should pay all their Debts, and make no Dividend till that be done. The old Company made great Opposition to the passing of this Bill, but ineffectually, for it went thro' both Houses, and received the Royal Assent.

Upon the Fourth, the House proceeded smartly. A Company had been established here for making Alamodes and Lustrings, a sort of wrought Silk, that we had always hitherto had from France, and an Act had passed last Session for more effectual prohibiting the Importation of French Lustrings in favour of that Manufacture here; but it seems we had a set of Men who were cunning enough to defeat all Laws, and found out Means to import great Quantities of that Commodity. Complaint whereof being made in the House, a Committee was appointed to enquire into it. Who reported, that the Lustring Company, by employing many Hands, is beneficial to the Nation. That divers Persons, whom they named, had been guilty of keeping unlawful Correspondence with France, and clandestinely importing French Lustrings. Which appeared by Letters under their own Hands, and by their respective Books of Accounts, which being seized, made the Fact plain. The House ordered those Persons named, being Ten in Number, and Merchants of London, to be taken into Custody, and then impeached them at the Lords Bar of High Crimes and Misdemeanors. And soon after, viz. about the Middle of June, a Scaffold being erected in Westminster Hall for the Reception of both Houses, they were brought to the Bar. But had not Courage enough to stand Trial, and in hopes of Favour confessed their Guilt. On the 4th of July, the Commons demanding Judgment at the Lords Bar, that House imposed Fines upon the several Offenders proportionable to the Offences proved against them. The highest was Ten Thousand Pounds, the lowest One Thousand Pounds, except one only, on whom no more than 500 l. was laid. The whole amounting to 19,500 l. was, pursuant to the Address of the House of Commons to the King, applied to the Building of Greenwich Hospital.

The Fifth was a Matter of less Importance, and therefore tho' its Occurrence earlier, is put last. When Exchequer Bills were first issued, it was foreseen that without Provision to prevent it, they would necessarily be discounted at great Rates. Wherefore a Provision was made by Parliament for contracting with such Persons as would voluntarily undertake it, to take in and pay ready Money for all Bills brought to them, which had first been paid into the Exchequer.

But in regard the Number of those Bills were more than would answer the present Payment to the King, in all which they were to be taken for Money, there was a Discount upon them of 5 per Cent. Now some of the Receivers of the Revenue, for the sake of this Profit, brought in Bills at the Discount, and then endorsed them as if regularly paid into the Revenue, sent them to the Circulators, and received the full Money. This was a palpable Cheat; and therefore when the House of Commons were informed of it, they immediately set to work to enquire into it, and punish it. And it appearing to them that Mr. Duncomb Receiver General of the Customs, Mr. Knight Treasurer of the Excise-Office, and Mr. Marryot of the Exchequer, were guilty of this Crime: The two first, who were Members, were expelled the House, and committed to the Tower, and the rest to Newgate. Marryot confessed, and was Evidence against the rest. Altho' the Crime was heinous, and such as being indulged would ruin the Credit of Exchequer Bills, yet no Law would reach to punish them, and therefore the House thought fit to bring in a Bill on purpose to fine them. That Bill quickly passed the House of Commons, but the Fine upon Mr. Duncomb being adjudged too high, it was lost in the House of Lords by the Majority of one Voice.

Other Transactions of less Moment we shall pass over, and proceed to say, that on the 5th of July the King came to the House, and passed what other Bills besides those already passed were ready. He made a Speech, and then the Parliament was prorogued, and soon after dissolved, and another appointed to be elected against the 24th of August.

Events of any Note that happened during the Session were these: On the 5th of December, 1697. Mr. Vernon was made Secretary of State. And at the same time, the Earl of Sunderland surrendered his Office of Lord Chamberlain, occasioned by some Distaste the Parliament had taken, that that Lord was so favoured by the King. On the 5th of January, an unhappy Fire broke out at Whitehall, which destroyed the whole Palace, except the Banqueting-House. Upon the 10th of January, the Earl of Portland set out for France, as his Majesty's Ambassador to that Court, where he made a most illustrious Entry March the 9th, N. S. and held most noble Port during the Time he staid there, which was three Months, during all which time he was extremely honoured and carested. On the 19th of March, Count Tallard, Ambassador from the French King, arrived at London, and some time after made his publick Entry. In the middle of June, a Family for his Royal Highness the Duke of Gloucester was formed, the Earl of Marlborough being appointed his Governor, and the Bishop of Sarum his Preceptor. In July, Christopher Vane, Esq; was created Baron of England, by the Title of Lord Barnard of Barnard Castle in Durham. And on the 19th of July, the Parliament met in Scotland.

Peter Alexowitz, Czar of Muscovy, being endowed with a Mind for Wisdom, and a Genius for Arts superior to what his Ancestors had enjoyed, was sensible of the unpoliteness of his own Nation, and meditated the means of raising the Reputation of Muscovy, suitable to the Extent of its Dominion. And considering that one great Reason of his People's continuance in their old sordid Customs, without Participation of the Improvements which

A. D.
1697.

all

A. D.
1697.

all other Nations were daily making, was chiefly owing to the Law which forbade the People of Muscovy to travel; resolved to break through that Law himself in Person, and take a Journey into Foreign Countries; which he accordingly put in Execution this Summer, and having visited the Courts of Poland, Denmark, Saxony, Hanover, and the rest in that Part of Germany, came down into Holland, where he had an Interview with King William, who inviting him to his Court, his Czarian Majesty came over hither in Jan. 1697-8, and was entertained by the King with all the Respect due to his Character. But as he desired to be incognito, he took a private Lodging, and busied himself in inspecting the Art of Ship-building, and acquiring Knowledge in the Mathematical Sciences. He tarried here some Months, and visited the Universities and other notable Places, and when he returned, divers Ship Carpenters went along with him, and were employed afterwards in his Docks at Woronitz, to their very good Profit and Satisfaction.

The King's Affairs still, notwithstanding the Termination of the War, calling him over into Holland, his Majesty departed the 21st of July, having constituted Nine Lords Justices, and arrived the next Day.

It hath been already said, that the Parliament of England expressed great Resentments against those, who in London had subscribed to the Scotch East India Company, and voted Impeachments against them, and that both Houses addressed the King against it. This occasioned the King to discountenance that Company; and for that Reason, a Complaint was exhibited this Summer in the Scotch Parliament, by the Council General of the Company, trading to Africa and the Indies, The Substance whereof is as follows, viz.

That their Company being established by solemn Acts, and Letters Patents, with Liberty for Strangers to be of it, they had made an Offer to the English of coming into it, who embraced that Offer, and subscribed 300,000 l. to it. That the Parliament of England had not only addressed the King for frustrating the Ends of the said Acts, but also summoned and accused several Persons thereupon. Which so disappointed and retarded it, as forced them to quit the Enterprize. That they also received all possible Encouragement at Hamburg, where the Merchants had contracted to subscribe 200,000 l. but a Stop was put to it by an English Minister there, who, by special Warrant from his Majesty, gave in a Memorial to the Senate, disowning the Authority of the said Acts and Patents, and threatening them with his Majesty's utmost Displeasure, if their Subjects joined in the said Company. Wherefore tho' many Merchants of that City did afterwards subscribe into it, the Condition of that Subscription being that his Majesty's Approbation should be obtained, those Subscriptions were ineffectual, and thereby their whole Proceedings were discouraged. That the Prospect of these Assistances having induced them to make greater Preparations for Traffick than they should otherwise have done, their Loss by the Disappointment was the greater. They therefore prayed, that their Case might be considered, their Company vindicated by supporting the Credit of the said Acts and Patent, their Losses repaired, and their time lengthened in Consideration of what was already elapsed without Execution, by reason of those Obstruction-

ons. This Petition was delivered the 22d of July, and on the 5th of August, the Parliament resolved upon an Address, wherein the said Complaint being set forth, They entreated his Majesty to take such Measures as might effectually vindicate the undoubted Rights of the said Company, and support the Credit and Interest thereof. The Heats and Debates about this Affair continued all this Session, which terminated Nov. 25.

The Parliament in Ireland met the 27th of September. To whom the Lords Justices recommended the Improvement of the Linnen Manufactory; the Payment of the Debts of the Nation; supporting the Establishment of the Forces; the providing Money for building Barracks; and an Inspection into the remiss Payment of the Poll-Tax. The Parliament complied with the Requests made to them, and made the necessary Provisions accordingly.

The Affairs abroad this Year, wherein England bore any Share, were, the First Partition Treaty, and the Treaty of the Peace, between the Turks and the Confederates, that had been so long at War with them.

While the King was at Loo this Summer, the Count de Tallard waited upon him there, and prosecuted an Overture which had been already made, of coming to an Agreement concerning the Succession to the Crown of Spain. The King wrote to the Lord Sommers, and the Earl of Portland wrote to Secretary Vernon about it, with orders to both of being very cautious in communicating it, wherefore only the Duke of Shrewsbury, Lord Oxford, and Mr. Mountague, were made acquainted with it. The Result of all whose Opinions was transmitted to his Majesty by the Lord Sommers, whose Letter having been printed, we shall refer the Reader to it, as being too long to have Place here, and shall only say, that they proposed to his Majesty all the Objections before hand, which upon the Publication of this Treaty were afterwards made. The Treaty in the mean Time went on, and on the 29th of August, N. S. was concluded. The Conditions whereof were.

I. That the Peace of Ryswick should be confirmed. II. That, in Consideration of the ill State of the King of Spain's Health, and for preserving the publick Peace in case of his Death without Issue, Naples and Sicily, the Towns belonging to Spain on the Coasts of Tuscany, and the Marquisate of Final on that side of Spain; and the Province of Guipuscoa, with Fontarabia, St. Sebastian, and Port Passage, on the other Side of Spain, should be given to the Dauphin, in consideration of his Claim to the Crown of Spain. III. That Spain and the Spanish West-Indies, &c. should descend to the Electoral Prince of Bavaria. IV. That the Dutchy of Milan should be given to the Archduke Charles, the Emperor's second Son. But the young Prince of Bavaria dying soon after, a second Treaty was made the next Year, wherein the Archduke Charles was put in his Place.

This Treaty was the Ruin of King William's Reputation. He had hitherto been esteemed the best Politician, as well as the best Soldier, but France so outwitted him in this, that his Character sunk with all the World. For (besides all other Objections) as he had only the French King's Word that he would abide by this Treaty, which indeed 'tis said he so far gave us as to declare by Letter under his own Hand, that even a Will of the King of Spain in favour of his Son, should not alter it, it, 'twas universally thought by his best Friends, that the Security was not strong enough. And so it appeared, for the French Court immediately set to work at Madrid to destroy it. And even this very Summer, their Ambassador the Marquis de Harcourt was busy with the Grande, in his Insinuations against the House of Austria. But the Queen, who was nearly related to the Emperor, laboured hard with the King her Husband to support the Interest of that Family, and to get a Ratification of the Will of Philip IV. his Father, whereby the Succession, in default of Issue by his Son, was settled upon the German Branch of the Ausrian Family.

A. D.
1698.

The other Foreign Affair, wherein we were concerned, was the Peace between the Turks and the Confederate Christian Princes. Wherein our King was Mediator, and exceedingly instrumental. The Traffick our Nation maintains in the Dominions of the Grand Seignior, hath always made our Ambassador at the Port respected, and therefore the King's Overture of mediating a Peace which they very much wanted, was acceptable enough.

The Lord Paget was at this time the King's Ambassador at Constantinople; he was in the Year 1689 sent over Envoy extraordinary to the Emperor, with whom he had resided ever since: But Sir William Hussy first, and afterward Mr. Harbord, who was sent to succeed him at Constantinople, both dying, the Lord Paget was removed thither, and now, in Conjunction with Mr. Collier the Dutch Ambassador, had the Honour to mediate and perfect this Peace. About the middle of August, they arrived at the Turkish Camp near Belgrade; and soon after they fixed the Place of Treaty to be at Carlowitz, a small Town in Sclavonia, between Peterwaradin and Salankement; the Turkish Ministers residing at the last Place, the Confederates at the first, and the Mediators between both. The first Conferences were held Nov. 7. and were so well pursued, that by the 25th of December, 1698, a Truce for two Years was concluded between the Muscovite and the Turk, and on the 27th of January the Emperor and the Poles concluded the Peace on their Parts, and the Venetians did the same a Month after.

His Majesty arrived in England on the 3d of December; and three Days after the Parliament met, and having chosen Sir Thomas Littleton Speaker, the King made a Speech; wherein he recommended to them the Consideration of what Strength ought to be kept at Sea, and what Force maintained at Land the next Year for the Security of the Nation, and to preserve the Influence England at that Time had on the Councils of all Europe. He also recommended to them the making a farther Progress in the Payment of the Publick Debts. And wished they could find out some way of employing the Poor and encouraging Trade.

This House of Commons were as little disposed to comply with the King's Desire in respect to a standing Force as the last, nay, less, for they seemed to think it lay upon them to perfect what the other had but begun in that Matter, and therefore voted on the 16th of December, That all the Land Forces in England should be reduced to 7,000 Men, and those to be all his Majesty's natural born Subjects. And that the Forces in Ireland be reduced to 1200 Men. All above those Numbers being ordered to be disbanded. The King struggled hard for preserving his Dutch Guards, but could not obtain it. The Number of Men to be kept at Sea was agreed to be 5,000, to consist of Seamen only. So jealous were they of the King's keeping up any of the Army under the Colour of Marines. For the Maintenance of these they gave an Aid of 1,484,015 l. by a Land Tax and Subsidy of 3s. in the Pound. Wherein a Clause was added to empower the Earl of Drogheda, Francis Annesly, John Trenchard, James Hamilton, Sir Richard Leving, and Sir Francis Brewster, or any four of them, as Commissioners, to take an account of the Estates forfeited in Ireland during the Rebellion, and since Feb. 1688, and the Quality, Nature and Value of all such Estates, as also the Grants and Disposition thereof.

15,000,

The Debates of this Session took up much Time, altho' the Business transacted was not much. Several Bills passed as usual, but none of them of so publick a Nature as to deserve Place in History. Some Complaints were made by the House in an Address to the King, April 3. of Mismanagements in the Navy, which the Earl of Orford taking to be levelled at him, he wisely surrendered his Places. The House of Commons resolved March the 28th, that Provision should be made for paying off divers of the publick Debts; but as they made no Progress in it, 'tis needless to say more of it. At last, May 4, the King came to the House, and having passed many Acts, made a Speech, and then the Parliament was prorogued the 1st of June.

The other publick Acts at this time were these: The Earl of Warwick and Lord Mohun were severally tried at Westminster in the latter end of March by the House of Peers, for the Murther of Richard Coote, Esq; they were both acquitted of further, but the Earl of Warwick was found guilty of Manslaughter. The Earl of Jersey, who had been Ambassador in France after the Earl of Portland, was now upon his return made Secretary of State May 14. and the Earl of Manchester was named for Ambassador to France. The Earl of Pembroke was made President of the Council, and the Lord Lonsdale Lord Privy-Seal.

The Scotch East India Company making fresh Complaints, they were answered, that their Ships were arrived on the Coast of America, the particular Design whereof the King was acquainted with. To which they replied, that they had landed at Darien, upon the Isthmus of America, where the Spaniards had no Colony or Settlements, and were kindly received by the Inhabitants, and thought they might, without injuring the Spaniards, make a Settlement there, and carry on a fair Trade, which they conceived might be of great Advantage to the Nation. Bar the King of Spain in the mean time having complained of this as an Invasion of his Territories (for it seems the Spaniards had possessed that Country as long as the Unwholsomeness of the Air would give them leave) and a breach of the Alliance, the King gave Orders to the Governors of the Plantations to afford them no Relief or Assistance; accordingly in April this Year Proclamations were issued at Jamaica, Barbadoes, New-England, and New-York, to forbid all Commerce with the Scots of Darien. The Spaniards at the same time came down with Arms against them, so that they were soon after obliged to quit that Settlement, having again in vain petitioned the King for Protection.

The Parliament in Ireland sat last Winter, and made a Provision for maintaining the 1,200 Men, which the English Parliament had voted should be kept up there, and for the Building and finishing the Baraques.

A. D.
1699.

raques. They also passed divers good Acts for the Service of the Country, which having received the Royal Assent, the Parliament was prorogued. And not long after a Commission was sent over, constituting the Duke of Bolton, the Earl of Berkley, and the Earl of Galloway, Lords Justices of Ireland.

The King went over to Holland, and landed there June the 3d. His Majesty received the Visits and Compliments of all the Foreign Ministers. But especially he received Letters from the Grand Seignior, and from the Czar of Muscovy, in acknowledgment of his Majesty's good Office in mediating the Peace.

The King returned to England, October the 17th. And the Parliament met the 6th of November following. The Speech was more than ordinary Gracious, in order to put them into good Humour. A Provision for the Safety of the Kingdom both by Sea and Land, and the making good the Deficiencies, together with the Payment of a Debt due to the Prince of Denmark, were the principal Matters that his Majesty recommended to their Care.

The House of Commons from the beginning of the Session discovered an Aspect unfavorable to the Court. On the 4th of December they presented an Address to the King of Complaint, as if some about his Majesty had endeavoured to misrepresent and create Dissatisfaction in his Majesty against them. To which the King in the frankest manner declared, that their Apprehension was groundless.

We told you that a Clause was added in the Land Tax last Session, to empower Commissioners to take account of the forfeited Estates in Ireland. Those Commissioners now made their Report, the Substance whereof was, That the number of Persons that were outlawed were 3,921. Whereof 1,283 had been allowed to reverse those Outlawries by Adjudications, as included in the Articles of Limerick and Galloway, or otherwise exempted. That the Total of the Lands forfeited to the Crown by those Outlawries, were 1,060,792 Acres. The Value whereof, reckoning Lives at six Years Purchase, and Inheritance at thirteen Years Purchase, amounted to 2,685,130*l*. Whereof there had been restored by Accusations as aforesaid 233,106 Acres. The Value whereof was 784,923 l. That Incumbrances and several Deductions necessary to be made, amounted to the Value of near 300,000 l. more. So that the Neat Value amounted to but 1,699,343 l. Besides the Estate granted to Mrs. Villers, the Rents whereof were 25,999*l*. the total Value, 337,943 l. Note, This was the private Estate of King James while Duke of York, and was granted but for the Term of his Life, after which it would descend to the Princess of Denmark.

This Report extended into length, by reason that all the Circumstances relating to Grants, Sales, Wastes, Fees, for favour in reserving Outlawries, and what else could be put in by the smartest Inquisitor, were exhibited. Two of the Commissioners, Sir Richard Leving, and Sir Francis Brewster, did not sign the Report, and for that Reason were allowed but 500 l. each, whereas the rest had each 1000 l. assigned them out of the Forfeitures. Moreover, Sir R. Leving was committed to the Tower, upon Occasion of his having said, that a certain Member of the House wrote to the Commissioners to make a separate Article of the Lady Orkney's [Mrs. Villiers's] Grant, because that might reflect upon some Body. Every Body knew that the King had a great Affection for that Lady, but those that knew him most intimately, discharged him of any Crime in it, which being spoken of in the House, and the Person from whom it came denying it, Sir Richard was voted the Author of an Asperſion, and committed.

Upon the 15th of Dec. it was reſolved, That a Bill be brought in to apply all the forfeited Eſtates and Interests in Ireland, and all the Rents and Revenues accrued to the Crown ſince Feb. 13, 1688, to the Uſe of the Publick. They reſolved alſo, That no Petitions ſhould be received touching the Grants or forfeited Eſtates. Jan. 18. and Feb. 13. they paſſed ſevere Votes againſt thoſe that had procured, and the Miniſters that had paſſed, Grants of the forfeited Eſtates. And laſtly, they voted, That the forfeited Eſtates ſhould be applied for the paying off the Army. It was ordered, That the Report with the ſeveral Votes now made and thoſe in former Years relating to the forfeited Eſtates, ſhould be printed and publiſhed. To ſecure the paſſing of this Bill, it was tack'd to the Land Tax; however an Attempt was made of dropping it in the Houſe of Lords, which put the Houſe of Commons into ſuch a Ferment, that the King ſent to the Lords to paſs it without the Amendments which they had made to it.

Upon the Buſineſs of the Supply it was voted, That 7000 Men ſhould be the Guard at Sea next Year, and Proviſion was made for their Pay. That 90,000 l. be raiſed for the extraordinary Charge of the Navy; 800 l. for Bounty Money to the Officers of the Fleet; 25,000 l. for the Ordnance, and 300,000 l. for Guards and Garrifons, which they ſuſtained by a Land-Tax of 2s. per Pound, and by continuing ſeveral Duties at the Cuſtom-Houſe. The Houſe alſo made a Proviſion for paying a Debt due to his Royal Highneſs upon his Marriage Settlement. A. D. 1699.

Upon Occaſion of the Lords attempting to throw out the Reſumption Bill, the Commons voted an Addreſs to the King, That no Perſon, who was not a Native of his Dominions, except his Royal Highneſs, be admitted to his Maſteſty's Councils. This was voted April the 10th, 1700. But the King thought fit to prevent their preſenting it, by coming to the Houſe the next Day and paſſing all the other Acts that were ready, among which was an Act for continuing the Old East India Company a Corporation. And then the Parliament were prorogued to the 23d of May. It was remarkable, that the King made no Speech to them, for indeed they had uſed him too hardly to expect his Thanks as uſual.

Another Matter which gave the King Diſturbance was the Affair of the Scotch East-India Company. A Petition from them to the King was ſent to London in December, in behalf of a Captain of one of their Ships, who went into Carthagera to reſit, and was there detained with thirteen of his Men, and very hardly treated. But the Lord Baſil Hamilton, who brought it, having not waited upon his Maſteſty, when he was formerly at London, or given any Teſtimony of having owned his Government; the King would not admit him to his Preſence, but allowed him to deliver it to the Secretary. And the King answered the Company, that he would demand of the King of Spain the Release of the Captain and his Crew. The Company were nettled at the denying acceſs to the Lord Hamilton, and expoſtulated upon it, but to no Purpoſe; for on the 12th of February the Houſe of Lords in England preſented an Addreſs to the King, representing that the Scots Settlement at Darien might tend to the great Prejudice of England, and possibly the Disturbance of the Peace with Spain. And said as much as decently could be to discourage them from proceeding in that Affair, having already voted, that the Settlement at Darien was inconsistent with the Good of the Plantation Trade. Soon after the Scots made a national Address upon this Affair, with large Subscriptions, which was presented to the King on the 25th of March.

A. D.
1700.

During the Sitting of the Parliament, the second Partition Treaty was made, whereby the Archduke Charles was to have all the Spanish Monarchy, except what was by the former Treaty assigned to the Dauphin; and the Duke of Lorrain was to have Milan instead of his own Country, which was to be given to France.

The King made a Step now which occasioned much Censure from his old Friends; the Lord Sommers had been attacked in the House of Commons this Session, but the Majority appeared in his Favour, and so the Question for an Address to the King to remove him from his Councils, passed in the Negative. Whether for this Reason, or in hopes by changing the Ministry he might gain the Favour of the Party in the House, which appeared so much against the Court, the King was pleased to take the Great Seal from the Lord Sommers, and on the 21st of May to give it to Sir Nathan Wright.

A new Favourite had of late grown up at Court, Mr. Keppel, whom the King created Earl of Albemarle, and now further honoured by the bestowing on him a Garter; in which Order he, together with the Lord Pembroke, were installed June 5. And soon after the Lord Jersey was made Lord Chamberlain.

The Parliament of Scotland met on the 21st of May, to whom the Duke of Queensbury the High Commissioner delivered the King's Letter, which contained in general Terms, Assurances of his Favour and Protection, desiring that the Forces be maintained, and a Supply given for that Purpose, and referring what was necessary to be done to the High Commissioner. The Council General of the African and Indian Company immediately made a Representation to the Parliament of their Case; and an Address on their Behalf from one County was the next Day presented to the House, and many other Counties and several particular Persons were preparing the same, against pretended Grievances, which came in apace; and a Vote was proposed in the House, That the Colony of Calabria in Darien was a Legal and Rightful Settlement, and that the Parliament would maintain and support it. All which gave Occasion to the High Commissioner to adjourn the Parliament for three Days, and afterwards for a longer Time. This gave such Offence, that a Number of the Members drew up an Address to the King, complaining of it; which being presented, the King would have put it off, by saying he would consider of it; but the Commissioners who brought it, waited upon him again for an Answer; which however he declined to give at present. The Scots formed another national Address, which occasioned the King to write a Letter to the Privy Council, wherein he declared his Sorrow for the Nation's Loss, and his Willingness to give any possible Relief; exhorting them to consider their own Security, and avoid Differences that might give Advantage to Enemies; and concluding with telling them, them, his Occasions calling him abroad was the Reason of this Adjournment.

The Rancour which the Scots conceived against this ill Usage, as they esteemed it, from the English, continued with such Virulence, that it had like to have produced very ill Effects, as will be seen in the course of this History.

The King having on the 27th of June appointed Lords Justices, soon after went over into Holland.

It was this Summer that the Nation lost that growing Hopes of it, the illustrious Prince William Duke of Gloucester. His Highness having been more than ordinary Active at the publick Entertainment on his Birth-Day, wherein to gratify the Ladies he danced much, and being too negligent of himself when he was hot, he was taken ill the next Day, which proved a Fever, and increased daily in its Malignity, till on the fifth Day of his Sickness, July 29, his Highness expired, to the unspeakable Grief of his Parents. And that the whole Nation did not sufficiently bewail him, can be only attributed to his being Unknown; for this young Prince was endowed with all those excellent Qualities that render Men valuable in the World. His Mind was as elevated as his Fortune, and his Virtue and Genius as superior as his Birth. The Number of his Years was yet but Ten. But his Proficiency in Knowledge, and Manliness of Behaviour, was equal to almost double that Age. Besides a surprising Proficiency in Languages, whereof Latin and French were familiar to him, he had a great Knowledge in History, Geography, and the Military Arts: And had so quick Genius and docile a Temper, that Science would have been too hard for him, if it had pleased God to have spared his Life.

England having a share in a Foreign Event which happened this Summer, it cannot be passed over in Silence. The Kings of Poland and Denmark, with the Czar of Muscovy, had entered into Confederacy against the young King of Sweden. And the Danish Troops invaded Holstein, whose Duke was Brother in-Law and Ally to the King of Sweden. Peaceable Applications were made to divert this Storm, which all proving ineffectual, King William and the States-General generously resolved to rescue the Oppressed. And accordingly sent a Squadron of 30 Men of War, who entered the Sound the 29th of July, which drove the Danish Fleet Home, and obliged that Monarch to agree to such Terms as the Mediators thought just; so that on the 18th of August a Peace was concluded at Travendal, between Sweden and Denmark, and Holstein.

The Earl of Rochester being Lord Lieutenant of Ireland, went over thither to execute in Person that Office. He arrived at Dublin September the 18th, and was received with all possible Honour and Respect. His Lordship remained there all the Winter.

The King returned to England on the 18th of October, and ten Days after the Parliament of Scotland assembled. The King's Letter to them was very Gracious, but declared his Concern for not being able to assert the Company's Right of establishing a Colony at Darien without disturbing the Peace of Europe, and bringing the Nation into a War, and recommended to them the raising of competent Taxes for their Defence.

Since the last Session, News arrived that the Colony at Darien had been forced to abandon that Settlement, which increased the Fury of the Adventurers, and occasioned a National Address to the Parliament, which contained a vast Complaint of Grievances, and gave rise to long Debates in the House. But at last the King's Friends stemmed the Tide so well, that on the 21st of January a Vote passed in these Terms, 'That in Consideration of their great Deliverance by his Majesty, and that next under God their Safety and Happiness depended wholly on the Preservation of his Person and Government, they would support both to the utmost of their Power, and maintain such Forces as should be requisite for those Ends.' And accordingly they made Provision for maintaining 3000 Men till the 1st of December, 1702.

A. D.
1700.

And now came on that great Affair, the Succession to the Spanish Monarchy. By the Partition Treaty, as we have told you, it was to have been divided between the two Claimants; but when this Treaty came to be communicated to the Emperor he utterly refused it. The other States of Europe, who were desired to be Guarantees, declined it. And the Court of Spain inveighed against it. All which gave the French such Opportunity to push on the Interest of Philip Duke of Anjou second Son of the Dauphin of France, that the crazy King of Spain was prevailed upon by his Will to appoint that Prince his universal Heir, and a Month after, namely, Nov. 1. N. S. departed this Life. The French King, notwithstanding his fair Promises when the Treaty was made, accepted the Will, and immediately declared his Grandson King of Spain. This put King William to great Perplexity, for we and the Dutch being quite disarmed, and our Parliament in such Disposition that the King could expect no Relief that Way, he was so perfectly incapable of opposing the French, that he could not promise the Elector of Bavaria Protection, when he offered to maintain the Netherlands. And thereby that Prince was forced to make his Peace with France, by surrendering the strong Towns into the Hands of King Philip.

The French immediately demanded of the Dutch a Recognition of King Philip's Titles, and upon Hesitation seized all the Garrisons they had in the Spanish Towns in Flanders; which forced them to acquiesce: Nor could our King avoid doing the same Thing soon after.

December 19. The Parliament was dissolved, and another called to meet the 6th of February. And in the mean Time the King made some Promotions. The Earl of Rocheester as we have said, was made Lord Lieutenant of Ireland. The Lord Godolphin first Commissioner of the Treasury in the room of Mr. Montague, who was not long before created a Baron, by the Title of Lord Halifax, and made Auditor of the Exchequer. The Earl of Tankerville was made Lord Privy-Seal in the Place of the Lord Lonsdale deceased, and Sir Charles Hedges was made Secretary of State in the room of the Lord Jersey.

The Parliament met on the 6th of February. and chose Robert Harley, Esq; Speaker. And then the King made his Speech as usual. The Substance whereof was, That the Death of the Duke of Gloucester made it necessary to make a farther provision for the Succession in the Protestant Line. That the present State of Affairs, embroiled by the Death of the King of Spain, merited their Consideration. And wished the Commons to supply the Deficiencies, and provide for the Navy.

A. D.
1700.

The Commons made some General Votes which testified a due Respect and Loyalty to his Majesty, viz. That they would stand by and support his Majesty and his Government. And another to desire the King to enter into such Negotiations and Treaties with the States General and other Potentates, as might conduce to the Safety of these Kingdoms and the Netherlands. And on the 3d of March, the House having taken into Consideration that part of the King's Speech relating to the Succession, came to this Resolution: 'That for preserving the Peace and Happiness of this Kingdom, and the Security of the Protestant Religion, it was absolutely necessary that a further Provision be made for the Limitation and Succession in the Protestant Line'. Which was afterwards made good by the Act for limiting the Succession, as we shall have occasion to shew by and by.

The Grand Affair of this Session, and that which took up most of their Time, was the Partition Treaty. Both Houses Addressed against it; and the Enemies of the Court gave themselves full Liberty in railing at it, and even within the Walls of the House, one Member had the Presumption to call it a Felonious Treaty. What the Commons seemed to insist most upon was, That this Treaty was concluded during the sitting of Parliament without consulting them. And that such large Territories of the King of Spain's Dominions were given to the French. But no Mortal was allowed to plead in the King's behalf, that France could not be expected to forego its Claim to the Spanish Crown, but upon good advantageous Terms. That without coming to some previous Agreement, the French would at once be Masters of the Spanish Monarchy, since they kept up their Armies; whereas all the Confederates had Disbanded theirs. And Lastly, that the French being Masters of Spain would be able to put what Checks they pleased on the English Trade thither. To this might have been added, that the King having no manner of Interest or Advantage in making this Treaty it could not possibly be the Effect of any Thing but his Care to prevent an immediate War. I say, these Arguments would not be listened to, altho' it was actually come to pass. But the Cry was that the Partition-Treaty produced the Will. As if without the Partition-Treaty, France would have patiently submitted to a Will against him; or that the Spaniards were singly able to keep him out.

The House of Commons impeached the Earl of Portland of High Crimes and Misdemeanors for having transacted the Partition-Treaty. And proceeded further to impeach the Lord Sommers, Orford, and Halifax. And on the 23d of April in an Address to the King, acquainted his Majesty that in their Enquiry concerning the Partition-Treaty, they found his Majesty had not entered into it without Advice of his English Counsellors; and that John Lord Sommers, Edward Earl of Orford, and Charles Lord Halifax having advised his Majesty to enter into that Treaty of so dangerous Consequence to the Trade and Welfare of this Nation, they besought his Majesty to remove those Lords from his Council and Presence, and also the Earl of Portland who transacted that Treaty. The House of Lords in the mean time, hearing of this Address, before it was presented, presented a Counter Address to the King, intimating that those Lords being impeached at the Bar, they besought his Majesty that he would not pass any Censure upon them before they were tried and adjudged.

A. D.
1700.

The Dutch being in the mean time pressed by France, applied to the King with great Earnestness to send the Relief stipulated by the old Treaty of Alliance; which the King having communicated to the House of Commons, they voted that they would provide immediate Succours for the Dutch, but were not very forward in making it good.

A Party still remained in the Nation, who retained their Affection to the King's Person, and regretted the Hardships put upon him; but the wise ones of them seeing the Torrent run against them, were forced to be silent; which some less judicious not observing, caught a Fall. These were the Gentlemen of the Grand Jury of Kent, who presented a Petition to the Parliament signed by 12 Justices, and near 250 Gentlemen, which was couched in too hard Terms, desiring the House to have a Regard to the Voice of the People, and to turn their loyal Addresses into Bills of Supply, that the King might be enabled to assist his Allies before it be too late. This Petition was voted insolent and seditious, and five Gentlemen that presented it were ordered into Custody, and soon after committed to the Gate-house. This produced a bold Memorial, which was sent from an unknown Hand to the Speaker, and subscrib'd Legion, which very roughly expostulated with the House upon their Proceedings.

The Commons went on with their Impeachments. The Articles exhibited against the Earl of Orford, accused him of obtaining Grants, and converting publick Monies to his own Use, of enjoying divers Offices inconsistent with one another; of encouraging Kidd the Pirate; that he had not done his Duty in destroying the French Fleet; And that he had advised the Partition Treaty.

Against the Lord Sommers it was articulated, that he had put the Seal to the Partition Treaty without imparting it to the Council, that he ratified the two Treaties, that he did not cause the Ratifications to be inroll'd, that he procured Grants, that he was concerned in sending out Kidd, that in his Office of Chancellor he had asserted some Things dangerous to the Constitution of the Kingdom; an Instance wherof was that in the Case of the Bankers (Creditors to King Charles II.) he acknowledged they had a Right, but denied that they had a Remedy.

The Lords having received the Articles against these two Lords, demanded of the Commons to proceed to Trial, and to exhibit the Articles against the other two Lords who stood impeached.

On the 12th of June the King gave the Royal Assent to the Act for Limitation of the Crown, wherein it was decreed, That the Princess Sophia, and her Heirs being Protestants, should succeed next after his Majesty and the Princess Anna, and the Heirs of their Bodies. That such Successor shall not be reconciled to the Church of Rome, or marry a Papist. That such Successor shall join in Communion with the Church of England. That this Nation shall not be obliged to make War in Defence of Dominions not belonging to this Crown. That such Successors shall not go out of the Kingdom without Consent of Parliament. That no Person born out of the Dominions of this Crown shall be capable of enjoining any Office of Trust, or having Grants of Lands. That the Judges Commissions be quam diu se bene gesserint but upon Address of both Houses of Parliament, it may be lawful to remove them. That no Pardon be pleadable against an Impeachment in Parliament. And that all the

Laws

Laws for securing the established Religion, and the Rights and Liberties of the People be confirmed.

At the same time an Act passed, which restrained the Privileges of Members of Parliament in respect to their Exemption from Law Suits.

The King at this Time made a Speech to desire Expedition in finishing the Affairs before them.

The Impeached Lords having given in their Defences, which were communicated to the Commons, the House of Lords, after having a long time expected the Commons to proceed, appointed a Day for Trial. But the Commons declaring they were not ready, the Lords would wait no longer, but proceeded, and for want of Evidence acquitted them. The Commons protested against it, and the Lords defended it, which produced great Feuds between the two Houses. And the Lord Haverſham in the Conferences having said some Things which gave Offence to the Commons, they exhibited a Charge against him too. They also sent up Articles against the Lord Hallifax, containing in Substance that he had obtained Grants, and had advised the Partition-Treaty. But neither of these being made good, the House of Lords acquitted these two Lords also. And finally dismissed some old Impeachments that had lain some Years in the House.

There was also a Difference between the two Houses about the Bill for Commissioners for the Publick Accounts, to which the Lords made some Amendments, which the Commons would not grant. And so the Bill was lost.

The Commons having passed the Money Bills, and such others as were wanted, the King came to the House on the 24th of June, and gave the Royal Assent, and then made a Speech, after which the Parliament was prorogued.

Besides this Difference between the two Houses of Parliament, there was at the same time a Dispute carried on between the two Houses of Convocation. When the first Convocation of this Reign assembled along with the first Parliament in 1689, the King gave a Royal Licence, pursuant to the Statute in that behalf; but as we have in its place shewn, that having not had the effect proposed, the Court did not think it necessary to assemble that Body any more; wherefore altho' Members for the Lower-House of Convocation were duly chosen at the Election of every Parliament, yet they only met to receive the Schedule of Prorogation, and had not so much as choien a Prolocutor. Now, tho' this had been the Practice all the Reigns of King Charles and King James, yet at this Time it was resented, and a Proposition was started and warmly maintained among the Clergy, that according to the Constitution of the Realm, a Convocation ought to assemble and sit as long as the Parliament. This being answered in a Treatise by Dr. Wake, was replied to by Dr. Atterbury, who maintained, that a Clause in the Writ directed to the Bishops to attend in Parliament, obliged them to bring with them the Representatives of their Clergy; and because the Clause begun with the Word Præmunientes, it was usually stiled the Præmunientes Clause. To this Dr. Kennet answered, and proved that the Clause appealed to was Obsolete, and whatever use it served for originally (which by the way is obscure) it could not at this Time be complied with, because by the Statute 25 Henry VIII. the Clergy are absolutely forbid to assemble in Convocation without the King's Writ express to that purpose. However the King gave Direction to the Archbishop to hold Sessions of Convocation. Accordingly the Convocation met this Year at St. Paul's on the 10th of February, and chose Dr. Hooper their Prolocutor, and then adjourned to Westminster, where the Upper-house sat in the Jerusalem Chamber, and the Lower-house in Henry VIII. Chapel. February 21. The Prolocutor was presented and then the next Session was by the President (the Archbishop) appointed to be on the 25th, on which Day a Schedule of Prorogation being sent down from the Upper House, the Lower House did not comply with it, but continued sitting. This began a Controversy; for the Lower-house asserted, that they had a power of holding intermediate Sessions, and might continue sitting till adjourned by the Prolocutor. To prove this they produced Precedents out of their Books, whereby it appeared that in the Years 1586, 1588, 1640, 1662, Prorogations were made by the Prolocutor. But since it was notorious that the common Practice was otherwise, and that in the Nature and Constitution of a Synod the Bishops and Presbyters were but one Body, whereof the Archbishop was Head; his Grace insisted upon his Power, and would transact no Business with the Lower-house but upon those Terms. Wherefore since the King had sent down no Licence to them to proceed upon Business, and this Difference broke the Correspondence, Toland's Book (Christianity not mysterious) which both Houses agreed deserved Punishment, escaped, and no other Business was proposed.

A. D.
1701.

Captain Kidd, Commander of a Ship set out at the Joint Expence of several private Adventurers upon an Expedition to Madagascar and other places, having in his Voyage exercised Piracy upon the Indians and others, was committed to Prison some time ago, and now this Summer tried and condemned, and was executed on the 23d of May.

Sir Thomas Trevor was by his Majesty appointed Lord Chief Justice of the Common Pleas, in the room of Sir George Treby deceased.

The King having appointed Lords Justices, departed the 14th of July for Holland, where he tarried as usual all the Summer.

On the 14th of September, O. S. The late King James departed this Life at St. Germain in France, and soon after the French King caused his pretended Son to be proclaimed King of Great Britain. King William with great Reason resented this, and called home his Ambassador the Earl of Manchester. The Lords Justices also obliged Monsieur Poussin, the French King's Secretary and Resident in Tallard's Absence, to depart the Realm. And his Majesty's Subjects expressed their Resentment of it by Loyal Addresses, wherein they acknowledged his Majesty's just Title, and promised to defend and support him against all Pretenders.

This Step of France decided a Question that had been long upon the Carpet, namely, Whether it were necessary to enter into a New War? For every Body now acquiesced in it as necessary, both for avoiding a Popish Successor being imposed upon us, and to maintain the Freedom of Commerce, which by Spain's being in French Hands was in the extreamest Danger. The French King being sensible of this, began first, and in the Month of October prohibited the Importation of English Goods to his Kingdom.

In the Month of September this Year his Majesty concluded the Grand Alliance between the Emperor

Emperor, Himself, and States General. The Terms whereof were as follow, viz.

1st, ' That there shall be a strict Alliance between the Emperor, the King of England, and the States General. 2d, That for settling the Peace and Tranquillity of Europe, which is their chief Aim, they have thought nothing could more conduce thereunto than to procure Satisfaction to the Emperor for his Pretensions upon Spain, and Security to England and Holland, for their Dominions and Commerce. 3d, That they shall employ their good Offices for two Months together after the Ratification, in order to obtain that end in an amicable Way. 4th, ' That if they cannot succeed therein, they shall assist each other with all their Forces. 5th, That they shall endeavour to conquer the Spanish Netherlands, that they may serve as a Barrier for the securing the States General; to conquer the Dutchy of Milan as a Fief of the Empire, the Kingdom of Naples and Sicily, and the Islands and Places on the Coasts of Tuscany, which may be advantageous to the Navigation and Trade of the English and Dutch. 6th, ' That for the greater Security of the Navigation of the English and Dutch, it shall be lawful for them to attack and possess the Countries and Towns belonging to Spain in the Indies, and that they shall keep for themselves the Countries and Towns conquered by them. 7th, That if they are necessitated to enter into War, they shall sincerely communicate unto each other every Thing relating to their Interests. 8th, That none of the Parties shall make Peace without the Consent of the other, nor before they have obtained a convenient Satisfaction for the Emperor, and a Security for the Dominions and Trade of the English and Dutch, and procured that the Crowns of France and Spain be never reunited under the same Prince; and in particular, that the French be never Masters of the Indies submitted to Spain, or that they be permitted to trade in that Country, directly or indirectly. Nor before they have obtained for the English and Dutch those Rights, Privileges, and Franchises, for their Trade in Spain and the Mediterranean, which they enjoyed under Charles II. by virtue of Treaties, Custom, or any other Title whatsoever. 9th, They shall agree at the same time that the Peace shall be treated of, on the means for securing the Commerce of both Nations and the Barrier. 10th, They shall agree about the Differences that may relate to the Exercise of Religion in the Countries they hope to conquer. 11th, If the most Christian King attacks any of 'em by reason of this Treaty, they shall assist each other with all their Forces. 12th, The defensive Alliance shall subsist between the said Parties after the Conclusion of the Peace, for the Guarantee of the Treaty. 13th, All Princes and States that shall be willing to come into this Alliance, shall be admitted, and the States of the Empire shall be particularly invited to come into the same, as being concerned in the Recovery of the Imperial Fiefs. 14th, This Treaty, which was signed on the 7th of September last, shall be ratified within the Time of Seven Weeks after.'

On the 4th of November the King returned to England, and a Week after dissolved the Parliament, and called

A. D.

1701.

A. D.
1701.

called another to meet the 30th of December.

The two Parties into which the Nation was divided, were so inspired at this Time, that the Contentions in Elections were more than ordinary furious. And both Parties were so diligent, that the Members on both sides were pretty equal in Number. However when they met, December 30, the Country Party were not able to carry it in the choice of a Speaker; Mr. Harley carrying it against Sir Tho. Lyttleton by a Majority of four Voices, in a House consisting of 428 Members present.

The King's Speech at this Time was incomparably pathetick and judicious, with manly Energy setting forth the true Interest of the Nation; and compassionately exhorting them to pursue it.

Both Houses presented to his Majesty very loyal and affectionate Addresses, to thank him for this Speech, and to declare their Resolutions to stand by and defend his Majesty's just Title to the Crown. And indeed this Parliament maintained so good a Temper, and appeared so entirely disposed to vindicate the King's Honour, and provide for the Nation's Security, that if it had pleased God to have granted his Majesty longer Life, 'tis likely he would have enjoyed more Peace of Mind than for some Years past he had been permitted to do.

The several Treaties and Alliances which his Majesty had been making this Summer being laid before the Commons, the House were well satisfied with them, and the 7th of January voted as an immediate Supply to his Majesty, That whoever should lend 600,000 l. for the Use of the Navy, and 50,000 l. for Guards and Garrisons, should be repaid the same with six per Cent. Interest. They also ordered an account of the State of the Navy to be laid before them; and also an Account of all Debts of the Nation unprovided for.

Jan. 9, a Bill was ordered to be brought in for the further Security of his Majesty's Person and the Protestant Succession, and so extinguish the Hopes of the pretended Prince of Wales, wherein an Oath for Abjuration was imposed on all that hold Offices; and it was enacted, That to compass or imagine the Death of the Princess Anne should be equally penal, as by the Statute of Edward III. is to compass or imagine the Death of the King's Son. The House also voted, That the Number of Forces to act in Conjunction with the Allies against France be 40,000 Landmen, and 40,000 Seamen. On the 3d of February they voted, That 352,000 l. be granted to his Majesty for maintaining the Guards and Garrisons. And on Feb. 10, the King came to the House and passed an Act for appointing Commissioners to take and state the Debts due to the Army, Navy, and Transport Debt.

The Parliament proceeded with Diligence in the publick Business and were preparing an Act for attainting the pretended Prince of Wales. An Act for punishing Mutiny and Desertion. An Act for laying a Duty on Malt, Mum, Cyder, &c. and the Abjuration Act. When the King diverting himself at Hampton-Court, had the Misfortune to fall from his Horse on the 26th of February, and broke his Collar-bone. It was quickly set, and his Majesty returned that Evening to Kensington, but upon opening the Bandage the Fracture started. It was set again, and his Majesty slept well all Night, and continued in a fair Way of Recovery till March the 1st, after sleeping as he sat in the Gallery, where it was supposed he caught Cold, he found himself himself very ill, and the next Day executed a Commission for passing the two first Acts abovementioned, and his Illness continuing with great Weakness and dangerous Symptoms, on Saturday March the 7th, his Majesty granted another Commission to pass the other two Acts above, and some private ones, which was the last Act of State he was able to perform. For,

On Sunday March the 8th, at Eight o'Clock in the Morning his Majesty expired, having lived Fifty one Years, four Months, and four Days. And reigned Thirteen Years and one Month, wanting four Days. A. D.

1701.

The Character of this Prince is too great for us to attempt; for an Apelles is only worthy to draw an Alexander. The whole World was Witness of his Justice, Honour, and indefatigable Industry in the Service of these two Nations (England and Holland) he had undertaken to protect. And as this may be said in defiance to Malice itself, more might give Offence, for Posterity only will acknowledge that he was extremely undervalued.

A N N E.

A N N E Our late gracious Sovereign, was the Hereditary Successor by a direct Lineal Descent of the ancient Royal Families of both Kingdoms, to the Crowns of England and Scotland.

Her Majesty was born on the 6th of February 1664-5, at the Palace of St. James's; most happily married to his Royal Highness Prince George of Denmark on the 28th of July, 1683. And on Sunday the 8th of March, 1701-2, ascended the Throne of her Ancestors, to the inexpressible Joy of her Subjects; who, by the Felicity they have ever since enjoyed, are abundantly convinced, that Heaven hath been most ineffably propitious to this Land in bestowing upon it in her Majesty's Person the greatest temporal Blessing human Community can receive, a wise, a just, a merciful, a vigilant, and a magnanimous Sovereign.

Upon this extraordinary Occasion the Parliament assembled, altho' it was Sunday, and the Commons being in a Message inform'd of his Majesty's Death, resolved that an Address be presented to the Queen, to condole his late Majesty's Death, and to congratulate her Majesty's Accession to the Crown. And at the same time the House of Lords at a Conference informed the Commons, that Orders were given to proclaim the Queen at three o'Clock that Afternoon.

The Privy Council being assembled also, the Queen was pleased to make a Speech to them in these Words:

My Lords,

I am extremely sensible of the great Misfortune to these Kingdoms in the unspeakable Loss of the King, and of the great Weight and Burden it brings in particular upon myself; which nothing could encourage me to, but the great Concern I have for the Preservation of our Religion and the Laws and Liberties of my Country; all these being as dear to me as they can be to any Person whatsoever: You may

A. D.
1701.

may depend upon it, that no Pains or Diligence shall ever be wanting on my Part to preserve and support them: To maintain the Succession in the Protestant Line, and the Government in Church and State, as is by Law established. I think it proper upon this Occasion of my first speaking to you, to declare my own Opinion of the Importance of carrying on all the Preparations we are making to oppose the great Power of France: And I shall lose no Time in giving to our Allies all Assurances, that Nothing shall be wanting on my part to pursue the true Interest of England, together with theirs, for the Support of the common Cause. In order to these Ends, I shall always be ready to ask the Advice of my Council, and of both Houses of Parliament, and desirous to countenance and employ all those who shall heartily concur and join with me in supporting and maintaining the present Establishment and Constitution, against all Enemies and Opposers whatsoever.

After this generous Declaration, her Majesty was pleased to appoint the Lords of his late Majesty's Privy Council to continue in the same Post, and they were sworn accordingly. And then a Proclamation was order'd to continue all Officers in their Places till further Order.

In the Afternoon the Queen was proclaimed in London, with all the Solemnity used on such Occasions. And a Letter was sent by her Majesty to the Privy Council in Scotland, intimating the King's Death, and informing them that her Majesty had taken the Coronation Oath. Required them to proclaim her Accession to the Throne, and publish a Proclamation therewith sent, whereby all Officers were continued in their Places, till further Orders. The like was observed with respect to Ireland, and her Majesty was proclaimed at Edinburgh, and at Dublin, and all other Places in the three Kingdoms, with all Expressions of Loyalty and Joy.

The two Houses of Parliament separately presented Addresses to the Queen, March the 9th, to condole the Loss of the late King, and to congratulate her Majesty's Accession to the Throue, and to declare their Resolutions of standing by her Majesty in maintaining the Treaties with the Allies, for preserving the Liberties of Europe, and reducing the exorbitant Power of France. To both which her Majesty returned most Gracious Answers.

On the 11th of March the Queen came to the House of Lords, whether the Commons being sent for, her Majesty made a Speech in these Words:

My Lords and Gentlemen,

I Cannot too much lament my own Unhappiness, in succeeding to the Crown so immediately after the Loss of a King, who was the great Support not only of these Kingdoms, but of all Europe: And I am extremely sensible of the Weight and Difficulty it brings upon me. But the true Concern I have for our Religion, for the Laws and Liberties of England, for the maintaining the Succession of the Crown in the Protestant Line, and the Government in Church and State, as by Law established, encourages me in this great Undertaking, which I promise myself will be successful by the Blessing of God, and the Continuance of that Fidelity and Affection, of which you have given me so full Assurance. The present Conjuncture of Affairs requires the greatest Application and Dispatch; and I am very glad to find in your several Address-ses so unanimous a Concurrence in the same Opinion with me, that too much cannot be done for the Encouragement of our Allies to reduce the exorbitant Power of France. I cannot but think it necessary upon this Occasion, to desire you to consider of proper Methods towards attaining of an Union between England and Scotland, which has been so lately recommended to you as a matter that very nearly concerns the Peace and Security of both Kingdoms.

Gentlemen of the House of Commons,

I need not put you in mind, that the Revenue for defraying the Expences of the Civil Government is expired. I rely entirely upon your Affections for the supplying it in such a manner as shall be most suitable for the Honour and Dignity of the Crown.

My Lords and Gentlemen,

It shall be my constant Endeavour to make you the best Return for that Duty and Affection you have expressed to me, by a careful and diligent Administration for the Good of all my Subjects; And as I know my own Heart to be entirely English, I can very sincerely assure you, there is not any thing you can expect or desire from me, which I shall not be ready to do for the Happiness and Prosperity of England; and you shall always find me a strict and religious Observer of my Word.

Both Houses return'd their Thanks to her Majesty for this gracious and most excellent Speech.

A few Days after the Queen appointed the Earl of Marlborough General of her Forces, and sent him to the Hague with the Title of Ambassador Extraordinary and Plenipotentiary, to confirm the Allies, and concert with them the Means of carrying on the great Work; but first her Majesty wrote a Letter to the States General, wherein she notified the Death of the King, and declared her own Inclinations to preserve a constant Union and Amity with them, and to maintain all the Alliances, by concurring with them in the Measures that should be necessary for the Preservation of the Liberties of Europe, and for reducing the Power of France. To which the States returned an Answer full of Respect and Acknowledgments of her Majesty's Goodness.

The Resident of France presented a Memorial to the States General, to cajole them into an Opinion of his Master's good Will and Affection towards them; and in it he intimated that they were now at Liberty to pursue their own Judgments: Which the States understanding to mean an Insinuation that they were under a disagreeable Restriction from the late King, they were so nettled, that they made him a Return extremely different from what he desired.

The Earl of Marlborough having settled Affairs with the States relating to the Operations of the Campaign, returned to England April the 5th.

The Parliament in the mean time went on expeditiously in the Business before them. On the 14th of March the Commons resolved, That the same Revenues be granted to her Majesty during her Life for supporting the Government, as were granted to the late King. And on the 19th they passed the Bill for appointing Commissioners to take and state the publick Accounts. Both which, together with some others, received the Royal Assent the next Day.

Her

A. D.
1702.

Her Majesty made a Speech at the same time, wherein with an incomparable Grace she made a Present to the Nation of an Hundred Thousand Pounds of her own Revenue this Year to be applied to the Service of the War. This Excess of Generosity was received with all the Gratitude that affectionate Subjects, loaded with their Sovereign's Bounty, and surprized with unconceivable Favours, could possibly express. Both Houses addressed her Majesty upon it, and the whole Nation was filled with an Excess of Joy, in being blessed with so bountiful and so beneficent a Sovereign.

On Sunday, April 12. His late Majesty King William's Funeral was solemnized. The Royal Corpse deposited in an open Chariot, proceeded from the Palace at Kensington at Eight or Nine at Night, attended by all the Servants of the Royal Family, the Judges, and all the Officers of State, with a long Train of Nobility in Mourning Coaches, drawn each by six Horses. His Royal Highness Prince George of Denmark was chief Mourner, supported by two Dukes. During the whole Procedure the Guns at the Tower fired singly Minute Sighs, and the biggest Bell in all the principal Churches tolled. The Corpse was interred in the same Vault with King Charles II. and the late Queen Mary.

On the 14th of April her Majesty constituted the Duke of Bedford Lord Steward, the Earl of Jersey Lord Chamberlain, the Earl of Bradford Treasurer of the Household, Sir Edward Seymour Comptroller, and Peregrine Bertie, Esq; Vice Chamberlain. And on the 17th her Majesty declared his Royal Highness Prince George of Denmark Generalissimo of all her Majesty's Forces both by Sea and Land. On the 20th the Duke of Ormond was declared Commander in Chief of the Forces to be employed on board the Fleet. And the Privy Seal was delivered to the Marquis of Normanby.

On the 23d of April, her Majesty's Coronation was celebrated with as full Splendor and Magnificence as hath at any time been seen. The Appearance of Nobility was very numerous, and the Peereffes as well as the Peers making part of the Procession, the Shew was incomparable. The Attendance was as usual, who all walked upon a Floor covered with blue Cloth, from Westminster-Hall to the Abbey Church, where the Sermon was preached by the Archbishop of York, and the Ceremony of administering the Oath, &c. was performed by the Archbishop of Canterbury. The Coronation Medals thrown about during the time of the Solemnity, bore the Impress of her Majesty's Head with an Inscription of her Titles, and on the Reverse, Pallas killing Medusa, with this Inscription, Vicem gerit illa Tonantis. When all was performed, the Procession returned in the same Order, the Peers and Peereffes wearing now their Coronets on their Heads, to Westminster-Hall, where they were entertained with a most magnificent Feast; during which the Champion Charles Dymock, Esq; made the usual Challenge.

On the 2d of May the Earl of Nottingham and Sir Charles Hedges were appointed Principal Secretaries of State. And the same Day it was debated in Council whether War should be declared against France; upon whose Advice alone her Majesty not relying in so important an Affair, she caused to be laid before the House of Commons, a Convention between the Queen, the Emperor, and the States General, al, with which the House entirely acquiesced; and voted an Address of Thanks to her Majesty, for communicating her Intentions of declaring War against France, and declared that the House would to the utmost assist and support her in carrying on the said War.

On the 4th of May, a Declaration of War against France was proclaimed with the usual Solemnity, grounded upon the unjust Usurpations and Encroachments of the French King, who had taken and kept Possession of a great Part of the Spanish Dominions, exercising an absolute Power over all that Monarchy, having seized Milan and the Spanish Netherlands, by his Arms; made himself Master of Cadiz, of the Entrance into the Mediterranean, and of the Ports in the Spanish East Indies, by his Fleets; every where designing to invade the Liberties of Europe, and to obstruct the Freedom of the Navigation and Commerce. And it being agreed by the Treaty of Alliance with the Emperor, the States General, and other Princes, that if the Injuries complain'd of be not redress'd within a certain Time now lapsed, the Parties concerned should mutually assist each other with their whole Strength. And whereas instead of giving Satisfaction, the French King has not only proceeded to farther Violences, but has added thereunto a great Affront and Indignity to the Queen and her Kingdoms, by declaring the pretended Prince of Wales King of Great Britain; and had also influenced Spain to concur in the same Affront and Indignity, as well as in his other Oppressions: Therefore her Majesty commanded her Admiral and her General to do and execute all Acts of Hostility in Prosecution of this War against France and Spain, &c.

At this Time her Majesty issued her Command, that the Princess Sophia be prayed for in the daily Office of the Church.

May 6, the Lord Godolphin was made Lord High Treasurer.

A Spirit of Malice against King William spread itself so virulently, as to insinuate that he had projected a Design to set the Princess Anne aside, and to introduce immediately the House of Hanover into the Succession to the Throne; which the House of Lords taking Notice of, they form'd a Resolution to this Effect, That a Report being spread that among the late King's Papers some had been found tending to the Prejudice of her Majesty, or her Succession to the Crown; and the Lords who were appointed by her Majesty to inspect the said Papers, having declared that no Paper did appear which might give Ground or Colour for such Report; it is therefore resolved, That the said Report is false, villanous, and scandalous. And the said Resolution was ordered to be laid before her Majesty, with their humble Desire, that her Majesty would give Order to the Attorney General to prosecute the Authors and Publishers of that and such like scandalous Reports.

And Complaint being made of some Passages in a Book intituled, The History of the last Parliament, wherein the said Report was inculcated, and Dr. Drake, a Physician, having own'd himself to be the Author of that Book, he was convened before the House of Lords, and upon not giving satisfactory Reasons for these Passages in his Book, the Lords voted it false and scandalous, and ordered him to be prosecuted by the Attorney General. Another Book also, intituled, The true Picture of a modern Whig, being complained of for the same Reason, it was in like manner censur'd,

A. D. 1702. sur'd, but the Author never appeared.

The War being now begun, both Houses of Parliament addressed the Queen to prohibit all Correspondence with France, and also to oblige her Allies to observe the same.

The Lords addressed her Majesty on the 23d of May, That she would be pleased to grant Commissions with such Powers as were proper, to such Persons and Communities as her Majesty should think fit, to be Adventurers to make Acquisitions in the West-Indies.

On the 15th of May, the Queen came to the House of Lords, and having passed the Acts, made a Speech, wherein her Majesty declared her Satisfaction in the Proceedings of the Parliament, and expressed her Thanks for the Supplies.

The Supplies granted this Session, besides establishing the Royal Revenue, were, An Act for making good Deficiencies upon several Funds, which appeared to amount to 2,338,628 l. besides what had been formerly provided for. To supply this were given, the old Tonnage and Poundage till the 1st of August, 1710; the Stamp Duty for the same Term; the Duties upon Houses; and the Duties upon Whale-fins, and Scotch Linnen, for the same Term, and the Overplus of the Salt Duty, beyond what was appropriated to the Bank, till August 1, 1706. And for the Service of the War this Year, a Land Tax of 4 s. in the Pound, and a Subsidy. It must be remembred also, that in this Session an Act passed to empower her Majesty to name Commissioners for an Union with Scotland. And then the Parliament was prorogued to the 7th of July.

On May the 16th, Sir George Rook was made Vice Admiral of England.

On the 21st of May her Majesty declared his Royal Highness Prince George of Denmark, Lord High Admiral of England and Ireland. And on the 23d his Royal Highness appointed Sir George Rook, Sir David Mitchell, George Churchill, Esq; and Richard Hill, Esq; to be his Council in the Admiralty.

The several Foreign Princes and States of Europe had in the mean time made their Congratulations to her Majesty, on her happy Accession to the Throne. And her own Subjects presented their Addresses to her upon the same Occasion, from all the Parts of her Dominions.

The Campaign abroad this Year was opened by the Siege of Keser-swaert, a small but strong Town on the Rhine, in the Electorate of Cologn, which was possessed by the French; this Town was invested on the 16th of April, and the Siege carried on with Difficulty by reason of the bad Weather, and the Relief the French were able from time to time to put into the Town. However, on the 9th of June the Counterescarp was taken by Storm, and six Days after the Town capitulated. In the mean time the French under Marshal Boufflers, made a bold Attempt. That General being joined by those two Bodies under the Duke of Burgundy and Count Tallard, made a hasty March towards Nimeguen, and proceeded in it so far, that the Inhabitants of that Town looked upon themselves as lost. But the more courageous among them so animated the rest, that while they wanted Horses and Carriages, they by manual Labour haled the Cannon out of the Arsenal, and planted 160 Pieces on the Walls ready to fire against the Enemy. The English and Dutch Army that lay encamp'd in Brabant under the Command of the Earl of Arblone, upon the first Advice of this March broke up, and took the proper Measures to intercept the Enemy, which by their Expedition they effected, coming into the Neighbourhood of Nimeguen half an Hour before the French could get up, and thereby saved the Town, which, if taken, would have given the French free Entrance into the United Netherlands.

A. D.
1702.

On the 16th of June, Prince Lewis of Baden invested Landau, the Siege whereof took up three Months. At length on the 10th of September, the Besiegers being ready to make a general Storm, the Governor capitulated, and the Town was surrendered.

The Earl of Marlborough being arrived in Holland, was honoured by the States with the chief Command of the Army, and at the beginning of July, he put himself at the Head of it near Nimeguen, and soon after obliged the French to quit the Spanish Guelderland. Venlo, Ruremond, and Stevenswaert, were severally besieged and taken, and thereby the whole Spanish Guelderland, except the Capital, was made subject to the Dutch. And farther, the City and Castle of Liege were also besieged, and taken in this Campaign. All which being performed, the Army separated on the 3d of November, and the Earl of Marlborough embarked on the Maas to return to Holland; but a little below Venlo in the Middle of the Night, the Boat was surprized, and taken by a Party of the Garri- son of Guelder, but their Business being chiefly Plunder, and not knowing the Earl, they accepted a Pass which he happened to have, belonging to his Brother, and after rifling the Baggage, let the Boat pass.

The Emperor had the last Year, in pursuit of his Claim to the Crown of Spain, sent an Army under Prince

Eugene of Savoy into the Dutchy of Milan, where by the Bravery of the Troops, and the Conduct of the General, they had made good Acquisitions, but thro' the Difficulty of receiving Recruits and Necessaries, the Army was much diminished, insomuch that the Blockade, which the Imperialists had made upon Mantua in the Winter, was this Spring raised, and the Army disposed itself in a defensive Posture all the Summer, against the superior Power of the French, under the Duke de Vendosme, and the Spaniards under King Philip, till the beginning of August, when the Enemy pressed to give Prince Eugene Battle. On the 15th of that Month, they came to Engagement at Luzzara, wherein the French were repulsed, and forced from the Field of Battle, which gave the Imperialists Occasion to claim the Victory; altho' the French by taking Luzzara the next Day pretended that Honour to be theirs.

In Germany the Elector of Bavaria accepted the Offers France made to him, and being promised to be supported by an Army which that King would send thro' the Black Forest to join with his Forces, in the beginning of September, he seized the City of Ulm, and declared for the French. The next Month, the Marquiss de Villars with a Detachment of French endeavouring to join the Bavarians, came to a Battle with Prince Lewis of Baden, who with the Army of the Empire was posted at Fridlingen to hinder it. The French sung Te Deum for a Victory. But the Germans claimed it, and with just Reason, since the French were repulsed, and the intended Junction prevented.

The Proceeding of our own Fleet at Cadiz this Summer we will postpone for the present; to speak of the Proceedings of the Parliament in Scotland, and some other home Affairs.

The Parliament assembled at Edinburgh on the 9th of June. Before the Queen's Commission was opened, Duke Hamilton desired to be heard, and altho' he was desired to wait the Reading the Commission, he would proceed, and declared it as his Opinion, that this present Parliament did not legally exist, forasmuch as by the ancient Constitution of the Realm, the Parliament always expired with the King's Death, and that the Statute to the contrary was not sufficient Authority for them to meet and sit. Upon which he took Instruments and withdrew, and was followed by 80 more, who adhered to his Opinion.

The Duke of Queensbury the Queen's High Commissioner presented her Majesty's Letter to the Parliament, wherein her Majesty declared her Affection to that her ancient Kingdom, with assurance of maintaining them in the full Possession of their Religion, Laws, and Liberties, and of the Presbyterian Government of the Church; represented the exorbitant Power of the French King, and the Indignity he had offered to the Nation, in proclaiming the pretended Prince of Wales King. Which tending to the Subversion of the Protestant Religion, and the Ruin of the Subjects, had caused her to declare War, wherein she expected their Concurrence and Assistance; and accordingly recommended to them, the providing competent Supplies for such a Number of Forces as were necessary. Then recommended to them an Union of the two Kingdoms, declaring that the English Parliament having impowered her to name Commissioners, she expected they would do the same on their Part.

The Duke of Queensbury in a very handsome Speech enlarged upon the Queen's Letter, and the Chancellor the Earl of Marchmont seconded him, and then the House adjourned to the 11th.

Being met again they drew up a Letter to the Queen in most grateful and loyal Terms, and then proceeded in the Business recommended to them. These Acts soon passed, and received the Royal Assent, namely, an Act recognizing her Majesty's Royal Authority. An Act declaring this present Parliament to be a lawful and free Meeting of Parliament. And an Act for securing the Protestant Religion and Presbyterian Church Government. And not long after an Act passed for a Supply of Ten Months and half's Cessment upon Land.

Duke Hamilton sent up an Address to the Queen upon the Subject of his Protest, which her Majesty would not admit; but on the contrary by a Message to the Parliament declared her Resentment of it, and required them to proceed without regarding it.

On the 25th of June an Act for enabling her Majesty to name Commissioners for an Union, received the Royal Assent.

It was now proposed to the Parliament, that in regard England had settled the Succession on the House of Hanover, it would be proper for Scotland to do the like; but this met with such Opposition, that the High Commissioners thought fit to adjourn the Parliament on the 3d of July.

But to return to England. The Grand Fleet under the Command of Sir George Rook, having 10,000 Landmen on Board, lay ready on the 19th of June to put to Sea. Rear Admirals Fairborn and Graydon with a Squadron of Dutch, in all 30 Sail, were detached on the 22d upon a particular Service. And on the 25th Sir John Munden, who had been sent out against a Squadron of French under Du Casse, returned without hindring them from getting into the Groyne, or fighting them there: With which her Majesty was so displeased, that she took away his Commission. The whole Fleet sailed on the 1st of July, and proceeded on their Voyage towards Cadiz, but the Wind altering, it was near a Month before they got out of the Soundings.

A. D.

1702.

On the 2d of July, the Parliament was dissolved by Proclamation, and a new one called to meet on the 10th of August. On the 9th her Majesty declared the D. of Somerset Master of the Horse, and the E. of Pembroke President of the Council.

His Royal Highness being advised by his Physicians to use the Bath Waters against the Asthma he was much afflicted with, her Majesty resolved to accompany him thither. And the Parliament being Prorogued to the 8th of October, her Majesty and the Prince set out from Windsor on the 26th of August, and was pleased to take Oxford in her Way, where she lodged the first Night in the Apartment provided for her in Christ-Church. The University, sensible of the great Honour they received by her Majesty's Presence, entertained her with Orations, Verses, Consorts of Musick, a Splendid Banquet, and the usual Presents: With which her Majesty expressed herself highly satisfied, and left that Place the next Day to proceed on her Journey.

The Earl of Abingdon, with the Gentlemen of the County, attended her Majesty to the Limits of Oxfordshire, and on the Borders of Gloucestershire, the High Sheriff and Gentlemen of that County waited her Majesty to Cirencester, where she lay that Night. And the next Day was attended by the Duke of Beaufort, who conducted her to his Seat at Badminton, where her Majesty and the Prince accepted an Entertainment. And then proceeded to Bath, where she was met by the High Sheriff, Mayor, Citizens, and a great Concourse of Gentry, and conducted into the City, thro' the joyful Acclamations of the People, who also expressed their Joy by Ringing of Bells, Bonfires, Illuminations, &c. Her Majesty was pleased to give the City of Bristol the Honour of a Visit on the 1st of September, where the highest Demonstrations of the Loyalty and Respect of the Citizens, and the neighbouring Gentry, were paid her. And having been entertained with a Splendid Dinner, her Majesty and the Prince returned the same Night to the Bath. They remained there to the 8th of October, when his Royal Highness having received sufficient Benefit by the Waters, her Majesty left that Place, and returned the 10th to Windsor.

The Confederate Fleet consisting of 30 English and 20 Dutch Line of Battle Ships, besides Fireships, Cruisers, Yatches, Bombships, Victuallers, Hospitals, Tenders, &c. in their Voyage, came up to the height of Cape Finisferre the 31st of July, Lisbon the 10th of August, and on the 12th, arrived before Cadiz. A Council of War being held, and the Advices considered which Mr. Methuen and the Prince of Hesse Darmstadt brought, whereby they understood, that the Enemy had 4,000 disciplined Troops in Cadiz, besides 1,000 old Horse and the Militia to guard the Coast, it was resolved to land on the Bay of Bulls to take Fort Catherine, and Port St. Mary. The Duke of Ormond sent a Boat with a Letter to the Governor of Cadiz, to which he answered in Civil Terms, that he would maintain the Post he was in. On the 15th the Forces began to Land. The Grenadiers that first got on shore were attacked by a small Party of Spanish Horse, whom they quickly defeated. So the Forces all landed, and the next Day took Rota, where they stayed some Days to put all Things in Order. On the 22d they took St. Catherine's Fort, and Port St. Mary, whence the Inhabitants being all fled, the Soldiers plundered their Houses, notwithstanding that the Duke of Ormond had very strictly forbidden all Plunderings. Terrible Havock was made, and great Offence thereby given to the Spaniards; which occasioned the Duke of Ormond to put Sir Henry Bellasis and Sir Charles Hara (who had not sufficiently withheld the Soldiers) under Arrest. On the 24th, a Council of War was held, where it was resolved to attack the Matagorda Fort, and then to send in a Frigate or two to pass the Puntals. But the time that was lost in Plundering Port St. Mary, and consulting afterwards, gave the Enemy Opportunity to recover their Fright, and to put themselves into such a Condition to resist, that the whole Design was frustrated. The People of Cadiz came to their Wits, the Governor of Andalusia increased his Army, the People that were ruined at St. Mary's provoked their Neighbours to revenge. And in the whole, what with the ill Management on the Confederate side, and the recovered Wisdom on the Spaniards side, such Opposition was made, as rendered the Attack of the Town impracticable. Three Galleons were sunk at the Entrance of the Puntals, which prevented the Shipping passing it. And 8 Gallies with 7 Men of War, lay firing incessantly upon the Trenches at the Matagorda. The Ground here also was so boggy, that 'twas impracticable to dig Trenches deep enough, nor were it strong enough to sustain the Batteries of Cannon that was erected. Wherefore on the Fifth of September, the Forces withdrew from before it, and soon after the Army found it necessary to retire to the Ships. Accordingly they drew off in good Order to Rota, and on the 14th, 15th, 16th, and 17th of September, the Forces were safely shipped again.

A. D.
1702.

When they were shipped, the Question was put, whether they should stay and Winter in Spain, or proceed Home? The Duke of Ormond was for the former, and Sir George Rook for the latter, and a Council of War being held, the latter Opinion prevailed, and accordingly on the 19th of September they left Cadiz and set sail homeward; a Detachment being first sent off for the West Indies.

But what the Covetousness of some, and the Unskilfulness of others had deprived the Nation of at Cadiz, Fortune made up to it at Visigoth. On September 21. some Ships were sent into Lagos to water, there Mr. Beavoir Chaplain to the Peace broke, by the Advantage of speaking good French, fell into Conversation with the French Consul, whose House he and the Gentlemen that came ashore with him lodged two Nights; during which time, the Frenchman was full of his Vaunts of his Master's Power, and among the rest gave broad hints of the Arrival of the Galleons. Before they went aboard a Gentleman from Lisbon came into the Town, who wanted to go aboard the Confederate Fleet, to him Mr. Beavoir sent a Civil Message with an Offer of taking him on Board, which accepting they went together to the Boats; and in the way the Chaplain asking for News, the Stranger

A. D.

1702.

him he had great News, viz. Chatteau Ranard with 30 Men of War, and 22 Galleons, was arrived at Vigo. This Gentleman was sent by the Imperial Ministers at Lisbon, with Letters to the Prince of Hesse Darmstat and Mr. Methuen, both which Gentlemen were on Board the Fleet, but were before this failed for Lisbon. Mr. Beavoir concealed this, lest the Gentleman should have declined going with him, so he got on Board, and having imparted the News to the Captain of the Pembroke, and the rest of the Captains that were there, it was resolved that the Admiral be informed of it. Accordingly Captain Hardy in the Pembroke set out to find the Fleet, which on the 6th of October he came up with, and went on board the Admiral to give him the News. Sir George Rook was very well pleased, and sent it immediately to the Dutch Admiral, declaring it was his Opinion that they should all set Sail for Vigo.
And a Council of War being called, it was agreed that his Advice should be followed. Accordingly the Fleet went their Course that way, and his Advice being brought that Sir Cloudrey Shovel lay off Cape Finisterre, a Message was sent to him to join the Fleet at Vigo. On the 11th they came to an Anchor before the Coast, and on the 12th, pursuant to the Resolutions taken the Night before in a Council of War, the Duke of Ormond with 2,500 Men landed.

The French Admiral had in the mean Time taken Care to draw the Ships as high up the River as possible, whereby the Access to them was stopt by Forts on the Shore, and a strong Boom laid across the River.
It was necessary for the Forces to march over craggy Mountains, because they could come to attack these Forts, and a Body of 8,000

Spaniards appeared to oppose them. But these skirmished but faintly, and retired as ours came up; wherefore the Grenadiers advanced, and took a Platform with 38 Pieces of Cannon, which being made use of by the Regiments that seconded them, the Tower which the Enemies pretended to defend, was soon taken. The Fleet at the same time attacked the Boom, which by the Weight of divers Men of War running against it at once, they broke, and then encountred the French Fleet. The Fire was thick on all Hands; for the Land Forces on Shore, in making themselves Masters of the several Platforms; and the Men of War in the River engaging the French, which were all large Ships; made it a terrible Action for some time. At last the Confederates prevail'd, and the French Admiral saw his Affairs so desperate, that he set Fire to his own Ship, and ordered the Captains under his Command to do the like. Eight French Men of War were burnt, 4 French and 3 Spanish Men of War sunk, 6
French Men of War taken, 9 Spanish Galleons taken, and 4 sunk.
And all this glorious Victory was gained with little Loss on the Confederate Side; no Ship was lost, and except on board the Torbay
(who lay on board the French Admiral a great while) and the Vice Admiral of the Dutch, but few Men were killed, and but 5 of the English Ships besides the Torbay received any Damage. Of the Landmen, 2 Lieutenants and 40 Soldiers were slain; and 3 Colonels, another Officer, and 30 Soldiers wounded: 400 French were taken Prisoners, and a Booty gained which was of inconceivable Value, for this Spanish Flota was acknowledged to be the richest that had come to Europe for many Years

A. D.
1702.

past; and altho' 14 Millions of Pieces of Eight had been carried ashore, it was computed that 6 Millions more remained on Board, besides a vast quantity of rich Goods, when our Fleet attacked them.

It was again proposed by the Duke of Ormond to winter in Spain, to which purpose his Grace offered to take the Town of Vigo, where they might lie in safety all the Winter, if a competent Number of Shipping were left with them. But the Admiral declaring that he could not leave above 5 or 6 Frigates, nor afford the Army above two Months Provision, that Design was laid aside, and the Duke of Ormond led the Forces on Board, and on the 19th set Sail with Sir George Rook and Vice Admiral Hopson, and 10 more Men of War, for England, where they arrived the 7th of November. The rest of the Fleet remained behind to conduct home the Prizes, one whereof a rich Galleon was lost by running upon a Rock. It must be remembered that Captain Hardy, who brought Sir George Rook the first News of the Galleons being in Vigo, was sent Express with the Lord Shanon, and brought the first News of the Victory to the Queen, who made him a Present of 1,000 Guineas, and conferred upon him the Honour of Knighthood.

And now having informed our Reader of all Foreign Transactions, wherein England was concerned, we return home to speak of the Proceedings in Parliament. On the 20th of October the Parliament assembled, and the Commons being come up to the House of Lords, the Lord Keeper declared it was her Majesty's Pleasure that they proceed to the Choice of a Speaker; being therefore returned to their House they elected Robert Harley, Esq; to that Office, who being presented the next Day, her Majesty made a Speech to both Houses, wherein she asked their Assistance in carrying on the War, and desired the Commons to provide proper Supplies, declaring that those given last Year had proved deficient, altho' her Majesty had given in the Hundred Thousand Pounds she promised, to make them up; she took Notice of the Affection and Respect she had seen in her Subjects during her late Progress, desired the House to inspect the Publick Accounts, and declared her Concern at the disappointment at Cadix. And concluded with Expressions of her Affection to the Church of England.

Both Houses addressed her Majesty in most Loyal and Affectionate Terms, to thank her for this Gracious Speech, and to congratulate her Majesty upon the Success of her Arms under the Conduct of the Duke of Marlborough, who, said the Commons, has signally retrieved the ancient Honour and Glory of the English Nation.

This Expression gave Offence, as making a Reflection upon King William, and therefore the Word maintained was propos'd instead of retrieved in the House, but refused by a vast Majority.

On the 30th of October the Commons resolved, that 40,000 Seamen be the Complement for the Service of the next Year. And that 120,314 be raised for the Ordinary of the Navy. And on the 6th of November voted, that 50,000 Men be the Proportion of Land Forces to act in Conjunction with the Allies the next Year in the War against France. And at the same time they voted 350,000 l. for Guards and Garrison including 6,000 Landmen to act on Board the Fleet, and 70,973 l. for the Ordnance for Land Service. Three Days after the House resolved, That 833,826 l. be granted for the Land Forces, and 51,843 l. for the Queen's Proportion of Subsidies to the Allies. And afterwards, January the 5th, they voted an Augmentation of 10,000 Foreigners to be hired for the Service of the next Year. In all 3,994, 136 l.

November the 12th being by her Majesty appointed a Day of Thanksgiving to Almighty God for the great Success this Year, Her Majesty paid her Devotions at the Cathedral Church of St. Paul, London, being attended by both Houses of Parliament, all the Officers of State and the Foreign Ministers, and waited upon by the Lord-Mayor of London, who in a Crimson Velvet Gown received her Majesty at Temple-Bar, and having presented the City Sword, received it back, and carried it before her, the Aldermen and Sheriffs accompanying the Mayor, and all the Liveries placed in Stalls on each side the Street, together with the several Regiments of Trained-Bands, made a Lane all the way. The Service was performed with most exquisite Musick by the two Choirs of the Queen's Chapel and St. Paul's. The Sermon was preached by the Bishop of Exeter, and the whole performed with great Order and Devotion.

About this Time the Prizes from Vigo came home, Sir Cloudsley Shovel took 110 Brass Guns at Vigo out of the Batteries and Ships, burnt what Ships were run ashore, and could not be got off, and then set Sail for England, where he arrived the 25th of October with part of the Fleet; and a Week after the rest with the Prizes, except the Galleon lost at Sea, as we have said, were brought in by Sir Stafford Fairborn. Both Houses of Parliament gave their Thanks to the Duke of Ormond and Sir George Rook. As they did also to the Earl of Marlborough, who returned from his Campaign soon after.

This Session lasted long, by reason of the Variety of Business that came before them, and the long Debates upon Occasion of the Differences between the two Houses upon the Subject of the Occasional Conformity Bill, and some other Points.

To omit the less momentous, such as the Censure passed in the House of Commons against the Bishop of Worcester for having concerned himself in Sir John Packington's Election; the Enquiry into the Business of Cadix by the Lords, wherein Sir George Rook was honourably acquitted; the Censuring of De Foe's Pamphlet called, The shortest way with the Dissenters, and other Things. The Business transacted this Session were, 1. A Provision for raising the Money granted to her Majesty. 2. Establishing a Revenue upon Prince George. 3. Making divers wholesome Laws. 4. Debating upon a Bill against Occasional Conformity. And 5. Inspecting the Reports of Commissioners for stating the Publick Accounts.

1. The Ways and Means for raising a Supply were, A Land-Tax of 4 s. in the Pound. Duty upon Malt, &c. Duty on Coals. Annuities at 15 Years Purchase, for 99 Years. And a Subsidy.

2. Her Majesty having intimated to the Houses, that there was but slender Provision for the Prince of Denmark, in case she happened to die before him, and being withheld herself by the Act for settling her Revenue, from making any Settlement upon him, recommended it to their Consideration; which the House unanimously acquiesced in, and accordingly on the 1st of December they voted, that 100,000 l. per Annum be settled upon his Royal Highness, in case he survive her Majesty. Which was duly enacted.

A. D.

1702

3. The Publick Bills enacted this Session, besides what have been already mentioned, were 24 in Number. Among which the most considerable were, An Act for continuing the Commissioners for stating the Debt due to the Army. An Act for advancing the Sale of the forfeited Estates in Ireland. An Act for enlarging the Time for taking the Abjuration. An Act for Commissioners to state the Publick Accounts. An Act for finishing St. Paul's Cathedral. An Act for making the River Cham Navigable. An Act against Felons, &c.

4. The Laws having provided that no Person should hold any Office or Employment in Corporations, as well as in the State, without testifying themselves to be of the Church of England, by receiving the Sacrament according to the Rites and Ceremonies of the Church, it had been a Custom several Years past, for Dissenters to come for once to Church, and take the Sacrament, if it were necessary to qualify them for holding an Office; but as this seemed to be a Prevarication with God and Religion, it was a Practice which gave great Offence, and was condemned by such Dissenters themselves, as were conscientious and pious. It was therefore thought reasonable that a Law might pass to prevent this evil Custom. Accordingly a Bill was brought into the House of Commons, to prevent Occasional Conformity. The Purport whereof was, That any Person, having an Office or Employment, afterwards resorting to Conventicles or Religions Meetings in other Manner than according to the Liturgy and Practice of the Church of England, shall forfeit the Sum of 500 l. and five Pounds for every Day that such Person shall continue in such Office or Employment, after having been present at such Conventicle. And shall be disabled from holding such Office, or receiving any Benefit thereby. And shall afterwards for ever be incapable of holding any Office in England till he shall have constantly conformed to the Church of England without being present at any Conventicle for one whole Year, and shall have taken the Sacrament three times in that Year, whereof he shall make Oath in publick Court. And upon second Offence after such Qualifications, he shall incur double Penalties, forfeit his Office, and be afterwards incapable of enjoying any Office till he hath conformed for three Years. This Bill passed the House of Commons, and being sent up to the Lords, divers Amendments were there made to it. The principal whereof were, viz.

That the Penalty should be incurred by being present at any religious Meeting, where the Queen and Princesses Sophia be not prayed for.

They altered the Penalty, reducing it to 20 l. only, whereof one Third to the Queen, one Third to the Poor, and one Third to the Informer.

The Lords also left out the whole incapacitating Clauses which began And shall afterwards be for ever incapacitated, &c.

And they added these, viz. That no Person shall suffer by this Act, unless Information be given against him in ten Days time, and he be prosecuted within three Months after the Offence. That no Dissenter shall be compellable to hold any Office, for which he cannot be qualified without taking the Sacrament. That this Act shall not extend to the University Churches for the publick Sermon or Lecture being preached without reading the Common Prayer, but that the ancient Usage there may continue. That no Person shall incur the Penalties of

of this Act by going to the French or Dutch Churches established here by Authority. That this Act shall not affect the Governors of any Hospitals, or the Assistants of Corporations, or Work-houses erected for relieving and employing the Poor. And that such Governors shall be exempt from the Penalties of the Test Act.

These Amendments and Additions made by the Lords were refused by the Commons; which produced Conferences and Free Conferences divers Times, but to no Purpose; for both Sides adhering to their Opinions, the Bill was lost. The Arguments used by both Sides were afterwards printed by Order of the House of Lords, to which we must refer the Readers who desire more Particulars.

5. The Commissioners for stating the publick Accounts, having reported their Observations, it occasioned many severe Votes of the House of Commons against Charles Earl of Hallifax, who was at that Time Auditor of the Exchequer. But the House of Lords took that Matter into Consideration, and examined all the Papers and Persons concerned; and in an Address to her Majesty, represented that Matter so, as entirely to acquit that Lord of any Manner of Blame. This, as also the Examination of the Applications of all the Publick Moneys during the whole Reign of King William, having been printed, we must refer the Reader to that Account.

The Commons were displeased at the Lords Proceedings on the Publick Accounts, and refused to permit the Commissioners to attend that House, as desired. Which being likely to produce a new Controversy, the Queen sent to the House of Lords to dispatch what they had before them, and two Days after they had delivered their Address, Feb. 27. her Majesty came to the House, and having given the Royal Assent to the Bills, made a Speech, and then the Parliament was prorogued to the 22d of April.

Publick Events omitted in carrying on the Thread of Discourse upon the Parliament, were as follow:

On the 2d of December, her Majesty was pleased to create the Earl of Marlborough a Duke of this Kingdom, and to settle a Pension of 5000 l. per Ann. upon him out of the Post-Office: Which she intimated to the House of Commons, and wish'd it might be perpetuated. But the House excused themselves, and the Queen withdrew her Request.

The Queen having, pursuant to the Acts of Parliament in both Kingdoms, nominated Commissioners to treat of an Union between England and Scotland, those Commissioners met the 22d of October, and adjusted Preliminaries, and on the 14th of December being assembled, her Majesty came to them, and made a Speech in these Words:

My Lords,

I AM so fully perswaded, that an Union of the Two Kingdoms will prove the Happiness of both, and render this Island more formidable than it has been in Ages past, that I wish this Treaty may be brought to a good and speedy Conclusion. I am come to know what Progress you have made in it; and I do assure you, nothing shall be wanting on my Part to bring it to Perfection.

The Scots made their Demands, and the English gave them an Answer, the Particulars whereof are too

A. D.

1702.

A. D. 1702. too large for this Place. Neither is it necessary, for the Treaty at this Time did not go on.

In the Beginning of January Advice was brought to England of the Progress of her Majesty's Fleet in the West Indies, under Vice Admiral Bembow, where they had had good Success against the Enemy in divers Actions this Summer. But in that of most Importance, a Misfortune happened through the Cowardise of the Commanders. About the latter End of July, the Admiral understanding that DuCasse with a French Squadron was expected at Hispaniola, he sailed to intercept him; and having learned at Leogam, a Bay of Hispaniola, that the French were sailed for Cartagena, he follow'd them. On the 19th of August he spied the Enemy, who were 10 Sail, 4 whereof carried from 66 to 70 Guns a-piece, 1 of 30 or 40 Guns, one full of Soldiers, and the rest small Ships. The English were 7 Men of War, stout Ships. The Admiral disposed to attack them, but three or four of the Ships lay far a-stern, and altho' the Signal of Battle was given, took no care to come up. The Admiral in the Breda, with the Falmouth Captain Vincent, and the Ruby Captain Watson, continued Action with the Enemy for five or six Days, but the Defiance Captain Kirby, and the Windsor Captain Constable, without firing a Gun, altho' point-blank a-breast with the Rear Ship of the Enemy, lust out of Gun-shot, and the Greenwich Captain Wade, lay three Leagues a-stern. The Enemy made the best of their Way; so it was a running Fight from the 19th to the 24th. One of the Enemies Men of War was quite disabled, and lay a Hulk at float, yet would none of them come to take her; the Admiral was all along engaged, and was well seconded by the Falmouth; the Ruby also did good Service, and was disabled in the Action, but the rest shamefully kept off. The Enemy did not sufficiently perceive our Disorder to make their Advantage of it; but finding at last that the rest of the Ships purposely lagg'd, they attacked the Admiral's Ship so briskly on the 24th, that they tore her Rigging, and by a Chain Shot broke the Admiral's Leg to pieces, who bravely ordered his Cradle on Deck, and continued to give Orders so well, that the Ship was brought off. He sent then for all the Captains on board him to urge a Continuance of the Action; but they all agreed in an Advice to forbear further Fighting; so the Enemy were permitted to tow off their disabled Ship, although two of ours had been up with her while she lay disabled.

On the 6th of October a Court Martial was held for the Trial of 4 of the Captains, one whereof (Hudson) died before the Day of his Trial; Kirby and Wade were condemned to be shot to Death for Cowardice, Breach of Orders, and Neglect of Duty. Constable was acquitted of Cowardice, but convicted of the other Crimes, and sentenced to be cashier'd, and imprisoned during her Majesty's Pleasure. The other two Captains also were sentenced to be suspended for having advised against continuing the Action. This Disappointment was the more grievous, because the French Fleet had on board Soldiers and Governors for all the Spanish Forts and Governments; the taking of whom, might have been done if the whole Fleet had done their Duty, would have been an extream Damage to the Enemy. Admiral Bembow died at Jamaica, Nov. 4. of the Wound received in the Engagement.

The Execution of the condemn'd Captains was respited till her Majesty's Pleasure be known, and the Prisoners were sent home, where upon their Arrival, they were not permitted to come ashore, for her Majesty gave Orders for the Execution of the Sentence, on board; and accordingly Kirby and Wade were shot April the 14th.

A Committee of General Officers having been appointed to examine the Conduct of Sir Henry Bellasis, and Sir Charles Hara, at Port St. Mary, they found Sir Henry Bellasis guilty of Plundering, and acquitted Sir Charles Hara (Feb. 27.) wherefore her Majesty dismissed the former from the Service, and took off the Suspension of the latter.

The Convocation sat this Year, but did no Business, the Disputation between the two Houses obstructing it. The Lower House insisted upon their Right of intermediate Sessions, and the Archbishop upon his Right of proroguing. The Lower House proposed as an Expedient, That an Address be presented to her Majesty to decide the Controversy, but the Upper House declined it. However the Lower House addressed her Majesty to that Purpose, but obtained not their End.

On the 9th of March her Majesty conferred these Honours: The Marquis of Normanby was made Duke of Buckingham. John Granville, Esq; created Baron Granville of Potheridge. Heneage Finch, Esq; Baron of Guernsey in the County of Southampton. Sir Jo. Levison-Gower, Baron Gower of Sittenham in the County of York. Francis Conway Seymour, Esq; Baron Conway of Ragby in the County of Warwick. And John Harvey, Esq; Baron Harvey of Warkworth in the County of Suffolk.

His Grace the Duke of Ormond (Lord Lieutenant) departed May the 20th for Ireland, and arrived at Dublin June the 4th, where he was magnificently received.

Endeavours having been long used with the King of Portugal to bring him into the Grand Alliance, he was at last prevailed upon to quit his Engagements with France; and on the 16th of May he concluded a Treaty of Alliance Offensive and Defensive, with the Emperor, the Queen of Great Britain, and the States General. And soon after the Duke of Schomberg was declared General of the Forces to be sent thither.

The Protestants in the Cevennes, a mountainous Part of Languedoc, impatient under the Severities the Court of France had long exercised upon them, took up Arms this Summer, and form'd a considerable Body, which employ'd a good Number of Troops all the Year; it was proposed here to give them Assistance, but the Privy Council not entirely agreeing in it, there was little or nothing done.

The Parliament in Scotland had continued the same without Dissolution ever since they were first chosen as a Convention at the Revolution, which having been a Matter of great Complaint all the latter Years of King William, her Majesty was pleased to put an End to that Parliament, and to order a new one to be elected; which was done accordingly.

And they met on the 6th of May. Her Majesty's Letter to them was read, wherein the Consideration of the State of the Forces, Forts and Garrisons, that they be duly maintained, and the providing sufficient Supplies, were recommended to them. Her Majesty recommended also to their Care the Encouragement of Trade, declared her Affection to that Kingdom, and no-

A. D.

1702.

A. D.
1702.

nominated the Duke of Queensbury as her High Commissioner.

The first Business they went upon was an Act to recognize her Majesty's Authority and undoubted Title to the Crown: To which a Clause being offered to make it Treason to Quarrel her Majesty's Right to the Crown, or Exercise of the Government, a Debate arose, and the latter Words were altered to, her being in the Exercise of the Government. This being over, the Act for a Supply was offered; but an Overture being at the same time offered, it was resolved that should be considered before the Supply. The Overture was, 'That the Parliament should proceed to such Conditions of Government and Regulations in the Constitution, to take Place after her Majesty and the Heirs of her Body, as should be necessary for the Preservation of their Religion and Liberty.' The Court Party endeavoured to postpone this Overture to the Supply, which occasioned warm Debates and severe Reflections upon the Ministry and Parliament of England. On the 28th of May, the Marquis of Athol offered an Act for Security of the Kingdom, in Case of her Majesty's Decease; which after much Debate was received. The Duke of Argyle offered an Act for ratifying the Revolution, and all the Acts following thereon. Mr. Fletcher, an Act containing several Limitations upon the Successor after the Death of her Majesty, and the Heirs of her Body. The Earl of Rothes, an Act that after her Majesty's Death without Heirs, no Person coming to the Crown of Scotland being at the same time King of England should as King of Scotland have Power to make Peace or War without Consent of Parliament. The Earl of Marchmont, an Act for securing the true Protestant Religion, and Presby- terian Government. And Sir Patrick Johnson, an Act allowing the Importation of all sorts of Wines, and other Foreign Liquors. All which were received, and ordered to lie upon the Table. Soon after an Act was brought in for Toleration of all Protestants in the Exercise of Religious Worship. There were also these Acts brought in, namely, an Act for a Triennial Parliament. An Act to incapacitate all Persons having Pensions, and all Officers in the Army, Customs, and Excise, from voting in Parliament in imposing Publick Burdens. And an Act ratifying all the Privileges formerly granted to the Company Trading to Africa and the Indies. With several others. Against the Act of Toleration a Representation from the General Assembly was offered and read, which was followed by Debates to the same Purpose, which made that be laid aside. On the 9th of June the Act for Security of the Kingdom was taken into Consideration, and many smart Speeches were made for it. On the first of July it was read, and a Clause put in, That the Government should on the 20th Day after the Queen's Decease be lodged in the Estates. On the 5th a Clause was added, That in such Assembly of the Estates no Englishman shall have Vote. Then the Limitations of a future Successor were proposed to be made Part of this Act, but was postponed. On the 9th it was proposed that the Act concerning the Power of making Peace and War be considered next after the Act of Security, which was carried in the Affirmative. It was insisted upon, and no Art of the Ministry could divert it, altho' it was adjourned and put off three times, that Clause be inserted, whereby it was declared That the same be not the Successor to the Crown of England, unless such

Conditions

A. D.

1703.

Conditions of Government be before enacted, as may secure the Honour of the Crown, the Frequency of Parliaments, the Religion, Liberty, and Trade of the Nation, from English or any other foreign Influence. And that the Successor in England shall not be King or Queen of Scotland, unless a free Communication of Trade, and the Liberty of the Plantations be first granted by Act of Parliament in England to the Subjects of Scotland. This Clause was voted by a Majority of 72. And to secure it, a Clause was added, whereby it was made High Treason to administer the Coronation Oath but by Appointment of Parliament, or to own such King till he had sworn and accepted the Terms of the Claim of Right, and the other Conditions agreed on in this or succeeding Parliaments. And to finish this tedious Matter, we shall only say, that among divers other Clauses, one was added, which required the Heritors and Burghs to provide themselves with Fire-Arms, for all the sensible Men, being Protestants, within their respective Bounds, and that the said Heritors and Burghs discipline and exercise the said sensible Men once a Month.

When the Act was finished and passed by the Estates, the House urged the Commissioner to give the Royal Assent to it; to which he forbore answering till he had written to England; and then he declared that he had received Power to pass all the Acts that were ready except this. The House was inflamed hereupon, and were obstinate against giving Supplies till this Bill be passed into an Act. So that at last the High Commissioner was fain to put an End to the Session without the Supplies. Accordingly September the 16th the Parliament was prorogued.

To view now the State of the War, Sir Cloudestly Shovel with 25 Sail of Men of War, 2d, 3d, and 4th Rates, with a proportionate Squadron of Dutch, sailed from St. Hellens the 1st of July; they were detained in the Channel for some time by contrary Winds, so they arrived not before Lisbon till the 24th. Sir Stafford Fairborn went on shore, and had Audience of the King, who received him very graciously, and sent a noble Present of Refreshments to the Fleet. After a few Days Stay, they sailed for the Streights, and being arrived on the Coast of Valencia, the Mariners to the Number of 2500, landed at Altea, and formed a Camp, where the Admiral published a Declaration, intimating that he came not to injure the Spaniards, but to protect them from the Tyranny of the French. Which had the good Effect of producing Plenty of Provisions, brought in and sold in the Fleet at reasonable Prices. From thence they sailed to Leghorn, and in the Way some Attempts were made of landing Men and Arms to relieve the Cevennois, but as the Gulph of Narbonne was too dangerous for the whole Fleet to enter, two Ships only were sent with a good Quantity of Arms, Ammunition, and Money, and such French Refugees, as had put themselves on board the Fleet for that Service. These lay on the 17th and 18th of September on the Coast, and gave the Signal directed, which was to have been answered by their Friends on Shore, but was not. A Boat was sent to go ashore, but two French Gallies which lay there, interrupted it, and the Season of the Year not permitting the Ships to lie there, they returned to the Fleet. On the 19th of September, the Fleet arrived before Leghorn, where the Salute from the Town being but five Guns, the Admiral resented it, and

com-

A. D.
1703.

complained to the Great Duke, who caused a Royal Salvo to be made. Count Lamberg came on board the Fleet there the 28th, and acquainted the Admiral, that Charles Archduke of Austria had been proclaimed at Vienna King of Spain. For which News great Rejoicings were made, and 15 Guns fired from every Ship. The Fleet having performed the Business they went upon, and by the close keeping in of the Enemy, having had no Opportunity of engaging any of their Ships, set Sail homewards on the 22d of October, and arrived safe in the Downs the 17th of November.

The Advantage of the War in Germany this Campaign was on the French Side: They took Fort Kehl by the 31st of March, and prepared to penetrate through the Black Forest to join the Elector of Bavaria, who extended his Quarters by the taking several Towns; and on the seventh of April, that Prince came with his Army before Ratisbon, and for Want of the Emperor's Ratification of the Neutrality of that City, he took Possession of the Bridge, and a Gate. Marshal Villars attempted the German Lines the 19th of April, but was repulsed. However he succeeded afterwards, and on the 6th of May joined the Bavarians.

In the mean time things went better on the Lower Rhine, where Bonne was besieged and taken. And in the Netherlands, where the French fled before the Duke of Marlborough, and could not be brought to Battle; which gave Baron Spar Opportunity to force their Lines in the Pais de Waes. But on the other side, Monf. Opdam, with the Dutch Forces which lay near Breda, were surrounded by the French and routed: This was called the Battle of Eckeren, wherein altho' the Dutch behaved themselves bravely, they suffered much. The Confederate Army invested Huy, August 16, and took it the 25th. The Advantage that Conquest gave, induced the Duke of Marlborough to propose the attacking the Enemies Lines between the Mehaign and the Lewe, but the Dutch opposed it, and so it went off. Limburgh was the next Attempt, which after 18 Days Siege surrendered the 28th of September, and Geldre being in December following taken, the French were entirely remov'd from the Banks of the Maes, and two Provinces subjected to the Confederates.

The latter End of the Campaign proved less fortunate to the French and Bavarians than the Beginning, for the Forces under Villars, being but a Part of what were intended to be sent, the Duke of Vendosme was to penetrate another Way, to which Purpose the Duke of Bavaria advanced to Tyrol to meet him, but was so well receiv'd by the Imperialists there, that he was obliged to retire. The Duke of Vendosme in the same manner was repulsed on his Side, when he advanced as far as Trent to meet him. The D. of Bavaria next made an Attempt upon Augsburg, but was repulsed by the Imperial Garrison the Town had received. On the other hand, the French had Success on the Rhine. For while the Imperialists were employed against the Bavarians, Count Tallard with the Duke of Burgundy besieged Old Brisac, which they took, and afterwards invested Landau, on the 7th of October. The Prince of Hesse Cassel, with a good Body of Confederate Forces, was sent from the Netherlands to raise the Siege. He arrived on the 14th, and prepared to attack the Enemy; but while on the 15th the Prince with most of the Officers were carousing and celebrating the Feast of St. Leopold, the Enemy advanced out of

of their Lines, and fell upon the Germans with so much Fury, that after a vigorous Action on both Sides, the Confederates were forced to retire, and the French returned to the Siege, which they prosecuted so well, that soon after the City was surrendered. And to end the Year, Augsburg was taken by the Elector of Bavaria after a short Siege, on the 14th of December.

Other Foreign Affairs which deserve Notice, are, That it was this Year that the Commotions in Hungary begun, which so long disturbed the Emperor, and therein interrupted in a Degree the Progress of the Arms of the Confederates. That King Charles III. immediately after his Father and Brother had surrendered to him their Rights to the Crown of Spain, and he was accordingly proclaimed at Vienna, prepared to go to take Possession of his Kingdom. On the 19th of September he set out thence, and arrived at the Hague November 2. And that it was at the latter End of this Campaign, that the Duke of Savoy, upon the reiterated Application of the Imperial Court, and the Insolences of the French, was brought to be sensible that his Alliance with France was but being himself a Tool in the hand of that Prince for building up an Universal Monarchy, wherein he should also in Time be made a Vassal. The French having Notice of his Design, suddenly seized and disarmed all his Troops that were in their Army; which forced the Duke of Savoy immediately to enter into the Confederacy.

To return Home.

On the 16th of September, the Parliament of Ireland met at Dublin. His Grace the D. of Ormond made a Speech to them, wherein he wished they would provide for the Fortifications and the Barracks, but recommended chiefly the Payment of the Publick Debts, an Account whereof he order'd to be laid before them. The House of Commons chose for their Speaker Alan Broderick, Esq; and then voted an Address of Thanks to the Lord Lieutenant. The House of Lords did the same, and both were presented a few Days after. And on the last of September, the Commons waited on the Lord Lieutenant with a loyal Address to her Majesty, which they desired might be transmitted: The Lords did the same the 9th of October; and on the 14th the Commons voted, That the Funds formerly granted were sufficient to support the Government to Mich. 1703. and resolv'd, That a Supply be granted to make up the Deficiency of the Revenue, to support the necessary Branches of Establishment for two Years, ending at Michaelmas 1705. The Commissioners for Publick Accounts reported, that 103,368 l. was by Misrepresentation charged as a Debt upon the Nation, for which they received the Thanks of the House.

And on October 22. the Commons presented to the Lieutenant a Representation, wherein was set forth, 'That the Constitution of the Kingdom had been of late greatly shaken, the Lives, Liberties, and Estates of the Subject being call'd in Question, and try'd in a manner unknown to their Ancestors. They complained of the Proceedings of the late Trustees, which they imputed to malicious Reports against, and false Representations of, the Protestants of the Kingdom. They also made great Complaints of the Loss of their Trade, the Cash of the Nation being exhausted, and thereby the Manufactures stop'd, and the Protestants reduc'd to Poverty, divers Families whereof had been obliged to leave the Kingdom. That their Foreign Trade

A. D.
1703.

‘ Trade lay under great Restrictions ‘ and Discouragements. That the ‘ Want of frequent Parliaments ‘ had encouraged evil Men for their ‘ own Gain to oppress the Subject.
‘ That the civil Officers were grie‘ vously corrupt. That great Offi‘ cers resided out of the Kingdom,
‘ and their Deputies executed those ‘ Offices ill; and prayed that Par‘ liaments be frequently held, and ‘ permitted to sit and redress Grie‘ vances.’ They afterwards voted,
That divers Pensions to the Sum of 17934 l. per Annum, were unnecessary Branches of the Establishment.
They presented this Representation to the Lord Lieutenant, and soon after made three Addresses: 1. To desire an Account what Half Pay Officers had been provided for. 2.
That all Judges, Commissioners of the Revenue, and other Officers, be obliged to attend in their Places, or be remov’d; and 3. That the Baracks might be maintained at easy and reasonable Rates, and no exorbitant Salaries and Prices given to the Undertaker for the same. After they had set forth their Grievances, they proceeded to the Supply; and on the 26th of October, granted 150,000 l. to her Majesty for supporting the Government for two Years.
They brought in Heads of Bills, for securing the Liberty of the Subject, and to prevent Imprisonment beyond Sea. To prevent the Growth of Popery, and to encourage the Linnen Manufacture, with some others, which they presented in a Body to the Lord Lieutenant, and the Speaker enlarged upon them in a Speech.
They proceeded in divers other Businesses of less publick Concern, and on the 26th of November adjourned to the 11th of January.

On the 9th of November the Parliament of England met, to whom her Majesty made a Speech, and intimated to them the advantageous Alliances she had made with the King of Portugal, and the Duke of Savoy. Recommended the providing the necessary Supplies, and hinted, that an extraordinary Expence would be occasion’d by joining Forces with the King of Portugal, for recovering the Crown of Spain from the House of Bourbon, and restoring it to the House of Austria; and by assisting the Duke of Savoy. Recommended Dispatch, and ended with an earnest Desire of Peace and Union among her Subjects. And to that Purpose, that all Heats and Animosities might be avoided in their Debates.

Both Houses address’d the Queen,
to thank her for her gracious Speech,
and to congratulate her Majesty upon the Alliance.

On the 19th of November, the Copies of the Treaties being laid before the House, a few Days after they came to these Resolutions, 1.
That 40,000 Men, including 5,000
Mariners, be employ’d for the Sea Service the next Year, and 4 l. per Man per mensem be granted for maintaining them. 2. That the 40,000 Men at Land, with the 10,000 Additional Troops, be continued to act in Conjunction with the Allies next Year. And 3. That the Proportion of Land Forces to act in conjunction with the King of Portugal be 1000 Horse and Dragoons, and 7000
Foot. That 884,072 l. be granted for maintaining the said 40,000 Men the next Year. That 55,272 l. be granted for Payment of her Majesty’s Proportion of Subsidies to the Allies.
That 168,180 l. be granted for maintaining the said 10,000 Additional Troops. That 150,000 l. be granted for the Portugal Service. That 357,000 l. be granted for maintaining Guards and Garrisons. That 118,362 l. be granted for the Ordnance, for Land Service. And 60,000 l. for circulating Exchequer Bills. In all 3,818,886 l.

Before

Before we proceed in the Parliamentary Affairs, it will be necessary to speak of the Calamity that fell upon us during its sitting.

On the 26th of November at about eleven at Night began a violent Wind, which increased at Midnight, and rose to so grievous and dreadful a Tempest, continuing till six in the Morning, that no Man's Memory reached the like, nor perhaps was there ever a Storm more violent. In the Country innumerable Trees were blown up by the Roots, Houses overturned, and Stacks of Corn and Hay dispersed. In Cities the Chimneys were blown down, and the Tilings of Houses swept quite away, by the Fall whereof the Houses were extremely broken, and many Persons killed, particularly the Bishop of Bath and Wells and his Lady. The Loss of the Tiling, Leading, Glass Windows, Garden Walls, and every Thing that was liable to be blown away, was so great, that it was reckoned a Million of Money would be required to repair it. But next to many Lives that were lost at Sea and Land, the Number of Shipping thereby destroyed was the greatest Calamity. Besides a great many Merchant Ships, Thirteen Men of War perished in the Downs, and with them 1,519 Seamen. Sir Stafford Fairborn was driven out of the Downs, and carried as far as Gottemberg, before he could get into Port.

The House of Commons presented an Address to the Queen deploring this Calamity, and promising to repair the Damage done to the Fleet, desiring that in the mean Time her Majesty would please to give Orders for the rebuilding such Ships as were necessary, and withal desiring the Queen that she would be pleased to afford some Provision to the Families of those Seamen that were drowned, till the House could provide for it. Which her Majesty most graciously complied with. And on the 17th of December published an Order, whereby the Widows of those Officers and Seamen who were lost in the Storm, were intitled to her Majesty's Bounty in the same Manner as if they had been killed in Fight.

The same Storm did much Damage in Holland and in France, but the Northern Counties of England, as well as all Scotland escaped it.

The Time of this Session of Parliament was extremely taken up in Controversies, between the two Houses. The Commons brought in again the Bill against Occasional Conformity, in the form whereof they almost quite agreed with what the Lords by their Amendments left it last Session, which passed in that House the 17th of December, and was sent to the Lords for their Concurrence. But it was opposed there, and after many Speeches against it, upon the second Reading it was rejected by a Majority of 12 or 13 Voices.

On the 14th of December, Intimation was given to the House of Lords, that divers Persons, Dependants on the Duke of Berwick, were come over into Scotland, and had been seized. The Earl of Nottingham told the House, that this Matter was already before the Queen, and would be laid before the House in form; but nevertheless the Lords appointed a select Committee to examine into it. On the 17th the Queen came to the House to pass the Land-Tax, and then in a Speech declared that she had Information of very ill Designs carrying on in Scotland, the Particulars whereof should be laid before them. This gave Occasion to the Commons to express their Resentment against the Lords for having appointed a Committee to examine into this Matter, before

G g

A. D.
1703.

A D.
1703.

before it come regularly before 'em. Which they expressed in an Address to the Queen on the 23d. This was the rise of a Controversy between the two Houses, which lasted long, but is of no use to Posterity, and therefore we shall say no more of it.

Her Majesty's Birth-Day happening on Sunday this Year, it was celebrated on Monday, which was performed with great Magnificence and Joy. But the Queen in her own Acts much exceeded the Compliments of her Subjects, for on the same Day in a Message to the House of Commons, her Majesty declared her Intention of making a Present of the Revenue of the first Fruits and Tenths to the poorer Clergy, by making that Revenue a Fund for augmenting poor Vicarages; which she desired the House to find a Method of making effectual. This was gratefully received, and Addresses of Thanks were presented to her Majesty by the House, by the Convocations of the Clergy of both Provinces, and by the Clergy of every Diocese in the Kingdom. A Bill was brought in pursuant thereto and passed into an Act.

On the 24th of February, the Queen came to the House, and passed an Act for granting an Aid to her Majesty for carrying on the War by selling Annuities; whereby 1,018,867 l. was to be taken in for purchasing Annuities of 99 Years at 15 Years Purchase. And 300,000 l. for Annuities upon one Life at 9 Years Purchase, two Lives at 11 Years, and three Lives at 12 Years, or at 15 Years Purchase for 99 Years. An Act for a publick Register in Yorkshire. An Act for increase of Seamen, and encouraging Navigation, and many others.

The other Aids granted this Parliament for carrying on the War, besides the Land-Tax already mentioned, were, The Duty on Malt continued; and an additional Subsidy of one Third of the old Subsidy of Tonnage and Poundage for three Years.

The Act for making more effectual the Queen's Intentions for the Augmentation of the Maintenance of the poorer Clergy, impowered her Majesty to erect a Corporation with perpetual Succession, and to settle upon it the first Fruits of all Benefices Spiritual, for augmenting the Maintenance of Ministers officiating in any Church or Chapel in England or Wales, not sufficiently provided for, in such Manner as shall be therein expressed. Allowed any Person to bequeath Lands, Goods, or Chattels to this Corporation for the Purpose aforesaid, which may be held and enjoyed notwithstanding the Statute of Mortmain. Enacted, that no Fifth Bond for First Fruits shall be taken hereafter, and all the Four Bonds shall be comprized in One. And provided, That this Act shall not vacate any Grant already made of Pensions upon the Duty of First Fruits.

These were the Matters of chiefest Moment transacted this Session, which lasted till the 3d of April, on which Day her Majesty came to the House, and passed 12 Publick and 24 Private Acts, and then made a Speech, wherein she thanked them for the Dispatch in providing the Supplies, and recommended Peace among ourselves, which as she had earnestly desired at the Opening of the Session, she said, Tho' it has not met with all that Success I wished and expected, I am not discouraged from persisting in the same Desires.

We must now look back to speak of the Arrival of King Charles in Spain in England.

Sir George Rook with a Squadron of Men of War was sent over to Holland by her Majesty, to conduct his Catholick Majesty hither.

went on Board accordingly, and on December 25, the Fleet was seen passing through the Downs for Spithead, where he arrived the next Day. He was waited upon on Board by the Dukes of Somerset and Marlborough. The Duke of Somerset Master of the Horse presented a Letter and Compliment from the Queen, and invited his Majesty on Shoar. On the 28th he landed, and was conducted by the Duke of Somerset to his Grace's Seat at Petworth, whither his Royal Highness came to meet him. His Majesty lay there that Night, and the next Day set forward for Windsor; whither her Majesty went on the 27th to receive the Visit he desired to make her. He arrived there on the 29th at Seven in the Evening, and was received by her Majesty at the Stair-Head. He supped that Night with her Majesty, was visited in his Apartment the next Morning by the Queen, and led her Majesty thence to Dinner. The Afternoon was spent in Musick and Diversions, and after Supper he would not be satisfied, till after great Compliments he had prevailed to hold the Napkin when her Majesty washed. The next Morning he departed, being attended to the Coach side by his Royal Highness, and went to Petworth that Day, accompanied by the Duke of Somerset. On the 1st of January in the Evening, his Majesty arrived at Portsmouth, where he was received by the Mayor and Aldermen in their Formalities, who attended him to the Water-side, the Streets being illuminated: And went on Board the Royal Catherine at Spithead, extremely well satisfied with his Reception and Entertainment at Windsor, and with the Honours paid him in the several Towns through which he passed. On the 5th the whole Fleet set Sail from Spithead for Portugal with a fair Wind, but a Storm took them with a contrary Wind in the Bay of Biscay, which dispersed the Fleet, and obliged the Admiral to return. He arrived with the King of Spain on board him at St. Hellens the 22d, and came to Spithead the 23d; whither the Duke of Somerset by her Majesty's Command went, and waited upon his Catholick Majesty: Who the next Day came on Shoar, and remained at Portsmouth till the 4th of February, when the Wind coming fair, he went on Board again. On the 6th they set sail a second Time, and pursued their Voyage, and arrived safe at Lisbon the 7th of March, N. S. He was magnificently received there, but as that is no Part of the English History, we omit the Particulars of it.

Her Majesty was pleased at the Beginning of the third Year of her Reign, to make an Alteration in her Ministry, whereby according to the Style of those Times, the Low-Church Party came into Play.

The Earl of Nottingham resigned his Place of Secretary of State, which was given to Robert Harley, Esq; The Earl of Jersey was removed from the Place of Lord Chamberlain, and the Earl of Kent advanced to that Post. The White-Staff was taken from Sir Edward Seymour, and Thomas Mansel, Esq; was made Comptroller of the Household. Other Alterations of less Moment we omit.

In Scotland also some Changes were made. The Duke of Queensbury was removed from his Place of being Secretary of State, and the Earl of Cromarty was preferred to that Post. Sir David Nairn, Deputy Secretary, was changed for Mr. Alex. Wedderburn, and James Johnson, Esq; was made Clerk Register, in the Room of Mr. Philiphaugh. And finally, 1704.

A. D.

finally, the Marquis of Tweeddale was constituted her Majesty's High Commissioner.

On the 6th of July, the Parliament of Scotland met at Edinburgh and adjourned to the 11th, when the Queen's Letter was read. Her Majesty expressed her Concern for the Differences and Divisions among them, promised to grant whatever could in Reason be demanded for rectifying Abuses, and quieting their Minds. Recommended to them in especial Manner the settling the Succession in the Protestant Line, and was willing to give into any reasonable Terms and Conditions of Government with respect to the Successor. Laid before them the Necessity of raising Funds, the former being expired and exhausted, for maintaining the Forces, &c. And lastly, recommended to them the Advancement of Piety, and Discouragement of Vice and Immorality.

The Lord Commissioner enlarged upon the Letter in a Speech, and was seconded by the Earl of Cromarty.

But all had little Effect, the House continued in the same Temper, and were so far from naming a Successor, that several Motions of Overtures were made for a Resolution, Not to name a Successor till a previous Treaty of Commerce be made with England, and Limitations and Conditions of the Government be made for securing the Religion, Liberty, and Independency of the Nation. Which after much Debate, was at last put to the Vote, and carried in the Affirmative by a Majority of 55. On the 19th of July, Duke Hamilton moved that this Business should be proceeded upon before the Supply, except two Months Cess for present Subsistence of the Forces. On the 21st, an Act for 14 Months Cess, payable in two Years, being brought in, it was debated, and then the Vote put, whether to give a Supply for two Months or six Months Cess. Carried by 16 Voices for six Months. But on the 25th when it came again to be considered, the Act for Security was brought in, and upon Debate voted, That the Parliament will proceed to grant two Months Cess for subsisting her Majesty's Forces, and as soon as the Act of Security has got the Royal Assent, will give four Months more. Thus they in Effect tacked it to the Money Bill, and without passing it, the necessary Supplies could not be obtained. Neither could the Queen be assured that the refusing both would not have produced a Rebellion, so violent was the Temper of the Nation at that Time. To comply with Necessity therefore the Act of Security in the Terms we mentioned in our Account of the Proceedings of last Session, received the Royal Assent on the 5th of August. The rest of the Session was taken up in examining the Accounts, in forming an Act for Exporting Wool, and other Asperities, which made the High Commissioner prorogue the Parliament on the 27th of August. But they first drew up an Address to the Queen, desiring that the Evidence and Papers relating to the Plot (which we spoke of in the Proceedings of the English Parliament) might be laid before them next Session, wherein they reflected smartly on the House of Lords for having meddled in that Matter.

The Progress of her Majesty's Army this Year was very happy. The Imperial Envoy presented a Memorial to the Queen on the 2d of April, to set forth the pressing Necessity of the Empire, by the Duke of Bavaria's bringing a French Army into the Heart of it, and by the Perplexity and Confusion the

Insurrection

Insurrection in Hungary had brought the Emperor's Hereditary Countries into. And to beseech her Majesty to give the Duke of Marlborough Orders to concert Measures with the States-General for the Relief of the Empire, by sending a Body of Troops thither. The Queen gave this Envoy a very favourable Answer. And the Duke of Marlborough being arrived in Holland, May 4, N. S. he had a Conference with the States-General, wherein he set forth the Dangers the Empire was in, and declared that being now Master of the Maese and all the Spanish Guelderland, a small Number of Forces would defend their Frontiers. His Reasons had full Influence, and produced a Resolution of pursuing the Measures he had propounded. And his Grace set out accordingly the next Day to go and assemble the Army. He arrived at Maastricht on the 13th, where Part of the Army were already encamped, and proceeded on the 16th on his March towards Germany, being joined on the 18th by the English Forces.

This March amused the French; they apprehended it might tend to the Moselle, to penetrate into France that Way; and besides they were in pain for Landau, which kept their Troops in perpetual March and Counter-march, whilst the Army in the mean time kept their Way thro' the Electorate of Cologne to Coblenz, thence to Mentz, passed the Maine, and with as much Speed, as consisted with the proper Ease to the Troops, hastened forward to the Danube. The Compliments and Visits which the Duke received in his Passage, from the Elector of Mentz, Prince Eugene of Savoy, Prince Lewis of Baden, and others, are not necessary to be particularized here, 'tis sufficient to say, that he was treated with extream Honour and Respect.

On the 22d of June he joined Prince Lewis of Baden, and two Days after encamped near the Banks of the Danube.

The Army being now arrived in perfect good Order on the Frontiers of the Elector of Bavaria's Dominions, it was resolved to enter upon immediate Action. Donawert, a Town upon the Danube near the Mouth of the Lech, as it lay first in their Way, was first to be taken, and accordingly it was resolved upon in the Council of War; the Town was provided with a good Garrison under the Command of Count d'Arco Field-Marshal to the Elector of Bavaria, and was covered by a Fortification called the Schellenbergh, where great Entrenchments were cast up to add to its Strength. But the Duke, with Prince Lewis of Baden, and Baron Hompesch the Dutch General (despising all Difficulties) set out on the 3d of July N. S. at three in the Morning, and made a March of 20 English Miles with 6,000 Foot, 30 Squadrons of Horse, and 3 Regiments of Imperial Grenadiers, and a good Train of Artillery, thro' a bad Road, and over a River which lay in their Way: All which so fatigued the Soldiers, that it was six at Night before they made the intended Onset. Some of the Generals were of Opinion that the Soldiers should be allowed to rest that Night, but his Grace was of the contrary Mind, and courageously resolved to give the Enemy no longer Time, but immediately to attack them. Which was undertaken and carried on with incredible Vigour. The Enemy were 18,000 Men, choice Troops, and had the Advantage of Entrenchments, and were not wanting in a resolute Defence; but the Confederate Troops, after two Repulses,

G g 3

forced

A. D.
1704.

forced the Entrenchments, made a terrible Slaughter of the Enemy, and put them to Flight. The Count d'Arco swarm over the Danube, and many of his Officers took the same Way.

The Enemy's Loss was 5000 Men, and the Confederates not much less, for the Fight lasted an Hour and half in most furious Action. Fifteen Pieces of the Enemy's Cannon, and all their Ammunition, Tents, and Baggage, and a very rich Booty, were taken. This glorious Victory, wherein the Duke of Marlborough by admirable Conduct and Bravery gained immortal Honour, gave the Confederates free Entry into Bavaria, and obliged that Elector to retire under the Cannon of Augsburgh; but first sent Word to his Garrison at Donauwert to retire, and set the Town on Fire; but the Confederates advanced with such speed, that they had not time to put those Orders in Execution, and so the Town was saved. They found here 20,000 Sacks of Meal, great Store of Oats, and Plenty of all sorts of Provision and Ammunition.

The Army pursued the Victory, and entering Bavaria took several Towns, and put the Country under Military Execution.

The French on the other Hand were diligent in their Endeavours to relieve the Duke of Bavaria; to which Purpose a gallant Army of 22,000 Horse and Foot under the Command of Count Tallard, additional to what they had already there under Marshal Marfin, marched to the Danube, and on the 4th of August joined the Elector's Army. This obliged Prince Eugene to join the Duke of Marlborough, and their two Armies observed the Enemy, while Prince Lewis of Baden besieged Ingolstadt. A few Days after, viz. August 13. N. S.

was fought that famous Battle of Blenheim. The Particulars whereof have been so often told, and are so well known, that 'tis needless to enter into the Detail. We shall only say therefore, That Advices being brought that the Enemy advanced, it was resolved to march and give them Battle; the Place where the French encamped had a Rivulet in Marshy Ground in the Front, the Village Blenheim on the Danube on the Right, and a Wood on the Left. It was necessary for the Confederates to pass the Rivulet, which accordingly they effected, and about one Hour after Noon began the Attack. Prince Eugene and the Imperial Troops were on the Right, General Churchill, Lieutenant General Lumley, the Lord Orkney, and Lieutenant-General Ingoldsfy, with the rest of the English and Dutch Officers on the Left, and the Duke of Marlborough in the Center commanded the Whole. The dispute was very sharp with equal Advantage till 5 of the Clock, at which Time the Imperialists under Prince Eugene were hard pressed by the Bavarians, but being relieved by the Duke of Marlborough, who ordered the Corps de Reserve to advance, put a Stop to the Enemy, and in the third Attack about seven of the Clock broke them. The English and Dutch in the mean Time gained such Ground upon the French, that they obliged their Horse to retire in Confusion, and leave the Foot to our Mercy. Twenty eight Battalions and 12 Squadrons retired into the Village of Blenheim, and defended themselves an Hour and Half, but being surrounded by our Troops, they were at last overcome, many killed, and the rest surrendered themselves Prisoners of War. And the Confederates by that Time were Masters of the Enemy's Camp, Cannon, and Baggage.

Baggage. Abundance of Officers were taken, and among the rest the French General himself, Count Tallard, was made Prisoner. The Bavarians with their Duke at the Head of them, by taking a different Road, and keeping in a Body, got off, but the French were miserably slaughtered in their Flight. The Enemy's Loss was vastly great; besides several General Officers, 1,200 others, and 12,000 Common-Soldiers, were taken Prisoners by the Confederates; the Particulars of the Captives shew them 11,192, besides 3,000, who took Service with the Allies. And the Number killed must needs be great; 10 French Battalions were cut to pieces, and 30 Squadrons of Horse and Dragoons were driven into the Danube and drowned, besides 4 or 5,000 that were killed in the Pursuit, and what fell in the Battle. The intercepted Letters from the Enemies confessed their Loss to be 40,000. There were found in the Enemies Camp, 100 Pieces of Brass Cannon, 24 Mortars, 3,600 Tcnts, 300 laden Mules, and a great Quantity of Money. And there were 129 Colours, 171 Standards, and 17 Pair of Kettle Drums, taken in the Battle. This great Victory cost the Allies 4,485 Men killed, 7,525 wounded, and 273 Prisoners.

The Effect of this Victory was the Reduction of Bavaria to the Dominion of the Emperor, which was performed before Winter. But as that Work might be done with a Part of the Army, the Duke of Marlborough, Prince Eugene, and Prince Lewis, left it to General Thungen to accomplish, and marched with their Armies to the Rhine. On the 12th of September the Imperial Army sat down before Landau, and formed the Siege of it, wherein Prince Lewis commanded, while the Duke of Marlborough and Prince Eugene covered the Siege. The French Governor acted his Part so well, that although the King of the Romans came to command in the Siege in order to expedite the taking the City, it held out till the 23d of November, on which Day they capitulated, and marched out on the 25th, whereby the Army was hindered from making the victorious Progress into France, which would have been done in these two Months time, had not this Siege been necessary. This, with the taking Traerbach, ended the Campaign on that Side.

Before we proceed it must be noted, That the Emperor was so sensible of the Kindness her Majesty had shewn in sending her Army so far to his Relief, and of the Bravery and excellent Conduct of her General, that immediately after the Battle of Schellenberg he sent to the Duke of Marlborough the Dignity of a Prince of the Empire, which his Grace declined to accept; the Emperor therefore wrote to the Queen, wherein after his Thanks for her Favour, he entreated her Majesty to command the Duke of Marlborough to accept the Title of Prince of the Empire, which he purposed to confer on him. The Queen gave him Orders accordingly. And the Emperor by his Letters on the 28th of August, conferred that Honour upon him. The necessary Instruments were afterwards dispatched to ratify it in full Form. And Mindelheim a Fief, lying in the Circle of Suabia, at that time devolved to the Emperor, was given to his Highness.

Altho' this great Effort was made in Germany, the Confederates were so far from suffering in Flanders this Year, that the Advantages of the Campaign were rather on their side. Monsieur d'Averquerque commanded the main Army on Brabant side, and Baron Spar the Army in Dutch Flanders; the former twice broke the Enemies Lines, bombarded Namur, and stood his Ground against the united Force of the Enemy under the Duke of Bavaria and Marshal Villeroy, when on the 28th of October they marched to attack him. 'Tis true, it was said that Villeroy checked the Resolution of the Elector by producing positive Orders against Fighting, which made that Prince leave the Army in Disgust. The latter (Baron Spar) bombarded Bruges, and took Fort Isabella, which interrupted the Navigation to Stuys.

A. D.
1704.

In Savoy the French had the better, they took Vercell, making the Garrison Prisoners of War, altho' they had made a brave Defence, and got Possession of the Valley of Aosta, whereby the Communication with Germany through Switzerland was cut off. And on the 14th of October the Duke of Vendosme sat down before Verrue, a strong Fortrefs seated on the River Po, in the midway between Casal and Turin, but the strength of the Place, the good defence the Garrison made, and the Communication with it which the Duke of Savoy was able to keep open, rendered this Siege very painful and ruinous to the French; for so earnest was that King in the Resolution of taking the Place, that the Siege was continued all the Winter, altho' the Frost and Snow killed his Men almost as fast as the Enemies Bullets: So, altho' at last, that is in April following, it was surrendered, the length of the Siege, and the Loss the French sustained in it, was as favourable to the Duke of Savoy as a Victory.

Pursuant to the Alliance with the King of Portugal, the Queen and the States General hrd sent over Forces to assist that Prince. Duke Schomberg was Commander in Chief of the English, and Count Fagel of the Dutch.

As soon as King Charles arrived, the Councils for carrying on the War were frequently held, but the Resolution taken therein not agreeing with the Sentiments of Duke Schomberg, who maintained that all the English should act in the Field, whereas the Portuguese would put part of them into their Frontier Garrisons: And that Court refusing him the Post of Commander in Chief, which his Father formerly enjoyed, there was no good Understanding between them. To prevent therefore the ill Effects, her Majesty pitched upon the Earl of Galway, whom she was pleased to send for from his Retirement in the Country, and imposed on him (for he desired to be suffered to decline it) the Command of her Forces in Portugal, which Office was conferred on him the 25th of June, and being allowed a Reinforcement of 4,000 Men from England, the Dutch sending a proportionate Number also, he set sail on the 30th of July, and in eight Days arrived at Lisbon. The Kings of Portugal and Spain marched their Armies to the Frontiers to make head against the Army brought by the Duke of Anjou, who in Person invaded Portugal by the beginning of May. He took Portalegre, and Castle Davide. But while the French lay before the last Place, the Marquiss das Minas with 1,500 Men was sent out the 2d of June to make a Diversion on the Frontiers of Spain; he took Fuente Grinaldo, and marched to Monfanta. The Spaniards marched to the Relief of this Place, which obliged the General to leave the Siege to go to meet them, which he did, and fought them so bravely that the Spaniards were put to Flight after the loss of 200 Men killed. The Portuguese returned returned to the Siege, and took Monfanta, but could not save Castle Davide.

Let us now view the Sea Service this Summer. Sir George Rook with the Confederate Fleet, as we have told you, arrived at Lisbon the 7th of March, N. S. He sail'd thence the 16th to cruize off Cape St. Vincent, to secure the Passage of the Turkey Fleet, and sent out Detachments, who took several of the Enemies Ships. The Turkey Fleet being out of Danger, he return'd to Lisbon the 20th of April; where being reinforced by 4 English Men of War, and the Cruizers all come in, he sailed (May the 8th) with the whole Confederate Fleet, consisting of 40 Sail of Line of Battle Ships, with the Prince of Hesse Darmstadt, a good number of Spanish Officers, and two Companies of Foot on board, and stood for the Streights. Count de Tholouse, with the Brest Squadron, appeared soon after off the Rock of Lisbon, and frighted the Portuguese, but he went off, and made the best of his Way to the Streights to join the Thoulon Squadron.

The Confederate Fleet failed to Barcelona, where the Prince of Hesse Darmstadt's Interest gave them hopes of a kind Reception. But it did not succeed, and so the Fleet return'd. At the Isles of Hieres the Admiral sent on Shore to take Prisoners for Intelligence, and at the same time by a Ship come in from the Atlantick, had Advice of the Approach of Tholouse; whereupon it was resolved that the whole Fleet should sail in quest of the Enemy. On the 7th of June they came in sight of 'em, but the French took the Advantage of a Wind, and got off. The Fleet missing this Opportunity, sailed through the Streights, and anchor'd at Lagos, received Sir Cloudsley Shovel with his Squadron, and sent ashore for Provisions, and then set Sail again for the Mediterranean. On the 17th of July, lying off Tetuan, a Council of War was held, wherein it was resolved to attack Gibraltar. On the 21st they entred the Bay, and immediately landed 1800 Mariners, headed by the Prince of Hesse Darmstadt, and summon'd the Town. The Governor stood upon the Defensive, and so the Attack was pursued. The Fleet fir'd (on the 23d) 15,000 Shot upon the Town, which beat the Enemy from their Guns. Boats were then sent on Shoar with Men to attack the South Mole, which was well executed. And in short, the Seamen on one side, and the Landmen on the other, so well performed their Parts, that by the 24th the Governor capitulated. Never was a braver Act performed. In three Days was taken a Town well fortified both by Art and Nature; for 100 Guns were planted on the Walls to the Sea Side, and on the Land side there were but two narrow Passes, which might have been defended by few against Thousands of ordinary Assailants; but the Seamen fought with such Intrepidity, that they carried all before them; and in fine, the Town was taken with very little Loss on our Part.

The taking of a Place of such Importance put a damp upon the Duke of Anjou's Affairs, and such a Disgrace upon his and the French King's Power, that it was necessary to give some smart Blow to recover it. Orders were therefore immediately sent to the Count de Tholouse to meet and fight the Confederate Fleet. The French Admiral was well pleased with these Orders, for besides a great Superiority in Strength, his Ships were all clean and full mann'd. The Confederates on the other Side, besides the Disadvantage in Strength, had lost

A. D.

1704:

A. D.
1704.

lost many of their Men in the Length of the Time they had been at Sea, had spent their Provisions and Stores; and by the Expence of Ammunition in the taking Giberalter, were reduced to great Poverty in it. Besides all this, six of the best Dutch Ships, and four of the Englisch, were gone out but a few Days before to meet some Merchant Ships which wanted Convoy. Judge then if the French had not a fair Prospect of a glorious Victory; and judge then what Applause is due to that Admiral, those Commanders, and those Seamen, who with all these Disadvantages fought the Enemy from Ten in the Morning till Night, kept their Station in Sight of the Enemy all the next Day, and all that Night, wherein they retired, and even pursued and came up with them the Day following, bravely offering Battle, if the Enemy had had Courage to attack them, but they chose to take the Advantage of the Wind, and flink off. This Battle was fought off Malaga the 24th of August, N. S. Our Fleet sailed to Gibraltar, where they refitted; and having put Men and Provisions into the Place, Sir George Rook sailed thence the 4th of September N. S. arrived at Spithead the 15th of the same Month O. S. and waited on the Queen at Windfor the 29th.

The Possession of Gibraltar by the Confederates was such a Grievance to the Spaniards, that all Efforts were resolved to be made to recover it. The Marquis de Villadarias was immediately sent with 4,000 Men to besiege it, and the Count de Thoulouse was to have been assistant to him in it, but the rough Treatment he received in the Engagement left it only in his Power to reinforce that General with 4000 Men out of his Men of War and Gallies. With this Force the Marquis sat down before the Town and opened Trenches the 22d of October N. S. Sir John Leak and Admiral Vanderdussen with 13 Englisch and 6 Dutch Men of War, sailed to Gibraltar as soon as they heard of the Siege, and came thither with seasonable Relief, when the Enemy had made considerable Branches in the Fortifications. Also the King of Portugal and the Lord Galway immediately sent 26 Transports laden with Men, Officers, and Necessaries; 16 whereof arrived safe in the middle of December, the other 4 were separated by a Fleet of French Men of War, who took one, and the other three got back to Lisbon. With which Reinforcements the besieged were able to defend themselves all that Winter and oblige the Enemy to raise the Siege, as we shall shew hereafter. The Bravery, Vigilance, Activity and Wisdom of the Prince of Hesse Darmstadt is exceedingly applauded, and the Courage and Patience of the Soldiers in the severe Duty and vast Fatigue they underwent was incomparable. Thus much for the State of the War this Year. We should now return Home; but that one Foreign Affair although remote requires our Notice.

The Hungarians, as we have said last Year raised an Insurrection against their Sovereign the Emperor which being a Load upon the Prince in Prejudice to the Alliance her Majesty with the States-General were pleased to offer a Mediation of Peace between his Imperial Majesty and his Hungarian Subjects, wherein by their Envoys, they laboured all the Summer, but to no Purpose the two Parties not being brought to pacifick Terms.

Affairs in England were so happy and quiet, that no Matter for History offered it self this Summer.

On the 24th of October the Parliament met, to whom her Majesty made a most gracious Speech, intimating that as the great and remarkable Success, with which God had blessed our Arms this Summer, had stirred up all her Subjects to express their Joy and Satisfaction, she assured herself they came disposed to do every thing that is necessary for the effectual Prosecution of the War: Nothing being more obvious, than that a timely Improvement of the present Advantages would enable us to procure a lasting Foundation of Security for England, and firm Support for the Liberty of Europe. This, said her Majesty, is my Aim, I have no Interest, nor ever will have any, but to promote the Good and Happiness of my Subjects. Then desired the Commons to provide the necessary Supplies, and earnestly recommended Unanimity in their Councils.

Both Houses presented their Addresses of Thanks to her Majesty, congratulating her upon her glorious Victories, and declaring their Loyalty and affectionate Zeal to her Service.

The Commons were expeditious in the Queen's Business. On the 29th of November, the Supply for the Navy was voted, and on the 11th, 14th, and 16th of the same Month, the Supplies for the Army were voted. The Sum for these Services were thus: For maintaining 40,000 Seamen, including 8,000 Mariners, 4 Pounds per Man per mensem for thirteen Months, which makes 2,080,000 l. For the Ordinary of the Navy, 100,000 l. and 40,000 l. for Ordnance Stores for Sea Service, over and above the Proportion of the 4 l. per Man. For making a Wharf and Store-house at Portsmouth 10,000 l. For 40,000 Landmen to act in Conjunction with the Allies, 885,193 l. For 10,000 additional Forces for the same Service, 177,511 l. For maintaining 10,000 Men to act in Conjunction with the Forces of the King of Portugal, 222,379 l. For her Majesty's Proportion of the Subsidies to her Allies, 370,119 l. For her Majesty's Subsidy to the Duke of Savoy, from October 3, to December 25, 1703, 40,000 l. For Levy Money for recruiting the Horses of the English Horse and Dragoons lost at Schellemburg and Blenheim, 6,725 l. For recruiting the Men and Horses of the Foreigners in her Majesty's Pay in the same Battles, 24,665 l. For an additional Regiment upon the Portugal Establishment, 5,136 l. For Surgeons in the Hospital in Portugal for the Year 1704, 244 l. For Expences in the Portugal War last Year not provided for by Parliament, 68,546 l. For Guards and Garrisons in England, 357,000 l. For the Ordnance of the Land Service, 120,000 l. For Transports 60,000 l. For circulating Exchequer Bills, 4000 l. And for 5000 additional Forces to be raised in Conjunction with our Allies to serve with the Fleet, for their Levy, 11,244 l. for their Pay for one Year, 87,125 l. In all, 4,670,486 l. To raise which, they gave a Land Tax for 4 s. in the Pound, and the Duty upon Malt, and upon the Fund of 3700 l. per Week out of the Excise, 877,930 l. for purchasing Annuities for 99 Years at 15 Years Purchase. A Subsidy on Wines and Merchandize for four Years, as a Fund for raising 646,957 l. for the Use of the Navy. And the Duty upon Low Wines, &c. continued.

Not long after the Supplies were granted, Mr. Bromley moved in the House, that a Bill to prevent Occasional Conformity be brought in. Which was ordered, and read a first and second Time, when the better

A. D.

1704.

ter to secure its passing, it was moved that it be joined to the Bill for the Land Tax: And the Question was put accordingly. But it passed in the Negative. No's 251, Yea's 134. This Attempt ruin'd the present Power of the High-church Party; for it was consider'd that such a Proceeding in the Commons was intended to take away the Negative Voice in the House of Lords and the Sovereign. And that the Lords, to maintain their own Right, would assuredly have thrown out the Money Bill for the Sake of the Tack; which would have occasioned a Dissolution of the Parliament, and that would have so delay'd the Preparations for the next Campaign, as to be very injurious to ourselves and all Europe. This being obvious to every Capacity, raised such an Indignation in the Nation against the Tackers, as made many of them lose their Election at the Choice of the next Parliament. The Bill went thro' the House of Commons, and was sent up to the Lords, read a first Time, but deny'd a second Reading by a Majority of 21 Voices.

The principal Matters debated on in this Session, were, The Affair of the Ailsbury Election, the Scotch Security Act, and an Enquiry into the Administration of the Admiralty. These two last began in the House of Lords by a Speech of the Lord Haversham, November the 23d.

He seemed to lay a Blame upon every Part of the publick Administration. But those relating to the Admiralty and the Scottish Affairs, were all the Lords thought fit to meddle with. On the latter they debated long, and in the Issue agreed upon a Bill to obviate the Dangers from the Security Bill, which they passed, and sent down to the Commons. But that House having one of their own to the same Purpose before them, laid by that from the Lords, and passed their own, which afterwards was agreed to by the Lords, and received the Royal Assent.

The Address presented by the Lords to the Queen the 5th of February, relating to the Admiralty, exhibited a Charge of Misfeifances, consisting of these three Sorts. 1. That during the 3 preceeding Years, 366,032 l. had been expended upon the Navy, more than was appointed by Parliament. 2. That less Money had been paid to the Service of the Navy than was intended, by 1,142,361 l. whereby the Debt to the Navy which in 1702 was 1,016,767 l. was increased to 2,266,864 l. 3. That 1566 Men were wanting last Year of the Compliment of Seamen provided for by Parliament. And 4. That too large Salaries were given to the Prince's Council, and others. The Council of the Admiralty laid before her Majesty an Answer to all these Objections, which being in Print, we must refer to, as not being able to reduce it in a Compass narrow enough for this Place. I shall note this only, that they declared the Funds given to the Navy, had produced short of what they were given for by 1,194,249 l.

The Duke of Marlborough had made a Journey to Berlin after the Campaign, to make a Contract with the King of Prussia for 8000 Men, to serve under the Duke of Savoy, which he effected to the great Satisfaction of the Queen and Parliament; this hindered his Return home till the 14th of December, when appearing in the House of Lords the next Day, he was complimented and congratulated in the Name of the whole House by the Lord Keeper. The House of Commons also voted him Thanks, and delivered it by a Committee. On the 11th of January, the House of Commons unanimously unanimously voted that an Address be presented to her Majesty, that she would be graciously pleased to consider of some proper Means to perpetuate the Memory of the great Services performed by the Duke. Her Majesty soon after was pleased by a Message to declare to the House, That having taken their Address into Consideration, she inclined to grant the Interest of the Crown in the Honour and Manor of Woodstock and Hundred of Wotton, to him and his Heirs, and desired their Assistance thereupon. The House immediately resolved to bring in a Bill to confirm the said Grant, which was done accordingly, and passed into an Act.

On the 14th of March the Queen came to the House, passed the Bills, and made a Speech, wherein she thanked them for their Dispatch, exhorted to Union, and hinted at the fatal Effect of unreasonable Humour and Animosity we so narrowly escaped this Session. And then the Parliament was prorogued to the 1st of May.

Along with the Duke of Marlborough, came over those of the French Prisoners that were thought fit to be detained in England. On the 16th of December they were landed at Blackwall, and set forward that Afternoon to the Places they were appointed to reside at. The Marshal de Tallard with six other General Officers, a Brigadier and a Colonel of Dragoons, were sent to Nottingham. And the Marquis de Marivaux, Lieutenant General, with sixteen Colonels, were sent to Litchfield. Our Proportion of the Standards and Colours taken from the Enemy, being brought from on board the Yachts to the Tower, were there received by her Majesty's Foot Guards, and on the 3d of January, with decent Ceremony, carried publickly to West- minster, and hung up in the Great Hall.

We left Gibraltar besieged by the French and Spaniards, under Marshal de Tesse, and must now proceed to shew the Issue. Sir John Leak, we told you had put in Ammunition, and the King of Portugal had sent them Men and Necessaries, with which they defended the Place well. But in the Middle of February, Monsieur de Pointis arrived from Cadix at Gibraltar with 13 Men of War, and brought Cannon, Mortars, and Ammunition, for the Use of the Besiegers, which he landed, and enabled them thereby to redouble their Attacks, but by that time they had got their Batteries in order, Sir John Leak with the Confederate Fleet arrived, March 10, O. S. in Sight of the Bay. Eight of the Enemies Ships had been forced out by Wind a few Days before, and the remaining five had but just Time to get to Sea when our Fleet came up; they fled with all possible Speed, but could not prevent our's coming up with them. The Arrogant of 60 Guns, the Ardent of 66, and the Marquis of 56, were taken. The Magnanimous of 74 Guns, and Lys of 86, ran aground, and set themselves on Fire. At Malaga the Queen's Ships Swallow and Leopard run a French Merchantman on shore, which the Enemy burnt. And the Expedition and Panther did the same at Cape Gatt, to a French Merchantman of 250 Tons. This Blow effectually relieved the Town, for on the 20th of March the Enemy began to withdraw their Cannon, and marched off leaving only a small Force to blockade it.

At home there were further Changes made. The Duke of Buckingham resigned the Privy Seal, which was given to the Duke of Newcastle, who

A. D. 1704. who took the usual Oath on the 29th of March. The Lord Cutts was appointed to command her Majesty's Forces in Ireland; and the Earl of Montague was created a Duke. The Bishoprick of Lincoln being vacant by the Death of Dr. Gardiner and that of St. Dawids by the Deprivation of Dr. Watson, the former was given to Dr. Wake, and the latter to Dr. Bull.

The Parliament being near the Time of expiring, on the 5th of April it was dissolved by Proclamation.

Her Majesty and the Prince being at Newmarket this Session, they accepted an Invitation from the University of Cambridge, and made a Visit there the 16th of April. The Mayor with the Members of the Corporation in their Formalities, met her Majesty a Mile off the Town, and having made the usual Duties and Present, conducted her Majesty into the Town. The Duke of Somerset, Chancellor, with the Vice-Chancellor, and Doctors in their Robes, received her Majesty at the Regent Walk, and conducted her to the Schools. His Grace in a handsome Speech express'd the grateful Sense the University, had of the Honour she did them, and the publick Orator in an Oration in the Name of the University express'd their Loyalty and Affection to her Majesty's Person and Government. Dr. James, Regius Professor, made an eloquent Speech also. The usual Presents were made, and then her Majesty was pleased to accept of a Banquet prepared by the University at Trinity College. After which she pay'd her Devotions in King's College Chapel, and then returned to Newmarket, perfectly satisfied with the Marks of Duty and Respect she had received.

The Queen being returned to St. James's, on the 23d of April ordered a Proclamation for a new Parliament, to meet the 14th of June.

On the 5th of May, N. S. the Emperor Leopold departed this Life at Vienna.

The Duke of Marlborough had concerted Measures with the Emperor, to open the Campaign on the Moselle to penetrate France that Way; and the Germans undertook to reinforce their Army under Prince Lewis so well, that he should be able to put his great Designs in Execution. The Duke marched the Army that Way, and rode Post to Rastadt to confer with Prince Lewis, who through Indisposition excused his coming to him. All Matters were then concerted, and the Day fixed on which the Germans were to be on the Saar. But such were the Delays of the March, and the Troops came in so thinly, that the Enemy had the Opportunity to take Huy, and threaten the Netherlands, which obliged the Duke to march that Way, leaving 4 vast Magazines in Triers, which on the 25th of June were burnt and blown up, to prevent their falling into the Enemy's Hands. Huy was retaken July the 11th. And then the Duke proposed to the Dutch a glorious Undertaking. The States left all to his Wisdom, and therefore altho' some of the Generals were against it, it was put in Execution.

The French and Confederate Army were about equally strong, except that the Confederates were superior in Horse. On the other hand, the French lay intrenched behind Lines which they had made as inaccessible as possible. This rendered a Battle impracticable. But the incomparable Courage and Wisdom of the Duke of Marlborough dictated to him the Means of attacking and invading these strong Lines, and routing the French Army. The 1705.

Enterprize

A. D.

Enterprize was undertaken in the Night on the 17th and 18th of July, when thro' the Obscurity the Troops had Opportunity to pass undiscovered to different Parts than where they had in the Day time made a Feint of Attack; this being executed with extream Industry and Judgment, gave our People the Possession of a Bridge by surprizing the Guard, and thence entred without any Loss in the Lines. These being well seconded, soon gave us Possession of the whole; and if the French durst have stood, it had produced a Victory over the whole Army; but the Elector of Bavaria, and Marshal Villeroy, chose to save the rest by a Retreat, and so led the Army with all Expedition to the strong Camp of Park near Louvain. The Enemy's Loss was very great, for besides the Number that were killed in the Fight, above 1,300 private Soldiers, and 105 Officers (8 whereof were General Officer) 9 Standards, many Colours, and a pair of Kettle Drums, were taken. This Action was near Tirlmont or Tilmont in Brabant.

The Duke took care to keep the Enemy employ'd all the Year; there was perpetual Action and perpetual Advantage on the Confederate Side, but except the taking of Santvliet, which was effected by Count de Noyelles, October 13, the chief Attempts made upon the Enemy did not succeed.

In Italy Prince Eugene fought a Battle at Cassano, August the 16th; wherein the Imperialists lost between 2 and 3000, and the French 5000. Both Sides claim'd the Victory, but neither made any Advantage of it.

In Savoy, the Castle of Nise, and the Fortreiss of Montmelian, were taken by the French.

In Portugal the Spring Campaign was successful to the Confederates

by the taking of Valencia, d' Alcantara, Albuquerque, and Salvaterra. But the Autumn Campaign was by the Portuguese Supineneis strangely delay'd, infomuch that it was the 11th of October, before the long projected Siege of Badajoz was commenced. The brave Lord Galway lost his right Hand at it, which compelled him to quit the Command, and soon after Marshal Thesse made a long and hasty March to come to its Relief. The Confederates faced the Enemy, but found it improper to fight them, and therefore raised the Siege.

But now let us view the Motion of our own Fleet. Sir Cloudsley Shovel had the Command of it this Year. And the Earl of Peterborough with 5000 Landmen went on board it. They sailed the 24th of May, and arrived at Lisbon the 20th of June, N.S. where the Dutch Fleet under Admiral Allemond was also arrived. Here my Lord Peterborough prevailed upon my Lord Galway to spare him two Regiments of his Dragoons, and the Prince of Hesse Darmstadt being come thither from Gibraltar, gave King Charles such Assurances of the Inclinations of the Catalonians towards him, that his Majesty resolv'd to put himself on board the Fleet; which thus furnished sailed from Lisbon July 28. King Charles landed at Gibraltar to take Possession of that Place, and then sailed for Altea, in which Bay they anchored August the 12th, and published a Manifesto. The Spaniards about Denia declar'd for King Charles, and seiz'd that Town, into which the King put a Governor. On the 22d of August they arrived in the Bay of Barcelona. The Forces landed the next Day, and the King himself went on Shore the 28th. The Strength of Barcelona, and the small Number of the Troops, made the Siege

A. D.
1705.

Siege of that Place a Matter of De-liberation. 'Twas concluded, that without bombarding it from the Fleet the Attempt was hopeless. But the King would not allow the City should be destroyed. The Prince of Hesse being earnest in the proposed attacking Montjuic, which taken would facilitate the attack upon the Town: This Proposal was accepted, and on the 14th of September put in Execution. The Valiant Prince of Hesse was killed in the Action, and Col. Allen with 250 Men were taken Prisoners by Stratagem. The Lord Peterborough led up the Troops afresh that were ready to draw off, and renewed the Attack, and made Lodgments, which with the taking of St. Beutuan's Fort, which cut off the Communication with the Town, enabled us to continue the Siege. On the 17th Colonel Southwell so well levelled a Mortar, that the Bomb fell into and blew up the Magazine, which put the Garrison into such a Fright, that they run out and surrendered themselves Prisoners. This Success was followed by a formal Siege of the City, which on the 4th of October capitulated, and the next Day a Gate was delivered. The same Day Gironne surrendered itself to the Dominion of King Charles and the whole Province of Catalonia, except Roses, did the same soon after.

The Season being far spent, Sir Cloudsley Shovel and Admiral Allemond came home with the main Fleet, leaving 4 English and 2 Dutch Frigates at Barcelona, and 25 English and 15 Dutch Ships at Lisbon, and arrived at St. Hellens November 26th, O. S.

The Province of Valentia followed the Example of Catalonia soon after; and King Charles's Affairs were in so flourishing a State, and the Duke of Anjou's Interest at the same time so low with the Grandeess, who represented the Favour shewed to the French, that there seemed to be nothing wanting to a Revolution. The E. of Peterborough was so exceeding active in the King's Service, that he carried all before him, frightened the Spaniards out of their Wits, and with a handful of Forces drove Armies before him; he relieved Valencia, which the Spaniards were preparing to besiege, and San Matteo, where the Miners were at work; frightened Maboni from Marviedro, and was received at Valencia with great Honour. All this was done by the end of the Year; what followed we will tell in its proper Place.

To return home. The Nation was at this time much divided, and the Parties expressed great Warmth on both sides. A Pamphlet published this Summer, intitled, The Memorial of the Church of England, which suggested that the established Church was in great Danger, made much Noise; but it wrought no effect. For, on the 11th of October William Cowper, Esq; was made Lord Keeper of the Great Seal, and soon after the Earl of Abingdon was dismissed from his Places of Constable of the Tower, and Lieutenant of Oxfordshire.

On the 25th of October the Parliament met, and the Commons were directed to chuse their Speaker, and present him the 27th. There was a very full Appearance, because a great struggle was made for the choice of him. The two Candidates were Mr. Bromley and Mr. Smith. The latter carried it by 48 Voices, having 248 against Mr. Bromley's 205.

The Queen's Speech was longer than usual, and entered into Particulars more than formerly. In recommending the carrying on the War, she was pleased to say, 'No

A. D.
1705.

‘ thing can be more evident, than
 ‘ that if the French King continues ‘ Master of the Spanish Monarchy,
 ‘ the Balance of Power in Europe is ‘ utterly destroyed, and he will be ‘ able in short time to engross the ‘ Trade and Wealth of the World.’

And in another Place: ‘ We have ‘ learnt by our own Experience, that ‘ no Peace with France will last ‘ longer than the first Opportunity
 ‘ of their dividing the Allies.’ Her Majesty told them of the Act passed in Scotland for treating of an Union, suitable to that passed here, and that she would appoint Commissioners suddenly. Then recommended Unani-mity, blamed those that suggested the Church was in Danger, declared her own Affection to the Church, and Resolution to support and countenance it; and promised to maintain the Toleration.

This pathetick Speech was extremely well received, and both Houses in their Addresses expressed themselves with great Loyalty, Gratitude, and Affection to her Majesty.

The Lord Haversham made his Speech the 15th of November, which was much to the purpose of that last Year, namely, Blame. But because he ended it with a Proposal that an Address be presented to her Majesty that she will be pleased to invite the presumptive Heir to the Crown into this Kingdom to reside here: A Debate arose upon it, and at last the Question was proposed, Whether the Princess Sophia should be sent for over? The previous Question was put, whether the Question should be put, and carried in the Negative. But it produced a Bill which was soon after ordered to be brought in for the better securing the Succession to that Family, wherein it was enacted, That in Case the Successor be out of the Kingdom at the time of the Queen’s Demise, the Archbishop of Canterbury, the Lord

Chancellor, or Keeper of the Great-Seal, the Treasurer, President of the Council, Lord Privy-Seal, the High-Admiral, and Lord Chief Justice, shall be Lords Justices for administring the Government till his or her Arrival, which passed into an Act.

The Total of the Supplies granted this Session amounted to 5,075, 756 l. To raise which they gave a Land Tax of 4 s. in the Pound, the Malt Duty, additional Subsidy of Customs, and Excise, and Duty on Coals for 95 Years; a Fund for raising 2,855,761 l. by Annuities at 15 and half Year’s Purchase, that is, 155 l. to be paid 10 l. per Annum for 95 Years.

On the 3d of December the Queen came to the House, and passed an Act for exhibiting an Act in this present Parliament for naturalizing
 the Princess Sophia, and her Issue.
 And afterwards an Act passed to naturalize them. On the 4th, a Motion was made by Sir Thomas Hanmer in the House for inviting over the Princess Sophia, and was seconded by Mr. Bromley and Mr.
Benson, but it was dropt.

On the 6th of December was held that famous Debate in the House of Lords concerning the Danger of the Church. The Lord Halifax had moved some Days before, that in regard there was so much Clamour in the Nation that the established Church was in extream Danger, a Day might be appointed to consider of it. And this Day being appointed, the Queen came to the House incognito to hear the Debate. The Lord Rocheſter began it, and the Reasons he assigned for believing the Church to be in Danger were,
 the Security Act in Scotland; the Absence of the Heir to the Crown;
 and not passing the Occasional Bill.
 No body seconded him, and therefore the Lord Halifax spoke, who said the Security Act was foreign to H h Church

A. D.
1705.

Church Affairs, and was unavoidably passed to prevent immediate Rebellion. He slighted the second Reason; and upon the third said that Matter had been sufficiently canvassed, and the House had given their Opinion of it already. The Bishop of London gave as his Reason for the Church's Danger, The Growth of Profaneness and Irreligion, Books and Sermons published, wherein Resistance to the Higher Powers were authorized, &c. The Bishop of Sarum answered him, and enlarged upon the Subject, and in the end affirmed that more than ordinary Care had been taken of late in promoting Religion, in erecting Schools for instructing Youth, and giving away Books to excite Piety, wherein 1,200*l.* had been expended the last Year. The Archbishop of York complained of the Increase of Dissenting Academies; to which the Lord Wharton answered, by complaining of the Schools and Seminaries held by Nonjurors. The Bishop of Ely complained of the Heat and Violence in the Universities. The Bishop of Litchfield complained of the abusive Language in common Use against the Bishops. And the Bishop of Bath and Wells complained of the invidious Terms of High Church and Low Church. And finally the Lord Sommers closed the Debate by a healing Speech. The Question being put that the Church is in Danger, it passed in the Negative, 61 Voices against 30. And then the House resolved, 'That the Church of England as by Law established, which was rescued from the extreme Danger by King William, was then by God's Blessing in a most happy and flourishing Condition. And that whoever went about to suggest and insinuate to the contrary, was an Enemy to the Queen, the Church, and the

'Kingdom.' Which Vote being communicated to the Commons, and their Concurrence desired, it was upon the Question carried in the Affirmative, Yea's 212, No's 162. Whereupon both Houses joined in an Address to the Queen, exhibiting the said Resolution, and desired her Majesty to make it publick, and a Proclamation was published accordingly.

On the 21st of December the Act for the Land-Tax received the Royal Assent, and her Majesty made at the same time a Gracious Speech.

The Duke of Marlborough, when he had finished the Campaign, made a Journey to Vienna, where he had divers Conferences with the Emperor and his Prime Ministers. From thence his Grace went to the Courts of Berlin and Hanover, which made his return to England so late as the 30th of December.

Her Majesty Catherine Queen Dowager of England departed this Life at Lisbon, December 31. N.S.

On the 16th of February the Queen came to the House, and passed the Act for the Duty upon Malt, the Annuity Act, and several others. And then made a Speech of Thanks for Dispatch, and wished them to make Expedition with what remained unfinished, because a Recess would be convenient in a short time.

The Regency Bill, that is, the Act for providing a Regency in the Name of a Successor after her Majesty's Demise, sent down by the Lords, repealed the two Clauses of 12 Will 3. whereby it was provided, That all Matters relating to the Government should be transacted in the Privy Council, and that no Person having Offices should be Member of Parliament. The Commons represented this last, and struggled against it, so that in the End it was amended thus: That after the Dissolution of this Parliament, no Persons who have new Offices hereafter to be erected under the Crown, nor Commissioner, Secretary or Receiver of Prizes, Comptroller of Accounts of the Army, Commissioner of Transports, or Sick and Wounded, Agents of Regiments, Governors of Plantations, Commissioners of the Navy in Out-Ports, or any having Pensions from the Crown during Pleasure, shall be capable of being chosen Members of the House of Commons for the future. Provided also, that if any Person being chosen a Member shall afterwards accept any Place of Profit from the Crown, their Election to be void; but that the same Person may be chosen again. And that no more Commissioners for executing Offices shall be hereafter made than have been formerly.

On the 21st of February the Commons having considered the Accounts of the Revenues and Debts ever since the Queen's Accession to the Throne, resolved, That it appeared to them that the publick Moneys have been duly applied to the publick Uses under a prudent Management, to the Advancement of Credit, and for the Advantage and Honour of the Nation.

On the 14th of March the Commons made a Provision for raising Seamen to man the Fleet by several Resolves, which they ordered to be enacted; which Bill being perfected, the Queen came to the House on the 19th, and passed that and some other Bills; after which she made a gracious Speech, and then the Parliament was prorogued to the 21st of May.

The Convocation sat this Session, but did nothing more than dispute about Privileges. Her Majesty was pleased to interpose, and by a Letter to the Archbishop, dated Feb. 25. asserted her Supremacy, declared against the present Divisions, and commanded the President and his Suffragans to maintain their Superiority of Order. With Order to prorogue the Convocation from the 1st of March, to which they stood now prerogued, to such other time as he thought fit.

The Emperor desiring to afford Prince Eugene a powerful Reinforcement to enable him to act with extraordinary Vigour in Italy next Campaign, he made a Proposal to the Queen to permit her Subjects to advance to him a Sum of Money in Loan upon the Security of his Lands, Rents, and Revenues in the Province of Silesia. The Sum desired was 240,000 l. at 8 per Cent. per Annum Interest; for the Loan whereof her Majesty issued a Commission under the Great Seal, dated the 26th of February, constituting certain Persons therein named Trustees for taking the same by voluntary Subscriptions. Which Commission being opened on the 7th of March, there was the first Day subscribed 160,000 l. and in a Week after the whole was compleated. The Effect of this Loan we shall see in the Operations of the next Campaign, which saved Turin, and thereby the Duke of Savoy, from Ruin.

Pursuant to the Acts of Parliament in both Kingdoms, the Queen issued a Commission under the respective Great Seals, constituting a competent Number of Lords and others of both Kingdoms to treat of an Union of the two Kingdoms of England and Scotland. Which was now entred upon in earnest. On the 16th of April they met the first time, and the Commissions being read, the Lord Keeper on the Part of England, and the Earl of Seafield Lord Chancellor, on the Part of Scotland, made each an excellent Speech on the Occasion, and then adjourned to the 22d. On

A. D. 1706. that Day they adjusted Preliminaries, and then proceeded. The Particulars of the Conferences which were held 45 several Days, are too long to have place here; we can therefore only say, that on the 23d of July the Treaty was finished. And the Articles signed by both Parties were presented to the Queen; at which Time the Lord Keeper of England, and the Chancellor of Scotland, addressed themselves to her Majesty in Loyal and Elegant Speeches, to which her Majesty returned a most Gracious Answer.

The Actions abroad this Year were admirably successful to the Confederates on every side. The Battle of Ramellies recovered the Netherlands to King Charles's Obedience. The Relief of Barcelona gave him Entrance into Arragon. And the Battle of Turin, by raising that Siege, recovered all Piedmont to the Duke of Savoy, and Milan to the Emperor.

The D. of Marlborough arrived at the Hague the 15th of April, N. S. tarried there a Fortnight to concert Matters, and then went to the Army, Monsieur d' Auverquerque doing the same. The Troops were drawn into the Field (and except the Danes, who too came in May the 22d) the whole Army were disposed to Action. The French at this time were Masters of the Spanish Netherlands, and the Rivers and Defiles of that Country afforded them such Coverts for their Army, that all the Duke of Marlborough wished for was, that the Enemy would advance over the Dyle, which is a River that rises on the South Frontier of Brabant, runs through the middle of that Province, and by Lovain; purposing in such case to give them fair Battle. Altho' the true Interest of the French might have been to have kept us at a Bay, by acting on the Defensive, yet the bad Face of Affairs every where else prompted them to attempt the Recovery of all by a Battle here. Accordingly the King sent Orders to Marshal Villeroy, who with the Duke of Bavaria, commanded this Summer, to give the Enemy Battle. That Action, most advantageous to the Confederates, happened on the 23d of May, N. S. being Whitsunday, on a Plain in the South part of Brabant, between the Head of the River Gheet and the River Mehaigne. The small Town of Ramellies, which lay in the Center, gave Name to the Battle, which was courageously fought between 76 Battalions and 136 Squadrons on the French Side, and 74 Battalions and 123 Squadrons on the Confederates, from an Hour and half past Noon till Night. The Victory was on the Confederate Side, who were Masters of all the Enemies Cannon and Baggage, and drove their Army out of the Field, after they had 5,000 Men slain, and 4000 private Soldiers, and 600 Officers taken Prisoners; with the Loss only on the Confederate Side of 1,066 killed, and 2,567 wounded. The D. of Marlborough commanded on the Right, and adventured in his Care to bring up Troops to sustain others so far, that when his Horse threw him by Accident, he was in Danger of being killed by a Party of the Enemy; and when he mounted, Colonel Bringfield, his Master of the Horse, as he held the Stirrup, lost his Head by a Cannon Ball. His Grace's incomparable Wisdom, Activity, and Courage in that Day's Action, is universally extolled. Monsieur d' Auverquerque commanded on the Left, and performed the Part of a consummate General in all Things. The French Army consisted of their best Troops, and fought so bravely, that the Rout (for it was no less) that they suffered red was, next under God, owing to the excellent Conduct of our General, who so well sustained by fresh Troops those that were over-powered by the Enemy, and by his own Courage and Activity in every Part of the Army so excited the Soldierry, that they performed Wonders. Villeroy and Bavaria narrowly escaped being both taken Prisoners in their Flight, several Officers within a few Yards of them being taken.

The French immediately quitted Louvain, which our Army took Possession of. The States of Brabant submitted, and General Churbill was made Governor of Brussels. Antwerp with the Marquisate did the same; as also Mechlin or Malines and its Lordships; Bruges and Oudenard received our Garrisons, and the Duke pursued the Enemy. Menin upon the Lys in the Heart of Flanders, was a place of such use, that it was resolved to besiege it; which accordingly was undertaken June the 8th, and so well pushed, that it was surrendered on the 23d. Ostend was besieged with great Fury, from June 28, to July 6, when it was surrendered.

Dendermond, seated also in Flanders on the Schelde, where the Dender falls into that River was soon invested at a Distance, but not besieged in Form till the 29th of August, and was surrendered after seven Days Attack. And Aeth was besieged Sept. 26, and taken Octob. 3.

And thus in one Campaign the Confederate Army advanced from the Banks of the Maes to the Borders of French Flanders. Which being effected, the Army were put into Quarters November 6, and the Duke went to the Hague where he had divers Conferences with the States; and then came to England, and arrived the 18th of November

Old Style at London.

In Spain the Duke of Anjou exerted himself for the Recovery of Barcelona; he brought the Army down into Catalonia, made divers Feints other ways, but at last on the 2d of April, part of it encamped before the City. This so long Delay was principally owing to the Misfortune the French Fleet under the Count de Tholouse suffered in a terrible Storm between the 3d and the 21st of March, which hindered him from bringing the Cannon and Ammunition intended to be used in the Siege, sooner. They pushed on the Siege all the Month of April, had ruined the Fort of Montjuich, and by the Beginning of May had brought their Approaches very near the Town.

Sir John Leak with the Confederate Fleet sailed for Lisbon March 12. N. S. and went in quest of the Spanish Galleons, but missing them, he sailed for the Streights, and arrived the 10th of April at Gibraltar. There he received Letters from King Charles and the Earl of Peterborough, declaring the Distress they were in, and desiring his Relief. The Admiral with great Expedition put the Fleet in order, and sailed the 24th of April, leaving Orders for Sir George Byng, who was expected with a Squadron of Reinforcements to follow, which he did with great Expedition, and joined the Fleet, as did also Commodore Walker, which made them 39 English and 13 Dutch stout Men of War. On the 7th of May being arrived at the height of Terragona, the Earl of Peterborough came on Board with 1,400 Land Forces, and on the 8th the Forces and Marines landed at Barcelona. With these Succours the Besieged made such powerful Resistance, that on the 11th the Enemy drew off, leaving behind them 106 Brass Cannon, 47 Mortars, 5000

H h 3

Barrels

A. D.
1706.

Barrels of Powder, 500 Barrels of Musket-shot, 2,000 Bombs, 10,000 Granadoes, 40,000 Cannon-Bullets, 8,000 Spades, 13,000 Sacks of Meal, and vast quantities of Wheat, Rye, Oats, &c. and 1,500 sick and wounded Men.

In the mean time the Portuguese and Confederate Army being in the Field, besieged and took Alcantara, which was surrendered April the 14th, and afterwards Maraleja and Coria; and then the Earl of Galway prevailed upon the Portuguese to accompany him in an Invasion of Spain, purposing to march into the Heart of that Country to meet King Charles and the Earl of Peterborough. They proceeded with Success, and obliged the Duke of Berwick, who was posted to intercept them, to fly before them. The Portuguese were unwilling to advance, as the Lord Galway desired, to Madrid, for as they had received no Advice from Barcelona, they feared it was lost, and therefore having advanced as far as Almarez on the East Frontier of Estremadura, where they proposed to break the Bridge over the Tagus to hinder the Enemy's Passage, they would go no further, but resolved to march back and besiege Ciudad Rodrigo, which was invested May 21, and taken May 26. And having then received Intelligence of the raising the Siege of Barcelona, the Portuguese agreed to march for Madrid. They decamped therefore the 3d of June, and arrived the 7th at Salamanca; they staid there till the 12th, and then marched forward. And on the 18th Deputies from th Escorial came to Epinal to offer Submission.

The Duke of Anjou, in his Retreat from before Barcelona, could not get back thro' Arragon, and therefore was forced to march his Army thro' Roussillon into France, and so came round behind the Pyre- nees to Navarre. Himself rode Post, and came to Madrid, but finding that the Portuguese were marching directly thither, he resolved to retreat; accordingly he withdrew, and carried with him all he could suddenly get together. On the 29th of June, the Army being arrived in the Neighbourhood of Madrid, that Town sent Deputies with Submission. Charles was proclaimed King at Madrid, and the Earl of Galway having received Letters that the Earl of Peterborough was coming by the way of Valencia thither to join him, he waited in Expectation.

At the same time King Charles, who was come to Terragona in his way through Valencia to Madrid, received Advice, that the Kingdom of Arragon had declared for him, and desired his Presence. This led him to resolve to go to Saragosa, and he went thither accordingly, notwithstanding the Remonstrances of the Confederates against it. Great Disputations have since happened upon the Reason that induced his Majesty to this Counsel; nor has it ever been fully agreed. 'Tis sure that he found not his Account in it, for it lost much time, and the People of Spain rose in several Places for the Duke of Anjou; whose Army also were got round about thro' Navarre, and advanced apace towards Castile, insomuch that when King Charles was at Saragosa, he found the way to Madrid shut up, and was forced to go back at last, and come through Valencia to join the Army, which he effected not till the 6th of August. And by that time the Enemy was so powerful, that the Confederates were not in a Condition to withstand him, so that Madrid was lost, and the Army retreated into Valencia. In the mean time Sir John Leak with the Fleet took Carthagena, June 13, and Alicant on the 8th of August. He

He also reduced the Islands of Yvica and Majorca to the Obedience of King Charles. But Carthagera being afterwards besieged by Maboni, it was retaken Nov. 18. Alcantara also was retaken from the Portuguese. And in fine, this Campaign, which began so happily, ended but poorly.

Don Pedro, King of Portugal, departed this Life December the 9th, 1706, and was succeeded by his Son Don Juan IV.

Let us now look into Italy, and see the brave Progress of Prince Eugene. There happened a bloody Action at Calcinato, where the Duke of Vendosme set upon the Imperialists on the 19th of April. For which the French King caused Te Deum to be sung as for a Victory, altho' it was certain the French lost as many Men as the Imperialists: This was all they had to brag of, for altho' the Duke of Orleans came to Lombardy to command that Army, and make a push there, he could not hinder Prince Eugene from making that prodigious March for the Relief of Turin.

The French King resolving to reduce the Duke of Savoy to his own Terms, had sent a numerous Body of Troops under the D. de Feuillade, and Marshal Marfin, to finish the Reduction of Piedmont. And in order to it, they invested Turin, the Capital of the Duke of Savoy's Dominions, on the 23d of May, and opened Trenches before it on the 3d of June. The Duke of Savoy appointed Count Taun Governor, and supplied the Place with Men and Necessaries, as well as he could, and then went out of the City, collected the rest of his Troops, and prepared to make a Diversion upon the Enemy abroad, wherein he was very active, and interrupted their Communication and Convoys; which obliged the Enemy to employ at the same time an Army against him, and another in the Siege. By this means the Town was able to hold out till the 7th of September; but their Ammunition being all spent, they were reduced to Extremity, when Prince Eugene came in, and raised the Siege.

That General so kept the French in play, that he was able to march from the Frontiers of the Duchy of Mantua quite thro' the rest of Lombardy, near 200 Miles an end, even in sight of the Enemy to Piedmont. He kept on one side the Po, while they were on the other, and guarded himself so well, that he brought his whole Army safe and untouched to Turin. On the 7th of September was the Battle of Turin fought, wherein the Confederates gained a signal Victory, and the French lost a Marshal of France, Monsieur Marfin, who was taken Prisoner, and afterwards died of his Wounds; 4 other General Officers, 8 Colonels, 12 Lieutenant Colonels, 6 Majors, 98 Captains, 185 Commission Officers, 7,641 Soldiers Prisoners, and 6,704 killed, 255 Pieces of Cannon, 108 Mortars, 7,800 Bombs, 3,200 Royal Granadoes, 7,500 Hand Granadoes, 48,000 Cannon Bullets, 68,000 Quintals of Powder, all their Tents and Baggage, and all the Money to pay the Troops. Which were taken by the Confederates.

The Loss on the Duke of Savoy's side in Turin during the Siege (the Wounded and Deserters being reckoned as well as the Killed) amounted to in all 6,607 Men. And in the Battle about 2,500 Men were killed or wounded.

Besides the Advantage this Victory gave to the Duke of Savoy, the Emperor reaped this Benefit by it, that the French were hereby reduc'd so low as to be unable any longer to keep an Army in Lombardy, and 1706.

A. D.

therefore upon Treaty this Winter, the whole Dutchies of Milan, Mantua, &c. were all delivered up to the Imperialists.

Sir John Leak having performed important Services in the Mediterranean, returned with the Fleet homewards; he pass'd the Streights October the 2d, detach'd Sir George Byng with a Squadron to Lisbon, and arrived with the rest at St. Helens, October the 17th.

Sir Cloudesley Shovel, with a Squadron of Men of War, having on board the Earl of Rivers with Land Forces, 10 Regiments of Foot, and 3 Regiments of Dragoons, consisting of six Squadrons, in English Pay; and 4 Regiments of Foot, 1 Regiment of Dragoons, and 3 Squadrons in Dutch Pay, set sail August 10th, with Design to have made a Descent in France; but that Country taking the Alarm, kept constant Guard on the Coast. Our Fleet finding it impracticable to land there, put on for Lisbon, where they all arrived safe before the End of the Year.

Her Majesty and the States General had continued their Mediation between the Emperor and his Hungarian Subjects all the last Summer and this. But all the Application was in vain; the two Parties stood upon such high Terms, that the Treaty broke off ineffectual. Mr. Stepney, who was the Queen's Envoy on that Occasion, came back to Vienna, and on the 1st of August made a Speech to the Emperor, wherein he gave his Sense of the Negotiation, and in it seemed to wish the Emperor had been more favourable in his Compliance to the Demands of his Subjects.

Let us now return Home.

The Parliament of Scotland met at Edinburgh the 3d of October; the Duke of Queensbury was her Majesty's High Commissioner, who after the Queen's Letter was read, which earnestly recommended the completing the Union, made a Speech to the same Purpose, and was seconded by the Earl of Seafield, Lord High Chancellor.

This was a Matter of too great Moment not to occasion great Diversity of Opinions upon it. The common Vogue run much against it, and those were very numerous, who were utterly averse to the Union, upon the Principle of its destroying the Independency and Royalty of Scotland, and rendring it a Province of England. Others, who were willing to keep up that, and yet to coalesce with England, were of Opinion, that it ought to be a Federal Union, such as the several Provinces of the United Netherlands, and the Cantons of Switzerland, wherein the Laws, ancient Government, Liberties, and Customs of every Province were retained independently, and the Union consisted in an Obedience to one Sovereignty, and a mutual Concurrence in Defence against Foreign Enemies. But the more discerning and dispassionate, and those not a few of the Nobility and Gentry, looked upon the Union as a great Blessing to the Kingdom, as putting an End to all Feuds between the two Nations, and giving Scottish Men Opportunity of growing rich by Trade, as being thereby let into the Privileges of trading to the English Plantations and Settlements, upon the same Terms with England. Which was universally acknowledged to be a Benefit the Nation extremely wished for, but could have no Hopes of obtaining by a Federal Union. It would be too tedious to enter into the Detail of the Debates, which were numerous and large in the many Days wherein the several Articles were distinctly and separately considered, from the 10th of October to the the 10th of January, on which Day it received the Royal Assent. Afterwards they proceeded to pass an Act to prescribe the Methods of choosing the Representatives for Scotland in Parliament, and then nominated the Representatives for Scotland in the first Parliament of Great Britain, which was done the 13th of February. And on the 25th of March 19 more Acts received the Royal Assent, and then the Lord Commissioner made a Speech, and adjourned the Parliament to the 22d of April.

The Parliament of England met the 2d of December, 1706. The Queen in her Speech mentioned the glorious Success abroad, and advised the Commons to grant Supplies for continuing the War in order to obtain a safe and honourable Peace. She was pleased to declare to them the Progress made in the Union, and recommended to them the completing it. Both Houses presented Addresses of Thanks to her Majesty for her gracious Speech, and to congratulate her Majesty upon the glorious Success of her Arms. Both Houses also voted Thanks to the Duke of Marlborough for his eminent Services to her Majesty and the Kingdom.

The Total of the Supplies granted this Session amounted to 5,540, 131 l. besides which there was Occasion to raise further for the Equivalent granted by the Union to the Scots, pursuant to the Articles, 398, 085 l. which was accordingly granted this Session. To raise this Money, the Parliament gave a Land Tax of 4s. in the Pound; and the Duty upon Malt for one Year; Duties upon Low Wines, the Stamp Duty, and that upon Hawkers, which had been continued to 1710, were now continued for 96 Years, to be a Fund for 1,155,000 l. to be taken in for Annuities at 16 Years Purchase.

The Duty upon Houses was continued for circulating Exchequer Bills, whereby 1,500,000 l. was raised. The old Tonnage and Poundage, and several other Duties at the Customhouse, which were already continued to 1710, for paying off Deficiencies, were now continued for two Years more, for a Loan of 822,381 l. at 6 per Cent. Interest.

December 7. The House of Lords presented an Address to her Majesty, expressing their Desire that the Honours and Titles of the Duke of Marlborough should be settled upon his Posterity by Act of Parliament, and prayed her Majesty's Direction therein, which she was graciously pleased soon after to signify; and then a Bill was brought in accordingly, which passed both Houses, and receiv'd the Royal Assent. And on the 7th of January the Commons presented an Address to the Queen, intimating, that as her Majesty was pleased to erect the House of Blenheim as a Monument of the glorious Actions of the Duke of Marlborough, they expressed their Willingness to make Provision for the more honourable Support of his Dignity in his Posterity, in such a Manner as her Majesty should think fit. To which the Queen was pleased to answer, that she having settled a Pension of 5000 l. per Annum out of the Revenue of the Post Office on the Duke of Marlborough, it would be agreeable to her, if that may be continued to his Posterity for ever. The Commons brought in a Bill accordingly, and it passed into an Act.

December 31. Being appointed a Day of Thanksgiving to Almighty God for his Blessing on her Majesty's Arms, her Majesty, accompany'd by both Houses of Parliament, with all the usual Solemnities, went to St. Paul's Cathedral, to perform her Devotions.

On

A. D.
1706.

On the 28th Day of January, her Majesty came to the House, and passed divers Acts, and then made a Speech; acquainted them that the Union being perfected by the Parliament of Scotland, she had ordered the same to be laid before them, for their Concurrence in it. Her Majesty also intimated, that Scotland being to have an Equivalent for what that Kingdom is obliged to contribute towards the Debts of England, she recommended to them to make a Provision for the paying thereof.

In the House of Lords, antecedent to the entring upon Consideration of the Articles of the Union, a Bill was ordered to be brought in for the Security of the Church of England; an Act for the securing Presbytery in Scotland having passed there before the Articles of Union; which was done accordingly, and passed both Houses. The Tenor whereof was, that the Act of Uniformity shall be in Force for ever: That every King or Queen hereafter, at their Coronation, shall take an Oath to preserve the Settlement of the Church, and the Doctrine and Discipline thereof: And that this Act shall be held a fundamental and essential Part of the Union of the two Kingdoms.

On the 4th of February the House of Commons resolved itself into a Committee of the whole House, to consider of the Articles of the Union; and after some Debates they read and approved the four first Articles. On the 8th, they went thro' the rest of the Articles; on the 11th, they passed the Bill from the Lords, for securing the Church of England. And the same Day, the Resolution of the Grand Committee upon the Articles of the Union, being reported, and agreed to by the House, a Bill was ordered to be brought in to ratify the same. The House of Lords took the Articles of the Union into Consideration on the 15th of February, several Lords spake upon it, but the Lord Haversham's Speech against it was the longest. But when the Question concerning postponing the first Article was put, the Difference in favour of the Union appeared to be 72 against 22. So the first six Articles were approved that Day. They resumed the same the 19th, and made a further Progress, as they did the 21st, and finally on the 24th; and the Resolution of the Committee for approving all the Articles being reported on the 27th, it was agreed to: Some of the Lords entring Protests against it. And the Bill being passed by both Houses, her Majesty came and gave the Royal Assent to it, on the 16th of March. And then made a Speech, declaring her Satisfaction therein.

An Abstract of the Articles of the Union.

1. That the two Kingdoms of England and Scotland shall, from the 1st of May 1707, be united into one Kingdom by the Name of Great Britain.
2. That the Succession be to the Princess Sophia and her Heirs. And that all Papists, or Persons that marry Papists, shall be forever excluded inheriting the Crown.
3. That the united Kingdom shall be represented by one Parliament.
4. That the Subjects of the united Kingdom shall have Freedom of Trade and Navigation to all Places within the same, and Plantations belonging to it, and a Communication of all other Advantages.
5. All Ships belonging to Scottish Men at the time of the Union to be deemed Ships British built, the Owners making Oath that the same belong to them.

them. All Parts of the united Kingdom to be under the same Regulations of Trade, and liable to the same Customs and Duties. 7. The united Kingdom to be liable to the same Excise, except that a Barrel of Ale in Scotland shall not pay above 2s. on account of the present Excise in England. 8. Foreign Salt in Scotland shall pay the same Duty as in England, but Salt made in Scotland shall be exempted for seven Years from the English Duty. Several Conditions relating to the Salt Duty were inserted in this Article, which we have not room to set down. 9. When 1,997,763 l. shall be enacted and be raised in England on the Land-Tax, Scotland shall add a further Sum of 48,000 l. 10. Scotland is exempted from the Stamp Duties now in force. 11. As also from the Duty on Windows. 12. And from the Duties on Coals and Culm. 13. Scotland shall not pay the Malt Duty, which expires June 24, 1707. 14. Scotland shall not be charged with any other Duties imposed by the Parliament of England before the Union, except those consented to in this Treaty. And if the Parliament in their Provision for the Service of the Year 1707, shall lay any further Customs, Scotland shall have an Equivalent for the Share thereof they will be liable to. Malt made and consumed in Scotland not to be charged during this War. 15. Scotland shall have an Equivalent for what shall be charged towards Payment of the Debts of England, the Sum of 398,085 l. for the Custom and Excise they will be liable to towards paying the said Debts. And an Equivalent shall be further allowed for the Proportion Scotland shall hereafter pay by reason of the Increase of the Customs, by the Increase of Trade, and also for the Salt Duty, which they will be oblig'd to pay after seven Years. The said 398,085 l. to be applied to the paying the publick Debts of Scotland, to the refunding to the African Company their principal Stock and the Interest of it, to satisfy such as may be Losers by the Alteration of the Coin, and such other Uses as Commissioners appointed by her Majesty shall think fit. The African Company to be dissolv'd, as soon as an Act passes in England for paying the Equivalent. 16. The Coin to be of the same Standard throughout the united Kingdom as now in England, and a Mint to be continued in Scotland, under the same Rules as in England. 17. The same Weights and Measures to be used as now in England, and Standards to be kept in the Burghs agreeable to the Standard at the Exchequer. 18. The Laws for the Regulation of Trade, Customs, and such Excises, which Scotland is to be liable to, to be the same with England. Other laws in Scotland to remain as before, but alterable by Parliament. Laws which concern Publick and Civil Government may be the same throughout the united Kingdom, but no Alteration may be made in the Laws which concern private Right, except for evident Utility of the Subjects of Scotland. 19. The Court of Session, and other Courts, shall remain in Scotland, with such Regulations as there mention'd. 20. All Heretable Offices and Officers for Life are reserved to the Owners, as Rights of Property. 21. The Rights of the Royal Burghs in Scotland shall remain intire. 22. Sixteen of the Peers of Scotland shall sit and vote in the House of Lords, and 45 Representatives of Scotland in 1707.

A. D.

‘ the House of Commons of the ‘ Parliament of Great Britain; the ‘ Choice whereof to be according ‘ to the Act passed in Scotland to ‘ that Purpose. In Case her Ma‘ jesty shall on the 1st of May de‘ clare this present Parliament to ‘ be the first Parliament of Great ‘ Britain, the present Parliament of ‘ England may be so on the Part of ‘ England, and the 16 Peers and ‘ 45 Commoners for Scotland to ‘ sit with them. Such Parliament ‘ to continue no longer than the ‘ English Parliament is by Law al‘ lowed to continue. 23. The 16
‘ Peers of Scotland shall have all ‘ Privileges of Parliament which ‘ the Peers of England have, and ‘ in case of Trials of Peers, when ‘ no Parliament is in being, the ‘ Peers of Scotland who sat in the ‘ last Parliament, shall be summon‘ ed. And all the Peers of Scot- ‘ land shall be Peers of Great Bri- ‘ tain, and shall enjoy all Privi‘ leges as full as the Peers of Eng- ‘ land, except sitting in the House ‘ of Lords, and upon Trials of ‘ Peers. 24. There shall be one ‘ Great Seal for the United King‘ dom. A Seal to be still used in ‘ Scotland in Things relating to pri‘ vate Right, as usual. That the ‘ Privy Seal, Signet, Casset, &c.
‘ now used to be continued. And ‘ that the Crown, Scepter, Sword
‘ of State, and Records, Rolls, and ‘ Registers, publick and private,
‘ shall be still kept in Scotland.
‘ Lastly, 25. All Laws and Sta‘ tutes inconsistent with the Terms
‘ of these Articles, to be void.

Several Traders taking Advantage from the Union shipp’d off great Quantities of Goods on which Drawbacks were allowed on Exportation, and after they had been at Holland, failed for Scotland to lie there to the 1st of May, when they might be brought to England Custom free. This gave Occasion for a Bill to be brought in to obviate the ill Effects of that Practice; which passed the Commons, but there was a Clause in it which would have given Offence to the Scots, and therefore would not pass in the Lords House.

It was therefore propos’d, that the Queen should be desired to prorogue the Parliament for a short time, and then another Bill might be brought in. Accordingly on the 8th of April her Majesty passed the Acts, and prorogued the Parliament on the 14th.
When they met again and brought in a fresh Bill, but such Difficulties arose in it, that it was dropt. And on the 24th her Majesty came to the House, made a gracious Speech and prorogued the Parliament.

We omitted to mention, that about the Middle of December her Majesty was pleased to confer many Honours. The Earl of Kent was created a Marquiss, as was also the Earl of Lindsey. The Lord Wharton was created Viscount and Earl. The Lord Poulet was created Viscount and Earl. The Lord G- dolphin and the Lord Cholmondly, the same. Henry Lord Walden was created Earl of Bindon. The Lord Keeper was made a Peer, by the Title of William Lord Cowper, Baron of Wingham, and Sir Thomas Pelham was made Lord Pelham, and Baron of Laughton.

The first Matter for History this Year that offers, is the unfortunate Success of our Arms in Spain. The Queen had taken all possible Care to supply that Service, and to that Purpose, as we told you last Year, sent over the Earl of Rivers with a Reinforcement which went out 8297 Men. He arrived at Lisbon, and thence sailed to Valencia, where he arrived in January, 1706-7. But through the Length of Time that the

Men

Men had lain on board, so many were dead, sick, or upon Landing deserted, that when they mustered there appeared but 4,500. Which made him break six Regiments to fill the rest, and sent the Officers back to raise new Men. The State of the Army in Spain before his Arrival was thus: The Forces under the Lord Galway and Lord Peterborough in the last Year were 24 Regiments, which when sent over were 18,852 Men, but by Death and Desertion were reduced to 13,809, and of them too 1,792, were Prisoners with the Enemy. The Parliament in the last Session had made Provision for 29,395 Men to serve in Spain and Portugal. Whereof there were at that time as abovesaid the 24 Regiments, and those under the E. Rivers, to which the Queen proposed to add two new Regiments to compleat the Number. Her Majesty being not yet apprized of the Reduction of Regiments.

King Charles in a Council of War at Valencia in December 1706, resolved that all the Forces should act in one Body, and enter Castile by the way of Arragon. Some of the Confederate Generals were for acting on the Defensive, but the other Council prevail'd, and they marched accordingly. Tyravley's Regiment, and two Battalions of Marines that were quartered in Catalonia, were detain'd there to guard that Province; and King Charles remained there also with 29 Squadrons, and 12 Battalions. So that the Army which took the Field April the 6th, amounted but to 42 Battalions and 53 Squadrons, of English, Dutch, and Portuguese. They attacked and destroyed the Enemies Magazines in several Places with Success, but at Villena met with so resolute a Defence, that they were held in Play till the Enemy came up. The French and Spaniards commanded by the Duke of Berwick, were 54 Battalions, and 76 Squadrons, and the Duke of Orleans was advancing with 7 or 8,000 Men more. The Confederates consider'd that they must either fight the Enemy, or abandon the Kingdom of Valencia to their Fury, the former therefore was resolv'd on. On the 25th of April the Battle of Almanza was fought, wherein the English and Dutch behav'd themselves very bravely, and push'd the Enemy, but the Portuguese gave Way on the first Attack, and the whole Weight of the Enemy lay upon the rest, which in the end bore them down, and a terrible slaughter ensu'd, for at first the Enemy denied Quarter. The Lord Galway receiv'd two Wounds in his Face, and a great many Officers were kill'd, in all 88, and 285 taken Prisoners, besides a great Number of private Soldiers. The Earl of Galway collected the scattered Remains of English and Dutch, and retreated. The Marquis das Minas with the Portuguese had consulted their Safety betimes, and drew towards Tortosa to join K. Charles. The Earl of Galway having put Garrisons in proper Places, did the same.

Valencia and Saragosa submitted to the Enemy, Xativa and Aleyra were taken; Denia was besieged, but being reliev'd by Troops from Allicant, and some of our Men of War coming before the Place in due Time, the Town was saved; and the Earl of Galway so well dispos'd the Army, that the Enemy was not able to penetrate into Catalonia.

The Duke of Marlborough made a Journey to Hanover and to Alt-Rastadt in Saxony, where the King of Sweden then kept his Quarters, before he opened the Campaign. On the 16th of May he came to Brussels, and on the 21st he went to the Army. But there was nothing done this Campaign;

A. D.
1707.

Campaign ; for altho' the Duke endeavoured to engage the Enemy divers times, they kept so close in the strong Camp they lay in, that it was impracticable to attack them.

The Affair that made most Noise, and most raised our Expectations, this Summer, was the Siege of Thoulon in Provence, the Place where the French Fleet of great Ships lie. An Undertaking of great Glory to the Confederates, but too great Difficulty to bring to its desired Issue. The Duke of Savoy and Prince Eugene led the Land Army appointed for the Siege, and Sir Cloudsley Shovel commanded the Confederate Fleet to assist and sustain them. This Design had been concerted with the strictest Secrecy between the Queen of Great-Britain, the States General, and the Duke of Savoy. And was so long a Secret to the French, that the Army was well advanced on its March, before they suspected the Design.

It must be premised that the Imperial Court at this time were too obstinately bent upon reducing the Kingdom of Naples to its Obedience ; whether upon an Intimation of a secret Overture of Partition France had made for Peace, wherein the Spanish Monarchy being divided into two Parts, the Indies and the Maritime Provinces of Spain in one, and Catalonia with the Italian Dominions and the Netherlands in the other, the House of Austria was to take its Choice : I say whether on this Account, as has lately been suggested, or whether merely for the sake of being able to check the Pope, that Court was inflexible in it, and accordingly took away 14 or 15000 Men, which might otherwise have been us'd in the Expedition to Provence.

On the 30th of June the Duke of Savoy, with the Army, set forth for Nice, making Feints at the same time by Parties of his Forces, as if he intended to invade Dauphine.

Sir Cloudsley Shovel at Final and Genoa took on board the Ammunition, Provision, and other Necessaries, and sailed to Nice, where on the 9th of July he entertain'd with great Magnificence his Royal Highness on board, and Matters being there concerted for the Passage of the River Var, the Admiral sailed into the Mouth of that River, landed some Seamen, and beat the French from the Entrenchments they had made on the Banks of it, which gave Opportunity to the Army to pass at a Ford above. They afterwards pursued their March ; but thro' the Difficulties of the Way, the Heat of the Weather, and the Provisions not keeping pace, frequent Halts were necessary, so that they came not to Thoulon till the 26th of July.

Marshal Tesse, who commanded the French Army in Dauphine, finding how the Enemy was disposed, drew the Forces out of that Province to march for Thoulon. Himself rode Post, and arrived there the 10th, he gave effectual Orders for improving the Fortifications, planting Cannon, and forming an entrenched Camp without the Town. All which was performed with extreme Diligence. He passed from thence to Marseilles, gave the necessary Orders there, and then return'd to his Army, which marched with such Speed, that by the 25th Forty Battalions were arrived, and placed in the Town and the Entrenchments. Marshal Tesse collected also other Troops, which Medavi had brought out of Lombardy, and Detachments were made from the French Army on the Rhine and in Flanders, which moved in long Marches to come up in time.

The Situation of Thoulon was such, that considering the vast Number of Cannon

Cannon and up it was without those Town ; solved therines ngly o French
ment m recover after a Prince
mande led. A attacked and too they d
the 18
The
vanced Inform proach
Berry,
Road, Army
dred the far ordina the O
which of Sav
Siege.
On Federal Fleet Harbo cution lage v Buildi
al Sh
Army
witho Alt was n
it, it
to the sustain Exper
Armie

Cannon planted upon the Walls, and upon Batteries in the Vallies, it was impossible to approach it without being Masters of some of those Heights that lie round the Town; to which Purpose it was resolved to attack that called St. Catherine's, which was done accordingly on the 30th of July, and the French were driven off, and a Lodgment made upon it. But the French recovered this the 15th of August, after a brisk Action, wherein the Prince of Saxe Gotha, who commanded the Dutch Forces, was killed. Afterwards the Confederates attacked the Forts on the Sea Side, and took that of St. Margaret. As they did also that of St. Lewis on the 18th.

The French in the mean time advanced on all sides, and continually Informations arrived of their Approach. The Dukes of Burgundy, Berry, and Berwick, were upon the Road, and in a few Days de Tesse's Army would be made up an hundred Battalions. The Winds at the same Time had been more than ordinary boisterous, which hinder'd the Operations of the Fleet. All which being consider'd by the Duke of Savoy, he resolved to raise the Siege. Accordingly,

On the 21st of August the Confederate Army drew off, and the Fleet bombarded the Town and Harbour which such Fury and Execution, that the Magazine of Cordage was set on Fire, several stately Buildings ruined, and eight Capital Ships of War destroyed. The Army retreated in good Order and without Loss.

Altho' the Success of this Siege was not answerable to the Hopes of it, it was nevertheless a vast Injury to the Enemy, by the great Loss they sustain'd at Thoulon, and by the great Expence in the long March of their Armies. And it was also a great Relief to Germany, where the French had a superior Force, and levy'd severe Contributions till the Detachments sent hither took them off. The Check it gave also to the Progress of the French Army in Spain was no small Relief. And it effectually secured the Emperor's Success in Naples.

Count Taun commanded the Imperial Army in Italy, and on the 8th of May began his March towards Naples. He call'd at Rome, to obtain the Pope's Investiture of that Kingdom upon K. Charles, and arrived on the Frontiers of Naples, June 24, and reduced the whole Kingdom with little or no Bloodshed.

In Spain, the French took Lerida in Catalonia November the 12th, and Ciudad Rodrigo on Portugal Side the 17th of December.

The Union taking Place on the 1st of May, her Majesty appointed a Thanksgiving to Almighty God to be celebrated on that Day, and came herself with the usual State and Attendance to St. Paul's Cathedral to pay her Devotions.

On the 4th of May, William Lord Cowper, Keeper of the Great Seal, was constituted Lord High Chancellor of Great Britain.

On the 5th of June, her Majesty by Proclamation declared her Intention of holding the first Parliament of Great Britain on the 23d of October, the present Members of England being declar'd Members of it, and those for Scotland ordered to be chosen.

Sir Cloudsley Shovel with 15 Sail of Men of War, sailed from Gibraltar in October for England. On the 21st of October he arrived in the Soundings, but by Mistake, steering in a wrong Course, he run upon the Rocks of Scilly. The Association, with the Admiral on board her, was lost with the Men; the Firebrand

A. D.
1707.

Firebrand dash'd on the Rocks, and founder'd, but the Captain and 24 of his Men got ashore. The Phoenix run aground, but her Men saved themselves. Sir George Byng in the Royal Anne, by excellent Steerage changed her Course in a Moment, and saved the Ship, when she was just running upon the Danger. The Lord Dursley in the St. George also miraculously escap'd. Sir Cloudsley's Body floated ashore, and was taken up by the Country People, and buried in the Sands. On the 26th it was taken up again, and brought aboard the Salisbury, and afterwards interred at Westminster, where her Majesty erected a sumptuous Monument over his Grave.

On the 2d of October the first Parliament of Great Britain met, and the Commons being commanded to chuse their Speaker, they elected their former, John Smith, Esq; who was presented the 30th, and then by the Queen's Command, both Houses adjourned to November the 6th. On that Day her Majesty made a Speech, wherein she set forth the present State of Affairs abroad, advised them to provide the necessary Supplies, left to their Consideration what might be thought necessary to make the Union more advantageous to both Nations, and recommended Unanimity.

The Commons addressed the Queen upon her Speech, but the Lords omitted that, and turned the Motion of it into a Resolution of taking into Consideration the State of the Nation. November the 19th that House went into a grand Committee upon that Subject. The Lord Haversham, and others, exhibited Complaints; the principal whereof being upon the Management of the Admiralty, that was further considered in both Houses, and the Merchants heard upon the Subject of their Losses and Disappointments.

It produced in the End two excellent Acts this Session, as we shall shew by and by.

The several Debates in the House of Lords about the Earl of Peterborough, and in the House of Commons about Sir Thomas Hardy, Commander of the Convoy to Lisbon, Commodore Edwards, and Admiral Whetstone, as also about Capt. Kerr, are too tedious to have Place here. The Supplies granted this Session amounted to 5,933,657 l. The Ways and Means for Raising these Sums were, the Land Tax of 4 s. in the Pound. The Malt Duty. Upon the several Duties granted last Year for Annuities a farther Sum was now enacted of 640,000 l. For like Annuities of 40,000 l. per Annum at the same Price. Customs laid for 95 Years, on which one Million of Pounds were to be taken in for purchasing more Annuities at 16 Years Purchase. The East India Company proposed to advance 1,200,000 l. for the Service of the War, if they might have their Term enlarged to the Year 1726, contenting themselves with the same Interest they already received for the two Millions they formerly advanced, which was comply'd with, and enacted accordingly. And the General Mortgage, as it was called, that is, divers Duties at the Custom-House, was continued from 1712 to 1714, for a Loan of 729,760 l. which compleated the Sums voted.

On the 3d of February the Commons having taken into their Consideration the State of the Army in Spain in the last Year, and Mr. St. John, Secretary at War, giving in an Account of the Provision made for that Service; the House resolv'd, That it appear'd that of the 29,395 English Forces provided for by Parliament for the Service in Spain and Portugal in the Year 1707,

there

A. D.
1707.

there were but 8,669 Men, besides Commission and Non-Commission Officers and Servants in Spain and Portugal at the time of the Battle of Almanza, and order'd an Address to her Majesty to lay the same before her. On the 18th the Queen sent an Answer to this Address, the Substance whereof was as follows:

' That her Majesty was very much concerned to find, that Matter had been fully stated to the House. That having made Enquiry of the Regiments that were intended to compose the 29,395 Men for the Service in Spain and Portugal, and how many of them were there in January 1706-7, (at which Time the Resolutions of Parliament were taken for providing their Pay) and what Regiments were sent thither since that Time, whereby it might appear what Numbers of Men could reasonably be expected to be there when the Battle of Almanza was fought (April the 14th) [Her Majesty premis'd that in the Number of 29,395 are included Officers and their Servants, which make a full fourth Part of the whole according to the Establishment and Allowance always made upon Musters] it appeared, that the Forces intended to make up that Number voted, were to consist of 1 Regiment of Horse, 4 Regiments of Dragoons, 19 Regiments of Foot that serv'd in Spain and Portugal under the Earl of Peterborough and the Earl of Galway, which in their Complement should be 18,852. 1 Regiment of Dragoons, and 10 Regiments of Foot sent in 1706 under the Earl of Rivers, which were 8,833. And 2 new Regiments to be raised to consist of 1710 Men, which make up that Number of 29,395. But her Majesty was afterwards informed by the Lord Tyrrawley, and

' Colonel Wade, who came from thence, that in January 1706-7, the Forces under the Earl of Peterborough and Earl of Galway were reduced by Death, Sickness, &c. notwithstanding that 3,490 Men, had been sent to recruit them, to 12,017. besides 1792 Prisoners with the Enemy. The Regiments under the Earl of Rivers, which went from Torbay 8,297 Men, when they arrived at Valencia, were found to be reduced to 4,500. Six of those Regiments were broke to fill up the rest, and the Officers came back to raise new Men. This Levy hinder'd the raising the two new intended Regiments, for Men could not be got for that Service. But the Money intended to be employed in levying those 2 Regiments, was employed in other Uses of War according to the Liberty given by Parliament. The Battle happen'd so soon after the Vote of Parliament, that it was impossible more of the intended Number could be then there. But out of the Savings of non-effective Men, as abovesaid, her Majesty compleated 4 Regiments that were upon the Irish Establishment, and sent them to Portugal in April 1707. Three more Regiments out of English and Irish Establishments were sent also thither soon after. And the more expeditiously to supply the Loss at Almanza, the Queen hired 7,000 Palatines, 3,000 Germans, and 12,000 Italians, which were embark'd for Barcelona upon her Majesty's Pay. Besides all which, her Majesty had made a Proposal to the Emperor for 6,000 Germans more. And upon the whole declared, that no Care had been wanting to support the War in Spain and Portugal in the most effectual Manner. This Answer being taken into Consideration February

A. D. 1707. bruary the 24th, and the Question then put, That timely Recruits for Spain had been wanting, it passed in the Negative. And it was resolved that an Address be presented to her Majesty to thank her for taking Measures to restore the Affairs of Spain, and providing Foreign Troops for that Service.

In the beginning of this Session divers Merchants made Complaints to the House against the Admiralty with respect to Convoys for their Ships. The Russia Merchants were heard November the 27th, and on the 13th of December divers others trading to Portugal, Spain and Italy. And several smart Resolves passed thereupon. The House of Lords also made strict Enquiry into the Administration of the Admiralty, and laid a Representation of their Observations before her Majesty, which was afterwards printed. The Commons resolved, December the 18th, that a Bill be brought in to appoint Convoys and Cruisers for securing the Trade of the Kingdom, which passed both Houses, and received the Royal Assent. The Purport whereof was, That 44 Ships of War shall be employed as Cruisers, which shall be careened three times a Year, and the Seamen shall not be turned over to other Ships. Such Cruisers shall be Convoys to Merchants-Ships as far as Cape Finisferre. An Account shall be kept and laid before the Parliament annually at what time any of those Cruisers come into Port, how long they tarry there, and when depart. All Ships taken from the Enemy during this War, and condemned as Prize, shall be the Property of the Commander, Officers, and Seamen, that shall take such Prize. The Queen shall give a Bounty to all such Captors of 5*l.* per Man for every Man found on Board such Enemy's Ship at the time she is taken: And also ten Pounds for every Gun such Ship carries, or hath Port-holes for. Another Act also passed this Session for encouraging the Trade to America, wherein it was provided, That all Prize Offices should be suppressed after June 24th, 1708. The Flag, and other Officers and Seamen of every Man of War shall have the sole Interest in Ships and Goods they shall take in America. The Lord Admiral, or Persons appointed by the Admiralty, shall give Commission to Commanders of Ships to seize and take the Enemy's Ships or Goods in America, and their Captures being condemned in any of the Courts of Admiralty for the Plantations, shall be divided amongst the Commanders and Seamen. No Person serving on board any Privateer or Trading Ship in America shall be pressed by any Ship of War. Her Majesty may grant Commissions or Charters to any Persons or Societies for taking any Ships, Goods, Harbours, Lands, or Fortifications of the Enemy in America, and enjoy the same after the War. With many other very encouraging Proviso's.

The Acts passed this Session relating to Scotland, were, An Act to repeal the two Acts of Scotland, intituled, An Act for the Security of the Kingdom; and an Act anent Peace and War, as inconsistent with the Union. An Act for rendering the Union more compleat, whereby the Privy Council in Scotland was put down, Justices of the Peace established in Scotland, and Circuit Courts were appointed, and the manner of choosing the Representatives in Parliament directed. The Act for better securing her Majesty's Person and Government provides that all Officers in Scotland shall take the Abjuration Oath. There passed also this Session an Act

Act elect
For Scotl
blis
Scotl
O
this both 23d natio
O
com
Add ferin
" no
" fa
" li
" an
" ch
" th
" b conc upon her
' an
' yo
' be ' ou
' ch
' H T lant than Cler
fice,
Cor
It v ster ken Dec peff den poin him pea
Th
ty, fon exe own dy

Act to make further Provision for electing the 16 Peers for Scotland, For trying Peers for Offences in Scotland. And an Act for Establishing a Court of Exchequer in Scotland.

Other notable Transactions of this Session were the Address of both Houses to the Queen on the 23d of December: And the Examination of the Affair of Gregg.

On the 22d of December the Lords communicated to the Commons an Address to her Majesty, humbly offering it as their Opinion, "That no Peace can be honourable or safe for her Majesty, or her Allies, if Spain, the West-Indies, or any part of the Spanish Monarchy be suffered to remain under the Power of the House of Bourbon." Wherein the Commons concurred, and both Houses waited upon the Queen with it. To which her Majesty answered, 'My Lords and Gentlemen, I am fully of your Opinion, that no Peace can be Honourable or Safe for Us or our Allies, till the entire Monarchy of Spain be restored to the House of Austria, &c.

The Affair of Gregg was petulantly extended, and made more of than it merited. This Man was a Clerk in Mr. Secretary Harley's Office, and carried on Criminal Correspondence with the Enemy. It was discovered by the Post-Master of Brussels, and Gregg was taken into Custody on the last Day of December. The House of Lords suspecting he might have Correspondents and Associates in England, appointed a Committee to examine him in Newgate, but nothing appeared further than what I have said. The Man was tryed, pleaded guilty, and condemned for High Treason on the 19th of January, and executed soon after, confessing his own Guilt, but acquitted every Body as Accessaries with him.

The House of Lords in an Address to the Queen declared as their Opinion, that this was a Crime of an heinous Nature, and that Papers of secret Nature, were too much exposed in the Secretary's Office, whereby this and other Clerks had it in their Power to give the Enemy from time to time Informations of the Designs here concerted, the Stations of our Convoys, and the times of Trade Fleets sailing, &c.

On the 11th of February Mr. Secretary Harley resigned his Office, which was given to Henry Boyle; Esq; The next Day Sir Thomas Mansel Comptroller of the Household, Sir Simon Harcourt Attorney General, and Mr. St. John Secretary at War, resigned their Places.

About this time her Majesty nominated Dr. Moore, Bishop of Norwich, to succeed Dr. Patrick deceased, in the Bishoprick of Ely, and Dr. Trimnel to succeed him in the Bishoprick of Norwich. Sir Jonathan Trelawney being promoted to the Bishoprick of Winchester, her Majesty nominated Dr. Blackall to succeed him in Exeter. And Sir William Davies succeeded Dr. Stratford deceased in the Bishoprick of Chester.

And now we were surprized by a very bold Attempt from the Enemy. The French King meditating Revenge for our Invasion of his Kingdom, and besieging a Place of such consequence to him as Thoulon, endeavoured to shew us in our turn the Distraction an Invasion produces. He was fairly invited to it by the evident Discontent the Scotish Nation was in by Reason of the Union, where, in their Passions, the unthinking People often let fall Expressions that gave the pretended Prince of Wales room to believe he should not be unwelcome. This was too fair an Opportunity for 1707.

A. D.

the French to let slip, and therefore that Court resolv'd, by giving the Chevalier de St. George (which was the Title the Pretender to the Crown of Britain was now known by) Assistance, to make Great Britain the Seat of the War. Accordingly a Fleet of Men of War and Transports were expeditiously fitted out at Dunkirk, and 10,000 Forces, with many Officers, much Ammunition, Artillery, and Arms, put on Board. Major General Cadogan, who was her Majesty's Envoy in Holland, soon gave Advice of the Preparations, and then went to Brussels, and so concerted Matters with Monsieur d'Auverquerque, that 10 Battalions of the English Forces in Flanders were immediately drawn down to the Coast ready to be shipped. The Admiralty here at the same time applied such Diligence in fitting out a Fleet, that 23 Sail of Men of War under Sir George Byng and the Lord Dursely appeared before Dunkirk on the 27th of February, O. S. when the Enemy were promising themselves we could have no Fleet abroad. The Pretender came to Dunkirk March the 9th, N. S. But the Sight of the English Fleet made the French Admiral Monsieur Fourbin write back to Court for fresh Orders. And to colour the Delay of Proceeding, 'twas pretended the young Prince was Sick. But the French King sending express Orders to his Admiral to venture out, and the contrary Winds having forced our Fleet to withdraw to our own Coast, on the 17th of March N. S. they set sail. Our Fleet was by this time reinforced to the Number of 40 Sail of Line of Battle Ships, besides Frigates and Tenders. And Sir George Byng having received Advice that the Enemy were sailed, set Sail after them. At the same time the Forces were shipp'd off at Ostend, and Admiral Baker convoy'd them over. These Forces, together with several Regiments of Horse marched for Scotland with all Expedition. The French sail'd directly for Edinburgh Fryth, but the bad Winds they met with hindered them from getting thither till the 23d, N. S. that is, the 12th of March our Style. There are two Accounts of theirs extant, one a Letter from Marshal Matignon to Monsieur Chamillard, the other from an Irish Officer on board. The former says they did not go into the Fryth, but spying our Fleet stood off immediately; the other says they had just got into the Fryth when the English Fleet came to the Mouth of it, and giving the Signal for anchoring, Fourbin, who understood it, immediately gave Orders to every Ship to flink out singly in the Night. As soon as the Day appeared our Fleet discover'd and gave them Chase, but they outfail'd us, so that except the Salisbury, a Man of War formerly taken from us, they all escaped. They roved about, with intention to land at Inverness, but having no Pilots, and the Wind not permitting a Frigate, which they sent, for some to get ashore, they stood off, and by dispersing themselves in that wide Sea, and in hazy Weather, made a shift to get back to Dunkirk, but in very sorry plight.

There were taken Prisoners on board the Salisbury, the Lord Griffin, the Lord Clermont, and Mr. Middleton. A Lieutenant General, his Aid de Camp, a Colonel, 2 Lieutenant-Colonels, 5 Captains, and 2 Lieutenants, French Officers, 15 Irish Officers, 5 Companies of French Foot Soldiers, 250 Seamen, and all the Officers of the Ship.

And thus by the Blessing of God we were most happily and without the least hurt, delivered from this threatening threatening Danger. And yet such was the impertinent Dispiritedness of the Publick at this Time, that during the short Time the Fright lasted, and even after the Danger was over, there was such raking and taring to get Money in, that the Publick Credit sunk extreamly, and the Bank of England was hard beset. But that Body being duly sustain'd by the Queen, and the Directors calling in 20 per Cent. from their Partners, stemm'd the Impetuosity of the present Tide, and soon abated the Demand upon them.

The Parliament sat all this while, and by Addresses to her Majesty, gave the Publick Assurance, that they would exert themselves in defeating this bold Attempt of the Enemy. They passed a Bill also, to empower her Majesty to imprison such Persons, as she had Cause to suspect were conspiring against her Person or Government. In fine, the Danger of the Invasion being over, and the Bills all ready that were intended to be passed this Session, Her Majesty came to the House on the 1st of April, and gave the Royal Assent to the Bills, made a most gracious Speech, and then the Parliament was prorogued.

On the 15th of April her Majesty issued a Proclamation for dissolving the Parliament; and soon after another Proclamation for calling a New one, on the 8th of July. The Lord Griffin was committed to the Tower, and on the 15th of May was brought to the Queen's Bench-Bar, and, upon the former Outlawry against him, received Sentence of Death. But her Majesty was pleased to grant him a Reprieve for a Month, which was renewed from Time to Time till he died in the Tower. On the 2d of April her Majesty nominated Dr. Fleetwood to succeed Dr. Beveridge deceased, in the Bishoprick of Asaph.

The Campaign in Flanders this Year was exceeding honourable. The Victory at Oudenard, and the taking of Lisle, were Conquests of inestimable Value. The Emperor, concurring with the Queen and the States, was of Opinion, that a brisk Effort in Flanders would most sensibly affect the Enemy. He sent therefore Prince Eugene of Savoy, his President of the Council of War, and the General he most relied on, to the Hague, to concert with the Duke of Marborough and the States, the Operations of the next Campaign. The Duke arriv'd at the Hague, April the 8th, N. S. where he found the Prince just arriv'd. They enter'd immediately into the strictest Amity; and after having held Conferences with the States Deputies, they went together to the Court of Hanover. They arrived there the 26th of April, had Audience of his Electoral Highness, and after divers Conferences, wherein all Things were adjusted for the military Actions, Prince Eugene went to Leipzig, and from thence to Vieuna, and the Duke of Marborough came to the Hague, where he arriv'd the 3d of May. It must be noted, that the Elector of Hanover was now Commander in Chief of the Army of the Empire, and the Scheme for this Year's Service took a large Part of the German Army from the Rhine, to act under Prince Eugene. Which his Electoral Highness, for the Good of the common Cause, gave way to, altho' it left him incapable of making any notable Effort against the Enemy.

About the latter End of May the Army was form'd, and consisted of 180 Squadrons, and 112 Battalions. The French Army also took the Field about the same Time, the Duke of Burgundy being Commander in Chief, and under him the Duke of Vendosme; the Duke of

A. D.
1708

Berry also and the Pretender were in the Army, which was superior in Number to the Confederates, as being 197 Squadrons, and 124 Battalions. Several Marches and Counter Marches passed, and there were daily Expectations of a Battle. The Confederates expected large reinforcements from the Rhine, which were to be conducted into the Netherlands by Prince Eugene, and therefore lay the more quietly in their Camp expecting them; which the French being apprized of, ventured to detach off a large Number of their Troops on the 5th of July, who advanced towards Ghent. The Elector of Bavaria, by his profuse Way of Living while Governor of the Netherlands, had ingratiated himself so much with that People, as to be able to keep Correspondence with this Town, Bruges, and Antwerp, and disposed the Inhabitants to betray them to the French. Ghent therefore was surrender'd as soon as the French came before it, as was likewise Bruges the next Day. The whole French Army decamped at the same time, and on the 9th invested Oudenarde. The Confederate Army made a long March after them the 6th, and being join'd by Prince Eugene with part of his Forces, they threw in a Reinforcement into Oudenarde, and marched the 10th to the Camp of Leffines, which the French endeavoured to have possessed. The Enemy quitted Oudenarde, and passed the Schelde, and the Duke of Marlborough and the Prince resolving to give them Battle, passed it also. Which produced, on the 11th of July, the Battle of Oudenarde. The Action began at 3 in the Afternoon, but could not be called a general Engagement till towards 7, when the Battle became very furious on both sides; the French retired continually, but fresh Troops coming up, they maintain'd a Fight for some time; but the Superior Courage of the Confederates, and the Bravery and Activity of the D. of Marlborough and Prince Eugene put them to the Rout, and an entire Victory was gain'd. The French drew off in the Night, and made a tolerable good Retreat towards Ghent, having lost above 10,000 Men, either kill'd or taken; for 700 Officers, and 7,000 private Soldiers, besides 24 Standards, 25 Colours, and 5 pair of Kettle Drums were taken by the Confederates. While on the contrary, the Loss on the Confederate side amounted to no more than 824 kill'd, and 2,146 wounded. And at the same time abundance of Germans, Switz, and Savoyards deserted the Enemy, and took Service with the Allies.

The rest of the German Reinforcements join'd the Army a few Days after, and then the Siege of Lisle was resolv'd on. The Artillery and Ammunition necessary for the Siege was sent for, and in the mean time the Army broke thro' the Enemies Lines.

When the German Troops mov'd from the Rhine, the Duke of Berwick, who commanded the French Army on that side, marched with his Troops to Flanders also. Prince Eugene observ'd these, while the Duke of Marlborough invaded the Enemies Country, and our Army lived at Discretion there, the French lying still entrench'd under the Cannon of Ghent. August the 13th Lisle was invested.

This City was the Capital of French Flanders, a Place of that Opulency, Wealth, and Politeness, that it was called Petit Paris, Little Paris. And perhaps no City in all the French Dominions except the Capital exceeded it. Nothing was wanting to render it secure, for the Fortifications were made, as far as could could be, impregnable. The Siege was long and terrible, and the French Army without made shews of attempting to raise the Siege, but their Courage failed them. They then turned their Minds on stopping up the Passage of the Schelde, to deprive the Besiegers of receiving Ammunition and Necessaries: This incommoded them till the arrival of Troops from England under Major General Earle, who landing at Ostend Sept. 21. administered Relief. For it was resolv'd to send 700 Waggon's to Ostend, to bring Ammunition from thence by Land under the Convoy of part of those Forces. Accordingly the Waggon's were loaded and sent forward; but a Body of French under Count de la Motte being sent to intercept them, Major General Webb marched with a Body of Troops to meet and reinforce the Convoy. This General being met by the French at a Place call'd Wynendale, in a Pass between two Woods, disposed his Battalions so judiciously, and his Men fought so bravely, that with 6,000 Men he maintain'd a Fight of 2 Hours against 24,000, with 40 Pieces of Cannon, and in the end made them Retreat in great Confusion. The Convoy in the mean time pass'd undisturb'd another Way, and arriv'd safe in the Camp. The Loss in this Action was 10 Officers and 111 Soldiers kill'd, and 62 Officers and 680 Soldiers wounded. The Arrival of this Convoy enabled them to continue the Siege of Lisle, which otherwise must very probably have been rais'd. October 3. the Ravellin was taken. Still great Efforts were made by the Enemy, to hinder the bringing in Ammunition. The Duke of Vendosme, with 30,000 Men from Bruges and Ipres cut the Dikes, and overflow'd the Country, thro' which it was to be brought from Ostend. But this Difficulty was overcome by the Help of Boats and good Management, and another good Quantity of Ammunition and Provisions was brought safe into the Camp. October 18 Monsieur d' Averquerque departed this Life in his Quarters at Rousselaer, and Count Tilly took upon him the Command of the Dutch Forces. All Attempts of Diversion on the French side proving ineffectual, the Siege was carried on with that Vigour, that on the 23d of October the Town surrendered; but the Garrison retiring into the Citadel, the Siege took up above 7 Weeks more; for the Elector of Bavaria made another bold Attempt of Diversion, by a sudden March with an Army to Brussels, and on the 26th of November began to fire upon the Town. But the Duke of Marborough and Prince Eugene advanced to its Relief with incredible Expedition; the News whereof oblig'd him the next Day to raise the Siege. In fine, after the extreamest Difficulties were surmounted, and the utmost Bravery and Conduct shewn by those Consummate Generals, the Citadel also was surrender'd December the 9th.

A. D.
1708.

The Duke, resolving to finish the Work, would not leave Ghent and Bruges in the French hands, he therefore commenced a new Siege, and opened Trenches before Ghent, Dec. the 24th; on the 30th they capitulated, and on the 2d of January the Garrison march'd out. Bruges gave him no Trouble, for the French abandoned that. And so this successful, but painful Campaign ended.

The Duke of Savoy this Campaign gain'd upon the French. He invaded Dauphine with Success. Exilles and Festrelles, two strong Fortresses on the Frontiers of that Province, he made himself Master of by fair Siege.

A. D.
1709.

The Empire in the Dyet this Year made great Resolutions, but performed so little, that the Elector of Hanover could do nothing upon the Rhine.

Our Fleet this Year commanded by Sir John Leak arrived at Lisbon April 7. and sailed for the Streights, May the 8th. They met a Fleet of French Provision Ships, whereof 69 out of 90, were taken. On the 26th of May, they arriv'd at Barcelona, whence they sail'd the 30th to Vado. Being arrived there, the Dutch Admiral went up to Turin to hasten the Troops that were to come thence to be embarked for Barcelona; and Sir John Norris went to Milan for the same Reason, and to compliment the Princess of Wolfembuttel, the contracted Spouse of King Charles. Sir John Leak went afterwards to wait upon the Lady at Milan, and on the 13th of July, received her on Board the Fleet at Genoa, and conducted her to Mataro near Barcelona.

The French in the mean time pursued their Interest in Spain as much as their Circumstances would permit. They invested Tortosa, June the 12th, and it was surrendered July the 11th. They took Denia November the 17th, and Alicant December the 3d. But Sir John Leak made some amends for these Losses. For the Fleet under his Conduct conquered the fruitful Island of Sardinia, and the Island Minorca, wherein the noted Port Mahon was of great Advantage to the Confederacy.

In the West-Indies our Ships made good Prize upon the Enemy. A Privateer Sloop, commanded by Captain Coleby, with 100 Men, falling in with a Fleet of the Enemies Brigantines richly laden, fought the Guard Sloop and two more, took her and 6 more, and therein so much Wealth, that the Enemy offer'd 180,000 Dollars Ransom for her. Mr. Wager who was Commodore of her Majesty's Ships of War there, hearing that the Gallies were preparing to sail from Porto Bell to Carthage, sailed from Jamaica March 6. in the Expedition, accompanied by the Kingston, Portland, and Vulture. They lay off and on between Carthage and Porto Belo, till the 28 of May, when they saw 17 Sail to Leeward. The Commodore resolved to fight them and bore down accordingly; the Spanish Admiral, who mounted 64 Brass Guns, the Vice-Admiral of 50, the Rear-Admiral of 44, and a French Ship of 36 Guns, all engaged him. He fought them for 4 Hours, in which time the Admiral blew up, the Vice-Admiral having her upper Deck blown up bore away, and the Rear-Admiral was taken. The Kingston and the Portland all this while did nothing, notwithstanding they were order'd to follow the Vice-Admiral; whom they might have taken. The Ship that blew up was worth 30 Millions of Pieces of Eight, and that taken was so rich, that the Commodore's Share of the Prize, was reckon'd to amount to 100,000*l*. Captain Bridges of the Kingston, and Captain Windfor of the Portland, were both tried in a Court Martial at Jamaica July the 23d, and both turned out of their Commands.

Sir George Byng had the Honour to convoy the contracted Queen of Portugal (Daughter to the late Emperor) from Holland to Lisbon. Her Majesty went on Board the British Squadron in the Maese, and arrived safe at Spithead the 24th of September, where she landed, and was complimented and entertained. And on the 29th went on Board again, and arrived safe at Lisbon October the 27th N. S. From thence the Admiral sailed forward to the Streights, and took upon him

the Con
Mediterr

An A which o Session t ture. M vite Em part Ho of that Debt.

tary, an but he Queen
the Per wards p

His F of Denn bled w sometim very il standing his Ast compan spitting which finally
the 28
the Qu
the 13
Henry attende and the univers
and the
was ve

On Majesty broke I pointed ceed hi
land.
made I

On Parlian
Richar jesty's come Comm
ment,
Chanc
in he

the Command of the Fleet in the Mediterranean.

An Affair happened this Summer, which occasioned a Law in the next Session to prevent the like for the future. Monsieur Matuof the Muscovite Embassador being about to depart Home; an indiscreet Creditor of that Minister arrested him for Debt. He complained to the Secretary, and had the Arrest taken off; but he resenting the Indignity, the Queen ordered a Prosecution, and the Persons concerned were afterwards punished.

His Royal Highness Prince George of Denmark having been long troubled with a violent Asthma, and sometimes spitting of Blood, grew very ill in October, and notwithstanding all Medicinal Applications his Asthma increased, and was accompanied with a Cough, Blood-spitting, and a Coma or Sleepiness, which ended in Convulsions, and finally his Highness expired October the 28th, to the excessive Grief of the Queen. His Corpse was interred the 13th of November, in King Henry VII's Chapel, and the Funeral attended by all the Officers of State, and the Nobility. His Highness was universally beloved in the Nation, and therefore the Mourning for him was very general.

On the 25th of November her Majesty constituted the Earl of Pembroke Lord High-Admiral, and appointed the Earl of Wharton to succeed him in the Lieutenantancy of Ireland. And the Lord Sommers was made President of the Council.

On the 16th of November the Parliament met, and chose Sir Richard Onslow Speaker. Her Majesty's Grief not permitting her to come to the House, she appointed Commissioners to open the Parliament, in whose Name the Lord Chancellor made a Speech. Wherein he recommended a larger Supply for the Army in Flanders, and a larger Supply for the Fleet, Provisions of such Laws as might be necessary to make the Union more perfect, and an Improvement of Trade and Manufacture.

The Total of the Supplies granted this Session amounted to 6,457,830 l. To raise these Sums, they gave the Land-Tax of 4 s. in the Pound. The Malt Tax, and 2,500,000 l. by Exchequer-Bills. For the Bank of England proposed to add 400,000 l. upon the old Fund granted to them, and upon Condition of their being continued a Corporation for 21 Years longer. They proposed to receive Subscriptions for doubling their Stock, to enable them to circulate 2,500,000 l. in Exchequer Bills, praying that a Fund be appointed for paying off and cancelling the said Bills in some certain time. And that a Fund be granted for paying 150,000 l. yearly, being the Interest for the said Sum at 6 per Cent. with some other Conditions relating to the issuing the said Bills. Which Proposal was received by the Parliament, and enacted accordingly. These were all the Grants, altho' they amounted to much less than was voted.

There passed this Session an Act for Naturalizing all Foreigners being Protestants. And an Act to ascertain the Privilege of Ambassadors.

The Lord Haversham's Speech this Year turned upon the Defect of Arms and Ammunition in the several Castles in Scotland at the time of the late Invasion. Which occasioned some smart Resolves in the House of Lords. And.

There having been some Overtures made from France for Peace; ' It was resolved by the Lords, ' That an Address be presented to ' her Majesty, that she would be ' pleased to take care at the Conclusion of the War, that the French ' King

A. D.

1709.

D. A.
1709.

' King be obliged to own her Majesty's Title and the Protestant Succession, and that her Allies be Guarantees of the same, and the Pretender be removed out of the French Dominions.' And this Address being sent to the Commons for their Concurrence, they concurred, and added to it, ' That the demolishing of the Fortifications and Harbour of Dunkirk be insisted upon in the ensuing Treaty. It was accordingly presented, and her Majesty gave a most gracious Answer.

Finally, An Act for her Majesty's Free and General Pardon passed this Session. Which with 21 other Publick, and 31 Private Acts received the Royal Assent by Commission on the 21st of April. The Lord Chancellor made a Speech in her Majesty's Name, and then the Parliament was prorogued.

It must be remembered, that this Winter had proved exceeding hard, a Frost set in at Christmas, and continued above three Weeks, wherein the Cold was more intense than any had been known. The Effect of it, blessed be God, was not destructive in England, but in France it made sad Havock, destroyed their Vineyards, killed their Corn, tore the Trees, and ruined the Fruit. Which added to the bad Harvest for some Years past, left the whole Country in a starving State. At the same time the King's Revenues being exhausted by the War, and all the Funds insufficient to enable him to pay the Interest of what he borrowed, the Banquiers who remitted his Foreign Payments, were forced to make a stop; and particular Persons who had Money in the Hands of Mr. Bernard, the Principal of them, lost near a Million Sterling. These Calamities, together with the great Losses sustained last Year, and almost every Year of the War, made the French Monarch turn his Thoughts, or seemed to do so at least, to Peace.

Monsieur Pethum Envoy from the Duke of Holstein, being a Neuter, was forward to advance Proposals of Peace, and by his Negotiation the Allies were prevailed upon to permit the President de Rouille to come into the Netherlands on the part of France to treat of a Peace. In the beginning of the Year 1709, that Gentleman came to Antwerp, where Monsieur Buys and Monsieur Vanderdussen on the part of the Confederates, held a Conference with him. The States gave immediate Advice to the Emperor, and the Queen, of what he had proposed, and Prince Eugene arrived at the Hague, March the 27th N. S. on the part of the Emperor; and the Duke of Marlborough on the 8th of April on the part of her Majesty. The Confederates having made their Demands, de Rouille communicated them to the French Court, and received Orders to agree to them. And the Duke of Marlborough returned to England to inform her Majesty of the Progress made, and to receive her further Commands. The French Court seemed so earnest, that the King sent the Marquis de Torcy who arrived at the Hague May to finish the Negotiation. The Duke of Marlborough being returned, his Grace with the Lord Townshend were constituted her Majesty's Plenipotentiaries. The French gave up the Monarchy of Spain, the Dutch Barrier, Dunkirk, and the Prince of Wales, but stuck at Alsace. The Emperor insisted upon that, and the French were allowed to depart if they agreed not to all. The French made a Grimace of departing, but tarried however, and had divers Conferences with the Allies. Till in the end, May 28. they agreed to all the Articles, but would not sign them. The Marquis de Torcy came ried the Articles to France to get the King's Ratification, and promised to return by the 4th of June. But instead of that, sent a Letter to Prince Eugene, to tell him the King would not agree to it. Monsieur de Rouille declared to the States, That his Master excepted against the 10th, 11th, 28th, 29th, and 37th Articles: Whereupon he was ordered to go in 24 Hours. But he desiring another Conference, it was granted, but to no purpose, for he had nothing to propose, and the Allies continued to insist upon what was concluded on. And so on the 8th of June that Minister returned Home.

An Abstract of the Preliminary Articles for a Treaty on a General Peace.

A Firm and lasting Peace and perpetual Alliance shall be established between his Imperial Majesty and his Allies, the Queen of Great Britain and the States-General, &c. on one part, and the most Christian King on the other.

II. To attain which good End, preliminary Articles are agreed upon to serve for the Foundation of the Treaties of a general Peace.

III. The most Christian King shall acknowledge King Charles III. King of Spain, and of the Territories dependant on that Crown, except what is to be given to the Crown of Portugal, the Duke of Savoy, and the States-General.

IV. And forasmuch as the Duke of Anjou is in Possession of Spain, &c. 'tis agreed, That the Treaties to be made shall be finished in the term of two Months, to begin from the 1st Day of June next, if possible; during which time, Sicily shall be put into the Hands of King Charles, and the Duke of Anjou shall depart out of the Limits of Spain. And before that time the Duke of Anjou do not consent to the Execution of this Agreement, the most Christian King with the stipulating Princes and States shall take proper Measures that it may have entire effect; that all Europe may speedily enjoy perfect Tranquility.

V. The most Christian King shall within two Months withdraw all the Forces he has in Spain, Sicily, or in other part of the Spanish Dominions in Europe, and from the Indies as soon as possible. Promising not to send henceforward to the Duke of Anjou, or his Adherents, any Succour whatsoever.

VI. The Monarchy of Spain shall remain entire to the House of Austria. None of its Parts shall be dismembered, nor the said Monarchy in whole or in part be united to that of France: Nor shall one and the same Prince of the House of France ever become Sovereign thereof. No King who shall reign in France shall ever reign in Spain, or acquire within the extent of the said Monarchy, any Towns, Places, or Countries in any part of it, especially in the Netherlands, under any pretence whatsoever.

VII. Particularly and Specially, France shall never become possessed of the Spanish Indies, nor send any Ship thither to exercise Commerce under any pretence whatsoever.

VIII. His most Christian Majesty consents to deliver up to his Imperial Majesty the City and Citadel of Strasbourg, in the Condition they are now in, with the Fort Kehl, &c. and 100 pieces of Brass Cannon, which shall be delivered up immediately after the Ratifications of the Emperor and the Empire shall be exchanged at the Hague.

IX. The Town of Brisac and all its Territories shall be restored to his Imperial Majesty and the House of Austria, with all its Dependencies and Stores by the end of June next, to be enjoyed by his Imperial Majesty as his own Property.

X. The

A. D.
1709.

X. The most Christian King shall enjoy Alsace according to the literal Sense of the Treaty of Munster, without extending the said Right to the Prejudice of the Rights and Prerogatives belonging to the Ten Imperial Cities seated therein. Except the Town of Landau, the Property whereof shall belong to the Emperor and the Empire.

XI. The most Christian King shall cause to be demolished at his own Expence the fortified Places he has on the Rhine between Basil and Philipsburg, namely Hunninghen, New Brisac, and Fort Louis.

XII. Rhinfelts to be possessed by the Landgrave of Hesse Cassel.

XIII. The Clause in the Treaty of Ryswick about Religion shall be referred to the Negotiation of Peace.

XIV. The most Christian King shall acknowledge the Queen of Great Britain.

XV. He shall also acknowledge the Succession of the Crown of Great-Britain in the Protestant Line, as it is settled by Acts of Parliament.

XVI. The most Christian King shall deliver up to the Crown of Great-Britain what France possesses in Newfoundland. And all Places taken by either the English or French in the Indies during this War, shall be restored.

XVII. His said Majesty promises to cause all the Fortifications of Dunkirk, its Harbour and Rysbanks to be rased and filled up at his own Expence, so that one half of the Fortifications shall be rased, and one half of the Harbour filled up within 2 Months, and the other half within 2 Months more. Never to be rebuilt.

XVIII. The Person who calls himself King of Great Britain, shall depart out of France, and retire into such Country as by the ensuing Treaty shall be agreed, &c.

The Negotiation for the Peace being at an end, it was resolved to prosecute the War with Vigour. The Duke of Marlborough therefore departed for the Army, and arrived at Brussels June the 10th, where he met Prince Eugene. The Army consisted of 110,000 Men, and assembled about Courtray and Menin the 21st. The French, altho' their Cavalry were well mounted, and the Infantry well recruited, durst not expose themselves but entrenched deep. Our Generals therefore declined the Attempt of fighting, and sat down before Tonay. On the 3d of July that City was invested, and three Attacks forced against it. The Trenches were opened the 17th, and the Siege carried on with Vigour. On the 28th of July the Town capitulated, and the Garrison retired into the Citadel; the Siege whereof took up but few Days more before the Garrison capitulated, and the Articles were agreed upon on the 4th of August. But being sent to the Court of France for Ratification, it was refused, and so the Siege was renewed and continued all the Month, but on the 1st of September it was surrendered. Marshall Villars had the Command of the French Army, to whom were now added Marshall Boufflers, who arrived in their Camp the 7th of September. The Prince of Hesse commanded a separate Army, which the French had their Eye upon, and were preparing to attack. But our Generals were so well provided with Spies, that they had Notice of it, and disposed the Army to prevent the Attack. And at the same time understanding that Mons was at this time but thinly garrisoned, it was resolved to besiege the French throwing more into it, and to besiege that Town. They disposed themselves therefore to invest it. But the French Army, marching from Valenciennes, got to a strong Camp about three Miles distant from Mons, whence it had been possible to have could do, were not able to stop them one Day, will you not own with me (says he) that they surpass all the Heroes of former Ages?

A. D.

1709.

On the 21st of September Mons was invested; on the 20th of October it capitulated, and on the 23d the Confederates took Possession of it. The Season being now far advanced, and the Army much fatigued, the Generals were willing to give them Ease, and therefore finish'd the Campaign, and the Army marched into Quarters.

Nothing was done on the Rhine this Campaign. The Duke of Hanover, who commanded, laid a Scheme of Action, that with Success had been of great Moment. Count Mercy was detach'd with a Body of Troops to march round thro' the Skirts of Swisserland into Alsace, and attack the French on the back, but it miscarried; Mercy got thither, but ventured to fight too soon, and was beaten.

The Duke of Savoy had some Demands upon the Imperial Court, which he thought were too long delayed, and therefore refused to take the Field till he was satisfied: Her Majesty and the States by their Ambassadors at Vienna solicited his Cause, and obtained such an Answer as pacified him. This retarded the opening the Campaign on that side till the beginning of July. But they then behaved themselves so well, that the French were driven out of their Entrenchments at St. Maurice, their Lines forced at Constans, and the Town Annecy taken by the Confederates.

In Portugal a Battle was fought at Caya, where the Portuguese Horse giving way, the Spaniards became Masters of the Cannon; to retrieve which the Lord Galway brought up three British Regiments, who pushed the Enemy and recovered it, but not being sustained by the Portuguese, possible so to disturb us, as to prevent the taking of the Place. Our Generals viewed the Enemies Army, and notwithstanding their advantageous Situation, concerted the Methods of attacking them. The French fortified their Camp with such Works as render'd it excessive strong, and therefore were able to make a vigorous Defence. But the Courage of our Soldiery, and the Conduct of our Generals overcame all Difficulties, and after six Hours bloody Fight, the Confederates broke through the Entrenchments, and put the Enemy to Flight, leaving behind them 16 Pieces of Cannon, 301 Officers Prisoners, 26 Colours, and 26 Standards. By intercepted Letters it was discovered, that besides the 301 Officers taken, they had 540 killed, and 1668 wounded; and of private Soldiers killed, wounded, or taken, 15,001. On the Confederate Side, it appear'd by the Accounts of the several Regiments, that of Officers and Soldiers that were killed, 547, and wounded 7421. This Battle was fought on the 11th of September N. S. and was called the Battle of Blarignies, or Taisners, or Malplaquet, from three Villages of whose Names seated on or near the Place of Action. The advantageous Situation of the Enemy was such, that when our Generals view'd it after the Battle, they were amazed at the Difficulties they had surmounted. And altho' the French fought so well that 'twas said they retrieved their Nation's Honour in this Action, yet in an intercepted Letter from an Officer in their Army, speaking of the Eugene's and Marlborough's, as he calls them, were these Words, What can withstand the rapid Force of those two famous Heroes! of an Army of 1000,000 Men of the best Troops, posted between two Woods, ably entrenched, and performing their Duty as well as brave Men

A. D.
1709.

guise, were surrounded and made Prisoners.

In Spain, Alicant having been blocked up ever since December, was (after the springing of a Mine which the Enemy with prodigious Toil had cut into a Rock under the Castle) forced to capitulate April the 17th, and the Garrison went on board the British Squadron of Men of War, which was just arrived with a Reinforcement of Men under General Stanhope, but found it impracticable to put them into the Town.

But the Duke of Anjou was not able to bring a sufficient Army into the Field on Catalonia Side. For Count Staremburg passed the Segra on the 27th of August, and took Balaguer with 900 Men in it Prisoners of War. General Stanhope having formed a Design to surprize Cadiz, put himself on board the Fleet commanded by Sir George Byng at Port Mahon with some Forces, and sailed to Gibraltar, where he expected to have met the Forces sent from England on board the Rear-Admiral Baker; but the contrary Winds detained the Fleet so long that the Attempt was then impracticable.

This Summer a large Number of poor People, that were Inhabitants of the Palatinate on the Rhine, where the French Armies had in the last War destroyed the Country, and in this War miserably impoverished it by Contributions, were invited over by some Persons in Power here, and came accordingly. Care was taken of them by a Society of Gentlemen, and by the Queen's Letters Patents, publick Collections were made for them; which raised a considerable Sum. Several Gentlemen of Estate and Virtue labour'd in providing for them; and to that Purpose, formed a Design of planting them together in Kent, and offer'd a very large Sum of Money to purchase Cobham Park, lately belonging to Sir Joseph Williamson, and now to be sold. But the Money, altho' the full Value, was refused; and the Publick beginning to take great Displeasure at the Introduction of so many Beggars among us, when we had already too many Poor unprovided for, those Gentlemen could not make the intended Provision for them, and therefore after 2 or 3 Months subsisting them, Part were sent to Maryland, Part to Ireland, and the rest distributed as well as they could be here.

November 15, the Parliament of Great Britain met; to whom her Majesty made a most Gracious Speech: Wherein she took Notice of the Enemies insidious Pretence of Peace, and desired such Supplies as they should think fit. And recommended a Stoppage of the Exportation of Corn, because it raised the Price excessively, and thereby gave the Poor Occasion to make grievous Complaints. Both Houses address'd her Majesty with great Loyalty and Affection. And voted Thanks to the Duke of Marlborough for the great and important Service he had done the Nation.

The Total of the Supplies granted this Session, amounted to 6,23260 l. for the Service of the Year 1710. The great Scarcity of Corn in France had occasioned the Venue of so much thither from all the neighbouring Countries, that the Demand to resupply Flanders and Holland, drew great Quantities from hence. This, although a great Advantage to the Nation, for 'twas known that there was sent of it the Year to Rotterdam only to the Value of 900,000 l. Sterl. as entred in the Custom-house Books there, besides what went to Amsterdam, and Portugal; yet since it raised the Price here, the Poor complain'd, and the Rich in their Favour mourn'd, which made it necessary stop the Exportation. The House therefore, in pursuance of her Majesty's Intimation to them, address'd the Queen to lay an Embargo on Corn Ships, and afterwards passed an Act, to forbid the Exportation of Corn for one Year.

A. D.

1709.

And now came on the Consideration of Dr. Sacheverell's Sermon, preach'd at St. Paul's, November the 5th, before the Lord-Mayor, against which Complaint was made in the House December the 13th.

This is a Matter that made so great a Noise, and every body is so well apprized of it by the printed Trial, and many Papers published concerning it, that we need not enlarge upon it. 'Tis sufficient to say that the Commons impeached him at the Bar of the House of Lords upon four Articles; exhibiting, 1. That he cast black and odious Colours upon his late Majesty, and the Revolution. 2. That he suggests and maintains the Toleration to be unreasonable, and the Allowance of it unwarrantable. 3. He suggesteth that the Church of England is in a Condition of Peril and Adversity under her Majesty's Administration. 4. That he suggests, that her Majesty's Administration both in Ecclesiastical and Civil Affairs, tends to the Destruction of the Constitution, &c.

Upon this Impeachment he was solemnly try'd by the House of Lords seated in Westminster-Hall, in the Presence of the Commons, and a numerous Audience, her Majesty inognito being also present on the 17th and 28th of February, and the Audience continu'd to March the 10th, The Managers for the House of Commons on one Part, and the Doctor and his Council on the other, having finished their Pleadings, the House of Lords debated upon it in their own House till March the 10th, on which Day the Question being put, Guilty, or not Guilty, there were found 69 who voted guilty, against 52 who voted not guilty. On the 23d of March, the Commons demanded Judgment at the Lords Bar; and the Prisoner being brought thither, the Sentence was read; the Purport whereof was, that his two Sermons, that at St. Paul's and that at Derby Assizes, should be burnt by the Hand of the Common Hangman, and that the Doctor should not preach for Three Years then next following.

The Commons on the 6th of February resolved, That a new Duty of Excise, a Duty upon Raisins, Currants, Pepper, and other Spices, be laid for 23 Years, to raise a Fund for Annuities for that Term at 9 per Cent. Interest; whereby 900,000 l. was given to the Service of the Year. And that a Duty be laid upon Candles, and upon Money given with Apprentices for Five Years.

All the Publick Business being finished, the Queen came to the House on the 5th of April, and after passing the Bills, made a most Gracious Speech, and then the Parliament was prorogued.

I omitted to say, that upon Intimation of new Overtures of Peace the House of Commons address'd her Majesty, that she would be pleas'd to send over the Duke of Marlborough forthwith to the Hague, who departed accordingly on the 19th of February.

The Success of the last Campaign and the vigorous Resolutions taken by the Allies to prosecute the War, induced the French King to make further Overtures for Peace. On the 2d of January the Marquis de Torcy wrote a Letter to Mr. Pelkum to intimate, that the French King was willing to agree to own K. Charles, at the Conclusion of the Treaty, to give up Straßburg, Alsace, Landau, &c. To own Queen Anne and the Protestant Succession, restore Newfoundland, and demolish Dunkirk.

A. D.
1709.

kirk. To grant the Dutch Barrier, and the Tariff. And to grant to the D. of Savoy what was demanded. But insisted upon the Restoration of the Electors of Cologne and Bavaria. This being communicated to the Allies, it was rejected, as being not explicit enough. The French then declar'd, that all the Preliminaries should be the Foundation of a future Treaty, and the King appointed the Marshal d'Uxelles and the Abbot Po'ignac to be his Plenipotentiaries to treat of an Equivalent for the 37th Article, and touching the Evacuation of Spain; who would be ready to meet those of the Allies at Antwerp. The Courier that brought this arrived the 2d of February N. S. To which was answered, That the Declaration of the Court of France being in uncertain and ambiguous Terms, it was required that the French King should declare in plain and express Words, that he consented to all the Preliminaries except the 37th Article, which done, the Allies would send Passports to his Ministers to treat of an Equivalent for that Article. A satisfactory Answer being sent to this, the Passes were accordingly dispatch'd, and those Ministers arriv'd at Antwerp, March the 9th N. S. Whence they went to Maerdyke, and were met by Messieurs Buys and Vanderduffen. After the Conferences were over, the French Ministers were conducted to Gertruydenberg, which was the Place appointed for their Residence upon their refusing to reside at Antwerp; and the Dutch Ministers went back to the Hague, to report the Conference.

The Duke of Marlborough was by this time arrived, and with the Lord Townshend her Majesty's Envoy at the Hague, and Count Zinzendorf the Emperor's Minister, was present; when they reported, That the French Ministers endeavoured to persuade them, that it was the Interest of the Allies to make a separate Peace with France, exclusive of Spain. And that the French King was willing to enter into the most solemn Engagements, and give cautionary Towns for performance, that he would not give any Assistance to his Grandson. This was the Sum of the many Words used by the French at that time. On the 18th of March, the French desiring another Conference, the same Gentlemen went again. They then proposed some Schemes of Partition of the Spanish Monarchy. But the Dutch declar'd they expected to hear them propose an Equivalent for the 37th Article, which was the Business of this Treaty, and had no Power to talk of a Partition. The Conferences were frequently repeated, but with very little advance; the Partition was still the Subject of the French Proposals, wherein some Alterations were made. They at first demanded Naples and Sicily for King Philip, afterwards Arragon, afterwards Sicily, Sardinia, and the Places in Tuscany belonging to Spain. And lastly, Naples and the Tuscan Towns, or else the Kingdom of Arragon. But to no purpose, for the Allies insisted upon the Proposals of an Equivalent. In the beginning of May they talk'd of going, in which they were indulged, but changed their Mind and desired another Conference wherein (May the 24th) they talk'd of the Partition, but being asked if a Partition were to be treated on, what Security would be given for the Evacuation of Spain and the Indies by the Duke of Anjou King Charles? But they gave a satisfactory Answer. The Conference was renew'd, and the same Gentlemen went again June. They then receded from the Place on the Coast of Tuscany, and would be contented with Sicily and Sar-

A. D.

1710.

nia, for King Philip. ' And that ' the King would persuade his ' Grandson to accept the Partition ;
 ' but if he would, not acquiesce, al-
 ' tho' he could not consent to declare ' War with his Grandson, he would ' furnish a Sum of Money towards
 ' the Charge of the War, to be con' tinued till he surrenders Spain and
 ' the West-Indies to the House of ' Austria. ' To which the Confede' rates answer'd by Mr. Petkum, who
 ' paid a Visit to the French Ministers June 21. 1. That the Offer of a Sum of Money was not acceptable, because that would produce a separate, not a general Peace. 2. That the Allies insisted upon having Spain and the Indies deliver'd up according to the Preliminaries. 3. And that the Allies would continue the Conferences upon no other Article. July 11.
 they demanded another Conference, but proposed nothing new. And finally, on the 20th of July, in a long Letter to the Pensionary, expostulated upon the Offers and Refusals, and in a haughty Manner declared
 'twas to no Purpose to continue longer at Gertruydenberg; upon which the States resolved, July the 23d, That no more Conferences should be held. And on the 25th, the French Ministers returned home.

The Operations of War in the mean time went on successfully.
 The Army took the Field in the Middle of April, and on the 20th of that Month broke thro' the Enemy's Lines which cover'd Doway, the Enemy retiring in a great Fright beyond the Scarpe, which River our Army also passed, and immediately invested Doway. On the 4th of May the Trenches were opened, and the Siege carried on with Vigour, the French Army lying all the while in View of us; and tho' they made a Shew of giving ours Battle, they durst not attempt it. On the 16th of June the Town capitulated, and together with the Fort upon the Scarpe was surrendered the 27th and 28th. On the 15th of July the Army invested Bethune, and open'd Trenches the 24th; the Siege of which Place took them up till the 29th of August; on which Day the Town capitulated, and our Forces took Possession of it Septem- ber the 1st. The Siege of Aire, next the Capital, the principal Town of Artois, was next undertaken; and because St. Venant lay betwixt Be- thune and that Town, it was thought proper to take that also. Accordingly the Siege was carried on at the same Time, and in 14 Days it surrendered. The Siege of Aire lasted longer, partly by Reason of the good Defence, and partly by Reason of the frequent Rains which much interrupted the Progress of the Besiegers; so that it was October the 29th before it was surrendered.

 Which finished another very happy Campaign in Flanders.

In Spain the Confederates were very successful this Campaign. King Charles arrived in the Camp near Belaguer, (a Town seated on the River Sagra towards the Frontiers of Arragon, which was taken the last Campaign) June 7. But the Enemy's Army, commanded by King Philip, being much superior in Force to that of the Confederates, he was obliged to cast up Intrenchments to hinder their attacking him, as they attempted to do on the 12th and the 13th. But the Strength of his Camp diverting that Intention, they contented themselves with extending their Quarters, and levying Contributions in Catalonia. No notable Action happen'd till the latter End of July, when the expected Reinforcements being arrived in the Confederate Camp, it was resolved to meet the Enemy who were marching towards them. This produced the Battle of Almenara,
 which

A. D.
1710.

which was fought on the 27th of July. The Action began not till Seven in the Evening, for the Ground was incommodious, and too much freightned the Front of the Army; which made the Confederates apprehend, that as the Enemy had forbore all Day, if they were not now set upon, they would in the Night-time draw off. Wherefore the Horse advanced, and pushed the Enemy with such Warmth, that their whole Cavalry was soon routed. The Foot advanced with Bravery, and pursued them for two Hours; but the Darknes hindered their continuing it. The Enemies Foot had little or no Share in the Action, but mingling with the Horse, retreated in great Confusion. On the Confederate Side about 400 Men were lost, whereof of the English 73 wounded, and 113 killed of private Soldiers, besides the Earl of Rochford, Count Nassau, and five other Officers killed, and Lieutenant-Generals Stanhope and Carpenter, and 13 other Officers wounded. On the Enemies Sides there were not less than 1,500 killed and wounded; and some considerable Officers taken Prisoners. Mr. Stanhope signalized himself so much by Bravery in this Action, that King Charles gave him Thanks in a very particular Manner, as he did also to Mr. Carpenter, who seconded Stanhope in all the Action.

This Victory gave King Charles Entrance into Aragon, where he advanced in large Paces after the Enemy. A Skirmish happened near Penalva on the 15th of August, wherein many Men were killed and taken, and both Sides claimed the Victory. But 'tis certain the Spaniards retired from Penalva with such Haste, that King Charles, who marched thither the same Day, eat the Dinner which was provided for his Competitor. The Enemy continued their Retreat till they came within a Quarter of a League of Saragossa, where they were attacked and defeated by King Charles on the 20th of August.

The Enemies Army consisted of 50 Battalions, and 60 Squadrons, which was a superior Force to that of the Confederates. But the Bravery of these made Amends for the Defect in Number. And in two Hours time they obtained a compleat Victory; not above 400 of the Enemy escaped, and all their Cannon were taken by the Confederates. King Charles immediately entred Saragossa, the Citadel whereof capitulated the same Night. The Loss on the Enemies Side was in the lowest Computation 3,000 Men killed or wounded, and between 5 and 6,000 taken Prisoners, 72 Colours, 22 Pieces of Cannon, and Part of the Baggage. On the Confederate Side about 2,000 Men were killed or wounded.

The Marquis de Bay, who commanded the Enemies Army, retreated with the Remains of his Troops towards Navarre, and King Philip posted to Madrid. But not esteeming himself safe there, he disposed all Things for Departure. With his Queen and Son he removed to Valladolid, and was followed by the whole Court, the Castilians at this Time expressing their Affection to him with great Zeal. Here Dispositions were made for recovering thier Loss, and the several Generals were appointed their Commands in different Parts for Diversion. The chief Command of the Army was reserved for the Duke de Vendosme, who was immediately dispatched with some Reinforcements from France, and the Queen and the Prince were sent forward to Vittoria in Alava, on the Road to France.

King Charles, in the mean Time held a Council of War on the 4th of September, wherein he asked Ad vice of the Generals whether it were more adviseable to march into Castile, or Navarre? The Generals gave their Votes for the former, and the Advice was followed: Altho' King Charles with more Penetration hinted at the Importance of securing Navarre, thereby to shut out the French, and the Difficulty that might happen in subsisting the Army in Castile, where Provisions are scarce. The Army advanced, and General Stanhope took Possession of Madrid, September 21. where the King also made his Entry the 28th of the same Month; and soon after sent a strong Detachment to Toledo.

The Duke of Vendosme arrived in the Enemies Army about the latter End of September. And King Philip put himself at the Head of it October the 3d. They apprehended that the Confederates expected to be joined by the Portuguese, and therefore thought it adviseable to march that Way; accordingly on the 6th of October they encamped near Salamanca, and sent Detachments forward to secure the Brigade of Almaraz.

King Charles sent to the Court of Portugal to desire their Army might march towards the Frontiers of Castile, to maintain a Correspondence; and General Stanhope, by the Queen's Minister at Lisbon, pressed the same with great Earnestness; and that General marched to Almaraz with 4,000 Horse to meet the Portuguese, but all to no Purpose. The Portuguese Army had been employed in small Sieges in the latter Campaign, and the Weather having proved very wet, the Marches were made difficult; and the Cavalry were all in very bad State. This served for a Reason to that Court to refuse the Overture; and moreover, when General Stanhope and the Dutch General urged that the English and the Dutch Forces might at least be allowed to come to them, it was denied. And finally, all Hopes of Reinforcement that Way being extinguished, and King Philip's Forces approaching, General Stanhope left his Post at Almaraz, and joined the Confederate Army.

By this Time the Enemy had in a great Measure recovered themselves, the Marquis de Bay had marched a good Body of Horse from Estremadura, and Troops were marching from all Parts of France to Philip's Assistance: Which added to the Disappointment of the Portuguese, so changed the Face of Affairs on the Confederate Side, that this Campaign, which had been so fortunate, produced a Winter which sunk King Charles's Power in Spain lower than he had known it since he first came there. The Uncertainty of being able to keep the Correspondence with Valencia open, rendered it necessary for the King to retire in time, which he accordingly did on the 11th of November, and arrived December the 15th at Barcelona.

The Army at the same time found it impracticable to subsist in Castile, and therefore endeavoured to retreat, and, the better to effect it, took different Routes in Parties. General Stanhope, with the English Forces passing by Brihuega, a small Town in the Way to Aragon, halted there the 8th of December, and was the next Day overtaken by the Enemy, who by long marches followed close upon the Heels of the Army, and by their Power and Interest in the Country, hindered any Advice to be given of their Approach. In this Place he was surrounded by the Enemy, and altho' he made a very brave Defence, the Place was so weak, and their Ammunition so short, that he could not hold out any longer than the next Day. General Staremberg was advanced

A. D. 1710. vanced to Cifuentes, which lies about 30 English Miles from Bribuega, and, upon Advice of their Danger, marched back to their Relief. He arrived the 9th at Night within a League of the Place, which King Philip having Advice of, left a Part of the Army to prosecute the Siege, and accompanied with the Duke of Vendosme marched to meet the Count Staremburg, and gave him Battle the next Day. The Siege was carried on with the more Vigour on account of the approaching Relief, and the Besieged having spent all their Powder and Shot, also the Entrenchments which they had made within the Town, after the Enemy had made Breaches in the Walls, being ruined by the Cannon brought against them, the Forces consisting of 8 Battalions and 8 Squadrons, were forced to surrender Prisoners of War, a few Hours before the Battle.

The Battle near Villaviciosa, between King Philip with 32 Battalions, and 80 Squadrons; and Count Staremburg with 27 Battalions, and 29 Squadrons, was fought on the 10th of December, from Three in the Afternoon till Night, with great Obstinacy and much Bloodshed; 6,000 of the Enemy were killed, their Cannon was taken and played against them, and the Imperialists kept the Field; but understanding that the English in Bribuega were made Prisoners of War, and the Army wanting Provision, they marched towards Arragon the 11th, leaving the Enemy's Cannon for want of Horses to carry it off. The Enemy disturbed them not in their Retreat, and therefore were undoubtedly very much weakened in the Battle. Count Staremburg withdrew all the Garrisons out of Arragon, and arrived in the Beginning of February at Barcelona with 11,000 Men. Gironne, which was besieged the Middle of December, was surrendered to the French

January the 31st. And Balaguer was abandoned February the 23d. This unhappy End had that Campaign which began so gloriously.

The Confederate Fleet in the Mediterranean, commanded by Sir John Norris and Admiral Somerset, were active in the Service of the Common Cause. They convoyed the Troops and Recruits that were sent from Italy to Spain; and about the Middle of June, understanding that the Duke of Tursis was failed to invade Sardinia, taking some Land Forces on Board, the Admirals sailed thither, and arrived June the 16th; and understanding that the Count de Castillo lay on Shore with the Forces he had newly landed, they landed their Men, and marched directly to the Enemy, and so encompassed them, that they were forced to surrender themselves Prisoners. So that 250 Soldiers and 60 Officers were taken. From thence they sailed in quest of the Duke of Tursis, with his Gallies. But altho' they could not overtake him, they took 8 large Barks laden with 500 Soldiers, with the greatest Part of his Artillery, Ammunition, and Provision.

In July they went upon an Expedition, which had been before concerted, upon the Coast of Languedoc.

One Monsieur de Seissan, who had been a Major-General in the French King's Service, but happening to be taken Prisoner at Tournay in the Year 1709, was neglected by that Court, and left to shift: He made Overtures of serving the Confederates, and in the Courte of Negotiation, undertook to assist in landing a Force to invade Languedoc, where the Neighbourhood of the Camisars (that is, the Cevennois) gave him hope of Success. Monsieur de Seissan was of that Country, and the Estate of his Family lay near Port Cette; so that Place

Place was pitch'd upon for the Invasion. Accordingly Forces being embark'd, they arrived on the 24th of July, and landed 700 Men without Opposition, made themselves Masters of the Town and Mole the next Day, and marched to Agde, which they took likewise. But the Duke de Roquelaure, who commanded in those Parts, march'd with 400 Dragoons and 2,000 Militia against them. The Duke de Noailles also advanced out of the Rouffillon with 1,000 Horse, having each a Foot Soldier behind him. All which arriv'd the 19th within four Miles of Agde, which oblig'd the Forces to draw off, and go on Board the Fleet; which they effected with only the Loss of 50 Men, who retir'd not in Time from an advanced Fort.

Affairs in England this Summer were pretty active, occasioned by the Struggle of the two Parties, which was much higher at this Time than they had been for some Years before, and threatned great Alterations.

To give our Reader a right Idea of it, 'tis necessary to look back upon the Events for a Year or two past.

While Mr. Harley was Secretary of State, he had obtained a large Share of the Queen's Favour; at the same Time Mrs. Hill, a private Gentlewoman, who was one of the Queen's Attendants, had also by her diligent and obsequious Service, render'd herself agreeable to her Majesty. What Schemes the Secretary formed belongs not to us to say, but the Suspicion of the private Work he was thought to be upon, occasioned that Smartness in the Examination of Gregg we have mentioned; and in Consequence of it his removal from that Office. Some time after, that is, in January last, the Earl of Essex dying, Mrs. Hill had begg'd of the Queen the Regiment that Lord commanded for her Brother Col. Hill, a Gentleman of Worth, who had commanded with great Bravery in the Battle of Almanza. The Duke of Marlborough at the same Time had promised the same Regiment to Lieutenant-General Meredith; who being an ancient Officer, had, according to the Usage of the Army, a Sort of Right to the Option of it. But in this Case her Majesty being disposed to grant a Personal Favour, was displeased to be deny'd it. The General withdrew from Court, and with his Lady went to the Lodge in Windfor Park; whither the Queen sent to him in a few Days, and gave up the Point. This Matter pass'd over for the present, but the Behaviour of some People at that Time, was judg'd to be the principal Cause of the great Change which happened this Summer.

The Common People took up an Opinion, that the Trial of Dr. Sacheverell was a visible Proof that the Church was in Danger, and therefore as in London they assembled in Crowds on the 1st of March at Night, and pulled down some Dissenting Meeting-Houses; so all the Kingdom over they expressed their Rage against Dissenters. And the better Sort, to shew their Dislike of that Trial, made Addresses, declaring their Loyalty and Affection to the Queen, and disclaiming all Principles inconsistent with Passive Obedience; and many of them seem'd to desire a Dissolution of the Parliament. These Addresses came numerously to the Queen all this Summer, and created a general Discourse that the Parliament would be dissolv'd, and the Ministry changed, which succeeded accordingly.

On the 14th of June the Earl of Sunderland was removed from his Office of Secretary of State, and the next Day the Lord Dartmouth was appointed to succeed him. On the 8th of August the Staff of Treasurer was taken from the Lord Godolphin, and that Office put into Commission. And finally, Sep. 21. the Parliament was dissolved. The same Day the Earl of Rochester was made President of the Council in the place of the Lord Sommers. The Duke of Buckingham Lord Steward of the Household in place of the Duke of Devonshire. And Henry St. John, Esq; Secretary of State in the room of Mr. Boyle. The Lord Cowper about the same time resigned the Great Seal, which was for the present given to Commissioners. And on the 26th of September a Proclamation was published for calling a new Parliament to assemble November the 25th.

A. D.
1710

On the 19th of October the Duke of Ormond was made Lord Lieutenant of Ireland; and Sir Simon Harcourt Lord Keeper of the Great Seal.

Her Majesty having nominated Dr. Robinson, Dean of Windsor, to succeed Dr. Hall deceased, in the Bishoprick of Bristol; and Dr. Biss to succeed Dr. Bull deceased, in the Bishoprick of St. Davids, those two Lords were consecrated November the 19th.

The Elections were carried on with great Warmth every where, but the High Church Party generally prevailed; and very many Gentlemen of great Interest in the Country, lost their Elections by being esteemed Whigs.

Nov. 25. The Parliament met, and the Commons having chosen William Bromly, Esq; Speaker, he was presented the 27th. Her Majesty, in her Speech, recommended to them the carrying on the War in all its Parts, especially in Spain, and to that purpose asked the necessary Supplies; mentioned the Debts of the Navy, and other Offices, and urged the Justice of satisfying Parliamentary Engagements. Declared her own Affection to the Church of England and British Constitution, and her Resolution to maintain the Toleration, and the Protestant Succession.

The Total of the Supplies granted this Session amounted to 6,600,295 l. To which was afterwards added, for several extraordinary Charges of the War, 292,369 l. And for the Relief of the Inhabitants of Nevis, where the French had made great Destruction the last Year, 103000 l.

About the latter end of January, her Majesty was pleased to constitute the Duke of Argyll Commander in Chief of her Majesty's Forces in Spain, and Sir John Leak Commander in Chief of her Majesty's Fleet.

The Dutchess of Marlborough having surrendered her Places, her Majesty was pleased to appoint the Dutchess of Somerset Groom of the Stole, and Mrs. Massam (that is, Mrs. Hill, who was married to Mr. Massam, Son to Sir Francis Massam) Privy-Purse.

On the 8th of March happened an Accident that very much alarmed the Publick. A French Man, who was called the Marquiss de Guiscard, had some time ago deserted the Service of France, and had been employed in the intended Expedition upon France in 1706, and afterwards in Spain, whence by that King's Recommendation he came to England, and had been allowed a Pension. It was discovered that this Person kept a Correspondence with the Enemy, and therefore he was seized, and brought before a Committee of Council. Mr. Harley, who was now one of the Lords of the Treasury and a Privy-Counsellor, was present, and was the Person on whom this Miscreant wreaked his wicked wicked purpose; for when his Letters were produced, which manifested his Guilt, he pulled out a Penknife from his Pocket, and stabbed him. All the Company immediately drew their Swords upon the Criminal, and he was wounded in several places, of which he afterwards dyed in Newgate. Mr. Harley's Wound was happily not mortal, for the Penknife struck against a Rib and broke; but it however kept him laid up for Five Weeks. When he came abroad he was complimented by the Speaker in the House, and not long after, that is, May 24th, her Majesty was pleased to create him a Peer, by the Title of Barom Harley of Wigmore, Earl of Oxford, and Earl Mortimer. To which her Majesty added the Dignity of Lord High-Treasurer, to which Office he was nominated May the 29th.

On the 28th of April the Marquis of Kent was created a Duke.

On the 12th of June the Queen came to the House, passed the Bills, and made a most gracious Speech; and then the Parliament was prorogued to the 10th of July.

The Advantages obtained in the preceeding Campaign in the Netherlands, by the taking of Doway, Bethune, Aire, and St. Venant, and the Dispositions made for taking the Field early in the Spring in 1711, made People believe, that Arras, or another considerable Frontier of France, would be invested by the middle of April, and no doubt but this was the Design of the Duke of Marlborough; but the Unseasonableness of the Weather, the unexpected Delays of the March of some Troops, and some other Difficulties, did not permit his Grace to form his Army till the 30th of April at Orchies, between Lisle and Doway. The Duke the next Day passed the Scarpe, and incamped between Doway and Bouchain, but found the Enemy, who by the Delays aforementioned had a sufficient time to assemble their Troops, incamped with a numerous Army behind the Sanfet, in a most advantageous Post, which was judged inaccessible. His Grace expected there the rest of the Troops which were to form his Army, and the Arrival of Prince Eugene of Savoy; who had been detained at Vienna, and in the Empire, by reason of the Death of the Emperor Joseph, who departed this Life the 17th of April, N. S. This dismal and unexpected Accident obliged the Prince of Savoy to stay some Days about Franckfort, to concert with the Elector of Mentz, the necessary Measures for the Security of the Empire, and view the Lines and other Posts. His Highness having given such Directions as he thought convenient, proceeded to the Court of the Elector of Palatine, to regulate several Matters with that Prince (who as one of the Vicars of the Empire, was to have the chief Administration thereof during the Interregnum) and arrived at the Hague the 5th of May, where he was obliged to continue for some time, so that he did not join the Duke of Marlborough till the 21st of the same Month. Those Princes resolved to continue in the Camp as long as possible, in hopes that the Scarcity of Forage would oblige the Enemy to decamp; for after the several Attempts that were made at the Post of Arleux, which was taken and retaken, there was no Likelihood of forcing their Lines.

Mean time the French hoping that the Elector of Bavaria had many Friends in the Empire, who would declare for him, and believing that the Germans being deprived of their Chief would hearken to a Neutrality,

A. D.
1711.

lity, if that Elector appeared in Germany at the Head of a powerful Army, resolved to send him thither, and in order thereunto reinforced their Army on the Rhine, from their Garrisons on the Maeze and Mozelle, and likewise from their Army in the Netherlands; for Monsieur de Villars thought his Lines so secure and impenetrable, that he believed he might spare a great Body of Troops, and boasted that his Lines were the Ne plus ultra of the Duke of Marlborough. These Lines begun at Bouchain on the Scheld, and were continued along the Sanset and the Scarpe to Arias, and from thence along the Upper Scarpe and the Rivers Ugy to the Canche, the Opening between those Rivers being intrenched and fortified, with all possible Care, by a large Ditch, defended with Redoubts and other Works. These Preparations of the Enemy alarming the Empire, Prince Eugene received positive Orders to march with the Imperial and Palatine Troops to the Upper Rhine, for securing Germany; and accordingly the two Armies decamped from the Camp afore-mentioned, the 14th of June, and repassed the Scarpe, Prince Eugene taking his Way towards Tournay, and the Duke of Marlborough marching towards the Plain of Lens, in Sight of the French, who did not offer to insult his Rear. His Grace continued there till the 20th of July, when he advanced towards Aire, to make the Enemy believe, that he designed to besiege St. Omers, or attack their Lines on that Side. This obliged the Mareschal de Villars to reinforce the Garrison in that Place, and to draw all his Troops to defend his Lines between the Scarpe and the Canche, which both Armies believed his Grace designed to attack, because of the Preparations he had made. The Army encamped at Villars Brulin in the Beginning of August, and on the 4th, by Break of Day, the Duke advanced with a great Detachment to take a nearer View of the said Lines; and being returned to his Camp, ordered Fascines to be provided, and made such other Dispositions, as confirmed every Body that his Design was against the Lines. The Army had Orders to march about Nine of the Clock at Night, but as soon as they were in Motion, his Grace put himself at the Head of the Horse of the Left Wing, and marched back towards the Sanset with so much Diligence, being followed by the rest of the Army, that having passed the Scarpe at Vitry, at Five of the Clock the next Morning, he marched directly to support the Detachment from the Garrison of Doway, which had already passed the Sanset, and was joined there by the rest of his Army, which without the Loss of one Man, got by that well manag'd Stratagem into the formidable Lines of the Enemy. The Mareschal de Villars, being sensible of his Mistake, used all imaginable Diligence to retrieve it, and advanced with his Army, making a Shew as if he designed to attack the Allies, while he was sending Troops over the Scheld at Cambray to post themselves between that Place and Bouchain, to prevent the Siege of the last Place; but the Duke of Marlborough suspecting his Design, and the Siege of Bouchain being resolved upon in a Council of War, passed the Scheld, and caused that Place to be invested, and the Lines of Circumvallation to be made, though in some Places they were exposed to the Cannon of the Town, and the Batteries of the French Army, and to be continued from the Sanset to the Upper Scheld through a Morass and Inundation, which was thought impracticable.

The

A. D.
1711.

The Trenches were opened the 18th of August, and the Garrison surrendered Prisoners of War the 12th of September, in the Sight of Monsieur de Villars. I wish an able Pen may preserve to Posterity, a true Relation of the March of the Confederate Army, their passing the Lines, and the Siege of Bouchain, with all the Difficulties that attended the same; for it is justly accounted one of the most glorious Atchievements of this War, and undeniably sheweth, that the General who performed the same, knows as well how to reduce the strongest Fortresses, as to rout the most numerous Armies in the Field.

The taking of Bouchain ended the Campaign in the Netherlands, and it being not thought fit to expose the Infantry to the Fatigues of a new Siege in that late Season of the Year, the Duke of Marlborough proposed to quarter all the Troops upon the Frontiers, that they might be able to hinder the Enemy from making new Lines in the Winter, and form their Army early in the Spring, without being fatigued with long Marches; but how this Proposal of his Grace was not fully complied with, is not our Business at this Time to enquire, neither shall we enlarge on the great Advantages of this Conquest for the further Prosecution of the War against France, referring the Readers to the Letter the Field Deputies of the States wrote to their High Mightinesses immediately after the reducing of Bouchain.

The Arrival of Prince Eugene, with the Reinforcements afore-mentioned, disappointed the Designs of the French against Germany, and so they gave over the Thoughts of invading that Country, and had recourse to their usual Artifices to gain some Members of the Empire; but the Electors, encouraged by the Recommendations of the Queen of Great-Britain and the States, rejected these Offers, declaring their Intention to elect King Charles for Emperor, and without any Regard to the Request and Protestations of the late Electors of Cologne and Bavaria, tho' supported by the French and the Pope, unanimously elected on the 12th of October his Catholic Majesty Emperor of the Romans, by the Name of Charles VI. That Prince having given the necessary Directions for the Regency of Catalonia, which he left to his Queen, embarked on board the Confederate Fleet the 27th of September, arrived at Vado the 7th of October, landed the 12th at Genoa, set out from thence the same Day, had the 13th an Interview at La Cava with the Duke of Savoy, and arrived at Milan the same Day. His Majesty received there the News of his Election, was complimented by Cardinal Imperiali, Legate a Latere, was acknowledged by the Republics of Venice, Genoa, and Lucca for King of Spain, afterwards set out for the Empire, made his Publick Entry into Frankfort the 19th of December, and was crowned Emperor the 22d in that City in great Solemnity.

As soon as the Election of that Prince was over, Prince Eugene sent the Imperial Forces, and those of the Empire into Winter-Quarters, without being able to make any Enterprize against the Common Enemy; for notwithstanding the Troubles of Hungary, which had proved a fatal Diversion to the Imperial Forces, were pacified in April, yet they could not make any Detachments from thence to reinforce the Imperial Army for want of Money, and by reason of the War that broke out the last Winter between the Czar and the Turks, which obliged the Court of Vienna to

D. A.
1711.

to keep a good Number of Troops in Hungary.

The fatal Differences between the Courts of Vienna and Turin having, in a great Measure obstructed the Operations of War on the side of Piedmont for the two preceding Campaigns; the Queen of Great-Britain sent the Earl of Peterborough to make new Instances for an Accommodation; and her Majesty's Interposition proved so effectual, that some few Days before the late Emperor was taken ill, he granted to the Duke of Savoy the Possession of the Fiefs in the Montferrat, with all the Rights and Privileges that were enjoyed by the former Dukes of that Country, and would have doubtless given a full Satisfaction to that Prince on his other Pretensions, had not his Death prevented the same. His Royal Highness, being satisfied therewith, took the Field in Person with his own Troops and the Auxiliaries of the Emperor and others, forced his way into the Dutchy of Savoy, penetrated as far as the Rhine, but was stopped by the French, who were posted near Fort Bareaux in an inaccessible Camp; so that after having continued in that Country as long as the Season of the Year would permit, and alarmed the French Frontiers, he was obliged to repass the Alps, being not strong enough to maintain himself in Savoy in the Winter for want of Magazines and other Necessaries. This Expedition of the Duke of Savoy proved however of good Service; for the French were obliged to weaken their Forces on the Rhine by a great Detachment, whereby their Design against the Empire was rendered abortive; and on the other Hand they could not send the Reinforcements they had promised to the Duke of Vendosme to act against Catalonia.

This leads us to observe in a few Words what has been transacted in that Country.

The Armies on both sides suffered so much in the Year 1710, by their long Marches, and the Battles of Almenara, Saragossa, and Villaviciosa, that it is not surprizing the Campaign begun this Year but very late; and notwithstanding the Duke of Vendosme boasted to dislodge the Allies from Tarragona and Barcelona, and consequently from the whole Country of Catalonia before Christmas, he made no other Enterprize than the Sieges of the Castles of Venasque, Arens, and Cardona, and was not able to dislodge the Allies from Pratz del Rey, where they posted themselves at the beginning of the Campaign. The Castle of Cardona held out so well, that General Staremburg was able to relieve it, and dislodge the Enemy. An Action which gave great Reputation to the Arms of King Charles and as much Disgrace to those of the Enemy. That General accompanied by General Monchese, Commander of the Dutch Forces, and Lieutenant-General Hamilton, a Volunteer, with about 4,000 Horse and Foot, set out on the 20th of December, and on the next Day arrived within a League of the Castle, where a brave Action happened to the Advantage of the Imperialists. The 22d they finished the Work, by putting Relief into the Castle and raising the Siege of it, which they effected with great Bravery; and made the Enemy retreat with Precipitation, and the Loss of about 2,000 Men, 14 battering Cannon, 4 Mortars, besides the Ammunition and Provisions which they left at their Flight. The Loss on the Side of the Imperialists amounted to but 200 Soldiers killed or wounded, and 3 Officers killed.

The Operations of War on the side of Portugal were very inconsiderable

A. D.
1711.

derable; for notwithstanding the Portuguese retook in the Beginning of the Campaign Miranda de Duero, and that through the indefatigable Care of the Earl of Portmore, General of the English Forces in that Country, they brought a fine Army into the Field, and advanced into the Spanish Territories, in hopes to destroy the Magazines of the Enemy at Merida, which would have facilitated the Siege of Badajax; yet the Portuguese abandoned that Design, and returned into their own Country to cover it against the Marquis de Bay, who had made an Incursion thereinto.

The Death of the Dauphin of France, who died of the same Distemper as the Emperor, that is, the Small Pox, and three Days before him, occasion'd no Alterations in the Affairs of France; but whether the French thought that the Death of the late Emperor Joseph might alter the Councils of Europe, in respect to the Spanish Succession, and the Balance of Power, or for other Reasons yet unknown, the News of the Death of that Prince was hardly spread through Europe, when the French Emissaries gave out every where, that there was a secret Negotiation of Peace on Foot, and that to facilitate the Success thereof, and procure the Restoration of the Elector of Bavaria to his State, King Philip had given him the Sovereignty of Namur and Luxemburgh, the only two Spanish Provinces of the Netherlands remaining in his Possession, of which he actually took Possession some time after. These Negotiations were kept very private till the beginning of October, when the Overtures of France towards a Treaty, called Preliminaries, made at London by the Sieur Mesnager in the Name of the French King, were communicated to the Foreign Ministers residing at the British Court, and by the British Ambassador at the Hague to the States and Ministers, and it was afterwards notified that Utrecht was appointed to be the Place of Treaty, and that the Congress would begin the 12th of January 1712, N. S. and all the Princes of the Grand Alliance were invited to send their Ministers thither.

Mr. Manning her Majesty's Minister in the Grisons (adjoining to Switzerland) was this Summer July 7. N. S. barbarously assassinated within 5 Leagues of Coire, as he was returning from the Bath of Pseffers. Two Villains set upon him at the Top of a high Mountain which he was climbing up alone, while his Servants with the Baggage were at a Distance from him. They flew upon him at once with a hideous Noise and drawn Sabres, and gave him Five Wounds on his Head, Ten in his Body, and others in his Arms and Hands. He made a shift to get upon his Legs, and threw himself down a Precipice, where they could not follow him otherwise than by Stones, which they threw after him, but happily did not hit him. His Servants coming up, convey'd him to a House where he was dressed by a Surgeon, and although two of the Wounds in his Head were very dangerous, he had the good Fortune after a long Illness to recover.

To let our Reader into a Knowledge of the presumptive Reason of this Assassination, we must be forced to look back to an Affair of last Year, which made much Noise in the World.

Mr. Masner a Counsellor in the City of Coire, and the Emperor's Commissary for supplying the Troops of the Allies in their Passage thro' this Country, was zealously affected to the Interest of the Allies, and very instrumental in making the late late Treaty between them and the Grison League; this Gentleman's Son, a young Man of 16 Years of Age, who was Student at Geneva, was decoy'd out by one Merveilleux a French Man upon pretence of taking the Air, and suddenly seized and put into the Hands of the French; who carried him to Fort Ecluse. The Father in Reprizal, seized another Merveilleux, Brother to the former, and Secretary to the French Ambassador M. de St. Luc, and kept him close Prisoner in his House to be exchange'd against his Son. An Agreement was soon after made where-by Merveilleux was released, but notwithstanding the Ambassador's solemn Promise, young Masner was still kept Prisoner. Mr. Masner, full of just Resentment, waited an Opportunity to make another Reprisal, which he effected in the Person of the Grand Prior Brother to the Duke of Vendosme, whom he seized as he passed from Venice to Paris thro' the Grisons, and carried him Prisoner into the Emperor's Dominions.

A. D.
1711.

The French Ambassador making heavy Complaints of this Action, Mr. Manning gave in a Memorial to the Grison Leagues in Favour of Mr. Masner, wherein he exaggerated the Violence of the French against young Masner, and their Perfidy in not restoring him according to Promise. This Memorial was delivered in November 1710, and was followed by divers others on the same Subject, which brought on him the violent Indignation of the French, who may justly be supposed to be the Authors of the Assassination; the rather since Merveilleux (as Mr. Manning declares in his Letter to the Diet of Helvetick Body) did not stick to own that it was done by his Order; and the two Assassins had been seen by Mr. Manning in that Agent's Return at Pfeffers.

The British Fleet in the Streights was commanded this Year by Sir John Norris, who assisted King Charles in conveying the Forces and Ammunition from Vadoto to Barcelona maintain'd the Dominion of the Mediterranean, and protected Trade there. Our home Guard performed the same in the narrow Seas, and the French durst not peep abroad. All they did this Summer was to send a Squadron of Fourteen or Fifteen Men of War under the Command of the Sieur du Guai to America, where they had already a Fleet under the Command of Mr. du Casse, who lay there to convoy the Galleons. The Expedition of du Guai was kept very secret; but some Advices which came to Europe in the latter End of the Year, intimated that he was at Brazil, and had taken St. Sebastian in Rio Janiero, with divers rich Prizes, and an inestimable Treasure.

Preparations were made here this Spring for a Naval Expedition to be commanded by Sir Howden Walker, the Design whereof was kept secret. On the 4th of May they sailed from Plymouth with Seven Regiments and a Battalion of Marines on board, commanded by Brigadier Hill. They opened their Orders at Sea, and found they were directed to sail for New-England in order to invade Canada, and take Quebec. And on the 25th of June they arrived at Boston.

This Expedition was undertaken upon a Prospect of an easy Conquest, which would bring vast Advantage to the Nation. For the Traffick from Quebec, and the Fishery from Newfoundland, proposed to be secured to us hereby, were Advantages (especially the latter) of inestimable Value. Colonel Ni-

Nicholson, who was Governor of New-York, made an Expedition that way last Year, and took a French Fort called Fort Royal, which he named Annapolis. And when he came to England in April 1710, he brought with him Four Persons, who were called Kings of the Four Nations of Indians, which lie on the Banks of the River St. Laurence or Canada. They were well received at Court, and upon their engaging for the Indians Assistance, and Colonel Nicholson's setting forth the Facility of the Attempt, it was undertaken.

Colonel Nicholson was sent beforehand to have prepared Provisions and Necessaries for the Expedition, but he was so delay'd by contrary Winds, that he arrived not above 6 or 18 Days before the Fleet, whereby the Provisions were wanting, and the Fleet were detained at Boston till the 30th of July, on which Day they sailed (being reinforced with two Regiments of New-England, and some Men of War) 15 Sail of stout Ships, besides Transports.

When the Fleet sailed from New-England, they took along with them such Persons of the Country as they were advised might be capable of serving them as Pilots up the River of St. Laurence to Quebec, but who indeed were so ill qualified for that Trust, that they kept the wrong Shore. On the 22d of August they were got 80 Leagues up the River from Cape Britton, and within 40 of Quebec; when about Ten a Clock at Night a Man who was looking out from the Topmast-head of the Admiral's Ship came down and reported, that he saw the Breaking of the Sea upon the Rocks at a very little Distance; whereupon the Wind blowing fresh, the Admiral gave the Signal for the Fleet to anchor; but before that could be done, 7 Transports struck on the Rocks, and were lost with almost all the Men they had on board: The rest of the Fleet were in imminent Danger; but it pleased God that soon after they had let fall their Anchors, it became calm. Of the Men that were wrecked, about 120 saved themselves, by swimming to the Lee Shore. The next Morning, the Wind, springing up from that Shore, carried the Fleet out of Danger from among the Rocks: and the Sloops and Boats were sent, which brought off the said 120 Men. Afterwards a Council of War being held, 'twas judged proper for the Fleet to make the best of their Way home to England, and Colonel Clayton was dispatched before in the Leopard.

The Loss was considerable, for 730 Persons were drowned, among whom were divers Officers. The rest of the Fleet arrived safe at Portsmouth in due Time. But the Edgar of 70 Guns, which was one of them, had the Misfortune to blow up by Accident at Spithead, October the 15th.

Colonel Nicholson set out August 28th by Land towards Canada, with a good Force to act in Conjunction with the Expedition, but he had no Notice of the Misfortune, and so returned to New-England.

About the Beginning of June this Year a Warrant was sign'd directing a Patent to be passed the Great Seal for creating the Duke of Hamilton a Baron and Duke of Great Britain, which (altho' a Caveat was entered against it) passed the Seal accordingly: But when he came to take his Place in that Quality in the next Parliament, it was strenuously opposed, as letting the Crown into a Power of calling to Parliament a greater Number of Scotch Peers than was allowed by the Union. This Matter was debated 1711.

A. D.

bated Three several Days, and in the end a Vote passed, That Scotch Peers created Peers of Great Britain since the Union could not have a Right to sit in Parliament.

We have already said, that at the latter End of the Campaign a Negotiation for Peace with France was set on Foot. The Preliminaries or Propositions given in by France, and by her Majesty communicated to the Ministers of the Allies, were,

I. That the French King will acknowledge the Queen of Great-Britain in that Quality, as also the Succession of the Crown according to the present Settlement.

II. That he will freely and bona fide consent to the taking of all just and reasonable Measures for hindering that the Crown of France and Spain may never be united on the Head of the same Prince, his Majesty being persuaded that this Excess of Power would be contrary to the Good and Quiet of Europe.

III. That the King's Intention is, That all the Parties engaged in the present War, without excepting any of them, may find their Reasonable Satisfaction in the Treaty of Peace which shall be made: That Commerce may be Re-established and maintained for the future, to the Advantage of Great Britain, of Holland, and of the other Nations, who have been accustomed to exercise Commerce.

IV. As the King will likewise maintain exactly the Observation of the Peace when it shall be concluded; and the Object his Majesty proposes to himself, being to secure the Frontiers of his Kingdom, without disturbing in any manner whatever, the Neighbouring States, he promises to agree by the Treaty which shall be made, that the Dutch shall be put into Possession of the Fortified Places which shall be mentioned, in the Netherlands, to serve hereafter for a Barriere; which may secure the Quiet of the Republick of Holland, against any Enterprize from the Part of France.

V. The King consents likewise that a secure and convenient Barriere should be formed for the Empire and for the House of Austria.

VI. Notwithstanding Dunkirk cost the King very great Sums, as well to acquire it, as to fortify it; and that it was further necessary to be a very considerable Expence for raising the Works, his Majesty is willing however to engage to cause them to be demolished immediately after the Conclusion of Peace on Condition that for the Fortifications of that Place, a proper Equivalent, that may content him, be given him; and as England cannot furnish that Equivalent, the Discussion of it shall be referred to the Conferences to be held for the Negotiation of the Peace.

VII. When the Conferences for the Negotiation of the Peace shall be formed, all the Pretensions of the Princes and States engaged in the present War shall be therein Discussed bona fide and amicably. And nothing shall be omitted to regulate and terminate them to the Satisfaction of all the Parties.

By Virtue of a full Power from the King, We the undersigned Knight of the Order of St. Michael Deputy of the Council of Commerce, have concluded in the Name of his Majesty, the present Preliminary Articles. In Witness whereof we have signed. Done at London, the 27th of September Old Style, and the 8th of October New Style 1711.

(L. S.) Mefnage

It is hard to express how strangely the generality of the People of all Parties, and even some of the best well meaning Friends of the Min

stry, were surprized upon the Publication of these Preliminaries, which they looked upon as insidious, and insufficient to ground a Treaty upon. But the Ministry pursued, nevertheless, their own Schemes; and notwithstanding the Opposition of the Emperor and the States General, who labour'd to put off the Negotiations till better Preliminaries could be obtain'd, it was soon after notified that Utrecht was appointed to be the Place of Treaty, and that the Congress would begin the 12th of January 1712, and all the Ministers of the Grand Alliance were invited by the Queen's circular Letters, to send forthwith their respective Ministers thither.

The Elector of Hanover, by his Minister the Baron de Bothmar, communicated his Sentiments upon this Subject. That Lord presented a Memorial on the 28th of December to Mr. Secretary St. John; wherein, in his Master's Name, he represented the Necessity of maintaining a perfect Union between the Allies, while the Peace should be treating; that all the Allies would gladly concur to conclude the Peace, provided they might have their Security in it, there being none among them who was not weary of the Expence and Inconveniences of the War; that it was easy to see the pernicious Consequences there would be Ground to apprehend, if Spain and the Indies were left to the Duke of Anjou, which her Majesty herself had clearly deliver'd her Opinion upon in her Speech at the Opening of the last Session of Parliament, when she recommended the War of Spain as that which most particularly concern'd the British Nation; that whatever be done, and whether the Assembly for Peace be forthwith opened, or deferred to another Time, that is to say, till France has made more satisfactory Declarations, it was his Highness's Opinion, that it was absolutely necessary to be no way remiss in the Preparations for the ensuing Campaign. But above all, that it would be essentially necessary to avoid the Snare of a Cessation of Arms, which 'twas very probable France would propose as soon as the Assembly for Peace should be open'd; which Cessation keeping the Maritime Potentates in the Necessity of making the same Efforts and the same Expence for the War, for maintaining the same Fleets, and the same Armies, will deprive them of the Means of making use of them, and stop the Progress of their glorious Arms, &c.

But this Memorial had no Effect.

The D. of Newcastle being deceased, her Majesty was pleased to give the Privy Seal to the Lord Bishop of Bristol, a Gentleman who had recommended himself to her Favour by a faithful and judicious Execution of the Office of Envoy in Sweden during the Reigns of the late, and her present Majesty.

In September News came to England that Commodore Littleton sail'd from Jamaica with her Majesty's Ship he commanded, in Quest of M. du Cassa and the Galleons, and that he had met and taken one Spanish Galleon of 90 Guns, very richly laden, and another Spanish Ship of 26 Guns, and was in pursuit of the rest; but he overtook them not, for du Cassa sail'd for Europe, but met with so violent a Storm, that he was not heard of for several Months. But at the End of the Year Advice from Martinico give Account of his Arrival there very much shatter'd.

The South Sea Company was erected this Summer. Her Majesty, pursuant suant to the Act of Parliament, issued a Commission to receive the Declarations of Publick Debts to be made by the respective Creditors of the Government, in order to incorporate the said Creditors, and give them the sole Power of trading to the South Sea, 9,471,325 l. were declar'd accordingly, and then a Charter passed the Great Seal, whereby the said Creditors or their Assigns, were made a Corporation with perpetual Succession, intituled to the Annuity of 568,275 l. being the Interest of their respective Debts, and 8,000 l. per Annum for Charges; and impower'd to trade to all the Coast of America which lies beyond the Mouth of the River Paria or Oronoko, down to the Magellanic Streight (except the Coast of Brazil) through that Streight, or round the Terra du Fuego into the South Sea; and all the Coast of that Sea up to Callifornia; with Inhibition to all others to navigate those Seas on Pain of forfeiting Ships and Goods, &c. Provided always, that their Ships shall come back from the South Sea the same Way, without failing to the East-Indies, or departing above 300 Leagues from the Coast of America. About the middle of September the Lord-Treasurer came into the City, and being attended by the Subscribers, the Charter was open'd; wherein the Governor, Deputy-Governor, Sub-Governor, and the Thirty Directors for the first Year were named. Soon after a Register or Transfer Book was establish'd; and the House in Broad-street, where formerly the Excise Office had been held, was taken to be their House or Office.

A. D.
1711.

Nothing material happen'd at home this Summer of Note, except the Debates in Conversation concerning the Faults of the late Ministry.

For the vast Sum the Debt to the Navy amounted to, and the smart Representation of the House of Commons thereupon; but especially that Article wherein the 35 Millions was mention'd, gave Occasion to free Discourse at this Time. The common People generally believing that the Ministry mispent a great Part of the Money paid in Taxes, and that they were so conscious of their Guilt, that they durst not let their Accounts be seen.

To remove therefore this Prejudice, and to vindicate themselves, the Old Ministry, or some body for them, publish'd a very satisfactory Account of the Nature and Rise of the Navy-Debt; to which, it being in Print, we refer our Reader.

But when the Negotiation for Peace approach'd, a new Noise was raised against our Confederates. It was said, that Great Britain, which ought to be but a Second in the War, had been not only made a Principal, but also had been made to bear the main Burthen of it. For it was alledged that the Allies contributed not their Proportion of the Charge and Labour of the War.

To this it was answer'd, That Britain was a Principal in the War in the most essential Manner, for it was the Security of the Protestant Succession, and the avoiding a Popish Successor being imposed upon us, together with the Security of our Foreign Trade, especially that to Spain and the Spanish West-Indies, that were our Parts of the Quarrel. The House of Austria fought for the Succession to Spain, but without that could subsist as happily to itself as with it. And the Dutch fought for a Barrier in the Netherlands, but could at any time obtain one by Treaty as good as what they have been able to defend themselves by these Hundred Years.

Years. But that Britain could obtain effectual Security for its Trade and Succession by any Treaty which left Spain and its Dominions in the Power of the House of Bourbon, was a Matter of much Doubt. Wherefore it ought to be acknowledged that Great Britain was a Principal in the War.

Upon the Second Complaint, namely, That our Allies had not performed their Part: It was said that the Dutch had stipulated to bring 60,000 Men into the Field, besides what they kept in Garrisons, in Proportion to the 40,000 we agreed to maintain; but that we had made great Augmentations of our Share, and they had not increased theirs in Proportion. It was also said, That they employed so many Men in garrisoning the Towns they took, that they left none of their Army in the Field, which by that means was so weak, that the Duke of Marlborough had not so great a Number under his Command as her Majesty alone paid. To this it was answered, That the Assertion was palpably false. For the Dutch did every Summer bring above 60,000 Men into the Field; and had actually increased their Army, according to the Proportion stipulated. This was proved by a Printed List of the several Bodies of Troops in the Dutch Pay, which amounted to 143,385 Men, and by the Line of Battle, which upon a Review at the beginning of a Campaign was every Year published.

The Proportion that England contributed to the Army in Flanders had been of late 62,724 Men, which divided into Battalions and Squadrons, made 52 Battalions, and 68 Squadrons; besides two Battalions of the Foot Guards employed here last Year, which were 1,200 Men. But the Army in Flanders was every Year above double that Number, and with the Addition of the Imperial Troops under Prince Eugene, arose to near Treble. Thus, in 1708, before Prince Eugene or any of the German Reinforcements arrived, the Line of Battle, upon the Review in the beginning of May, appeared to consist of 112 Battalions, and 180 Squadrons. In 1709 the Army encamped between Courtray and Menin, were 110,000 Men, while the Prince of Hesse at the same time commanded a separate Army on the Fronties of Hainault. In the last Campaigns the Army had been still more strong; insomuch that upon the Review in May last there were 94 Battalions and 159 Squadrons, under the Duke of Marlborough, and 48 Battalions, and 110 Squadrons, under Prince Eugene, till that Prince was called to Germany, and carried with him the Imperialists. It was also affirmed that the Dutch Regiments were always duly recruited, and the Complement of them kept up in the strictest Manner.

Again, it was said, That England bore all the Charge of the War, and that Holland paid but a small Proportion of it. To which it was answered, That the United Netherlands, although it be a Country, which for Extent of Ground, Number of Inhabitants, Stock on Land, or Sum in Wealth, cannot be computed to be above equal to a fourth Part of Great-Britain, yet it paid near upon, if not quite, as much to the Charge of the War as Britain. For that State paid annually to the War 48,167,208 Guilders, which reckoned at Ten Guilders to a Pound Sterling (the Rate they then bore) amounted to 4,816,720*l.* besides which they gave all the Revenue arising to the States out of Dutch Brabant, Dutch Flanders, the new Conquests, and by 1711.

A. D.

Contributions, to the same Service. And yet they incurred excessive great Debts, which will require very many Years to discharge.

Now to compare this with the Charge we had been at, it must be remembered that in the first Years of the War, but 3 Millions, or at most 4 Millions, and afterwards not much above 5 Millions per Annum, had been granted to the War. For altho' the whole Grants in the two last Years amounted to above Six, yet Guards, Garrisons, and Invalids, Interest upon Debentures, circulating Exchange Bills, and other Uses, which were not part of the War, made above 700,000 l. of the Money. And as this was part of every Year's Grants, it reduces the Provisions for the War to but little above 4 Millions and half per Annum, one Year with another, the Debts incurred in this War included. It was therefore said, that the People of Holland paid extremely more and heavier Taxes to the War, than the People of England.

It would be tedious to go on with the Complaints and Answers concerning the rest of the Allies. For the Emperor was blamed as contributing but little to the War; and yet the List of his Forces, delivered in to the Allies, shewed them to be 91,920 Men, which he offered to augment and make up above 100,000, to act in Conjunction with the Allies. The King of Portugal was blamed, but the Consideration of the vast and advantageous Trade of England to that Country, whereby a Balance on our side arose of near as much as the Spanish Trade in time of Peace yielded us, being the Effect of our Alliance with that King, it was urged in his Excuse.

Sir Simon Harcourt, Lord-Keeper, was created Baron Harcourt of Stan- ton Harcourt in Com. Oxon; Duke

Hamilton was created Duke Brandon in England; the Earl of Orrery in Ireland, was created a Baron of England, by the Stile of Baron Boyle of Marston in Com. Somerset. The Lord Raby was also about the same time created Earl of Strafford.

Dec. 7. The Parliament met, and the Queen made a most Gracious Speech, wherein she was pleased to intimate, That both Time and Place were appointed for a General Treaty; that she would endeavour, that Trade and Commerce be improved and enlarged by the Peace. Then recommended to the Commons to make a Provision for an early Campaign, telling them. That what they gave would be in their Power to apply.

Both Houses presented their humble Addresses to her Majesty to thank her for her most Gracious Speech. The Lords had this remarkable Paragraph in theirs, viz. 'And we beg leave to represent to your Majesty, as the humble Opinion of this House, That no Peace can be Safe or Honourable to Great-Britain or Europe, if Spain and the West-Indies be allotted to any Branch of the House of Bourbon.

An Act passed this Parliament for securing the Church, containing in Substance, 'That if any Person possessing an Office in England which by Law he was obliged to take the Sacrament to be qualified for, should afterwards be present at any Conventicle, or Religious Meeting, where more than Ten Persons besides the Family were assembled, and the Liturgy of the Church not used, or the Queen and Princess Sophia prayed for, he should forfeit 40 l. And any Person convicted of such Offence should forfeit his Office and be incapable of any Office till he had constantly conformed to the Church for one Year, and taken the Sacrament Three Times within that Year. Provided that no Person should be punished by this Act, unless informed against in Ten Days, and prosecuted in Three Months after the Offence. The Toleration was ratify'd and confirmed, and it was enacted, That all the Advocates and Members of the College of Justice of Scotland should be obliged to take and subscribe the Abjuration Oath.

Her Majesty having constituted the Bishop of Bristol Lord Privy-Seal, her Plenipotentiary with the Earl of Strafford, now Envoy at the Hague, at the approaching Treaty to be held at Utrecht, she was pleased to appoint Sir George Beaumont and Edward Nichols, Esq; Commissioners for executing the Office of Privy Seal in his Absence, and his Lordship set out from London, December 26. and arrived in Holland about a Week after.

December 31. The Lords Compton and Bruce were by Writ called up to the House of Peers, and ten Commoners were made Peers, viz George Hay, Esq; Baron Hay, of Bedwarden in Com. Hereford; the Lord Viscount Windsor of Ireland, Baron Mountjoy of the Isle of Wight in Com. Southampton; Henry Paget, Esq; Son to the Lord Paget, Baron Burton of Burton in Com. Stafford; Sir Thomas Mansel, Baron Mansel of Margam in Com. Glamorgan; Sir Thomas Willoughby, Baron Middleton of Middleton in Com. Warwick; Sir Thomas Trevor, Baron Trevor of Bromham in Com. Bedford; George Granville Esq; Baron Lansdown of Bidiford in Com. Devon; Samuel Massam, Esq; Baron Massam, of Gates in Com. Essex; Tho. Foley, Esq; Baron Foley of Kidderminster in Com. Worcester; and Allen Bathurst, Esq; Baron Bathurst of Battelsden in Com. Bedford. And they were accordingly introduced into the House of Peers on Jan. 3.

A. D.

1711.

That Party in the Nation who were so eager for a Peace, even almost upon any Terms, and long labour'd the Removal of the Duke of Marlborough, who they knew could never be brought to come into any Terms that were not perfectly consistent with the Grand Alliance and the repeated Professions and Declarations of the Queen and Parliament, and the Justice we ow'd to our Allies. In order to which Removal, malicious Insinuations and invidious Misrepresentations had been industriously handed about, to alienate the Affection which his Heroick Acts had justly acquired him in the Minds of the People. And when they had this Way, in some Measure, prepared the Nation for it; they had the Effrontery to attack this Great Man in Parliament, upon a Perquisite which had been always received by the Commander in Chief in the Netherlands, as well before the Revolution, as since, of an Allowance out of the Contract for Bread for the Army, to be apply'd to the gaining of Intelligence and other secret Service; together with Two and an half per Cent. out of the Pay of the Foreign Troops in English Service, for the same Use. All which his Grace had justly applyed that Way; and had thereby such quick and certain Intelligence of all the Motions and even Intentions of the Enemies, that next to the Blessing of God on the Bravery of the Troops, most of the Advantages obtained in the War might be attributed to it, as his Grace declared to the Commissioners of Accounts in a Letter to them, when this Matter first began. But those Gentlemen reported it nevertheless as an Abuse, and the Party then

A. D.
1711.

Superior in the House were able to carry it against him.

The Queen thereupon was pleased to declare in Council on the 30th of December, That her Majesty thought fit to dismiss the Duke of Marlborough from all his Employments.

Thus was this Great Man, who had served his Sovereign and Country with an unparallel'd Bravery, Fidelity, and Honour, who never omitted Fighting the Enemy, when it was possible to do it, or even when ever the World could have Occasion to say he ought to have fought; who never fought Battle where in he was not Victor, and who never besieged Town he did not take, even altho' many of those he took were esteemed impregnable; and in fine, the Man who was the Glory of the Nation, and the Darling of all the World, by a Faction at Home was thrown into Disgrace with his Sovereign; but with no Diminution of his Honour, in the Minds of all true Lovers of their Country at Home, and all Great Men abroad, even in France not excepted.

January 1. The Duke of Ormond was made Captain of the First Troop of Guards in place of the Duke of Marlborough, and three Days after Commander in Chief of all her Majesty's Land Forces in England; the Duke of Northumberland succeeded him in the Second Troop of Guards, and the Earl Rivers was made Captain of the Third Troop of Guards, and Master of the Ordnance. And on the 26th of February the Duke of Ormond was declared Commander in Chief of all her Majesty's Forces.

On the 17th of January the Duke of Somerset was removed from his Place of Master of the Horse; but his Dutcheſs continued Groom of the Stole.

The Duke of Beaufort was made Captain of the Band of Pensioners in the Place of the Duke of St. Albans, and Brigadier Hill, Brother to the Lady Massam, Lieutenant of the Tower in the Room of General Cadogan.

The Commissioners of Publick Accounts having formed Exceptions against the Contracts for Forage in Scotland, made by Robert Walpole, Esq; who was then Secretary at War, the House of Commons, after long Debate committed him to the Tower, and expelled him the House.

On the 24th of January the Report of the Commissioners for Publick Accounts, relating to the Duke of Marlborough, were taken into Consideration by the House of Commons, where, after a long Debate, it was voted, ' That the taking ' Money from the Contractors for ' Bread for the Army in the Netherlands, was unwarrantable and ' illegal. That the two and half ' per Cent. deducted from the Forage of the reign Troops in her Majesty's ' Pay, was publick Money, and ' ought to be accounted for. And ' that these Resolutions be laid before the Queen by the whole ' House, which was done accordingly on the 26th.

Prince Eugene of Savoy arrived here the 5th of January, and on the 6th in the Evening had Audience of the Queen, to whom he delivered a Letter from the Emperor. Her Majesty excusing herself, upon the Want of Health, from speaking with him so often as she otherwise would, referred him to the Lord Treasurer and Mr. Secretary St. John, with whom he was often in Conference, but to very little Purpose. His Highness was visited and complimented by all the Principal Nobility, and magnificently entertained during the time he tarried here, but he effected nothing of what he came for, which was to induce her Majesty to continue the War in Spain with Vigour. For altho' his Imperial Majesty offer'd to bring an Army of 103,925 Men into the Field of his own Troops, to act for the common Cause, the Ministry so influenc'd the House of Commons, that on the 3d of March they voted only 225,287 Pounds for the Charges of her Majesty's Forces in Spain, from Christmas to Lady-day, and 250,000 l. for the rest of the Year 1712. And address'd her Majesty, to represent to the Emperor, that her Majesty will not look upon herself oblig'd to contribute more than one Third of the Four Millions of Crowns, which Prince Eugene propos'd as the Charges of the War in Spain for that Year. On the 13th of March his Highness had Audience of Leave of the Queen, and on the 17th embark'd for Holland.

A. D.

1711.

The House of Commons having address'd her Majesty, that the Barrier Treaty, and all the Instructions and Papers relating to it, should be laid before them; on the 14th of February, the House in a Grand Committee voted, that several Articles in that Treaty were destructive to the Trade and Interest of Great-Britain, and therefore dishonourable to her Majesty. 'That the Lord Townshend had not Orders or Authority for negociating or concluding several Articles in the said Treaty. And that the Lord Viscount Townsend, who negociated and sign'd, and all those who advis'd the ratifying the said Treaty, were Enemies to the Queen and Kingdom.'

But all these severe Censures were generally understood to be the Effects of Party Rancour only, and brought very little, if any, Obligu upon the Persons censured.

On the 4th of February, the House of Commons taking into Consideration the State of the War, came to several Resolutions; wherein they charged the States General with having been extreamly deficient in their Proportion of contributing to the War; which occasion'd the Lords to publish a Memorial to justify themselves, and to demonstrate that they had not only contributed to the Utmost of their Power, whereby they had involved themselves into an immense Debt; but had also comply'd with all their Treaties, and, in proportion to their Abilities, had even contributed more than England, in proportion to her Abilities, had done.

Thus having quarrel'd, in Effect, with both our Allies, the Emperor and the States General, all the World saw that the Ministers were resolv'd for Peace; and great Boasts were made of the Advantageous Terms that France would give.

The House of Lords in an Address to the Queen, deliver'd by the whole House the 10th of February, represented to her Majesty their just Indignation at France, by proposing to acknowledge her Majesty's Title no sooner than when the Peace was sign'd, and express'd their utmost Resentment at the Terms of Peace offer'd by France.

This leads us to proceed upon the Negotiations of Peace carry'd on at Utrecht; but it is necessary first to say, that about the beginning of April, Orders were given to the Attorney General to prosecute the Duke of Marlborough upon the Subject of the Deduction out of the Bread-Money, and the Two and a half per Cent. out of the Pay of the Foreign Troops, as above said; notwithstanding that the same Perquisites out of the Bread-Money was claim'd by and granted to the Duke of Ormond; and that the House of Commons had voted, that the Two and a Half per Cent. should be still deducted, and even the Foreign Troops

A. D.
1711.

Troops had agreed to continue to allow it to the Duke of Ormond. His Grace deliver'd in his Answer to the Accusation, wherein he so well set forth the Justice of his Cause, that the Attorney General was not very fond of proceeding, so that the Matter lay still; and his Grace, conformably to the wise Conduct he had always observ'd, chose to remove from the Eyes of the Ministry an Object which perpetually put them to the Blush; and about the End of this Year, asked Leave to go Abroad, which was granted, and he remain'd there the rest of this Reign.

The Conferences for negotiating a Peace were open'd at Utrecht the 20th of January, on which Day the Bishop of Bristol, Lord Privy Seal and Plenipotentiary of her Britannick Majesty, made a Speech, expressing in general Terms the Intention of the Meeting. And was followed by the two French Plenipotentiaries, the Marshal d'Huxelles, and the Abbot Polignac, the Earl of Strafford and other Ministers present. The next Day the Ministers of the Allies met at the Town-House, and agreed to hold Conferences there twice a Week. They also resolved to demand of the French Ministers a Plan or Scheme of what they had to propose; which Demand they accordingly deliver'd in Writing at the next General Conference, held the 3d of February. The French received it, and promised to give an Answer; but wished all the Ministers of the Allies were present, that they might at the same time receive a Counter-Project from all the Members of the Grand Alliance. The Imperial Plenipotentiaries arrived the 9th of February, and others daily came in. So that on the 11th, the French deliver'd in their Specifick Explanation (as 'twas call'd) of the Offers of France. The Confederate Ministers were extreamly surpriz'd at those Offers, alledging, that if France had gain'd as much upon the Confederates, as the Confederates had done upon them, they could not have made more extravagant Proposals. The Imperialists protested against it: and the States conceiv'd the utmost Indignation at it: And indeed none but the English could forbear expressing their Resentment. So that the Time was spun out with Delays till the Campaign begun.

The Confederate Troops begun to take the Field by the Middle of April, and on the 22d of that Month, Prince Eugene left the Hague, in order to put himself at the Head of the Army. And on the 25th the Duke of Ormond, who now was Commander in Chief for the Queen of Great-Britain, arrived at the Hague, and on the 30th went also to the Army. The Queen wrote a favourable Letter to the States, and the Earl of Stafford in the Conferences at Utrecht declar'd on the 18th of April, 'That her Majesty design'd her Troops should act with the same Vigour against France, as if there were no Negotiation on Foot.'

On the 22d of December 1711, N. S. His Imperial Majesty Charles VI, was crown'd at Francfort, with all the Solemnity usual on that Occasion.

The 12th of February, the Dauphiness, Maria Adelaide, Daughter of the Duke of Savoy, died at Versailles; and on the 18th her Spouse the Dauphin, late Duke of Burgundy and Eldest Son of the late Dauphin, departed this Life also. So that the Title of Dauphin devolved upon his Eldest Son the Duke of Bretaign, who died also on the 8th of March. The Duke of Anjou his Brother was so ill at the same time, that his Death was also expected,

but

but he recover'd, and now succeeds his Great Grandfather on the Throne.

France was diligent in her Preparations for the Campaign, and to that Purpose had by the middle of February form'd a very large Magazine at Arras, intending to make use of it in some very notable Expedition, which they intended to attempt in the beginning of the Spring. But the Confederates having Advice that their Troops were in Motion, the Earl of Albermarle, with General Cadogan, formed a Design for burning that Magazine, which was effected accordingly by some Troops drawn out of the Garrisons of Tournay, Lisle, Doway, and Bethune, on the 1st and 2d of March, N. S. who (with the Loss of only 20 Men kill'd or wounded) burnt and destroy'd at least a Million of Rations. At the same time the Count de Dobna, Governor of Mons, advanc'd with a Body of Troops to the Sambre, and by ruining several Bridges and Sluices on that River, render'd it unnavigable and of no Use to the Enemy to bring Forage for new Magazines.

But to return Home. On the first of March, Sir Thomas Hanmer reported to the House of Commons, from the Committee appointed to draw up a Representation to the Queen, that they had drawn it up accordingly. And he presented it to the House, where it was read and agreed to, and on the 4th presented to her Majesty by the whole House. The Substance of this Representation was to set forth the Expences we had been at in the War, and to endeavour to shew that the rest of the Allies had not contributed equally to it. The Length of this Piece permits us not to give it Place here, and therefore must refer to the printed Copies of it, very numerously extant.

On the last Day of the same Month the Earl of Northampton was made Constable of the Tower of London, and Lieutenant of the Hamlets.

On the 21st of April, the French Refugees presented au humble Petition and Representation to the Queen, to induce her Majesty to support their Interest in the present Negotiation of Peace. To which the Lord Dartmouth (Secretary of State) sent them a very favourable Answer; and because this Representation insinuated that her Majesty's Predecessors were Guarantees of the Edicts in favour of the Protestants of France, he desired them to explain that Part of it; in Obedience whereunto they presented a long Memorial, setting forth the several Instances wherein Queen Elizabeth, King James I. and King Charles I. had interested themselves in their Favour, at the Treaties that had been held by the respective Kings of France on their Account. Which Memorial was so favourably received, that her Majesty appointed the Marquis de Miremont, Nephew of the late Earl of Feversham, to go to Utrecht to take Care in a particular Manner of the Interest of the French Refugees. And he set out accordingly on the 17th of June.

We have mention'd the Burning the Magazines at Arras, and Count Dobna's having interrupted the Means of erecting new ones; which had elevated the Hopes of the Confederates, and given them a Prospect of a happy Campaign. But what we cannot now omit to relate, made those Plumes fall, and reduc'd them at once to the State the Enemy wish'd for.

The Duke of Ormond and Prince Eugene, after having held several Conferences at Tournay, set out from thence on the 21st of May, to the Confederate Army, which in Number 122,250 Men, lay encamp'd be-

A. D. 1712. between Doway and Marchiennes. On the 26th of the same Month the Army broke up, and having passed the Scheld, encamped between Noyelles and Montreccourt, and by throwing up Lines, took Care to keep their Communication with Marchiennes and other Places. The Enemy at the same time lay between Chastelet and Cambray, with the Scheld before them: But General Fels being sent out to view the Country, return'd with Advice, that he had discover'd a Space of Land between the Spring-Head of the Scheld and the Somme, large enough for 20 Squadrons to march abreast; which administering an Opportunity as fair as could be desired, for attacking the Enemy with Advantage, Prince Eugene made all necessary Dispositions to fight them; and on Saturday the 28th of May, communicated his Design to the Duke of Ormond. His Grace took Time to consider of it. And at first formed Excuses; but in the End declar'd, That he had receiv'd positive Orders from the Queen not to agree to a Battle. And when Prince Eugene replied, That we can besiege Quefnoy and Landrecy, his Grace let him know that his Orders forbade him to enter into any Action against the Enemy either by Battle or Siege.

Whatever Motives those Persons might have, who advis'd the Queen to give these Orders; the Declaration gave an universal Shock as well at Home as Abroad. The Plenipotentiaries of the States at Utrecht complain'd to the Bishop of Bristol, who declar'd he knew nothing of it. The States wrote a long Letter to the Queen, and the Court of Vienno represented their Concern at it; which produced an Order to the Duke of Ormond to concur in a Siege. The House of Lords held a long Debate on the 28th of May upon this Subject, wherein many Lords expressed their Indignation; and altho' by a Majority the Debate was adjourn'd, 25 Lords enter'd a Protestation against the Orders given to the Duke of Ormond. In the House of Commons it was mov'd, that an Address be presented to her Majesty to express their Concern at these Orders, &c. but Secretary St. John there, as the Lord Treasurer had done in the House of Lords, giving the strongest Assurances that the Allies should not be deserted, nor a separate Peace made, the Motion being formed into a Question, was carried in the Negative by a large Majority, and afterwards a Vote passed that the House had an intire Confidence in her Majesty's Assurances, &c.

On the 6th of June her Majesty having passed divers Acts, made a Speech to both Houses, wherein she was pleased to communicate a Plan upon which a Peace might be made, containing in Substance as follows; 'That France offer'd, that the Duke of Anjou should, for himself and his Descendants, renounce for ever all Claim to the Crown of France, and that the Performance should accompany the Promise. And that the Succession of that Crown, after the Death of the Dauphine, and his Sons, shall be in the Duke of Berry and his Sons, in the Duke of Orleans and his Sons, and so unto the rest of the House of Bourbon. The Succession to Spain and the Indies, after the Duke of Anjou and his Children, to descend to such Prince as shall be agreed on in the Treaty, so as to exclude for ever the rest of the House of Bourbon. That the Renunciations and Settlements aforesaid should be ratified in the most strong and solemn Manner, both in France and Spain, and those Kingdoms, as well as all the Powers engaged in the

the War, should be Guarantees to the same. France agreed that the whole Island of St. Christophers should be surrendered to England; and to restore the whole Bay and Straights of Hudson, to deliver up Newfoundland with Placentia, and to make an absolute Cession of Annapolis with the rest of Nova Scotia or Acadia. That Dunkirk should be demolished. Gibraltar and Port Mahon, with the whole Island of Minorca, should remain to England. The Trade to Spain and the West-Indies should be settled as it was in the Time of King Charles, with a Provision that all Advantages granted by Spain to any other Nation, should be likewise granted to the Subjects of Great Britain. That the Affiento, or Contract with the Spaniards for Negroes, should be made with us for 30 Years, in the same manner as it had been enjoy'd by the French. The Interests of the Confederates should be adjusted in the Congress. France offered to make the Rhine the Barrier of the Empire, to yield up Brisac, Fort Kehl, and Landau, and to rase all the Fortresses on the other side that River. The Spanish Netherlands to go to his Imperial Majesty, as also the Kingdoms of Naples and Sardinia, the Dutchy of Milan, and the Places belonging to Spain on the Coast of Tuscany. The Disposition of Sicily not yet determined. The Interests of the States with respect to Commerce was agreed to, as they had been demanded by their own Ministers, with Exception only of a few Species of Merchandise; and the Barrier demanded in 1709, except 2 or 3 places. Her Majesty told them further, That her Plenipotentiaries should assist the King of Portugal in obtaining his Demands; as also the King of Prussia. And would endeavour to obtain good Terms for the Duke of Savoy. That France consented, the Elector Palatine should keep the upper Palatinate, and to acknowledge the Electoral Dignity in the House of Hanover.

Altho' the Publick Judgment was far from being satisfied with this Plan, yet the Majority of the House of Commons liked it so well, that an Address of Thanks was voted Nemine Contradicente. And the same was done by the House of Lords, after a long Debate.

June 21. The Queen came to the House, passed the rest of the Bills that were ready, made a short Speech, and then the Parliament was adjourned to the 8th of July, having first passed the Acts necessary for raising the Sums voted for the respective Services, which amounted in all to 6,656,967 l.

We must now return to Flanders, where Prince Eugene was carrying on the Operations of the Campaign by the Siege of Quesnoy; which Place was surrendered to him July 4. The Duke of Ormond encamped so as to cover this Siege, but in the mean time, proposed to Prince Eugene a Cessation of Arms for two Months; which not being agreed to, he declared that he must send 10 Battalions to take Possession of Dunkirk, which France offered to put into the Queen's Hands; and that he would march off with the British Troops and the Foreigners in the Queen's Pay. But when his Grace communicated this Design to the Generals who commanded those Foreign Troops, and required their Obedience; he found his Command not forcible enough, for they all declared they could not separate themselves from the Army under Prince Eugene without express Orders from their Master.

The

D. A.
1712.

The Bishop of Bristol at Utrecht made, at the same time, the like Proposals of Cessation of Arms to the Ministers of the Allies, grounding it upon the Terms that France had offered to the Queen; but was so far from meeting with a Compliance, that all those Ministers expressed themselves extremely surprized at it. And the States of Holland having formally declared against a Cessation, all the Allies adhered to that Resolution.

Prince Eugene having determined to besiege Landrecy, the Army broke up July 16. N. S. leaving the English with only 4 Squadrons and 1 Battalion of Holstein Troops and the Regiment of Walef; who two Days after marched towards Ghent. The rest following Prince Eugene.

On the 7th of July, O. S. Sir John Leake being arrived in the Haven of Dunkirk, with some Troops under the Command of Brigadier Hill, they landed the next Day, and were by the French Governor put into Possession of the Place. The Keys were delivered to the English, the French Garrison marched out, and the Queen's Colours were set up.

When the Duke of Ormond marched, he published a Suspension of Arms for two Months, and the same Day Marshal Villars sent to acquaint his Grace, that he also had declared a Suspension of Arms with her Britanick Majesty's Troops. The Duke of Ormond soon after took Possession of Ghent and Bruges, and detached 6 Battalions to Dunkirk, whither he also sent a Train of Artillery.

July. 17. N. S. The Prince of Anhalt Dessau invested Landrecy. Prince Eugene covered the Siege, and the Earl of Albermarle had the Guard of the Camp at Denain, which was formed to keep open the Communication with the Magazines. But Marshal Villars having

Orders to raise the Siege, so well disposed the Troops under his Command, that he broke through the Lines the Confederates had thrown up, and on the 24th forced the Camp of Denain, where he made a terrible Slaughter; took the Earl of Albermarle Prisoner, with many Generals, and 300 other Officers, besides 2,500 private Soldiers. This quite turned the Scale of the War to the French side, who pursued their Blow, and having taken Marchiennes and many smaller Posts, invested Doway on the 2d of August, which Place surrendered the 8th of September. And soon after they recovered Quesnoy and Bouchain.

Mr. Secretary St. John was created Lord Viscount Bolinbroke in the Month of July, and in the beginning of August was sent over to France, to negotiate a Treaty of Suspension of Arms, which being concluded accordingly, the Queen's Proclamation for a Cessation of Hostilities. both by Sea and Land, was published at London August 18.

In Consequence of this Cessation an Order was sent to the British Troops in Catalonia to separate from the Germans.

On the 26th of October a Chapter of the Order of the Garter being held at Windsoer, the Dukes of Beverly, Hamilton, and Kent, the Earl of Powlet, the Earls of Oxford and Strafford were elected Knights Companions of that most Noble Order.

A Suspension of Arms between France, Spain, and Portugal, was concluded at Utrecht, on the 7th of November N. S.

The Lord Lexington was sent to Spain, (September 15.) as her Majesty's Ambassador, to receive King Philip's Renunciation of all Right and Claim to the Crown of France. The Instrument whereof being drawn

drawn up in Form, the King solemnly swore (in the Presence of the Council of State and the chief Nobility on the 5th of November N. S.) to the strict Observance thereof. By which Renunciation it was stipulated, 'That neither he nor any of his Posterity should ever claim or enjoy the Crown of France; nor any of the Royal Family of France should ever claim or enjoy the Crown of Spain. And to prevent the Accession of too much Power to the House of Austria, it was further provided, that in Case of Failure of King Philip and his Issue, the Monarchy of Spain should devolve to the House of Savoy, which is descended from Donna Catherina, Daughter of King Philip II'. This was afterwards solemnly ratified in the Assembly of the States, and passed into a firm Law of that Kingdom.

The Queen had nominated the Duke of Hamilton to go to France in the Quality of her Majesty's Ambassador, and he had made Preparations for his Departure accordingly, but a most unhappy Accident prevented it. For about the middle of November, the Duke and the Lord Mohun being met upon some Affairs relating to an Estate of the Lord Macclesfield's Family, wherein they were jointly concerned, some Words passed, which occasioned a Quarrel that ended in a Duel, wherein they both lost their Lives.

The Negotiations of the Peace at Utrecht stood still all this Summer, by Reason of a Quarrel between the Count de Rechteren, one of the Plenipotentiaries of the States General, and M. Mesnager, one of the Plenipotentiaries of France. The Occasion whereof was, that the Day the News of the Defeat at Denain came to the Hague, the Count de Rechteren passing in his Coach by M. Mes- nager's House, the Porter and Footmen standing at the Door, insolently scoffed and flouted at the Footmen behind the Coach. Complaint whereof being made to their Master, no Satisfaction could be obtained; so that by trifling Delays, impertinent Evasions, and unjust Haughtiness, on the French side, the Quarrel was increased to that Degree, that no Business went on. For the States standing by their Minister, and the French King by his, the Matter became serious. And if the Count de Rechteren had not been willing to resign his Post, and their High Mightinesses, thro' the ill State of the War, at last obliged to submit, the Treaty must have broke up; for the French were so elated by their Success this Campaign, that they exerted the same Temper they were formerly remarkable for, before the Misfortunes of this War had humbled them. It was expected that the Resolution of the States General accepting the Resignation of Count Rechteren, dated September 20, would have finished this troublesome Affair: But the French King was not yet satisfied, for he demanded that Three at least of the Dutch Plenipotentiaries should come to his Plenipotentiaries, and disown what Count Rechteren had done, which at last, on the 29th of January following, they were fain to comply with.

The Court of Great Britain were in the mean Time labouring to bring the Confederates into the same pacifick Disposition themselves had imbibed. Mr. Harley, a Relation of the Lord Treasurer's, was sent in July to Hanover, to persuade the Elector to come into the Queen's Measures for Peace, but returned in October without effecting any thing. Endeavours to the same Purpose were made at the 1712.

Court

A. D.

Court of Prussia to as little Purpose; and the Lord Strafford, about the Middle of September, proposed to the States, her Majesty's Mediation with France for a Cessation of Arms with their Troops; which was refused upon any other Terms than the Concurrence of all the Allies. However, the States General testified their Willingness for the Sake of Peace, to recede in some Measure from what they had formerly adhered to; for on the 9th of October their Ministers declared to those of Great Britain, ' That for the Good of Peace, ' their High Mightinesses were willing to yield Lisle to France, and ' recede from their Pretensions to ' Doway, Valenciennes, and Maubeuge, which they had hitherto ' insisted on, provided Conde and ' Tournay were included in their Barrier; the Tariff of 1664 restor'd, and Sicily yielded to the Emperor, and Strasburg to the Empire, whereby they tacitly give up Spain and the West-Indies to King Philip.

The Duke of Ormond having settled the British Troops in their Winter Quarters in Ghent and Bruges, and taken a View of Dunkirk, returned to England, and waited upon the Queen at Windſor on the 4th of November.

On the 23d of November, the Queen was pleased to declare her Choice of the Duke of Shrewsbury to be her Ambassador Extraordinary to the Court of France; where the Duke d' Aumont had not long before been named for the same Employment to this Court.

The Earl of Strafford was at this Time come over to England to receive her Majesty's Instructions upon the last Declaration of the States. And being returned to the Hague, December 6, he desired a Conference with the Deputies of the States General, who waiting upon him accordingly, he let them know, ' That their Demand about Sicily ' was what could not be comply'd ' with, her Majesty having already ' engaged to give that Kingdom to ' the Duke of Savoy; and that in ' some other Points unsurmountable ' Difficulties arose. He intimated ' that her Majesty was determined ' to procure from France the Cession ' of Tournay, to strengthen the Barrier of that State, that her Majesty had endeavoured to obtain ' Conde also, but could not effect ' it; that the King of France made ' strong Instances for his Ally the ' Elector of Bavaria, demanding ' that he should keep the Possession ' of Luxemburg, Namur, and Charleroy, till he be restored to the Electorate of Bavaria, exclusive of ' the Upper Palatinate, and be plac'd ' in the Rank of Ninth Elector; and ' that France will propose that the ' Kingdom of Sardinia be also given ' to the said Elector. His Lordship ' also let them know, that he had ' brought with him a Plan of a New ' Treaty of Succession and Barrier, ' and must insist that that Treaty be ' signed before the Conclusion of ' the Peace; and he afterwards explained the Terms of it. Complain'd of Delays on the Part of the ' States, urged them to comply with ' what her Majesty had proposed, ' and finally intimated that her Majesty would be obliged to sign the ' Peace in two or three Weeks at ' most, without them, if they did ' not by that Time resolve to join ' with her. And then deliver'd the ' Project of the Barrier Treaty.

The States wrote a Letter on the 29th of December, N. S. to the Queen, wherein they expressed great Respect to her Majesty, and agreed in general to come into her Majesty's Measures; but desired her to allow of some Observations and Remarks they had made, both on the Plan of Peace, and Project of the Barrier Treaty, which they sent to their Envoy Extraordinary at her Majesty's Court, to be communicated to her Majesty. In Answer to which, about the beginning of January, her Majesty sent a Letter to the States General, wherein she expressed her self very graciously towards them. And the Ministers of the King of Prussia and the Duke of Savoy having by that time signified that their respective Masters were disposed to come into her Majesty's Measures, to which also the Imperialists seemed less averse than they had been, it was expected the Peace would soon be concluded.

On the 30th of January, N. S. the New Treaty of Barrier was signed at Utrecht by the Ministers of Great Britain and those of the States General, containing in Substance :

1. THE Treaty of Succession and Barrier signed October 29, 1709, to be void, and of no Force or Value.

2. The States General engage to defend the Succession to the Crown of Great Britain, to the Protestant Heirs, according to the Settlement made by Acts of Parliament.

3. The Queen shall use all her Efforts to obtain in the ensuing Treaty of Peace, that not only the Spanish Low-Countries, but also what other Towns and Places will be found necessary, whether conquered or not conquered, may serve to form the Barrier of the States.

4. To which Purpose it is agreed that the States General may keep Garrisons in Furnes, Fort Knocque, Ipres, Menin, the Town and Citadel of Tournay, Mons, Charleroy, the Town and Castle of Namur, the Castle of Ghent, the Fort la Perle, Philip, and Damme, the Fort of St. Donat being joined to the Fortifications of Sluys, and yielded in Property to the States General; and that the Fort Rodenbuyden on this Side of Ghent shall be demolished.

5. In case the States be in War against France, or in manifest Danger of being attacked, they may put as many Troops into those Places as the Usage of War, and Necessity shall require.

6. They may also send into those Places without paying any Duties or Custom, Ammunition, Arms, Artillery, &c.

7. The States may put into the said Places, such Governors, Commanders and other Officers, as they think fit, who shall not be subject to any Orders, relating to the Security and Military Government of the said Places, but those of the States General.

8. The States may fortify the said Towns and Places, repair the Fortifications, and do whatever is useful for their Defence.

9. That the Revenues (exclusive of what is necessary for the Civil Government) of the Places which by this Treaty are to be Part of the States Barrier, but did not belong to Charles II. late King of Spain at the Time of his Death, shall for the future belong to the States General, who shall levy the same, for the Use and Maintenance of their Garrisons, &c. But with express Condition that they shall never assume the Authority of laying new Taxes, or augmenting the old. It is farther agreed, that towards the Expences of the Garrisons, &c. as aforesaid, a Million of Florins yearly, or 200,000 Crowns every three Months, shall also be paid to the States General, out of the most certain Revenues of the Provinces of the Spanish Low-Countries, which the late King of Spain was possessed of at the Time of his Death.

10. No Town, Place, Fort, or Territory of the Spanish Low-Countries shall be yielded, transferred, given,

A. D.
1712.

given, or descend to the Crown of France, or to any one of the French Line, whether by Virtue of Gift, Sale, Exchange, Marriage, Settlement, Inheritance, Succession, or otherwise; nor by any Title, or in any Manner whatsoever, shall any of the said Provinces be put into the Power, or under the Authority of the most Christian King, or any one of the French Line.

11. The Queen promises to use all her Endeavours to engage his Imperial Majesty to enter into a Treaty with the States General, agreeable to what has been above stipulated, relating to the Barrier above said.

12. The Supreme Authority being now in the Hands of the Queen of Great-Britain, and the States General, and most of the Towns garrisoned with their Troops, it is now stipulated that neither the Government of the Provinces shall be changed, nor the Garrisons drawn out of the Towns, till the Commerce and Concerns of the Subjects of her Majesty be adjusted to her Majesty's Satisfaction, and the Barrier of the States General be settled and secured in the Manner abovementioned.

13. That the Subjects of the Queen of Great Britain shall enjoy the same Privileges, Immunities, Liberties, and all manner of Advantages in Relation to Trade, as well for Importation as Exportation, which they ever enjoyed heretofore, in all the Places and Towns of the Spanish Low-Countries, and of the Barrier that is to be yielded to the States General. And shall moreover enjoy all the Privileges, Immunities, Liberties, and Advantages, which have been, or shall hereafter be granted to the Subjects of the States General in the Provinces of the Spanish Low-Countries, and of the Barrier. So that no Officer shall be suffered to hinder or delay the Passage of the Merchandizes belonging to the Subjects of Great-Britain. The States moreover promise that no Fraud shall be used, by lading Goods or Merchandize upon the Ships where in Provisions and military Stores (except from Custom) are laden. And to the End that such particular Rules and Conditions may be settled, as shall be necessary for the more effectual Performance of this Article, it is agreed that Commissioners be named on each Side, who shall meet to settle and adjust between themselves and with the Commissioners of his Imperial Majesty, if he pleases to name any, all Things relating to the Traffick and Commerce to be made in the Spanish Low-Countries, and the Places belonging to the Barrier.

14. And for the better and more certainly executing the Surety of these our Guarantees mutually undertaken by the Treaty, it is stipulated and agreed, that the Queen of Great-Britain, her Heirs or Successors shall, at the Request of the States General, and not otherwise, furnish the Succours hereafter expressed, to make good the Guaranty of the Barrier; and in like manner the Lords the States General shall, at the Request and not otherwise, of her Majesty, or her Heirs and Successors of the Protestant Line according to the Statutes of Great Britain, furnish the Succours hereafter mentioned, to make good the Guaranty of the Succession to the Crown of Great Britain. Which Succours to be furnished shall be sent according to the following Proportion; namely the Queen of Great-Britain, her Heirs and Successors, shall send 10,000 Foot to the Assistance of the States General; and the States General shall send to the Assistance of her Majesty, her Heirs and Successors, 6,000 Foot, provided with Arms, &c. and each Party shall also be obliged to fit out twenty Men of War well equipped and provided vided with all Necessaries; and the Succours aforesaid shall be maintained at the Expence of the Party that shall send them, for the Use and Benefit of the Party who shall have requested them. But if it shall happen that the Danger be so sudden that no time is left for Application, and so great as to require a greater Number of Forces and Ships of War; then each Party shall be obliged, being required by the other, to augment their Succours, to declare War against the Aggressor, and to join all their Forces by Land and Sea with the Forces of the Party attacked.

15. 'Tis agreed that all Kings, Princes and States that desire to come into this Treaty, may be invited and admitted into it, provided such Invitation and Admission proceed jointly, and not separately, from the Queen of Great-Britain and the Lords the States-General.

16. Her Majesty the Queen of Great-Britain, and the Lords the States-General, shall confirm and ratify all that is contained in the present Treaty, within the Space of four Weeks, &c.

The Ratifications were accordingly exchanged at Utrecht on the 21st of February.

On the 25th of February the King of Prussia died, and was succeeded by his Son.

The Imperial Ministers at last agreed to meet those of France, and had an Interview accordingly on the 31st of January, wherein an Agreement was proposed for transporting the Empress, and evacuating Catalonia, which after several Meetings was agreed to, and on the 14th of March the necessary Instruments for the Evacuations of Catalonia and the Neutrality of Italy, to which the Queen was Guarantee, were signed.

The Peace being thus far advanced, the French Court thought fit to let the Duke of Berry and the Duke of Orleans renounce the Crown of Spain, which they accordingly performed in the most solemn Manner, in the Parliament of Paris on the 15th of March. The Duke of Shrewsbury and Mr. Prior Plenipotentiaries of the Queen of Great-Britain being present, as was also the Duke d'Osuna on the Part of King Philip.

The British Minister had from Time to Time declared to those of the rest of the Allies, that they should sign the Queen's Peace without Delay. And finally, they executed it accordingly, on the 11th of April, N. S. On which Day the Plenipotentiaries of her Majesty and those of France, signed the Treaty of Peace and the Treaty of Commerce between the two Nations. The Ministers of Savoy came in also, and signed the Peace for their Master with the French. And on the same Day the Treaties of Peace between France and the Kings of Portugal and Prussia, as also the States General, were severally signed by the Ministers of the respective Potentates.

Thus was the War with France ended, on the Part of Great-Britain, Portugal, Holland, and Prussia. But the Emperor and Empire still stood out. For the Offers of France were so haughty, that the Imperialists could by no means listen to them. The French would not so much as own the Emperor's Title till after the Conclusion of the Peace. By mentioning the Rhine for a Barrier, they refused to give up Straßburg, which had been all along insisted upon, as well at the Treaty of Ryswick, as since. The French demanded that the Princess Ursina should possess considerable Territories in the Low Countries, at the Expence of the Emperor, altho' it was notorious that Lady had been perpetually doing the House of Austria.

A. D.
1713.

stria Mischief either in Italy or Spain. They insisted upon the entire Restoration of the Elector of Bavaria, to the extream Prejudice of the Emperor and Empire, and the Elector Palatine; they demanded also that the Elector of Hanover should be degraded from the Rank of Eighth Elector, and the Dignity of Arch Treasurer, which had been conferr'd upon him unanimously by the Emperor and the Empire, and this too in Contradiction to the Declaration of the Queen of Great Britain on the 6th of June last, and to what her Ministers had declar'd at Utrecht. They made also other Demands which could not be comply'd with, and so the War on that Side went on.

The Queen's Peace with Spain was not concluded till a Year after.

The Manner wherein England ended this War was the Subject of great Reflection throughout the World. The Desertion of our Allies in breach of the Grand Alliance was much rail'd at, but the Manner France dealt with us in the Peace, was what made us contemned by our Neighbours. 'Twas said, that altho' what our Ministers alledged had been true, namely that we bore a disproportionate Share in the War (which was nevertheless far from being so, for Experience has since demonstrated that both Holland and the Emperor find themselves extreamly more unable to get out of the Debts they then contracted, than England is) yet as England by the glorious Conquests of her Arms, had it in her Power to be Mistress of the Terms of Peace, it was Matter of Mirth to see France talk of owning the Queen's Title at the Conclusion of the Peace, to see the Pretender remove no farther than Lorain, to see an Equivalent insisted upon for Dunkirk, to see Cape Briton given as an Equivalent for the Restitution of Newfoundland and to see the Reduction of the Duties upon our Trade in France to be only obtain'd upon the Condition of our giving the same, and thereby impoverishing ourselves; and then too, to see those Goods which we then most beneficially sent thither (that is, Woollen Manufactory, Fish, Sugar, &c.) to be excepted out of this Condition. All the World expected that the Effect of our glorious Victories would at least have been the stripping the French King of the Conquests he made upon his Neighbours, in the many Wars he had commenced in the Course of his Reign; whereas by this Peace he was left in Possession of all that the Ryswick Treaty left him, and thereby all the great Success in the War acquired no Benefit to Europe. But when unskilful Men gain Access to a Prince, and are able to make their Counsels listened to, such must be the Case of the Nation subject to that Prince. After our Ministers had, without having Security in our own Hands for honourable Conditions (which very probably they intended to insist upon) so entirely given up their own Power, as the Duke of Ormond not fighting amounted to, there was an End of all hopes of obtaining any Thing but what the Enemy pleased: and he, we well knew, would please to give as little as possible.

We have said that the Duke of Shrewsbury was appointed her Majesty's Ambassador to the Court of France, where his Grace accordingly arriv'd on the 12th of January N. S. and was very graciously receiv'd. In like manner, the Duke of Aumont Ambassador of France arriv'd here on the 2d of January O. S. and on the 4th had Audience of her Majesty. He was very much caress'd by the Ministers, and complimented plimented by those of the Nobility whom he visited ; but with all the Artifices he used (throwing out Money among the People as he passed in his Coach through the Streets) he could not acquire any real esteem among the People of Understanding. The Publick Credit (that is, the Funds) sunk upon his coming, and the general Vogue murmured at his Arrival and Entertainment before due Satisfaction was given, upon the Subjects on which the War was begun. On the 26th of January the House he lived in (which was that of the Lord Powis in Ormond Street) accidentally took Fire, and was burnt down ; after which the Queen gave him leave to reside at Somerset House, where he lived the rest of the time he tarried here ; and by Balls, Entertainments and Masquerades, laboured to entertain the Gentry, and cajole the People into favour towards the French.

On the 7th of April, the Lord Harcourt, Keeper of the Great Seal was declared Lord Chancellor of Great-Britain. And on the 9th of the same Month the Parliament met at Westminster, to whom her Majesty made a most gracious Speech, intimating the Conclusion of the Peace, for which both Houses made Addresses of Thanks.

On the 7th of May the House of Commons voted a Supply for 30,000 seamen to serve the first six Months of the Year. On the 8th they voted 636,888 l. 14 s. for the Land Forces. On the 13th of May it was resolved, that 10,000 Men be allowed for the Sea Service for the last seven Months of the Year. And that 100,000 l. be given for the Ordinary of the Navy. And on the 2d of June 3,281 l. 1 s. 6 d. for Guards and Garrisons for half the Year, and afterwards the same Sum for the other half of the Year. To raise which they granted a Land Tax of Two Shillings in the Pound, &c.

On the 28th of April the Ratifications of the Treaty of Peace were exchanged at Utrecht, and being brought over, the Peace was proclaimed at London on the 5th of May.

On the 9th of May her Majesty sent a Message to the House of Commons in these Words :

As it is the undoubted Prerogative of the Crown to make Peace and War, I have ratified the Treaties of Peace and Commerce with France, which had been signed by my Order ; and have concluded a Treaty with Spain, which will be signed at Utrecht as soon as the Spanish Ministers are arrived there. I determined from the first, on this extraordinary Occasion, to communicate these Treaties to my Parliament, and have therefore now ordered them to be laid before this House.

Accordingly Copies of the Treaty were delivered in. And the 8th and 9th Articles of the Treaty of Commerce being excepted against, it was resolved those two Articles should be taken into Consideration. Which being begun accordingly on the 14th, occasioned great Debates. However upon the Plurality of Votes a Bill was ordered to be brought in to make effectual those two Articles. The Trading Part of the Nation were extremely alarmed at this Bill, for as by those Articles the Duties on French Wines were reduced to the same that were laid on those from Portugal, in direct Contradiction to the Treaties already made with Portugal, all the profitable Trade we had for several Years past been carrying on with the Nation was at once knocked down and destroyed ; and as at the same Time, France had excepted out of the Tariff of 1664, several of those sorts of Merchandize,

M m

A. D.
1713.

dize, the Exportation whereof was of the most Importance, because the most beneficial to England, it was plainly seen that France left not to England the Chance for Equality of Trade, but being resolved to make the full Profit in Money, of that Passion our Gentry have for their Wines, Brandies, Silks, Linnens, and Toys, had taken Advantage of the Ascendancy they had gained over our Ministry, by the Fatal Non-fighting Order. And it no less appeared that These, to keep up their Credit, spared no Pains to get what they had stipulated, ratified by Parliament; which they pursued, notwithstanding it was in the Course of the Argument clearly made out, that upon the Terms they had agreed to, the Balance of Trade would have amounted to above a Million of Pounds Sterling per Annum, to the Advantage of France. But Reason and the Publick Good gained the Victory, and the judicious Men among us, altho' not interested in Trade, could not but have the utmost Indignation at this mean Prostitution of our Honour and Profit, even after such glorious Victories as ought to have given us the Right of prescribing Terms of Profit to ourselves, and not let France dictate what was indeed extremely advantageous to her, but must in the End have proved our Ruin. So that the Debates in Conversation, the Pamphlets printed upon this Occasion, and the Pleadings of the Merchants before the House (whereby the extream Folly of this Condescension to France was most manifestly illustrated) staggered the Ministry; and altho' too great a Number of the Members of the House of Commons were strangely deluded, and went on in this grand Mistake, yet could they not gain their Point, for even Sir Thomas Hanmer himself made a Speech on the 18th of June, when this Bill stood committed to the whole House, to this Purpose, That before he had examined the Affair in question to the bottom, he had given his Vote for the bringing in the Bill to make effectual the 8th and 9th Articles of the Treaty of Commerce; but that having afterwards maturely weighed and considered the Allegations of the Merchants, Traders, and Manufacturers, in their several Petitions and Representations, he was convinced, that the passing this Bill would be of great Prejudice to the Woollen and Silk Manufacturies of this Kingdom; consequently increase the Number of the Poor, and so in the End affect the Land. That while he had the Honour to sit in that House, he would never be blindly led by any Ministry; neither on the other hand was he byassed by what might weigh with some Men, viz. the Fear of losing their Elections: But that the Principles upon which he acted were the Interest of his Country, and the Conviction of his Judgment, and upon these two Considerations alone he was against the Bill. This Speech, added to the many excellent Arguments brought by the Traders, in their Pleadings before the House, and the many Petitions brought from all Parts against the Bill, produced a Majority (of 194 against 185) against engrossing the Bill.

On the 20th of May Dr. Spranger Bishop of Rocheſter and Dean of Westminster departed this Life. About 3 Weeks after Dr. Atterbury Dean of Chriſt-Church, Oxon, was named to ſucceed him, and Dr. Smallridge Dean of Carlisle was made Dean of Chriſt Church.

On the 25th of June Mr. Chancellor of the Exchequer preſented to the Houſe of Commons a Meſſage from her Maſteſty, importing, 'Th' her Maſteſty thinks fit to acquaint the Houſe with the Difficulties which in a particular Manner

A. D.

1713.

lies under by the Debts contracted in her Civil Government, occasioned by several extraordinary Expences formerly incurr'd; so that her Majesty thinks herself obliged in Justice to many Creditors, to order an Estimate to be laid before the House of what was owing on the Civil List in the Year 1710, and desired the House to empower her Majesty to raise so much Money on the Civil List Funds, as may enable her to discharge the Debts, &c.

Which Message being the next Day taken into Consideration in a Committee of the whole House, it was declared by an eminent Member, 'That to his certain Knowledge the Debts of the Civil List, in the Month of August 1710, did not amount to above 150,000 l. For the Payment of Part of which Sum, there were some Monies standing out, besides great Quantities of Tin; whereas by the Estimate now laid before the Commons the said Debts to Midsummer 1710, that is, two Months before, were made to amount to 400,000 l. However it was voted that her Majesty should be empowered to appropriate 35,000 l. per Annum for 32 Years, to raise, by such Methods as her Majesty should appoint, the Sum of 50,000 l. to discharge the Arrears and Debts owing to her Servants or others: And that the said yearly Sums be charg'd upon the Funds granted for the Civil Lists. Which was enacted accordingly, and the Sum raised by a Lottery.

The 7th of July being appointed a Day of Publick Thanksgiving for the Peace, both Houses of Parliament went with great Solemnity to St Paul's Cathedral to celebrate it. Her Majesty, who had intended to do the same, was prevented by Indisposition. In the Evening a very fine Firework, built on Barges in the Thames before Whitehall, was let off, and the Bells, Bonfires, Illuminations, and Acclamations proclaimed the People's Joy.

On the 16th of July the Queen came to the House of Lords, to which the Commons being call'd up as usual, her Majesty passed several Bills, and made a most gracious Speech; after which the Parliament was prorogued to the 28th of August.

We have omitted two Matters that pass'd this Parliament, namely, That on the 3d of June the Commons address'd the Queen, desiring to know what was the Equivalent to be given to the French King for the Demolition of Dunkirk, &c. To which her Majesty, on the 20th of that Month, answer'd, That the Equivalent was already in the Hands of the King of France. And that both Houses address'd the Queen to desire that her Majesty would be pleased to use her most pressing Instances with the Duke of Lorraine, and with all Princes and States in Amity and Correspondence with her Majesty, that they will not receive or suffer to continue within any of their Dominions, the Pretender to the Imperial Crown of these Realms.

On the 14th July, Robert Benson, Esq; Chancellor of the Exchequer, was created a Peer of Great-Britain, by the Title of Baron of Bingley.

About this Time a Person arrived here, named Tugghe, deputed by the Magistrates of Dunkirk, to solicit the Queen to spare the Harbour and Port of that Town. But this was what could not be granted.

On the 7th of July Dr. Compten, who had been many Years Lord Bishop of London, departed this Life in the 81st Year of his Age. And was soon after succeeded by Dr. Robinson, Bishop of Bristol, Lord Privy Seal, and her Majesty's Plenipotentiary at the Congress at the Hague, who was succeeded in the See of Bristol, by Dr. Smalridge Dean of Christ-Church, and in the Privy Seal by the Earl of Dartmouth.

A. D.
1714.

The Parliament having sat out (near upon) its three Years, a Proclamation was published on the 18th of August to dissolve it, and appoint another to be chosen against the 12th of November.

On the 30th of August Duke D'Aumont had his Audience of leave, and soon after returned to France. The Duke of Shrewsbury was also by that Time returned to London from his Embassy to that Court.

On the 26th of September the Demolition of Dunkirk was begun, under the Inspection of Col. Armstrong and Col. Clayton appointed by Patent under the Great Seal Commissioners for that Purpose.

In the same Month the Marquiss de Miremont arrived at London from Utrecht, and waited upon the Queen to thank her for the Release of 136 Protestants, who by her Procurement were dismissed the Gallies of France, and to desire her good Offices for the Deliverance of 185 more of those poor Sufferers still remaining in the same Tribulation.

The Elections for the Parliament of Great-Britain were now carried on with great Warmth by the two Parties.

On the 17th of February the Parliament met, and Sir Thomas Hanmer was chosen Speaker of the House of Commons. On the 2d of March her Majesty made her Speech, wherein she signified the Conclusion of the Treaties of Peace and Commerce with Spain, asked the necessary Supplies of the Commons, complained of seditious Papers and factious Rumours, and recommended Unity, &c. For which most gracious Speech both Houses presented their Addresses of Thanks.

On the 2d of February Dr. Sharp, Lord Archbishop of York departed this Life; To succeed whom her Majesty immediately named Sir William Dawes Lord Bishop of Chester, and soon after Dr. Gastrell was named Bishop of Chester.

It was on the 1st of March that the Peace between Great-Britain and Spain was proclaimed at London with the usual Solemnities; wherein the Duke of Anjou, Grandson of France, is acknowledged to be Catholic King.

The Emperor, as we have said, could not accept of the Conditions that had been proposed at Utrecht, and chose rather to continue the War; but the Loss of the two Fortresses of Landau and Friburg, which the French took last Campaign, inclined him to listen to the Overtures of Peace that were made to him on the part of France, and Conferences of an Accommodation were about this Time begun to be held at Rastadt between Prince Eugene of Savoy and Marshal Villars. And by the middle of March the Terms for a Peace were concluded, which were to be explained and compleated in the future solemn Treaty to be held at Baden in Switzerland.

The Parliament of Great-Britain went on with the Business before them. They voted 10,000 Men for the Sea Service, and 245,700 l. for the Ordinary of the Navy, 386,427 l. for Guards and Garrisons. And on the 24th of May 107,831 l. for the Forces in Flanders and at Dunkirk till Michaelmas together with the Monies necessary for maintaining the Forces in the West-Indies, for the Half Pay Officers, &c. To raise which, and the Money for the South Sea Company, they gave the Land Tax for 28 in the Pound, the Malt Tax, and several Duties upon Coals, Stamps, Leather, &c. for a Fund of 105,000 l. per Annum, to raise 1,400,000 l. by way of Lottery.

About the Middle of April the French began in earnest to fill up the Harbour of Dunkirk, and demolished the Citadel. But at the same time they began also to make a Canal at Mardike, which would have served for all the Purposes the Harbour of Dunkirk had done. They proceeded with great Industry in this Work, and had very nigh brought it to Perfection before the Death of King Lewis XIV. notwithstanding the Application made on our Part against it; especially after his present Majesty came to the Crown: But by the Resolution of King George it is now demolished.

On the 24th of May the Duke of Beauford died, and was succeeded in his Honours and Estates by his Son.

The French Minister at this Time notified to the Queen the Death of the Duke of Berry, who died on the 4th of May 1714, N. S. after four Days Sickness, and thereby the whole numerous Family of King Lewis XIV. (which he so much prized himself in) were reduced to the single Person of the young Dauphin late Duke of Bretaign; except Philip now on the Throne of Spain.

The Spirits of the Jacobite Party being at this Time high, the House of Lords addressed her Majesty against the Pretender; which occasioned a Proclamation, dated June 21, offering a Reward of 5,000 l. to any who should apprehend the Pretender landed, or attempting to land, in Great-Britain or Ireland. Which the House of Commons were so pleased with, that they voted an Address of Thanks, and therein declared they would grant One Hundred Thousand Pounds more out of the first Aids, to any who should perform so great Service. The Lords also made an Address of Thanks for this Proclamation.

On the 25th of June the Bill intitled, An Act to prevent the Growth of Schism, &c. having pass'd both Houses, received the Royal Assent. Which Act being since repeal'd, 'tis needless to say more of it.

On the 25th of April, Baron Schutz (who was a Minister of the Elector of Hanover) made a Visit to the Lord Chancellor, and, after usual Civilities, ask'd of his Lordship, in the Name of the Electoral Prince, to make out a Writ for his Electoral Highness's sitting in the House of Peers as Duke of Cambridge. The Lord Chancellor reply'd, it was not usual to make out Writs for Peers that were out of the Kingdom, however, he would apply to her Majesty for Directions, and a Council being that Evening call'd, her Majesty gave Direction for the Writ accordingly. But the Queen resenting the Manner of Baron Schutz's demanding it, by applying to the Lord Chancellor, and not to herself, she caused him to be forbid the Court, and soon after he return'd to Hanover.

This Matter made a great Noise, and occasion'd various Speculations, especially in the Minds of the Ministry, and so far affected the Queen, that her Majesty wrote Letters to the Court of Hanover in very expostulatory Terms thereupon. These Letters bore Date, May 19, 1714. And on the 8th of June, N. S. the Princess Sophia departed this Life, being seized with a Fit of an Apoplexy, as she was walking in her Garden, a Day or two after she had read the Queen's Letter.

On the 2d of July the House of Lords took into Consideration the Treaty of Peace and Commerce

M m 3

with

A. D.

1714.

A. D.

1714.

with Spain, and after long Debates, and hearing the Merchants concerned, during the several Days they were upon it, (wherein the Lord-Treasurer seemed to favour the Merchants, whom the Lord Bolingbroke strenuously opposed) they resolved to present to her Majesty the following Representation:

‘ Most Gracious Sovereign, We
 ‘ your Majesty’s most Dutiful and ‘ Loyal Subjects the Lords Spiritual and Temporal in Parliament ‘ assembled, having taken into our ‘ serious Consideration the present ‘ State of Trade between your Majesty’s Subjects and Spain, do beg ‘ leave humbly to represent to your ‘ Majesty, That upon the Examination of Merchants at the Bar, and ‘ perusing and considering several ‘ Representations and Papers laid ‘ before us by your Commissioners ‘ of Trade, it appears to us, that ‘ the carrying on the Trade between your Majesty’s Dominions
 ‘ and Spain, on the Foot of the present Treaty of Commerce, as it ‘ stands ratified with the three explanatory Articles, is attended with ‘ insuperable Difficulties; and therefore we earnestly beseech your ‘ Majesty to use such effectual Means ‘ for procuring such Alterations to ‘ be made in the same, as may ‘ render the said Trade practicable
 ‘ and beneficial to your Majesty’s ‘ People.

These Debates, together with a Competition that was seen to be arisen between the two chief Ministers, hasten’d the Conclusion of the Session; so that on the 9th of July her Majesty came to the House, and having pass’d the Acts, and made her Speech, the Parliament was prorogued to the 10th of August.

The Animosity which had for some Time past privately existed between the Lord Treasurer and the Lord Bolingbroke, broke out into an open Rupture as soon as the Parliament was up, so the Queen (who had for a great while been in but a weakly State of Health) was perpetually tormented with their Brangles; she often made a Reconciliation, but Bolingbroke not being able to bear the being Second in the Ministry, labour’d so hard in tripping up the Heels of the other, that he prevailed at last. And on the 27th of July her Majesty took the Treasurer’s Staff from the Earl of Oxford.

This Removal occasion’d such Division, Confusion and Contention at Court, and gave the sickly Queen such Trouble and Vexation, that in the general Opinion it brought upon her Majesty the Fit that ended in her Death. It is certain very warm Expostulations and most bitter Reproaches pass’d in the Queen’s hearing, between the falling Minister and those who were the immediate Promoters of his Disgrace, which undoubtedly very much shocked and perplexed her Majesty.

The Removal was so sudden also, that no Care had been previously taken for filling up his Place; nor indeed when the Cabinet Council met that Night, and sat till Two in the Morning, could they agree upon the Commissioners to be for the present made Use of; neither could the Council, which sat next Day, conclude upon it, those to whom they were willing to offer it, declining the Employment. On the 29th the Sitting of the Cabinet Council was put off by the Reason of the Queen’s Indisposition, which she was sensible was occasion’d by the Quarrel among her Ministers, and declar’d to her nearest Attendants, she should not outlive it.

Her Majesty continued extremely ill the remaining Days of her Life, being frequently taken with Lethargick and almost Apoplectick Fits.

Fits, v port, c that sh ready the D though cil Ch dinary mon’d posed Lord concu him th

Th into th to tha ders
 King
 which negle led, a ken t in Ca
 And tream
 a Lett to giv
 the ill
 which
 Mr. C

C
 and Brita tled so ne vern ved b Lerv
 ral of

Fits, which occasioned a current Report, on the Friday before the Sunday that she died, that she was dead already. But being come to herself, the Dukes of Somerset and Argyll thought it proper to enter the Council Chamber upon this so extraordinary an Occasion, altho' not summon'd for some Time past, and proposed the Duke of Shrewsbury for Lord High Treasurer, which the rest concurred in, and her Majesty gave him the Staff accordingly.

The coming of these two Lords into the Council gave a new Spirit to that Body, and immediate Orders were given for putting the Kingdom into a State of Defence, which had been of late too much neglected. The Guards were doubled, and all possible Precaution taken to preserve the publick Peace, in Case of her Majesty's Demise. And her Majesty continuing extremely ill, on Saturday they wrote a Letter to the Elector of Brunswick, to give his Highness an Account of the ill State of the Queen's Health, which was sent away Express by Mr. Craggs. They also ordered the Garrison of Portsmouth, which had been strangely neglected, to be reinforced. Ordered Brigadier Wetham down into Scotland; appointed the Earl of Berkley to command the Fleet; and finally took all possible Care to secure the quiet Succession in the Throne to his Electoral Highness, our present gracious Sovereign King George.

On Sunday the 1st of August, between Seven and Eight in the Morning, her Majesty Queen Anne expired, in the 50th Year of her Age, being born the 6th of February 1664-5, and in the 13th Year of her Reign; having sat on the Throne from the 8th of March 1701-2, and so reigned 12 Years, 4 Months, and 23 Days.

Her Death was extremely lamented by her Subjects, who, during her whole Reign, had an entire Affection for her.

She died without Issue, altho' she had been Mother of many Children, but they all died young, except the Duke of Gloucester, who lived, as we have said, to the Tenth Year of his Age.

A. D.

1714.

G E O R G E I.

ON the Demise of the late Queen Anne without Issue, the Princess Sophia, on whom and her Issue the Crown of Great-Britain in such Case had been settled by Act of Parliament, dying also near two Months before, the Government of these Kingdoms devolved by Law on her eldest Son George Lewis. at that Time Prince Electoral of Brunswick Lunenburg.

The most illustrious Princess Sophia was the fifth and youngest Daughter of Frederick V. Elector Palatine and King of Bohemia, and of Elizabeth eldest Daughter of James I. King of Great Britain. She was born at the Hague the 13th of October 1630, and in the Year 1658, was married to Ernest Augustus Duke of Brunswick Lunenburg, who in the Year 1692, was made an 1714.

M m 4

Electors

A. D.

Electoꝛ of the sacred Roman Empire by Leopald I. Emperor of Germany.

George I. was born the 28th of May, 1660, married Sophia Dorothy his Cousin-german the 11th of November 1682, and succeeded his Father in all his Dominions and Titles (except that of the Bishop of Osnaburgh) in the Year 1698.

As there was a considerable Party among us, who were no Friends to the Settlement of the British Crown on this illustrious Family, and the Heir thereto had his Residence in Germany during the Life of the late Queen, the Parliament, in the fourth Year of her Reign, wisely provided against any Disturbance which might happen on her Majesty's Dissolution, and appointed certain Persons to manage the publick Affairs of the Kingdom, till the King's Arrival here. Proper Instruments had likewise been deposited by the Electoral Prince, under his Hand and Seal, in the Custody of the Archbishop of Canterbury, the Lord Chancellor, and Monsieur Kreyenberg, the Elector's Resident here, empowering some others to act, during his Absence, in Conjunction with those appointed by Act of Parliament.

Upon the first Notice of her Majesty's Decease, great Numbers of Lords and Gentlemen assembled at St. James's Palace; where the afore-said three Instruments were produced, and publickly read. The seven Persons appointed by the Act were, the Archbishop of Canterbury, then Dr. Thomas Tennison; the Lord Chancellor, Simon Lord Harcourt; the Lord President, John Duke of Buckingham; the Lord Treasurer, Charles Duke of Shrewsbury; the Lord Privy Seal, William Earl of Dartmouth; the first Lord Commissioner of the Admiralty, Thomas Earl of Strafford; and the Lord Chief Justice of the King's Bench,

Sir Thomas Parker; the Archbishop of York, Sir William Dawes; the Dukes of Shrewsbury, Somerset, Bolton, Devonshire, Kent, Argyll, Montross, and Roxborough; the Earls of Pembroke, Anglesea, Carlisle, Nottingham, Abingdon, Scarborough, and Orford; the Lord Viscount Townshend, Lord Halifax, and Lord Cowper, were nominated Regents by his Electoral Highness. His Majesty, by Order of the Council, was proclaimed at London the same Day, with the usual Solemnities, to the great Joy of all those who wished well to the Hanover Succession. The Parliament met in the Afternoon at Westminster, pursuant to an Act 5 Annæ; and the Speaker being then in Wales, Mr. Secretary Fromley moved that the House should be adjourned to Wednesday following; but being answered by Sir Richard Onslow and others, that it was too critical a Juncture to lose any Time, they adjourned only to the next Day, when the Members of both Houses, who were present, qualified themselves by taking the Oaths appointed by Law. His Majesty was also proclaimed, with great Acclamations, at Edinburgh on the fifth, and at Dublin on the sixth of the same Month.

An Account of the Queen's being past all Hopes of Recovery had before been dispatched to the Elector, and that Day Baron Bothmar sent his Secretary with an Express of her actual Death, and of his Majesty's being joyfully proclaimed.

The Lords Justices finding the Army and Fleet to have been much neglected for some Time past, took the necessary Precautions to guard against a Surprise; ordered such Officers as they could trust to their respective Posts, and appointed Mr. Addison to be their Secretary, giving him Orders to receive the Dispatches directed to the Lord Bolingbroke.

broke at that time Secretary of State.

August 5, A Proclamation was issued requiring all Persons in Office at the Queen's Demise to continue in the Execution of the same. The same Day the Lords Justices went to the House of Peers, and the Lord Chancellor, in the Name of the rest, made a Speech to both Houses, wherein he acquainted them, That nothing had been omitted since the Queen's Death, which might contribute to the Safety of these Realms, in this great Conjunction; that they had, in Conjunction with the Council, proclaimed our lawful and rightful Sovereign King George; and the Parliament then sitting being assembled in pursuance of the Acts of Settlement, and several Branches of the publick Revenue being expired by the Demise of her late Majesty, they recommended to them to make such Provisions in that Respect, as might be requisite to support the Honour and Dignity of the Crown, and exhorted them with the greatest Earnestness to a perfect Unanimity and firm Adherence to their Sovereign's Interest, as the only Means to continue the present Tranquility.

Hereupon both Houses drew up Addresses to his Majesty, assuring him of their great Affection and ready Adherence to his Service, as well as their impatient Desire of his safe Arrival and Presence in Great-Britain; which being transmitted to his Majesty, were very kindly received, and answered by him with Assurance of using his constant Endeavours to secure them the full Enjoyment of their Religion, Laws, and Liberties, and that he would hasten his Arrival among them.

August 16, about 7 in the Morning, Mr. Craggs arrived at Hanover, and rode directly to Herenhausen; the same Night several other Expresses arrived there with the News of the Queen's Death, which were communicated to his Majesty about Two in the Morning, and received by him with much Serenity, of Countenance and Composure of Mind. And a few Days after Te Deum was sung in the several Churches of the Electorate on that Occasion.

The yearly Fund of 116,573 l. 12s. being granted by Parliament, during the Term of 32 Years, for the Support of his Majesty's Household and the Dignity of the Crown, and such other Business as lay before them being dispatched, the Lords Justices went to the House of Peers August 21, and gave the Royal Assent to the Bills for the Support of his Majesty's Household, for rectifying Mistakes in Commissioners Names for the Land Tax, and for enabling Persons residing in Great Britain to qualify themselves there for continuing in their respective Employments in Ireland. Upon which the two Houses adjourned to August 25, were then prorogued to September 23, next following.

August 24, was performed the Solemnity of her late Majesty's Funeral; the Lords, Peeres, and others, who were to attend on this Service, met about 7 in the Evening in the House of Peers, and Places adjacent, whence being called out in order by the Officers of Arms, they proceeded about 10 through the Prince's Chamber into the Palace-Yard, and from thence to the South-east Door of the Abbey, one of the great Guns of the Tower firing every Minute, till the Interment. The royal Corps was born under a Canopy of Purple Velvet, preceded by a great Number of her Servants, the Judges, Privy Counsellors, the Lords Spiritual and Temporal, and the great Officers of the Crown. The Pall was supported by six Dukes. Her Grace the 1714.

A. D.

A. D.
1714.

the Dutcheſs of Ormond (in the Abſence of the Dutcheſs of Somerſet, who was then indiſpoſed) was chief Mourner, being ſupported by the Dukes of Somerſet and Richmond in long Cloaks, wearing their Collars of the Order; her Train was born up by two Dutcheſſes, aſſiſted by the Vice-Chamberlain, and followed up by two Dutcheſſes, at the Head of fourteen Counteſſes as Aſſiſtants, all in long Veils of black Crape; and after them followed the Ladies of the Bed-chamber and the Maids of Honour in like Veils; and the Bed-chamber Women, and Gentlemen Penſioners, cloſed the Proceſſion. At the Entrance into the Church, the Dean, Prebends, and Choir, received the Royal Body with an Anthem, and marching before Norroy King of Arms, who carried the Crown and Cuſhion, they proceeded ſinging to the Chapel of King Henry VII. where being arrived, the Body was depoſited on Treſſels, while the Funeral Service was performing by the Dean of Weſtmiſter, and was afterwards interred in the ſame Vault with her late Conſort Prince George of Denmark.

A few Days after died Dr. Edward Fowler, Biſhop of Glouceſter, and Dr. John Moor, Biſhop of Ely, who had both been very zealous in his Maſteſty's Cauſe, as well as Ornaments to their Profeſſion.

But to leave this mournful Scene; the King having committed the Government of his German Dominions to a Council, and made other neceſſary Diſpoſitions for his Journey, ſet out from Herenhaufen September 5. and five Days after arrived at the Hague, where he was complimented by the Deputies of the States on Account of his Acceſſion to the Throne of Great-Britain, and his welcome Arrival amongſt them. His Maſteſty continued there ſome time and received the Compliments of the Marquiſs de Chateaufneuf, Ambaſſador of France; the Duke d'Oſſuna and Marquiſs de Montelion, Plenipotentiaries of Spain, and the Count de Tarouca and Don Lewis de Achuna, Plenipotentiaries of Portugal. After which the King and Prince, having taken their Leave of the Deputies of the States, embarked for England with a fair Wind, convoyed by a Squadron of Britiſh and Dutch Men of War, commanded by the Earl of Berkley; and the next Day arrived at the Hope near Graveſend about nine in the Evening, and the Day following at Greenwich, where they were received by the Duke of Northumberland, Captain of the Guard, and the Lords Juſtices. His Maſteſty choſe to walk on Foot to his Houſe in the Park, whither he was accompanied by moſt of the Nobility, and great Numbers of the principal Gentry, through vaſt Crowds of joyful Spectators.

On Monday, Sept. 20, the King and Prince made their publick Entry through the City, attended with above two Hundred Coaches and ſix (richly bedecked with Ribbands and other Ornaments) belonging to the Nobility and Gentry; the Lord Mayor, Aldermen, Recorder, and other Officers of the City attending in their Formalities, the ſeveral Companies, with their Enſigns lining the Streets from Stocks-Market to St. Paul's Church-yard, and the City Trainbands guarded the Way to Temple-Bar. From thence the Steward, High-Bailiff, and Burgeſſes of Weſtmiſter, in their Gowns attended by the Conſtables and other Officers with the Enſigns of their ſeveral Offices lined the Way and the Weſtmiſter Militia guarded the reſt of their Paſſage to St. James's Palace; the Tower Guns firing when his Maſteſty took Coach, and when he passed over London Bridge, and the Cannon in the Park, with three Salvo's declar'd their safe Arrival at the Royal Palace.

Two Days after, his Majesty in Council having taken and subscribed the Oath required by Law relating to the Security of the Church of Scotland, made the following Declaration :

Having in my Answers to the Addresses of both Houses of Parliament fully expressed my Resolution to defend the religious and civil Rights of all my Subjects, there remains very little for me to say upon this Occasion ; Yet being willing to omit no Opportunity of giving all possible Assurances to a People who have already deserved so well of me ; I take this Occasion also to express to you my firm Purpose to do all that is in my Power for the supporting and maintaining the Churches of England and Scotland, as they are severally by Law established ; which I am of Opinion may be effectually done without the least impairing the Toleration allowed by Law to Protestant Dissenters, so agreeable to Christian Charity, and so necessary to the Trade and Riches of this Kingdom. The good Effects of making Property secure are no where so clearly seen, and to so great a Degree, as in this happy Kingdom ; and I assure you, that there is not any among you shall more earnestly endeavour the Preservation of it than myself.

Soon after this the Prince was introduc'd into the Privy Council, and several Changes made in the Administration ; the great Seal was committed to the Lord Cowper, the Earl of Nottingham made Lord President of the Council, the Earl of Wharton Keeper of the Privy Seal, the Earl of Sunderland Lord Lieutenant of Ireland, the Duke of Marlborough Captain General of the Forces, and the Duke of Devonshire

Steward of his Majesty's Household ; who had all signaliz'd themselves in the Defence of his Majesty's Succession, when attacked by the late Ministry. The former Privy Council was dissolv'd, and a new one appointed.

The two Universities, the Bishop and Clergy of London and Westminster, the City of London, the General Assembly of the Church of Scotland, the Protestants in Ireland, and great Numbers of other Cities and Places, made their Addresses to his Majesty, congratulating him on his joyful Accession to the Throne.

October 11. her Royal Highness the Princess of Wales, with the Princesses Anne and Amelia, her Daughters, arriv'd in England.

October 20. his Majesty was crown'd at Westminster, with the usual Solemnities, and great Rejoicings were made in most Places on that Occasion ; but at Bristol, Chippenham in Wilts, Birmingham, Norwich, Reading, and some other Towns, the disaffected Populace began to shew their Dislike of the present Government, by committing several Disorders in the Streets, interrupting the publick Rejoicings made by the King's Friends, assaulting the Houses, and breaking the Windows of those who had illuminated them to express their Joy on this Solemn Occasion. And not long after the same Party discover'd their rebellious Inclinations in London, where very great Mobs were raised to the no small Disturbance and Prejudice of his Majesty's peaceable Subjects. Inasmuch that a Proclamation was issued Nov. 2. to suppress such disorderly Tumults. About this Time likewise many seditious Libels were publish'd and cry'd about the Streets, and the Lord Mayor of London had a Letter of Thanks from the Secretary of State, by the King's Order, for his Diligence 1714.

A. D.

Diligence in causing several Hawkers of them to be apprehended.

About this Time his Majesty advanc'd the Salaries of the Judges, the Chief of each Bench being allow'd 2,000*l.* per Annum, and the others 1,500*l.* apiece. And Dr. William Fleetwood, was made Bishop of Ely, Dr. Richard Willis Bishop of Gloucester, Dr. Wynne Bishop of St. Asaph, Dr. Goodwin Bishop of Kilmore, Dr. Synge Bishop of Raphoe, and Dr. Foster Bishop of Killaloe in Ireland.

Some Copies of the Pretender's Declaration, asserting his Right to the British Crown, dated at Plombiers, August 29, 1714. having been brought by the French Mail, and sent to several of the Nobility, were by them communicated to the Secretaries of State; upon which the Marquis de Lamberti, the Duke of Lorrain's Minister, was forbid the Court, and a Proclamation was issued December 6, requiring all Papists and Nonjurors to repair to their respective Places of Abode, and not to remove thence unless licensed so to do according to Law, and that the Justices and other Officers concern'd, should strictly put in Execution the several Laws made on that Behalf.

The Disaffection, which appeared chiefly among People of inferior Rank, was suppos'd to be very much owing to the Conduct and Doctrines of some Clergymen, who omitted to recognize the King's Title in their Prayers, before their Sermons; and instead of praying for his Majesty in the usual and proper Form, commonly began the Prayers with You shall pray for, &c. Upon which Account, and to prevent the Disputes concerning the Doctrine of the Trinity, which was now also warmly canvass'd, his Majesty, by the Advice of the Privy Council, was pleas'd to issue the following Directions, dated at St. James's the 11th of December 1714, to the Archbishops and Bishops.

George R.

Most reverend and right reverend Fathers in God, we greet you well: Whereas we are given to understand that there have of late been great Differences among some of the Clergy of this our Realm about their Ways of expressing themselves in their Sermons and Writings concerning the Doctrine of the blessed Trinity: And whereas also unusual Liberties have been taken by several of the said Clergy, in intermeddling with the Affairs of State and Government, and the Constitution of the Realm; both which may be of very dangerous Consequence, if not timely prevented: We therefore out of our Princely Care and Zeal for the Preservation of the Peace and Unity of the Church, together with the Purity of the Christian Faith, and also for preserving the Peace and Quiet of the State, have thought fit to send you these following Directions, which we straitly charge and command you to publish, and to see that they be observ'd within your several Dioceses.

I. That no Preacher whatsoever, in his Sermon or Lecture, do presume to deliver any other Doctrine concerning the blessed Trinity, than what is contain'd in the holy Scriptures, and is agreeable to the three Creeds, and the thirty nine Articles of Religion.

II. That in the Explication of this Doctrine, they carefully avoid all new Terms, and confine themselves to such Ways of Expression, as have been commonly used in the Church.

III. That Care be taken in this Matter especially to observe the fifty third Canon of this Church, which forbids publick Opposition between Preachers; because (as that Canon expresses expresses it) there groweth thereby much Offence and Disquietness unto the People: And that above all Things they abstain from bitter Invektives and Curriolous Laaguage against all Persons whatsoever.

IV. That none of the Clergy, in their Sermons, or Lectures, presume to intermeddle in any Affairs of State or Government, or the Constitution of the Realm, save only such special Feasts and Fasts, as are or shall be appointed by Publick Authority; and then no farther than the Occasion of such Days shall strictly require. Provided always, that nothing in this Direction shall be understood to discharge any Person from preaching in Defence of our regal Supremacy establish'd by Law, as often, and in such Manner, as the first Canon of this Church doth require.

V. That the foregoing Directions be also observ'd by those who write any thing concerning the said Subjects.

VI. Whereas we are also credibly informed, that it is the Manner of some in every Diocese, before their Sermon, either to use a Collect and the Lord's Prayer, or the Lord's Prayer only (which the fifty fifth Canon prescribes as the Conclusion of the Prayer, and not the whole Prayer) or at least to leave out our Titles, by the said Canon required to be declared and recognized; we do farther direct, that you require your Clergy, in their Prayer before the Sermon, that they do keep strictly to the Form in the said Canon contained, or to the Effect thereof.

VII. And whereas we also understand, that divers Persons who are not of the Clergy, have of late presumed not only to talk and to dispute against the Christian Faith, concerning the Doctrine of the blessed Trinity, but also to write and publish Books and Pamphlets against the same, and industriously spread them through the Kingdom, contrary to the known Laws in that behalf made and enacted; and particularly to one Act of Parliament made in the Ninth Year of King William III. intituled, An Act for the more effectual suppressing of Blasphemy and Profaneness: We taking all the Matters abovementioned into our royal and serious Consideration, and being desirous to do what in us lies to put a Stop to these Disorders, do strictly charge and command you, together with all other Means suitable to your holy Profession, to make use of your Authority according to Law, for the repressing and restraining of all such exorbitant Practices. And for your Assistance, we will give Charge to our Judges, and all other civil Officers, to do their Duty herein, in executing the said Act, and all other Laws, against all such Persons as shall by these Means give Occasion of Scandal, Discord, and Disturbance in our Church and Kingdom.

The late Ministry foreseeing that they should be call'd to an Account for their Conduct, had frequent Consultations how to ward off the Blow, and therefore caus'd a traiterous Libel, written by one of the best Pens of that Faction. and intituled, English Advice to the Freeholders of Great Britain, to be published and dispersed, great Numbers whereof were intercepted at Exeter, some of which were directed to particular Persons, as to Sir John Coriton, Sir Nicholas Morice, Jonathan Elford Esq; &c. wherefore a Proclamation was issued, January 11, promising 1000*l.* Reward to any Person who should discover the Author thereof, and 500*l.* for discovering the Printnr.

About the same Time many gross Abuses were discover'd in the Management of the Affairs of Chelsea Hospital, and the Governor, with several inferior Officers were displac'd.

On the 13th of January, a Fire broke broke out in a Gunpowder Shop near Bear Key in Thames Street, which burnt so furiously, that about 120 Houses were either burnt or blown up, amongst which were Baker's-Hall and the Trinity-House, and part of the Custom-House was damaged; great Quantities of Sugar, Oil, Wine, and other rich Goods were destroy'd, and near 50 Persons lost their Lives there; the Loss was computed at 500,000 l.

A. D.
1715.

March 9. Mess. Van Duyvenwoord and Van Borjelen, Ambassadors extraordinary from the States General, made their publick Entry with great Magnificence.

The Parliament met at Westminster, March 17, when his Royal Highness the Prince was introduced into the House of Peers, and the honourable Spencer Compton, Esq; chosen Speaker of the House of Commons; after which the Lord Chancellor read to both Houses the Speech deliver'd him by his Majesty, wherein he return'd them Thanks for their Zeal in Defence of the Protestant Succession, assuring them that he would never forget his Obligations to those who had distinguish'd themselves upon that Occasion; recommended to them to make Provision for the Prince and his Family, and exhorted them to Unanimity in pursuing the common Interest of their Country. After the usual Addresses, on a Motion made in the House of Commons, his Majesty's Proclamation for calling a new Parliament was taken into Consideration, in which some Reflections were cast on the late Ministry as disaffected to the Protestant Succession, and the King expressed his Surprize to find on his Accession, the publick Affairs under the greatest Difficulties, and that the national Debts had been very much increased since the Conclusion of the last War, and declared his Hopes that they would send up to Parliament the fittest Persons to redress the present Disorders. Sir William Whitlock made some Exceptions thereto as unprecedented and unwarrantable, but being call'd upon to explain himself, made an Excuse, and dropped it; but Sir William Wyndham persisting in it that the Proclamation was not only unprecedented but of dangerous Consequence to the very Being of Parliaments, some Members proposed that he should be sent to the Tower, on which arose very warm Debates; and Sir William received the Reprimand of the House.

April 9. the Commons agreed to allow 9,950 Men for Guards and Garrisons in Great-Britain for the current Year, besides the 12 Companies of Invalids, and 3 independent Companies in North-Britain, and voted 429,000 l. 14 s. 6 d. for maintaining them; 57,759 l. 17 s. 7 d. for the Garrisons in Minorca, 37,192 l. 14 s. 9 d. for Gibraltar, and 35,912 l. 19 s. 2 d. for supporting the 3 Regiments in Flanders.

In this Month died Dr. Gilbert Burnet Bishop of Salisbury, who by his History of the Reformation, and political Writings in Defence of the Revolution, had been much exposed to the Reproaches of a factious Party. He was succeeded by Dr. Talbot Bishop of Oxford, and Dr. Petter was advanced to the See of Oxford.

April 12. died Thomas Marquis of Wharton, a Person of very great ready Wit and fine Elocution, and an able Statesman.

April 22. happened the most remarkable Eclipse that had been seen in Great-Britain for near 500 Years. It began in London about 7 Minutes after Eight in the Morning, and ended about 21 Minutes after Ten. There was almost a total Darknes for a few Minutes, and several Stars were visible. Mr. Whiston and Dr. Halley acquired no small Reputation by their exact Calculation of the Time and Manner of it.

The House of Commons having resolv'd to augment the Allowance before granted to his Majesty for the better supporting of his Household and Family, so as to make up the yearly Sum of 700,000 l. and having appointed a Committee of Secrecy to enquire into the Conduct of the late Ministry, order'd their Report to be printed, and sent to the returning Officers of every City and Borough; and came to a Resolution of impeaching Henry Viscount Bolingbroke, Robert Earl of Oxford and James Duke of Ormond, of high Treason, and other high Crimes and Misdemeanors, and Thomas Earl of Strafford of high Crimes and Misdemeanors, and prepared Bills accordingly; which not long after passed the House of Lords, and received the Royal Assent. They also order'd a Bill for preventing Tumultuous Assemblies, which were now very frequent in London and other Places.

July 20. his Majesty went to the House of Peers; and having sent for the Lower House to attend him there, he acquainted them, that he had receiv'd certain Advices of an Attempt then actually preparing abroad in Favour of the Pretender; and gave the Royal Assent to the Bills for preventing Tumultuous Assemblies, and that concerning the Quakers Affirmation, with some others. Upon which the Commons immediately drew up an Address, in which they assured his Majesty they would support him with their Lives and Fortunes against all his open and secret Enemies, and desired him to raise sufficient Forces, as soon as possible, for the Safety of the Kingdom. The next Day the Lords addressed him to the same Effect, and they were followed therein by the greatest Part of the whole Realm.

The Apprehensions of these Designs, in Favour of the Pretender, made it necessary that the Habeas Corpus Act should be suspended for some Time, for the better securing several Persons who were suspected of favouring this bold Attempt; and it was accordingly suspended by Parliament for six Months. And soon after the Duke of Powis, the Earls of Ferrey and Scarsdale, the Lords Landstown and Dunbar, Sir Marmaduke Constable, Sir John Packington, Sir George Brown, Colonel Paul, and some others, were secured, the Coasts strictly guarded, and an Express sent to the States-General for hastening the Dispatch of the 6,000 Men they had engag'd to furnish his Majesty with.

The Earl of Mar, who had been Secretary of State for Scotland at the Time of the Union of the two Kingdoms, and acted in that Capacity for England, during the late Treaty, was undoubtedly apprehensive that a considerable Change would be made in the Ministry on his Accession to the Government; and to secure an Interest in the new King's Favour, he sent him a Letter dated from Whitehall, August 30, O. S. 1714. which his Majesty afterwards, on the breaking out of the Rebellion, caused to be published. In this Letter he acquainted the King, that he was afraid he had the Misfortune of being misrepresented to his Majesty; and giveth this as a Reason, that he was the only one of the late Queen's Servants, whom his Majesty's Ministers here did not visit: — A Predecessor of mine was honour'd with the Care of your Majesty's Grandmother, when young; and she was pleased afterwards to express some Concern for our Family in Letters which I still have under her Hand.

Your

A. D.
1715.

—Your Majesty shall ever find me as faithful and dutiful a Subject and Servant, as ever any of my Family have been to the Crown, or as I have been to my late Mistress the Queen; and I beg your Majesty may be so good, not to believe any Misrepresentations of me; which nothing but Party Hatred, and my Zeal for the Interest of the Crown, doth occasion, &c. He was also one of those who sign'd the Proclamation for declaring his Majesty the lawful King of this Realm; notwithstanding which, being, as may be justly supposed, uneasy to see himself neglected at Court, or conscious of his own Guilt; and apprehensive of being called to Account, he took Shipping August 2. in the Habit of a private Person, having only Lieutenant General Hamilton and two Servants with him, for Scotland. And being arriv'd at his Seat at Kildrummy, he gave Notice thereof to the principal Men of the Party, with whom, it is very probable, he had concerted Measures before, and invited them to a great Council, which he had fixed to August 16. Several Persons of the greatest Quality and Interest of his Party met him accordingly; amongst whom were the Marquisses of Huntley and Tullibardine, the Earls of Nithsdale, Mareschal, Traquair, Errol, Southesk, Carnwarth, Seaforth, with several others. Here the Earl of Mar, in a set Speech, excited them all to take up Arms for King James VIII. for so he call'd the Pretender; that for his own Part he was resolv'd to summon all the sensible Men of his own Tenants, and with them to hazard his Life in so good a Cause; assuring them there would be a general Rising in England upon the same Foot, and that they should certainly have a powerful Assistance from France; he shew'd them some Letters he had received from Lorrain, under the Pretender's own Hand, promising to come over to them shortly in Person; and assuring them of a sufficient Supply of Arms and Ammunition, as soon as they could give him an Account to what Port they should be sent, producing also a Commission under the Pretender's Hand, nominating him the Earl of Mar, Lieutenant General and Commander in Chief, and assured them that he was and should be furnish'd with Money sufficient for carrying on the Design, without putting the Gentlemen there present to any Expence. This had so far the desired Effect, that the Pretender's Standard was set up, September 6. and soon after he was proclaim'd in Form at Aberdeen, Dundee, Perth, and several other Places; and it was computed that there were about 6,000 Men now in Arms in Defence of his Title to the Crown.

The Enemy had form'd a Design of taking Edinburgh Castle by Surprise in the following Manner: about 80 Persons were to mount the Wall by the West Side of the Castle, by Ladders of Rope provided for that Purpose, which were to be pulled up by some Soldiers belonging to the Garrison, who had been bribed thereto; but a seasonable Discovery being made thereof by the Vigilance of the Lord Justice Clerk, the Conspirators were taken in the Fact. About this Time the News of the Death of Lewis XIV. King of France, who died in the Beginning of this Month, had reach'd Scotland; which so discouraged the Party concern'd in the Rebellion, that some proposed to defer any farther Attempts till the Pretender should be actually landed in Scotland; but the Majority depending on the Insurrection in England in their Favour, resolv'd to push on their Enterprize at all Hazards. The Precautions taken by the Government vernment

vernment had prevented any Designs, which they had good Reason to apprehend had been formed of a Rising in Bristol, Bath, and Oxford; but in the North the Earl of Derwentwater, Mr. Forster, and about 250 more, appear'd in Rebellion, and rendezvouz'd at Plainfield near Rothbury, October 6, being soon after joined by the Lord Widdrington, with about thirty Horsemen, and a Party of Horse from Scotland. They proclaimed the Pretender at Warkworth, Morpeth, and Hexham. Upon this Lieutenant-General Carpenter, with several Regiments of Horse and Foot, was ordered to march into those Parts, and they arrived at Newcastle, October 20. His Approach put the Enemy into some Consternation, and at Harwick it was debated, whether they should stand their Ground and fight the King's General, or march off; Mr. Mackintosh was for the first, urging the Superiority of their Number, and that the longer they deferred an Engagement, the greater Opposition they were like to meet with; but Mr. Forster, who was then their General, was against fighting, till they should be joined with a better Body of Horse; and most of the other Chiefs gave in to this Opinion. Upon this they marched to Langholm, and from thence to Brampton, and so to Penrith, Appleby, Kendall, Kirkby, Lansdale, and Lancaster, proclaiming the Pretender in most of those Places. At Lancaster they seized seven or eight Pieces of Cannon, and carried them off with them to Preston, where they arriv'd Novemb. 9, being diverted from their Design in Liverpool, by the extraordinary Zeal and Diligence of the Inhabitants, who planted 70 Pieces of Cannon about the Town, laid Part of the Avenues under Water, and drew a Line where the Water would not reach. In their March to Preston they were joined by about 1,500 new Men from Lancashire. Being thus reinforced, and not knowing whither to fly, they barricaded the Place as well as they could, waiting for the Arrival of the King's Forces under the Command of General Wills, who coming up to them about three Days after, and having made the necessary Dispositions for securing the several Passages to the Town, began to attack the Enemy in Form. The King's Troops at first were very much galled by the Enemy's Shot from the Windows of the Houses, and Brigadier Honeywood, who began the Attack on the South Side of the Town, received a Contusion on his Shoulder; but upon Orders being given by the General to set Fire to the Houses at each End of the Town, and the Arrival of General Carpenter with fresh Forces, the Enemy was so dispirited, that they desired a Cessation of Arms, and soon after submitted themselves to Mercy. About 130 Men were slain on the King's Side; but how many of the Enemy is uncertain. Upwards of fourteen hundred Prisoners were taken, and among the rest General Forster, the Earl of Derwentwater, Lord Widdrington, and some other Englishmen, to the Number of 75, the Earls of Nithisdale, Wintoun, and Carnwath, the Viscount Kenmure, Lord Nairn, and other Scotch Noblemen and Gentlemen, in Number 143, besides several Vassals and Servants.

Much about the same Time, viz. Nov. 13. the Duke of Argyll, Commander in Chief of his Majesty's Forces in North Britain, attacked the greater Body of Rebels at Dumblain in Scotland, commanded by the Earl of Mar. The Enemy's Horse stood the first Charge very courageously, and fired furiously

A. D.
1715.

on the King's Dragoons; but the latter, being mounted on much better Horses, bore down the Enemy by their Weight, and in little more than half an Hour put them to Flight. The Dragoons kept their Order in the Pursuit, and the flying Troops rallying several Times endeavoured in vain to form again. But in the interim the Highlanders charged the Foot in the Left Wing with so much Fury, that they soon came up to the very Muzzles of their Musquets, and putting by their Bayonets with their Targets, made dismal Havock among the Royal Forces with their broad Swords. This unusual and savage way of fighting struck such a Terror on the English Soldier, that it may be justly supposed, had the Enemy's Cavalry on the right Wing fallen in at that Time, a great part of the Royal Army must have been inevitably cut off. The Enemy having lost this Advantage, and the Victory thereby, marched off after their Horse, who were then employed in gathering their dissipated Troops together; and they all passed on together towards Ardoch. In fine, both Sides claimed the Victory; but this is certain, that by this Means the Enemy was intirely defeated in their Design of crossing the Frith, their proposed March to the South was laid aside, and never afterwards attempted, and they were forced to acknowledge the Superiority of his Majesty's Troops. The Earl of Mar and his Forces soon after retired to Perth. The King's Army was much inferior in Number to that of the Enemy, the former consisting only of about 3,500 Men, and the latter being upwards of 9,000, whereof about 900 were computed to have been killed or taken; the Loss on the other side was somewhat more than half that Number.

In the Beginning of the following Month the brave Earl Forfar died of the Wounds he had received in the Battle at Dumblain; and Dr. Tennison, Archbishop of Canterbury departed this Life aged 81, having held the Metropolitcal See about 21 Years; he was succeeded by Dr. William Wake, then Bishop of Lincoln, to which See Dr. Edmund Gibson was promoted in his Room. In this Month also died Dr. Hicks, an eminent nonjuring Clergyman; and Dr. Benjamin Hoadly was nominated to the See of Bangor, on the Translation of his Predecessor in that Bishoprick to Meath in Ireland.

The Pretender, who arrived in Scotland the latter end of December, in a small French Ship, entred Dundee January 5 on Horseback; the Earl of Mar being on his right Hand, and the Earl Mareschal on his left, with about three hundred Gentlemen attending him. He continued on Horseback for some time in the Market Place, to shew himself to the People, who crowded about him in great Numbers, and received him with loud Shouts and Acclamations. A few Days after he made his publick Entry into Perth, published his Declaration, fixed his Council, issued out Proclamations for a general Thanksgiving for his safe Arrival, for praying for him in Churches, for a Convention of the States, and for all sensible Men from 16 to 60 Years of Age to repair to his Standard, and another for his Coronation, which was fixed to January 23. In the mean Time he conferred several Degrees of Honour, and received some Addresses, particularly one from the Episcopal Clergy of the Diocese of Aberdeen, and another from the Episcopal Laity of the same Place. But France declining to appear publicly in their Favour, and the Force

A. D.

1716.

Forces furnished by Holland to Great-Bairtain having by this Time reached to Edinburgh and Sterling, put such a Damp to their Proceedings, that a Council of War was held January 30, in which it was pretty warmly debated, whether they should prepare to engage the King's Forces, or provide for their own Safety by a timely Retreat. The Highland Clans without much Hesitation declared for the former, and were so eager for fighting, that they could scarcely be dissuaded from so hazardous an Enterprize; but Mar and some others were of the contrary Opinion, and alledged that being deceived in their great Expectation of the Duke of Ormond's Landing in England, where the Coasts were very strictly guarded, and their Friends there being too much discouraged to join in such an Attempt at this Time, it was more advisable not to run the Hazard of a Battle at present. These Contests ran so high, that they were necessitated to adjourn the Council till next Morning. After several more Conferences it was at last agreed by the Chiefs not to fight, and indeed to lay aside the further Prosecution of their grand Design at this Juncture, though it was industriously concealed from the meaner Sort, who thought their Commanders only waited for a more favourable Opportunity of contending with the Forces which now closely pursued them. After this they marched from Dundee, and from thence to Montrose; where having received Intelligence, that Part of the King's Army was advancing towards them, the Pretender ordered the Clans remaining with him to be ready to march about Eight at Night towards Aberdeen, whither he assured them a considerable Reinforcement from France would come to their Assistance. At the Hour appointed for their Movement, the Pretender's Horse was brought before the Door of the House where he lodged, and the Guard ordered to mount, as if he intended to accompany them to Aberdeen; but instead of that, he slipped privately out on Foot, went to the Earl of Mar's Lodging, and from thence passed by a private Way to the Water-side, where a Boat waited to carry them on board a French Ship; and in less than half an Hour, two other Boats conveyed the Earl of Melford, the Lord Drummond, General Sheldon, and about half a Score other Gentlemen, on board the same Ship, and having received them, they hoisted Sail, and put to Sea, and in a few Days after arrived at Graveling. The Heads having thus made their Escape, their Followers were left to shift for themselves as well as they could; of which some were taken, and the rest dispersed. It was observable, that the Pretender in his Declaration did not so much as dissemble a Regard to the Protestant Religion, nor make any direct Promise to maintain it, nor did he ever attend the Protestant Worship during his Stay in Scotland.

January 9, the Parliament met at Westminster, and the King in his Speech expressed his Satisfaction in their Zeal and Affection for his Government, as well as their vigilant Care for the Safety of the Nation; took Notice of the Bravery and Fidelity of the Officers and Soldiers in the Army, and of their good Success, acquainted them, that the Treaty for settling the Barrier for the Netherlands was fully concluded, and that the King of Spain had agreed to the proposed Treaty of Commerce.

Among other Things which employed this Session, the Bill concerning Select Vestries, and embezzelling

A. D.
1716.

zelling the Poores Money, deserves our Notice. Upon Enquiry and Examination of the several Facts alledged in Support of this Bill, many gross and scandalous Abuses of the Money collected for the Poor were sufficiently proved, and attested by undeniable Evidence, as appeareth by the Report of the Committee appointed to inspect into that Affair, which was printed by the Order of the House. This Bill passed the House of Commons, but powerful Applications being made against it, as depriving the Ministers of Parishes of the Liberty of distributing private Charities, Money given at the Sacrament, Offerings, and the like; and it being suggested, that it would be injurious to the Collections made for Charity Schools, it was rejected in the House of Lords.

It is somewhat surprizing to observe the great and unusual Dispatch made by the Parliament with Regard to the Trial of those Noblemen, who were taken Prisoners on Account of the late Rebellion; for a Conference was held between the two Houses concerning that Affair, the Impeachments voted Nemine Comtradicante, a Committee appointed to draw up the Articles, and they were actually drawn, and delivered into the House, within the Compass of two Hours; they were twice read, and agreed to with very few Amendments, ingrossed, read the third Time, passed, and carried to the House of Lords the same Evening about Ten of the Clock.

The Day following, January 10, the impeached Lords were brought from the Tower to the Bar of the Lords House under a Guard, and the Articles of Impeachment were read, an Order made that the Prisoners should have Copies thereof, and a Day fixed for them to put in their several Answers; and each Person was allowed to chuse his own Council. The Earl of Derwentwater's Answer was delivered in Writing, as were also those of the Lord Widdrington and the Earl of Nithisdale; the Earl of Carnarvon and Viscount Kenmore answered by Word of Mouth, and the Lord Nairn delivered in a written Petition. They all, having offered some Things by way of Extenuation, pleaded guilty, but desired the two Houses of Parliament to intercede with his Majesty in their Favours. Wherefore on the Demand of the Commons, Sentence of Death was pronounced against them by William Earl Cowper then Lord Chancellor, who was appointed Lord High Steward on this Occasion, after he had made a Speech to them suitable to the Subject. The Earl of Derwentwater and Lord Kenmore were accordingly executed on Tower-hill February 24, but the Lord Nithisdale found means to escape out of the Tower disguised as a Woman in a Riding-hood the Night before the Execution.

March 15 was appointed for the Trial of the Earl of Wintoun. Mr. Hampden, one of the Managers, opened the Charge, who was seconded by Sir Joseph Jekyll, and others; after which the Witnesses were examined. W. Calderwood who had served as Quartermaster among the Rebels, gave a particular Account of the Rebellion, and of the Share the Earl of Wintoun had in it, from October 11, when he joined them at Moffet, to Nov. 14 when they surrendered at Preston and several other Witnesses confirmed his Testimony. It having been often suggested, that Mercy had been promised by the King's General on the Prisoners surrendering themselves at Preston, Brigadier Munden was interrogated on that Head, who deposed, that he heard

indee Derw
their Term
them rectly heari Peers
broug High had a ment
him Lord
tive;
to the insuffi Time laid to with the M ply'd, certai
son w Hardi had c many prove than Natur
in Fo
him.
Apr issued Rewar
Forster Preston
out of Arthur and J Lord
Preside
this L
The
in son Disaffe still c though
Time
ment,
Zeal f

indeed Mr. Mackintosh and the Lord Derwentwater frequently repeat their Request to General Wills for Terms, but said that General gave them no Hopes of Mercy, either directly or indirectly. And after a full hearing he was found guilty by his Peers. On the 19th he was again brought to the Bar, and the Lord High Steward asked him, if he had any thing to offer, why Judgment of Death should not pass upon him according to the Law? His Lordship answer'd in the Affirmative; and his Council endeavour'd to shew, that the Impeachment was insufficient, in regard that the direct Time of committing the Treason laid to his Charge was not set forth with proper Certainty; to which the Managers of the Commons reply'd, that the Want of fixing a certain Day, on which the Treason was committed, could be no Hardship on that noble Lord, who had continued in Rebellion for so many Days and Months, as had been proved in a more ample Manner than ever any Crime of the like Nature had been. And Sentence in Form was pronounced against him.

April 11, a Proclamation was issued promising a thousand Pounds Reward for apprehending Thomas Forster, Esq; who surrendred at Preston, but had made his Escape out of Newgate. In this Month Arthur Herbert Earl of Torrington, and John Lord Somers, formerly Lord Chancellor, and several Years President of the Council, departed this Life.

Though the Rebellion was now in some Measure quelled, yet the Disaffection of the common People still continued; wherefore it was thought necessary to prolong the Time for the Sitting of the Parliament, which had shewn so much Zeal for the Interest of his Majesty.

Upon which a Bill for Septennial Parliaments was brought into the House, and many warm Debates occasion'd by it, but at last it passed both Houses, and receiv'd the Royal Assent May 7, and in this Month Col. Oxburgh and Mr. Gascoigne were executed at Tyburn on Account of the late Rebellion.

June 28, died George Fitz-roy, Duke of Northumberland, the third Natural Son of King Charles II.

His Majesty having put a Close to the Session of Parliament towards the latter End of June, by a gracious Speech, in which he acquainted them with his Design of visiting his German Dominions, and of leaving the Prince of Wales Guardian of the Realm, and having created William Cadogan, Esq; Baron of Reading, Sir Richard Onslow Baron Onslow, Thomas Newport, Esq; Baron of Torrington, Sir Robert Marsham Baron of Romney, and Sir Henry St. John Baron of Battersea, set out for Hanover July 7, and a few Days after arrived safe at Holland.

July 13, William Paul, a Clergyman, and John Hall Esq; who had been a Justice of the Peace, having received Sentence of Death on Account of the late Rebellion, were executed at Tyburn.

September 14, the Tide in the Thames ebbed so low, that several Persons waded cross that River near Whitehall, and in other Places. About a Week after the Five Persons, Bean, Purchase, Lowe, Richard Price and William Price, who had been condemn'd for rioting, were executed at the End of Salisbury Court in Fleet-street.

Sir Stephen Fox, a noted Statesman in the Reign of King Charles II. died October 28, and in the latter End of the following Month began a great Frost, which with small Intermissions, continued till

A. D. February 8, with great Severity.
1717.

The Thames was frozen over, many Booths erected on the Ice, and two whole Oxen roasted thereon.

December 4, a Fire broke out at Limehouse, which consumed near Two Hundred Houses; and about Ten Days after, Sir William Trumball, who had been one of the Principal Secretaries of State in the Reign of King William III. departed this Life. And not long after came on, at the Old Baily, the Trial of Francis Francia, a Jew, for carrying on a traiterous Correspondence with some Persons beyond the Sea in Favour of the Pretender; but after a long Hearing he was acquitted for Want of sufficient Evidence.

January 19, his Majesty return'd from abroad, and soon after acquainted the Council, that he had certain Intelligence of a Design concerted between some Ministers of a Foreign Prince, and the Jacobite Party at home, to encourage an Invasion from Sweden in Behalf of the Pretender. The next Morning about Two o'Clock, an Officer of the Guards, with some Musqueteers, were sent to the House of Count Gyllenborg, the Swedish Envoy, with Orders to secure the Avenues to the House, and they were followed by Lieutenant General Wade, who was appointed to seize all his Papers, set a Guard upon his Person, and to suffer no Person to speak with him; but not to remove him out of his own House. The Count, surprized at this Message, deliver'd him by the Officer at the Door, refused for some time to admit them, and endeavour'd to defend himself as claiming the Privilege of an Ambassador; but being told, that the Officer was not answerable for any Mistake in the Orders to seize him, and that his Business was only to execute those Orders, which he was obliged to-do, and would immediately perform, he found it convenient to submit, and was accordingly put under Arrest. The next Day Sir Jacob Banks, a Native of Sweden, Charles Caesar of Hertfordshire, Esq; and Major Boyle Smith, were taken into Custody of Messengers.

This Affair made a great Noise, and all the Foreign Ministers appeared the next Day at Court, to learn the Reasons of such a Proceeding, as well as to crave Leave that the Swedish Minister might be allowed the Privilege of an Ambassador, according to the Law of Nations. They receiv'd a general Answer, that in a Day or two they should be fully inform'd as to the Reasons why the Court had taken this Step. Two Days after Letters were sent by the Secretaries of State to the Foreign Ministers giving an Account of the Motives which led to these Measures.

Orders were also dispatched to Mr. Leathes, the British Envoy at the Hague, to apply with the utmost Secrecy to the States for Leave to arrest Barn Gortz. The Baron hearing what had happen'd to Gyllenborg, hasten'd from the Hague, and went directly to Amsterdam, but thinking it not safe to continue there, pursued his Journey to Arnhem, where he was seized, and his Papers secured, by which the Particulars of this dark Intrigue were laid open. In some of which he owned, that he himself had bought Ten Thousand Arms, that he had sent them to Sweden, and that he was to buy as many more.

Feb. 20. the Parliament met. and the King in his Speech acquainted them, that the inveterate Rancour of a Faction among us had again prompted them to stir up Foreign Powers to disturb the Peace of their they a Sce than of im

The and B the I lish'd
Both jesty press
Term
Up Swe dron ted Sound up th Harb
in Ex been King
thus of fe Brita
fited likew
Peace long of th oblig non, over Ap deliv
Mess

G
H secur sent thre wife
the thin sures othe
duce
A

their

their native Country, insomuch that they chose rather to make Britain a Scene of Blood and Confusion, than give over their darling Design of imposing a Popish Pretender. The Letters of Count Gyllenborg and Baron Gortz were laid before the House, and soon after publish'd by his Majesty's Command. Both Houses address'd his Majesty on this Occasion, and express'd their Resentment in suitable Terms.

Upon this all Commerce with Sweden was prohibited, and a Squadron of 32 Ships immediately fitted out, which arrived in the Sound, April 12, and so blocked up the Swedish Fleet in their own Harbours, that they could not put in Execution the Design they had been so long in projecting. The King of Sweden finding himself thus disappointed, and in Danger of feeling the Resentment of his Britannick Majesty, not only desisted from his Enterprize, but likewise endeavour'd to make a Peace with him, which was not long after effected by the Mediation of the Regent of France, who also obliged the Pretender to quit Avignon, his old Residence, and remove over the Alps.

April 3. Mr. Secretary Stanhope deliver'd to the House the following Message from his Majesty :

GEORGE R.

HIS Majesty being desirous, above all Things, not only to secure his Kingdom against the present Danger with which they are threatened from Sweden, but likewise to prevent, as far as is possible, the like Apprehensions for the future, thinks it necessary, that such Measures should be early concerted with other Princes and States, as may conduce most effectually to this End.

And as this may require some Expence, his Majesty hopes that his Commons will, by their Assistance at this Juncture, enable him to make good such Engagements, as may ease his People of all future Charge and Apprehensions upon this Account.

A. D.
1717.

This Message occasion'd no small Stir in the House, and it was very strenuously urged, that to ask Money for Alliances, without first acquainting them with the Particulars, was no ways agreeable to the Methods of Parliament; and many Courtiers, who before had distinguished themselves in a remarkable Manner by their Zeal for the Interest of his Majesty, were carried away with the Vogue of this Proceeding's being unparliamentary, and seemed to grow cool in their Affections for serving the Crown: At length, after many warm Debates, it was voted, that a Sum not exceeding Two Hundred and Fifty Thousand Pounds should be granted to his Majesty on this Occasion. Soon after several Alterations were made at Court; the Lord Townshend was removed from being Lord Lieutenant of Ireland, and the Duke of Bolton substituted in his Place: the Duke of Devonshire was outed from the Presidentship of the Council, and new Commissions passed for the Management of the Treasury and Admiralty; the Earl of Sunderland, and Joseph Addison, Esq; were appointed Principal Secretaries of State.

April 26, the Lower House of Convocation, which was then sitting, appointed a Committee to draw up a Representation to be laid before the Upper-House, against some Positions advanced by Dr. Benjamin Hoadly, Bishop of Bangor, in a Book by him lately publish'd intituled, A Preservative against the Principles and Pra-

A. D.
1717.

etics of the Nonjurors, and in a Sermon preached before the King, March 31, which had occasioned many warm Arguments in Print. The Committee censured both the Book and Sermon as tending to subvert all Government and Discipline in the Church of Christ, and to reduce his Kingdom to a State of Anarchy and Confusion; as likewise to impugn and impeach the regal Supremacy in Causes Ecclesiastical, and the Authority of the Legislature to enforce Obedience in Matters of Religion by civil Sanctions. But the Government, finding these Things began to run to an unreasonable Height, sent a Writ to prorogue the Convocation to Nov. 22. The Report however was publish'd, and the Bishop printed an Answer thereto.

May 20, died Sir John Trevor, Master of the Rolls, and was succeeded therein by Sir Joseph Jekyll, who soon after caused the House belonging thereto to be rebuilt in a very handsome Manner.

The Earl of Oxford, who had been confined in the Tower almost two Years, caused a Petition, signed with his Name, to be presented to the House of Peers by the Lord Trevor, in which he set forth, that he had been confined, upon an Impeachment brought up against him to their Lordships House by the Commons of Great Britain, for High Treason, and other Crimes and Misdemeanours, and submitted his Case to their Lordship's Consideration, praying that his Imprisonment might not be indefinite. Several long Speeches were made upon the Niceties and Scruples which were started in his Case; and some of the Lords insisted in his Behalf, that the Impeachment was ipso facto destroyed, and determined, because he was not brought to Trial the same Session in which he was impeached, and that the Prorogation was an actual Supersedeas to the whole Proceedings. But this being over-ruled, or rejected, the House fixed June 13, for the Earl's Trial. But the Managers for the Commons finding themselves unable to prepare Matters for the Trial against that Time, moved for further Time, which was granted.

June 24, the two Houses took their Seats in Westminster Hall, the Prisoner was brought to the Bar, and the Lord Cowper, who was appointed Lord High Steward on this Occasion, having caused his Commission to be read, and made a short Speech to the Prisoner, as usual in such Cases, directed the Managers to proceed. Mr. Hampden began, and recapitulated the Charge of the Commons against him, That the Prisoner, by many wicked Arts and Insinuations, obtained Access to the late Queen, got into her Councils, and into Places of the highest Trust, formed a treacherous Correspondence with the Emissaries of France, and gave false and pernicious Counsel to her Majesty; that he sacrificed the Trade and Commerce of Great Britain to its common Enemy; that he endeavour'd to subvert the ancient Constitution of Parliament, betray'd the Catalans, faithful Allies to this Kingdom, to the implacable Resentments of an enraged and powerful Enemy, &c. After Mr. Hampden had done, Sir Joseph Jekyll began, but the Lord Harcourt made a Motion to adjourn to the House of Lords, where, upon a long Debate, it was resolv'd, not to admit the Commons to proceed in making good the Articles for High Crimes and Misdemeanours, till Judgment be first given upon the Articles of High Treason.

Which

Which Resolution being declared to the Managers at the Lords Return to the Hall, the Managers replied, that they conceived it to be so much the undoubted Right of the Commons to proceed in their own Method, in Maintenance of the Articles exhibited by them, and did apprehend that this Resolution of their Lordships might be of so fatal Consequence to the Rights and Privileges of all the Commons of Great Britain, that they could not take upon them to proceed any farther, without resorting to the House of Commons for their Direction therein. The Commons being acquainted with what had thus passed, came to a Resolution, That they conceive it to be the undoubted Right of the Commons, to impeach a Peer, either for High Treason, or for High Crimes and Misdemeanours, or, if they see Occasion, to mix both the one and the other in the same Accusation. And insisted on it, that their Managers should proceed in the same Manner they were going on, when interrupted by their Lordships Resolution. When this was communicated to the House of Lords, it was again debated, Whether the Commons should be admitted to proceed in that Method? And it was carried to insist on their former Resolution. They also order'd a Paper of Reasons in Maintenance of this Resolution to be drawn up, and deliver'd to the Commons, containing in Substance, That their Lordships judge it a Right inherent in every Court of Justice, to order and direct such Methods of Proceeding as such Court shall think fit to be observed in all Causes depending before them, which can have no Influence to the Prejudice of Justice, and where such Methods of Proceeding are not settled by any positive Rule. That the first Article in the present Case being for High Crimes and Misdemeanours only, and the Method of proceeding on an Impeachment of a Peer for High Treason, as well before as upon the Trial thereof, being very different from the Proceedings in the former Case, their Lordships could not consent that a new Precedent should be made on this Trial, to the Prejudice of the Peerage of Great Britain in all Times to come, viz. The Trying a Peer on Articles for High Crimes and Misdemeanours without the Bar, the detaining in Custody a Peer so accused, and repeated Commitments of him to the Tower, during the Time of such Trial, and subjecting a Peer to as ignominious Circumstances on his Trial, on Articles of Misdemeanours, as if he was then on his Trial on Articles for High Treason: Whereas a Peer on his Trial on Articles for Misdemeanours only ought not to be deprived of his Liberty, nor sequestered from Parliament, and is intitled to the Privilege of sitting within the Bar during the whole Time of his Trial; in all which Particulars the known Rule of Proceedings in such Cases may be evaded, should a Peer be brought to his Trial on several Articles exhibited against him on High Crimes and Misdemeanours, and for High Treason mixed together, and the Commons be admitted to proceed in order to make good the Articles for High Crimes and Misdemeanours, before Judgment be given upon the Articles for High Treason. The Commons, having considered the Reasons mentioned above, sent a Message to the Lords to desire a free Conference thereupon, but the Lords refused to grant it. This again gave Rise to many warm Debates in both Houses to very little Effect. Hereupon the House

A. D.
1717.

House of Lords proceeded in the Formalities of Judicature; they went down to the Hall, took their Places in Judgment, ordered the Lieutenant of the Tower to bring his Prisoner to the Bar, and caused the following Proclamation to be made: Whereas Robert Earl of Oxford and Earl Mortimer stands impeached of High Treason and other High Crimes and Misdemeanours, by the House of Commons, in the Names of themselves and of all the Commons of Great Britain, all Persons concerned are to take Notice, that he now stands upon his Trial, and they may now come forth in order to make good their Charge. After which the Court sat perfectly silent, and looked one upon another, as if they expected the Commons would appear; but no body appearing, the Lords about a quarter of an Hour after returned to their House, where the Question being put, whether the Earl should be acquitted, it passed in the Affirmative; and then the Method of giving Judgment was settled, the Words prescribed, and Directions given to the Lord High Steward for the remaining Proceedings in the Hall. Whither being adjourned, the Question was put severally to their Lordships, and he was declared by the Lord High Steward to be acquitted by the Unanimous Consent of all; and was immediately discharg'd. However the Commons made an Address to his Majesty, that the said Earl should be excepted out of the Act of Grace then depending in the House.

July 15, the King went to the House, and gave the Royal Assent to several Bills, amongst which was the Act of Grace; and the Earl of Oxford, Simon Lord Harcourt, Matthew Prior, Thomas Harley, Arthur Moore, and some few others, were particularly excepted by Name;

and then prorogued the Parliament.

August 17, Count Gillenberg sailed from Harwich for Sweden, where he was exchanged for Mr. Jackson. And the latter End of this Month died Dr. William Lloyd, Bishop of Worcester, aged upwards of Ninety Years, a very learned Prelate, and accounted one of the best Textuaries of his Age. Dr. John Hough succeeded him in that Bishoprick and not long after Dr. Edward Chandler was promoted to the See of Lichfield and Coventry, in the Room of Dr. Hough.

In the beginning of October the King set out from Hampton Court, for Newmarket. The next Day after his Arrival, Mr. Gregg, Vice-Chancellor of the University of Cambridge, attended by many Graduates, returned their humble Thanks and Acknowledgments for the noble Library bestowed upon them by his Majesty, and assured him of their hearty Zeal and Affection for his Royal Person and Government, promising that it should be their constant Study and Endeavours to instil the same Principles in the Minds of the Youth committed to their Charge. His Majesty was pleased to dine with the University, and as a Mark of his being well pleased with the handsome Reception he met with there, gave liberally to the Relief of the Poor.

The Parliament met Novemb. 21, and the King acquainted them of a considerable Reduction he had made in the Forces, hinted to them the Advantages gained by lessening the National Debts, put them in mind of some Arrears due to Foreign Princes before his Accession, and exhorted them to Unanimity.

The next Day the Lord Warrington and the Earl of Carnarvon pleaded his Majesty's most gracious Pardon at the Bar of the House of Lords, and were discharged.

Up

A. D.
1718.

Upon the Debates in the Commons about the Number of Land Forces, Mr. Shippen, among other vehement Expressions, said, That the Second Paragraph of the King's Speech seemed rather to be calculated for the Meridian of Germany, than Great-Britain; and that it was a great Misfortune, that the King was a Stranger to our Language and Constitution. These Words gave Offence to several Members, and one, who took them down in Writing, urged, that they were a scandalous Invektive against the King's Person and Government, of which the House ought to shew the highest Resentment, and therefore moved, that the Member, who spoke them, should be sent to the Tower: and was seconded by some others. Several Questions were started on this Occasion, as, whether the Words taken down in Writing were the very same he had spoken, and whether there was any President of a Censure passed on a Member of the House for Words spoken in a Committee. All which were carried in the Affirmative, and he was voted to the Tower by 175 Votes against 81.

November 2, the Princess of Wales was safely delivered of a Prince in the Royal Palace at St. James's, who was christened on the 28th of the same Month by the Archbishop of Canterbury, and named George William; but died the February following, and was privately interred in the Abby Church of Westminster.

In the latter End of this Year was issued a Proclamation for lowering the Gold Coins; and Richard Lord Onslow, and Robert Shirly Earl Ferrers, departed this Life.

January 22, it was observed in a Committee of the whole House of Commons, that the Lists of Half-Pay Officers were charged with many Persons who had no Right to it; this occasioned several smart Debates, and certain Rules were prescribed to be observed in the future Application thereof, which have been generally inserted in all the Acts since passed for that Purpose.

In the Beginning of the following Month Charles Talbot Duke of Shrewsbury departed this Life without Issue, and so the Title of Duke became extinct, but his Earldom, with the Bulk of his Estate, fell to the Heirs male of Thomas Talbot of Langford in the County of Salop, Brother by the Father's Side to Francis Talbot Earl of Shrewsbury, the late Duke's Father.

March 17. Ferdinando Marquis of Paleotti, Brother to the Dutchess of Shrewsbury, was executed at Tyburn for the Murther of his Man-Servant; and the same Day James Shepherd, a Coach Painter's Apprentice, suffered there as in Cases of High Treason. This daring young Man had formed a Design to assassinate the King, and wrote a Letter to Mr. Leak a nonjuring Clergyman, in which were the following Words—If any Gentleman will pay for my Passage to Italy, and if our Friends will intrust one so young with a Letter of Invitation to his Majesty [the Pretender] I will on his Arrival smite the Usurper in his Palace. The Letter was left with Mr. Leak's Maid, her Master not being then at Home; but, he on his Return, having read the Letter, was so much surprized at the Contents thereof, that he immediately acquainted Sir John Fryer with it, who advised him to secure the Author, when he should come for an Answer, which was accordingly done.

April 15. Earl Cowper resigned the great Seal, which about a Month after was delivered to Tho-

A. D. 1718. mas Lord Parker, and Sir John Pratt, was made Lord Chief Justice of the King's Bench in his Room. About this Time Dr. Samuel Bradford was promoted to the See of Carlisle, in the Room of Dr. Wm. Nicholson, who was translated to the See of Londonderry in Ireland.

July 22, the Quadruple Alliance between the Emperor, the King of Great Britain, the most Christian King, and the States General, was signed at London. In this Treaty the contracting Powers engage for the reciprocal Preservation of their several Dominions and Subjects, and for the maintaining mutual Peace; the former Treaties of Utrecht and Baden were confirmed, except in some few Points; and the several Powers mutually promise to give no Protection in any of their Dominions to those who are or shall be declared Rebels by any one of the other contracting Powers; and if any one of the four Treating Powers be attacked or disturbed by their own Subjects, or any Prince or State, the other three shall endeavour, on Request, to procure them Justice, and to prevent the Aggressor from continuing Hostilities; but if friendly Offices be not sufficient for the Reconciliation of the two contending Parties, and Satisfaction and Reparation of the injured Power, the High Treators shall furnish to their Ally who is attacked, in two Months after being thereunto required, the following Succours, jointly or separately; viz. his Imperial Majesty 8,000 Foot,* and 4000 Horse; his Britannic Majesty, and the most Christian King, the same Number of Forces; and the Sates General 4000 Foot, and 2000 Horse. The Power attacked shall have his free Choice, either of Troops, Ships of War, &c. or Subsidies in ready Money. Agreed that 1,000 Foot shall be valued at Ten Thousand Dutch Florins per Month, and 1000 Horse at Thirty thousand Dutch Florins per Month, and the same Proportion shall be observed with respect to the Ships. If the Succours herein above specified be not answerable to the Necessity, the Treating Powers shall forthwith agree on farther Supplies, and likewise, if it be necessary, assist in the War against the Aggressor, &c.

The Spaniards having formed a Design of seizing the Island of Sicily, fitted out a Fleet for that Purpose, which sailed from Barcelona June 17, and in the Beginning of the following Month made a Descent upon the Island, and became Masters of several Places therein, the People being generally inclined to submit to the Spanish Government. But while they were busily employed in attacking the Citadel of Messina, the British Fleet, commanded by Sir George Byng, came to their Assistance, engaged the Spanish Fleet and entirely defeated them, July 31. And not long after the King of Sicily acceded to the Quadruple Alliance.

In the Beginning of November, Dr. White Kennet was consecrated Bishop of Peterborough, in the Room of Dr. Richard Cumberland, deceased.

November 11, the Parliament met at Westminster, and the King acquainted them with the Treaties he had concluded, complained of the Spaniards ill Usage of the British Ships, and recommended to them to consider of proper Methods for preventing Frauds and Abuses in the Revenue. The Bills for strengthening the Protestant Interest in these Kingdoms, and that for limiting the Peerage, occasioned very warm Debates in this Session; the former however passed into a Law, and the latter was dropped for the present.

Decem-

December 17, War was declared against Spain with the usual Solemnities.

In the Beginning of the following Year Sir John Lethieulier, Sir Richard Hoar, and Sir Samuel Garth, Physician General to the Army, departed this Life. The latter of whom was succeeded in that Post by Dr. Gibson.

March 10, his Majesty went to the House of Peers, and acquainted them, that he had received from the most Christian King repeated Advices of an Invasion designed upon Great-Britain by Spain in Favour of the Pretender, and desired them to enable him to make the necessary Dispositions for the Security of the Nation. Both Houses waited on his Majesty thereupon, and assured him that they would assist him with the utmost Vigour and Efforts to defeat so extraordinary an Attempt. The Government gave Orders immediately for putting to Sea a strong Squadron of Men of War; and several Regiments of Horse, Foot, and Dragoons, with three Battalions of the Foot Guards, were ordered to march towards the West of England, where it was thought most likely that the Enemy intended to land. Necessary Precautions were taken to guard the other Coasts, and four Regiments of Foot were sent for from Ireland, and five from Holland. At the same Time the Regent of France caused several Regiments of Horse, Foot, and Dragoons, to march towards the Coasts of Normandy and Picardy, and the Governor of the Austrian Netherlands ordered German Troops to file off towards Ostend, to be in a Readiness to be shipped off for Great-Britain, pursuant to the Treaties of Guaranty of the Protestant Succession. But though the Nation was thus secured from the threatned Danger, yet the general Alarm had a very ill Effect upon the publick Funds, which gradually fell seven or eight per Cent.

During this, the King of Sweden, who was thought to have concerted this Invasion with Cardinal Alberoni, the prime Minister at Madrid, sat down with his Army before Frederickshall at a very unfit Time of the Year for such an Enterprize (the taking of which would greatly favour such a Design) was wounded in the Head by a small Shot, as he was giving Directions for an Attack against his Enemies in the Intrenchments.

This important News was first brought by the Master of a Vessel going to Scotland, who saw the King of Sweden's Corpse brought into Gottenburgh, as he was just about to leave that Place, upon which Account the Truth of it was at first suspected, but in a little Time it came so well confirmed, that it was no longer a Matter of Dispute.

This sudden and unexpected Incident gave a strange Turn to Affairs, especially when it was known that Ulrica Eleonora, youngest Sister of the late King, was advanced to the Swedish Throne, who, on her Accession, gave sufficient Reasons to believe, that she designed to live peaceably with her Neighbours. And soon after a Proclamation was issued by the King and Council for taking off the Prohibition of Commerce with Sweden.

April 17, came Advice that the late Earls of Seaforth and Marischal, with the Marquiss of Tullibardine and others, to the Number of about Four hundred Men, mostly Spaniards, were actually landed at Kintail in Scotland; where they remained for some Time, giving out that their Instructions were not to 1719.

A. D.

A. D.
1719.

to move from those Parts, till they heard of the late Duke of Ormond's landing in England, or should receive further Orders from him. They soon after got Possession of the Castle at Donan, from whence they were driven by Captain Boyle, Commander of his Majesty's Man of War, the Worcester, assisted by some other Vessels

The Government, in order to secure the Nation from thss Storm, thought proper to send for Assistance from Abroad; and two Swiss Battalions arrived in the River from Holland, and three Dutch Battalions landed in the North of England: Who were all ordered to march to Scotland, together with some English Foot and Dragoons.

June 5, a Body of his Majesty's Forces, under the Command of Major General Wightman, marched in Pursuit of the Rebels, and a few Days after came up with them at a Place called the Pass of Grensbill, which they endeavoured resolutely to defend; but on the near Approach of the King's Troops they deserted it, and retired to another Pass called Strachell, where they were more advantageously posted. The General took a View of their Situation here, and being resolved to attack them, disposed his Forces in a convenient Manner for that Purpose. The Enemies had then about three Hundred Spaniards, one Thousand six Hundred and forty Highlanders, besides another Body of Highlanders, who were posted on an Hill some Distance off, with an Intent to set upon the Baggage. The King's Forces did not much exceed one Thousand Men. They came to an Engagement on the 10th; but the Rebels, after discharging their Musquets, skipped off, and could not be brought to a regular Fight. However the General drove them from Rock to Rock, and pursued them in that Manner for about three Hours, till at last they came to the Top of the Hill, after which they were soon dispersed. The King's Troops lay on their Arms all the following Night; and marched the next Morning to Greenhill, where the remaining Spaniards, to the Number of two Hundred seventy and four, surrendered Prisoners at Discretion, and were afterwards conveyed to Edinburgh Castle. Seaforth, Mareschal, and Tullibardine, made their Escape to the Lewis or Orkney Islands, leaving their Followers to make the best Shift they could for themselves.

Nor were we free from Disturbances at Home, for the City of London was much alarmed about this Time with tumultuous Weavers, who gathered together in considerable Bodies, and tore the Callicoe Clothes off Womans Backs; crying out, Down with the Callicoes. This occasioned the Magistracy and Lieutenancy to use some Means for their Dispersion; and Part of the Militia was out on Duty for several Days. This not answering the End proposed, Instances were made to the Lords Justices (the King being then abroad) for farther Assistance. Upon which Detachments of the Guards were ordered to patrol in the City, and Hamlets, which pretty well quelled those Disorders. However some Persons were secured on this Occasion, and were afterwards tried at the Old Baily; where it appeared that many of the poor Weavers had been animated into these Disturbances by Persons disaffected to the Government. Some were pillory'd, and others imprisoned, before Things could be thoroughly settled.

June 17, died Joseph Addison, Esq; sometime Secretary of State,

a Person of fine Learning, of an excellent Genius, and justly admired for his immortal Tragedy of Cato, as well as other Works.

In July this Year died Meinhardt Duke of Schonberg, and Heneage Finch Earl of Aylesford; and in the Month following Dr. George Smalridge, Bishop of Bristol, departed this Life, and was succeeded in that See by Dr. Hugh Boulter.

November 9, John Matthews, Printer, was executed at Tyburn for printing and publishing a treasonable Libel, intituled Vox populi, vox Dei, wherein he asserted the Pretender's hereditary Right to the Crown of this Realm, and endeavoured to stir up the People to defend his Title thereto.

His Majesty's Residence in his foreign Dominions, for this Season, drew a great Concourse of Persons of the highest Rank to those Parts, and all Matters of Moment to be decided by Treaty, were negotiated at Hanover. The King of Prussia arrived there October 30, and was received with all due Honours. Their Britannick and Prussian Majesties had frequent Conferences, and lined every Day together in publick, and shewed on both Sides all possible Marks of mutual Satisfaction.

The Protestants in the Palatinate, Poland, and Lithuania, had been severely dealt with, but by his Majesty's Intercession were eased from several Impositions and Hardships laid upon them by the Catholics. And soon after the States acceded in Form to the Quadruple Alliance.

The King of Prussia returned to Berlin, November 5, and his Britannick Majesty set out from Hanover the 7th in his Way to Holland; and a few Days after arrived at St. James's Palace. Where soon after the Archbishop of Canterbury, with several other Bishops, congratulated him on his safe Arrival, and returned their most humble Acknowledgments for the Protection his Majesty had given to the Protestants abroad.

November 23, the Parliament met at Westminster, when the King in his Speech expressed his Satisfaction in meeting them at a Juncture, when the Negotiations abroad had generally met with good Success; hinted at the many Troubles he had encountered with during the Course of his Reign, and that our Divisions at Home had gone magnified abroad, by which some foreign Powers had been encouraged to treat us in such a Manner, as the Crown of Great-Britain (said he) shall never endure while I wear it. The Trouble and Expence, which this hath brought upon us, have been the most loudly complained of by those who were the Occasion of them. But with your Assistance I have hitherto got through all these Difficulties, and by the Continuance of your Help I hope very soon to overcome them, since the Hand of God hath so visibly been with us in all our Undertakings, &c.

After the usual Addresses, the Peerage Bill was brought again into the House of Lords, and after many warm Dabates passed that House, but was rejected in the Commons by a considerable Majority. Schemes were drawn up, and different Proposals laid before the Parliament, by the Bank of England, and the South Sea Company, for lessening the National Debt, upon certain Advantages to be allowed them. These occasioned many and long Contests, but the Commons at length determined this Affair in Favour of the latter. Upon this South Sea Stock had soon a very considerable Rise, and Persons of all Ranks daily resorted to Exchange Alley, in order to increase their Fortunes, so that the Stock of the said Company was advanced to 800 by the second Day of June. At the same Time many Petitions, praying Letters Patent for raising Joint Stocks in order to carry on divers Projects, some for Encouragement of the Fishery, others for Manufacturing Sail Cloth and fine Holland, Insurances from Losses by Fire, Importation of Timber from Germany, with near an hundred more, lay before the Privy Council. The several Projectors whereof, pretending Assurances that their Petitions would be undoubtedly granted, and taking Advantage of the general Inclination of People to deal in Stocks, artfully drew in many unwary Persons to part with their Money upon these insidious Contrivances, being easily deluded with the seeming Prospect of mighty Advantages to be gained thereby. These went by the general Name of Bubbles, and the many evil Consequences thereof plainly attested to the Justness of that Appellation. It was computed, that near a Milion and half Sterling was won or lost by these unwarrantable Practices, and not a few Persons, who before were possessed with plentiful Fortunes, were very much impoverished, and others intirely ruined; while a few Upstarts were vastly enriched thereby. This put a very great Damp on our domestic Trade, and was of no small Detriment to Commerce in general. Infomuch that the Government thought it necessary to issue a Proclamation, dated the eleventh Day of June, to suppress these Pernicious Projects and Undertakings. The same Day his Majesty went to the House of Peers, signed some Acts, and put a Close to the Session of Parliament; and in a few Days after, having committed the Administration of publick Affairs to certain Lords Justices, set out for Hanover.

A. D.
1720.

In the mean Time the South Sea

Stock suffered very much; for many Persons, who were to attend the King abroad, and others, who were hard put to it to make good their second Payment to the first Subscription, were equally desirous to turn their Stock into ready Money, so that for some Days the Number of Sellers exceeded that of the Buyers. By which Means the Managers of the Company were very hard put to it to find out proper Expedients to remedy those impending Evils. And notwithstanding all their Care, the Price of Stocks was very much reduced.

The Lords Justices taking Notice that notwithstanding a late Act of Parliament, and his Majesty's Proclamation conformable thereto, several of the fraudulent Projects called Bubbles, were still carrying on, came to a Resolution, by the Advice of his Majesty's Privy Council, to order the said Petitions to be dismissed, and published a List of the Particulars.

In January this Year Sir William Aylmer, who had been Lord Mayor, and one of the Representatives in Parliament for the City of London, and Thomas Grey Earl of Stamford, departed this Life; and Sir Edward Mansell, and Sir Gregory Page, did not long survive them. And in August following Matthew Lord Aylmer, and Sir John Leak, both Sea Admirals were taken off the Stage of this World.

His Majesty returned from abroad in November, and the Parliament met December 28. The King in his Speech expressed his Concern for the unhappy Turn, which had so much affected the publick Credit at Home during his Absence, and earnestly recommended it to them, to consider of the most effectual and speedy Methods to restore it, and fix it upon a lasting Foundation.

tion; took Notice, that our Trade was more extended this Year, than in the preceeding one, and desired them to turn their Thoughts to the best Methods for the securing and enlarging of our Commerce. After the usual Addressies, Grey Neville, Esq; moved, that the Directors of the South Sea Company should forthwith lay before the Commons an Account of their Proceedings; and after some Debates thereon, several Orders were made by the House pursuant to that Motion. Several Schedules of Accounts relating to the Company's Affairs, were laid before the House. Hereupon a Committee of thirteen Persons, viz. Thomas Broderick, Esq; Archibald Hutcheson, Esq; Sir Joseph Jekyll, Master of the Rolls, Edward Wortley, Esq; Sir Thomas Pengelly, Serjeant at Law, William Clayton, Esq; Edward Jeffreys, Esq; Robert Lord Viscount Moleworth, Thomas Strangeways, Esq; William Sloper, Esq; Nicholas Lechmere, Chancellor of the Dutchy, the Honourable General Rosse, and the Honourable Dixie Windsor, Esq; was appointed to inquire into all the Proceedings relating to the Execution of the South Sea Act. The Committee soon after repaired to the South Sea House, took Possession thereof, and secured the Books belonging to the several Offices. Many Persons were examined on this Occasion, and amongst the rest, Mr. Robert Knight, the Company's Treasurer, who not long after found Means to escape out of the Kingdom. John Aislaby, Esq; and Sir George Caswall were expelled the House, and committed to the Tower; the former for encouraging the dangerous and destructive Execution of the late South Sea Scheme, with a View to his own exorbitant Profit; and the latter for holding with Robert Knight, and others, fifty thousand Pounds of the said Company's Stock, without any valuable Consideration paid, or Security given for the same. And an Act to restrain the Sub-Governour, Deputy-Governour, and Directors, &c. of the said Company from going out of the Kingdom for one Year, and for discovering their Estates and Effects; and another for disabling the Persons aforesaid from enjoying any Office in the said Company, or in those of the East-India, or Bank of England, &c. received the Royal Assent, Jan. 25. About which Time a Proclamation was published, promising a Reward of 2,000 l. for apprehending and securing Robert Knight.

In the latter End of February the House of Peers took into Consideration some Matters relating to a Tryal at the last Assizes at Hereford, touching the Presentation to the Vicarage of Leominster, which was claimed by Earl Coningsby, Lord Lieutenant and Custos Rotulorum of the County of Hereford; and at the same Time examined into the Complaint of the Lord High Chancellor, who, in a printed Pamphlet, intituled, The first Part of the Earl Coningsby's Case, relating to the Vicarage of Leominster, which had been given out at the Door of the Lords House, was smartly reflected on for putting disaffected Persons into the Commission of the Peace. The House having examined the Case, thought fit to censure the said Earl, and committed him to the Tower.

In the same Month James Stanhope, Earl Stanhope, one of His Majesty's principal Secretaries of State, Thomas Vernon of Hanbury in the County of Worcester, Knight of the Shire for that County, and a famous Counsellor, John Sheffield

A. D. field, Duke of Buckinghamshire.
1722. James Craggs, Esq; the other principal Secretary of State, and John Manners, Duke of Rutland, departed this Life.

March 27 was held at St. James's a Chapter of the Most Noble Order of the Garter, when Charles Fitzroy, Duke of Grafton, and Henry Clinton, Earl of Lincoln, were elected Knights Companions, in the room of the late Dukes of Buckinghamshire and Rutland.

April 15 about 7 in the Evening her Royal Highness the Princess of Wales was delivered of a Prince at Leicester House. And in the Beginning of the following Month the young Prince was privately baptized by the Name of William Augustus.

August 10 the King went to the House of Peers, and made a Speech, wherein he took Notice of the great Calamity occasioned by the wicked Execution of the South Sea Scheme; and of the Difficulties in providing proper Remedies for it; but at the same Time hinted, that the Losses sustained thereby had been industriously raised and inflamed by malicious and seditious Libels. After which the Parliament was prorogued to the Nineteenth Day of October next.

Not long after Dr. Thomas Green, Rector of St. Martin's in the Fields, was made Bishop of Norwich, in the room of Dr. Charles Trimmell, who was translated to Winchester. Dr. Benjamin Hoadley was translated to the See of Hereford, which was vacant by the Death of Dr. Philip Bisse, and Dr. William Talbot, Bishop of Sarum, was translated to the Bishoprick of Durham, vacant by the Death of Nathaniel Lord Crew.

The Parliament met October 19, and the King in his Speech acquainted them that Peace was happily restored in the North, by the Conclusion of the Treaty between the Czar and the King of Sweden; and that a great Number of British Subjects were delivered from Slavery by the Treaty lately concluded with the Moors, desired them to improve this favourable Opportunity by extending the Commerce of the Nation, particularly with Regard to Naval Stores; took Notice of the unspeakable Misery and Desolation occasioned by the raging of the Plague in several Parts of Europe, and recommended to them to take effectual Measures for suppressing the abominable Practice of running of Goods, by which the Contagion might be brought into this Nation.

December 8, a general Fast was religiously observed throughout England and Wales for deprecating God's Judgments, and averting the Plague. The same Month Richard Lumley, Earl of Scarborough, and John Cecil, Earl of Exeter, departed this Life, as did also Charles Lord Cornwallis, Charles Duke of Manchester, Robert Earl of Holderness, and Charles Duke of Bolton in the January following.

March 7, the King went to the House of Peers, and after an handsome and elegant Speech delivered by the Speaker on Account of their approaching Dissolution (it being now the seventh Year of their Session) gave the Royal Assent to several Bills, among which were, An Act to enable his Majesty effectually to prohibit Commerce (for the Space of one Year) with any Country that is or shall be infected with the Plague; An Act to enable the South Sea Company to dispose of the Effects in their Hands by way of Lottery or Subscription, &c. in order to pay the Debts of the said Company; and another for paying off and cancelling one Million of Exchequer Bills.

Bills. with for th
Th able in Fa liam who d a Mar it, w this
which ed to joyed
tion.

Apr
Earl o man;
Duke
Life a lowing nized on the His wards
Summe
al Hig
The H him at ty, an till the Wiltsh
Night to orde
the Po

At
he was of thar was me men in pliment Robert
the Co Record to his M and a P and ano
the Pri publick
he lodg followin

Bills. And then dismissed them with a gracious Speech of Thanks for their good Services.

There having been two remarkable Errors, one in Law, the other in Fact, in the Outlawry of William Herbert late Marquiss of Powis, who died in France in the Year 1696, a Mandamus was granted to reverse it, which was accordingly done this Year in Easter Term. By which Reversal his Son was restored to all the Titles his Father enjoyed before King James's Abdication.

April 19 died Charles Spencer Earl of Sunderland, an able Statesman; and John Churchill the great Duke of Morlborough departed this Life about the middle of June following, whose Funeral was Solemnized with very great Magnificence on the ninth Day of August.

His Majesty made a Progress towards the West of England this Summer, accompanied by his Royal Highness the Prince of Wales. The High Sheriff of Hampshire met him at his Entrance into that County, and continued his Attendance till they came to the Borders of Wiltshire. His Majesty lay the first Night at Hackwood, and was pleased to order 50 Guineas to be given to the Poor of Basingstoke.

At his Entrance into Wiltshire he was received by the High Sheriff of that County. At Salisbury he was met by the Mayor and Aldermen in their Formalities, and complimented on their Part by Sir Robert Eyre, one of the Justices of the Court of King's Bench, their Recorder. The Mayor presented to his Majesty the Keys of the City, and a Purse with 100 Guineas in it, and another Purse of 50 Guineas to the Prince. His Majesty supped in publick at the Bishop's Palace, where he lodged that Night. The Day following, his Majesty having attended Divine Service in the Cathedral, proceeded to the Camp hard by, and on Horseback reviewed the several Regiments there, being greatly pleased with the excellent Order in which they all appeared. A very great Concourse of People from all Parts added not a little to this magnificent Appearance. At his Return to the Palace, the Bishop, attended by the Dean and Chapter, and many of the Neighbouring Clergy made a very handsome Speech to his Majesty, and had the Honour to kiss his Hand. The two Nights of his continuing at Salisbury, the Houses of the several Streets in that City were finely illuminated, and his Majesty was so well pleased with his Reception, that he gave upwards of two thousands Pounds to relieve the Necessities of the Poor there, and other publick Uses. From Salisbury he proceeded to Winchester, where he was met by the Mayor and Aldermen in their Formalities; and the Poor there were also Partakers of his Liberality. From thence he went to Portsmouth, where he was received by Sir John Norris and Sir Charles Wager, Commissioners of the Admiralty, and by the Commissioners of the Navy there, the Officers of the Dock, and a great Number of Sea Officers. His Majesty, having viewed the Yards and Magazines, went on board the Canterbury Man-of War, and was saluted by the Shouts of a Multitude of People (who filled the Decks and Shrouds of all the Ships in the Harbour) as well as by the Guns of all the Ships in that Neighbourhood. His Majesty having conferred the Honour of Knighthood on Isaac Townshend, Esq; Commissioner of the Navy there, and on Jacob Ackworth Esq; Surveyor of the Navy, and having ordered 500 l. to be distributed among the Workmen of the 1722.

A. D.

the Dock, proceeded into the Town, and was received by the Mayor and Aldermen in their Formalities, the Garrison of that Place, commanded by Lieutenant General Maccartney, being under Arms, and the Cannons of the Ramparts firing; and passing through the Streets, which where all thronged with People, alighted at the House of Mr. Ridge, where many Nobility and Gentry had the Honour to kiss his Hand. From Portsmouth he went in the Evening to Stanstead, the Seat of the Earl of Scarborough, the Houses of every Village in his Passage thither being illuminated, and many Bonfires lighted. Here the Canons, Residentiaries, and Prebendaries of the Cathedral Church of Chichester, with many Clergymen of those Parts, as also the Mayor, Recorder, Aldermen, and Citizens of the City of Chester, presented their Addresses, and his Majesty conferred the Honour of Knighthood on Thomas Peckham Esq; High Sheriff of Sussex. From hence his Majesty proceeded to Guildford, where he ordered 50 l. to be given to the Poor Prisoners for Debt, and arrived in perfect Health at his Palace at Kensington.

October 9, the new Parliament met at Westminster, and chose Spencer Compton Esq; for their Speaker. The King in his Speech, informed them of new Designs against his Government, and that the Conspirators had made, by their Emissaries, the strongest Instances for Assistance from Foreign Powers, but were disappointed in their Expectations; that however, confiding in their Numbers, and not discouraged by their former ill Success, they resolved once more, upon their own Strength, to attempt the Subversion of the Government; and that some of the Conspirators had been taken up and secured, and Endeavours were used for the apprehending others. Upon this it was moved that the Habeas Corpus should be suspended for a Time, which after some Struggles was carried in the Affirmative. The Earl of Orrery, Bishop of Rockester, and the Lord North and Grey were committed to the Tower for High Treason, and the Duke of Norfolk, who had been seized by his Majesty's Order, was with the Consent of the House of Peers committed to the same Place.

November 21, Christopher Layer Esq; was tryed at the King's Bench, Westminster, on Account of the said Conspiracy, and after a very long hearing the Jury brought him in guilty of High Treason, and he was executed at Tyburn on the Seventeenth of May, by virtue of a Rule of Court. He was charged with having kept a Correspondence with the Pretender, and other Enemies of the Government beyond the Seas, and a Scheme was produced in Court of the Method agreed upon for seizing the Tower of London, that they were to proceed from thence to the Exchange, the Gates of the City to be shut up, and Pieces of Cannon brought down against them, to place a Guard at the several Gates and Inlets, and then to march back to Tower Hill, which was to be the Place of general Rendezvous. And afterwards to seize the King's Person, &c. The Watch Word to be This Morning.

About this Time great Numbers of disorderly and ill designing Persons associated themselves under the Name of Blacks, and being armed with Swords, Fire Arms, and other offensive Weapons, entred, in disguised Habits, with their Faces blacked, into several Forests and Parks in the Counties of Berks and Southampton, and killed and carried away many Deer; and frequently

sent

sent menacing Letters to the Owners and Keepers of Parks, demanding Venison and Money to be sent to them in certain Places mentioned in the Letters, threatened, in Case of Failure of Performance of their illegal Demands, to murder the Persons to whom they sent such Letters, or to burn their Houses, Barns, or Hay Stacks. And to such a Pitch of Audaciousness were several of these Persons grown, that they assembled in large Bodies, shot at many Persons in their Houses, maimed their Horses and Cattle, broke down their Gates and Fences, and cut down Avenues, Plantations, and Heads of Fish Ponds, and robbed them of their Fish. To prevent these outrageous Practices, a Proclamation was published by the King and Council, dated February 2, offering one Hundred Pounds Reward for every Person apprehended and convicted of the Offences aforesaid.

March 13, the Chancellor of the Exchequer acquainted the House of Commons, that his Majesty having had just Reason to apprehend Dr. Freind, one of their Members, for High Treason, had caused him to be secured, and desired their Concurrence, on which the House, after some Debate, addressed his Majesty to confine him. Both Houses appointed Committees to examine the Papers and other Evidences relating to the Conspiracy; who having severally made their Reports, the Prisoners were permitted to defend themselves in Regard to the Bills then depending against them. Which, with the Time spent in examining into the Management of the Harburgh Lottery, employed a good Part of this Session.

This Conspiracy was so artfully carried on under fictitious Names, that it required much Application to come at the true Knowledge of some of the Persons concerned therein. Among others the Name of Digby often occurring in the Papers seized by the Government on this Occasion, and appearing to have had a considerable Hand in the Contrivance, Orders were sent to Mr. Crawford, his Majesty's Resident at Paris, to discover, if possible, the Person meant by that Name; which was found out by this Artifice: Mr. Crawford, folded up a Paper in the Form of a Letter, sealed it, and directed it to Mr. Digby at Paris; then wrapped it up in a Piece of waste Paper, with a Memorandum in it, to be informed at Mr. Waters's, Banker in Christine Street, in what Part of Paris Mr. Digby lived. A smart young Fellow, who could speak both French and English, was ordered to go booted and a little dirtied to Mr. Waters's, and to open before him this Sham Letter, read the Memorandum, shew him the Direction of the Letter, and to desire him at the same Time to send some body with him to conduct him to the Place it was to be delivered; that as soon as he should come to the Door where it was to be delivered, he should pretend to have left a Packet at Home, and should slip away from his Conductor with the Excuse of fetching it. Waters was not at Home when the Messenger came, but his chief Book-keeper, without giving himself the Trouble of going, wrote under the Name of Digby, A Monsieur Dillon, Rue Colombier a l'Hotel d'Hollande; which was the ordinary Residence of Lieutenant General Dillon.

Philip Neynoe, Clerk, who was to have been principal Evidence, was drowned in attempting to make his Escape from the Messengers.

A. D.
1723.

The Report made by the Committee of the House of Commons having been printed, from whence the curious Reader may inform himself as to Particulars, I shall only observe in general, that the Committee delivered it as their Opinion, That a Design had been long carrying on by Persons of Figure and Distinction at Home, in Conjunction with Traitors abroad, for placing the Pretender on the Throne of these Kingdoms. That various Methods had been attempted, and different Times fixed for putting this Design in Execution. That the first Intention was to have procured a regular Body of foreign Forces to invade these Kingdoms at the Time of the late Elections; but that the Conspirators, being disappointed in this Expectation, resolved next to make an Attempt at the Time that it was generally believed his Majesty intended to go to Hanover, by the Help of such Officers and Soldiers as could pass into England unobserved from abroad, under the Command of the late Duke of Ormond, who was to have landed in the River with a great Quantity of Arms, provided in Spain for that Purpose, at which Time the Tower was likewise to have been seized, and the City of London to have been made a Place for Arms; but this Design being also disappointed by the Discoveries made in England, and his Majesty's putting off his Journey, by the Incampment of his Forces at Home, as well as the sending for those from Ireland, and by the Readiness of his Majesty's good Allies the States General, to assist him in case of Need, by the Orders given in Spain, that the late Duke of Ormond should not be suffered to embark, and the like Orders issued in France, that he should not be suffered to pass through that Kingdom, the Conspirators found themselves under a Necessity of deferring their Enterprize till the Breaking up of the Camp: During which Interval, they were labouring by their Agents and Emissaries to corrupt and seduce the Officers and Soldiers of his Majesty's Army, and depended so much on this Defection, as to entertain Hopes of placing the Pretender on the Throne, though they should obtain no Assistance from abroad, which nevertheless they still continued to solicit for.

After a mature Consideration of the whole Matter, three several Acts to inflict Pains and Penalties on Francis Lord Bishop of Rochester, John Plunket, and George Kelly alias Johnson, passed both Houses, and received the Royal Assent, May 27, at which Time the Parliament was prorogued.

Feb. 22, the Princess of Wales was delivered of a Princess at Leicester House, who was baptized by the Name of Mary.

In the same Month Sir Christopher Wren, the famous Architect, departed this Life in the Ninety-first Year of his Age. In the Beginning of April, died Edward Hyde, Earl of Clarendon, and not long after Dr. John Robinson, Bishop of London, in the Ninety-third Year of his Age; upon whose Death, Dr. Edmund Gibson was translated to London, and Dr. Richard Reynolds to Lincoln; Dr. Samuel Bradford to Rochester, vacant by the Deprivation of Dr. Francis Atterbury; Dr. William Baker, Rector of St. Giles in the Fields was promoted to the See of Bangor, and Dr. John Waugh, Dean of Gloucester, to Carlisle.

In the latter End of May, Thomas Howard, Duke of Norfolk, William North, Lord North and

Grey,

Grey,
Cockran, Tower, soner to Bail
after,
Michae
His his Co
nary A Summe Justices
the G sence,
In th
part,
William
Robert and Ke of Aug
berts, William
and no
Month shop o ward Genera
upon Winche
bury,
Leng w and D Herefor
Lord
William lately of exce this L died Si nent P
Lord E Decem
from some T trary
the 28
and the
St. Jan
The
and th
gratula

Grey, Dennis Kelly, and Thomas Cockran, Esq; Prisoners in the Tower, and David du Boyce, Prisoner in Newgate, were admitted to Bail; as was Dr. Friend not long after, and were all discharged in Michaelmas Term following.

His Majesty having signified to his Council that some extraordinary Affairs called him abroad this Summer, and appointed Lords Justices for the Administration of the Government during his Absence, set out for Hanover, June 3.

In the same Month Richard Newport, Earl of Bradford, and Sir William Saint Quintin, and in July Robert Bertie, Duke of Ancaster and Kesteven, and in the Beginning of August, Charles Bodville Roberts, Earl of Radnor, and Dr. William Fleetwood, Bishop of Ely, and not long after in the same Month, Dr. Charles Trimmell, Bishop of Winchester, and Sir Edward Northey, formerly Attorney General, departed this Life; whereupon Dr. Willis was translated to Winchester, Dr. Hoadley to Salisbury, Dr. Green to Ely, Dr. John Leng was made Bishop of Norwich, and Dr. Henry Egerton, Bishop of Hereford. Sept. 19. Robert Sutton, Lord Lexington, and October 10, William Cowper, Earl Cowper, lately Lord Chancellor, a Person of excellent Endowments, departed this Life. In the same Month died Sir Godfrey, Kneller, an eminent Painter, and Christopher Vane, Lord Barnard.

December 12, his Majesty set out from Hanover, was detained for some Time at Helvoetsluys by contrary Winds, landed at Margate the 28th, lay at Chatham the 29th, and the next Evening arrived safe at St. James's.

The Parliament met January 9, and the King in his Speech congratulated them upon the Success of their Endeavours, last Year, for the Safety, Interest, and Honour of the Kingdom; and told them, that the Rise of the Publick Credit, the flourishing Condition of our Trade and Manufactures, and the great Tranquility of the People, were the happy Consequences of their prudent Resolutions; and that it was to be hoped, that the few Examples which were made of some notorious Offenders, would be sufficient to deter the most disaffected from engaging in the like desperate, and wicked Practices: Recommended to them to make use of the Opportunity, which their own good Conduct had put into their Hands, in considering of such farther Laws, as might be wanting for the Ease and Encouragement of Trade and Navigation, for the Employment of the Poor, and for the exciting and encouraging a Spirit of Industry in the Nation. And concluded with exhorting them to join heartily in every Thing that might tend to promote the mutual Happiness of the Kingdom, and to extinguish the Hopes of those, who long have been and still are restless in their Endeavours to subject this Nation to the whole Train of Miseries, that are inseparable from Popery, and Arbitrary Power.

Upon a Complaint made of a great Number of written Protections, granted by some Members of both Houses, the same were declared to be void; and Orders made for preventing the pernicious Consequences of this evil Practice.

The Trustees appointed to secure and dispose of the Estates and Effects belonging to the late South Sea Directors, delivered in their Accounts to the Parliament this Session, by which it appeared that the Sum of One Million four hundred seven thousand two hundred and eighty Pounds and upwards had been raised by the same.

A. D.
1724.

Likewise the Commissioners of the forfeited Estates in Scotland delivered in their Accounts, and the Total of the Estates sold amounted to Sixty six thousand two hundred and thirty six Pounds.

The Parliament having provided the Annual Supplies, and passed several Acts, among which were, An Act for completing the Rebuilding of the Parish Church of St. Martin's in the Fields; and an Act for the Rebuilding the Parish Church of St. Botolph's Bishopsgate, in the City of London, at the Charge of the Inhabitants of the said Parish; his Majesty came to the House of Peers April 22, and put a Close to the Session.

About the Middle of May his Majesty was pleased to order the following Circular Letter to be written to the Universities of Oxford and Cambridge.

GEORGE R.

TRusty and Well-beloved,
“ we greet you well.
“ We being greatly desirous to “ favour and encourage our two “ Universities, those ancient and “ laudable Nurseries of Piety and “ Learning, and to enable them “ more effectually to answer the “ End of their Institution, by “ sending forth constant Supplies “ of learned and able Men, to “ serve the Publick both in Church
“ and State; and having observed “ that no Encouragement or Pro“ vision has hitherto been made “ in either of the said Universities,
“ for the Study of Modern History “ or Modern Languages, the “ Knowledge of which is highly “ necessary towards compleatly “ qualifying the Youth committed “ to their Care for several Stations

“ both in Church and State, to “ which they may be called; and “ having seriously weighed the “ Prejudice that has accrued to the “ said Universities from this De“ fect, Persons of Foreign Nations “ being often employed in the E“ ducation and Tuition of Youth,
“ both at Home and in their Tra“ vels, and great Numbers of the “ Nobility and Gentry being ei“ ther sent abroad directly from “ School, or taken away from “ the Universities before the “ Course of their Studies can be “ there compleated, and Oppor“ tunities lost to the Crown, of “ employing and encouraging
“ Members of the two Univer“ ties, by conferring on them such “ Employments, both at Home and “ Abroad, as necessarily require a “ competent Skill in writing and “ speaking the modern Languages.
“ In Order therefore to remedy
“ these and the like Inconveni“ encies, we have determined to “ appoint two Persons of Sober “ Conversation and prudent Con“ duct, of the Degree of Master
“ of Arts, or Batchelor of Laws, “ or of some higher Degree in “ one of the said Universities, “ skilled in Modern History and “ in the Knowledge of Modern “ Languages, to be nominated by “ us, to be our Professors of Mo“ dern History; one for the Uni“ versity of Cambridge, and the “ other for the University of Ox- “ ford, who shall be obliged to “ read Lectures in the Publick “ Schools, at such Times as shall “ hereafter be appointed. And “ we have further determined,
“ that each of the said Professors “ shall have a Stipend of four “ hundred Pounds per Annum, and “ out of the said Stipend shall be “ obliged to maintain with suffici“ ent Salaries, in the University “ where “ where “ two Pe “ fied to “ ing a “ guages “ shall b

“ the Pr “ shall b
“ in the “ Schola “ be nor “ Schola “ obligec
“ the fa “ Profess “ especia “ and H “ teachin “ ordere “ those “ mical
“ and T “ once “ atteste “ made “ to the “ Secret “ before “ rage t “ on of “ have “ our S “ suitab “ Home “ shall o
“ and P “ upon “ Cong “ muni “ tions
“ we b “ our “ fixtee
By

Here turned to his M
And Harris

“ where he shall be established,
 “ two Persons at least, well quali“ fied to teach and instruct in writ“ ing and speaking the said Lan“ guages, which said Teachers “ shall be under the Direction of “ the Professors respectively, and “ shall be obliged to instruct gratis
 “ in the modern Languages twenty “ Scholars of each University, to “ be nominated by us; and each “ Scholar so nominated shall be “ obliged to learn two at least of “ the said Languages, both the “ Professors and Teachers taking “ especial Care, that the Times “ and Hours for the instructing and “ teaching the said Scholars be so “ ordered, as not to interfere with “ those appointed for their Acade“ mical Studies; which Professors
 “ and Teachers shall be obliged “ once every Year to transmit an “ attested Account of the Progress “ made by each Scholar committed “ to their Care, to our principal “ Secretaries of State, to be laid “ before us, that we may encou“ rage the Diligence and Applicati“ on of such amongst them, as shall “ have qualified themselves for “ our Service, by giving them “ suitable Employments, either at “ Home or Abroad, as Occasions “ shall offer. And our Royal Will
 “ and Pleasure is, that you forthwith
 “ upon the Receipt hereof call a “ Congregation, in Order to com“ municate these our Royal Inten“ tions to the University. And so “ we bid you farewell. Given at “ our Court at St. James’s the “ sixteenth Day of May, 1724.

By his Majesty’s Command, Townsend.

Hereupon both Universities returned their most humble Thanks to his Majesty.

And not long after Mr. Samuel Harris and Mr. David Gregory were nominated by his Majesty to be his Professors of modern History, the first in the University of Cambridge, the other in that of Oxford.

In March this Year Leavis Watson, Earl of Rockingham, and in April Sir William Dawes, Archbishop of York, departed this Life; the latter was succeeded in that See by Dr. Lancelot Blackburn then Bishop of Exeter, and Dr. Stephen Weston was promoted to Exeter. In May Robert Harley, Earl of Oxford and Earl Mortimer, and in July Dr. Thomas Lindsay, Archbishop of Armagh, and Primate of all Ireland, departed this Life, upon which Dr. Hugh Boulter, Bishop of Bristol, was translated to Armagh, and Dr. William Bradshaw was promoted to Bristol. About the same time died Dr. Thomas Bowers, Bishop of Chichester, and was succeeded by Dr. Edward Waddington, and Dr. Robert Clavering was nominated to the See of Landaff in the room of Dr. John Tyler deceased. In the Beginning of November Dr. Humphry Prideaux, Dean of Norwich, a Person well known to the Learned World, departed this Life.

December 7, Her Royal Highness the Princess of Wales was delivered of a Princess, who was some time after christened at Leicester House by the Name of Louisa. In the same Month Sir Jacob Banks, and Thomas Guy, Esq; sole Founder of the Hospital for Incurables in Southwark, departed this Life.

The Parliament met November 11. The Affair of chief Moment transacted this Session, besides the usual Supplies, the regulating future Elections in the City of London, and the Act to enable Henry St. John, late Viscount Bolinbroke, and the Heirs Male of his Body, notwithstanding his Attainder, to take and enjoy several Manors, &c. was the Trial of Thomas Earl 1724.

A. D.

A. D.
1725.

of Macclesfield, against whom Articles of Impeachment for high Crimes and Misdemeanours were lodged by the Commons in the House of Peers. The Tenour whereof was, that he, during the Time of his being Lord High Chancellor of Great-Britain, had received several exorbitant Sums of Money, therein particularly set forth, of certain Persons, as a Consideration for their being admitted into the Offices of Masters of Chancery, though some of them were very unfit to be intrusted with such Employments, and that he had been negligent in securing the Effects of divers Suitors of the said Court, which had been deposited in the Hands of the Masters; by which Means several of the Suitors had been very great Losers. The House of Peers, after a long and full hearing, being satisfied with the Proof of these Crimes, gave the following Judgment against him by their Speaker, Sir Peter King: That Thomas Earl of Macclesfield be fined in the Sum of thirty thousand Pounds unto our Sovereign Lord the King; and that he be imprisoned in the Tower of London, and there kept in safe Custody, until he shall pay the said Fine. Whither he was accordingly committed and detained a Prisoner there till the twenty second Day of July following, at which Time, having paid the Fine imposed upon him, he was discharged out of Custody.

The said Earl having resigned the Great Seal in the Beginning of this Year, his Majesty in Council committed the Custody thereof to Sir Joseph Jekyll, Master of the Rolls, Jeffrey Gilbert Esq; one of the Barons of the Exchequer, and Sir Robert Raymond, one of the Justices of the King's Bench; and Sir Peter King, Lord Chief Justice of the Common Pleas, officiated as Speaker of the House of Lords by Virtue of a Commission granted for that Purpose.

January 18, Hugh Cholmondeley, Earl of Cholmondely, Treasurer of his Majesty's Household, departed this Life; and not long after, upon the Death of Sir John Pratt Sir Robert Raymond was advanced to be Lord Chief Justice of the King's Bench in his Stead. About this Time also died the Czar of Muscovy, upon which his Consort the Czarina ascended that Throne.

March 14, died Henry Boyle Lord Carlton, President of his Majesty's Privy Council, in which Post he was succeeded by the Duke of Devonshire.

Towards the latter End of May the Lord Chief Justice King was created a Peer of Great-Britain by the Name of Lord King, Baron of Ockham.

About this Time his Majesty was pleased to revive the Ancient Order of Knights of the Bath, and appointed John Duke of Montague to be the first great Master thereof. Prince William was knighted in his Majesty's Closet, Garter King of Arms administered the Oath to the grand Master, who took the same kneeling and then put a red Ribbon about his Grace's Neck. On June 17, the Day appointed for the Solemnity of the Installation, the several Knights repaired to the Speaker's Chamber at Westminster, where they were appraised in their proper Habits, viz. Surcoats of red, lined and edged with white, girded with a plain white Girdle, having Mantles of the same Colour fastened to the Neck with a Lace of white Silk and a Pair of white Gloves tyed therein, with Tassels of Silk and Gold at the End, the Mantles being adorned on the left Shoulder with the Ensign of the Order, namely, three imperial Crowns or were incirled with this Motto, Tria juncta in uno, wrought upon a Circle gules, with a Glory of Rays issuing from the Center. After this they proceeded to their Chamber Room, the Prince's Chamber, and from thence went in solemn procession to the West-Door of the Abby Church, through St. Margaret's Church-Yard, by a Passage made for that Purpose with Rails on each Side floored with Boards, and covered with Cloth. In this Procession they were preceded by the Drummers and Trumpeters of his Majesty's Guards, twelve Almsmen belonging to the Church of Westminister, the Messenger of the Order, their own Esquires, the Prebendaries of Westminister, and the Pursuivants and Herald's; those belonging to the lowest Stalls going remotest. Divine Service being ended, the Knights dined together in a magnificent Manner, each of them having an Escutcheon of his Arms and Titles fixed to the Wall over his Seat. The whole Ceremony was perform'd with much Pomp and Solemnity. The Persons then installed were Prince William, as he was then commonly called, the great Master of the Order, the Dukes of Richmond and Manchester, the Earls of Leicester, Albermarle, Bute, Devonshire, Halifax, Suffolk, and Somerset, the Lord Viscount Torrington, the Lords Burford, Nassau, Portland, Malpas, Delawar, Clinton, and Walpole, Sir Spencer Compton, Sir William Stanhope, Sir Coniers D'Arcy, Sir Thomas Lumley Saunderson, Sir Paul Methuen, Sir Robert Walpole, Sir Robert Sutton, Sir Charles Wills, Sir John Hobart, Sir William Gage, Sir Robert Clifforde, Sir Michael Newton, Sir William Yonge, Sir Thomas Watson Wentworth, Sir John Monson, Sir William Morgan, Sir Thomas Cole;

the Earl of Inchiqueen, and the Viscount Tyrconnel.

In May this Year Robert Lord Viscount Moleſworth departed this Life.

In the Beginning of June the Lord King was declar'd Lord High Chancellor of Great Britain, Sir Robert Eyre was appointed Lord Chief Justice of the Common Pleas, and Sir Jeffrey Gilbert made Lord Chief Baron of the Exchequer.

About the same Time his Majesty, having committed the Management of publick Affairs to Lords Justices, set out for his German Dominions, from whence he returned the Ninth of January following.

October 23, Charles Lord Whitworth departed this Life; as did also Francis Gastrel Bishop of Chester, about the Middle of November, who was succeeded by Dr. Samuel Peploe.

The Ostend Company lately set up in the Netherlands, and supported by the Treaty of Commerce entered into by the Emperor and King of Spain, gave great Umbrage to the English, and Dutch. By this Treaty the Subjects on either Side had free Liberty to go unto and tarry in the Kingdoms, Provinces, and Dominions belonging to either of those Monarchs, without standing in Need of any Pass or safe Conduct, and were intituled to the Enjoyment of the same publick Protection as the Native Subjects. The latter hereupon presented a Memorial to the King of Spain, containing several Reasons they had to be uneasy on that Score; and his Britannick Majesty was pleased to enter into the following Alliance, in order to avoid the ill Consequences thereof.

The Treaty of Defensive Alliance concluded at Hanover September 3, 1725, between his Britannick Majesty,

A. D. 1725. jesty, the most Christian King, and the King of Prussia:

Their Majesties, the King of Great Britain, the most Christian King, and the King of Prussia, having seen with Pleasure, how far the strict Union that subsists between them, has contributed, not only to the Happiness of their respective Kingdoms and Subjects, but also to the publick Good and Tranquillity; being also assured, that the most effectual Means to secure and preserve those Advantages against whatever Accidents might happen, is more and more to cultivate the said Union, and render it firm and lasting: And having maturely reflected on all the Treaties, which already subsist between their said Majesties (from which they declare, it is not their Intention, in any wise, by the present Treaty to derogate) they have thought fit previously to take new Measures, for those Cases which might raise a Disturbance in Europe, in agreeing between themselves on what should be most proper and necessary, not only for the Security and most essential Interests of their respective Kingdoms, but also for the publick Good and Tranquillity. For these Reasons, and in this View, their said Britannick, most Christian, and Prussian Majesties, have given their full Powers, viz. his Britannick Majesty to the Right Honourable Charles Viscount Townsend, Baron of Lynn, Lord Lieutenant of the County of Norfolk, Knight of the most noble Order of the Garter, &c. and his Secretary of State; his most Christian, to Francis Count De Broglie, Lieutenant General of his Forces, Director General of the Horse and Dragoons, Governour of Mont Dauphin, and his Ambassador to the said most serene King of Great Britain; and his Prussian Majesty, to the Sieur John Christopher de Wallendorf, his Minister of State, and Envoy extraordinary to the said most serene King of Great Britain; who in Virtue of the said full Powers (Copies whereof were inserted, word for word, at the End of the present Treaty), having with the greatest Attention, weighed and considered on the most proper Measures to compass what their said Majesties propose to themselves have agreed on the following Articles:

I. There shall be from this Time and at all Times hereafter, a true, firm, and inviolable Peace, the most sincere and intimate Friendship, and the strictest Alliance and Union, between the said three most serene Kings, their Heirs and Successors, their States, Countries, and Cities situated on their respective Territories, their Subjects and Inhabitants, as well in as out of Europe; and the Union shall be preserved and cultivated in such Manner, that the contracting Powers may faithfully promote their respective Interests and Advantages, and prevent and repair all Wrongs and Oppressions, by the most convenient Methods that they can think of.

II. As the true End and Intention of this Alliance between the said Kings is mutually to preserve the Peace and Tranquillity of their respective Kingdoms, their said Majesties promise their mutual Guaranty to protect and defend all the Dominions, Countries, and Cities, as well in as out of Europe, which each Ally shall be actually in Possession of at the signing of this Treaty; and also their Rights, Privileges and Advantages, and particularly those relating to Trade, which the said Allies do or ought respectively to enjoy. And to that End, the said Kings have agreed, that if, in Opposition to this Alliance, or on any other Pretence, any of the id Allies, should be attacked in an hostile Manner, or suffer any Wrong the Things abovementioned, from any Prince or State whatsoever, the others would imploy their good Offices to see Justice done to the offended Party, and prevail on the Aggressor to abstain from any future Wrong or Hostility.

III. And if it should happen, that any of the Contracting Powers should be openly attacked or molested in the abovesaid Cases, and the beforemention'd good Offices failed of procuring a just Redress and Satisfaction for all Wrongs and Damages sustained by the injured Party, that then the other Powers, within two Months after Demand, shall furnish the following Succours; to wit,

His Britannick Majesty eight thousand Foot, and four thousand Horse.

In like Case, his most Christian Majesty eight thousand Foot, and four thousand Horse.

And in like Case also, his Prussian Majesty three thousand Foot, and two thousand Horse.

But if the Party attack'd had rather be supplied with Men of War and Transports, or Money, which however shall always be left to his choice, then the other Powers shall furnish him with Ships or Money, in Proportion to the Expence of the Troops as above stipulated. And to prevent all Dispute in Relation to this Expence, the Contracting Powers have agreed, that a thousand Foot shall be valued at ten thousand Dutch Florins per Month, and a thousand Horse at thirty thousand Florins of the same Money per Month, and so in Proportion for Men of War and Transports. If the abovemention'd Succours are not sufficient to redress the offended Party, the contracting Powers will then agree on furnishing more Forces. And in short, in Case of A. D. Necessity, the said Allies will assist the injured Party with all their Forces, and even declare War against the Aggressor.

IV. And as the three most serene Kings are resolved to cement, and more and more confirm the strict Union that subsists between them, by all possible Testimonies of good Faith, and mutual Confidence, they have reciprocally agreed, not only to decline entering into any Treaty, Alliance, or Engagement whatsoever, which might any way be prejudicial to their respective Interests; but also faithfully to communicate to each other the Proposals that might be made to them; and upon such Proposals to take no Resolution but in Concert, and after having jointly examined what would be convenient for their common Interest, and proper to preserve the Balance of Europe, which is so entirely necessary for the Good of the general Tranquility.

V. As his most Christian Majesty who in Quality of Guarantee of the Treaties of Westphalia is particularly interested in the Preservation of the Rights and Privileges of the German Body, and their Britannick and Prussian Majesties, as Members of the said Body, behold with Regret the Seeds of Discord that are sowing, and hear with Grief such Complaints, as may at Length break out, and occasion a War, whose terrible Consequences would inevitably affect all Europe; their said Majesties, always attentive to what might one Day or another disturb the Tranquility of the Empire in particular, and that of Europe in general, promise and engage mutually to assist each other, for the defending and preserving the above-mentioned Treaties, and other Acts, which, by their Determinations upon the Affairs of the Empire, are look'd on

A. D.
1725.

as the Basis and Foundation of the Tranquility of the German Body and the Support of its Rights, Privileges, and Immunities; for the Maintenance of which their said Majesties are truly desirous of making a fixed and solid Provision.

VI. This Alliance shall subsist fifteen Years, commencing from the Day of its being signed.

VII. Their Britannick, most Christian and Prussian Majesties will invite such Princes and States, as they shall agree on, to accede to the present Treaty; and they have from this Day agreed to invite by Name the States General of the United Provinces.

VIII. This present Treaty shall be approved and ratified by the King of Great Britain, the most Christian King, and the King of Prussia; and the Ratifications deliver'd within two Months from the Day of its being sign'd, or sooner if possible.

In Testimony whereof we, by Virtue of our respective full Powers, have sign'd this present Treaty, to which we have caused our respective Seals to be affixed.

At Hanover (L. S.) Townshend
September 3, (L. S.) Broglie 1725. (L. S.) Wallendrot.

To which were added the following separate Articles:

1. As the Affair which lately happened in the City of Thorn [the putting several Protestants there to cruel Deaths on Account of Religion] and its Consequences, have alarm'd several Princes and States, who fear, that contrary to the Treaty of Oliva, it will raise Troubles and Disturbances, not only in Poland, but also in the neighbouring Countries: Their Britannick, most Christian and Prussian Majesties, who, as Guarantees of the said

Treaty of Oliva, are interested and concern'd in its Preservation and punctual Execution, engage to employ their mutual Offices, in the most effectual Manner, to obtain Redress for what may have been done contrary to the Treaty of Oliva; and to that Purpose they shall, in Concert, take Information by their Ministers in Poland, of the Infractions that may have been made upon the said Treaty of Oliva and of the Means of remedying them, in such a Manner, as may entirely secure the publick Tranquillity against the Dangers it might be exposed to, in case so solemn a Treaty as that of Oliva should any ways be infringed.

2. If the Empire, resenting the Assistance given by his most Christian Majesty to their Britannick and Prussian Majesties, for preventing any Disturbance in the Territories they enjoy, should declare War against his said most Christian Majesty (as in such a Case that Declaration would no less concern the most serene Kings of Great Britain and Prussia, whose Interests alone have given Birth to this War, than it would his most Christian Majesty) they will not only decline furnishing their Contingencies in Troops, or in any other Nature of Succour whatever as Members of the abovesaid Body, although their said Britannick and Prussian Majesties were not comprised and named in the Empire's Declaration of War against France, but will also act in Concert with his most Christian Majesty, till the Peace, which had been disturbed on that Occasion, should be again restored: His Britannick Majesty further promising faithfully to execute in that Case as well as in all others the Treaties concluded between him and his most Christian Majesty who also observe t

3. If it withstand jesty's R to all h
the Emp not dero ty, some ken by France, t neral Gu stipulated ty; their Majesties
use their Authority Manner,
and by Friends, other con thods, to of any t if, against Endeavour Declare W in that a Defens be oblig gents) how oute from essies, if obliged t Members
British a erve to furnishing antry on own Troo es taken themselves their Brit shall not, ngents f
to have ent Treas
all its Fo russian urnish,
Number Christian

who also on his Part promiseth to observe them faithfully.

3. If it should happen, that, notwithstanding his most Christian Majesty's Resolution firmly to adhere to all his Treaties, in Regard to the Empire, from which he hath not derogated by the present Treaty, some Resolution should be taken by the said Empire against France, to the Prejudice of the general Guaranty of the Possessions stipulated by the present Treaty; their Britannick and Prussian Majesties Promise, in such Case, to use their good Offices, Credit, and Authority, in the most effectual Manner, either by Word of Mouth, and by Means of Princes, their Friends, at the Diet; or else by all other convenient and proper Methods, to prevent the committing of any thing contrary to it. But if, against all their Expectations and Endeavours, the Empire should declare War against France, (tho' in that Case, being no longer a Defensive One, they would not be obliged to furnish any Contingents) however, to remove all Dispute from between their said Majesties, if they thought themselves obliged to fulfil their Duties, as Members of that Body, their said British and Prussian Majesties reserve to themselves the Liberty of furnishing their Contingents in Infantry or Cavalry, out of their own Troops, or other Foreign Forces taken into their Pay, as they themselves shall think proper; and their British and Prussian Majesties shall not, by reason of their Contingents so furnished, be thought to have countervailed to this present Treaty, which shall remain in all its Force. Their British and Prussian Majesties promise not to furnish, in that Case, a greater Number of Forces against his most Christian Majesty, than what they are oblig'd to furnish for their Contingents; and, that in all other Respects in the abovementioned Case, they will fulfil their Engagements to the King of France; who on his Part shall not, because of the said Contingent, perform any Acts of Hostility in the Dominions of the said most serene Kings of Great Britain and Prussia, in the Empire, or elsewhere; nor demand or raise any Contribution, Forage, Quarters, Passage, or any thing else, to the Prejudice of the said Countries and Dominions, under any Pretence whatsoever. And, on the other Hand, the said Dominions and Subjects shall not furnish his most Christian Majesty's Enemies with any of the said Things; who likewise engageth and promiseth, on his Part, that if the Empire should take any Resolutions, like those mention'd in this Article, to the Prejudice of the Kings of Great Britain and Prussia, his most Christian Majesty would openly take their Part, and assist them with all necessary Vigour, pursuant to this Treaty, till the Disturbances be appeased, and the Wrongs and Infractions rectified.

On Thursday, January 20, the Parliament met, and the King in his Speech having declar'd to them the Pleasure he had in meeting a Parliament of whose Wisdom and Zeal he had had frequent Experience, was pleas'd to tell them, that the distressed Condition of some Protestant Brethren abroad, and the Negotiations and Engagements entered into by some Foreign Powers, seem'd to have laid the Foundation of new Troubles and Disturbances in Europe, and to threaten the British Subjects with the Loss of several of the most advantageous Branches of their Trade, which obliged him, without Loss of Time, to concert, with other Powers, such Measures,

A. D.
1726.

Measures as might give a Check to the Ambitious Views of those who were endeavouring to render themselves formidable; and that for these Ends he had entred into a Defensive Alliance with the most Christian King, and the King of Prussia, to which several other Powers, and particularly the States General had been invited to accede, and that he did not doubt of their Concurrence; told them of his Design to have a strong Fleet at Sea early in the Spring; hinted that the Enemies to his Government might conceive Hopes that some favourable Opportunity for renewing their Attempts might occur from the Prospect of new Troubles and Commotions; that they were already very busy by their Instruments and Emissaries in those Courts whose Measures seemed most to favour their Purposes, in soliciting and promoting the Cause of the Pretender; but that he did not doubt, notwithstanding the Countenance and Encouragement they might have receiv'd, or flatter'd themselves with, but the Provision they would make for the Safety and Defence of the Kingdom, would effectually secure the Nation from any Attempt from abroad, and render all such Projects vain and abortive.

Upon the second reading of the Bill for punishing Mutiny and Desertion, a Motion was made, That a Committee be appointed to state the publick Debt, as it stood on the twenty-fifth Day of December, 1714, with what Debts have been incurred since that Time, till the twenty-fifth Day of December, 1725, distinguishing how much of the said Debt hath been provided for, and how much remaineth unprovided for by Parliament; which being a popular Motion, at a Time especially when there appeared to be great Deficiencies in the former Funds, it was backed by several Members, and a warm Debate arose. But it was answer'd by the Courtiers, That such an Inquiry was now unseasonable and preposterous, and might give a dangerous Wound to publick Credit, at this critical Juncture, when moneyed Men were already but too much alarmed by the Appearance of an approaching War; and that, in the present Posture of Affairs, they could not better express their Love to their Country, than by making good their Promises and Assurances to his Majesty at the beginning of this Session, and, with the greatest Dispatch, raising the necessary Supplies to enable his Majesty to make good his late Engagements, for the Welfare of his Subjects, to disappoint the Hopes of the Enemies to his Government, and to resent any Insults that may be offer'd to his Crown and Dignity. And upon the Question's being put, it was carried in the Negative by a considerable Majority.

Great Debates also arose on Occasion of the Treaty lately concluded, which by his Majesty's Order had been laid before the two Houses. Horatio Walpole, Esq. his Majesty's Ambassador Plenipotentiary at the Court of France open'd the Debate in a long Speech to the following Purpose: That since his Majesty's happy Accession to the Throne of this Realm, his constant Care and Endeavours have been to settle the Balance of Power on a solid Foundation, and to preserve and secure the Tranquillity of Christendom; to protect and defend the Protestant Cause, and promote the Honour and Interest of his British Subjects. That with these great Views his Majesty was become Mediator and Guarantor both of the Barrier Treaty concluded

ded in made in that T
ror and United Year 1 a Defe
peror;
the mo
States C of both preserv Christe
Peace o
the Su
Great B
That in Treatie
War w led in made Christi mate C the Em and be
and the Conver
by a the E Britain
King,
London
and in were n eting F their l cede th
the 2
few M was ad
the K length
which nerous jesty g diterra ed Poi between of Sp to be

A. D.
1726.

ded in 1715, and of a Convention made in 1718 for the Execution of that Treaty, between the Emperor and the States General of the United Provinces. That in the Year 1716 his Majesty concluded a Defensive Alliance with the Emperor; and in 1717 another with the most Christian King and the States General, the genuine Design of both which Treaties was only to preserve the publick Repose of Christendom, established by the Peace of Utrecht, and to guaranty the Succession to the Crown of Great Britain in the Protestant Line. That in order to fortify all the said Treaties, and to extinguish the War which the Spaniards had kindled in Italy, his Majesty in 1718 made a Convention with the most Christian King, for proposing ultimate Conditions of Peace between the Emperor and the King of Spain, and between his Imperial Majesty and the King of Sicily. That this Convention was soon after followed by a Treaty of Alliance between the Emperor, the King of Great Britain, and the most Christian King, which was concluded at London, and signed July 22, 1718, and in which the States General were named as one of the Contracting Parties (on a Supposition that their High Mightinesses would accede thereto) whence it was called the Quadruple Alliance. That a few Months after the King of Sicily was admitted into this Treaty, and the King of Spain himself was at length obliged to come into it, which was chiefly owing to the generous Assistance his Britannick Majesty gave the Emperor in the Mediterranean. That some controverted Points still remaining undecided between the Emperor and the King of Spain, the same were referred to be amicably determined in a

Congress, which was afterwards opened at Cambray, under the Mediation of his Britannick Majesty, and the most Christian King; but that, by Reason of several Difficulties, indutiously raised by the Courts of Vienna and Madrid, the great Pains taken for three Years by the Ministers of the Mediators proved unsuccessful, and at length the Congress was suddenly dissolved, upon Advice that the Emperor and King of Spain had secretly adjusted the Difference which had subsisted between them, and concluded a Treaty of Peace at Vienna. That this unexpected Event occasioned several Surmizes, and raised some Jealousies, which appeared not to have been ill grounded, when it was publickly known, that the said Treaty of Peace was soon after followed by a Treaty of Commerce also, the main Design of which was to support and countenance the East-India Company some Time before established at Ostend, by granting to the Inhabitants of the Austrian Netherlands greater Privileges, both in the East and West-Indies, than were ever granted to either the English or Dutch, which visibly tended to the entire Ruin of many valuable Branches of our Trade, and was repugnant to several Treaties still in Force. That thereupon his Majesty, who was always careful of the Interests of his British Subjects, caused lively Representations to be made against the said Treaty of Commerce, both to the Emperor and the King of Spain. That the Court of Madrid received these Complaints with Coldness and Indifference, and the Court of Vienna entertained them with much Stiffness and Haughtiness, so that the Imperial Ministers did even insinuate, that if his Britannick Majesty should persist in his 1726.

P p

Resolution

A. D.

Resolution to take Measures in Opposition to the Treaties of Vienna, the Emperor would not only think himself to be disengaged from the Guarantee of the Protestant Succession to the Crown of Great Britain; but that the same might be attended with ill Consequences in relation to his Majesty's Dominions in Germany. That these insulting Menaces made but little Impression on his Majesty's Firmness and Resolution, nor deterred him from concerting such Measures with other Powers, as might give a Check to the ambitious Views of those who endeavoured to make themselves formidable. That these Measures seem'd to be the more necessary, because of the just Grounds to believe, that the unforeseen Reconciliation of the Emperor and the King of Spain was owing to the constant View of the House of Austria, of rendering the Imperial Dignity hereditary in their Family. That in order thereto it might with just Reason be suppos'd, that the Treaties of Vienna were to be cemented by a Match between the Emperor's eldest Daughter, and the Infant Don Carlos, and it was easy to foresee the Consequences of such a Marriage. For the Male Issue that might arise from thence, might in Time be possessed not only of all the hereditary Dominions belonging to the House of Austria, and of the Imperial Dignity, but also of all the Dominions of the Spanish Monarchy; which would entirely overthrow the Balance of Power, and render the Liberties of all the rest of Europe very precarious. That this Supposition would appear the more probable, if it be considered, there was scarcely any other Way of accounting either for the King of Spain's breaking through solemn Treaties with Great Britain in favour of his Imperial Majesty's Subjects in the Netherlands, or for the Emperor's forgetting so far the Obligations he had to Great Britain and Holland, as to enter into Engagements to assist Spain, towards the Recovery of Gibraltar and Minorca, and to persist in supporting and countenancing the Ostend Company, which could be establish'd with no other View, than to deprive the Subjects of the Maritime Powers of several of the most advantageous Branches of their Trade. That in order to put a timely Check to the further Progress of such dangerous Designs his Majesty had wisely enter'd into a Defensive Alliance with the most Christian King, and the King of Prussia, to which other Powers had been invited to accede, and the States of Holland had already come into that Engagement. That the main View of this Alliance was to preserve the publick Repose and Tranquility of Christendom, and to secure to each Contracting Party the Possession of their respective Dominions and Territories, with the Rights and Immunities, particularly those relating to Trade, which their Subjects enjoyed or ought to enjoy by the several Treaties subsisting. And that as his Majesty always had a particular Concern for the Interest of the Protestants, so out of his Royal and tender Compassion for the distressed Condition of some of our Protestant Brethren in Poland, his Majesty had not only interpos'd his good Offices, in the most pressing Manner, in their Favour, but had taken Occasion, in the Alliance made at Hanover, to engage, by a separate Article, the most Christian King, and the King of Prussia, who, together with his Majesty, are Guarantees of the Treaty of Oliva, to see it maintained and observed

observ'd in its full Extent, and to cause Reparation to be made for what was done at Thorn, contrary to the said Treaty.

Upon this it was suggested, that the King of Spain did not seem to grant any further Privileges to the Emperor's Subjects in the Netherlands, than had before been granted to the English, and other Nations most in Favour at that Court; but a Gentleman on the other Side of the Question pointed to the very Words of the Articles, whereby it was expressly stipulated, That the Ships of War and Merchant Ships belonging to the contracting Parties, or their Subjects, should be allow'd full Liberty to frequent the Harbours, Coasts, and Provinces of each other; naming particularly the East-Indies, and without any Exception as to the Spanish West-Indies, or any other Restraint on the Ships of War and Merchant Ships, than not to buy any thing besides Victuals and Materials for repairing their Ships; which implied a Permission to sell their Merchandises for ready Money; from whence it was manifest, that the Subjects of the Austrian Netherlands were allowed more extensive Privileges of trading than ever had been granted to any other Nation, contrary to several Treaties subsisting between the Crowns of Great Britain and Spain.

It was likewise urged, that the Hanover Treaty would engage the British Nation in a War, for the Defence of his Majesty's Dominions in Germany, contrary to an express Provision made for the securing our Religion, Laws, and Liberties, in the Act for further Limitation and Succession of the Crown in the Protestant Line. To which Reply was made, That the true Meaning and Intent of that Limitation was not wholly and for ever to deprive his Majesty's foreign Dominions of any Assistance from this Nation; for if so, his Majesty in that respect would be in a worse Condition upon his Accession to the Throne of Great Britain than he was before; but that it was only design'd to restrain the Sovereign, for the future, from engaging the Nation in a War for the Defence of any Dominions not pertaining to the English Crown, without the Consent of Parliament, who were to determine whether such a War was necessary, or no. After which, a Motion was made that an humble Address be presented to his Majesty to return him Thanks for communicating the said Treaty to the House, and to express their just Sense of his Majesty's Concern for the Balance and Peace of Europe, and to assure him, that in Justice and Vindication of the Honour and Dignity of the British Crown, the House would effectually stand by and support his Majesty against all Insults and Attacks, that any Prince or Power, in resentment of the just Measures taken so wisely by his Majesty, should make upon any of his Territories or Dominions, tho' not immediately belonging to the Crown of Great Britain; which was carried in the Affirmative by 285 against 107. And the House of Lords addressed his Majesty to the same Purpose.

May 24, his Majesty went to the House of Peers, and gave the Royal Assent to several Bills, among which were, An Act for the better securing the Moneys and Effects of the Suitors of the Court of Chancery, and to prevent the counterfeiting of East-India Bonds, and Indorsements thereon, as likewise Indorsements on South-Sea Bonds; an Act for Relief of the Suitors of the High Court of Chancery; an Act to prevent unlaw-

A. D. 1726. ful Combinations of Workmen employed in the Woollen Manufactures, and for better Payment of their Wages; an Act to prevent frivolous and vexatious Suits, the Fulham Bridge Act, and an Act for making Provision for the Rector of St. Mary le Strand in the County of Middlesex, and for other Purposes therein mentioned; and then put a Close to the Session with a Speech of Thanks for the many Instances they had given him of their Duty and Affection to his Person and Government, and of their Zeal to maintain the Honour and true Interest of this Kingdom.

Upon the repeated Advices of the great Preparations making in Russia for equipping a large Fleet, our Court thought it necessary to send a strong Squadron of Ships into the Baltick this Spring. Sir Charles Wager was appointed to have the Command thereof, who came to Anchor in the Road of Copenhagen towards the latter End of April. Sir Charles waited upon the King of Denmark with a Message from his British Majesty, was graciously receiv'd, and had the Honour to dine at the King's Table, whilst the other Commanders of the Fleet were entertain'd by the Officers attending that Court; the Fleet sail'd from thence in the Beginning of the Month following, and steer'd their Course towards Elsenabb, not far from Stockholm. A few Days after their Arrival thither, the Admiral had Audience of the King of Sweden, to whom he delivered a Letter from his Majesty, and was graciously receiv'd there, and entertain'd at the King's own Table, together with M. Poyntz, the British Envoy. Not long after they left that Court, a Squadron of Danish Men of War sail'd from Copenhagen for the Island of Bornholm, in order to join them. The News of the Arrival of so formidable a Fleet soon reaching the Russian Court, put them immediately on altering their Measures, so that the Land Forces which had been drawn together near Petersburg, in order to be put on Board their Fleet, were sent to work on the Ladoga Canal, and the Fortifications at Cronslot. Orders were likewise given for reinforcing the Garrisons of Wibourg, Revel, Cronslot and Riga, and for unrigging the Men of War, which had lately been equipped at Revel. The Ammunition and Provisions on Board were ordered to be immediately relanded, and the several Vessels were haled as high into the Harbours as possibly they could be. And Regiments were drawn together from their Quarters in order to guard the Coasts. Whilst the Russians were thus busily employ'd in taking proper Measures for their own Security, the British Admiral, having been join'd by some other Ships, arriv'd near the Island of Nargen, about three Leagues from Revel. The next Morning an Officer was dispatched with a Letter to Lieutenant General Wulcoffe, who commanded in that Port; and the Port Mahon having on Board Mr. Barnet, one of the Lieutenants, was order'd to sail to Cronslot with the following Letter from his Majesty to the Czarina, inclosed in a Letter to Admiral Apraxin.

George
King
the
and cess,
the Czar efs
and Mon
Hea

Most hi

A Sy
y
by Sea of Peac us, as Parts, alarmed that we of our M under miral S ate any from i ment.

Your how de ly to quility tivate a
and to Friend of Gr Ruffa.
We Occas
Proofs
amicab Majesty

George

George, by the Grace of God, King of Great Britain, to the most high, most mighty, and most illustrious Princesses, our most dear Sister,
the great Lady Catharine, Czarina, and great Dutchesses of all the great, little, and white Russia, sole Monarch of Muscovy, &c.
Health and Happiness.

Most high, most mighty, and most illustrious Princesses,

AS your Majesty must allow, that your great Preparations both by Sea and Land for War, in a Time of Peace, could not fail of giving us, as well as our Allies in those Parts, great and just Cause to be alarmed, you will not be surprized that we have sent a strong Squadron of our Men of War into the Baltick, under the Command of our Admiral Sir Charles Wager, to obviate any Danger that might ensue from so extraordinary an Armament.

Your Majesty very well knoweth how desirous we have been not only to preserve the publick Tranquility of Europe, but also to cultivate a perfect good Understanding, and to cement a firm and lasting Friendship betwixt our Royal Crown of Great Britain, and that of Russia.

We have not failed, upon all Occasions, to give convincing Proofs of these our peaceable and amicable Intentions; and your Majesty must needs remember an eminent Instance of this, when we declared our ready Disposition to enter, in Conjunction with our good Brother the King of France, into an Alliance with his late Majesty, your Lord and Consort, upon such Terms and Conditions, as must be consistent with the Peace of the North, and be reciprocally compatible with the Interest, Dignity and Honour of the Parties contracting. By this Means we do not doubt but a sincere Reconciliation might be adjusted betwixt us and your late Consort, and an entire Friendship and good Harmony established between our respective Dominions and Subjects, for their mutual Advantage, and that by the same Means, the Peace and Tranquility of the North would also be established on a solid and durable Foundation.

To attain to those great and good Ends, and in Conformity to his late Majesty's Intentions, which the Minister of his most Christian Majesty had frequently reported, a Plan of a Treaty was formed, in Concert with the Court of France, and sent to his late Majesty for his Approbation and final Consent.
But the accomplishing of this good Work was prevented by his late Majesty's sudden and unexpected Death.

Nevertheless, as we still retained the same good Intentions to preserve the Peace of the North, and to renew our ancient Friendship with the Crown of Russia, immediately after your Majesty's Accession to the Throne, we declared, in Conjunction with his most Christian Majesty, that we were ready to conclude and finish the Treaty above mentioned, not in the least doubting that your Majesty would be glad of a Proposal to manifestly advantageous to your Dominions

A. D. 1726. and People, and which tended so much to the Preservation of the publick Peace. But we must own, that we were sensibly afflicted to see our Hopes defeated by the Return which was made to the obliging and friendly Offers that were made on our Part; because, after a long Delay to no manner of Purpose, we found that your Majesty's Ministers insisted upon such Alterations in the Treaty projected, as did not concern the Interest of the Russian Empire, and such as were not only contrary to the solemn Engagements, which we and his most Christian Majesty were under to other Powers, but such as would have involved all the Northern Crowns in new Troubles and Distractions.

Neither can we conceal from your Majesty the extraordinary Surprise we were under, to hear, that while we were carrying on amicable Negotiations, and had not given the least Provocation on our Part, Measures were taking at your Court in Favour of the Pretender to our Crown, and great Encouragement given to his Adherents.

After what we have now set forth, your Majesty will not be surprized, that we, being indispensibly obliged to provide for the Security of our Dominions, to perform our Engagements with our Allies, and to maintain the publick Tranquility in the North, which seemeth to be very much in Danger from your Majesty's late Preparations, have thought it necessary to send a strong Fleet of our Men of War to the Baltick, and that we have given Orders to our Admiral who commandeth it, to endeavour to prevent fresh Troubles in those Parts, by hindering your Majesty's Ships from coming out, in case that you persist in your Resolution to put your Fleet to Sea, to execute the Designs which you may have in View.

But as it is our firm Intention to live in Peace and Friendship with your Majesty, we wish from the Bottom of our Heart, that your Majesty, seriously reflecting upon the true Interests of your Subjects, would permit them to enjoy the Blessings of that Peace, which they purchased at the Expence of so much Blood and Treasure, under the Conduct of his late Majesty; and that rather than enter into Measures which must inevitably plunge Russia in a War, and the whole North in Confusion, your Majesty would please to give your People and all Mankind, convincing Proofs of your Inclination for Peace, and of your good Disposition to live in Quiet with your Neighbours.

Your affectionate Brother,

G E O R G E R.

Given at our Court at our Royal Palace of St. James's, the 11th of April, A. D. 1726, and the twelfth Year of our Reign.

Though the Czarina was a little provoked at the British Fleets blocking up her Ports, yet in the present Situation of her Affairs she thought it necessary to conceal her private Resentments, and returned an Answer to the foregoing Letter, in which she set forth, that the Reason of her Armament was chiefly to put her Affairs in such a Posture, as to be able, at all Times, in Cases of Need, to succour her Allies, to perform her Engagements

ments to them, to protect her Subjects against any Insults, and to oppose such as should offer to disturb the Peace of her Subjects or Allies.

During this, Count Rabutin, the Emperor's Minister at the Czarina's Court, laboured incessantly in thwarting the Negotiations proposed by Sir Charles to the Russians, and frequently suggested, that the British Admiral being come with open Force to negotiate an Accommodation, it would be a Disparagement to the Court of Russia, to enter into a Treaty with him, while his Fleet lay at Anchor so near an Island belonging to them; and that they ought at least to oblige him to quit their Coasts, before his Instructions were taken into Consideration, that the Senators might be left intirely at their Liberty to determine therein as they should think convenient. The Admiral having transmitted the Czarina's Answer to his Majesty's Letter, continued in the same Station, waiting for further Orders and Instructions. The British Merchants in those Parts were under no small Concern on Account of these Transactions, and had reason to apprehend, that their Persons and Effects were in imminent Danger; but the Czarina, to put them out of their Fears, was pleased soon after to publish a Declaration, in which she assured them, that although any open Hostilities should be committed against her by the British Squadron, nevertheless that the said Merchants should not be injured in their Persons, Goods, Possessions, Ships going or coming, nor in any other Manner whatsoever; and that, as well for the present as for the Time to come, they might freely and at their Pleasure and best Advantage, without any Fear or Apprehension, carry on their Traffick in her Empire, equally with all other Nations in Friendship with the Russians; and on all Occasions be unalterably ascertained and assured of her gracious Protection and Care for them; provided only they themselves, through no disagreeable Measures, or forbidden Proceedings, rendered themselves obnoxious. And notwithstanding a new Battery was erecting at Revel on this Occasion, and the Russians continued Night and Day on their Guard for Fear of a Surprise, Sir Charles Wager had Liberty to furnish his Squadron with fresh Provisions as often as he pleased. At last it being judged that the Czarina's Affairs were not in such a Situation, as to be able to make any considerable Attempt this Year (for though they wanted not for Ships, they were in great Need of able and expert Seamen) the British Fleet left those Parts, and returned to their own Harbours.

Neither was the Imperial Court satisfied with spiriting up the Northern Powers against our Court this Summer; but they pursued at the same Time unkind Measures in endeavouring to cramp our Trade, in the South, and that too in that very Island, whose Conquest for the House of Austria was but a few Years since chiefly owing to the Valour and Treasure of the British Nation. For Orders were sent from the Court of Vienna to the Viceroy of Sicily, to publish a Proclamation, prohibiting the Importation of several English Manufactures, as Duroys, Calamancoes, Camlets, Druggets, and other sorts of Drapery Goods, in order to encourage those which were intended to be introduced into Sicily by the Trieste Company. Upon which a Memorial was presented to the Viceroy by Mr. Chamberlayne, the British Consul general in that Kingdom; but all the Answer to it was, that the Orders from the Court of Vienna on this Affair being uncontrollable, the publishing them would not be much longer deferred; and for such Sorts of Goods, already on the Way thither, as were comprized in the said Prohibition, they would only be admitted in Porto Franco, there to remain unsold till further Directions from the Court Vienna.

A. D.
1726.

But to return Home; in January this Year died Philip Stanhope, Earl of Chesterfield; and in the Beginning of March, Evelin Pierpoint, Duke and Earl of Kingston, departed this Life.

May 26, a Chapter of the most noble Order of the Garter was held at St. James's, and Charles Lenox, Duke of Richmond and Lenox, Knight of the Bath, and Sir Robert Walpole of Houghton in the County of Norfolk, Knight of the Bath, Chancellor of the Exchequer, and first Commissioner of the Treasury, were elected Knights Companions of the said Order, in the Room of Evelin Pierpoint, Duke of Kingston, and Charles Beauclerk, Duke of St. Albans, both deceased.

In July, Mr. Humphry Wanley, Library Keeper to the Earl of Oxford, a Person famous for his great Learning in Antiquities, as well as Skill in ancient Manuscripts, departed this Life. In the same Month died suddenly, at Vienna, Duke Maximilian William of Brunswick Hanover, Colonel of a Regiment of Cuirassiers in the Emperor's Service, his Britannick Majesty's Brother; as also William Cadogan, Earl Cadogan, General of the Foot Forces in South Britain.

His Majesty, upon the humble Petition of the United Company of Merchants trading to the East Indies, was pleased to grant them a new Charter in August this Year, with Power to erect a Corporation within the Town or Factory of Madras Patnan in the East Indies, by the Name of The Mayor and Aldermen of Madras Patnan; and to erect a Corporation within the Town and Factory of Bombay, on the Island of Bombay in the East Indies, by the Name of The Mayor and Aldermen of Bombay; and also to erect another Corporation within the Factory of Fort William in Bengall, in the said Indies; and to grant to each of the said Corporations and their Successors perpetual Succession, to have a common Seal alterable at Pleasure, to make By-laws for the better Government of the said respective Corporations, and to try Civil and Criminal Causes, High Treason excepted.

In September, Sir John Fryer, who had been some Time before Lord Mayor of London; and Robert Dormer, Esq; who had been about twenty Years one of the Judges of his Majesty's Court of Common Pleas, departed this Life. And in the following Month died Sir Jeffrey Gilbert, Lord chief Baron of the Court of Exchequer; and Sir Thomas Pengelly, his Majesty's premier Serjeant at Law, was appointed to succeed him.

The Parliament met January 17, and his Majesty in his Speech told them, that the sudden and unaccountable Conjunction between the Emperor and the King of Spain, and the secret and offensive Alliances concluded between them, had laid the Foundations of a most exorbitant and formidable Power, and are, said he, so directly levelled against the most valuable and darling Interests and Privileges of this Nation, that we must determine either tamely to submit to the peremptory and unjust Demands of the King of Spain, in giving up Gibraltar, and patiently to acquiesce in the Emperor's usurped and extended Exercise of Trade and Commerce, or must resolve to be in a Condition to do ourselves Justice, and to defend our undoubted Rights against these reciprocal Engagements, entered into in Defiance and Violation of all National Faith, and the most solemn Treaties. I have likewise received Information from different Parts, in which I can entirely depend, that the placing the Pretender upon the Throne of this Kingdom is one of the Articles of the Secret Engagements; and if Time shall evince that the giving up the Trade of this Nation to one Power, and Gibraltar and Port Mahon to another, is made the Price and Reward of imposing upon this Kingdom a Popish Pretender, what Indignation must this raise in the Breast of every Protestant Briton! Nor were these fatal Combinations confined to those Parts of the World alone, but they extended themselves into Russia; and had not the Designs of that Court against some of their Neighbours been prevented by the seasonable Arrival of our Fleet in those Seas, a Way had been opened for invading these Kingdoms, and giving a powerful Assistance to any Attempt to be made from other Quarters. Such Circumstances would not suffer me and my Allies, among whom there hath been and is the most perfect Harmony, Union, and Concert, to be idle Spectators, and regardless of our own Safety, and the common Cause of Europe; for which Purpose his most Christian Majesty hath been at a great Expence, this last Year, in augmenting his Forces: and the States General, sensible of the imminent Danger, have not only acceded to the Defensive Alliance concluded at Hanover, but have come to strong and seasonable Resolutions for an extraordinary Augmentation of their Forces both by Sea and Land. The Accession of the Crown of Sweden is in such a Forwardness, and the Negotiations with the Crown of Denmark are so far advanced, that we may reasonably depend upon the Success and good Effect of them. He further told them that the Spaniards had actually assembled a great Body of Troops in the Neighbourhood of Gibraltar, in order to attack and besiege that Place, but that he rather believed those publick and immense Preparations were designed as an Amusement, and to disguise the intended Invasion, which had been for some time agreed to be the first Step and Beginning of the long premeditated Rupture.

The King being withdrawn, the Lords soon came to a Resolution of addressing his Majesty on this Occasion, and the Address was presented the next Day by the whole House. But upon a Motion made in the House of Commons for an Address to return his Majesty the Thanks of the House for his most gracious Speech from the Throne; to acknowledge his Goodness in acquainting his Parliament with the several Proceedings and Alliances entered into between the Emperor and the King of Spain, giving such just Cause of Jealousy to the neighbouring Princes and States, so formidable and destructive of the true Balance of Power in Europe; and striking 1727.

A. D.

A. D.
1727.

striking at the Foundation of the most valuable Privileges and Interests of the Subjects of his Majesty, and those of his Allies; to declare the Resentment of the Commons of Great-Britain at the unjust Demand of the King of Spain for the Restitution of Gibraltar, and the unwarrantable Usurpation of the Emperor, in erecting and carrying on the Ostend Trade, and their mutual Obligations to support each other in these unjustifiable Attempts and Undertakings: and especially to express the highest Indignation at the Resolutions and Engagements entered into, for attempting to place the Pretender on the Throne of these Kingdoms; to return his Majesty Thanks, for his great Care in strengthening his Alliances, and employing his royal Fleet so usefully for the Security, Advantage, and Glory of this Nation; to desire his Majesty, that he will forthwith give the necessary Orders for putting this Kingdom in a Posture of Defence; and to assure him, that this House will not only cheerfully and effectually raise the Supplies necessary for the present Exigency of Affairs, but will stand by and support his Majesty in making good his Engagements with his Allies. Several Objections were raised, as that the Matter of Peace and War is of the greatest Weight that can fall under the Consideration of that Assembly; that as his Majesty's Speech contained many Points of the highest Moment, so he expected not only the Support, but likewise the Advice of that House; that in Order thereto, they ought maturely to deliberate on those several Heads, which could not be done, before some Papers were communicated to them, which seemed absolutely necessary to state several Facts relating to those weighty Matters. At last it was carried for an Address by a great Majority, which was presented the next Day. And the House soon after agreed that twenty thousand Men should be employed for the Sea Service for the current Year.

March 4, a Message was sent by his Majesty's Order to M. de Palm the Emperor's Resident, to acquaint him, that he having, in the Audience he had of the King on Thursday last, delivered into the Hands of his Majesty a Memorial highly injurious to his Majesty's Honour, and the Dignity of his Crown, in which Memorial he had forgot all Regard to Truth, and the Respect due to his sacred Majesty, and the said Memorial being afterwards publicly dispersed next Morning in Print, together with a Letter from the Count de Zinzendorf to him the said Palm, still more insolent and more injurious, if possible than the Memorial, his Majesty looked upon the said Resident Palm no longer as a publick Minister, and required him forthwith to depart out of this Kingdom.

This Memorial, after endeavouring to vindicate the Peace concluded at Vienna, as being chiefly built on the Quadruple Alliance, and the Treaty of Commerce with Spain, as calculated only to promote the mutual and lawful Advantages of the Subjects of both Parties, in a Manner agreeable to the Law of Nations, and in no wise to prejudice the British Nation, roundly asserted that the Offensive Alliance mentioned in his Majesty's Speech was absolutely void of all Foundation, as was also that of the secret Articles made in Favour of the Pretender. This Affair having made a great Noise, came under the Consideration of Parliament, and both Houses agreed to an Address to present

presented to his Majesty thereupon, in which they expressed the highest Resentment at the Affront and Indignity thus offered, and at the Insolence in printing and dispersing the same throughout the Kingdom; and declared their utmost Abhorrence and Detestation at this audacious manner of appealing to the People against his Majesty, under the Pretext of applying for Redress and Reparation of supposed Injuries; returned his Majesty Thanks for communicating to his Parliament the Dangers threatening this Kingdom, and assured him that no Arguments, by artful or evasive Denials, should lead them into a false Security, or divert them from exerting themselves in Vindication of his Majesty's Honour, and in defending and supporting his Majesty against all his open and secret Enemies, both at Home and Abroad.

The private Treaty of Convention and Alliance between the Emperor and the King of Spain, was as followeth.

I. There shall be between his Imperial Catholick Majesty, and his Royal Catholick Majesty, a solid and sincere Amity, which shall be mutually cultivated, in such Sort, that the one shall procure all Advantages for the other, as if they were for himself, and the other shall return the same.

II. And it being represented by the most serene King of Spain, that the restitution of Gibraltar, with its Fort, had been promised by the King of Great-Britain, and that his Catholick Royal Majesty doth insist upon the Restitution of Gibraltar, with its Fort, and likewise of the Island of Minorca and Port Mahon: It is declared on the Part of his sacred Imperial Majesty, that he will not in any manner oppose this Restitution, but, as far as he is able, imploy all good Offices to this Purpose, and, if the Parties desire it of him, accept the Mediation,

III. The most serene King of Spain, Philip the fifth, to give a most evident Proof of the Sincerity of his Friendship, promiseth and engageth to permit all Ships of his Imperial Majesty's Subjects, of what Nation soever they be, to enter freely into all the Ports of Spain, and so as they may trade with all Freedom and Security, and enjoy all the Privileges and Pierogatives, that any the most favoured Nation doth enjoy (as the French do at present, and the English formerly did) and that too from the Day of the Publication of this Peace, which shall be published immediately in all Ports and Places convenient, as it is agreed in the Treaty of Commerce signed this Day.

IV. And in case the Ships of his Imperial Majesty shall be attacked on this Account on this or on the other Side the Line, his Catholick Majesty promiseth to make it the Common Cause, and to take Vengeance and Reparation for the Injuries and Damages they shall sustain. In like Manner, if the Ships of his Catholick Majesty shall be hostilely attacked, either on this or on the other Side of the Line, on this Account, his Imperial Majesty promiseth likewise to make it the Common Cause, and to take Vengeance and Reparation for Injuries and Damages sustained.

V. And whereas by the Quadruple Alliance, for the Security of the Realms, Dominions, and Provinces possessed by the contracting Powers, it was stipulated, that they should become reciprocal Guarantees; it is nevertheless found necessary, by the present Alliance, to explain more at large what is meant by the Word Security, and better to provide for what may happen: For this Purpose therefore, and to confirm more strongly the Amity begun between his Imperial and his Catholick Majesty, it is thought necessary to particularize, as followeth, the Succours, with which each Party is to furnish the other for their mutual Security, viz.

A. D.
1727.

If the Emperor, his Kingdoms, and hereditary Dominions, in whatever Place situate, shall be hostilely attacked, or if the War begun in another Country shall be carried thither, that then his Catholick Majesty promiseth to assist and succour his Imperial Majesty with all his Forces both by Land and by Sea, and particularly to furnish a Navy of at least fifteen large Ships of War, commonly called Line of Battle Ships; and besides this, an Army of twenty thousand Men, that is to say, fifteen thousand Foot, and five thousand Horse; their Winter Quarters to be provided by the Emperor.

His Catholick Majesty to be excused, if he shall furnish Money, instead of Troops, after the Rate of eighty thousand Florins a Month for every thousand Foot, and twenty four thousand for every thousand Horse, payable at the Time stipulated, by the Genoese in the Town of Genoa.

And if the King of Spain shall not furnish the Ships stipulated, he shall send an Army of ten thousand Men or Money for them, according to the Calculation above-mentioned.

In like manner, his Imperial Majesty promiseth and engageth to succour his Catholick Majesty with all his Forces both by Land and by Sea, in case his Majesty's Dominions in Europe, or elsewhere, shall be hostilely attacked; and particularly to send to his Aid thirty thousand Men, that is to say, twenty thousand Foot, and ten thousand Horse; to be provided with Winter Quarters by his Catholick Majesty.

VI. The Ambassadors extraordinary and Plenipotentiaries of the two Powers contracting, promise respectively, that this particular Treaty of Alliance and Amity shall be ratified by his Imperial Majesty, and by his Catholick Majesty, according to the Form mutually agreed; and that the solemn Acts of Ratification shall be exchanged within three Months, or sooner, if possible.

Under Faith of which, the said Ministers, Ambassadors extraordinary and Plenipotentiaries, have signed with their own Hands this Instrument of Alliance and particular Amity, and confirmed it with their Seals.

Done at Vienna in Austria, April 30, 1725.

Eugene de Savoye,

Philip Lewis Count de Zinzendorf,

Gundaker Count de Staremburg

John William Baron de Ripperda

In a Committee of the whole House this Session on the Malt Bill a Motion was made, that it be an Instruction to the said Committee that they have Power to receive a Clause of Appropriation, giving Power to his Majesty to apply such Sum of Money, as shall be necessary for answering and defraying such Expences and Engagements, as have at any Time been, or shall, before or until the 25th Day of December 1725 be made by his Majesty, in concerting such Measures, as he in his great Wisdom thinketh will best conduce to the Security of the Trade and Navigation of this Kingdom and to the preserving and restoring the Peace of Europe; upon which ensued a warm Debate. In support of the Motion it was alledged, that his Majesty was so unwilling to put his Subjects to any extraordinary Expences, that he had demanded no more Supplies this Session, than what he thought absolutely necessary for the Service of the Year; but that in the present Posture of Affairs some unforeseen Accidents might require a further Expence for which no Estimate could now be made, because some Treaties, which his Majesty thought fit to enter into, were not yet finished, wherefore they ought to enable him to answer such Contingencies; that the House had several Times reposed the same Confidence in his Majesty, which had never been abused, and what was now asked was only for a short Time. To this it was reply'd, that this Method of asking and granting Supplies without an Estimate of the Expence was unparliamentary, and that the Clause moved for was inconsistent with that Part of the Bill, which forbiddeth the issuing of the Supplies thereby granted to any other Purposes, than those therein particularly directed, and rendered ineffectual that Appropriation of the publick Money, which the Wisdom of all Parliaments had thought a necessary Security against the Misapplication of it; and that such Misapplication was the more to be feared in this Case, because no Provision was made to oblige any Person to account for the Money disposed of by virtue of the Power in the Clause proposed; that vast Sums had already been granted, sufficient to answer any Occasions, as far as their present Views could reach, but if some unexpected Emergency should require a greater Supply, it might be provided for in the usual Manner; that this might be done with less Inconvenience, and with less Danger of Misapplication, than by such a Delegation of almost a Dictatorial Authority to the Ministers; that such an unlimited and absolute Power ought never to be given in a free Government, but upon Occasions of evident Necessity, when the very Being of the Government is in imminent Danger; that the reposing a Confidence in the Crown, in the Disposition of such immense Sums of Money, as by the Advice of un-thrifty Ministers may be expended, might be attended with great Prejudice to the Properties of the Subjects, and no small Danger to our most excellent Constitution, which cannot be preserved, but by a strict Adherence to those essential Parliamentary Forms of granting Supplies only upon Estimates, and of appropriating the same to Services and Occasions publicly avowed, and judged necessary; and that the departing from these excellent Methods would by Degrees render Parliaments altogether useless. The Debate being over, and the Question put, it was carried for the Motion by 225 Voices against 109.

The annual Supplies being provided for, and the other Business which lay before the Parliament dispatched, his Majesty went to the House of Peers May 15, gave the Royal Assent to several Bills then ready, among which were, An Act for the free Importation of Cochineal during the Time therein limited; an Act for enlarging the Times for hearing and determining Claims by the Trustees for raising Money upon the Estates of the late South Sea Directors Company, &c. An Act for Sale of the forfeited Estates in that Part of Great Britain called Scotland, as remain unsold, and are vested in the Crown; an Act for the better Regulation of the Woollen Manufactures in that Part of Great Britain called Scotland; an Act for preventing Frauds and Abuses in the Dying Trade, and some others; and then put a Close to the Session by a gracious Speech, in which he returned Thanks to the Parliament for their Zeal and Dispatch of the publick Business, for the Confidence they had reposed in him, and their Assurances of Support and Assistance in maintaining the undoubted Rights and Privileges of the Nation,

A. D.

1727.

A. D.
1727.

tion, so openly and notoriously invaded and attacked. The Siege of Gibraltar proves beyond all Dispute the End and Design of the Engagements entred into by the Emperor and the King of Spain; but the Preparations I had made for the Defence of that Place, and the Bravery of my Troops, will, I doubt not, convince them of the Rashness and Folly of that Undertaking. However, the Love of Peace hath hitherto prevailed upon me, even under this high Provocation, to suspend in some Measure my Resentments, and instead of having immediate Recourse to Arms, and demanding of my Allies that Assistance which they are engaged and ready to give me, I have concurred with the most Christian King and the States General, in making such Overtures of Accommodation, as must convince all the World of the Uprightness of our Intentions, and of our sincere Disposition to Peace, and demonstrate to whose Ambition and Thirst of Power the Calamities of a War are to be imputed, if these just and reasonable Propositions are rejected. In the mean Time, I have the Pleasure to acquaint you, that the Crown of Sweden hath acceded to the Treaty of Hanover, and that the Convention between me, his most Christian Majesty, and the King of Denmark is actually signed.

The Emperor, since his Alliance with the Moscovites and the Court of Spain, left no Stone unturn'd, in order to hinder the Accession of Sweden and Denmark to the Treaty concluded at Hanover. To the former of which he caused a Memorial to be delivered, about the middle of February, by Count Trytach, setting forth, that all the Accessions to the Hanover Treaty had no other Tendency, on the Part of the English, than to subvert the whole Constitution of the Empire; that it had been proposed to have large Armies the next Summer on the Rhine and in Lower Saxony, and that the King of Spain had besieged Gibraltar by way of Return of Admiral Hofier's blocking up Porto Bello. The Spaniards were also very uneasy on Account of the Appearance of the British Fleet under the Command of Admiral Jennings, on the Coasts of St. Andero, and the Marquis de Paz wrote to Mr. Stanhope, his Majesty's Ambassador there, to know the Reason thereof. The Letter was sent to England, and an Answer return'd, that his Britannick Majesty was surprized at this Complaint, since the Marquis de Paz himself had acknowledged that the British Admiral, as soon as he arrived there, assured the Spanish Governors, that he was not come with an Intention to commit any Hostility, but as a Friend, and with pacifick Dispositions, having been driven upon the Coasts by contrary Winds, and by the Necessity of supplying himself there with fresh Water; that the Naval Armaments and Equipments, which had been lately made in most of the Ports of Spain, the Preparations of War, and the Motions of a considerable Number of Spanish Troops towards that Part of their Coast, which lieth nearest and most convenient for executing an Enterprize on his Majesty's Dominions, the great Hopes of the Emissaries and Adherents of the Pretender, who had publicly boasted of the Assistance they should receive from those Parts, the Confidence they had in it, and which had appeared clearly in the pernicious and indiscreet Conduct of some among them, who had been lately received and favoured at Madrid, the Intrigues carried on with the Moscovites, and the Reasons his Majesty had to suspe which th last Year and then Knowle

Winter, Minister an Offen Courts o that by that Alli use open fired to Place po virtue of Subsidies to the I by any A notorious Time ma Costa's, c merce of the West
ed of wi of Satisf Things
cient to which h to take t per, and put to S Subjects to compl ken for dom, an erties,
and in D
And standings who was deem at suddenly British Shelter. order'd dues lea Duke's ted, oc English extraord er, and to

to suspect the ill Designs upon which the three Ships were sent last Year from Petersburg to Cadiz, and thence to St. Andero; the Knowledge his Majesty had last Winter, by the Avowal of the Minister of Spain, that there was an Offensive Alliance between the Courts of Madrid and Vienna, and that by one of the Articles of that Alliance, it was stipulated to use open Force to get Gibraltar restored to the King of Spain, a Place possessed by his Majesty by virtue of a just Right; the great Subsidies which had been furnished to the Imperial Court, not settled by any Alliance yet made publick; notorious Infractions for a long Time made, by the Spanish Guarda Costa's, on the Trade and Commerce of his Majesty's Subjects in the West-Indies, so often complained of without the least Appearance of Satisfaction or Reparation; these Things joined together were sufficient to exhibit clearly the Reasons which have induced his Majesty to take the Measures he judged proper, and to equip the several Fleets put to Sea; and that his Majesty's Subjects would have had just Cause to complain, had not Care been taken for the Security of the Kingdom, and of their Rights and Properties, which they saw threatened and in Danger.

And to add to these Misunderstandings, the Duke of Ripperda, who was lately in very great Esteem at the Court of Madrid, was suddenly cashiered, and fled to the British Ambassador's House for Shelter. Upon this a Guard was order'd to secure the several Avenues leading to it, and to seize the Duke's Person; which being effected, occasion'd Complaints at the English Court, as being done in an extraordinary and unjustifiable Manner, and against the Privilege allowed by the Law of Nations to the Ambassadors of Princes.

As a Consequence of the mutual Jealousies between the contending Powers, Gibraltar was besieged, and the Trenches opened before it, this Year, but by the Powerful Reinforcements seasonably sent thither, and the Bravery of the British Troops, all the Efforts of the Enemy could not compel that important Place to surrender, during this Reign; and the Siege was raised by an amicable Treaty after the Death of his Majesty.

Towards the Close of the last Year, Sophia Dorothy, who was married to his Majesty, when Elector of Brunswick Zell, in the Year 1682, and by whom she had Issue his present most gracious Majesty George II, born October 30, 1683, and Dorothy Sophia, born March 16, 1687, and married to Frederick William King of Prussia in the Year 1706, departed this Life in the Castle of Athlen, in the Electorate of Brunswick Lunenburg, the Place of her Retirement for several Years.

In January died Thomas Madox, Esq; his Majesty's Historiographer, Author of the Formulare Anglicanum, and some other Works of Learning.

In February died Dr. William Nicholson, who had been a short Time before translated from the Bishoprick of Londonderry in Ireland, to the Archiepiscopal See of Cashil and Primateship of Munster, in that Kingdom, in the Room of Dr. William Palliser deceased.

March 20, Sir Isaac Newton, Master of his Majesty's Mint at the Tower of London, and President of the Royal Society, justly famed for his Philosophical Writings in most Parts of the Learned World, departed this Life in the eighty-fifth Year of his Age; and in the Month following died George Compton, Earl of Northampton. In 1727.

A. D.

In the Beginning of May died at Petersburg the Czarina Catharine Alexowna, Empress of Russia, and was succeeded in that Empire, by Peter Alexowitz, who was born October 22, 1715, and was Grandson of the late Czar.

In the latter End of the same Dr. John Hoadly was promoted to the united Bishopricks of Leiglin and Fernis, in the Kingdom of Ireland.

About the same Time his Majesty declared in Council his Intention of visiting his Dominions beyond Sea, and having appointed the Archbishop of Canterbury, the Lord Chancellor, the Dukes of Devonshire, and Dorset, Grafton, Bolton, Argyll and Greenwich, Newcastle, the Lord Trevor, Earls of Berkley, and Godolphin, the Viscounts Townshend and Harcourt, the Lord Carteret, and Sir Robert Walpole, to have the Administration of the publick Affairs during his Absence, set out from St. James's Palace on Saturday the third Day of June, about Seven in the Morning, and about two Hours after embarked at Greenwich on Board the Carolina Yatch. About eleven that with the other Vessels attending his Majesty were all under Sail, but with little or no Wind; but being towed with Boats, they proceeded to Gravesend, where they continued till the Monday following. In the Morning about ten they got under sail with a fair Wind, and passed by the Nore towards Gunfleet about twelve, where they were joined by Rear Admiral Morrice. The next Day, about eight in the Morning, his Majesty's Yatch passed safely over the Hinder, towards Goree, and went up the Maese for Gravendaal, whence he proceeded on board the States Yatch to Vaert, where he landed, and lay on Wednesday Night. The next Morning he set out on his Journey for Hanover, being attended by the Detachments ordered by the States to guard him through the Territories belonging to them. He arrived at Delden on Friday between ten and eleven at Night seemingly in perfect Health, and eat a pretty hearty Supper, particularly part of a Melon, which did not seem well to digest with him. The next Morning, proceeding early on his Journey, he felt some Gripings of the Cholick, which continuing till he arrived at Landen, where a Dinner was provided for him, his Majesty could eat nothing, upon which he was bled. After Dinner his Majesty being very desirous to travel with all Speed towards his own Dominions, refus'd to hearken to the Admonitions of his Attendants, who would have persuaded him to have rested at Linden, but proceeding on his Journey, and falling into a Sort of Dose in his Coach as he passed along, he rested on the Arm of a Gentleman in the Coach with him, and afterwards said, C'est se de moy, I a dead Man. They arrived at the Duke of York's Palace at Osnaburg about ten that Night where he was blooded again, but having no Relief thereby, and his Distemper increasing, his Majesty departed this Life on Sunday the eleventh Day of June, about one in the Morning, in the sixty-seventh Year of his Age, having reigned twelve Years, ten Months and eleven Days. His Body being afterwards wrapped in Lead, was privately interred among those of noble Progenitors.

GEORGE

K
only So Prince o gracious
the 30th
August
mina Ch
ter of J Branden
our grac
His L his Dea three or nesday
Day, a Afterno
importa pole, th
ately ca Princes whereup to Leice for fom Here t
the Priv Persons who dre tion for ness Ki
it being Ceremo
Mornin Majesty others Council jesty's wards h pleased gracious

G E O R G E II.

To the End of the Year 1740.

KING GEORGE I. dying on the Eleventh of June, was succeeded by his only Son GEORGE AUGUSTUS, Prince of WALES, our present most gracious Sovereign, who was born the 30th of October, 1683, and on August 22, 1705, married Wilhelmina Charlotte, or Carolina, Daughter of John Frederick, Marquis of Brandenburg Anspach, afterwards our gracious Queen Caroline.

His late Majesty dying abroad, his Death was not known here till three or four Days after, viz. Wednesday the 14th of June, on which Day, about Three a Clock in the Afternoon, a Messenger brought the important News to Sir Robert Walpole, then at Chelsea, who immediately carried it to the Prince and Princess of Wales at Richmond; whereupon they came with all Speed to Leicester-House, where they had for some Time kept their Court. Here they found several Lords of the Privy Council, and many other Persons of Quality and Distinction, who drew up and signed a Proclamation for proclaiming his Royal Highness King of these Realms; but it being then late at Night, the Ceremony was put off till the next Morning. In the mean Time, his Majesty caused all the Lords and others of the late King's Privy Council, to be sworn of his Majesty's Privy Council. And afterwards his Majesty in Council, was pleased to make the following most gracious Declaration.

The sudden and unexpected Death of the King, my dearest Father, has filled my Heart with so much Concern and Surprize, that I am at a Loss how to express myself upon this great and melancholy Occasion. I am sensible of the Weight that immediately falls upon me, by taking the Government of a Nation so powerful at home, and of such Influence and Consequence abroad: but my Love and Affection to this Country, from my Knowledge and Experience of you, makes me resolve cheerfully to undergo all Difficulties, for the Sake and Good of my People. The Religion, Laws, and Liberties of the Kingdom are most dear to me; and the Preservation of the Constitution in Church and State, as it is now happily established, shall be my first and always my chief Care. And as the Alliances enter'd into by the late King, my Father, with foreign Powers, have contributed to the restoring the Tranquility, and preserving the Balance of Europe, I shall endeavour to cultivate those Alliances, and to improve and perfect this great Work, for the Honour, Interest, and Security of my People.

The same Evening, his Majesty was pleased to declare, That understanding the Law required he should, at his Accession to the Crown, take and subscribe the Oath relating to the Security of the Church of Scotland, He was now ready to do it; which he did, according to the Forms used by the Law of Scotland.

The next Morning, June the 15th, his Majesty was proclaimed,

Q⁹

first

A. D. 1727. first in the Court before Leicester-House, then in Leicester Square, at Charing-Cross, Temple-Bar, the End of Wood Street, and lastly, at the Royal Exchange, with the usual Solemnities.

The same Day, the Earl of Scarborough was sworn of his Majesty's most Honourable Privy Council, and appointed Master of the Horse to his Majesty; which Office had been executed by Commission during the whole last Reign.

The next Day the Court of Lord Mayor and Aldermen of the City of London waited on the King and Queen with their Compliments of Condolance for the Death of the late King, and Congratulation upon his Majesty's Accession to the Crown; when his Majesty was pleased to confer the Honour of Knighthood on Robert Baylis, Esq. one of the Aldermen.

On the 19th, his Majesty was proclaimed with great Pomp and Solemnity at Edinburgh and Dublin.

The Queen having begun to settle her Household, the Duchess of Dorset was made Groom of the Stole to her Majesty, and the Earl of Grantham Lord Chamberlain of her Majesty's Household.

About this Time died Nicholas Lechmere, Lord Lechmere of Evesham, Chancellor of the Dutchy of Lancaster, and Privy Councillor; and the Reverend and Honourable Mr. Richard Hill, who served his Country in several Embassies, and as one of the Lords of the Treasury in the Reign of King William.

The Parliament met on the 27th according to his Majesty's Proclamation, when his Majesty coming to the House, made a Speech, which he delivered with his own Mouth, telling his Parliament, That he was persuaded they all shared with him in his Grief and Affliction for the Death of his late Royal Father; that it should be his constant Care to preserve the Constitution of this Kingdom, in Church and State, inviolable in all its Parts, and to secure to all his Subjects the full Enjoyment of their religious and civil Rights; that he saw with great Pleasure the happy Effects of that Vigour and Resolution which was exerted in the last Session of Parliament for the Defence of the Rights and Possessions of this Nation, and for maintaining the Tranquility and Balance of Power in Europe; and that the strict Union and Harmony, which had hitherto subsisted among the Allies of the Treaty of Hanover had chiefly contributed to the near Prospect of a general Peace: And concluded with recommending to them the making a Provision for the Support of him and his Family, and the giving all possible Dispatch to such Business as should necessarily be brought before them.

The chief Business of this short Session, was the granting a Supply to his Majesty, for the better Support of his Majesty's Household, and of the Honour and Dignity of the Crown, and the settling a Revenue on the Queen, in case she should survive his Majesty. The former was considered by the Commons, in a Committee of the whole House, on the third of July, when Mr. Chancellor of the Exchequer represented, That the annual Sum of 700,000 l. granted to the late King, falling short every Year, they had been obliged to make it up another Way; and that his present Majesty's necessary Expences being like to increase, by reason of the Largeness of his Family, and of settling a Household for his Royal Consort, he therefore moved, That the entire Revenues of the Civil List, which produced about 130,000 l. a Year, above the said yearly Sum of 790,000 l. might be settled on his Majesty during his Life. This Motion was seconded and back'd by several Members, but Mr. Shippen took Occasion from hence to animadvert pretty smartly on the Conduct of the late Ministers: However it was unanimously resolved, 1. That towards the Supply granted to his Majesty for the Support of his Majesty's Household, &c. the same Revenues which were payable to his late Majesty, during his Life, be granted and continued to his present Majesty, during his Life. 2. That the said Revenues be continued from the Death of his late Majesty. These Resolutions were the next Day agreed to by the House, and a Bill order'd to be brought in thereupon; which was accordingly done, and after several Amendments, was read the third Time on the 14th, passed, and sent up to the Lords.

the Royal Assent to these two Bills, as also to an Act to enable his Majesty to be Governor of the South Sea Company; and an Act for continuing the Imprisonment of Robert Blackburne and others, for the Assassination Plot against King William. After which his Majesty made a most gracious Speech to both Houses, and prorogued the Parliament, which was afterwards dissolved by Proclamation, on the 5th of August.

On the 8th of July, the Lord Mayor of London, with many Aldermen, the Recorder, Sheriffs, great Numbers of Common-Council Men, and other eminent Citizens, Merchants and Traders of the said City, went to St. James's with a Train of above 200 Gentlemens Coaches, and presented an Address of Condolance and Congratulation to his Majesty. It might seem strange that the City did not address sooner, and that at last it was done in this Manner: But the Reason was, that on the 22d of June a Common Council being called to consider of an Address, and a Committee of four Aldermen and eight Commoners being appointed to draw one up, when they came to report their Draught, Objections were made against several Paragraphs, as containing Reflections on the late Reign and Administration, and seeming to dictate to his Majesty: And when the Question came to be put upon each Clause, whether it should stand Part of the Address, the first Paragraph that was objected to was carried by a Majority of the Commoners, but was rejected by the Court of Aldermen, who put their Negative upon it; and the Sticklers for the Draught insisting upon having a of it or none, the whole Address was at last rejected. And a few Days after, an Address of another Stamp was set on foot, and carried

Q. q. 2

The same Day Mr. Chancellor of the Exchequer presented to the House a Bill for enabling his Majesty to settle a Revenue for supporting the Royal Dignity of the Queen, &c. pursuant to the following Resolutions, which were agreed to by the House two Days before, viz. 1. That a Provision be made for the Queen, in case she should survive his Majesty, of 100,000 l. per Annum during her Life, together with his Majesty's Palace of Somerset-House, and the Lodge and Lands at Richmond Old-Park. 2. That his Majesty be enabled to charge the said 100,000 l. per Ann. on all or any of the Duties or Revenues for the better Support of his Majesty's Household, &c. which shall subsist after his Majesty's Demise. This Bill was read the third Time on the 14th, pass'd, and sent up to the Lords.

On Monday the 17th his Majesty went to the House of Peers, and gave

A. D.
1727.

carried on with great Vigour and Industry, by Way of Subscription, at several Coffee-Houses: Which was the Address mentioned to have been presented, as above.

On the 27th of this Month died Simon Lord Viscount Harcourt, who in the Reign of Queen Anne had been Attorney General, Lord Keeper and Lord High Chancellor; as also William Greville Lord Brook. And in the following Month died Dr. Crofts, Organist and Composer to his Majesty, in the latter of which Posts he was succeeded by Dr. Greene; Sir John Packington, Baronet, who for many Years represented the County of Worcester in Parliament; and Sir George Ludlam, Chamberlain of the City of London, who was succeeded by Colonel Robinson.

The Months of August and September were chiefly taken up with the Elections for the New Parliament. There were great Struggles in divers Places, particularly in the City of London, and it appeared, upon Examination, that about 170 Members were chosen, that were not of the last Parliament.

The latter End of August, Vice-Admiral Hosier, Commander of the Squadron in the West-Indies, died on Board his Ship, as he was returning from a Cruise. His Body being embalm'd was brought over to England, and interred at Deptford.

On the 6th of September, Dr. George Hooper, Lord Bishop of Bath and Wells, a learned and excellent Prelate, departed this Life, in the 90th Year of his Age, and was succeeded by Bishop Wynne, whom Dr. Hare succeeded in the See of St. Asaph. And the latter End of the same Month died Sir Francis Forbes, Alderman of Dowgate Ward, London.

On Wednesday, October 11, the Coronation of their Majesties King George II. and Queen Caroline, was performed with as much Pomp, Grandeur and Magnificence as ever was known on the like Occasion. The Lord Bishop of Oxford preached the Coronation Sermon, and the Day was solemnized with extraordinary Demonstrations of Joy throughout his Majesty's Dominions.

The King, Queen and Royal Family having received an humble Invitation from the City to dine at Guild-hall on the Lord Mayor's Day, (which this Year was on Monday the 30th of October, and his Majesty's Birth Day) their Majesties, the Princess Royal, and the Princess Carolina came into Cheapside about Three in the Afternoon, attended by the great Officers of the Court, and a numerous Train of the Nobility and Gentry in their Coaches; and saw the Lord Mayor's Procession from a Balcony near Bow Church. Then their Majesties and the Princesses being conducted by the Sheriffs to Guild-hall, the Lord Mayor at the Entrance kneeled, and presented the Sword to the King, who was pleased to return it to his Lordship; and he carried it before his Majesty up to the Council Chamber; where Mr. Recorder made the Compliments of the City in an elegant Speech. From hence their Majesties and the Princesses went to the Husings, where they were entertained at a most noble and sumptuous Dinner; after which their Majesties returned to the Council Chamber, with the Princesses, and were present at a Ball till eleven a Clock at Night, when they returned to St. James with the same State they came.

About this Time died Dr. John Leng, Lord Bishop of Norwich, upon which Dr. William Baker was translated from the See of

Bangor

Bangor
Dr. S
See of Baron
Time, Anne
the G Repub Legbor rectors in the
On George
Lord
this L
Sidney 12th;
fel Ear
the fan
In
vage,
Rivers
were tr
Sinclair at Ch guilty Report
that th
Sinclair
midnig any p some c ces, hi prieve some T
ved h Pardon
Not wards a fairs of ral Mo ty, and much I the En minary by all fore the and in C a Cessat Great-L

Bangor, to that of Norwich, and Dr. Sherlock was promoted to the See of Bangor. Sir Lambert Blackwell, Baronet, died also about the same Time, who in the Reign of Queen Anne was Envoy Extraordinary to the Great Duke of Tuscany, and the Republick of Genoa, and Consul at Leghorn, and was one of the Directors of the South-Sea Company in the Year 1720.

On the 3d of November, Sir George Mertins, Knight, some Time Lord Mayor of London, departed this Life; as did the Honourable Sidney Wortley Montague, on the 12th; and the brave Admiral Russel Earl of Orford, on the 25th of the same Month.

In December, Mr. Richard Savage, (natural Son to the late Earl Rivers) and Mr. James Gregory were tryed for the Murder of Mr. Sinclair, at Robinson's Coffee-House at Charing Cross, and both found guilty: But it appearing, when the Report was made to his Majesty, that the unfortunate Death of Mr. Sinclair happened in a sudden midnight drunken Quarrel, without any premeditated Malice, with some other favourable Circumstances, his Majesty was pleased to relieve them during Pleasure; and some Time after they both received his Majesty's most gracious Pardon.

Notwithstanding the Attempts towards a general Pacification, the Affairs of Europe continued for several Months under great Uncertainty, and did not seem to be in a much better Situation till towards the End of this Year. The Preliminary Articles were indeed signed by all the Powers concerned, before the Death of his late Majesty, and in Consequence of it, there was a Cessation of Hostilities between Great-Britain and Spain, and the Siege of Gibraltar was suspended. In July the Ratifications of the Preliminary Articles for a general Pacification by the Emperor, King of Great-Britain, the most Christian King, and the States General, were mutually exchanged by the Ministers of those respective Powers; but Difficulties were started by the Court of Spain concerning the Execution of the Articles, particularly with respect to the actual raising of the Siege of Gibraltar, which Great-Britain insisted on, and Spain did not care to comply with till Admiral Hofier should return with his Squadron from the West-Indies; and the Restitution of the Ship Prince Frederick, belonging to the South-Sea Company. Thus by the Chicanes of the Court of Spain, in the Execution of the Preliminaries, a great deal of Time was taken up in little more than dispatching Expresses after Expresses from one Court to another; till towards the End of the Year, Matters began a little to clear up, and the King of Spain promised to draw off his Forces from Gibraltar, as soon as he should be informed that Admiral Wager had received Orders to quit the Coasts of Spain with his Squadron.

To return Home: The Beginning of January, Sir Spencer Compton, Knight of the Bath, who had been Speaker to the House of Commons in the two last Parliaments, was created a Peer of Great-Britain, by the Name, Stile and Title of Baron of Wilmington in the County of Sussex.

About the same Time, the Right Honourable William Stewart, Viscount Mountjoy, and Baron of Ramilton, in the Kingdom of Ireland, Master of the Ordnance, and Privy-Counsellor there; and Dr.

A. D. Wall, Author of the History of Infant Baptism, departed this Life. 1728.

On Jan. 23, the new Parliament met at Westminster, and the Commons unanimously chose Arthur Onslow, Esq; Knight of the Shire for the County of Surry, to be their Speaker.

On the 27th, his Majesty opened the Session with a Speech to both Houses, in which he told them, He was very sensible of the disagreeable and uneasy Situation in which our Affairs had been for some Time: That Preliminary Articles for a general Pacification were some Time ago signed, and accepted by the contracting Parties on both Sides; and altho' the Ratifications of them had been exchanged by his Majesty and his Allies, with the Emperor, the good Effects expected from them were retarded, by the Refusal on the Part of Spain, to execute some of the most material Points contained in them, and by Endeavours to alter and explain some Articles, in such a Manner, as immediately affected the Possessions and the just Rights of these Kingdoms: But that by the last Advices from abroad, he had great Reason to hope, that the Difficulties, which had hitherto retarded the Execution of the Preliminaries, and the opening of the Congress, would soon be entirely removed. However he told them, it would be absolutely necessary to continue the Preparations, which had hitherto been our Security; and concluded with recommending to them some Method for the Increase and Encouragement of Seamen, and a farther Provision for Greenwich Hospital.

February 8, the Commons voted 15,000 Men for the Sea Service for the Year 1728. And on the 10th they voted 22,955 Men for Guards and Garisons. Soon after they considered, in a grand Committee on the Supply, the Estimate of the Charge of the 12,000 Hessians: And a Motion being made, that 230,923 l. 11 s. 8 d. be granted for the said Charge, the same occasioned a great Debate. At last the Question being put, it was carried in the Affirmative.

On the 19th, the Commons resolved to address his Majesty for a particular and distinct Account of the Distribution of the Sum of 250,000 l. which, in an Account laid before the House, was charg'd to have been issued for other Expences and Engagements, over and above such as were therein particularly specified, for securing the Trade and Navigation of this Kingdom, and preserving and restoring the Peace of Europe. And a few Days after, Mr. Treasurer reported to the House, that their said Address had been presented to his Majesty, and that his Majesty had commanded him to acquaint the House, That the late King, his Majesty's Royal Father, having upon the like Occasion received from the last Parliament the most dutiful Acknowledgments of his great Care and Wisdom, in taking such Steps, and entering into such Engagements, as he thought would best conduce to the Security of this Kingdom, and the Preservation of the Peace of Europe; and at the same Time the strongest Assurances of their future Support, in all such farther Measures as he should find necessary and expedient, for preventing a Rupture, and for the Honour and Advantage of these Kingdoms; and a Power being accordingly given by Parliament to his late Majesty, for issuing and applying such Sums of Money, as he should find necessary, for answering and defraying such Expences and Engagements, as had been or should be

be made, for the great and necessary Purposes; some Part of the Money mentioned in this Address had been issued and disbursed by his late Majesty, and the remaining Part has been applied by his Majesty, for carrying on the same necessary Services, for strengthening his Alliances, and in fulfilling his Engagements of the utmost Importance to these Kingdoms, and to the general Tranquility of Europe, and which require the greatest Secrecy. His Majesty therefore hopes, that this House will repose the same Confidence in him, and be assured that the Money has been necessarily expended, pursuant to the Power given by Act of Parliament, and for the Use and Purposes thereby directed, and a particular and distinct Account whereof cannot be given without manifest Prejudice to the Publick.

This Answer being conformable to that which was returned in Feb. 1726-7, to a like Address about the Disposal of 125,000*l.* Mr. Pulteney and several others, who objected against it, urged the Increase of the national Debt, notwithstanding the so much boasted of sinking Fund, and would have had that important Affair immediately debated in a Grand Committee: But it was waved by moving to adjourn the House to Monday; which after some Debate, was carried by a Majority of 202 against 66.

Street Robberies having about this Time increased to a very great Degree, so that it was scarce safe for any to pass the Streets in the Night about their necessary Affairs, a Proclamation was issued on the 11th of March for discovering and apprehending any Persons, who for three Months past had committed, or for the future should commit any Robbery or Murder in the Streets of London or Westminster, or in any Street or Highway within five Miles of the same, promising 100*l.* Reward, over and above all other Rewards already allowed; as also a Pardon to any Accomplice discovering and apprehending any such Offender, provided he had not actually given a Wound in any such Murder or Robbery.

Their Excellencies Count Welderen, and M. Silvius, having been sent over Ambassadors Extraordinary from the States General, with their Congratulations on his Majesty's happy Accession, on the 4th of March made their publick Entry through the City, in a most grand and magnificent Manner, to Somerset House; and on the 7th were conducted in the same grand Manner to Court, where with the usual Ceremonies they had their publick Audience of their Majesties and the rest of the Royal Family; after which they were conducted to their own House in the same State as they came.

This Month died Dr. Stanhope, Dean of Canterbury; and Mrs. Clarke, Daughter to the celebrated Milton, of whom it is remarkable that she lived many Years so obscurely with her Son-in-Law, a poor Weaver in Spittle-Fields, that it was hardly known there was such a Person in Being, till some Time last Year, an ingenious Letter in one of the publick Papers brought her to Light, together with her mean Circumstances, after which she was visited by great Numbers of People of Fashion and Distinction, whom the Curiosity of seeing the Daughter of so great a Man brought to her, and from whom she received many considerable Presents.

The Siege of Gibraltar being at last entirely raised, Sir Charles Wager

A. D. 1728. ger returned with his Squadron, about the Beginning of April, from the Coast of Spain.

On the 10th, the Commons in a Body waited on the King at St. James's, with their humble Representation of the National Debts discharged and incurred since December 25, 1716, with a State of the Sinking Fund, and of the publick Credit; whereby it appear'd, that the Decrease of the National Debt since that Time, was 2,698,416 l. 9s. 7d. 3/4.

The Princess Amelia set out about this Time for Bath, for the Recovery of her Health. She met with great Honours and Respect at Reading, Marlborough, and other Towns thro' which she passed, and was receiv'd at Bath by the Mayor, Aldermen, &c. in their Formalities. During her Stay there, she made a Visit to Bristol, where she was receiv'd in the same Manner, and treated with the utmost Magnificence; and having staid at Bath about two Months, she returned to London towards the End of June.

On the the 23d of April in the Morning, his Majesty set out for Newmarket, and arrived there in the Evening; where the next Day he was attended by the University of Cambridge in a Body, having Dr. Lambert their Vice-Chancellor at their Head, accompanied by their two Representatives in Parliament, &c. Being introduced, Mr. Vice-Chancellor made a dutiful Speech to his Majesty, and in the Name of the University humbly desired him to honour them with his Royal Presence at Dinner; which Invitation his Majesty having graciously accepted, entered Cambridge, the next Morning between 11 and 12, attended by the great Officers of the Court, and several other Persons of Distinction. At some Distance from the Town, his Majesty was met by the Mayor and Aldermen, and the rest of the Corporation on Horseback, in their Formalities, who conducted him through the Town to the Regent-Walk, where he was received by his Grace the Duke of Somerset, Chancellor of the University, attended by their whole Body, all in their proper Robes and Habits. From hence his Majesty proceeded to the Senate-House, where he commanded several Degrees in all Faculties to be conferred. Then he went to King's College Chapel, and from thence to Trinity-College, and was entertained at Dinner in the Hall of that College, at the Expence of the University, upon a Throne erected for that Purpose, being served by the Fellow Commoners of the same College in their proper Habits of Purple Tabby, lac'd with Silver; Dr. Bentley the Master standing on his Majesty's Right Hand during the whole Entertainment, which was performed with the greatest Order and Magnificence. His Majesty made the University a Present of 2000 l. and returned the same Evening to Newmarket, from whence he arrived at St. James's on the 27th.

Dr. John Woodward, Professor of Physick at Gresham College, died about the End of this Month. He by his Will gave to the University of Cambridge a Sum sufficient to erect a Professorship for Natural Philosophy, with a Provision of 150 l. per Annum, for Support and Maintenance of it for ever. He likewise gave to the said University his entire Collection of Fossils, &c. Also a little before, the Honourable Samuel Molineux, Esq; one of the Lords Commissioners of the Admiralty, departed this Life.

On

On Ma
into Conf his Majest
after a lon Speeches
Men, it humble A Majesty, Fidelity
jesty, an which th of, and G to assure will ena fray the still rema gagemen certed f Navigat for rest Peace o
On th the Hou
veral o Assent t
to his M
to the B A2 for into hi
which Session to both Abo
the Ba
Sir Jo
John Thoma Thoma
ton.
In Eden,
Durba
King
and Arche
Broth
And New oner of K

On May 8, the Commons took into Consideration a Message from his Majesty of the Day before ; and after a long Debate, in which warm Speeches pass'd between two great Men, it was resolv'd, That an humble Address be presented to his Majesty, to declare the Duty and Fidelity of this House to his Majesty, and the entire Confidence which they repose in his royal Care of, and Goodness to his People ; and to assure his Majesty that this House will enable him to answer and defray the Charges and Expences that still remain unsatisfied, of the Engagements entered into and concerted for securing the Trade and Navigation of this Kingdom, and for restoring and preserving the Peace of Europe.

On the 28th his Majesty went to the House of Peers, and among several other Acts, gave the Royal Assent to an Act for granting an Aid to his Majesty, by Sale of Annuities to the Bank of England, &c. and an Act for encouraging Seamen to enter into his Majesty's Service. After which his Majesty put an End to the Session with a most gracious Speech to both Houses.

About this Time four Knights of the Bath were created Peers, viz. Sir John Hobart, Baron Hobart ; Sir John Monson, Baron Monson ; Sir Thomas Coke, Baron Lovell ; and Sir Thomas Wentworth, Baron of Malmesbury.

In this Month died Sir John Eden, Bart. Knight of the Shire for Durham in all the Parliaments of King George I. The Honourable and Reverend Dr. Henry Bridges, Archdeacon of Rochester, and only Brother to the Duke of Chandos : And William Lord Cheyne, Viscount Newhaven, who was a Commissioner of the Privy Seal in the Reign of King William.

In the following Month, Dr. A. D. Hugh Chamberlen, the famous Man-Midwife, departed this Life. 1728.

The Beginning of July, the King having been informed, that the Duke of Parma lately thought fit to invite the Pretender to the Place of his Residence, and to receive him there with the Honours and Distinctions due to the King of Great Britain ; his Majesty was pleas'd to order, that the Sieur Como, Agent here from the said Duke, should depart out of his Dominions in two Days.

About this Time died Captain Porter, one of the Conspirators in the Assassination Plot against King William ; who becoming an Evidence, obtain'd his Pardon, and a Pension of 200*l.* per Ann. from the Government : Also Dr. Friend, a very eminent Physician, and Physician in Ordinary to her Majesty. And some Time before, Vice-Admiral Hopson, who succeeded the late Vice-Admiral Hoffer in the Command of the Squadron in the West-Indies, died of a Fever on the Coast of New Spain.

Several Persons were taken into Custody on account of printing and publishing Mist's Journal of August 24, which, under Colour of relating the Affairs of Persia, was suppos'd to contain very gross and scandalous Reflections upon the Government, and the present happy Establishment. The Issue of it was, that several Persons, (Press-men, Compositors, &c) were sentenc'd to stand on the Pillory, and to be committed to Bridewell to hard Labour : And Edward Farley, Printer of the Exeter Journal, was taken up for reprinting the said Mist's Journal, and a Bill of Indictment for High Treason found against him ; but after a close Confinement for near a Year without Bail or Main-prize, prize, upon his humble Petition to the Queen he obtain'd a Noli Prosequi, by virtue of which he was cleared in open Court.

A. D.
1728.

On the 3^d of August, died at Osnabrug, his Royal Highness Ernest Augustus, Prince of Brunswick Lunenburg, Bishop of Osnabrug, Duke of York and Albany, Earl of Ulster in Ireland, and Knight of the most noble Order of the Garter, Brother to his late Majesty King George I.

The 15th of August, Signior Vignola, Resident from the most Serene Republick of Venice; September 5, Count Kinkski, Envoy Extraordinary from the Emperor; and on the 12th of the same Month, Cossam Hojath Envoy from the Government of Tripoli, had severally their first publick Audience of his Majesty, of the Queen, and of the Royal Family, with the usual Ceremonies.

In September died Sir Peter Delme, Knt. Lord Mayor of London in the Year 1724. Henry Earl of Lincoln, Cofferer of his Majesty's Household: Dr. Bateman, formerly Physician to King Charles II. and for several Years President of the College of Physicians: And Dr. Hale, Physician to Bethlehem Hospital, who was succeeded by Dr. Monroe. In October died the Earl of Salisbury, and in November the Duke of Gordon.

The Beginning of December, the Nation was agreeably surprized with the sudden Arrival of his Royal Highness Prince Frederick (now Prince of Wales.) His Majesty having given it in Charge to the Marquis de la Forest, Lord Chamberlain to his Royal Highness, and to Mr. Delaunay, Lieutenant Colonel of the Hanover Guards, who happen'd to be at the British Court, to go and bring over his Royal Highness with all possible Secresy and Speed; those two Gentlemen being come near Hanover on November 24 in the Evening, went directly to Herzenhausen, where the Prince being privately sent for, and acquainted with their Errand, they set out about Three in the Morning, with no more than three Servants; the Marquis going for an English Gentleman, by the Name of Crompton, and the Prince for his Son. Thus they arrived incognito at Helwoetsluy, and went on board the Dispatch Packet-Boat, that was ready to sail for Harwich; where his Royal Highness arrived on the 3^d of December, lodg'd at Colchester that Night, came to Whitechapel the next Day about Seven in the Evening, and proceeded thence privately in a Hackney Coach to St. James's; where the next Day at Noon there was a numerous Court, to congratulate his Royal Highness on his safe Arrival.

The Honourable Spencer Cowper, Esq; one of the Judges of the Common Pleas, and Brother of the late Lord Chancellor Cowper; Dr. White Kennet, Bishop of Peterborough; and Dr. George Verney, Lord Willoughby de Brooke, Dean of Windesor, and Register of the most noble Order of the Garter, died about this Time.

Tho' a Convention relating to the Preliminary Articles was signed by all the contracting Powers on the 6th of March, and thereupon the Ratifications of these Articles were exchanged; yet new Difficulties arose, which made the Peace of Europe as uncertain even to the End of this Year, as it was the last. The Congress was opened at Soissons instead of Cambray, which was at first agreed upon, about the middle of June; in which the British Plenipotentiaries were William Stanhope, Horatio Walpole, and Stephen Poyntz Esqrs; but by Reason of fresh Difficulties that were started, the Conference ferences were carried on with great Interruptions, and little of Moment was effected; sometimes the Negotiations were chiefly at Soissons and sometimes at Fontainebleau, till towards the End of the Year several of the first Plenipotentiaries returned to their respective Countries.

In January, Dr. Clavering was translated from the See of Landaff, to that of Peterborough; and Dr. Harris, Dean of Burien, was some Time after advanced to the See of Landaff.

Sir John Fortescue Aland, Knight, was appointed one of the Justices of the Court of Common Pleas.

On the 21st the Parliament met, when his Majesty told them in his Speech, That the Execution of the Preliminary Articles, and the opening of the Congress at Soissons laid a Foundation for them to entertain Hopes of seeing very soon the happy Fruits of a general Pacification: But the various and extensive Views, which fell under Consideration, in settling and reconciling the different Interests and Pretensions of so many different Powers, appear'd to be a Work of so much Time and Difficulty, that the Project of a provisional Treaty was thought of, as a proper Expedient; which being concerted and negotiated among the Ministers of the principal Powers, Parties to the Treaties of Hannover and Vienna, was approv'd of by Him and His Allies, not without reasonable Hopes of the Concurrence of the Imperial Court, and the Court of Madrid: But no definitive Answer being yet returned by either of them, nor the Project of the provisional Treaty either accepted, or rejected, the Fate of Europe was still held in Suspence, labouring under Difficulties, that unavoidably attend such a doubtful and undetermined Condition.

The Commons, after great Debates, voted the same Number of Land Forces as the Year before.

Sir John Colebatch, Knight, an eminent Physician; William Congreve, Esq; the celebrated Poet: and Sir Edward Ernie, Baronet, Member of Parliament for Wareham in Dorsetshire, died in this Month.

In February the Commons appointed a Committee to enquire into the State of the Goals of this Kingdom; the Occasion of which was this: James Ogletborpe, Esq; a Member of the House, being acquainted with Mr. Castle, an ingenious Man, eminently skill'd in Architecture, visited him in Distress, while a Prisoner in the Fleet, and being afterwards fully convinced that the Hardships and Barbarities put upon him by the Warden, were the immediate Cause of his Death, he, from that Moment, resolved to use his utmost Endeavours to get this National Grievance redressed: And several eminent Members readily concurring in this publick-spirited Design, Mr. Ogletborpe made a Motion for the Committee abovementioned. This Committee visited the Fleet several Times, and about April, upon the Report made by Mr. Ogletborpe from the said Committee, the Commons resolved, That Thomas Bambridge, the acting Warden of the Fleet, hath wilfully permitted several Debtors to the Crown, and other Debtors, to escape; hath been guilty of the most notorious Breaches of his Trust, great Extortions, and the highest Crimes and Misdemeanours; and hath arbitrarily and unlawfully loaded with Irons, put into Dungeons, and destroyed Prisoners for Debt under his Charge, treating them in the most barbarous and cruel Manner. Also, That John Huggins, Esq; late Warden

A.D.
1729.

Warden of the Fleet, did, during the Time of his Wardenship, wilfully permit many considerable Debtors to escape, and was notoriously guilty of great Breaches of his Trust, Extortions, Cruelties, and other high Crimes and Misdemeanours, to the great Oppression and Ruin of many of the Subjects of this Kingdom. The Commons also order'd them, with several of Bambridge's Agents and Accomplices, to be committed close Prisoners to Newgate, and proceeded further against them. An Account of the State of the Fleet Prison was publish'd, exhibiting a horrid Scene of Cruelty and Barbarity. Mr. Huggins and Bambridge were tried for several Crimes and Misdemeanours, and even for Murder: Some or other of these Trials were a long Time depending, but they had the good Fortune at last to be acquitted. There were much the same Proceedings against William Acton, Clerk of the Marshalsea Prison, and Farmer of the same, who was tried on Indictments for several Murders, and acquitted of them all. The Result of all was, that the Goals were regulated, and Things put upon a better Footing than before.

His Majesty went to the House of Peers, on the 24th of March, and gave the Royal Assent to an Act for raising 1,250,000 l. by Sale of Annuities to the Bank of England, after the Rate of 4 l. per Cent per Annum.

The next Day both Houses of Parliament waited on the King at St. James's, with the following Resolution, viz. Resolved by the Lords Spiritual and Temporal, and Commons in Parliament assembled, 'That they do entirely rely upon 'his Majesty, that he will, for 'maintaining the Honour, and se'curing the Trade of this Kingdom, take effectual Care in the 'present Treaty, to preserve his 'undoubted Right to Gibraltar, 'and the Island of Minorca.'

This Month, Sir William Lort, Baronet, Member of Parliament for Pontefract in Yorkshire, and Sir James Long, Baronet, Knight of the Shire for Wiltshire, departed this Life. And Leopold Joseph Charles, Duke of Lorain, died about the same Time at Luneville.

In April died Sir Clement Fisher, Baronet; and Washington Earl Ferrers. Also the same Month was removed by Death, Rear-Admiral St. Loe, who succeeded Vice-Admiral Hopson, in the Command of the Squadron in the West-Indies. He was the third Admiral we lost in those Parts, and had not received his Commission, appointing him Rear-Admiral of the Blue, when he died.

May 14, His Majesty went to the House of Peers, and gave the Royal Assent to An Act to enable her Majesty to be Regent, during his Majesty's Absence, without taking the Oaths: An Act for establishing an Agreement with seven of the Lords Proprietors of Carolina, for the Surrender of their Title and Interest in that Province to his Majesty: An Act for the more effectual preventing Bribery and Corruption in Election of Members to serve in Parliament: An Act for the more effectual preventing Forgery and Perjury, and to make it Felony to steal Bonds, Notes, or other Securities for Payment of Money: An Act for the Relief of Debtors, with Respect to the Imprisonment of their Persons: An Act for better regulating Attorneys and Solicitors: An Act to incapacitate Thomas Bambridge to enjoy the Office of Warden of the Fleet, or

or any other whatsoever; and to several other Acts; After which, his Majesty put an End to the Session, with a most gracious Speech.

The same Day a Commission passed the Great Seal, constituting Queen Caroline, his Majesty's Royal Consort, Guardian and Lieutenant of Great Britain, during his Majesty's Absence in Foreign Parts. And three Days after his Majesty set out for Hanover, where he arrived on the 24th.

About this Time, died Thomas Earl Coningsby; Dr. King, Archbishop of Dublin, who was succeeded by Dr. John Hoadley, Bishop of Leighlin and Ferns; and the Reverend and Learned Dr. Samuel Clarke, Rector of St. James's Westminster, a Gentleman universally known by his Writings.

The Beginning of June, the Fleet at Spithead, under Sir Charles Wager, was joined by eleven Dutch Men of War, a Bomb Ketch, and a Store Ship from Holland, under Vice-Admiral Somelsdyke. A great many Persons of Distinction, and others, went to Portsmouth to see this united English and Dutch Squadron, which was to be sent to the Coast of Spain, in case Matters were not soon brought to an Accommodation.

In this Month died William Cavendish Duke of Devonshire, Knight of the Garter, and President of the Council: John Hungerford, of Lincoln's Inn, Esq; Member of Parliament for Scarborough; and Peregrine Osborne Duke of Leeds. And the following Month, Thomas Tufston, Earl of Thanet, and Sir Clobery Holt, Baronet, departed this Life.

The Lords Proprietors of South Carolina, having signed at the Treasury a Deed of Conveyance and Surrender of their Right and Title to that Province, to the Crown, the Sum of 20000 l. was issued out of the Exchequer, being the Purchase Money agreed upon.

In September, the Right Honourable James Lord Waldegrave was advanced to the Dignity of a Viscount and Earl of Great Britain, by the Style and Title of Viscount Chewton, and Earl Waldegrave. And Cyril Wich, Esq; was advanced to the Dignity of a Baronet.

On the 11th his Majesty landed at Margate at eleven in the Forenoon, and arrived at Kensington about ten at Night.

In the same Month the following considerable Persons quitted the Stage of Life, viz. The ingenious Sir Richard Steele, Knight, well known for his many celebrated Writings, especially the Tatlers, under the feigned Name of Isaac Bickerstaff, Esq; Heneage Finch, Earl of Winchelsea; Robert Spencer, Earl of Sunderland, Grandson to the late Duke of Marlborough; Peter Le Neve, Esq; Norroy, King at Arms: And the Lord William Powlett, Uncle to the Duke of Bolton.

His Excellency William Burnet, Esq; Governour of New-England, died there about the same Time. He was Son to the late Dr. Gilbert Burnet, Lord Bishop of Sarum, and in his Government had several Disputes with the House of Representatives in New-England, which were carried to a great Height, about fixing a Salary for the Governor for the Time being, which he strenuously insisted upon according to the King's Instructions to him, and they as strenuously refused. The Treatment he met with in this Affair was thought to hasten his Death. He was succeeded by Governour Belcher.

The Beginning of October, the Dutch Squadron under Vice-Admiral

A. D.
1729.

A. D.
1729.

ral Somelsyke returned from Spithead to Holland, and the English Fleet broke up soon after; Affairs in Relation to Spain having now taken a favourable Turn.

Mr. Thomas Fairchild, well known to the Curious in Gardening, died in this Month at his House at Hoxton. He bequeathed a Sum of Money to defray the Expence of an annual Sermon every Whit-Tuesday for ever, by the Lecturer of Shoreditch for the Time being, on The Wisdom of God in the vegetable Kingdom. Francis North Lord Guilford, and Edward Montague Earl of Sandwich, died likewise in the same Month.

During the former Part of this Year, the Prospect of a Rupture increased, and all Things seemed to tend towards a War; but on a sudden they took another Turn, and on the 9th of November, N. S. a Treaty was concluded at Seville between the Crowns of Great-Britain, France and Spain, to which the States General soon after acceded; in which the contracting Powers engage to guarantee reciprocally the Kingdoms, States and Dominions under their Obedience, in what Parts of the World soever situate, as also the Rights and Privileges of their Commerce: Commissaries were to be nominated on the Part of their Britannick and Catholick Majesties, to assemble at the Court of Spain, to examine and decide what concerns the Ships and Effects taken at Sea on either Side, &c. The Introduction of Garrisons into the Places of Leghorn, Porto-Ferrajo, Parma and Placentia, to the Number of 6000 Men of his Catholick Majesty's Troops and in his Pay, was to be effectuated without Loss of Time; in Order to secure to the Infante Don Carlos, the Succession of the States of Tuscany, Parma and Placentia: And the contracting Powers engage to establish and maintain the said Infante Don Carlos, in the Possession and Enjoyment of the said States, when he shall once be settled there; declaring themselves Guarantees for ever of the Right, Possession, Tranquility, and Quiet of the said Infante, and of his Successors to the said States.

His Excellency William Stanhope, Esq; Ambassador Extraordinary and Plenipotentiary at the Court of Spain, was created a Peer of Great-Britain, by the Title of Baron of Harrington.

The new Bridge from Fulham to Putney was finished about this Time.

The Peace between Great-Britain and Spain was soon followed by a considerable Reduction of the Land Forces.

On the 28th of November, the Court of King's-Bench gave Judgment against Mr. Woolston, for his four blasphemous Discourses on our Saviour's Miracles, viz. 25 l. each for the first three; and 25 l. and a Year's Imprisonment for the fourth, and to give Security for his good Behaviour, during Life, himself in a Recognizance of 2000 l. and two Sureties in 1000 l. each, or four Sureties in 500 l. each.

Some Time before, died William Conolly Esq; who had been Speaker to the Irish House of Commons ever since the Accession of King George I. till within a few Days before his Death, he resigned that honourable Post.

In November died Sir Bernard Hale, Knt. one of the Barons of the Exchequer, who was succeeded by Sir William Thompson, Recorder of London: And Mr. Abel Boyer, Author of the French Dictionary, the Annals and Life of Queen Anne, and the Political State of Great-Britain.

In December died Anthony Collins, Esq; of Baddow-Hall, in Essex, the reputed Author of the Discourse of Free-thinking, the Grounds of the Christian Religion, the Scheme of literal Prophecy, &c. Also Dr. Timothy Goodwin, Archbishop of Cashel in Ireland: And Jane Wenham, who in the latter End of Queen Anne's Reign was condemned for Witchcraft at Hertford, but upon the Judge's Representation of the Affair, pardoned by her Majesty; after which she was in a great Measure supported by Col. Plummer, the Earl and Countess Cowper, Governor Collet, &c.

January 13, his Majesty went to the House of Peers, open'd the Session with a most gracious Speech, in which he told his Parliament, That it was with great Satisfaction he acquainted them, that we had at length extricated ourselves from the many Difficulties and Inconveniences, that attended the uncertain State of Affairs in Europe, by having concluded an absolute Peace with the Crown of Spain.

The young Czar, Peter II. died at Moscow, of the Small-Pox, and was succeeded by the Czarina Anne, Duchess Dowager of Courland, Daughter of the Czar John, half Brother to the Czar Peter I.

At Home Daniel Finch, Earl of Winchelsea and Nottingham; and David Colyear, Earl of Portmore, Governor of Gibraltar, and the first General on the British Establishment, died in this Month.

In February, there were great Debates in the House of Commons in Relation to some Works carrying on by the Inhabitants of Dunkirk, in Order to repair their Harbour. Complaint was made of this Affair by the British Minister at the French Court, which procured an Order from the King, to forbid the carrying on any such Works, and to demolish any that may have been erected contrary to the Treaty of Utrecht.

The noted Col. Charteris was capitally convicted and received Sentence of Death at the Old Baily, for a Rape committed by him upon Anne Bond, his Servant Maid: But when the Judges who sat upon the Trial came to make their Report, his Majesty having heard severally their Opinions upon the Case, was pleased by the unanimous Advice of his Privy Council, to order that he should be pardoned, and forthwith admitted to Bail to plead the said Pardon next Sessions.

Dr. Thomas Bray, Minister of St. Botolph Aldgate, died about this Time. He formed the Design, and was the principal Solicitor for procuring the Charter of the Society for propagating the Gospel in Foreign Parts; and contrived, and by the Assistance of his Friends, founded in Great Britain and the Plantations, above 150 Parochial Libraries, from 10 l. to 50 l. Value.

In March, Arthur Sturt, Esq; John Goddard, Esq; and Benjamin Keene, Esq; his Majesty's Minister at the Court of Spain, were appointed Commissioners on the Part of Great Britain for settling and adjusting the different Demands and Pretensions of Great Britain and Spain on each other, agreeable to the Treaty of Seville.

The Landgrave of Hesse Cassel died about the End of this Month: The King of Sweden, his Son, was immediately proclaimed his Successor, and the Regency conferred on his Brother, Prince William.

About this Time the Pension Bill was passed by the House of Commons, and rejected by the Lords.

The

A. D.
1730.

A. D.
1730.

The Earl of Stair was appointed Lord Admiral of Scotland, in the Room of the Duke of Queensbury and Dover, who resigned.

On April 30, it was agreed in Common Council, That all the Fines that should arise from those Gentlemen that were nominated for Sheriffs, should be appropriated towards building a Mansion-House for the Lord-Mayor for the Time being.

About this Time died Sir Edward Knatchbull. Bart. Representative for Lestwithiel in Cornwall, and in the last Parliament Knight of the Shire for the County of Kent: And Lord Chief Baron Pengelly, who was succeeded in that Post by Mr. Justice Reynolds.

May 15, the King went to the House of Peers, and gave the Royal Assent to An Act for taking off certain Duties on Salt: An Act for the better Regulation of Juries, and several other Acts; after which, he made a most gracious Speech to both Houses, and prorogued the Parliament.

The same Day in the Evening, the Lord Viscount Townshend delivered up the Seal of his Office, as one of his Majesty's Principal Secretaries of State; and at the same Time resigned his Commission of Lord Lieutenant of the County of Norfolk.

There were several Removes and Preferments this Month, of which the following are the chief: Horatio Walpole, Esq; was appointed Cofferer of his Majesty's Household: Lord Harvey, Vice-Chamberlain of his Majesty's Household; Lord Trevor President of the Council: Lord Wilmington Keeper of the Privy Seal: Henry Pelham, Esq; Pay-Master General of the Forces: Sir Charles Turner, Bart. one of the Tellers of the Exchequer: Sir William Yonge

one of the Commissioners for executing the Office of Treasurer of his Majesty's Exchequer; George Treby, Esq; Master of the Household: Sir William Strickland, Bart. Secretary of War; Lord Bingley Treasurer of the Household: Sir Thomas Frankland, Bart. and Thomas Wilmington, Esq; Lord Commissioners of the Admiralty: And the Earl of Chesterfield, Lord Steward of the Household.

The Lords Fitz Walter, Asheburnham, and Wilmington were advanced to the Dignity of Earls.

In this Month died the honourable Mrs. Arabella Godfrey, Sister to the late Duke of Marlborough, and Relict of Col. Godfrey. She had Issue by King James II. the late Duke of Berwick, and the Lady Dowager Waldegrave, who died a few Weeks before. Sir Justinian Isham, Knight of the Shire for the County of Northampton, died also about this Time.

The Right Honourable the Lord Harrington was on the 13th of June appointed one of his Majesty's principal Secretaries of State. And a few Days after, his Grace the Duke of Dorset was declared Lord Lieutenant of Ireland.

On the 18th his Royal Highness the Duke, and the Earls of Chesterfield and Burlington, were installed Knights of the Garter at Windso in the Presence of the Sovereign with great Order and Magnificence.

About this Time, Seven Chirakee Indian Chiefs, called King Ouida, Prince Catorgusta, General Tethtat, General C'ogoit, General Calanab, General Unnowconnowwe, and Captain Owcan Nakab, were brought over from the Country bordering upon Carolina, by Sir Alexander Cummins, in the Fox Man of War and introduced to his Majesty at Windso.

Windsor, who, by their Interpreter, ask'd them many Questions, and they had severally the Honour to kiss the Hand of his Majesty, the Prince of Wales and the Duke. The King had a Scarlet Jacket on, but all the rest were naked, except an Apron about their Middles, and a Horse's Tail hung down behind. Their Faces, Shoulders, &c. were painted and spotted with red, blue and green. They had Bows in their Hands, and painted Feathers on their Heads. They expressed great Satisfaction at the kind Reception they had met with, and promised to be ever grateful to his Majesty's Subjects in America. After this they went to see the Tower, Christ Church Hospital, Greenwich Hospital, &c. and at all Places were received and entertained with great Respect. They walked in St. James's Park, habited in rich Garments laced with Gold, presented to them by his Majesty, and accompanied with several Persons of Quality and Distinction, and a numerous Crowd of Spectators. And having agreed to Articles of Peace and Commerce between the Indians and the English, before the Lords Commissioners of Trade and Plantations, expressing their Satisfaction thereat, and for the Kindnesses they had received, by singing and dancing after their Manner, they departed the Beginning of October, and were carried to Carolina, in the same Ship that brought them over.

On the 19th of June, the Right Honourable Thomas Lord Trevor, Lord President of his Majesty's most Honourable Privy Council, departed this Life.

St. Bartholomew's Hospital being pulled down, in order to be rebuilt, the Foundation Stone of the new Building was laid by the Lord Mayor, Sir Richard Brocas, on the 9th of July.

About this Time died Sir William Pennington, Baronet; Sir Richard How, Baronet, who served in Parliament many Years for the County of Wilts; and James Maccartney, Esq; Lieutenant General of his Majesty's Forces, who was engaged as a Second, in the memorable Duel between the late Duke Hamilton and the Lord Mobun, in Hyde-Park. And a little after died Major General Crowder, who in the Reign of King James II. was a Colonel of Horse in the Camp at Hounslow.

In August, Victor Amadeus II. King of Sardinia, Duke of Savoy, &c. made a general Abdication of his Kingdoms and Dominions in Favour of his Son Charles Emanuel, Prince of Piedmont.

In September, the Queen was pleased to settle 30*l.* per Annum, on Stephen Duck, a poor Thresher at Clarendon Park in Wiltshire; and likewise to give him a little House at Richmond in Surry to live in, on Account of his several ingenious poetical Compositions.

In this Month died the Reverend Mr. Lawrence Echard, Archdeacon of Stow, Author of the Roman History, the Ecclesiastical History, the History of England, &c. And Charles Fitz-Roy, Duke of Cleveland, and Southampton, the eldest natural Son of King Charles I. by Barbara Villiers, Duchess of Cleveland.

The Beginning of October, Frederick IV. King of Denmark and Norway, departed this Life at Odense, in the 60th Year of his Age, and was succeeded by his Son Christian VI.

In this and the following Months, People were greatly alarmed with the Villainous Practice of sending threatening Letters to Persons, to extort

R r

A. D.

1730.

A. D. extort Money from them, demanding particular Sums to be left in certain Places, and threatening with the most horrid Imprecations, to burn their Houses, and destroy them and their Families, upon their Non-Compliance. It began at Bristol, where the House of one Mr. Packer, a Merchant, was actually fired by the Villains, and burnt down; and spread itself over a great Part of the Kingdom, many Persons in Town and Country having such Letters sent to them; which occasioned a Proclamation to be published for suppressing such Practices.

Dr. William Talbot, Lord Bishop of Durham, died on the 10th of October; upon which Dr. Edward Chandler was translated from the See of Litchfield and Coventry to that of Durham, and Dr. Richard Smallbroke from the See of St. David's to that of Litchfield and Coventry.

In November, Colly Cibber, Esq; the famous Comedian, was made Poet Laureat to his Majesty, in the Room of the Reverend Mr. Lawrence Eusden, deceased. And in the same Month died Mr. Joshua Gee, an eminent Quaker, Author of a Treatise relating to the Trade and Navigation of Great Britain; and Sir Halsewell Tynte, Baronet, Member of Parliament for Bridgewater.

The Duty on Salt expiring on Christmas Day, according to the late Act, about 500 Officers belonging to the Salt Office were by that Means discharged.

The Right Honourable Spencer, Earl of Wilmington, was on the last Day of December declared President of his Majesty's most Honourable Privy Council.

A few Days before died the Right Honourable Edward Southwell, Esq; Principal Secretary of State for Ireland, and first Clerk of the Privy Council in Great Britain: And Henry Scot, Earl of Deloraine, one of the Sixteen Peers for Scotland, and youngest Son of James Duke of Monmouth, who was beheaded on Tower-Hill in the Reign of King James II.

Notwithstanding the Treaty of Seville, the Affairs of Europe were this Year in as great a State of Uncertainty as before. The Emperor seem'd inflexible against sending Spanish Troops into Italy, and insisted on Neutral Troops according to the Quadruple Alliance; and actually made great Warlike Preparations, sending Troops into the Milanese and other Parts of Italy, to maintain the Rights of the Empire there. On the other hand, Spain was impatient to have the Article relating to Don Carlos and the Spanish Garisons executed, pressed the Allies to make good their Engagements, and made heavy Complaints of their Delays, and in Resentment even detained the Effects of the Flotilla. The Allies at first prepared for the Italian Expedition, but the great Dissensions between the Emperor and Spain caused it to be put off for this Year. France seemed to be for pushing Matters against the Emperor, and coming to a War, but England and Holland were for more cool Measures. Several Attempts were made for an Accommodation, which, tho' without Effect this Year, yet in the following ended in the Treaty of Vienna between the Emperor and Great Britain, and putting the favourite Spanish Scheme of the Italian Expedition in Execution.

Jan. 21, the Parliament met when his Majesty told them, That as the Transactions now depending in the several Courts of Europe were

upon
the mig first O
by th Pult
in th five Har
his the S close arme
Sir Chief
was of Lo Lang
Dr terbur
Dav
His Parm
Gener
Imper
Duch for L had b Domi
by h thoug proved
The were g relatin Forces
contin
Aho
Cotton
Robert
Cotton
Elizab learned of sever
Bird, ted ma nificen Abby,
&c.
upon

upon the Point of being determined, the great Event of Peace or War might be very much affected by their first Resolutions.

On the 25th a Duel was fought by the Right Honourable William Pulteney, Esq; and the Lord Harvey, in the Green Park. After four or five Passes, Mr. Pulteney gave Lord Harvey two slight Wounds, one in his Arm, and the other between the Shoulder and Neck, when having closed in they were parted and disarmed by their two Seconds.

Sir Robert Raymond, Knight, Lord Chief Justice of the King's Bench, was created a Peer, by the Title of Lord Raymond, Baron of Abbots-Langley in the County of Hertford.

Dr. Elias Sydall, Dean of Canterbury, was made Bishop of St. David's.

His Serene Highness the Duke of Parma died in this Month: And General Stampa, with a Body of Imperialists, took Possession of the Duchies of Parma and Placentia for Don Carlos, whom the Duke had by Will declared Heir to his Dominions, in Failure of Male Issue by his Dukes, who was now thought to be with Child; but it proved otherwise.

The Beginning of February there were great Debates in Parliament relating to the 12000 Hessian Forces in English Pay; which were continued for another Year.

About this Time died Sir John Cotton, Baronet, descended from Sir Robert Cotton, who gave the famous Cottonian Library to the Publick; Mrs. Elizabeth Thomas, an ingenious and learned Gentlewoman, and Author of several Poems: And Mr. Francis Bird, a famous Statuary, who erected many stately Tombs and magnificent Monuments in Westminster Abby, the Statues about St. Paul's, &c.

In March, the Common Council of London almost unanimously agreed to petition the Parliament against the Charitable Corporation; which Affair soon after came on in the House.

Three Persons were convicted at three different Places, of sending threating Letters, demanding Money, &c. But in most Places the Persons tried for that Crime were acquitted.

The Princess Dowager of Hannau, of the House of Anspach, the Queen's Sister; and Augustus William, Duke of Brunswick Wolfenbuttel, died in this Month.

John Lade, Esq; in the Commission of the Peace for the County of Surry, and Thomas Robinson, of Rockby-Park in Yorkshire, Esq; were created Baronets.

The Pension Bill, which a second Time had passed the House of Commons, was again rejected by the House of Lords.

The Treaty of Vienna between the Emperor and King of Great-Britain was signed on the 16th of this Month; in which the Guarantee of the Pragmatick Sanction, or Austrian Succession; and the Affair of introducing Don Carlos and the Spanish Garrisons into Italy, were settled to the mutual Satisfaction of the interested Powers. To this Treaty the States General and the King of Spain afterwards acceded.

April 9, his Majesty went to the House of Peers, and gave the Royal Assent to, An Act for the farther Application of the sinking Fund, by paying off one Million of South Sea Annuities.

In this Month died, Robert Benson Lord Bingley, Treasurer of his Majesty's Household: Sir William Morgan, Knight of the Bath: Sir Harry Dutton Colt, Bart. and the noted Mr. Daniel de Foe.

A. D.
1731.

On the 7th of May his Majesty prorogued the Parliament, with a most gracious Speech to both Houses, having first, among many others, passed the following Acts. viz. An Act for raising 1,200,000 l. by Annuities and a Lottery: An Act for the more effectual punishing Stealers of Lead or Iron Bars fixed to Houses; the Persons guilty to be transported: An Act that all Proceedings in Courts of Justice shall be in the English Language.

The Parliament had before them a Bill for regulating the Charitable Corporation, a Bill about Bankrupts, and a Bill concerning the Woollen Manufacture, when it was prorogued; and so these Bills, which 'twas generally expected would pass, dropped.

His Majesty granted the Dignity of an Earl to Richard Viscount Castlemain, by the Title of Earl Tilney of Castlemain in the Kingdom of Ireland.

There died in this Month, Peregrine Hide Osborne, Duke of Leeds; and Dr. Samuel Bradford, Lord Bishop of Rochester, and Dean of Westminster: He was succeeded in the said Bishoprick and Deanry, by Dr. Wilcocks Bishop of Gloucester; Dr. Sydall was translated from St. David's to Gloucester, and Dr. Clagget was made Bishop of St. David's.

On the 4th of June, a most dreadful Fire happened at Blandford in Dorsetshire, which consumed the whole Town, except about 26 Houses, together with the Church. And the very next Day, a Fire almost as dreadful broke out at Tiverton in Devonshire, and consumed about 200 Houses.

On the 10th one Japhet Crook, alias Sir Peter Stranger, for forging false Deeds, stood an Hour on the Pillory, had both his Ears cut off, and both his Nostrils slit.

About this Time died Philip Duke of Wharton, in a Convent of Monks in Spain, after a long and tedious Illness. He became a violent Opposer of the Court in the late King's Reign: And having run through a large Estate, and being involved in Debt, he retired into Spain, joined himself to the Interest of the Pretender, turned Roman Catholick, was an Officer in the Spanish Army in the late Siege of Gibraltar; and being indicted of High Treason in the Court of King's Bench, he was summoned in four several Counties to surrender himself and answer thereto; which he not doing, was publicly declared a Traitor to this Realm.

On July 1, his Majesty in Council called for the Council-Book, and ordered the Name of William Pulteney, Esq; to be struck out of the List of Privy Counsellors; and further ordered him to be put out of all the Commissions of the Peace. This was on Account of some Writings against the Court, supposed to be his.

On the 14th the Squadron under the Command of Sir Charles Wager, design'd to assist in conveying the Spanish Troops into Italy, sailed from Spithead; the beginning of August, it arrived in the Bay of Cadiz, and towards the End of October the united Fleet of England and Spain appeared before Leghorn, and soon landed all the Forces. Don Carlos arrived in Italy soon after, but did not go with the Fleet.

In July, Sir Walter Yonge, Bart. First Commissioner of the Customs, and Father of Sir William Yonge; and Sir William Barker, Bart. one of the Knights of the Shire for Suffolk, departed this Life. As did in August, the Marquis of Blandford, Grandson of the late Duke of Marlborough, and only Son of the Earl of Godolphin by his Lady the junior or Duchefs of Marlborough: And Charles Boyle, Earl of Orrery, Inventor of that useful Machine called the Orrery.

In September died Edw. Ward, Lord Dudley and Ward: Daniel Pulteney, Esq; Member of Parliament for Preston: Major General Trelawney, Brother to the late Bishop of that Name: And Dr. Edward Waddington, Lord Bishop of Chichester; upon whose Death, Bishop Hare was translated from St. Asaph to Chichester, and Dr. Tanner was advanced to the See of St. Asaph.

His Serene Highness the Duke of Lorain came over hither incog. about the middle of October. Soon after his Arrival he dined with his Majesty at Hampton-Court. He viewed several of the most remarkably Places in and about London, was with great Ceremony admitted Fellow of the Royal Society, went to Newmarket, and visited Cambridge; and after having been splendidly entertained by many of the Nobility and Foreign Ministers during the Time of his Stay, he departed on the 8th of December, having first taken Leave of their Majesties and the Royal Family in the most solemn Manner.

A Fire broke out on the 23d of October in the late Earl of Ashburnham's House, near Westminster Abbey, where the famous Cotton Library was kept. It did great Damage to the House, and destroyed several of the valuable Manuscripts belonging to that noble Collection, and damaged others.

The Proprietors of the Charitable Corporation were about this Time greatly alarmed at the sudden going off of George Robinson, Esq; their Banker, and Mr. John Thomson their Ware-house-keeper. And soon after a most pernicious Scene of Iniquity was discovered with respect to the Management of that Corporation; of which more hereafter.

Talbot Yelverton, Earl of Suffex, Deputy Earl-Marshal of England, died in October: And Hugh Campbell, Earl of Loudoun, one of the Sixteen Peers for Scotland, in November.

The following Month, the Right Honourable Francis Howard, Baron of Effingham, was advanced to the Dignity of an Earl of Great-Britain, by the Title of Earl of Effingham in the County of Surrey: And the Duke of Norfolk, Hereditary Earl-Marshal of England, with his Majesty's Approbation, appointed him Deputy Earl-Marshal.

January 13, his Majesty went to the House of Peers, and opened the Session with a most gracious Speech to both Houses, telling them, that the Expectations he had from Time to Time given them, of seeing the general Tranquility of Europe restored and established, were now fully answered.

In this Month died Baron Bothmar, prime Minister for the Affairs of the Electorate of Hanover, who was also Ambassador from that Electorate in the Reign of Queen Anne: And Mr. Serjeant Raby, who had been several Years Deputy Recorder of the City of London.

In February died the Lord Conway; the Duchefs of Monmouth and Bucclough, Relict of the Duke of Monmouth, who was beheaded in the Reign of King James II. George Lord Carpenter, the Eldest Lieutenant General in his Majesty's Service, and Governor of Minorca: William Bromley, Esq; Member of Parliament for the University of Oxford, sometime Speaker of the House of Commons; and Secretary of State to Queen Anne: And Dr. Francis Atterbury, late Bishop of Rocheſter,

A. D. 1732. Rocheſter, who was baniſhed by Act of Parliament for being concerned in the Plot for which Counſellor Laver was executed. His Corpſe was brought over from Paris, and privately interred in Weſtminſter-Abbey.

Robert Brown, of the City and Liberty of Weſtminſter, Eſq; was advanced to the Degree of a Baronet.

About this Time a Charter was granted for incorporating Trustees for the Relief of the Poor, by ſettling a new Colony in the uncultivated Parts of Carolina, by the Name of Georgia.

A Petition of the Proprietors of the Charitable Corporation, for Relief of induſtrious Poor, by aſſiſting them with ſmall Sums upon Pledges at legal Intereſt, was on February 3. preſented to the Houſe of Commons, complaining, That by the moſt notorious Breach of Truſt in ſeveral of their Managers, the ſaid Corporation had been defrauded of the greateſt Part of their Capital, amounting to ſeveral Hundred thouſand Pounds; and that all the Petitioners were become great Sufferers thereby, and many of them reduced to the utmoſt Diſtreſs, &c. And therefore praying, that the Houſe would vouchſafe to enquire into the State of the ſaid Corporation, and the Conduct of thoſe who had the Care and Management of their Affairs; and would give ſuch Relief to the Petitioners, as to the Houſe ſhould ſeem meet.

The Houſe entered upon this Affair with a Zeal and Concern ſuitable to the Importance of the Caſe, and referred the Petition to a Committee of 21 to be choſen by Balloting; upon whoſe Report it was ordered, that Leave be given to bring in a Bill to encourage and compel George Robinson, Eſq; and

John Thomſon to appear and produce the Books and diſcover the Effects of the ſaid Corporation, within a Time limited; which paſſed both Houſes, and had the Royal Aſſent: And they not appearing by that Time, Mr. Robinson, who had been returned a Burgeſs for Great Marlow, was expelled the Houſe. The beginning of May they came to ſeveral Reſolutions upon this Affair; and among the reſt, That it appeared to that Houſe that many notorious, fraudulent, and indirect Practices had for ſome Years laſt paſt been carried on by Perſons concerned in the Direction and Management of the Charitable Corporation, their Servants, Agents and Accomplices, to the utter Ruin of many of his Maſteſty's faithful Subjects, in manifeſt Violation of the Truſt repoſed in them. That it appeared to them, that the Right Honourable Sir Robert Sutton, Knight of the Bath, &c. had been guilty, as one of the Committee for managing the Affairs of the Charitable Corporation, of promoting, abetting and carrying on ſeveral indirect and fraudulent Practices; and that he for his ſaid Offence, ſhould be expelled the Houſe. That it appeared to them, that Sir Archibald Grant, Baronet, was guilty of having been concerned in Copartnership, in which the Caſh of the ſaid Corporation had been employed, and great Sums loſt and embezzled, and of having been principally concerned in promoting, abetting, and carrying on many other indirect and fraudulent Practices in the Management of the Affairs of the ſaid Corporation; and that he, for his ſaid Offence, ſhould be expelled the Houſe. Several others alſo fell under the Censure of the Houſe on the ſame Account; and it was reſolved, that they

they ought to make a just Satisfaction for the Losses they had Occasioned. A Bill was also brought in and passed both Houses, to restrain the said Gentlemen from going out of the Kingdom, for the Space of one Year, and until the End of the then next Session of Parliament, and for discovering their Estate and Effects. And another Bill for the Relief of the Sufferers in the Charitable Corporation.

The Commons having in February enter'd upon the Consideration of a fraudulent Sale of the Estate of the late Earl of Derwentwater, the latter End of March came to several Resolutions relating to that Affair, and among the rest, That Dennis Bond, Esq; and John Birch, Serjeant at Law, were guilty of a notorious Breach of Trust reposed in them, as Commissioners and Trustees for Sale of the forfeited Estates for the Use of the Publick; and that they should for their said Offence be expelled the House: That Sir John Eyles, Bart. was guilty of a great Irregularity, as a Commissioner and Trustee for Sale of the forfeited Estates, by empowering Mr. Samuel Allen, Secretary to the Commissioners and Trustees, to sign his the said Sir John Eyles's Name, when absent, in order to make up the Number of Commissioners and Trustees required by Act of Parliament; and it was ordered, that he should for his said Offence be reprimanded in his Place by Mr. Speaker: And in fine, it was resolv'd, That the Thanks of the House should be given to the Lord Viscount Gage, for the great Service he had done the Publick, in detecting this fraudulent Sale. And a Bill was brought in, and passed into a Law, formaking void the Contracts for the said Sale.

On February 17, the Pension Bill, which was a Third Time passed by the Commons, was again rejected by the Lords.

In this and the following Month there were great Debates in both Houses upon the Bill for reviving the Duties on Salt, which were taken off two Years before. The Result was, that the Bill passed both Houses, and receiv'd the royal Assent.

About this Time died Colonel Francis Charteris, lately condemn'd for a Rape, and pardon'd: Major-General Crofts, a natural Son of the late Duke of Monmouth: And Sir Lyttleton Powis, Knight, for many Years one of the Judges of the King's Bench, till he receiv'd his Quietus, and had a Pension allow'd him. And a little after, Thomas Parker, Earl of Macclesfield, departed this Life: He was Chief Justice of the King's Bench about eight Years, and Lord Chancellor about Six.

Several Courts of Chivalry were held about this Time, when Articles were exhibited against divers Persons for using Arms not belonging to their Families.

A Letter from Signior John Angelo Belloni, a Banker of Rome, to the Committee of Parliament for inspecting the Affairs of the Charitable Corporation, touching the seizing and confining of J. Thomson at Rome, which was voted by both Houses an audacious Libel, attempting to impose upon the Parliament and the British Nation, and to amuse the unhappy Sufferers of the Charitable Corporation with deceitful Hopes of Relief, was burnt before the Royal Exchange by the Hands of the Common Hangman, pursuant to the Order of both Houses.

About this Time died the Reverend Mr. John Laurence, famous for his Writings on the Art of Gardening: and the Reverend Dr. Edmund Calamy, an eminent Dissenting Minister.

A. D.
1732.

On the 1st of June his Majesty having pass'd such Bills as were ready for the Royal Assent, put an End to the Session with a most gracious Speech; and two Days after, having appointed the Queen to be Regent, he set out for Hanover.

The Marquis of Carnarvon, the Lord Bateman, Sir George Downing, and Gunter Nichols, Esq; were installed Knights of the Bath.

The Spaniards had for some Time been making great Warlike Preparations, and the Storm at last broke out upon Oran, which the Spanish Troops took from the Moors; who some Time after brought a great Army before it and endeavoured to retake it, but in vain, being totally routed by the Spanish Garrison.

In July died George Brudenel, Earl of Cardigan; and Sir Richard Grosvenor, Bart. Member of Parliament for Chester.

The King arriv'd from Hanover the latter End of September; and two Days after, the Lord Mayor and Court of Aldermen waiting on him at Kensington, to congratulate him on his safe Return, his Majesty was pleased to confer the Honour of Knighthood on Francis Child, Esq; Lord Mayor, and John Barnard, Esq; and Henry Hankey, Esq; two of the Aldermen.

About this Time his Majesty granted his Commission to the Lords of the Admiralty, empowering them to erect a Corporation for the Relief of the poor Widows of Sea-Officers.

In October Allen Lord Cathcart, and Bennet Earl of Harborough departed this Life,

Also Victor Amadeus, late King of Sardinia, died towards the End of the same Month, having some Time before resign'd his Crown to his Son; though afterwards he would have resum'd it, and Plots were carrying on for that Purpose at the Instigation of the Jesuits; which occasioned the old abdicating King to be seized and taken into Custody.

In November and December, there were several Meetings of the most eminent Dissenters, to consider of applying to Parliament for the Repeal of the Corporation and Test Acts: But 'twas thought proper to drop the Design for the present.

About this Time died Wriothesley Russel Duke of Bedford: Edward Harrison, Esq; Post-Master General, formerly Governor of Fort St. George: Other Windsor Hickman, Earl of Plymouth: Mr. John Gay, the celebrated Poet; Dr. Baker, Bishop of Norwich; Dr. Bradshaw, Bishop of Bristol; and Thomas Howard Duke of Norfolk, Hereditary Earl Marshal of England.

On the 16th of January, his Majesty went to the House of Peers, and opened the Session with a most gracious Speech to both Houses.

About this Time Dr. Butts, Dean of Norwich, was made Bishop of that See; and Dr. Cecil was advanced to the See of Bristol.

For the last Fortnight in this Month, a Disorder (something like a Cold) was so exceeding rife, that scarce a Family, nay scarce a Person escaped it: It proved very fatal to People in Years, especially such as were affected with Asthmatic Disorders; which was thought to have occasion'd the vast Increase of the Weekly Bills at this Time, there dying the last Week of this Month 1588, which were more by 600 than died in any one Week since the great Plague.

About this Time died of an Asthma, George Byng, Lord Viscount Torrington, Admiral and Commander in Chief of his Majesty's Fleet, Rear-Admiral of Great-Britain, and first Lord Commissioner of the Admiralty. Sir Charles Wager was made made first Commissioner of the Admiralty in his Room.

There died also in this Month, Thomas Herbert, Earl of Pembroke and Montgomery, who had passed through many of the great Offices of State: Thomas Lord Foley, so created the 10th of Queen Anne: Sir Gilbert Heathcote, Knight and Baronet, senior Alderman of London: Sir John Blunt, Baronet, so much noted for the great Share he had in the fatal South Sea Scheme in the Year 1720. And Mr. Woolston Author of the blasphemous Discourses on our Saviour's Miracles.

On Sunday Morning the 4th of February, a horrid Murder was committed in Tanfield Court in the Temple upon three Women, viz. one Mrs. Duncomb a Widow upwards of 80 Years old, Elizabeth Harrison, who lived with her as a Companion, and her Servant Maid. The Lodgings were at the same Time robbed of several valuable Things. Three or four Persons were taken up for this Murder and Robbery, but only one Sarah Malcom, a Chair-Woman, was proved guilty, who was accordingly executed near the Place where the Murder was committed.

The Broad Pieces of 25 and 23 s. being most of them very much diminished, were about this Time called in.

Not long after died Sir Robert Farnese, Baronet, Knt. of the Shire for the County of Kent: And Robert Raymond, Lord Raymond, Lord Chief Justice of the King's Bench.

On Februry 23, the Pension Bill, which two Days before had passed the House of Commons, was again rejected by the Lords.

But the most remarkable Affair of this Session was what was commonly called the Excise Scheme, or the Project of changing the Duties on Tobacco and Wine, and bringing them under the Laws of Excise, for which the preventing of Frauds in the Revenues was assigned as the Reason. This Affair made a great deal of Noise before it was brought into the House, whilst it was there depending, and afterwards. The Beginning of January, the Tobaccoists of London at a general Meeting unanimously resolved to act in Concert with the Committee appointed by the Citizens, Merchants and Traders of London, and by all just and lawful Means oppose any new Excise, or Extension of the Excise Laws, under whatever Name or Pretence it may be attempted. Letters of Instruction were about the same Time sent from several considerable Corporations to their Representatives, earnestly recommending it to them to oppose any new Excise, or any Extension of the Excise Laws whatsoever. And in February a Representation to the same Purpose was agreed on by the Lord Mayor, Aldermen and Commons of the City of London, to the four City Members. Notwithstanding this, the Scheme was proposed, and the Motion with Regard to Tobacco made in a Committee of the whole House, on the 14th of March, which occasioned a very long and warm Debate, during which Time there was a very great Concourse of People in Westminster Hall, the Court of Requests, Lobby, &c. The Question was carried in the Committee by 266 against 205, and afterwards in the House on March 16, by 249, against 189; and a Bill was ordered to be brought in accordingly. This famous Bill was brought in the 4th of April, and read a first Time, and ordered to be read a second Time on the 11th. But the Day before, viz. April 10. the Sheriffs, with several of the Aldermen, Common Council Men, eminent Merchants and Traders of the City of London, went in their Coaches

A. D.

1733.

to

A. D.
1733.

to Westminster-Hall, to present their Petition to the House of Commons, humbly praying to be heard by their Council against the Bill. The Number of Coaches on this extraordinary Occasion was upwards of 200, and there was a very numerous Body of People besides. The Question for allowing the Petitioners to be heard by their Council against the Bill, was carried in the Negative only by a Majority of 17, viz. 214 against 197. The next Day Petitions came from Nottingham and Coventry against the Bill. And then the Order of the Day being read for the second Reading of the said Bill, instead of reading it a second Time, a Motion was made by Sir Robert Walpole, that the Bill should be read a second Time upon the 12th of June next, which was agreed to without Opposition; and so the Excise Scheme dropt, on which Occasion great Rejoycings were made by Bonfires, Illuminations, Ringing of Bells, &c. both in Town and Country.

Two Days after the Right Honourable the Earl of Chesterfield resign'd his White Staff, as Lord Steward of the Household: And Lord Clinton resign'd his Places of one of the Gentlemen of his Majesty's Bedchamber, and Lord Lieutenant of the County of Devon.

Also about the same Time the Earl of Stair resign'd his Place of Vice-Admiral of Scotland, and his other Posts and Preferments.

May 4, the Earl of Burlington resign'd his Golden Staff, as Captain of the Band of Gentlemen Pensioners, together with his other Places: And on the 7th the Earl of Marchmont, one of the 16 Peers for North Britain, resign'd his Post of Lord Register of Scotland.

On the 8th his Majesty communicated to both Houses of Parliament the intended Marriage between the Princess Royal, and the Prince of Orange.

This Month died Charles Cholmondeley, Earl of Cholmondeley; and Barton Booth, Esq; the celebrated Tragedian.

On June the 13th, his Majesty went to the House of Peers, and put an End to the Session, having first given his Royal Assent to An Act for giving 80000 l. to her Royal Highness the Princess Royal for her Portion: An Act for converting three Fourths of the South-Sea Company's Capital into Annuities: An Act for the better regulating of Solicitors and Attorneys, &c.

The next Day the Right Honourable the Lord Cobham resigned his Commission of Colonel of a Regiment of Horse; and his Grace the Duke of Montrose, Lord Privy Seal of Scotland, deliver'd up the Seals.

The Lord Lovell was about this Time made joint Post-Master General with the Honourable Edward Carteret, Esq; and the Lord Harvey, eldest Son of the Earl of Bristol, was some Time before called up by Writ to the House of Peers.

In this Month the Earl of Sutherland, one of the Sixteen Peers of Scotland, departed this Life.

His Grace the Duke of Bolton resign'd his Posts of Lord Lieutenant and Custos Rotulorum of the County of Southampton, Colonel of a Royal Regiment of Horse, and Governor of the Isle of Wight.

His Highness the Prince of Orange (by Proxy,) his Grace the Duke of Devonshire, and the Right Honourable the Earl of Wilmington were on the 22d of August install'd Knights of the most noble Order of the Garter with the usual Formalities.

The Lord Viscount Percival, Peer of Ireland, was rais'd to the Dignity

Dignity of an Earl of that Kingdom, by the Stile and Title of Earl of Egmont.

About this Time died Matthew Sindal, L. L. D. Fellow of All-Souls College in Oxford, and Author of The Rights of the Christian Church, and of Christianity as Old as the Creation.

In October died Mr. Moreland, Head Master of St. Paul's School; Sir John Stonehouse, Bart. one of the Knights of the Shire for the County of Berks; and her Grace Henrietta Duchess of Marlborough, eldest Daughter of the late Duke, and Countess of Godolphin as Wife to the Earl of Godolphin.

November 7. his Highness the Prince of Orange arrived at Greenwich on board the Fabbs Yacht, proceeded in one of his Majesty's Barges to the Tower, and from thence was conducted in one of the King's Coaches thro' the City, with loud Acclamations to Somerset House. The next Day he went to St. James's, and was received by their Majesties and the Royal Family with the greatest Respect. On Sunday the 11th his Highness went to the Dutch Church in Austin Fryars, having been invited thither by the Dutch Merchants, who waited on him the Day before to congratulate him on his Arrival. Here he was taken very ill, and continu'd so for some Time, which occasion'd the Marriage to be put off for this Year.

Towards the End of the Month the Lord Chancellor King resigned the Seals, and had a Pension allow'd him: Whereupon the Seals were given to Charles Talbot, Esq; his Majesty's Solicitor General, who was soon after created a Peer of Great Britain, by the Stile and Title of Lord Talbot, Baron of Henfel, in the County of Glamorgan.

Sir Philip York, Attorney General,

was made a Serjeant at Law, and Lord Chief Justice of the King's-Bench, in the room of the Lord Raymond, deceased. He was soon after created a Peer of Great Britain, by the Stile and Title of Baron Hardwicke, of Hardwicke in the County of Gloucester.

Upon these Promotions, John Willes, Esq; Chief Justice of Chester, was made Attorney-General; and Dudley Ryder, Esq; Solicitor-General.

About this Time died Charles Gountor Nicholl, Knight of the Bath: George Talbot, Earl of Shrewsbury; and Dr. Sydall, Lord Bishop of Gloucester.

An Accident happen'd this Year, which open'd the Scene of a most terrible and bloody War in Europe. This was the Death of Augustus, King of Poland and Elector of Saxony, who died the Beginning of February. Hereupon the French King was very forward in concerting Measures for his Father-in-Law, King Stanislaus's reascending that Throne: But the Russians were resolv'd with their whole Force to oppose this Design, and were determin'd that Stanislaus should never be King of Poland; and the Emperor joined the Czarina in this Resolution. In pursuance of this, the Russians enter'd Poland in the Month of August with a numerous and formidable Army: Notwithstanding which, Stanislaus, who had privately convey'd himself into Poland, was, by the Management of the Primate, who was in the French Interest, elected King of Poland, and proclaim'd in September. But upon the Russians approaching Warsaw, he and his Party fled, and retired to Dantzick; and the Elector of Saxony, Son of the late King, was chosen and proclaimed King of Poland in October; and the next Month

A. D.

1733.

the

A. D.
1734.

the Saxon Troops likewise entered Poland. In the mean Time an Alliance was formed between France, Spain, and Sardinia, to make War upon the Emperor both in Germany and Italy. The French Army under the Duke of Berwick pass'd the Rhine in October, and besieg'd and took Fort Kehl; and the confederate Army of France, Spain and Sardinia entered Italy, and took Tortona, Novara, Pavia, and the City of Milan, and several other Places before the End of the Year.

But to return to Affairs at home: The Beginning of January, the Prince of Orange set out for Bath for the Recovery of his Health, where he arriv'd amidst the Acclamations of a vast Number of Spectators. During his Stay there, which was about two Months, he visited Bristol, in pursuance of an Invitation from the City; And at his Return was complimented at Oxford by the University, and by the Mayor and Corporation; as likewise at Henley, Windsor, and other Places thro' which he passed.

The States General, about this Time, ordered their Minister at this Court to notify their Conclusion of a Neutrality with France, and to propose at the same Time to his Majesty, to undertake, in Conjunction with their High Mightinesses, the Mediation of the Disputes in Europe, in order to prevent the fatal Consequences of a War between the Most Christian King and the Emperor.

On Jan. 17, his Majesty went to the House of Peers and open'd the Session with a most gracious Speech to both Houses, telling them, That the War, which was now begun, and carried on, against the Emperor, with so much Vigour, by the united Powers of France, Spain, and Sardinia, was become the Object of the Care and

Attention of all Europe; and that he was no Way engaged in it, and had had no Part, except by his good Offices, in those Transactions, which had been declared to be the principal Causes and Motives of it, he could not sit regardless of the present Events, or be unconcerned for the future Consequences of a War, undertaken and supported by so powerful an Alliance.

The Right Honourable John Powlet, Esq; commonly called Lord Hinton, eldest Son to the Earl Powlet, was called up by Writ to the House of Peers, by the Stile and Title of John Lord Powlet of Hinton St. George.

In February there were great Debates in both Houses, on a Bill for preventing the Officers of the Army from being deprived of their Commissions, otherwise than by a Court Martial, or by Address of either House of Parliament; which Bill did not pass either House.

Also it was mov'd, That an humble Address be presented to his Majesty, that he would be graciously pleas'd to acquaint the House, who advis'd his Majesty to remove the Duke of Bolton, and the Lord Viscount Cobham, from their respective Regiments, and what Crimes were laid to their Charge: Which was carried in the Negative.

There were also great Debates in this Session on the Bill for limiting the Number of Placemen in the House of Commons: But it did not pass.

The Earl of Scarborough about this Time resign'd his Post of Master of the Horse.

On the 13th of March, a Motion was made in the House of Commons, for repealing the Septennial Act; which after a long Debate was carried in the Negative.

On the 14th, the Nuptials between his Serene Highness the Prince of Orange and the Princess Royal were solemnized in a most magnificent and grand Manner in the French Chapel at St. James's: Upon which there were great Rejoicings both in Town and Country, and Congratulations from all Parts to their Majesties and to the Prince and Princess.

On the 21st, his Majesty gave the Royal Assent to an Act for exhibiting a Bill for naturalizing his Serene Highness the Prince of Orange.

Colonel Robinson, the City Chamberlain, died in this Month, and John Bosworth, Esq; was soon after chosen in his Room.

On the 16th of April his Majesty went to the House of Peers, and gave the Royal Assent to An Act for settling an Annuity of 5000 l. per Annum on the Princess Royal for her Life: An Act for preventing the infamous Practice of Stockjobbing: An Act for naturalizing the Prince of Orange: An Act for giving Liberty to Samuel Buckley, Esq; to print Thuanus: And to several other Bills. After which his Majesty made a most gracious Speech to both Houses, and prorogued the Parliament; which two Days after was dissolved.

On the 22d the Prince and Princess of Orange embarked on board the Fubbs Yacht for Holland. Soon after, his Serene Highness went to serve as a Volunteer in the Imperial Army on the Rhine under Prince Eugene; and in the mean Time the Princess came over and resided here, till she returned to meet her Consort at the End of the Campaign.

Arthur Onslow, Esq; late Speaker of the House of Commons, was made Treasurer of the Navy about this Time.

In May died the Lord Viscount

Vane, and Sir James Thornhill Knight, the greatest History Painter this Kingdom ever produced, who painted the famous Hall at Greenwich.

The Election of Sixteen Peers of Scotland, to sit and vote in the Parliament of Great Britain, was on the 4th of June, when several Protests were entered before and after the Election, by the Dukes of Hamilton, Queensberry and Montrose, the Earls of Marchmont, Stair, Buchan, and several other Peers; which, with the Petition that followed them, occasioned long and warm Debates in the ensuing Session.

In July died Peter Lord King, Baron of Ockham, late Lord High Chancellor of Great Britain.

In August died Dr. Richard Willis, Lord Bishop of Winchester; upon which Dr. Benjamin Hoadley was translated from the See of Salisbury to that of Winchester, and Dr. Thomas Sherlock from the See of Bangor to that of Salisbury: Dr. Charles Cecil, Bishop of Bristol, was translated to the See of Bangor; and Dr. Secker was advanc'd to the See of Bristol.

In the same Month died Elizabeth Duchess Dowager of Albemarle, and Duchess Dowager of Montagu, in the 96th Year of her Age.

Some Time after died Dr. John Waugh, Lord Bishop of Carlisle; in which See he was succeeded by Dr. George Fleming.

In November died at Paris the Lady Louisa Renée de Penencouët, the celebrated Duchess of Portsmouth, Grandmother to his Grace the Duke of Richmond, in the 86th Year of her Age.

Thomas Lord Malton was created Earl of Malton in the County of York.

Dr. Martin Benson was about the same Time made Bishop of Gloucester in

A. D. in the Room of the late Bishop 1734. Sydall.

In December, John Lord Viscount Barrington, and Henry Earl of Bradford departed this Life.

The War was carried on with great Fury, this Year, and for the most Part with great Success by the Confederates, against the Emperor. Two most bloody Battles, viz. that of Parma, and that of Gualstalla, were fought with doubtful Success, wherein several Thousand Men, and a great Number of brave Officers were killed on both Sides. Don Carlos took Possession of Naples, and was declared King of Naples and Sicily; and the Spaniards made a Descent upon Sicily, which at last all submitted, though the City of Syracuse held out a great while. Upon the Rhine the French took Philipsburgh, where the Duke of Berwick was killed in the Trenches before the Place. He was natural Son to King James II. by Mrs. Arabella Churchill, Sister to the Duke of Marlborough. Dantzick sustained a grievous Siege from the Russians, but at last surrendered and submitted to King Augustus; Stanislaus having made his Escape from thence, disguised in the Habit of a Peasant.

On Tuesday the 14th of January the new Parliament met, and again made Choice of the Right Honourable Arthur Onslow, Esq; to be their Speaker. On the 23d his Majesty went to the House, and made a most gracious Speech; in which, speaking of the War, he says, 'We have proceeded in this great Affair with the mutual Confidence which subsists between me and the States General; and having considered together on one Side the pressing Application made by the Imperial Court, both here and in Holland, for obtaining Succours

' against the Powers at War with the Emperor, and the repeated Propositions made by the Allies on the other Side, of their sincere Desires to put an End to the present Troubles, upon honourable and solid Terms, I concurred in a Resolution taken by the States General, to employ, without Loss of Time, our joint and earnest Instances to bring Matters to a speedy and happy Accommodation, before we should come to a Determination upon the Succours demanded by the Emperor &c.'

Thirty Thousand Men were voted for the Sea Service this Year, and 25,744 for the Land Service, concerning which Numbers there were great Debates.

Dr. Rundle, who 'twas expected would have been made Bishop of Gloucester, was made Bishop of Down in Ireland.

Some Time before died George Granville Lord Lansdowne, whose excellent Works are printed, and have been received with universal Approbation.

In March died Paul Docminique Esq; one of the Commissioners for Trade and Plantations, aged about 97. He was Member of Parliament for Gatton in Surry for several Years before the Union, and in every one of the Parliaments of Great Britain since. Also Scroop Lord Viscount Howe, Governour of Barbadoes.

Two of the Portuguese Ambassador's Servants at Madrid having rescued a Criminal from the Officers of Justice, and the King of Spain having thereupon sent a Party of Soldiers, who forced into the Ambassador's House, and took nineteen of his Servants Prisoners: This created such a Difference between the two Courts, that it was apprehended they would come to a rupture

ture: Upon this Sir John Norris was sent with a powerful Squadron to the Coasts of Portugal, to guard them from any Insults and secure the Brazil Fleet. But in about a Year's Time the Difference was made up, and the Fleet returned home.

In April the Place-Bill was again thrown out by the House of Commons.

The same Month died Dr. Derham, Rector of Upminster in Essex, and F. R. S. famous for several curious Pieces in Natural Philosophy.

On May 15, his Majesty went to the House of Peers and gave the Royal Assent to An Act for the Application of Rents and Profits of the Estates forfeited by James late Earl of Derwentwater and Charles Radcliffe, viz. for the Service of Greenwich Hospital. An Act for regulating the Quartering of Soldiers during the Time of Election; and to several other Bills. After which his Majesty put an End to the Session with a most gracious Speech, in which, among other Things, he says. 'I have consider'd with great Care and Attention the present Situation of Europe, and duly weigh'd the Consequences that may arise from the Progress of the War, either by Means of its becoming more general, or continuing only to be carried on between the Powers already engaged. An Accommodation of these unhappy Troubles appeared to be the best Means to prevent the Dangers that are to be apprehended on either Side. In this View, a Plan of Pacification was concerted between me and the States General with great Impartiality, and not without reasonable Grounds to hope for Success, altho' it hath not had the desired Effect.'

Two Days after, his Majesty having appointed the Queen Regent, set out for his German Dominions.

A little before, the Honourable William Clayton, Esq; a Commissioner of the Treasury, and Member of Parliament for Westminster, was created a Peer of Ireland, by the Title of Baron of Sundon.

The Duchess Dowager of Argyll, Mother to the present Duke and to the Earl of Ila, died about this Time.

Some Time after died Edward Harley, Esq; one of the Auditors of the Imprests, and Brother to the late Earl of Oxford: Sir William Strickland, Baronet, one of the Representatives for Scarborough: And Robert Tracy, Esq; aged near 80, late one of the Justices of the Common Pleas; but upon his present Majesty's Accession, his Commission was not renewed.

In October, the hereditary Prince of Modena arrived in England, and waited on her Majesty and the Royal Family at Kensington, where he was received with great Respect, and had a long Audience of her Majesty. During his Stay, he went to see the Curiosities in the Tower, St. Paul's, &c. and was complimented with being admitted a Fellow of the Royal Society.

On the 26th his Majesty arrived at Kensington from Hanover; and the Lord Mayor and Court of Aldermen waiting upon him with their Congratulations, he was pleased to confer the Honour of Knighthood upon John Salter, Esq; Alderman, and Robert Godschall, Esq; Alderman, and one of the Sheriffs.

About this Time died Sir John Task, Knight, Alderman of Walbrook Ward; Charles Earl of Murray, Knight of the Thistle; Sir William Courtenay, Baronet, one of the Knights of the Shire for the County

A. D.
1736.

County of Devon; and Sir William Humfreys, Baronet, who was Lord Mayor the first Year of his Majesty King George I.

Also soon after died Charles Mordaunt, Earl of Peterborough and Monmouth: Edmund Sheffield, Duke of Buckinghamshire, aged about 19: Dr. Tanner, Lord Bishop of St. Asaph: And Sir Robert Eyre, Knight, Lord Chief Justice of the Court of Common Pleas.

The War was carried on more coldly this Year, and towards the End of it, there was a sudden Suspension of Arms, after some private Negotiations for Peace between the Emperor and France; which Spain and Sardinia did not at first relish, but at last complied. The Chief of the Preliminary Articles were, That France shall restore to the Empire all the Places which she has taken from it during the War: The Duchy of Tuscany, after the Death of the Grand Duke, to be given to the Duke of Lorain; at which Time Lorain shall be put into the Hands of his most Christian Majesty, and remain annexed to his Monarchy: King Stanislaus, shall be acknowledged by all the Powers of Europe, King of Poland, and shall enjoy all the Honours of a crowned Head; after which he shall resign voluntarily the Kingdom of Poland in Favour of King Augustus, who shall restore to him all the Estates in Poland, which belonged either to him or his Queen: King Stanislaus shall have the immediate Possession of the Duchy of Barr: Don Carlos shall be acknowledged King of Naples and Sicily.

The King went to the House on the 15th of January, and in his Speech told the Parliament, That the happy Turn, which the Affairs of Europe had evidently taken since the End of last Session, he was persuaded must give them all, as it did him, the greatest Satisfaction.

Mr. Justice Reeves of the Common Pleas was made Lord Chief Justice of that Court, and was knighted soon after; Mr. Baron Comyns succeeded him as one of the Judges of the said Court; and William Fortescue, Esq; succeeded Mr. Baron Comyns.

On the 16th of February, there was a very extraordinary Spring Tide, which flowed so high as to exceed by near a Foot and a half all that had been known in the Memory of Man. At Westminster Hall, the Court of Common Pleas being sitting, several of the Council, &c. were carried out of the Hall to their Coaches in Boats, which plyed both in the Hall, and the Palace-Yards. Most of the Cellars in Westminster were filled with Water. The Privy Garden at Whitehall, and the Parade in St. James's Park, were also overflowed. The Water came over Tower Wharf in several Places, and the Cellars and Offices on the Banks of the River, both above and below Bridge, were universally under Water.

The Place Bill was again brought into the House of Commons, but met with the same Fate as before.

About this Time the Duke of Lorain was married to the Archduchess, eldest Daughter of his Imperial Majesty.

James Stanley, Earl of Derby, and Lord of Man, died about the same Time.

On the 24th of March, his Majesty went to the House of Peers, and gave the Royal Assent to the Bill for repealing the Statute made in the first of King James I. entitled An Act against Conjuraton, Witchcraft, and dealing with evil and wicked Spirits.

On the 27th of April, his Royal Highness the Prince of Wales was married to her Highness Augusta, Princess of Saxe-Gotha, who arrived from Germany two Days before. There were extraordinary Rejoicings on this Occasion, and their Majesties and the Royal Bridegroom and Bride were congratulated here-upon by both Houses of Parliament, the City of London, the two Universities, &c.

Sir Thomas Saunders Sebright, Bart. Knight of the Shire for the County of Hertford, died in this Month.

Also on the 10th of the same Month died that accomplished and renowned General and Commander, Prince Eugene of Savoy, whose Name was famous all over Europe for so many Years, and whose Conduct and Bravery in Conjunction with the victorious John Duke of Marlborough in the late War in Queen Anne's Reign, will never be forgot. His Highness died in the 73d Year of his Age, being born October 8, 1663, O. S. He was buried in the most magnificent Manner, the Emperor having given Orders, that his Funeral should be solemnized with the same Honours as are paid to the Remains of the Imperial Family.

On the 5th of May, his Majesty gave the Royal Assent to several Bills, and among the rest to the famous Gin-Bill, entituled, An Act for laying a Duty upon the Retailers of Spiritual Liquors, and for licensing the Retailers thereof. There were very long Debates in the House of Commons in Relation to this Bill; and the Penalties of 100 l. and 10 l. that have been inflicted for the Breach of this Act, are almost innumerable.

On the 20th his Majesty went again to the House of Peers, and gave the Royal Assent to the Bill for building a Bridge cross the Thames at Westminster: A Bill for naturalizing the Princess of Wales: A Bill to restrain the Disposition of Lands, whereby the same become unalienable, commonly called the Mortmain Bill: A Bill to indemnify Persons who have been guilty of unlawful Importation of Goods and Merchandizes into this Kingdom, upon the Terms therein mentioned, and for enforcing the Laws against such Importation for the future; commonly called the Smuggling Bill; and to some others: After which his Majesty made a most gracious Speech to both Houses, and prorogued the Parliament; and two Days after set out for Hanover.

In this Session also the Quakers Tythe Bill passed the House of Commons, but was rejected by the Lords. And a Motion was made in the House of Commons for repealing the Test Act, but carried in the Negative.

Dr. Isaac Maddox was made Bishop of St. Asaph, in the Room of Bishop Tanner, deceased.

In June died General Tatton, an old experienc'd Officer in the Army.

On July 14, between One and Two, a most impudent and daring Insult was committed in Westminster Hall. A large Parcel in a brown Paper was laid near the Chancery Court, and kicked down on the landing Place on the Steps, going to the two Courts of King's-Bench and Chancery; to which, as it should seem, was put a lighted Match, which burnt till it came to the Paper, wherein were inclosed several Chambers or Parcels of Gunpowder, which blew up, making several large Reports, that put the Courts of Justice, and all Westminster-Hall into great Confusion. Inclosed in the brown Paper were five Acts of Parliament, great Part of which were

S f

A. D. 1736. were burnt, viz. the Gin Act, the Mortmain Act, the Westminster Bridge Act, the Smugglers Act, and the Act for borrowing 600,000*l.* on the sinking Fund. One Nixon, a Non-juring Parson, was apprehended and convicted of this infamous Fact, and was sentenced to pay 200 Marks, to be imprisoned five Years, to give Security for his good Behaviour for five Years, and that he should be brought up to the several Courts then sitting, with a Parchment round his Head, denoting the Nature of his Crime.

About this Time died Thomas Earl of Westmoreland, and Nicholas Earl of Scarsdale.

The latter End of July, there were great Mobbing, Tumults and Disorders in Spittlefields, Shoreditch, and the Parts adjacent; which began from a Quarrel between some English and Irish Labourers, on occasion of the latter working cheaper than the former. This Riot grew to such a Head, that several Persons were wounded, and a Lad was kill'd by a Shot from a Publick House kept by an Irishman, which the Mob had attacked. The Justices read the Proclamation, call'd out the Train'd Bands, and procured two Parties of Foot-Guards to be sent from the Tower, who marching thro' Spittlefields and Shoreditch, the Mob retired, but came together again the next Day. At last some Parties of the Horse Guards were sent from Whitehall to patrol there, which prevented further Mischief.

But an Affair of a much more extraordinary Nature happen'd soon after in Scotland, occasion'd by the following Circumstance. One Wilson condemn'd for robbing Collector Stark was executed at Edinburgh on the 14th of April, when Captain Porteous, Commander of the City Guard, which attended to prevent a Rescue, on some Boys throwing Stones at the Executioner as he was cutting him down, fir'd among the People, as did also several of his Men, without the least Orders from the Magistrates who attended; whereby several Persons were unhappily kill'd, and others wounded; Hereupon Porteous was committed to Prison, and in July was found guilty of Wilful Murder, and received Sentence of Death, which was to be executed upon him the 8th of September: But upon his humble Petition to the Queen, and great Application made to her Majesty for changing his Sentence from Death to Transportation, he obtain'd a Reprieve for six Weeks, which arrived at Edinburgh the 2d of September. And now a most extraordinary and tragical Scene ensued: For on the 7th of that Month, about ten at Night, a great Number of Men enter'd the City of Edinburgh, and by Surprise seized all the Fire-Arms, Battle-Axes, and Drums belonging to the City Guard. The Mob in a few Minutes locked and secured all the City Gates, and with Drums beat an Alarm, and then attempted to force open the Prison Door where Porteous was; but not being able to do it, they set Fire to it and burnt it: When being entered, they made the Under-Keeper open the double Locks of the Captain's Apartment, and so forcing in upon him, they drag'd him down the Stairs, and immediately hurried him away. They marched out with lighted Torches before them, and proceeded to the Place where the Gallows used to be fixed for Execution, and where the Murder was committed; where after staying a little while, they opened a Shop and brought out a Rope, one End of which they threw over a Sign-Post, and pull'd him up in the Dress in which they found him, viz. a Night Gown and Cap: But he having his Hands loose, fixed them between his Neck and the Rope; so they let him down, and he having two Shirts on, they wrapp'd one of them about his Face, and tied his Arms with his Night-Gown; then pulling him up again, they put an End to his Life. The Boldness, Secrecy, and Success of this Enterprize, made some apt to believe, that Persons above the vulgar Rank had a hand in it, and conducted the whole Affair. It is remarkable, that after the Execution was over, they left the Arms and Drums on the Place, and departed quietly without offering any other Violence. This Affair drew the Censure of Parliament upon the Lord Provost and the City of Edinburgh; for after long Debates, an Act passed both Houses, and received the Royal Assent, disabling Alexander Wilson, Esq; (the then Lord Provost) from holding any Office of Magistracy at Edinburgh, or elsewhere in Great-Britain, and for laying a Fine of 2000 l. on the City of Edinburgh. An Act also then passed, for bringing to Justice the Persons concerned in the Murder of Captain Porteous, and punishing those who knowingly conceal them. Notwithstanding which, we do not find that any were executed on this Account.

When the Gin-Act took Place, which was on September 29, a double Guard mounted at Kensington, the Guard at St. James's, and Horse Guards at Whitehall were reinforced, a Guard was plac'd at the Rolls Office, Chancery Lane, (Sir Joseph Jekyll, the then Master of the Rolls, having been the chief Promoter of the Bill) and a Detachment of the Life Guards and Horse-Grenadier Guards paraded in Covent-Garden, &c. in order to suppress any Tumult that might happen on that Account: But all Things continuing quiet, they were soon discharg'd.

Towards the End of the Year died the Right Honourable James Berkeley, Earl of Berkeley, some time first Commissioner of the Admiralty: Sir Adolphus Oughton, Bart. Brigadier General of his Majesty's Forces, and one of the Representatives for Coventry: Sir Fisher Tench, Bart. formerly Member in several Parliaments for the Borough of Southwark: And the learned and ingenious Mr. George Sale, who was exceedingly well vers'd in the Oriental Languages, of which his Translation of the Koran of Mohammed is a Testimony.

On the 15th of January, his Majesty arrived at St. James's from Hanover, after having been detained a considerable Time at Helvoetsluys by contrary Winds.

On the 21st the Parliament met, and was prorogued by Commission to the first Day of February.

Sir Thomas Reeve, Lord Chief-Justice of the Common Pleas, died about this Time: Upon which, John Willes, Esq; Attorney General, was made Lord Chief Justice of that Court, and knighted; Dudley Ryder, Esq; was made Attorney General, and John Strange, Esq; Solicitor General in his Room.

Also in this Month died his Grace Dr. William Wake, Lord Archbishop of Canterbury: Upon which, Dr. Potter, Lord Bishop of Oxford, was advanced to the See of Canterbury; Dr. Secker was translated from the See of Bristol to that of Oxford; and Dr. Gooch was made Bishop of Bristol.

The Parliament met on the 1st of February, but his Majesty being indisposed did not go to the House: However the Session was opened by Commission, and the Lord Chancellor, by his Majesty's Command, made a Speech to both Houses, concerning the present Posture of Affairs both Abroad and at Home.

A. D.
1737.

One of the principal Affairs in this Session, was the Motion that was made in both Houses to address his Majesty to settle 100,000 l. per Annum on his Royal Highness the Prince of Wales, in the same Manner his Majesty enjoyed it before his happy Accession to the Throne. There were long Debates in both Houses on this Motion, but those who were called the Court Party opposing it, a Negative was at last put upon it. The Motion was made in the House of Lords by the Lord Carteret, and in the House of Commons by William Pulteney, Esq; where it was carried against the Motion by a Majority of 30, and in the House of Lords by a Majority of 63, but several Lords entered their Protest.

Sir Charles Peers, Knight and Alderman, and George Hamilton Earl of Orkney, one of the 16 Peers for Scotland, died about this Time.

Also in this Month died the Right Honourable Charles Lord Talbot, Baron Hensol, Lord High Chancellor of Great-Britain; whose Virtues in private Life made his Loss universally regretted, and whose Justice, Penetration, Wisdom, Sweetness of Temper and unbiassed Integrity, in every Action of his publick Life, caused his Death to be considered by all as a publick Calamity. He was succeeded in the Office of Lord High Chancellor by the Right Honourable Philip Lord Hardwicke, Lord Chief Justice of the King's Bench, and Sir William Lee was made Lord Chief Justice in his Room.

In March, died Mrs. Elizaeth Rowe, formerly Singer, the celebrated Author of Friendship in Death, and Letters Moral and Entertaining: And John Earl of Ashburnham, Captain of the Yeomen of the Guard.

On the 22d of April, his Majesty gave the Royal Assent to the Bill for making perpetual the Act to prevent the infamous Practice of Stock-jobbing.

In this Month, Arthur Annesley, Earl of Anglesea departed this Life: As did soon after, James Johnston, Esq; who had been Secretary of State to King William, and Lord Register of Scotland in the Reign of Queen Anne: Sir William Chapman, Knight and Baronet, Son of Sir John Chapman, who was Lord Mayor of London at the Revolution: And John Conduit, Esq; Member of Parliament for Southampton, and Master of his Majesty's Mint, in which Office he succeeded the great Sir Isaac Newton.

On June 21, his Majesty went to the House of Peers, and gave the Royal Assent to an Act for settling a Dowry (of 50,000 l. per Annum) on the Princess of Wales: That relating to the Duty on Sweets: That relating to the common Players of Interludes, commonly called the Play-House Bill: That for regulating Watermen, Wherry-men and Lightermen, rowing on the River Thames: That for regulating the Nightly Watch in the City of London, &c. After which his Majesty made a most gracious Speech to both Houses, and prorogued the Parliament.

The Venetian Resident had Notice given him to leave the Town in three Days, and the Kingdom in eight, for the Insult offered to his Majesty's Crown and Dignity by the Doge and Senate of Venice, in the great Honours shewn the Pretender's Son.

In this Month died Dr. Cecil, Bishop of Bangor, and Dr. Herring was made Bishop of Bangor in his Room.

The Beginning of July, the Great Duke of Tuscany departed this Life; by whose Death the Duke of Lorain came to the actual Possession of the Dukedom of Tuscany, and by that Means the French got free of an Annuity of 4,500,000 Livres a Year, which by the late Treaty they were obliged to pay to the Duke of Lorain, till he came to the actual Possession of Tuscany.

At Home died Thomas Spence, Esq; Serjeant at Arms attending the House of Commons: Sir Wilfrid Lawson, Baronet: Sir Gerard Conyers, Knight and Alderman: And Lieutenant General Sutton.

In the Night between the last Day of July and the first of August, her Royal Highness the Princess of Wales was safely deliver'd of a Princess, who was named Augusta, to the great joy of the Nation.

In August died the Reverend Dr. King, Master of the Charter-House; Baron Hartoff, Secretary of State for the Affairs of Hanover; and Sir Harry Peachy, Baronet: And in September the Right Honourable John Earl of Leicester, Constable of the Tower, Knight of the Bath, and Lord Lieutenant and Custos Rotulorum for the County of Kent, departed this Life.

On the 28th of the same Month, the Stalls and Shambles were pulled down in Stocks-Market, in order to clear it for the Building a Mansion-House for the Lord Mayor for the Time being: And on the 30th, the Fleet-Market was proclaimed a free Market, and opened accordingly.

In October, several Merchants deputed by the Rest of the Merchants trading to America, went to Hampton Court, and being introduced to his Majesty, delivered to him the following Petition:

To the KING's most excellent MAJESTY.

The humble Petition of the Merchants and Traders, in behalf of themselves and others, trading to and interested in the British Colonies in America,

Sheweth,

THAT the fair and lawful Trade of your Majesty's Subjects to the British Plantations in America, hath been greatly interrupted, for many Years past, not only by their Ships have been frequently stopped and searched, but also forcibly and arbitrarily seized on the High Seas, by Spanish Ships sited out to cruise under the plausible Pretence of guarding their own Coasts; that the Commanders thereof, with their Crews, have been inhumanly treated, and their Ships carried into some of the Spanish Ports, and there condemned with their Cargoes, in manifest Violation of the Treaties subsisting between the two Crowns.

That notwithstanding the many Instances made by your Majesty's Ministers at the Court of Madrid, against this injurious Treatment, the late and repeated Insults of the Spaniards, upon the Persons and Properties of your Majesty's Subjects, lay your Petitioners under the Necessity of applying again to your Majesty for Relief.

That by these violent and unjust Proceedings of the Spaniards, the Trade to your Majesty's Plantations in America, is render'd very precarious; and if any Nation be suffered thus to insult the Persons of your Majesty's Subjects, and plunder them of their Property, your Petitioners apprehend it will be attended with such an Obstruction of that valuable

A. D. 1737. valuable Branch of Commerce, as will be very fatal to the Interest of Great-Britain.

Your Petitioners therefore humbly pray your Majesty, that your Majesty will be graciously pleased to procure speedy and ample Satisfaction to your Subjects for the Losses they have sustain'd; that no British Vessel be detain'd or searched on the High Seas by any Nation, under any Pretence whatsoever; and that the Trade to America may be rendered sure for the future, by such Means as your Majesty in your great Wisdom shall think fit.

In November died Sir Richard Brocas, Knt. and Alderman, who, was Lord Mayor in 1729.

On the 20th of the same Month at Eleven o'Clock at Night, died, to the inexpressible Grief of his Majesty, the Royal Family, and the whole Nation, her Majesty WILHELMINA CAROLINA, Queen Consort of Great-Britain, aged 54 Years, 8 Months and 20 Days, being born March 1, 1682-3. She was a most excellent Person, whether we consider her as a Queen, a Wife, a Mother, a Mistress, or a Friend.

On December 17, the Body of her late Majesty was interred in a new Vault in King Henry the VIIth's Chapel. The Procession was from the Prince's Chamber, adjoining to the House of Lords. The Pall was supported by Six Dukes, and her Royal Highness the Princess Amelia was chief Mourner, supported by two Dukes, and her Train born by two Dutcheses, assisted by the Lord Robert Montague, the Queen's Vice-Chamberlain, and six Dutcheses and ten Countesses were Assistants to the chief Mourner.

On Tuesday, Jan. 24, his Majesty went to the House of Peers, and open'd the Session with a short Speech to both Houses, as follows:

My Lords and Gentlemen,

I have called you together for the necessary Dispatch of the publick Business, which I hope will be carried on with that Prudence and Expedition which becomes the Wisdom of Parliament.

Gentlemen of the House of Commons,

I have ordered the Estimates for the Service of the current Year to be laid before you; and the Readiness which I have always found in you to make the necessary Provisions for the Honour, Peace and Security of my Crown and Kingdoms leaves me no Room to doubt of the same Zeal, Affection and due Regard for the Support of my Government, and the Publick Safety.

My Lords and Gentlemen,

I hope you are met together in a Disposition to lay aside all Heats and Animosities, which may unnecessarily protract this Session. I am determined that the Affairs of the Publick shall suffer no Delay or Interruption from me, upon any Account whatsoever.

On the 25th the House of Lords, and the next Day the House of Commons presented their humble Address of Thanks to his Majesty for his most gracious Speech from the Throne, and of Condolance for the Death of the Queen.

The following Declaration was published in the London Gazette.

Lord Chamberlain's Office,

Feb. 27, 1737-8.

His Majesty having been informed, that due Regard has not been paid to his Order of the 11th of September, 1737, has thought fit to declare, That no Persons whatsoever, who shall go to pay their Court

to

to their Royal Highnesses the Prince or Princess of Wales, shall be admitted into his Majesty's Presence, at any of his Royal Palaces.

Grafton.

On the 11th of March, a Proclamation was published for putting in Execution the late Act against retailing of Spirituous Liquors, and for protecting the Officers of Justice, and all others in their just and laudable Endeavours to assist the Magistrates therein, and for suppressing all Combinations and Confederacies to encourage Disobedience to the said Law; and to punish all Attempts, by Riots or otherwise, to insult and abuse those who give Informations, and make Discoveries of the Offenders against the said Act; and also for putting in Execution the Act of Parliament made against Riots, in the first Year of his late Majesty King George I.

On the 16th of the same Month, the West-India Merchants, who had presented their Petition some Days before, complaining of the Depredations of the Spaniards, and the Injuries they had sustained in their Shipping and Merchandizes, by their Vessels being taken by Spanish Guarda Costa's, (on which Subject they had likewise made Application to Parliament in 1728 and 1730) attended the House of Commons to make good the Allegations of their Petition. Several Merchants, Owners and Commanders were called in and examined, and the Affair was adjourned till Tuesday the 21st; when a printed List of the English Ships taken and plundered by the Spaniards, since the Treaty of Seville, specifying the Names of the Captains, Ships, their Value, Places taken at, barbarous Usage received, &c. was delivered to the Members of the House of Commons. There were very great and long Debates in both Houses upon this important Affair, when one Side seem'd to be for an immediate War, and the other for still trying what might be done by peaceful Measures. However, by the great Naval Preparations that were made every body expected a War. Admiral Haddock sailed with a Squadron to the Mediterranean, a vast Number of Ships were put in Commission, and there was a very hot Press to man them; however, long before the End of the Year, Things took quite another Turn, as will appear hereafter.

On the 4th of May, the House of Lords presented an Humble Address to his Majesty, with the following Resolutions:

I. That the Subjects of the Crown of Great-Britain have a clear and undoubted Right to navigate in the American Seas, to and from any Part of his Majesty's Dominions; and for carrying on such Trade and Commerce, as they are justly intitled to in America; and also to carry all Sorts of Goods and Merchandizes, or Effects, from one Part of his Majesty's Dominions to any other Part thereof, and that no Goods, being so carried, are by any Treaty subsisting between the Crowns of Great Britain and Spain, to be deemed or taken as Contraband or Prohibited Goods, and that the Searching of such Ships on the open Seas, under Pretence of their carrying contraband or prohibited Goods, is a Violation and Infraction of the Treaties subsisting between the two Crowns.

II. That it appears to this House, that as well before, as since the Execution of the Treaty of Seville on the Part of Great Britain, divers Ships and Vessels, with their Cargoes, belonging to British Subjects, have been violently seized and confiscated

A. D.
1738.

fishcated by the Spaniards, upon Pretences altogether unjust and groundless; and that many of the Sailors on board such Ships, have been injuriously and barbarously imprison'd and ill-treated; and that thereby the Liberty of Navigation and Commerce belonging to his Majesty's Subjects, by the Law of Nations, and by Virtue of the Treaties subsisting between the Crowns of Great Britain and Spain, hath been unwarrantably infringed and interrupted, to the great Loss and Damage of our Merchants, and in direct Violation of the said Treaties.

III. That it appears to this House, that frequent Applications have been made, on the Part of his Majesty, to the Court of Spain, in a Manner most agreeable to Treaties, and to the Peace and Friendship subsisting between the two Crowns, for redressing the notorious Abuses and Grievances before mentioned, and preventing the like for the future, and for obtaining adequate Satisfaction to his injured Subjects, which in the Event have proved intirely fruitless, and of no Effect.

Their Lordships conclude thus: We think it our Duty, on this important Occasion, humbly to represent to your Majesty, that we are most sensibly affected with the many and grievous Injuries and Losses sustained by your Majesty's trading Subjects, by Means of these unwarrantable Depredations and Seizures; and to give your Majesty the strongest and most sincere Assurances, that in Case your friendly and powerful Instances for procuring Restitution and Reparation to your injured Subjects, and for the future Security of their Trade and Navigation, shall fail of having their due Effect and Influence on the Court of Spain, and shall not be able to obtain that real Satisfaction and Security, which your Majesty may in Justice expect; we will zealously and cheerfully concur in all such Measures as shall become necessary for the Support of your Majesty's Honour, the Preservation of our Navigation and Commerce, and the common Good of these Kingdoms.

His Majesty's Answer was as follows:

My Lords,

I am sensibly touched with the many Hardships and Injuries sustained by my trading Subjects in America, from the Cruelties and unjust Depredations of the Spaniards. You may be assured of my Care to procure Satisfaction and Reparation for the Losses they have already suffered, and Security for the Freedom of Navigation for the future; and to maintain to my People the full Enjoyment of all their Rights, to which they are intitled by Treaty and the Law of Nations.

I doubt not but I shall have your Concurrence for the Support of such Measures as may be necessary for that Purpose.

The House of Commons a little before presented an Address to the same Purpose, and the Answer was to the same Effect.

On Saturday, May 20, his Majesty went to the House of Peers, and having passed the several Bills that were ready for the Royal Assent, put an End to the Session with a most gracious Speech.

On the 24th her Royal Highness the Princess of Wales was happily delivered of a Prince, at Norfolk House, who was named George William Frederick.

In this Month died Dr. Thomas Green, Lord Bishop of Ely: And soon after Dr. Robert Butts was translated from the See of Norwich to that of Ely, Dr. Gooch from the See of Bristol to Norwich, and Dr.

Joseph

Joseph Butler was advanced to the See of Bristol.

On the 15th of June, the Right Honourable the Earls of Essex and Waldegrave (the latter by Proxy) were installed Knights of the most noble Order of the Garter, at Windsor, with the usual Solemnities.

About this Time, the Right Honourable Frederick Zulestein de Nassau, Earl of Rochford, and Charles Townshend, Lord Viscount Townshend, departed this Life.

In July, Mr. Justice Commyn was made Lord Chief Baron of the Exchequer, in the Room of Lord Chief Baron Reynolds, who resigned: Mr. Baron Fortescue was made one of the Judges of the Common Pleas; and Mr. Serjeant Parker, one of the Barons of the Exchequer.

In August died Sir Joseph Jekyll, Knight, Master of the Rolls, Member of Parliament for Rygate in Surry, and one of his Majesty's most Honourable Privy Council. He was succeeded as Master of the Rolls by the Honourable John Vernon, Esq; Chief Justice of Chester.

Dr. John Harris, Lord Bishop of Landaff, died about the same Time.

About the Middle of October, their Royal Highnesses the Prince and Princess of Wales went to Bath, where they were received and treated with all the Honours due to their high Rank. They staid there about six Weeks, and during the Time paid a Visit to the City of Bristol; where they were received in a very grand Manner by the Mayor, Aldermen, and Corporation, and most magnificently entertained at the Merchants Hall; and his Royal Highness was presented with the Freedom of the City, and of the Hall, in Gold Boxes.

About this Time the Discourse grew very hot of a new Treaty or Convention with Spain; of which we shall hear more in the next Year. A. D.

1739.

Towards the End of this Year died Sir Edmund Bacon, of Gillingham, Baronet, Member of Parliament for Thetford in Norfolk; and Sir Charles Turner, Baronet, Member of Parliament for Lynn in the same County.

On the 18th of January the Parliament met, and was further prorogued to the 1st Day of February.

Dr. Matthias Mawson was made Bishop of Landaff, in the Room of Bishop Harris, deceased.

Dr. Hulse, an eminent Physician, was advanced to the Dignity of a Baronet.

A Charter passed the Great Seal about this Time for establishing an Hospital for the Maintenance and Education of exposed and deserted young Children, and several of the Nobility and Gentry were appointed Governors and Guardians of it. This is commonly called the Foundlings Hospital.

On Thursday the 1st of February the Parliament met, when his Majesty, in his Speech, said, 'It is now a great Satisfaction to me, that I am able to acquaint you, that the Measures I have pursued, have had so good an Effect, that a Convention is concluded, and ratified between me and the King of Spain; whereby, upon Consideration had of the Demands on both Sides, that Prince has obliged himself to make Reparation to my Subjects for their Losses by a certain stipulated Payment; and Plenipotentiaries are therein named and appointed, for regulating within a limited Time, all those Grievances and Abuses, which have hitherto interrupted our Commerce and Navigation in the American Seas; and for settling all Matters in Dispute, &c.

The

A. D.
1739.

The Convention was soon after published, wherein it is principally agreed, That there shall be named on the Part of their Britannick and Catholick Majesties respectively, immediately after the signing of the present Convention, two Ministers Plenipotentiaries, who shall meet at Madrid within six Weeks, to be reckoned from the Day of the Exchange of the Ratifications, there to confer and finally regulate the respective Pretensions of the two Crowns, as well with Relation to the Trade and Navigation in America and Europe, and to the Limits of Florida and Carolina, as concerning other Points, which remain likewise to be adjusted, &c. And that his Catholick Majesty shall cause to be paid to his Britannick Majesty the Sum of 95,000*l.* Sterling Balance, which has been admitted as due to the Crown and the Subjects of Great-Britain, after Deduction made of the Demands of the Crown and Subjects of Spain; to the End that the abovementioned Sum, together with the Amount of what hath been acknowledged on the Part of Great-Britain to be due to Spain on her Demands, may be employed by his Britannick Majesty, for the Satisfaction, Discharge and Payment of the Demands of his Subjects upon the Crown of Spain. This Sum of 95,000*l.* was by a separate Article, to be paid at London, within four Months after the Exchange of the Ratifications. But before his Catholick Majesty signed this Convention, he caused it to be declared by his Minister, That he reserves to himself, in its full Force, the Right of suspending the Affiento of Negroes, in Case the South Sea Company does not subject herself to pay, within a short Term, the 68,000*l.* Sterling, which she has confessed is owing on the Duty of Negroes.

No sooner was this Convention published, but great Complaints were every where made against it. It was said that our Right of a free Navigation and Commerce, without being visited or searched, was in Effect given up, by referring it to be discussed by Plenipotentiaries, and that the Reparation stipulated was only a pretended Reparation: As to the 68,000*l.* said to be due to Spain from the South-Sea Company, it was only allowed as brought into an Account of a much larger Sum due to them from Spain; and therefore the Company refused to pay it in the Manner it was demanded by Spain. The City of London, the West-India Merchants, the Bristol Merchants, &c. presented Petitions to the Lords and Commons, complaining of this Convention; and there were great and warm Debates in both Houses upon it, especially upon the Motions for an Address to thank his Majesty for laying it before them, &c. though it was carried for the Addresses in both Houses: Upon which forty Lords entered their Protest, and a great many Members of the House of Commons left the House, and came no more to it during this whole Session. This Departure of the Members, and absenting themselves from Parliament, became famous by the Name of the Secession.

In February this Year died Sir James Reynolds, late Lord Chief Baron of the Exchequer: In March, the Earl of Selkirk, one of the sixteen Peers for Scotland: In April, Edward Carteret, Esq; joint Postmaster General, and Sir Edward Goodere, Bart. Father of two unhappy Sons, the one being in a deliberate and shocking Manner murdered murder

of the George
Auditor
Post H
the R Walpo
Honou
Knigh
of the
On High delive was n
On fly we gave many amon his M 15,00
land,
and a in the
and effect deceit bibiti print writi
An A Attor
Aa
Joan cover of th parea
Stone most ses,
Be the P with sever this that orde ted:
were was man

murdered by the other the beginning of the Year 1741. And in May, George Montague, Earl of Halifax, Auditor of the Exchequer, in which Post he was presently succeeded by the Right Honourable the Lord Walpole, eldest Son of the Right Honourable Sir Robert Walpole, Knight of the most noble Order of the Garter.

On the 14th of March her Royal Highness the Princess of Wales was delivered of another Prince, who was named Edward Augustus.

On the 14th of June his Majesty went to the House of Peers, and gave the Royal Assent to a great many publick and private Bills, and among the rest, to An Act to enable his Majesty to settle an Annuity of 15,000 l. on the Duke of Cumberland, and the Heirs of his Body, and also one other Annuity of 24,000 l. on the Princesses Amelia, Caroline, and Louisa: An Act for the more effectually preventing of excessive and deceitful Gaming. An Act for prohibiting the Importation of Books reprinted abroad, and first composed or written and printed in Great-Britain: An Act for the better Regulation of Attorneys and Solicitors; and An Act for providing a Reward for Joanna Stephens, upon a proper Discovery to be made by her, for the Use of the Publick, of the Medicines prepared by her for the Cure of the Stone. Then his Majesty made a most gracious Speech to both Houses, and prorogued the Parliament.

Before the End of the Session the Rumour of an approaching War with Spain began to revive, and several Measures were taken about this Time, which looked strongly that Way. The Land Forces were ordered to be considerably augmented: A great many Ships of War were put in Commission, and there was a very hot Press for Seamen to man them; for which Purpose an Embargo was laid on all outward-bound Merchant-Ships. A Proclamation was published for encouraging Seamen and able-bodied Landmen to enter on board his Majesty's Ships; and several other Steps were taken that seemed to forbode a sudden Rupture. These Presages of a War were very much strengthened and increased, when on the 10th of July, his Majesty in Council was pleased to order, That general Reprizals be granted against the Ships, Goods and Subjects of the King of Spain, so that as well his Majesty's Fleet and Ships, as also all other Ships and Vessels, that shall be commissioned by Letters of Marque or general Reprizals, &c. shall and may lawfully seize all Ships, Vessels and Goods, belonging to the King of Spain or his Subjects, or others inhabiting within any the Territories of the King of Spain, and bring the same to Judgment in any of the Courts of Admiralty within his Majesty's Dominions, &c. And on the 17th of the same Month, Edward Vernon, Esq; who a little before had been made Vice-Admiral of the Blue, set out for Portsmouth, to sail with the first fair Wind, with the Men of War under his Command, for the West-Indies.

One Margaret Patten, born in Scotland, died about this Time in St. Margaret's Workhouse, Westminster, in the 138th Year of her Age.

In August died the Marquis de Montandre, Field Marshal of England, Master of the Ordnance in Ireland, General of Foot, and Peer of France. He came over with King William, and was in all his Wars, as likewise in that of Queen Anne. Also in the same Month died William Lord Craven, and Lieutenant General Gore, Colonel of his Majesty's Royal Regiment of Dragoons, and Governor of Kinsale in Ireland.

On

A. D.
1739.

On the 5th of September, the Spanish Minister at this Court, and the Spanish Agent for the Assiento Contract, both left this Kingdom and returned home: And Mr. Keene, the British Minister, left Madrid about the same Time.

A new Sect called Methodists, with Mr. Whitfield at their Head, made a great Noise this Year. He and his Associates preached up and down in the Fields to vast Multitudes of People, as in Morefields, on Kennington Common, Blackbeath, and other Places near London; as likewise at Bristol, and several Places in the Country.

Something extraordinary turned up this Year in the Election of Lord Mayor for the City of London. It is to be observed, that the Liverymen of London, in Common-Hall assembled, have a Right, annually to return to the Court of Aldermen, on Michaelmas-Day, two Aldermen who have served the Office of Sheriff; of whom the said Court are to chuse one for Lord Mayor: That there had been a Custom of some Years standing of returning the two Senior Aldermen next below the Chair, and the Court of Aldermen chusing the Senior of those two. But Sir George Champion, the Alderman next the Chair, and then Member of Parliament for Aylesbury, having voted in Favour of the Convention, great Numbers of Liverymen resolved to resume their antient Right of a free Election, in order to set him aside. Which they succeeded in, and returned Sir John Salter and Sir Robert Godschall, the two next below the Chair, to the Court of Aldermen, who made Choice of the former, and he was accordingly declared Lord Mayor for the Year ensuing.

And now his Majesty resolved to declare War against Spain. The Declaration was signed by his Majesty on the 19th of October, and on the 23d it was proclaimed with great Solemnity, amidst innumerable Crowds of People, at St. James's Palace Gate, Charing Cross, the End of Chancery Lane, the End of Wood-street, and lastly, at the Royal Exchange. The following is an Abstract of the said Declaration.

Whereas many unjust Seizures have been made, and Depredations carried on, for several Years, in the West-Indies, by Spanish Guarda Costa's, and other Ships, acting under the Commission of the King of Spain or his Governors — and great Cruelties and Barbarities have been exercised on the Persons of divers of our Subjects, whose Vessels have been so seized; and the British Colours have been insulted in the most ignominious Manner; and whereas we have caused frequent Complaints to be made to the King of Spain, of these violent and unjust Proceedings, but no Satisfaction or Redress has been given for the same — and whereas the Evils abovementioned have been principally occasioned by an unwarrantable Claim set up on the Part of Spain, that the Guarda Costa's and other Ships, authorized by the King of Spain, may stop, detain, and search the Ships and Vessels of our Subjects, navigating in the American Seas, contrary to the Liberty of Navigation — and whereas many other Infractions have been made on the Part of Spain, of the several Treaties and Conventions subsisting between us and that Crown — as well by the exorbitant Duties and Impositions laid upon the Trade and Commerce of our Subjects, as by the Breach of ancient and

A. D.
1739.

and established Privileges, stipulated for them by the said Treaties; for the Redress of which Grievances, the strongest Instances have been, from Time to Time, made by our several Ministers residing in Spain, without any Effect; and whereas a Convention for making Reparation to our Subjects for the Losses sustained by them, &c. was concluded between us and the King of Spain, on the 14th Day of January last, N. S. by which it was stipulated, That a certain Sum of Money should be paid at London, within a Term therein specified, as a Balance admitted to be due, on the Part of Spain, to the Crown and Subjects of Great-Britain, which Term expired on the 25th Day of May last, and the Payment of the said Sum was not made; by which Means the Convention was manifestly broken by the King of Spain — and the Methods agreed upon by the said Convention, in order to the obtaining future Security for the Trade and Navigation of our Subjects are, contrary to good Faith, frustrated and defeated: In Consequence of which, we found ourselves obliged — to order, That general Reprisals should be granted against the said King of Spain, his Vassals and Subjects, &c. And whereas the Court of Spain has been induced to colour the open Violation of the Convention aforesaid, by Reasons and Pretences void of all Foundation; and at the same Time has not only published an Order, signed by the said King, for seizing the Ships, Goods and Effects belonging to us and our Subjects, wherever they shall be met with, but hath caused Seizures to be actually made, of the Goods and Effects of our Subjects residing in his Dominions, and has also ordered our said Subjects to depart out of the Spanish Dominions within a short limited Time, contrary to the express Stipulation of the Treaties between the two Crowns, even in Case of a War actually declared: We have taken into our Royal and most serious Consideration these Injuries which have been offered to us and our Subjects and the manifest Violation of the several Treaties subsisting between the two Crowns. — And being fully satisfied, that the Honour of our Crown, the Interest of our Subjects, and that Regard which ought to be had to the most solemn Treaties, call upon us to make use of the Power which God hath given us, for vindicating our undoubted Rights, and securing to our loving Subjects the Privileges of Navigation and Commerce, to which they are justly entitled: We therefore relying on the Help of Almighty God, who knows the Uprightness of our Intentions, have thought fit to declare, and do hereby declare War against the said King of Spain; and we will, in pursuance of such Declaration vigorously prosecute the said War, being assured of the ready Concurrence and Assistance of all our loving Subjects in so just a Cause, wherein the Honour of our Crown the Maintenance of our solemn Treaties, and the Trade and Navigation of our Subjects are so greatly concerned.

Soon after an Account came that Rear-Admiral Haddock had taken two rich Caraccas Ships, the Money and Goods on board one of which, called the St. Joseph, as mentioned in the Bill of Lading, were computed ted to be worth upwards of 100,000 l. Sterling; besides Silver and other valuable Effects, not express'd in the Bill of Lading. The Ship was brought to Spithead, and the Money on board was brought up in two Waggon, and lodg'd in the Bank.

A. D.
1739.

In October died his Grace the Duke of Manchester, Knight of the Bath, and Captain of the Yeomen of the Guards.

On Thursday the 15th of November the Parliament met, and his Majesty told them, that the present Posture of Affairs had obliged him to call them together at that Time sooner than had been usual of late Years, that he might have their immediate Advice and Assistance at that critical and important Conjunction.

On the 23d the Lords and Commons waited on his Majesty with the joint Resolution of both Houses, as follows:

Resolved by the Lords Spiritual and Temporal, and Commons in Parliament assembled, That an humble Address be presented to his Majesty, as a dutiful Return to his gracious Desire of the Advice of his Parliament at this critical and important Conjunction; and as a farther Testimony of our firm Resolution vigorously to support his Majesty in the Prosecution of the War against Spain, humbly to beseech his Majesty never to admit of any Treaty of Peace with that Crown, unless the Acknowledgment of our natural and undubitable Right to navigate in the American Seas, to and from any Part of his Majesty's Dominions, without being seized, searched, visited or stopped, under any Pretence whatsoever, shall have been first obtained, as a Preliminary thereto.

His Majesty's Answer was as follows:

My Lords and Gentlemen,
I thank you for this Dutiful Address, which is so agreeable to former Resolutions of both Houses of Parliament. Your unanimous and vigorous Support, in carrying on the War, will be the best Means of procuring safe and honourable Terms of Peace; and you may rely on my utmost Care and Endeavour to obtain effectual Security for the just Rights of Navigation and Commerce belonging to my Subjects.

The Pension Bill again passed the House of Commons, and was rejected by the Lords.

In November died Sir William Thompson, one of the Barons of the Exchequer, and Recorder of London. He was succeeded in the former Post by Mr. Serjeant Wright, and in the latter by John Strange, Esq; his Majesty's Solicitor General.

In the same Month died General Sabine Governor of Gibraltar; Thomas Wentworth, Earl of Stafford; and Harry Earl of Stamford.

In December died Lieutenant General Nappier, Commander in Chief of the Forces in Ireland, under the Lord Viscount Shannon: And the Earls of Murray and Sterling, Scots Peers.

As intense a Frost as perhaps was ever known in these Parts began on Christmas-day, and continued thro' January and the greatest Part of February, near eight Weeks. The Thames was froze so hard, that Multitudes of People walked over it, and a great many Booths were erected, and a Fair kept upon it.

Instructions were sent up from a great many Counties and Corporations to their respective Representatives, earnestly recommending to them the promoting of a Bill for limiting the Number of Officers in the House of Commons, commonly called the Place-Bill. Accordingly

ingly on January 29, a Motion was made in the House of Commons for the bringing in of such a Bill, but it was rejected by a Majority of 16.

In this Month died Sir Brocas Gardiner, Bart. one of the Commissioners of the Stamp-Duties: Alexander Wilson, Esq; who was Lord Provost of Edinburgh when Captain Porteous was hang'd by the Mob: Sir William Stapleton, Bart. one of the Knights of the Shire for the County of Oxford: Captain Tudor Trevor, Deputy Governor of Greenwich Hospital: And Sir Francis Henry Drake, Bart. Member of Parliament for Borlston in Devonshire.

The next Month the following Persons of Note departed this Life, viz. The Right Honourable Richard Lumley, Earl of Scarborough, Knight of the Garter, one of his Majesty's most Honourable Privy Council, and Colonel of the second Regiment of Foot Guards, in which Command he was succeeded by his Royal Highness the Duke of Cumberland: The Right Honourable the Earl of Delorain: Lieutenant General Evans, first General of Horse, Colonel of a Regiment of Horse, and Governor of Chelsea Hospital: Sir Joseph Eyles, Knight, Alderman of Cheap Ward, and Member of Parliament for the Devizes: And Sir Edmund Elwill, Bart. Comptroller of the Duties arising by Excise.

On February 8, Madam Amelia Sophia Walmodun, commonly called Madam Valmonte, took the Oaths at the Bar of the House of Lords, in Order for her Naturalization Bill to pass that House. She was soon after created Countess of Yarmouth.

The 13th of March, Captain Rentone arrived here Express, with Letters from Vice-Admiral Vernon, giving an Account of the glorious Action at Porto Bello, on the 21st and 22d of November last; when the said Admiral, with no more than six Men of War, entered the Harbour, and made himself Master of the Town and Forts; after which, he took on board his Ships from the several Fortresses, 40 Pieces of Brass Cannon, 10 Brass Field Pieces, four Brass Mortars, and 18 Brass Pattereroes; and rendered unserviceable above 80 Iron Cannon, by knocking off the Trunnions, and spiking them up: He also took on board all the Spaniards Shot and Ammunition, except 122 Barrels of Powder, which he expended in springing Mines, by which all the Fortifications of the Forts were blown up, and entirely demolished, and the Harbour left open and defenceless.

On the 18th the following Address was presented to his Majesty by both Houses of Parliament:

Most gracious Sovereign,

' We your Majesty's most dutiful
' and loyal Subjects, the Lords Spi-
' ritual and Temporal, and Com' mons, in Parliament assembled,
' do congratulate your Majesty on
' the glorious Success of your Ma' jesty's Arms in the West Indies,
' under the Command of Vice-Ad' miral Vernon, by entering the
' Port, and taking the Town of ' Porto Bello, and demolishing and ' levelling all the Forts and Castles
' belonging thereto, with six Ships
' of War only.

' This Enterprize, so wisely con' certed, and so bravely conducted,
' cannot fail of giving the utmost
' Joy to all your Majesty's faithful
' Subjects, since it affords the most ' reasonable Hopes and Expectati' ons, that, by the Blessing of God
' upon

A. D.

1740.

A. D.

1740.

‘ upon your Majesty’s Counsels and Arms, it may be attended with other important Advantages, and highly contribute to the obtaining real and effectual Security of those just Rights of Navigation and Commerce belonging to your Majesty’s Subjects, for the Preservation of which your Majesty entered into this necessary War.’

His Majesty’s Answer was as follows :

My Lords and Gentlemen,

I thank you for your dutiful Congratulations on this Success, which is so much for the Honour and Interest of my Crown and Kingdoms. The Satisfaction you express in the Measures I have taken, is very agreeable to me.

The City of London also presented an Address to his Majesty on the same Occasion.

About this Time died the Right Honourable Alexander Hume Earl of Marchmont, one of the 16 Peers for Scotland in the last Parliament : The Right honourable John Lord King, Baron of Ockham, Son to the late Lord Chancellor King : And Mr. Justice Denton, one of the Judges of the Court of Common Pleas, and Chancellor to his Royal Highness the Prince of Wales. He was succeeded in the latter Place by Thomas Bootle, Esq; and in the former by Mr. Baron Parker, who was succeeded by Mr. Baron Reynolds of the Exchequer in Ireland.

On Tuesday April 29, his Majesty went to the House of Peers, and gave the Royal Assent to An Act for prohibiting Commerce with Spain : An Act to prevent the excessive Increase of Horse Races : An Act for the Increase of Mariners and Seamen : An Act for confirming and enlarging the Powers granted by his Majesty to the Governors and Guardians of the Hospital for the Maintenance of exposed and deserted young Children ; and to several others : After which his Majesty put an end to the Session with a most gracious Speech.

On the 30th his Grace the Duke of Argyll resigned all his Places at Court.

Sir Francis Child, Knight and Alderman, Knight of the Shire for Middlesex, and President of Christ’s Hospital died in this Month : He was Lord Mayor of London in 1732. About the same Time died Dr. Francis Hare, Lord Bishop of Chichester, and Dean of St. Paul’s. Upon this Dr. Mawson was translated to the See of Chichester, and Dr. John Gilbert was made Bishop of Landaffe in his Room ; and Dr. Butler, Lord Bishop of Bristol, was made Dean of St. Paul’s. A little before, the Reverend Dr. Felton, Author of the Dissertation on the Classics, departed this Life.

On the 8th of May in the Evening, were solemnized the Espousals of the Princess Mary, with the most serene Prince Frederick of Hesse Cassel, his Royal Highness the Duke of Cumberland acting as Proxy. Her Marriage Portion provided by Act of Parliament was 40,000 l. Her Royal Highness set out soon after for Hesse Cassel.

On the 13th his Majesty having appointed Lords Justices, set out for Hanover.

On the 20th died, in the 52d Year of his Age, Frederick William, King of Prussia, Margrave of Brandenburg, Arch-Chamberlain and Elector of the Holy Roman Empire. He was succeeded by Charles Frederick his eldest Son, born January 24, 1712.

His Majesty before his Departure for Hanover, conferred the Honour of Knighthood on Dudley Ryder, Esq; Attorney General, and on John Strange, Esq; Solicitor General.

In this Month died Mr. Ephraim Chambers, F. R. S. Author of the famous Dictionary, entitled Cyclopadia, and was interred in the Cloysters in Westminster Abbey.

About this Time a Spanish Privateer, which had very much annoy'd our Merchant Ships in the Channel, &c. and had taken at least 22 of them, and carried them into St. Sebastian's was taken by one of our Ships of War, and brought to Portsmouth.

Some Time before, a large Spanish Man of War was taken by three of ours, after a sharp and bloody Engagement.

The beginning of June a Camp was formed on Hounslow-Heath, which drew multitudes of People from Town and Country to see it.

Sir John Norris went down to the Fleet at Spithead, and hoisted his Flag on board the Victory, and his Royal Highness the Duke soon after embarked on board the same. In their first Attempt to sail, the Lyon in a Storm run foul of the Victory and damaged it, so that they were forced to put back. They made several other Attempts to sail, but the Wind still coming contrary, they could not proceed.

In the mean Time we were under Apprehensions about the Cadiz and Ferrol Squadrons, which being join'd, fail'd at last for the West-Indies. And what added more to our Concern was the French Brest and Thoulon Squadron sailing for that Part of the World soon after. But nothing came of it, and the French Squadron after having been there some Time, returned home the Beginning of the next Year, without doing any Thing.

We must now go a little back. About June the following Persons of Note departed this Life, viz. Henry de Grey, Duke and Earl of Kent, Lord Lieutenant and Custos Rotularum of the County of Bedford, one of the Privy Council, and Knight of the Garter: Thomas Onslow, Lord Onslow and Baronet, Lord Lieutenant of the County of Surrey, and one of the Tellers of the Exchequer: Sir William Windham, Baronet, Knight of the Shire for the County of Somerset, and a famous Speaker in the House of Commons: And Samuel Holden, Esq; Governor of the Bank, and Member of Parliament for Eastbury in Cornwall.

The 29th of June an Account came of another glorious Action of Admiral Vernon, viz. his taking the Town of Chagre, and Castle of San Lorenzo. He found the Custom-House full of Goods for the Lading of the Galleons, which he shipp'd off, and then set Fire to the Custom-House and burnt it down, and blew up and demolished the Castle, &c.

In July died Sir Jeremy Vanacker Sambroke, Baronet, Member of Parliament for Bedford: And in August, Sir John Ladbroke, Baronet, in Commission of the Peace for the County of Surrey.

There was a great Contest this Year between the Livery Men (who had again resolved to set aside Sir George Champion) and the Court of Aldermen about choosing Lord Mayor. The Livery returned Sir Robert Goddard the Senior Alder-

A. D. 1740. man below the Chair (next after Sir George Champion) and Alderman Heathcote; but the Court of Aldermen returned Mr. Heathcote by a Majority of three: And he desiring to be excus'd, and being actually excus'd by a Court of Common Council, a new Election came on, when Sir Robert Godschall and Humphry Parsons, Esq; who had served the Office of Lord Mayor before, were returned by the Livery, and the Court of Aldermen again set aside Sir Robert Godschall by a Majority of one, and made Choice of Mr. Alderman Parsons, who was accordingly at the usual Time sworn in; but he dying the March following, Mr. Alderman Lambert was chose for the remaining Part of the Year.

Sir Chaloner Ogle sailed with the Fleet and Transports towards the End of October, in order to join Vice-Admiral Vernon. He arrived at St. Christophers the latter End of December, where Lord Cathcart Commander in Chief of the Land Forces, died after some Days Illness, and the Command devolved upon Brigadier General Wentworth. They arrived at Port-Royal, and joined Admiral Vernon, in January following.

His Majesty arrived at St. James's from Hanover, on the 13th of October.

Her Serene Highness Magdalen Augusta of Anhalt Zerbst, Duchess Dowager of Saxe-Gotha, Mother to her Royal Highness the Princess of Wales, died some Time before.

A general Embargo was laid on all Shipping in the Ports of Ireland, as the only Expedient to prevent the Exportation of the Beef of that Country to foreign Parts.

George Bubb Doddington, Esq; resigned his Place of one of the Commissioners of the Treasury.

About this Time died Sir Robert Corbet, Bart. one of the Commissioners of the Customs: The Right Honourable Pryce Lord Viscount Hereford, the first Viscount of Great-Britain: And Sir William Williams, Bart. Father of the present Sir Watkin William Wynn, Bart.

An Accident of the utmost Importance to the Affairs of Europe happened on the 9th of October, which was the Death of his Imperial Majesty; whereupon his eldest Daughter, Maria Theresia Walpurga (married to the Duke of Lorain and Tuscany) was proclaimed Queen of Hungary and Bohemia, Princess of Transilvania, Archduchess of Austria, and universal Successor to all the Hereditary Dominions of the House of Austria, in pursuance of the Pragmatick Sanction. But her Title to some of these Dominions is disputed by some of the Princes of the Empire, which has produced a War in that Part of Europe.

On the 17th of the same Month the Czarina departed this Life, having by her Will named the young Prince Ivan or John, Son of Duke Anthony Ulrick of Brunswick by the Princess Anne of Meclenberg (who was but three Months old) her Successor in the Empire, and appointed the Duke of Courland to be Regent; but he was soon turned out, and the Regency conferred on the Princess Anne, the young Czar's Mother. And since that, a more extraordinary Revolution has happened, the young Czar being depos'd, and the Princess Elizabeth placed upon the Russian Throne.

The Parliament met on Nov. 18, and his Majesty opened the Session with a most gracious Speech. This was the last Session of this Parliament. His Majesty prorogued it on the 25th of April following, following, and three Days after it was dissolved by Proclamation.

In Novemb. died Sir John Comyns, Knight, Lord Chief Baron of the Exchequer; whereupon Mr. Justice Probyn was made Lord Chief Baron, Mr. Baron Wright one of the Judges of the King's Bench, and Sir Thomas Abney one of the Barons of the Exchequer.

In December died the Right Honourable Richard Boyle, Viscount Shannon, Field Marshal of all his Majesty's Forces, and General and Commander in Chief of his Majefty's Forces in Ireland: Also the Reverend Dr. Daniel Waterland, Archdeacon of Middlesex, a famous Polemical Divine.

On the 30th Day of the said Month, her Royal Highness the Princess of Wales was happily delivered of another Princess, who was soon after named Elizabeth Carolina. We are glad to conclude the Period we proposed to ourselves to go through, with this new Accession to the Family of our Most Gracious SOVEREIGN, whom GOD long preserve.

F I N I S.

A N

ALPHABETICAL INDEX

OF THE Principal Matters.

A.

A B B O T (George) A. B. of Canterbury, by Accident killed a Man 188, suspended 190
Adminius, a King of the Britains, 5
Agincourt, the great Battle there 113
Agbrim Battle 379
Albion, why England so call'd 2
St. Alban beheaded 16, canonized 31
Almanza Battle 481
Almenara Battle 501
Ambrosius, a British Prince 24
Ambresbury, by whom built 25
Queen Anne born 431, crowned 434, gives an Hundred thousand Pounds of her own Revenue to the Service of the War, ibid. gives the Revenue of her First-Fruits to the poorer Clergy 454, declares War against France 455, obtains great Victories over the French at Blenheim 458, at Tirlmont 467, at Ramellies 472, at Oudenard
490, at Blaregnies 497, her Troops take Gibraltar 461, and Barcelona 468, raise the Siege of Barcelona 473, she makes Peace
531, dies 539
Alfred, King 34, distressed by the Danes, ibid. defeats them 35, his Character, ibid. founded Oxford University. 36

Lady Arabella committed to the Tower 186, her Death, ibid.
Armorica, assigned to the British Soldiers by Constantine 22
Argyll (Earl) invades Scotland 303, and heads a Rebellion there, ibid.
the History of it 305, &c. taken and executed 307
Arthur, an heroick British Prince 25
Arviragus, a King of the Britains 5 Assassination-Plot, against K. Wil- liam 371
Atterbury, Dr. Francis, Bishop of Rocheſter, banish'd 570
Aurelius Conanus, a British Prince 25
Auſin the Monk came hither from Rome 27, founded the Church at Canterbury 28, and converted King Ethelbert ibid.

B.

B Acon (Sir Francis) imprisoned 187 Bangor Monastery, Monks of it slain by Ethelfrid 26
Bantry-Bay Sea-Fight 363
Bank of England established 390
Baronets first made 185
Barton (Elizabeth) an Impoſtor 154
Bath-Waters, discover'd by Julius
Cæſar 6
Bath, Knights of, the Order revived 575
Battle-Abby, built by William the Conqueror 53
Becket, Archbishop of Canterbury,
the

I N D E X.

the Dispute between the King and him 63, is killed	64
Benbow , Admiral, his Actions in America	446
Belloni's Letter burnt	619
Bermudas , planted by the English	188
Bishops Sees establish'd in England	10
Blackfriars , King Henry VIII's Palace	150
Blake , Admiral, successful against the Dutch 226, performs brave Actions at Tunis 229, and Santa Cruz	231
Blenheim , Battle there	458
Blarignies Battle	497
Boadicea , Queen of Britain	5
Booth (Sir George) declares for a free Parliament 236, defeated ibid.
Bothwell Bridge , Scots Rebels defeated there	306
Boyne Battle	372
Bridewell Hospital founded	165
Bristol , made a Bishoprick	159
Britain , why England so called	2
Britains Ancient, painted themselves 2, derived from the Gauls , ibid. used Polygamy 3, their Religion, ibid. their Merchandize, Coin, Armour	3, 4
Brute , Story of him fabulous	2
Bubbles , their Rise and downfall	564
Buckingham (Duke of) stabbed at Portsmouth	192
Bullen (Anne) married to K. Henry VIII. 155. accused of Incest and Adultery ibid. beheaded, ibid. her last Speech	ibid.

C.

C adwallo , an Heroick British Prince 26, his Statue set up on Ludgate ,	ibid.
Cadwalador , last British King, 26, took the Habit of Religion, and died at Rome ,	ibid.
Cadwan , a British Prince	26
Cade (Jack) a Rebel	122
Caer-Legion , Chester	26
Caer-leon , Glamorgan	2
Calais , taken by the English	99.
lost	170

Cambridge University, and the several Colleges thereof, by whom founded	37
Canute the Dane , King of England 45, assembled the Peers at Oxford , and made good Laws, ibid. goes to Rome , ibid. being flattered, reproved the Parasites by sitting on the Sea-Shore, and commanding the Waters to keep back, ibid. was liberal to the Church	46
Capel (Lord) beheaded	221
Caroline , Queen, appointed Regent, 609. Her Death	634
Cassibelan , a King of Trinobantes	5
Charitable Corporation Affair, 617,	618
Charles I. sent to Spain to marry the Infanta 187, returns, 188, married 189, crowned 190, the Commons in Parliament complain of Grievances, ibid. accuse D. of Buckingham , ibid. the Parliament meet and complain of Grievances 191, the King grants Redress 192, Parliament meet and vote against Tonnage and Poundage, ibid. dissolved, 193. Projects for raising Money, ibid. the King crowned in Scotland , ibid. an Act made there concerning Religion, which displeases, 194. Book of Sports published, ibid. Ship Money levied, ibid. some refuse to pay it, ibid. Tumults in Scotland upon reading the Liturgy, ibid. the Scots Covenant 195, the Liturgy revoked, ibid. the Covenanters arm against the King, ibid. the King raises an Army and marches against them, ibid. Peace, ibid. disbands his Army, ibid. Parliament of England meet, ibid. dissolved, ibid. Scots defeat the King's Forces, 196. Treaty with the Scots , ibid. The long Parliament began, ibid. the King passes the Bill of Attainder against the Earl of Stratford

I N D E X.

ford 198, and relinquishes Tunnage and Poundage ibid. Massacre in Ireland, ibid. the Commons remonstrate against Bishops,
&c. ibid. the King's Answer 199, Rabble insolent at Westminster and Whitehall, ibid. the King accused five Members of the Commons of High Treason, ib.
the House vote against it, ibid.
The King returns into the North,
200, is denied Entrance into Hull, 201, King and Parliament prepare for War, ibid. Parliament send 19 Propositions to the King, ibid. the King sets up his Standard, 202, proposes a Treaty to the Parliament, ibid. their Answer, ibid. Parliament vote against Peace, 203, first Action, ibid.
Edgehill Fight, ibid. the King enters Oxford, ibid. Parliament invite the Scots, ibid. Propositions to the King, ibid. the Queen brings Supplies from Holland 204, Sir William Waller defeated, ibid.
Bristol and Exeter yielded, ibid.
Gloucester besieged, ibid. the Covenant taken by the Parliament 205, Waller defeated again, ibid.
Marston Moor Fight, 206, New- bury Fight, ibid. Treaty at Ux- bridge, ibid. Parliament's Demands, ibid. Naseby Fight, 207, Bridgewater and Bath yielded to Fairfax, ibid. Parliament Forces gain Ground, 208, the King goes to the Scots Camp, ibid. Ox- ford surrendered, ibid. Scots tender the Covenant to the King, ibid. his Dispute with Henderson, 209, Scots sell the King to the Parliament, ibid. Nineteen Propositions to the King, ibid. Parliament divides into Presbyterian and Independent Parties; ibid. the Army get the King into their Possession 210, the Parliament require them to deliver him to their Commissioners, ibid. the Army article against some Members, ibid. the Army comes to London and seize the Tower, ibid.

Propositions to the King at Hampton-Court, ibid. Arbitrators of the Army appointed, ibid. the King escapes from Hampton-
Court, and goes to the Isle of Wight, ibid. his Concessions to the Parliament, ibid. Parliament vote more Addresses to the King, 212, Petitions to the Parliament for a Treaty, ibid. Kentish Men take up Arms, ibid. defeated, ibid.
Lord Capel, Lord Goring, and other Royalists, get into Colche- ster, ibid. the Navy fall off, ibid.
Earl of Holland with a Party for the King, fight at Kingston, ibid.
the Scots send an Army in the King's Behalf, ibid. which is defeated by Cromwell, ibid. Col- chester yielded, 213, the Parliament vote a Treaty, ibid. and that the King's Concessions were Grounds for a Peace, ibid. the Army carry the King to Hurst Castle, ibid. the Army purge the House, ibid. vote no Address to the King, ibid. the Rump resolve to try the King, ibid. the King brought before the High Court of Justice, 214, denies their Authority, and refuses to plead, ibid.
Sentence pronounced against him,
215, brought to Execution, 216.
His Speech on the Scaffold, ibid.
beheaded, 219, his Character, ib.
Wife and Issue, ibid.

Charles II. born, 193, the Rump declare against his Succession, 220, and turn the Government into a Commonwealth, ibid. proclaim'd in Ireland by the Marquis of Or- mond, ibid. and in Scotland, ibid.
comes over to Scotland, 223, crowned there, 224, marches into England, 225, enters Worcester, ibid. is surrounded by the Enemy, ibid. Worcester Fight, ibid. the King

I N D E X.

- King escapes to France 226, voted lawful King by the English Parliament 240, proclaimed at London, ibid. arrives in England 241, crowned 243, married 250, makes War against Holland 246, a great Plague in London, ibid. great Victory gained over the Dutch, ibid. second Engagement with the Dutch 249, the great Fire in London 247, War declared against Denmark 248, Dutch come up to Chatham 249, Peace with the Dutch, ibid. the second Dutch War 253, South-wold-Bay Fight, in which the Earl of Sandwich is killed, ibid. Another Engagement 255, and another, ibid. Another in which the French stood still, ibid. Peace with the Dutch 256, Preparations for War against France 259, Popish Plot discovered 266, Rye House Conspiracy discovered 281, The King's Death 299, his Wife, ibid. Burial ibid.
- Charles III.* King of Spain, his Visit to Queen Anne at Windſor 455
- Chaucer* the Poet lived 106
- Chelred*, King of Mercia 30
- Cheſter* made a Biſhoprick 159
- Chelwin*, a Saxon King 27
- Cherdict*, firſt King of the Weſt-Saxons 27
- Chicheſter*, Biſhop's See, tranſlated thither from Selfey 56
- Chriſtianity* firſt profeſſed in Britain 10
- Chriſt's* Hoſpital founded 165
- Cingetorix*, King in Kent 5
- Circuits* in England for adminiſtring Juſtice eſtabliſhed 67
- Carwdb* Offa in Wales, a Ditch made by King Offa 31
- St. Clement* Danes, why ſo called 46
- Cogidunus*, a King of the Britains 5
- Con* reformed 395
- Comius*, King of the Attrebatii 5
- Conſtantine* the Great, born in Britain 17, Fights againſt the Caledonians and Picts ibid.
- Conſtantine*, a Britiſh Prince 25
- Convention*, Abſtract of it, and Complaints againſt it 638
- Cramer*, Archbiſhop of Canterbury, writes againſt the Pope's pretended Authority 154, ſent to Rome by King Henry to juſtify it, ibid. burnt in Q. Mary's Time 171
- Cromwell* Earl of Effex raiſed 155, procures a Law for reading the Creed, &c. in English 156
- Cromwell*, vide Oliver.
- Crowland* Abby founded 31
- Croſs*, Charing-croſs, and the other Croſſes, when and why erected 89
- Cunobeline*, King of the Trinobantes 5
- Curcey*, Earl of Ulſter, his extraordinary Strength 72
- Czar* of Muſcovy comes to England 417
- ## D
- Danes* invade England, but repulſed by Offa 31, invade it again, and commit great Ravage 34, beaten by King Alfred, ibid. lord it very inſolently over the English 34, for which they are maſſacred ibid.
- Darien*, Scotch Settlement there 421, 422
- Defender of the Faith*, that Title given to Henry VIII. by the Pope 150
- Denmark* (George Prince of) married to the Lady Anne 285, dies 493
- Derwent-water* (James Earl of) beheaded 552
- Dooms-Day* Book, what 52
- Drake's* Voyage round the World 174
- Drink*, why Engliſhmen drink to one another 47
- Druids*, Priests of the Ancient Britains 3
- Dumblain* Battle 549
- Dundee* (Lord) killed in Battle 359
- ## E
- E After*, Difference about the Time of obſerving it 28
- Eaſt-*

I N D E X.

East-Angles, a Kingdom of the Heptarchy 24
East-Saxons, a Kingdom of the Heptarchy 24
East India Trade, Bribes to obtain a Charter 394, settled by Act of Parliament 413
Eaton College founded 126
Eclipse, a very remarkable one 546
Edgar, King 40, imposed a Tribute of 300 Wolves Heads yearly on the Prince of Wales 41, his Navy very large, ibid. a just Prince, ib. but lascivious ibid.
Edgar Atheling, Grandson to Ironside 48, designed to be made King at Harold's Death 50
Edge-Hill Fight 203
Edmund, King 39, obtains a Victory over the Danes ibid.
Edmund Ironside, King 43, Canute the Dane made King at Southampton, ibid. Edmund fights the Danes at Penham, ibid. and at Shoreston, ibid. at Brentwood 44, at Otteford, ibid. at Asfodon, ibid. By the Treachery of Edrick the Danes get the Victory, ibid. fights singly with Canute, and agrees to divide the Kingdom with him, ibid. is murdered by Edrick ibid.
Edred, King 39, very religious, ibid.
Edward the Elder, King, obtains a great Victory over the Danes 37
Edward the Martyr, King 42, Controversy betwixt married Priests and Monks in his time, ib. killed by the Treachery of Elfred, ib.
Edward the Confessor, King 47, remitted the Tax called Dane Gelt, ibid. selected the best Laws of his Predecessors, and established them, ibid. caused his Mother to pass the fiery Trial 48, very pious, ibid. the first that cured the King's Evil by Touch ibid.
Edward I. behaved himself gallantly in the Holy War 85, crowned ibid. subdues the Welch, and makes his Son their Prince, ibid.

redresses Grievances, ibid. gives the Crown of Scotland to John Baliol, ibid. but Baliol combining against Edward, is invaded by Edward, vanquished and taken Prisoner 86, The Nobles of Scotland swear to King Edward, ib. their Coronation Chair brought to England, ibid. in the King's Absence the Scots beat the English, ibid. King Edward enters Scotland, and obtains a great Victory, ib. d. is inhibited by the Pope 87, flights it, ibid. sends to Rome to justify himself, ibid. the Pope requires the King to stand to his Award, ibid. which he refuses by Advice of his Peers, ibid. a List of their Names, ibid. the King's Death 89, his Wives and Issue, ibid.

Edward II. imprisons W. Langton, Bishop of Chester 90, marries the Daughter of the King of France, and brings back Gaveston, ibid. permits Gaveston to lord it over the Nobles, ibid. the Parliament banish him, ibid. the King recalls him, ibid. he consumes the King's Treasure 91, is banished again, ibid. but returning, the Lords take him Prisoner, and kill him, ibid. The Scots drive the English out, ibid. The King makes the Spencers his Favourites 92, who are very insolent, ibid. The Barons cause them to be banished, ibid. a Battle between the King and the Barons, wherein many of the Lords are killed, ib. The Spencers Insolence causes the War to renew, 93. The Queen takes Part with the Barons, ibid. Spencer the Elder beheaded, ibid. the King deserted, retires to Wales, ibid. taken and imprisoned, ibid. the younger Spencer hanged, ibid. the King resigns the Crown to his Son, ibid. his Wife and Issue 94, his Death, ibid.
Edward

I N D E X.

Edward III. crown'd 94, makes Peace with the Scots 95. By the Death of Charles King of France, that Crown descends to him, ibid. The Queen Mother and Mortimer procure the Death of the King's Uncle, ibid. The Queen's Dowry taken from her 96, and Mortimer hang'd, ibid. King Edward invades Scotland, and conquers, ib. his Reasons for invading France, ibid. enters France with a great Army 97, obtains a Victory over the French at Sea, ibid. challenges the French King, ibid. takes Caen, and marches almost to the Walls of Paris, 98, a bloody Battle at Cressy, ibid. wherein the Black Prince commands, and obtains a great Victory, ibid. besieges Calais, ibid. takes it 99, Scots invade England, are beaten, and their King taken Prisoner, ibid. Battle near Bourdeaux, wherein the French are beaten, and their King taken Prisoner 100, whom the Black Prince brings to London, ibid. King Edward proceeds against the Scots, ibid. That King surrenders his Crown to him, ibid. Peace with France, ibid. The Black Prince dies, ibid. The King's Death 101, his Wife and Issue, ibid.

Edward IV. Son to Richard, Duke of York, maintains the Quarrel against Henry VI. 125. proclaim'd King at London, ibid. crown'd 126, obtains two Victories over King Henry, ibid. marries against the Mind of his Friends, ibid. taken Prisoner by Warwick 127, makes his Escape 128, a bloody Battle, ibid. Warwick forced to fly, but returns and gets a great Army, ibid. Edward forced beyond Sea 128, declared a Traitor in Parliament, ibid. arrives again in England 129, comes to London, and again imprisons Henry, ibid. gains a Victory with Warwick's Death 129. another Battle 130, the Duke of Clarence put to Death, ibid. King Edward's Death 131, his Character, ibid. used to sit in the Courts of Justice ib. his Death, Wife, and Issue 132. Edward V. but 12 Years old at his Father's Death, was committed to the Government of Sir A. Woodville 132, but taken from him by the working of the Duke of Gloucester, ibid. his Mother with her other Sons retire into Sanctuary 133, she is prevailed on to part with her Son 134, Preparation for the King's Coronation, ibid. Gloucester causes him and his Brother to be declared Bastards 135, murder'd in the Tower 136, the miserable Ends of his Murderers 137.

Edward VI. born 160, crowned, ibid. Battle between the Scots and English 161, a Peace, ibid. A Rebellion occasion'd by pulling down Images, &c. the Rebels demanded Restitution of the Masses, &c. ibid. the King's Answer, ibid. routed 161, a Miller's Man hang'd for his Master 162, another Rebellion headed by Kett the Tanner 163, defeated, ibid. Another Disturbance, ibid. Admiral Seymour beheaded, ibid. The Scots and the French gain Ground, ibid. The Lord Protector beheaded 164, the King is prevailed with to disinherit his Sisters, and appoint the Lady Jane Grey to succeed, ibid. The King's Death 165, his Character, ibid.

Edwin the Great, King of Northumberland 29, converted to Christianity; ibid.

Edwy, King 40, very irreligious ibid. banishes St. Dunstan, ibid.

Egbert, the first Saxon Monarch 33, ibid.

Egfrid, King of Mercia, ibid. Elfric, a learned Abbot, his Judgment concerning the Real Presence, ibid.

Queen

I N D E X.

- Queen Elizabeth born 155, committed to the Tower by Queen Mary 169, crowned 172, restores the Reformation, ibid. demands Calais of the French, ibid. assists the Protestants in France, ibid. A Rebellion, but quickly suppressed 173, Pope Pius's Bull against her, ibid. The Spaniard assists the Irish Rebels 173, the Queen assists the Hollanders against the Spaniards, ibid. The Queen of Scots beheaded 175, Ti. bury Camp, ibid. The Spanish Armado arrives upon the English Coast 176, routed by the English ibid. their Loss 177, the Queen sends Assistance to the Portuguese against the Spaniards, ibid. Cadix taken by the Earl of Essex, ibid. An Expedition to the Azores under Essex 178, Patrick Cullen and others attempt to kill the Queen, ibid. Essex sent against the Irish, ibid. Lord Montjoy sent against the Irish 179, is successful, ibid. The Spaniard assists the Irish, ibid. but forced to leave them, ibid. they submit, ibid. Essex, and others, beheaded and hanged 180, the Queen's Death, ibid. her Character, ibid.
- Ella*, first King of the South-Saxons 27
- Emma*, Mother to Edward the Confessor, underwent the Tryal of Ordeal, 48
- Emperor's Death, 646
- Empson* and Dudley oppress the Subjects in wresting Money from them for Henry VII. 147, beheaded by Henry VIII. 148
- England*, why so called 2, Dimensions of it, ibid. how divided in the Time of the Romans, ibid. divided into Parishes 30, divided into Shires and Hundreds 35
- Essex*, Earl, successful against the Spaniards at Cadix 177, sent against the Irish 178, parlies with Tyrone, ibid. The Queen is displeased with him 179, comes home, and is confined, ibid. gathers his Friends, and confines those the Queen sent to him, ib. goes in a tumultuous Manner into London, ibid. fortifies his House, ibid. taken Prisoner, ibid. beheaded, ibid.
- Essex* (Robert) Earl, General of the Parliament Army against King Charles I. 203
- Ethelbald*, King of Mercia 31
- Ethelbald* or Ethelwald, Saxon Monarch 33
- Ethelbert*, a Saxon King 27, married a Christian, and permitted the Gospel to be preached by Austin 28
- Ethelbert*, King of England, disquieted by the Danes all his Time 33
- Etheldred*, King of Mercia 30
- Ethelred*, disturbed by the Danes 34, and killed by them in Battle, ib.
- Ethelred*, King 43, Danes make great Spoil in his Time, ibid. to whom he paid Tribute, ib. sends out a Command secretly to every City to massacre them ibid.
- Ethelstan*, King 38, by the evil Suggestion of his Cupbearer, put his Brother to Death, ibid. for which he did seven Years Penance, ibid. and executed the Cup-bearer, ibid. is victorious against the Dane, Scots, and Welsh, ibid. presented with Reliques and rich Gifts by the Emperor, King of France, and King of Norway, ibid. enriched many Abbies and Cities ibid.
- Ethelwolph*, Saxon Monarch 33, married the Daughter of the Emperor Charles the Bald ibid.
- Eugene*, Prince, his Death 629
- Excise* Scheme 621
- Exeter*, Henry, Duke of, constrained to live in Exile, and reduced to such Necessity that he begged Alms 132
- F.
- F Airfax made General of the Parliament Army 207
- Fitzwick*, Sir John, attainted by Parliament,

I N D E X.

liament, and executed 407
Fifth Monarchists rebel, 246
Fisher, Bishop of Rochester, beheaded for denying the Supremacy 158
Flodden Field Battle 149
Frost, a great one, 642

G.

Garter, the Order of the Garter instituted 101
Gavestone, Favourite to Edward II.
 causes great Disturbances 90
George I. crowned 543, his Progress to the West of England 567, ap-pointeth Professors of Modern History and Languages at Ox- ford and Cambridge 573, his Letter to the Czarina 585, his Death 596
George II. his Accession 597. Dines at Guildhall 600. Visits Cam- bridge 604. His Answer about the Spanish Depredations 636,
 He orders Reprisals against Spain,
 639. And declares War 640
Gertrudenburg Treaty 500
Gibraltar taken by the English 461
Glastenbury Abby built 31
Glenshill Battle 562
Gloucester made a Bishoprick 115
Gloucester, William, Duke of, born 365, installed Knight of the Garter 375, dies 423
Goals, State of, enquired into 607,
Godfrey, Sir Edm. Bury murdered 267
Goodwin, Earl of Kent, betrayed Alfred to Harold 46, presented a rich Ship to Hardicanute, ibid.
 troubled King Edward 47, was choaked in declaring himself innocent of Alfred's Death 48
Goodwin-Sands, why so called 56
Gormon, a Danish King, baptized 35
Granville hanged for attempting the Murder of King William 385
Grey, Lady Jane, proclaimed
 Queen 166
Guns, when first used in England 110
Guy, Earl of Warwick, lived 39

H.

Hadrian the Roman Emperor came into Britain, and built a Wall in the North Hague, Treaty there

Hamilton, Duke, beheaded
Hampton Court built Hanover, Duke of, created Elector 385, Succession settled upon the Family
Hanover Treaty
Hardicanute, Danish King 46, imposed Taxes upon the English ibid. died suddenly Harold, Danish King to England 46, he imprisoned Alfred, ibid. and oppresses the English ibid.
Harold, Son of Earl Goodwin, usurps
 the Crown 48, eases the People Taxes, and is affable 49, promises
William Duke of Normandy the Crown, ib. who upon his refusing it him invades England, ib. The King of Denmark invades Eng- land, ibid. who is defeated and slain, ibid. The Battle between Harold and William 50, Harold defeated and slain, ibid.
Hengist and Horsa, Saxons, come over to England 23, and plant themselves here, ibid. Kings of Kent, ibid.
Henry, Son of William the Conqueror crowned King of England 57, gives many Liberties to the People, ibid. and revives the Laws of Edward the Confessor, ibid. marries the Niece of Edgar Atheling, ibid. disturbed by the Welsh, ibid.
 imposes heavy Taxes 58, assembles the States in Parliament, ib.
 his Son lost at Sea, ibid. the Nobility swear Fealty to his Daughter Maud, ibid. his Death, ibid.
 his Wife and Issue, ibid.
Henry II. crowned 62, Hugh de Mor- timer rebels against him, ib. d. the King makes War upon the Welsh, ibid. crowned three times, ibid.
 very much disturbed by Becket,
 Archbishop of Canterbury 63,
 Does Penance for Becket's Death
 65, causes his Son to be crowned,
ibid.

I N D E X.

ibid. who conspires against him, ibid. his Son's Death 66, his other Sons rebel in Normandy, ibid.
 his Death, ibid. his Wife and Issue ibid.

Henry III. crowned 78, the Earl of Pembroke, his Guardian, defeats Lewis, ibid. and forces him to depart, ibid. King Henry raises Taxes, and revokes the Charter of Liberties 79, which causes Discontents, ibid. puts Strangers into Places of Trust 80, wherewith the Peers are discontented, and confederate against him, ib.
 and refuse to appear in Parliament, till they be removed, ibid.
 He destroys their Lands, ibid.
 The Lords commit Hostilities, ibid. He makes Peace with the Lords, and turns out the Strangers, ibid. goes over to recover Poitou, ibid. levies Taxes, and spends profusely 81, reduced to Penury, ibid. The Parliament grant him Aid, and he confirms Magna Charta, ibid. but breaks it again, ibid. His Brother Richard made King of the Romans, ibid. the King profuse again, &c. ibid. The Lords come armed to the Parliament. and force him to grant their Demands, ibid. appoint a new Form of Government, ibid. War betwixt the King and Barons 82, the King taken Prisoner 83, is carried about by Mountford, ib. released, ibid. His Death, ibid. His Wife and Issue ibid.

Henry, Duke of Lancaster, invades
England against Richard II. 105, is assisted by great Numbers, ibid.
Richard submits, and he is crowned 107, his Proceedings disliked, ibid. A Conspiracy against him, ibid. Endeavours made to release King Richard, ibid. One sets up to personate him, ibid. King Henry marches with an Army into Scotland, and obtains a Victory 108. The Piercies with several Lords conspire against him,

 and rebel, ibid. but defeated, ibid.
 His Death 109, Wives and Issue, ib. Strange Apparitions, ib.
 Henry V. very extravagant in his Youth 110, his Submission to his Father, ibid. when King acts very wisely 111, claims the Crown of France, ibid. Being derided, he prepares for War 112. The French offer Peace, ibid. refused, ibid. King Henry enters France, ibid. The French Army, being very great, assure themselves of Victory 113. King Henry offers Peace, ibid. refused, ibid. The Battle of Agincourt, ibid. he gains the Victory 114, with great Slaughter of the Enemy, ib. takes several Cities in France 115, treats of Peace 116, but not agreed prosecutes the War, ibid.
 Peace, wherein it was agreed, that King Henry should succeed to the Crown, and the Dauphin
 disinherited, ibid. marries the K.
 of France's Daughter, and is declared Regent 117, goes to Paris, where, in Parliament, the Articles are ratified and sworn to by the Nobles, ibid. leaves the Duke of Clarence his Lieutenant, and comes to England, ib. The Dauphin grows strong, and kills the Duke of Clarence, ibid. The King returns to France, ibid.
 keeps his Court at the Louvre, ibid. His Death 118, Issue and Character ibid.

Henry VI. crown'd when he was but 8 Months old 118, a Prediction concerning him 117, a Battle in France 119, the English Victors, ibid. besiege Orleans, ibid. are forced thence 120. Henry crowned King of France in Paris, ibid. The English Interest declines in France, ibid. Paris
 lost,

I N D E X.

lost, ibid. The King marries 121. The Queen rules, to the Discontent of the Nation, ibid. The French gain Ground 122. The Duke of Suffolk prosecuted by the Yorkists, ibid. he is banished and killed, ibid. Rebellion headed by Jack Cade, ibid. the Duke of York takes up Arms 123, the King marches against him, ibid. a Reconciliation, ibid. Talbot, Earl of Shrewsbury, sent with an Army into France, ibid. is successful, but slain, ibid. War between the Families of York and Lancaster, ibid. Battle at St. Albans, ibid. the King wounded and taken Prisoner, ibid. The Duke of York rules all 124. Another Battle, ibid. Battle at Northampton, where King Henry's Forces are utterly vanquished, ibid. The D. of York claims the Crown, ibid. In Parliament it is agreed that after K. Henry's Death he should succeed 125. The Queen with an Army opposes the Duke of York, ibid. a Battle between them, ibid. The Queen overcomes, and York is slain, ibid. Another Battle, ibid. Another, ibid. King Henry's Wife and Issue, ibid. his Character, ibid. He is imprisoned 126, proclaimed King again 128, released after nine Years Imprisonment, and received King 129, again imprisoned, ibid. His Son Edward murdered 130, his Death, ibid.

Henry, Earl of Richmond, fled into France from Richard III. 138, invades England against him 139, is much assisted, ibid. conquers Richard in Battle 140, crowned King at Westminster 141, marries the Daughter of Edward IV. 142, some Disturbances, ibid. Lambert Symnell, an Impostor, set up, ibid. his Party defeated, and he taken Prisoner, ibid. War began against France 143, an honourable Peace made, ibid. Perkin Warbeck set up, ibid. his Party defeated, ibid. A Tumult upon gathering a Tax 144, Perkin appears again 146, is taken Prisoner and hanged, ibid. The King applies himself to amassing Wealth 147, Empson and Dudley his Instruments therein, ibid. who oppress the Subject, ibid. The King in his Sickness ordered the Money to be restored, ibid. His Death, ibid. His Wife and Issue, ibid. The great Sum he left at his Death 148

Henry VIII. crowned 148, married his Brother's Widow, ibid. punishes Empson and Dudley, ibid. sends into France to demand Normandy, &c. ibid. goes over and besieges Terouanne 149. The Emperor Maximilian receives his Pay, ibid. The Battle of Spurs, ibid. He besieges Tournay, and takes it, ibid. The Earl of Surry marches against the Scots, ibid. Flodden Fight, ibid. The King of Scots slain, and many of the Nobility, ibid. Peace between K. Henry and the French, ibid. Tournay delivered back to the French, ibid. The Emperor Charles V. comes to London 150, War with France again, ibid. Several Castles taken, ibid. Peace with the Scots, ibid. A Rebellion in Ireland, ibid. The King questions the Lawfulness of his Marriage 151, calls in Question the Pope's Authority 154, his Marriage dissolved, ibid. marries Anne Bullen 155, marries Jane Seymour, ibid. A Commotion headed by a Monk 156. Another, ibid. suppress'd 157. Monasteries suppress'd, ibid. A Conspiracy to raise Cardinal Pool to the Crown, for which the Lord

Montacute

I N D E X.

Montacute and Sir Edward Neville are beheaded, ibid. Marries Anne of Cleve, ibid. dislikes her, ibid. Marries Katharine Howard, ibid. she is beheaded 158, The King's Supremacy, and the Six Articles against Protestants ordered to be subscribed to, ibid. Bishop Fisher and Sir Thomas Moor put to Death, ibid. and many Protestants, ibid. Queen Katharine Parr's Life designed against 159. A Match concluded between Prince Edward and the Princess of Scotland, ibid. The King makes War upon the French, ibid. wins Bulloign, ibid. His Death, ibid. His Will, ibid. His Wives and Issue, ibid. Bishopricks and Cathedral Churches erected by him, ibid.
Heptarchy, Saxon 23
Hereford built 38
La Hogue, Sea Victory there 383
Honorius, Archbishop of Canterbury, first divided England into Parishes 30
Holland, Earl, beheaded 225
Holland, War against Holland by the Rump 231, by King Charles II. 151, 258
Hothams beheaded 206
Hottide or Hoxtide, why so called 47
Humphry, Duke of Gloucester, seized and imprisoned 121, his Death, ibid. Character, ibid.

J.

Jamaica in the West-Indies taken by the English 234
James I. comes to England 182, a Conspiracy by Brook, Cobham, &c. 182, the King crowned, ib. Disputation between the Church and Puritans, ibid. Peace with Spain, ibid. The Gunpowder Plot, ibid. how discovered 184, Guy Fawkes taken, ibid. The Conspirators executed, ibid. Insurrections, ibid. Prince Henry's Death 185. The Princess Eliza- beth married to the Elector Palatine, ibid. Queen Anne's Death 187. The King's Death 188. His Wife and Issue, ibid.

James II. crowned 301, his first Speech to the Parliament 303, invaded by Argyll in Scotland 304, and Monmouth in England 308, puts unqualified Officers into his Army 312, which is re-sented by the Parliament 313, his Speech to them thereupon, ibid. is declared to have Power of dispensing with Laws 317, erects a Court for inspecting Ecclesiastical Affairs 318, which suspends the Bishop of London, ibid. The Occasion of it, ibid. The King grants Liberty of Conscience in Scotland 320, and in England 321, Popish Chapels and Monasteries erected 322, Petres, a Jesuit, made Privy-Counsellor, ibid. The Vice-Chancellor of Cambridge suspended by the Ecclesiastical Court 323, the Reason of it 324, The Fellows of Magdalen College, Oxon, expelled 325, their Case, ibid. The Declaration for Liberty of Conscience renewed, and ordered to be read in Churches 327, Seven Bishops petition against it, ibid. and are committed to the Tower, and try'd, but acquitted 329. Regulations in all Corporations 330. Bishop of London's Suspension taken off 331. City Charter restored, ib. Ecclesiastical Commission dissolved 332. The King receives Advice of the Prince of Orange's Landing 334, goes down to Salisbury to his Army 341, is left by several of the Nobility, ibid. returns to London, ibid. publishes a Proclamation to call a Parliament, ibid. sends Commissioners to treat with the Prince 342, stops the Writs for Elections 343, orders the Earl of Faversham to disband

I N D E X.

- disband the Army, ibid. goes privately away in order to leave the Kingdom, ibid. upon which the Nobility meet, and apply to the Prince of Orange, ibid. is stopt in his Voyage, and comes to Feverham 344, comes back to London 346. A strange Alarm in the Night of Irish, &c. ibid. The King returns to Rocheſter, ibid. from whence he went privately for France, ibid. goes over from France to Ireland 360, holds a Parliament there 361, returns to France 373, attempts to invade England 382, dies 428
- Images* taken out of the Churches 161, which cauſes Diſturbances, ibid.
- Indian* Chiefs 612
- Joan of Arke*, a famous French Virago 119, taken by the Engliſh and burnt 120
- John* admitted King, notwithstanding the Right of Arthur 71. The Lords ſwear conditional Fealty to him, ibid. troubled by the King of France in Behalf of Arthur, ibid. by the Scots, ibid. ſlighted by the Peers, ibid. overthrows Arthur in Battle, ibid. Arthur's Death, ibid. Cited by the King of France to be tried for Murder, ibid. not appearing, is condemned, ibid. loſes Towns, ibid. puniſhes the Lords for reſuſing to attend him in the War 72, threatens to throw off the Pope's Authority 73. The Kingdom interdicted, ibid. The Clergy diſlike the Pope's Proceedings, ibid. The King anathematized, ibid. His Subjects abſolved of their Allegiance, ibid. The Pope decrees that he be depoſed, and excites the King of France againſt him 74. He ſubmits to the Pope, and ſurrenders his Crown to the Nuncio, ibid. The Parliament enacts againſt it 75. The Interdict taken off, ibid. The King goes over to War againſt the French, ibid. The Barons combine again him, ibid. He returns, ibid. The Barons demand their ancient Liberties, ibid. aſſemble an Army, and grow powerful, ibid. The King grants their Request, ibid. He gets Aſſiſtance againſt the Barons 76, is victorious, ibid. The Barons invite the Dauphin to take the Engliſh Crown, ibid. who comes over and is joined by the Barons, ibid. They ſwear Fealty to him, ibid. The King with an Army marching over the Waſhes, his Carriage and Proviſions are loſt 77. The Barons have Remorſe for what they have done, and ſend ſubmiſſive Letters to the King, ibid. His Death, ibid. His Wife and Iſſue, ibid. He ſettled the Government of Corporations, ibid.
- John of Gaunt*, Duke of Lancaster, Son to Edward III. 101. hated by the People 102, who rebel becauſe of him, ibid. The Saroy, his Palace, burnt by them 103. His Death 105
- Joſeph* of Arimathea, planted the Goſpel in Britain 7
- Ireland*, John, Son to Henry II. made Lord of Ireland 66. Irish rebel againſt Henry III. 79. againſt Henry VIII. 150, againſt Queen Elizabeth 172, 175. Rebellion and Maſſacre there 198. King of Ireland, Henry VIII. firſt had that Title 100
- Julius Cæſar* invades Britain 3
- K
- K Katharine of Spain, married to Prince Arthur, and after to Henry VIII. 151. The Lawfulneſs of her Marriage queſtioned, ibid. Her Speech to the King in the Legate's Court, ibid. is perſuaded to leave it to the King

I N D E X.

King 152, refuses it, and appeals to Rome, ibid. Her Marriage is declared dissolved 154
Kenmure, Lord, beheaded 552
Kenrick, Saxon King 27
Kenred, King of Mercia 30 Kentishmen, oppose William the Conqueror 51, receive him as King, ibid.
Kenwolph, King of Mercia 32, conquers Kent, ibid.
King's College, Cambridge, founded 126

L.

L Amb, Doctor, killed 192
Lambert turns out the Junto, and institutes the Committee of Safety 238, endeavours to hinder
General Monk coming to London, ibid. slips privately away from his Soldiers, ibid.
Landen Battle 388
Laud, William, Archbishop of Can- terbury, his House assaulted by the Rabble 195, committed to the Tower 196, beheaded 206
Limerick, first Siege 375, Artillery for it taken and destroy'd, ibid.
Siege raised, ibid. Second Siege 380, taken, ibid.
Lisle besieged and taken 491
Litchfield Cathedral founded 30
Londonderry Siege 360
Lollards, who, and why so called 102, a Law made to burn them
110
London, an Archbishoprick 2, 10 London, why so called 17, first walled, ibid. being burnt by the Danes, is repaired by King Alfred 35. The Tower built by William the Conqueror 52, Lord Mayors first appointed 70, Bridge built 77, Royal Exchange built 174, the new River brought to London 185, the great Fire in London 247, Charters taken away
279, restored 331
Lord Mayor, Disputes about choosing
one, 640, 645

Lord's Prayer in Saxon 36 Lords, House of Lords voted useless 220
Lucius, first Christian King 10
Luther, King Henry VIII. wrote against him 150

M.

Magna Charta granted by King
John 75, confirmed by King
Henry III. 84, and by Edward I.
26, by Edward III. 101
Maldun Camalodunum, some time the chief City of Essex 5
Malplaquet Battle 497 Mandubrace, Prince of the Trino- bantes 5
Mar, Earl of, headeth a Rebellion against King George I. 547
Marston Moor Fight 206
St. Margaret's Church, Westminster, founded 48
Martyrs, how many in Queen Ma- ry's Time. 171
Mary, Daughter to Henry VIII.
disinherited by Edward VI.
164, commands the Council to proclaim her Queen 166, they refuse it, ibid. promises the Suf- folk Men to continue to them their Religion, ibid. is proclaimed Queen at Norwich, ibid. at London, ibid. Some Counties rise for her, ibid. She comes to London 167, frees Bonner, and commits Cranmer and Ridley, ibid. crowned, ibid. restores Popery, ibid. her Marriage with Spain opposed 168. Sir Thomas
Wyat, and others, rise in Arms, ibid. and come to London, ibid.
his Party dispersed, he taken and beheaded 169. Cranmer, Ridley, and Latimer, burnt for Religion, ibid. The Queen marries Philip, ibid. is reported with Child 170, proclaims War against France, ibid. loses Calais, ibid. Her Death 171. Her Character, ibid.

U u

Mary,

I N D E X.

- Mary*, Queen of Scots, flying to England is detained Prisoner 173, beheaded 175
Queen Mary II. crowned 353, dies 392
Mary, Princess, married, 644
Mathilda, or Maud, receives the Oaths of Fealty of the Nobility 58, invades England against Stephen 60, great Wars between Stephen and her, ibid. she takes Stephen Prisoner, and is received into London, ibid. but quickly disliked and oppos'd 61, at the Devizes was fain to be carried in a Coffin to escape, ibid. at Oxford escapes through Snow in a white Habit, ibid.
Mercia, a Kingdom of the Heph-tarchy 23
Methodists 640
Minorca taken for King Charles 492
Mist's Journal, Persons punished for, 605
Monk, General, marches out of Scotland, 238, advances towards London, ibid. is petitioned to procure a free Parliament, ibid. arrives at London, ibid. moves in the House for restoring the se-cluded Members, ibid. He pulls down the Gates, Portcullis, &c. of the City, ibid. restores the se-cluded Members 239, created Duke of Albermarle 240, his Death 251
Monmouth, Duke, banished the Court 286, invades England 303, and makes War against King James II. 308, defeated, taken, and executed 310
Montross, Marquiss, appearing for the King in Scotland, is defeated, taken and ill treated 222, hanged and quartered 223
More, Sir Thomas, put to Death for denying the Supremacy 158
Morton, Bishop of Ely, instrumen-tal in raising Henry VII. to the Crown 137, Archbishop of Can-terbury 142
- Mountford*, Simon Earl of Leicester, Head of the Faction against Henry III. 82, took the King Pri-soner, and carried him about the Kingdom 83, is vanquished in Battle, and killed, ibid.
- ## N.
- Naseby* Fight, 207
Newbury Fight 204
New-England planted by English 188
Normandy Dukedom, sold by *Ro-ber*t to William Rufus 55, lost in King John's Time 72, Nor-mandy, and Anjou, &c. given to the French, by Henry III. 82
Northampton, great Fire there 256
- ## O
- OFFA*, King of Mercia 31
 a victorious Prince, ibid.
Offa's Ditch in Wales, ibid.
Oldcastle, Sir John, put to Death for holding Wickliffe's Doctrine 118
Oliver Cromwell made Lieutenant General 207, goes to Ireland with an Army, and takes Drog-heda 221, and Wexford 222, called over, made Captain Ge-neral, and sent against the Scots 223, is straitned by the Scots, yet gains a great Victory 224, defeats the King's Forces at Worcester 225, turns out the Rump Parliament, and consti-tutes the Council of State, 227, made Protector 228, Spain de-clarates War against him, 230, Blake sets upon the Plate Fleet, ibid. Success at Santa Cruz 231. Oliver desired to take the Title of King, ibid. which he refuses, ibid. installed Pro-jector, ibid. his Oath, ibid. con-stitutes an upper House of Par-liament 232, his Death 233. His Birth, Family and Cha-racter, ibid. his Funeral, ibid. his Body taken up and hanged on the Gallows, &c. 242
 Prince

I N D E X.

Prince of Orange married to the Princess Mary, Daughter to Charles I. 127, his Death, 224
 Prince of Orange, married to the Princess Mary, Niece to Charles II. 258, lands in England with an Army 334, comes to Exeter, ibid. the Number of his Forces, ibid. his Declaration 335. Nobility and Gentry declare for a free Parliament 341. The Prince of Denmark, Duke of Grafton, &c. come over to him, ibid. receives a Letter from the Commissioners the King sent to him 342, his Answer 343. Upon the King's Departure is address'd by the Nobility 344, and invited to London by the Common Council, ibid. comes to St. James's 346, calls a great Council of the Nobility, and asks their Advice 347, who desire him to administer the Government, ibid. calls a Council of the Commons, who do the same, ibid. The Scotch Nobility and Gentry do the same 348. The Convention meets, ibid. who votes that King James had abdicated 349. The Declaration of the Lords and Commons, ibid. The Prince and Princess of Orange declared King and Queen 351
 Orange, Prince of, comes over 623, married to the Princess Royal 625
 Ordalium, or Ordeal, what 48
 Oswald, King of Northumberland 29, a Christian very pious, ibid. and charitable 30, killed in Battle, ibid.
 Osway, King of Northumberland 30
 Overbury, Sir Thomas, poisoned in the Tower 186
 Oxford University, and the several Colleges, by whom founded 36
 Oxford made a Bishop's See 159
 Oxford, Robert Earl of, his Tryal before the House of Peers 557

P.

Palatine, Prince, elected King of Bohemia 187, driven out of Prague, and deprived of the Palatinate, ibid.
 Pall, Bishop's Pall, what it is 76, cost a Thousand Pounds at Rome, ibid.
 Parliament, Long Parliament dissolved 239
 Parre, Thomas, his great Age, 219
 Partition Treaty, first, 417, second 424, Proceedings in Parliament upon it 425
 St. Paul's Cathederal built, 28, repaired by King Charles I. 193
 St. Paul's Cathedral, new Fabrick, opened 412
 Perkin Warbeck, an Impostor set up against Henry VII 143 gains Assistance from the King of France, ibid. his Army defeated, ibid. is assisted in Scotland, marries the Lady Catharine Gordon 144, lands in Cornwall, and gains a great Party 145, besieges Exeter 146, his Friends desert him, ibid. taken and committed to Prison, ibid. executed, ibid.
 St. Peter's Church Westminster, built 28, beautified and enlarged 48
 Peter Pence first given to the Pope 30, by Offa 31
 Peterborough Church built 30
 Peterborough made a Bishop's See 159
 Pole, Cardinal, Archbishop of Canterbury 169
 Pope's Authority question'd 154, an Act passed against it, and all Persons forbid to appeal to Rome, ib.
 Popish Superstition suppress'd 161, restored 167, again abrogated by Queen Elizabeth 172
 Popish Plot discover'd 261, Coleman tried and executed for it 264, Ireland, Pickering and Grove, tried and executed 266, Five Jesuits and Langborn hanged 268, Wakeman, &c. cleared, ibid.

U u z

Porteous,

I N D E X.

Porteous, Captain, hang'd by the Mob, 630
Porto Bello, the Action there 643
Preliminary Articles of Peace 495
Preston Battle 549
Printing, Art invented 132, brought into England, ibid.
Prynn, Burton, and Bastwick, pillory'd 194, freed from Prison 196

Q.

Quakers first appeared, 224

R.

Rawleigh, Sir Walter, his Expedition to Guyana 186, beheaded, ibid.
Redwald, K. of the East Angles 29
Resumption of Irish Grants 421
Richard I. crowned 67, went to the Holy Land, ibid. takes Cyprus 68, comes to the Siege of Ptolemais, ibid. performs noble Exploits there, ibid. envied by the King of France, ibid. Returning home, his Fleet is scattered, ibid. is seized in travelling thro' Germany, ibid. used cruelly by the Emperor, and a great Ransom demanded 69, set at Liberty, ib. arrives in England, ibid. wars against the French, ibid. performs very gallant Actions, ibid. is killed 70, forgives the Man that shot him, ibid. His Wife and Issue, ibid. His Name terrible to the Saracens, ibid.
Richard II. crowned 102, troubled by the French and Scots, ibid. and Rebels at home, headed by Wat Tyler and Jack Straw 103, who commit Outrages, ibid. suppressed, ibid. Discontents at home 104, the Lords complain of the King, ibid. The Judges sign Articles of Treason against the Lords, ibid. The King and the Lords arm, ibid. The King grants the Lords Demands, ibid. His Counsellors remov'd, Judges imprison'd, and chief Justice executed, ibid. The Scots invade England, ibid. The Parliament called the Great assembled 105, who punish the factious Lords, ib. The Duke of Hereford, Son to John of Gaunt, banished, ibid. King Richard being in Ireland, England is invaded by Henry Duke of Lancaster, ibid. resigns the Crown to him 107. His Wife and Issue, ibid. His Death 107

Richard Duke of Gloucester kills the Son of Edward VI. and King Henry himself 130, gets to be Protector of Henry V. 133, causes the Lord Hastings to be seized, pretending he had bewitched him 134, beheads him and other Lords, ibid. causes Dr. Shaw, and the Duke of Buckingham to declare King Edward's Children Bastards 135, is desired to take the Crown 136, his monstrous Birth, ibid. crowned King, ibid. causes his Nephews to be murdered, ibid. His Disquiet after 137. The Duke of Buckingham falls off, and with others conspire against him, ibid. and prepares for War against him 138, but was deserted by his Friends, and deliver'd into Richard's Hands, ibid. and beheaded, ibid. Banisher that betray'd him, remarkably afflicted with God's Judgments, ibid. The King endeavours to get Henry D. of Richmond into his Hands 139, endeavours to marry his Niece, ibid. sets forth with an Army against the Duke of Richmond, ibid. A Battle 140, in which Richard is killed, ibid. His Wife and Issue 141. A Rhyme in Contempt of his Creatures, for which one was executed, ibid.
Richard Cromwell succeeds his Father as Protector 233, calls a Parliament

I N D E X.

- liament 234, the Army grows jealous of him, ibid. and of the Parliament, ibid. Force him to dissolve the Parliament 135, and restore the Long Parliament, ibid.
who force the Protector to resign,
ibid.
- River, New River brought to London 185
- Robert, eldest Son to William the Conqueror, to whom his Father gave the Duchy of Normandy 53, invades his Brother William 54, claims the Crown of Eng^d and from his Brother Henry 57, but is reconciled, ibid. imprisoned by Henry, and his Eyes put out, ib.
- Robin Hood lived 50
- Romans conquered Britain 6, made four Highways in England 22, finally desert from hence ibid.
- Rosomond, her Story 66
- Rochester Cathedral built 29
- Rochester made a Bishop's See 159
- Rowena, Daughter to Hengist, married Vortiger 23, poisoned Vorti-
mer 24
- Rupert, Prince, fights under King
Charles I. 204, &c. At Naseby
Fight took Ireton Prisoner 207.
His Death 278
- Russel, Admiral, beats the French 383
- Ryswick Treaty 410
- S.
- Salisbury Cathedral built 84
- Sardinia taken for K. Charles 492
- Savoy Hospital founded 148
- Saxons called in by the Britons 22, and settle here 23
- Saxon Heptarchy, ibid.
- South-Saxons, a Kingdom of the Heptarchy, ibid.
- Scotland, their King taken Prisoner
by Edward I. 85, their Regal Chair brought to London, ibid.
- Seals to Bonds first used 52
- Septimus Severus, Roman Emperor
10, came to Britain, ibid. repaired Hadrian's Wall, ibid. died at York, ibid.
- Seville, Treaty of 610
- Seymour, Duke of Somerset, Protector to Edward VI. 161, accused, and committed to the Tower 163, but released, ib. Again committed and beheaded 164
- Sheppard, James, executed 559
- Sheep, Cotswald Sheep sent to Spain to the great Prejudice of England 131
- Shire, England divided into Shires 35
- Shovel, Sir Cloudesty, cast away 483
- Shore, Jane, Concubine to Edward IV. punished by his Brother Richard 235, lived in great Want,
ibid.
- Somerset, Earl of, condemned for poisoning of Overbury 186
- Southwark destroyed by Fire 263
- Spencers, Favourites to Edward II.
92, commit great Insolencies 93
- Stamford, an University instituted
there 101
- Stephen obtains the Crown from Maud 59, owns himself elected, and grants a Charter of Liberties to the People, ibid. The Substance of it, ibid. is disturbed by civil Discords, ibid. &c. by the Welch, ibid. by the Scots, 60, by the Peers, ibid. by the Empreſs Maud, ibid. Taken Prisoner by Maud 61, obtains his Liberty, ibid. His Son dying, he agrees with Maud that her Son should succeed, ibid. His Death, ibid.
Wife and Issue, ibid.
- Sterling Money, why so call'd 50
- Steenkint Battle 384
- Stonehenge, when built 24
- Stones in Staffordshire, the Sepulchre of the Sons of a Mercian
King 30
- The Stoner or Lapis Tituli in Thanet, the Monument of King Vertimmer 24
- Strafford,

E N D E X.

Strafford, vide Wentworth.
Straw, Jack, a Rebel 102, hanged, ibid.
Street Robberies 603
Sweating Sicknefs 164
Symnel, Lambert, an Impostor, set up against Henry VII. 143, is crowned King at Dublin, ibid.
 taken by Henry VII., and condemned to turn the Spit in his Kitchen, ibid.

T.

T Aisners Battle 497
Talbot, Lord Chancellor, his Death 632
Tangier slighted 271
Terms, the four Law Terms ordained 52
St. Thomas's Hospital in London
 founded 165
Theodosius and Valentinian, Emperors 22. In their Time the Brit- ains were disturb'd by the Picts and Scots, ibid. Gallio with Soldiers sent to assist them, but recalled, and the Romans finally left Britain, ibid.
Threatning Letters 613
Toulon Siege 482
Torrington, Earl, engages the French 374
Tournay taken by the Confederates 406 Turin Siege 475
Tyler, Wat, a Rebel, kill'd by the Lord Mayor of London 103

V.

V Alentinianus, Roman Emperor
 19, sent Theodosius into Brit- tain against the Picts ibid.
Voadicea, Queen of the Britains 5 Vinutius, a King of the Brigan- tes 5
Vienna Treaty 591
Vernon, Admiral, takes Porto Bello
 643. And Chagre, 645
Vigo, the British Fleet take the Spanish Galleons there 441

Virginia planted by the English 188
Union of England and Scotland 478 Vortigern, a British King, in whose
 Time the Saxons first came here 24
Vortimer, King, overthrew the Sax- ons 24
Vortiporus, a British King 25
Dr. Usher, Archbishop of Armagh, died 230
Uterpendragon, a British Prince 25
Vulfhere, King of Mercia 30

W.

W Ager, Commodore, takes the Spanish Galeons 492 Wales totally subdued by the Eng- lish 85
Wales, Prince of, comes over, 606.
 His Marriage, 629. The Motion for settling 100,000 l. per Annum upon him, 632. He goes to Bath 637
War declared against Spain 640
Warwick, Earl, being Friend to Edward IV. makes him King, but being his Enemy, pulls him down 125, slain in Battle 129 Warwick, Edward Earl of, Son to the D. of Clarence, beheaded 146 Wentworth, Sir Thomas, Earl of Strafford, made Deputy of Ire- land 193, impeached in Parliament 196, tried 197, the Bill of Attainder passed 198, beheaded, ibid.
West Saxons, a Kingdom of the Heptarchy 23
Westminster Hall built 56
Westminster Abbey built 48
Whitehall built 154, burnt 415
Wickliffe lived 102, a Law made against his Followers 118
William Duke of Normandy claims the Crown 49, invades England, ibid. burns his Fleet, ibid. forbids his Soldiers to wrong any, ibid.
 offers Conditions to Harold 50, offers to fight Harold singly, ibid.
 By

I N D E X

By Stratagem defeats the English, ibid. His Loss in the Battle, ib.
 crowned 51, opposed by the Kentish Men, ibid. banishes the English, and gives their Estates to Normans, ibid. Takes the Riches from Religious Houses, ibid. levies great Taxes 51, makes a Survey of the Kingdom, ibid.
 invades France, ibid. His Death,
 Wife, and Issue 53

William Rufus crowned 54, opposed by his Brother Robert, ibid.
 agrees with him, ibid. sets Ec-clestiaftical Promotions to Sale 55,
 his Death 56

William III. crowned 354, proclaimed in Scotland 358, declares War against France 363, goes over to Ireland 372, Plot against his Life, ibid. dies 431

Wind, a great Storm of 453

Woollen Manufactory begun in Eng- land. 101

Woolson, Mr. Judgment against him 610

Wolfey, Cardinal, sent a Warrant to the Lieutenant of the Tower to execute the Earl of Kildare, without the King's Knowledge

150, joined in Commission with Campejus to try the Divorce 151, but not acting in it according to the King's Will, he lost his Favour 152, writes to the Pope to defer the Divorce, ibid. His Fall 153. His Death, ibid. The Manner of his Rise, ibid. His Grandeur, Pride, &c. ibid.

Wolves, how England freed of
 them 41

Woodstock built 58

Wynendale Battle 491

Y.

Yeomen of the Guard instituted 141

York made an Archbishop's See 10 chief City of the Brigantes, ibid.

Cathedral Church rebuilt of Stone 29

York, Duke, conspires against Henry
VI. 122, gains Esteem with the People, ibid. procures the Bishop of Chichester to be slain, ibid.

takes up Arms 123, takes King Henry Prisoner, and makes himself Protector 124, claims the Crown, ibid. slain in Battle 125

F I N I S.

